THE NEW GROVE

Dictionary of Music and Musicians

SECOND EDITION

Edited by
Stanley Sadie

Executive editor
John Tyrrell

新格罗夫

音乐与音乐家辞典

第二版

主　　编：斯坦利・萨迪
执行主编：约翰・泰瑞尔

Đàn tranh TO Egüés

GROVE

cns | 湖南文艺出版社

THE NEW GROVE

Dictionary of Music and Musicians

SECOND EDITION

Edited by

Stanley Sadie

Executive editor

John Tyrrell

VOLUME 7

Đàn tranh to Egüés

GROVE
An imprint of Oxford University Press

图书在版编目（CIP）数据

新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典 = The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians : 2001. 第 2 版 : 全 29 卷 : 英文 / (英) 萨迪 (Sadie,S.) 主编 .
—长沙 : 湖南文艺出版社 , 2012.8
ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8
Ⅰ . ①新… Ⅱ . ①萨… Ⅲ . ①音乐 – 词典 – 英文
②音乐家 – 世界 – 词典 – 英文 Ⅳ . ① J6-61 ② K815.76-61

中国版本图书馆 CIP 数据核字 (2012) 第 120200 号

新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典

（2001，第 2 版）

主　　编：斯坦利·萨迪
执行主编：约翰·泰瑞尔

出 品 人：刘清华
策　　划：孙　佳
责任编辑：孙佳、王雨、张玥、唐敏、刘建辉、熊宇亮
版权经理：唐　敏
美术编辑：李　杰
发 行 人：胥艳阳
印务总监：邓华强

湖南文艺出版社出版、发行
（长沙市雨花区东二环一段 508 号 邮编：410014）网址：www.hnwy.net

湖南省新华书店总经销 湖南新华精品印务有限公司印刷
2012 年 10 月第 1 版第 1 次印刷　开本：787mm × 1092mm 1/16　印张：1742.50　字数：25，000，000
ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8　定价：6980.00 元（全 29 卷）
音乐发行部邮购电话：0731-85983102　音乐发行部传真：0731-85983016
打击盗版举报专线：0731-85983084、85983019、85983102
若有质量问题，请直接与本社出版科联系调换（电话：0731-85983028）

THE NEW GROVE
DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Volume Seven

CNS PUBLISHING & MEDIA | 湖南文艺出版社

牛津大学出版社
牛津　纽约
奥克兰　曼谷　布宜诺斯艾利斯　开普敦　金奈
达累斯萨拉姆　德里　香港　伊斯坦布尔　卡拉奇　加尔各答
吉隆坡　马德里　墨尔本　墨西哥城　孟买　内罗毕
圣保罗　上海　台北　东京　多伦多

《音乐与音乐家辞典》的第一版由乔治·格罗夫爵士策划和主编，四卷，附录由 J.A. 富勒·迈特兰主编，目录由埃德蒙·沃德豪斯夫人主编，1878 年、1880 年、1883 年、1889 年出版
再次印刷：1890 年、1900 年

第二版：J.A. 富勒·迈特兰主编，五卷，1904 年至 1910 年出版

第三版：H.C. 科利斯主编，五卷，1927 年出版

第四版：H.C. 科利斯主编，五卷，外加增补卷，1940 年出版

第五版：埃里克·布卢姆主编，九卷，1954 年出版；增补卷，1961 年出版
再次印刷：1961 年、1973 年、1975 年

美国增补卷，沃尔多·塞尔登·普拉特主编，一卷，1920 年出版
再次印刷：1928 年，此次重印增加了新内容，后又多次重印

《新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典》第一版，斯坦利·萨迪主编，二十卷，1980 年出版
再次印刷：1981 年、1984 年、1985 年、1986 年、1987 年、1988 年、1989 年、1990 年、1991 年、1992 年、1993 年、1994 年、1995 年
平装版加印：1995 年、1996 年、1997 年、1998 年

《新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典》第二版，斯坦利·萨迪主编 / 约翰·泰瑞尔执行主编，
二十九卷，麦克米兰出版有限公司 2001 年出版

文字输入：英国牛津埃尔顿书籍排版公司
数据库管理：英国布莱顿塞曼蒂科公司
页码编排：英国苏福克郡克罗厄斯集团

General Abbreviations

A alto, contralto [voice]
a alto [instrument]
AA Associate of the Arts
AB Alberta; Bachelor of Arts
ABC American Broadcasting Company; Australian Broadcasting Commission
Abt. Abteilung [section]
ACA American Composers Alliance acc. accompaniment, accompanied by accdn accordion addl additional addn(s) addition(s) ad lib ad libitum
aft(s) afterpiece(s)
Ag Agnus Dei
AGMA American Guild of Musical Artists
AIDS Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome
AK Alaska
AL Alabama
all(s) alleluia(s) AM Master of Arts
a.m. ante meridiem [before noon]
AMC American Music Center
Amer. American amp amplified
AMS American Musicological Society
Anh. Anhang [appendix] anon. anonymous(ly)
ant(s) antiphon(s)
appx(s) appendix(es)
AR Arkansas
arr(s). arrangement(s), arranged by/for a-s all-sung
ASCAP American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers
ASOL American Symphony Orchestra League attrib(s). attribution(s), attributed to; ascription(s), ascribed to Aug August
aut. autumn
AZ Arizona
aztl azione teatrale

B bass [voice], bassus
B Brainard catalogue [Tartini], Benton catalogue [Pleyel] b bass [instrument]
b born
BA Bachelor of Arts
bal(s) ballad opera(s)
bap. baptized
Bar baritone [voice] bar baritone [instrument]
B-Bar bass-baritone
BBC British Broadcasting Corporation
BC British Columbia
BCE before Common Era [BC] bc basso continuo
Bd. Band [volume]
BEd Bachelor of Education
Beds. Bedfordshire
Berks. Berkshire
Berwicks. Berwickshire
BFA Bachelor of Fine Arts
BFE British Forum for Ethnomusicology bk(s) book(s)
BLitt Bachelor of Letters/Literature blq(s) burlesque(s)
blt(s) burletta(s)
BM Bachelor of Music
BME, BMEd Bachelor of Music Education
BMI Broadcast Music Inc.
BMus Bachelor of Music
bn bassoon
BRD Federal Republic of Germany (Bundesrepublik Deutschland [West Germany])
Bros. Brothers
BRTN Belgische Radio en Televisie Nederlands
BS, BSc Bachelor of Science
Bs Benedictus
BSM Bachelor of Sacred Music
Bte Benedicite
Bucks. Buckinghamshire
Bulg. Bulgarian
bur. buried
BVM Blessed Virgin Mary
BWV Bach-Werke-Verzeichnis [Schmieder, catalogue of J.S. Bach's works]

C contralto
c circa [about]
¢ cent
CA California
Cambs. Cambridgeshire
Can. Canadian
CanD Cantate Domino cant(s). cantata(s)
cap. capacity
carn. Carnival
cb contrabass [instrument]
CBC Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
CBE Commander of the Order of the British Empire
CBS Columbia Broadcasting System
CBSO City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra
CD(s) compact disc(s)
CE Common Era [AD]
CeBeDeM Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale
cel celesta
CEMA Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts cf confer [compare]
c.f. cantus firmus
CFE Composers Facsimile Edition
CG Covent Garden, London
CH Companion of Honour chap(s). chapter(s) chbr chamber Chin. Chinese chit chitarrone choreog(s). choreography, choreographer(s), choreographed by Cie Compagnie
cimb cimbalom cl clarinet
clvd clavichord
cm centimetre(s); comédie en musique
cmda comédie mêlée d'ariettes

CNRS Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique
CO Colorado
Co. Company; County
Cod. Codex
col(s). column(s) coll. collected by collab. in collaboration with com componimento
comm(s) communion(s) comp(s). composer(s), composed (by) conc(s). concerto(s) cond(s). conductor(s), conducted by cont continuo
contrib(s). contribution(s)
Corp. Corporation
c.p.s. cycles per second cptr(s) computer(s)
Cr Credo, Creed
CRI Composers Recordings, Inc.
CSc Candidate of Historical Sciences
CT Connecticut
Ct Contratenor, countertenor
CUNY City University of New York
CVO Commander of the Royal Victorian Order
Cz. Czech

D Deutsch catalogue [Schubert]; Dounias catalogue [Tartini]
d. denarius, denarii [penny, pence]
d died
DA Doctor of Arts
Dan. Danish
db double bass
DBE Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire
dbn double bassoon
DC District of Columbia
Dc Discantus
DD Doctor of Divinity
DDR German Democratic Republic (Deutsche Demokratische Republik [East Germany])
DE Delaware
Dec December
ded(s). dedication(s), dedicated to DeM Deus misereatur
Dept(s) Department(s)
Derbys. Derbyshire
DFA Doctor of Fine Arts dg dramma giocoso
dir(s). director(s), directed by diss. dissertation
dl drame lyrique
DLitt Doctor of Letters/Literature
DM Doctor of Music
dm dramma per musica
DMA Doctor of Musical Arts
DME, DMEd Doctor of Musical Education
DMus Doctor of Music
DMusEd Doctor of Music Education
DPhil Doctor of Philosophy
Dr Doctor
DSc Doctor of Science/Historical Sciences
DSM Doctor of Sacred Music
Dut. Dutch

E. East, Eastern
EBU European Broadcasting Union
ed(s). editor(s), edited (by) EdD Doctor of Education
edn(s) edition(s)
EdS Education Specialist
EEC European Economic Community
e.g. exempli gratia [for example] el-ac electro-acoustic elec electric, electronic
EMI Electrical and Musical Industries
Eng. English
eng hn english horn
ENO English National Opera
ens ensemble
ENSA Entertainments National Service Association
EP extended-play (record)
esp. especially
etc. et cetera
EU European Union
ex., exx. example, examples

f, ff following page, following pages f., ff. folio, folios f forte fa(s) farsa(s) facs. facsimile(s)
fasc(s). fascicle(s)
Feb February
ff fortissimo
fff fortississimo
fig(s). figure(s) [illustration(s)]
FL Florida
fl flute
fl floruit [he/she flourished] Flem. Flemish fp fortepiano [dynamic marking]
Fr. French
frag(s). fragment(s)
FRAM Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music, London
FRCM Fellow of the Royal College of Music, London
FRCO Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, London
FRS Fellow of the Royal Society, London fs full score

GA Georgia
Gael. Gaelic
GEDOK Gemeinschaft Deutscher Organisationen von Künstlerinnen und Kunstfreundinnen
GEMA Gesellschaft für Musikalische Aufführungs- und Mechanische Vervielfaltingungsrechte
Ger. German
Gk. Greek
Gl Gloria
Glam. Glamorgan
glock glockenspiel
Glos. Gloucestershire
GmbH Gesellschaft mit Beschränkter Haftung [limited-liability company]
grad(s) gradual(s)
GSM Guildhall School of Music, London (to 1934)
GSMD Guildhall School of Music and Drama, London (1935–) gui guitar

H Hoboken catalogue [Haydn]; Helm catalogue [C.P.E. Bach]
Hants. Hampshire
Heb. Hebrew
Herts. Hertfordshire
HI Hawaii
hmn harmonium
HMS His/Her Majesty's Ship
HMV His Master's Voice
hn horn
Hon. Honorary; Honourable hp harp
hpd harpsichord
HRH His/Her Royal Highness
Hung. Hungarian
Hunts. Huntingdonshire
Hz Hertz [c.p.s.]

IA Iowa
IAML International Association of Music Libraries
IAWM International Alliance for Women in Music ibid. ibidem [in the same place]
ICTM International Council for Traditional Music
ID Idaho
i.e. id est [that is]
IFMC International Folk Music Council
IL Illinois
ILWC International League of Women Composers

Abbreviation	Meaning
IMC	International Music Council
IMS	International Musicological Society
IN	Indiana
Inc.	Incorporated
inc.	incomplete
incid	incidental
incl.	includes, including inst(s)	instrument(s), instrumental
int(s)	intermezzo(s), introit(s)
IPEM	Instituut voor Psychoakoestiek en Elektronische Muziek, Ghent
IRCAM	Institut de Recherche et Coordination Acoustique/Musique
ISAM	Institute for Studies in American Music
ISCM	International Society for Contemporary Music
ISDN	Integrated Services Digital Network
ISM	Incorporated Society of Musicians
ISME	International Society for Music Education
It.	Italian
Jan	January
Jap.	Japanese
Jb	Jahrbuch [yearbook]
JD	Doctor of Jurisprudence
Jg.	Jahrgang [year of publication/volume]
jr	junior
Jub	Jubilate
K	Kirkpatrick catalogue [D. Scarlatti]; Köchel catalogue [Mozart: no. after '/' is from 6th edn; also Fux]
kbd	keyboard
KBE	Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire
KCVO	Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order
kg	kilogram(s)
Kgl	Königlich(e, er, es) [Royal]
kHz	kilohertz [1000 c.p.s.]
km	kilometre(s)
KS	Kansas
KY	Kentucky
Ky	Kyrie
£	libra(e) [pound(s) sterling]
L.	no. of song in R.W. Linker: A Bibliography of Old French Lyrics (University, MS, 1979)
L	Longo catalogue [A. Scarlatti]
LA	Louisiana
Lanarks.	Lanarkshire
Lancs.	Lancashire
Lat.	Latin
Leics.	Leicestershire
LH	left hand
lib(s)	libretto(s)
Lincs.	Lincolnshire
lit(s)	litany (litanies)
Lith.	Lithuanian
LittD	Doctor of Letters/Literature
LLB	Bachelor of Laws
LLD	Doctor of Laws
loc. cit.	loco citato [in the place cited]
LP	long-playing record
LPO	London Philharmonic Orchestra
LSO	London Symphony Orchestra
Ltd	Limited
Ltée	Limitée
M, MM.	Monsieur, Messieurs
m	metre(s)
MA	Massachusetts; Master of Arts
Mag	Magnificat
MALS	Master of Arts in Library Sciences
mand	mandolin
mar	marimba
MAT	Master of Arts and Teaching
MB	Bachelor of Music; Manitoba
MBE	Member of the Order of the British Empire
MD	Maryland
ME	Maine
MEd	Master of Education
mel	melodramma, mélodrame
mels	melodramma serio
melss	melodramma semiserio
Met	Metropolitan Opera House, New York
Mez	mezzo-soprano
mf	mezzo-forte
MFA	Master of Fine Arts
MGM	Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
MHz	megahertz [megacycles]
MI	Michigan
mic	microphone
Middx	Middlesex
MIDI	Musical Instrument Digital Interface
MIT	Massachusetts Institute of Technology
MLitt	Master of Letters/Literature
Mlle, Mlles	Mademoiselle, Mesdemoiselles
MM	Master of Music
M.M.	Metronome Maelzel
mm	millimetre(s)
MMA	Master of Musical Arts
MME, MMEd	Master of Music Education
Mme, Mmes	Madame, Mesdames
MMT	Master of Music in Teaching
MMus	Master of Music
MN	Minnesota
MO	Missouri
mod	modulator
Mon.	Monmouthshire
movt(s)	movement(s)
MP(s)	Member(s) of Parliament
mp	mezzo-piano
MPhil	Master of Philosophy
Mr	Mister
Mrs	Mistress; Messieurs
MS	Master of Science(s); Mississippi
MS(S)	manuscript(s)
MSc	Master of Science(s)
MSLS	Master of Science in Library and Information Science
MSM	Master of Sacred Music
MT	Montana
Mt	Mount
mt(s)	music-theatre piece(s)
MTNA	Music Teachers National Association
MusB, MusBac	Bachelor of Music
muscm(s)	musical comedy (comedies)
MusD, MusDoc	Doctor of Music
musl(s)	musical(s)
MusM	Master of Music
N.	North, Northern
n(n).	footnote(s)
nar(s)	narrator(s)
NB	New Brunswick
NBC	National Broadcasting Company
NC	North Carolina
ND	North Dakota
n.d.	no date of publication
NDR	Norddeutscher Rundfunk
NE	Nebraska
NEA	National Endowment for the Arts
NEH	National Endowment for the Humanities
NET	National Educational Television
NF	Newfoundland and Labrador
NH	New Hampshire
NHK	Nippon Hōsō Kyōkai [Japanese broadcasting system]
NJ	New Jersey
NM	New Mexico
no(s).	number(s)
Nor.	Norwegian
Northants.	Northamptonshire
Notts.	Nottinghamshire
Nov	November
n.p.	no place of publication
nr	near
NRK	Norsk Rikskringkasting [Norwegian broadcasting system]

Abbreviation	Meaning
NS	Nova Scotia
NSW	New South Wales
NT	North West Territories
Nunc	Nunc dimittis
NV	Nevada
NY	New York [State]
NZ	New Zealand
ob	opera buffa; oboe
obbl	obbligato
OBE	Officer of the Order of the British Empire
obl	opéra-ballet
OC	Opéra-Comique, Paris [the company]
oc	opéra comique [genre]
Oct	October
off(s)	offertory (offertories)
OH	Ohio
OK	Oklahoma
OM	Order of Merit
ON	Ontario
op(s)	opera(s)
op., opp.	opus, opera [plural of opus]
op. cit.	opere citato [in the work cited]
opt.	optional
OR	Oregon
orat(s)	oratorio(s)
orch	orchestra(tion), orchestral orchd	orchestrated (by)
org	organ
orig.	original(ly)
ORTF	Office de Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
os	opera seria
oss	opera semiseria
OUP	Oxford University Press
ov(s).	overture(s)
Oxon.	Oxfordshire
P	Pincherle catalogue [Vivaldi]
p.	pars
p., pp.	page, pages
p	piano [dynamic marking]
PA	Pennsylvania
p.a.	per annum [annually]
pan(s)	pantomime(s)
PBS	Public Broadcasting System
PC	no. of chanson in A. Pillet and H. Carstens: Bibliographie der Troubadours (Halle, 1933)
PE	Prince Edward Island
perc	percussion
perf(s).	performance(s), performed (by) pf	piano [instrument]
pfmr(s)	performer(s)
PhB	Bachelor of Philosophy
PhD	Doctor of Philosophy
PhDEd	Doctor of Philosophy in Education
pic	piccolo
pl(s).	plate(s); plural
p.m.	post meridiem [after noon]
PO	Philharmonic Orchestra
Pol.	Polish
pop.	population
Port.	Portuguese
posth.	posthumous(ly)
POW(s)	prisoner(s) of war
pp	pianissimo
ppp	pianississimo
PQ	Province of Quebec
PR	Puerto Rico
pr.	printed
prep pf	prepared piano
PRO	Public Record Office, London
prol(s)	prologue(s)
PRS	Performing Right Society
Ps(s)	Psalm(s)
ps(s)	psalm(s)
pseud(s).	pseudonym(s)
pt(s)	part(s)
ptbk(s)	partbook(s)
pubd	published
pubn(s)	publication(s)
PWM	Polskie Wydawnictwo Muzyczne
QC	Queen's Counsel
qnt(s)	quintet(s)
qt(s)	quartet(s)
R	[in signature] editorial revision
R	photographic reprint [edn of score or early printed source]
R.	no. of chanson in G. Raynaud, Bibliographie des chansonniers français des XIIIe et XIVe siècles (Paris, 1884)
R	Ryom catalogue [Vivaldi]
r	recto
R	response
RAF	Royal Air Force
RAI	Radio Audizioni Italiane
RAM	Royal Academy of Music, London
RCA	Radio Corporation of America
RCM	Royal College of Music, London
re(s)	response(s) [type of piece]
rec	recorder
rec.	recorded [in discographic context]
recit(s)	recitative(s)
red(s).	reduction(s), reduced for reorchd	reorchestrated (by) repr.	reprinted
resp(s)	respond(s)
Rev.	Reverend
rev(s).	revision(s); revised (by/for)
RH	right hand
RI	Rhode Island
RIAS	Radio im Amerikanischen Sektor
RIdIM	Répertoire International d'Iconographie Musicale
RILM	Répertoire International de Littérature Musicale
RIPM	Répertoire International de la Presse Musicale
RISM	Répertoire International des Sources Musicales
RKO	Radio-Keith-Orpheum
RMCM	Royal Manchester College of Music
rms	root mean square
RNCM	Royal Northern College of Music, Manchester
RO	Radio Orchestra
Rom.	Romanian
r.p.m.	revolutions per minute
RPO	Royal Philharmonic Orchestra
RSFSR	Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic
RSO	Radio Symphony Orchestra
RTÉ	Radio Telefís Éireann
RTF	Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
Rt Hon.	Right Honourable
RTVB	Radio-Télévision Belge de la Communauté Française
Russ.	Russian
RV	Ryom catalogue [Vivaldi]
S	San, Santa, Santo, São [Saint]; soprano [voice]
S	sound recording
S.	South, Southern
$	dollars
s	soprano [instrument]
s.	solidus, solidi [shilling, shillings]
SACEM	Société d'Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique
San	Sanctus
sax	saxophone
SC	South Carolina
SD	South Dakota
sd	scherzo drammatico
SDR	Süddeutscher Rundfunk
Sept	September
seq(s)	sequence(s)
ser(s)	serenata(s)
ser.	series
Serb.	Serbian
sf, sfz	sforzando, sforzato
sing.	singular
SJ	Societas Jesu [Society of Jesus]
SK	Saskatchewan
SO	Symphony Orchestra

SOCAN	Society of Composers, Authors and Music Publishers of Canada
Sp.	Spanish
spkr(s)	speaker(s)
Spl	Singspiel
SPNM	Society for the Promotion of New Music
spr.	spring
sq	square
sr	senior
SS	Saints (It., Sp.); Santissima, Santissimo [Most Holy]
SS	steamship
SSR	Soviet Socialist Republic
St(s)	Saint(s)/Holy, Sankt, Sint, Szent
Staffs.	Staffordshire
STB	Bachelor of Sacred Theology
Ste	Sainte
str	string(s)
sum.	summer
SUNY	State University of New York
Sup	superius
suppl(s).	supplement(s), supplementary
Swed.	Swedish
SWF	Südwestfunk
sym(s).	symphony (symphonies), symphonic
synth	synthesizer, synthesized
T	tenor [voice]
t	tenor [instrument]
tc	tragicommedia
td(s)	tonadilla(s)
TeD	Te Deum
ThM	Master of Theology
timp	timpani
tm	tragédie en musique
TN	Tennessee
tpt	trumpet
Tr	treble [voice]
tr(s)	tract(s); treble [instrument]
trad.	traditional trans.	translation, translated by transcr(s).	transcription(s), transcribed by/for trbn	trombone
TV	television
TWV	Menke catalogue [Telemann]
TX	Texas
U.	University
UCLA	University of California at Los Angeles
UHF	ultra-high frequency
UK	United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland
Ukr.	Ukrainian
unacc.	unaccompanied
unattrib.	unattributed
UNESCO	United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
UNICEF	United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund
unorchd	unorchestrated
unperf.	unperformed
unpubd	unpublished
UP	University Press
US	United States [adjective]
USA	United States of America
USSR	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
UT	Utah
v, vv	voice, voices
v., vv.	verse, verses
v	verso
v.	versus
V	versicle
VA	Virginia
va	viola
vc	cello
vcle(s)	versicle(s)
VEB	Volkseigener Betrieb [people's own industry]
Ven	Venite
VHF	very high frequency
VI	Virgin Islands
vib	vibraphone
viz	videlicet [namely]
vle	violone
vn	violin
vol(s).	volume(s)
vs	vocal score, piano-vocal score
VT	Vermont
W.	West, Western
WA	Washington [State]
Warwicks.	Warwickshire
WDR	Westdeutscher Rundfunk
WI	Wisconsin
Wilts.	Wiltshire
wint.	winter
WNO	Welsh National Opera
WoO	Werke ohne Opuszahl
Worcs.	Worcestershire
WPA	Works Progress Administration
WQ	Wotquenne catalogue [C.P.E. Bach]
WV	West Virginia
ww	woodwind
WY	Wyoming
xyl	xylophone
YMCA	Young Men's Christian Association
Yorks.	Yorkshire
YT	Yukon Territory
YWCA	Young Women's Christian Association
YYS	(Zhongguo yishu yanjiuyuan) Yinyue yanjiusuo and variants (Music Research Institute (of the Chinese Academy of Arts))
Z	Zimmermann catalogue [Purcell]
zar(s)	zarzuela(s)
zargc	zarzuela género chico

Bibliographical Abbreviations

All bibliographical abbreviations used in this dictionary are listed below, following the typography used in the text of the dictionary. Broadly, italic type is used for periodicals and for reference works; roman type is used for anthologies, series etc. (titles of individual volumes are italicized).

Full bibliographical information is not normally supplied in the list below if it is available elsewhere in the dictionary. Its availability is indicated as follows: D – in the list of 'Dictionaries and encyclopedias of music'; E – in the list of 'Editions, historical'; and P – in the list of 'Periodicals'; these lists are located in vol.28. For other items, in particular national (non-musical) biographical dictionaries, basic bibliographical information is given here; and in some cases extra information is supplied to clarify the abbreviation used.

Festschriften and congress reports are not generally covered in this list. Although Festschrift titles are sometimes shortened in the dictionary, sufficient information is always given for unambiguous identification (dedicatee; occasion, if the same person is dedicatee of more than one Festschrift; place and date of publication; and name(s) of editor(s) if known). For fuller information on musical Festschriften up to 1967 see W. Gerboth: An Index to Musical Festschriften and Similar Publications (New York, 1969). The published titles of congress reports are generally reduced to their essentials, but sufficient information is always given for purposes of identification (society or topic; place and date of occurrence; journal issue if published in a periodical; editor(s) and publication details in unfamiliar cases). A comprehensive list of musical and music-related 'Congress reports' appears in vol.28. Further information can be found in J. Tyrrell and R. Wise: A Guide to International Congress Reports in Music, 1900–1975 (London, 1979).

19CM	19th Century Music P
ACAB	American Composers Alliance Bulletin P
AcM	Acta musicologica P
ADB	Allgemeine deutsche Biographie (Leipzig, 1875–1912)
AdlerHM	G. Adler, ed.: Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (Frankfurt, 1924, 2/1930/R)
AfM	African Music P
AH	Analecta hymnica medii aevi E
AllacciD	L. Allacci: Drammaturgia D
AM	Antiphonale monasticum pro diurnis horis (Tournai, 1934)
AmbrosGM	A.W. Ambros: Geschichte der Musik (Leipzig, 1862–82/R)
AMe, AMeS	Algemene muziekencyclopedie and suppl. D
AMf	Archiv für Musikforschung P
AMI	L'arte musicale in Italia E
AMMM	Archivium musices metropolitanum mediolanense E
AMP	Antiquitates musicae in Polonia E
AMw	Archiv für Musikwissenschaft P
AMZ	Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (1798–1848, 1863–5, 1866–82) P
AMz	Allgemeine (deutsche) Musik-Zeitung/Musikzeitung (1874–1943) P
Anderson2	E.R. Anderson: Contemporary American Composers: a Biographical Dictionary D
AnM	Anuario musical P
AnMc, AnMc	Analecta musicologica P
AnnM	Annales musicologiques P
AnthonyFB	J.R. Anthony: French Baroque Music from Beaujoyeulx to Rameau (London, 1973, 3/1997)
AntMI	Antiquae musicae italicae E
AÖAW	Anzeiger der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, philosophisch-historische Klasse (1948–)
ApelG	W. Apel: Geschichte der Orgel- und Klaviermusik bis 1700 (Kassel, 1967; Eng. trans., rev., 1972)
AR	Antiphonale sacrosanctae romanae ecclesiae pro diurnis horis (Paris, Tournai and Rome, 1949)
AS	W.H. Frere, ed.: Antiphonale sarisburiense (London, 1901–25/R)
AshbeeR	A. Ashbee: Records of English Court Music (Snodland/Aldershot, 1986–95)
AsM	Asian Music P
AudaM	A. Auda: La musique et les musiciens de l'ancien pays de Liège D
AusDB	Australian Dictionary of Biography (Melbourne, 1966–96)
Baker5[–8]	Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians D
BAMS	Bulletin of the American Musicological Society P
BDA	A Biographical Dictionary of Actors, Actresses, Musicians, Dancers, Managers & Other Stage Personnel in London, 1660–1800 (Carbondale, IL, 1973–93)
BDECM	A. Ashbee and D. Lasocki, eds.: A Biographical Dictionary of English Court Musicians, 1485–1714 (Aldershot, 1998)
BDRSC	A. Ho and D. Feofanov, eds.: Biographical Dictionary of Russian/Soviet Composers D
BeckEP	J.H. Beck: Encyclopedia of Percussion D
BeJb	Beethoven-Jahrbuch P
BenoitMC	M. Benoit: Musiques de cour: chapelle, chambre, écurie, 1661–1733 (Paris, 1971)
BenzingB	J. Benzing: Die Buchdrucker des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (Wiesbaden, 1963, 2/1982)
BerliozM	H. Berlioz: Mémoires (Paris, 1870; ed. and trans. D. Cairns, 1969, 2/1970); ed. P. Citron (Paris, 1969, 2/1991)
BertolottiM	A. Bertolotti: Musici alla corte dei Gonzaga in Mantova dal secolo XV al XVIII (Milan, 1890/R)

BicknellH S. Bicknell: The History of the English Organ (Cambridge, 1996)
BJb Bach-Jahrbuch P
BladesPI J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, 2/1974)
BlumeEK F. Blume: Die evangelische Kirchenmusik (Potsdam, 1931–4/R, enlarged 2/1965 as Geschichte der evangelischen Kirchenmusik; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1974, as Protestant Church Music: a History)
BMB Bibliotheca musica bononiensis (Bologna, 1967–)
BMw Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft P
BNB Biographie nationale [belge] (Brussels, 1866–1986)
BoalchM D.H. Boalch: Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord 1440 to 1840 D
BoetticherOL W. Boetticher: Orlando di Lasso und seine Zeit (Kassel, 1958)
Bouwsteenen: JVNM Bouwsteenen: jaarboek der Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche muziekgeschiedenis P
BoydenH D.D. Boyden: A History of Violin Playing from its Origins to 1761 (London, 1965)
BPM Black Perspective in Music P
BrenetC M. Brenet: Les concerts en France sous l'ancien régime (Paris, 1900/R)
BrenetM M. Brenet: Les musiciens de la Sainte-Chapelle du Palais (Paris, 1910/R)
BrookB B.S. Brook, ed.: The Breitkopf Thematic Catalogue, 1762–1787 (New York, 1966)
BrookSF B.S. Brook: La symphonie française dans la seconde moitié du XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1962)
BrownI H.M. Brown: Instrumental Music Printed Before 1600: a Bibliography (Cambridge, MA, 1965)
Brown-Stratton BMB J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography D
BSIM Bulletin français de la S.I.M. [also Mercure musical and other titles] P
BUCEM E.B. Schnapper, ed.: British Union-Catalogue of Early Music (London, 1957)
BurneyFI C. Burney: The Present State of Music in France and Italy (London, 1771, 2/1773)
BurneyGN C. Burney: The Present State of Music in Germany, the Netherlands, and the United Provinces (London, 1773, 2/1775)
BurneyH C. Burney: A General History of Music from the Earliest Ages to the Present Period (London, 1776–89); ed. F. Mercer (London, 1935/R) [p. nos. refer to this edn]
BWQ Brass and Woodwind Quarterly P

CaffiS F. Caffi: Storia della musica sacra nella già cappella ducale di San Marco in Venezia dal 1318 al 1797 (Venice, 1854–5/R); ed. E. Surian (Florence, 1987)
CaM Catalogus musicus (Kassel, 1963–)
CampbellGC M. Campbell: The Great Cellists D
CampbellGV M. Campbell: The Great Violinists D
CAO Corpus antiphonalium officii (Rome, 1963–79)
CBY Current Biography Yearbook (1955–)
CC B. Morton and P. Collins, eds.: Contemporary Composers D
CeBeDeM directory CeBeDeM et ses compositeurs affiliés, ed. D. von Volborth-Danys (Brussels, 1977–80)
CEKM Corpus of Early Keyboard Music E
CEMF Corpus of Early Music (in Facsimile) (Brussels, 1970–72)
CHM Collectanea historiae musicae (1953–66)
Choron-FayolleD A.-E. Choron and F.J.M. Fayolle: Dictionnaire historique des musiciens D
ClinkscaleMP M.N. Clinkscale: Makers of the Piano D
CM Le choeur des muses E
CMc Current Musicology P
CMI I classici musicali italiani (Milan, 1941–56)
CMM Corpus mensurabilis musicae E
ČMm Časopis Moravského musea [muzea, 1977–] P
CMR Contemporary Music Review P
CMz Cercetări de muzicologie P
CohenE A.I. Cohen: International Encyclopedia of Women Composers D
CohenWE Y.W. Cohen: Werden und Entwicklung der Musik in Israel (Kassel, 1976)
COJ Cambridge Opera Journal P
CooverMA J.B. Coover: Music at Auction: Puttick and Simpson (Warren, MI, 1988)
CoussemakerS C.-E.-H. de Coussemaker: Scriptorum de musica medii aevi nova series (Paris, 1864–76/R, 2/1908, ed. U. Moser)
CroceN B. Croce: I teatri di Napoli (Naples, 1891/R, 5/1966)
ČSHS Československy hudební slovník D
CSM Corpus scriptorum de musica (Rome, later Stuttgart, 1950–)
CSPD Calendar of State Papers (Domestic) (London, 1856–1972)
Cw Das Chorwerk E

DAB Dictionary of American Biography (New York, 1928–37, suppls., 1944–)
DAM Dansk aarbog for musikforskning P
Day-Murrie ESB C.L. Day and E.B. Murrie: English Song-Books (London, 1940)
DBF Dictionnaire de biographie française (Paris, 1933–)
DBI Dizionario biografico degli italiani (Rome, 1960–)
DBL, DBL2, DBL3 Dansk biografisk leksikon (Copenhagen, 1887–1905, 2/1933–45, 3/1979–84)
DBNM, DBNM Darmstädter Beiträge zur neuen Musik P
DBP E. Vieira, ed.: Diccionário biográphico de musicos portuguezes (Lisbon, 1900)
DČHP Dějiny české hudby v příkladech (Prague, 1958)
DDT Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst E
DEMF A. Devriès and F. Lesure: Dictionnaire des éditeurs de musique français D
DEUMM Dizionario enciclopedico universale della musica e dei musicisti D
DeutschMPN O.E. Deutsch: Music Publishers' Numbers (London, 1946)
DHM Documenta historica musicae E
Dichter-ShapiroSM H. Dichter and E. Shapiro: Early American Sheet Music D
DJbM Deutsches Jahrbuch der Musikwissenschaft P
DlabačžKL G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler-Lexikon D
DM Documenta musicologica (Kassel, 1951–)
DMt Dansk musiktidsskrift P
DMV Drammaturgia musicale veneta (Milan, 1983–)
DNB Dictionary of National Biography (Oxford, 1885–1901, suppls., 1901–96)
DoddI G. Dodd, ed.: Thematic Index of Music for Viols (London, 1980–)
DTB Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern E
DTÖ Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich E
DugganIMI M.K. Duggan: Italian Music Incunabula: Printers and Type (Berkeley, 1991)
DVLG Deutsche Vierteljahrsschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte (1923–)

ECCS The Eighteenth-Century Continuo Sonata E
ECFC The Eighteenth-Century French Cantata E
EDM Das Erbe deutscher Musik E
EECM Early English Church Music E
EG Etudes grégoriennes P
EI The Encyclopaedia of Islam (Leiden, 1928–38, 2/1960–)
EinsteinIM A. Einstein: The Italian Madrigal (Princeton, NJ, 1949/R)
EIT Yezhegodnik imperatorskikh teatrov P
EitnerQ R. Eitner: Biographisch-bibliographisches Quellen-Lexikon D
EitnerS R. Eitner: Bibliographie der Musik-Sammelwerke des XVI. und XVII. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1877/R)
EKM Early Keyboard Music E
EL The English School of Lutenist Songwriters, rev. as The English Lute-Songs E
EM The English Madrigal School, rev. as The English Madrigalists E
EMc Early Music P
EMC1, 2 Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, 1981, 2/1992) D

EMDC A. Lavignac and L. de La Laurencie, eds.: Encyclopédie de la musique et dictionnaire du Conservatoire D

EMH Early Music History P

EMN Exempla musica neerlandica E

EMS see EM

EMuz Encyklopedia muzyczne D

ERO Early Romantic Opera E

ES English Song 1600–1675 (New York, 1986–9)

ES Enciclopedia dello spettacolo D

ESLS see EL

EthM Ethnomusicology P

EthM Newsletter Ethno[-]musicology Newsletter P

EwenD D. Ewen: American Composers: a Biographical Dictionary D

FAM Fontes artis musicae P

FasquelleE Encyclopédie de la musique D

FCVR Florilège du concert vocal de la Renaissance E

FellererG K.G. Fellerer: Geschichte der katholischen Kirchenmusik (Düsseldorf, 1939, enlarged 2/1949; Eng. trans., 1961/R)

FellererP K.G. Fellerer: Der Palestrinastil und seine Bedeutung in der vokalen Kirchenmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts (Augsburg, 1929/R)

FenlonMM I. Fenlon: Music and Patronage in Sixteenth-Century Mantua (Cambridge, 1980–82)

FétisB, FétisBS F.-J. Fétis: Biographie universelle des musiciens and suppl. D

FisherMP W.A. Fisher: One Hundred and Fifty Years of Music Publishing in the United States (Boston, 1933)

FiskeETM R. Fiske: English Theatre Music in the Eighteenth Century (London, 1973, 2/1986)

FlorimoN F. Florimo: La scuola musicale di Napoli e i suoi conservatorii (Naples, 1880–83/R)

FO French Opera in the 17th and 18th Centuries (New York, 1983–)

FortuneISS N. Fortune: Italian Secular Song from 1600 to 1635: the Origins and Development of Accompanied Monody (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1954)

FriedlaenderDL M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)

FrotscherG G. Frotscher: Geschichte des Orgelspiels und der Orgelkomposition (Berlin, 1935–6/R, music suppl. 1966)

FuldWFM J.J. Fuld: The Book of World-Famous Music D

FullerPG S. Fuller: The Pandora Guide to Women Composers: Britain and the United States (1629 – Present) D

FürstenauG M. Fürstenau: Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am Hofe zu Dresden (Dresden, 1861–2/R)

GänzlBMT K. Gänzl: The British Musical Theatre (London, 1986)

GänzlEMT K. Gänzl and A. Lamb: Encyclopedia of Musical Theatre D

GaspariC G. Gaspari: Catalogo della Biblioteca del Liceo musicale di Bologna, i–iv (Bologna, 1890–1905/R); v, ed. U. Sesini (Bologna, 1943/R)

GerberL E.L. Gerber: Historisch-biographisches Lexikon der Tonkünstler D

GerberNL E.L. Gerber: Neues historisch-biographisches Lexikon der Tonkünstler D

GerbertS M. Gerbert: Scriptores ecclesiastici de musica sacra potissimum (St Blasien, 1784/R, 3/1931)

GEWM The Garland Encyclopedia of World Music D

GfMKB Gesellschaft für Musikforschung: Kongress-Bericht [1950–]

GiacomoC S. di Giacomo: I quattro antichi conservatorii musicali di Napoli (Milan, 1924–8)

GLMT Greek and Latin Music Theory (Lincoln, NE, 1984–)

GMB Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen E

GMM Gazzetta musicale di Milano P

GOB German Opera 1770–1800, ed. T. Bauman (New York, 1985–6)

GöhlerV A. Göhler: Verzeichnis der in den Frankfurter und Leipziger Messkatalogen der Jahre 1564 bis 1759 angezeigten Musikalien (Leipzig, 1902/R)

GoovaertsH A. Goovaerts: Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans les Pays-Bas (Antwerp, 1880/R)

GR Graduale sacrosanctae romanae ecclesiae (Tournai, 1938)

Grove1[–5] G. Grove, ed.: A Dictionary of Music and Musicians D

Grove6 The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians D

GroveA The New Grove Dictionary of American Music D

GroveI The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments D

GroveJ The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz D

GroveJapan The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians, Jap. trans. D

GroveO The New Grove Dictionary of Opera D

GroveW The New Grove Dictionary of Women Composers D

GS W.H. Frere, ed.: Graduale sarisburiense (London, 1894/R)

GSJ Galpin Society Journal P

GSL K.J. Kutsch and L. Riemann: Grosses Sängerlexikon D

GV R. Celletti: Le grandi voci: dizionario critico-biografico dei cantanti D

HAM Historical Anthology of Music E

HarrisonMMB F.Ll. Harrison: Music in Medieval Britain (London, 1958, 4/1980)

HawkinsH J. Hawkins: A General History of the Science and Practice of Music (London, 1776)

HBSJ Historical Brass Society Journal P

HDM W. Apel: Harvard Dictionary of Music D

HJb Händel-Jahrbuch P

HJbMw Hamburger Jahrbuch für Musikwissenschaft P

HM Hortus musicus E

HMC Historical Manuscripts Commission [Publications]

HMT Handwörterbuch der musikalischen Terminologie D

HMw Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft (Potsdam, 1927–34)

HMYB Hinrichsen's Musical Year Book P

HoneggerD M. Honegger: Dictionnaire de la musique D

HopkinsonD C. Hopkinson: A Dictionary of Parisian Music Publishers 1700–1950 D

Hopkins-RimbaultO E.J. Hopkins and E.F. Rimbault: The Organ: its History and Construction (London, 1855, 3/1887/R)

HPM Harvard Publications in Music E

HR Hudební revue P

HRo Hudební rozhledy P

Humphries-SmithMP C. Humphries and W.C. Smith: Music Publishing in the British Isles D

HV Hudební věda P

ICSC The Italian Cantata in the Seventeenth Century (New York, 1985–6)

IIM Italian Instrumental Music of the Sixteenth and Early Seventeenth Centuries E

IIM Izvestiya na Instituta za muzika P

IMa Instituta et monumenta E

IMi Istituzioni e monumenti dell'arte musicale italiana (Milan, 1931–9, new ser., 1956–64)

IMSCR International Musicological Society: Congress Report [1930–]

IMusSCR International Musical Society: Congress Report [II–IV, 1906–11]

IO The Italian Oratorio 1650–1800 E

IOB Italian Opera 1640–1770, ed. H.M. Brown E

IOG Italian Opera 1810–1840, ed. P. Gossett E

IRASM International Review of the Aesthetics and Sociology of Music P

IRMAS International Review of Music Aesthetics and Sociology P

IRMO S.L. Ginzburg: Istoriya russkoy muziki v notnikh obraztsakh (Leningrad, 1940–52, 2/1968–70)

ISS Italian Secular Song 1606–1636 (New York, 1986)

IZ Instrumentenbau-Zeitschrift P

JAMIS Journal of the American Musical Instrument Society P

JAMS Journal of the American Musicological Society P

JASA Journal of the Acoustical Society of America P

JazzM Jazz Monthly P

JBIOS Journal of the British Institute of Organ Studies P

JbLH Jahrbuch für Liturgik und Hymnologie P
JbMP Jahrbuch der Musikbibliothek Peters P
JbO Jahrbuch für Opernforschung P
JbSIM Jahrbuch des Staatlichen Instituts für Musikforschung Preussischer Kulturbesitz P
JEFDSS Journal of the English Folk Dance and Song Society P
JFSS Journal of the Folk-Song Society P
JIFMC Journal of the International Folk Music Council P
JJ Jazz Journal P
JJI Jazz Journal International P
JJS Journal of Jazz Studies P
JLSA Journal of the Lute Society of America P
JM Journal of Musicology P
JMR Journal of Musicological Research P
JMT Journal of Music Theory P
JoãoIL [João IV:] Primeira parte do index da livraria de musica do muyto alto, e poderoso Rey Dom João o IV. nosso senhor (Lisbon, 1649); ed. J. de Vasconcellos (Oporto, 1874–6)
Johansson FMP C. Johansson: French Music Publishers' Catalogues (Stockholm, 1955)
JohanssonH C. Johansson: J.J. & B. Hummel: Music Publishing and Thematic Catalogues (Stockholm, 1972)
JR Jazz Review P
JRBM Journal of Renaissance and Baroque Music P
JRMA Journal of the Royal Musical Association P
JRME Journal of Research in Music Education P
JT Jazz Times P
JVdGSA Journal of the Viola da Gamba Society of America P
JVNM see Bouwsteenen: JVNM

KdG Komponisten der Gegenwart, ed. H.-W. Heister and W.-W. Sparrer D
KermanEM J. Kerman: The Elizabethan Madrigal: a Comparative Study (New York, 1962)
KidsonBMP F. Kidson: British Music Publishers, Printers and Engravers D
KingMP A.H. King: Four Hundred Years of Music Printing (London, 1964)
KJb Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch P
KM Kwartalnik muzyczny P
KöchelKHM L. von Köchel: Die kaiserliche Hof-Musikkapelle in Wien von 1543 bis 1867 (Vienna, 1869/R)
KretzschmarG H. Kretzschmar: Geschichte des neuen deutschen Liedes (Leipzig, 1911/R)
KrummelEMP D.W. Krummel: English Music Printing (London, 1975)

LaborD Diccionario de la música Labor D
La BordeE J.-B. de La Borde: Essai sur la musique ancienne et moderne D
LabordeMP L.E.S.J. de Laborde: Musiciens de Paris, 1535–1792 D
LafontaineKM H.C. de Lafontaine: The King's Musick (London, 1909/R)
La Laurencie EF L. de La Laurencie: L'école française de violon de Lully à Viotti (Paris, 1922–4/R)
LAMR Latin American Music Review P
LaMusicaD La musica: dizionario D
LaMusicaE La musica: enciclopedia storica D
Langwilll7 see Waterhouse-LangwillI
LedeburTLB C. von Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexicon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861/R)
Le HurayMR P. Le Huray: Music and the Reformation in England, 1549–1660 (London, 1967, 2/1978)
LipowskyBL F.J. Lipowsky: Baierisches Musik-Lexikon D
LM Lucrări de muzicologie P
Lockwood MRF L. Lockwood: Music in Renaissance Ferrara (Oxford, 1984)
LoewenbergA A. Loewenberg: Annals of Opera, 1597–1940 D
LPS The London Pianoforte School 1766–1860 E
LS The London Stage, 1660–1800 (Carbondale, IL, 1960–68)
LSJ Lute Society Journal P
LU Liber usualis missae et officii pro dominicis et festis duplicibus cum cantu gregoriano (Solesmes, 1896, and later edns incl. Tournai, 1963)
Lütgendorff GL W.L. von Lütgendorff: Die Geigen- und Lautenmacher vom Mittelalter bis zur Gegenwart D
LZMÖ Lexikon zeitgenössischer Musik aus Österreich (Vienna, 1997)

MA Musical Antiquary P
MAB Musica antiqua bohemica E
MAk Muzïkal'naya akademiya P
MAM Musik alter Meister E
MAMS Monumenta artis musicae Sloveniae E
MAn Music Analysis P
MAP Musica antiqua polonica E
MAS Musical Antiquarian Society [Publications] E
Mattheson GEP J. Mattheson: Grundlage einer Ehren-Pforte (Hamburg, 1740); ed. Max Schneider (Berlin, 1910/R)
MB Musica britannica E
MC Musica da camera E
McCarthyJR A. McCarthy: Jazz on Record (London, 1968)
MCL H. Mendel and A. Reissmann, eds.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon (Berlin, 1870–80, 3/1890–91/R)
MD Musica disciplina P
ME Muzïkal'naya entsiklopediya D
MEM Mestres de l'Escolanía de Montserrat E
MersenneHU M. Mersenne: Harmonie universelle D
MeyerECM E.H. Meyer: English Chamber Music (London, 1946/R, rev. 3/1982 with D. Poulton as Early English Chamber Music)
MeyerMS E.H. Meyer: Die mehrstimmige Spielmusik des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1934)
MF Music in Facsimile (New York, 1983–91)
Mf Die Musikforschung P
MG Musik und Gesellschaft P
MGG1, 2 Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart D
MGH Monumenta Germaniae historica
MH Música hispana E
MischiatiI O. Mischiati: Indici, cataloghi e avvisi degli editori e librai musicali italiani (Florence, 1984)
MISM Mitteilungen der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum P
MJb Mozart-Jahrbuch [Salzburg, 1950–] P
ML Music & Letters P
MLE Music for London Entertainment 1660–1800 E
MLMI Monumenta lyrica medii aevi italica E
MM Modern Music P
MMA Miscellanea musicologica [Australia] P
MMB Monumenta musicae byzantinae E
MMBel Monumenta musicae belgicae E
MMC Miscellanea musicologica [Czechoslovakia] P
MME Monumentos de la música española E
MMFTR Monuments de la musique française au temps de la Renaissance E
MMg Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte P
MMI Monumenti di musica italiana E
MMMA Monumenta monodica medii aevi E
MMN Monumenta musica neerlandica E
MMP Monumenta musicae in Polonia E
MMR Monthly Musical Record P
MMRF Les maîtres musiciens de la Renaissance française E
MMS Monumenta musicae svecicae E
MNAN Music of the New American Nation E
MO Musical Opinion P
MooserA R.-A. Mooser: Annales de la musique et des musiciens en Russie au XVIIIme siècle D
MoserGV A. Moser: Geschichte des Violinspiels (Berlin, 1923, rev. 2/1966–7 by H.J. Nösselt)
MQ Musical Quarterly P
MR Music Review P
MRM Monuments of Renaissance Music E
MRS Musiche rinascimentali siciliane E
MS Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik P
MSD Musicological Studies and Documents E
MT Musical Times P
MusAm Musical America P
MVH Musica viva historica E
MVSSP Musiche vocali e strumentali sacre e profane E
Mw Das Musikwerk E
MZ Muzikološki zbornik P

NA Note d'archivio per la storia musicale P
NBeJb Neues Beethoven-Jahrbuch P
NBL Norsk biografisk leksikon (Oslo, 1923–83)
NDB Neue deutsche Biographie (Berlin, 1953–)

NeighbourTysonPN O.W. Neighbour and A. Tyson: English Music Publishers' Plate Numbers (London, 1965)
NericiS L. Nerici: Storia della musica in Lucca (Lucca, 1879/R)
NewcombMF A. Newcomb: The Madrigal at Ferrara, 1579–1597 (Princeton, NJ, 1980)
NewmanSBE W.S. Newman: The Sonata in the Baroque Era (Chapel Hill, NC, 1959, 4/1983)
NewmanSCE W.S. Newman: The Sonata in the Classic Era (Chapel Hill, NC, 1963, 3/1983)
NewmanSSB W.S. Newman: The Sonata since Beethoven (Chapel Hill, NC, 1969, 3/1983)
NicollH A. Nicoll: The History of English Drama, 1660–1900 (Cambridge, 1952–9)
NM Nagels Musik-Archiv E
NMÅ Norsk musikkgranskning årbok P
NNBW Nieuw Nederlandsch biografisch woordenboek (Leiden, 1911–37)
NÖB Neue österreichische Biographie (Vienna, 1923–35)
NOHM, NOHM The New Oxford History of Music (Oxford, 1954–90)
NRMI Nuova rivista musicale italiana P
NZM Neue Zeitschrift für Musik P

OHM, OHM The Oxford History of Music (Oxford, 1901–5, 2/1929–38)
OM Opus musicum P
ÖMz Österreichische Musikzeitschrift P
ON Opera News P
OQ Opera Quarterly P
OW Opernwelt P

PalMus Paléographie musicale E
PAMS Papers of the American Musicological Society P
PÄMw Publikation älterer praktischer und theoretischer Musikwerke E
PazdírekH B. Pazdírek: Universal-Handbuch der Musikliteratur aller Zeiten und Völker (Vienna, 1904–10/R)
PBC Publicaciones del departamento de música E
PEM C. Dahlhaus and S. Döhring, eds.: Pipers Enzyklopädie des Musiktheaters (Munich and Zürich, 1986–97)
PG Patrologiae cursus completus, ii: Series graeca, ed. J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1857–1912)
PGfM see PÄMw
PierreH C. Pierre: Histoire du Concert spirituel 1725–1790 (Paris, 1975)
PIISM Pubblicazioni dell'Istituto italiano per la storia della musica E
PirroHM A. Pirro: Histoire de la musique de la fin du XIVe siècle à la fin du XVIe (Paris, 1940)
PirrottaDO N. Pirrotta and E. Povoledo: Li due Orfei: da Poliziano a Monteverdi (Turin, 1969, enlarged 2/1975; Eng. trans., 1982, as Music and Theatre from Poliziano to Monteverdi)
PitoniN G.O. Pitoni: Notitia de contrapuntisti e de compositori di musica (MS, *c*1725, I-Rvat C.G.I/1–2); ed. C. Ruini (Florence, 1988)
PL Patrologiae cursus completus, i: Series latina, ed. J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1844–64)
PM Portugaliae musica E
PMA Proceedings of the Musical Association P
PMFC Polyphonic Music of the Fourteenth Century E
PMM Plainsong and Medieval Music P
PNM Perspectives of New Music P
PraetoriusSM M. Praetorius: Syntagma musicum, i (Wittenberg and Wolfenbüttel, 1614–15, 2/1615/R); ii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R; Eng. trans., 1986, 2/1991); iii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R)
PraetoriusTI M. Praetorius: Theatrum instrumentorum [pt ii/2 of PraetoriusSM]
PRM Polski rocznik muzykologiczny P
PRMA Proceedings of the Royal Musical Association P
Przywecka-SameckaDM M. Przywecka-Samecka: Drukarstwo muzyczne w Polsce do końca XVIII wieku (Kraków, 1969)
PSB Polskich słownik biograficzny (Kraków, 1935)
PSFM Publications [Société française de musicologie] E

Quaderni della RaM Quaderni della Rassegna musicale P

Rad JAZU Rad Jugoslavenske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti P
RaM Rassegna musicale P
RBM Revue belge de musicologie P
RdM Revue de musicologie P
RdMc Revista de musicología P
ReeseMMA G. Reese: Music in the Middle Ages (New York, 1940)
ReeseMR G. Reese: Music in the Renaissance (New York, 1954, 2/1959)
RefardtHBM E. Refardt: Historisch-biographisches Musikerlexikon der Schweiz D
ReM Revue musicale P
RFS Romantic French Song 1830–1870 E
RGMP Revue et gazette musicale de Paris P
RHCM Revue d'histoire et de critique musicales P
RicciTB C. Ricci: I teatri di Bologna nei secoli XVII e XVIII: storia aneddotica (Bologna, 1888/R)
RicordiE C. Sartori and R. Allorto: Enciclopedia della musica D
RiemannG H. Riemann: Geschichte der Musiktheorie im IX.–XIX. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 2/1921/R; Eng. trans. of pts i–ii, 1962/R, and pt iii, 1977)
RiemannL11, 12 Hugo Riemanns Musiklexikon (11/1929, 12/1959–75) D
RIM Rivista italiana di musicologia P
RIMS Rivista internazionale di musica sacra P
RM Ruch muzyczny P
RMARC R.M.A. [Royal Musical Association] Research Chronicle P
RMC Revista musical chilena P
RMF Renaissance Music in Facsimile (New York, 1986–8)
RMFC Recherches sur la musique française classique P
RMG Russkaya muzïkal'naya gazeta P
RMI Rivista musicale italiana P
RMS Renaissance Manuscript Studies (Stuttgart, 1975–)
RN Renaissance News P
RosaM C. de Rosa, Marchese di Villarosa: Memorie dei compositori di musica del regno di Napoli (Naples, 1840)
RRAM Recent Researches in American Music E
RRMBE Recent Researches in the Music of the Baroque Era E
RRMCE Recent Researches in the Music of the Classical Era E
RRMMA Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance E
RRMNETC Recent Researches in the Music of the Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries E
RRMR Recent Researches in the Music of the Renaissance E

SachsH C. Sachs: The History of Musical Instruments (New York, 1940)
SainsburyD J.H. Sainsbury: A Dictionary of Musicians D
SartoriB C. Sartori: Bibliografia della musica strumentale italiana stampata in Italia fino al 1700 (Florence, 1952–68)
SartoriD C. Sartori: Dizionario degli editori musicali italiani D
SartoriL C. Sartori: I libretti italiani a stampa dalle origini al 1800 (Cuneo, 1990–94)
SBL Svenskt biografiskt lexikon (Stockholm, 1918–)
SCC The Sixteenth-Century Chanson E
ScheringGIK A. Schering: Geschichte des Instrumental-Konzerts (Leipzig, 1905, 2/1927/R)
ScheringGO A. Schering: Geschichte des Oratoriums (Leipzig, 1911/R)
SchillingE G. Schilling: Encyclopädie der gesammten musikalischen Wissenschaften, oder Universal-Lexicon der Tonkunst D
SČHK Slovník české hudební kultury (Prague, 1997)
SchmidlD, SchmidlDS C. Schmidl: Dizionario universale dei musicisti and suppl. D
SchmitzG E. Schmitz: Geschichte der weltlichen Solokantate (Leipzig, 1914, 2/1955)
SchullerEJ G. Schuller: Early Jazz (New York, 1968/R)
SchullerSE G. Schuller: The Swing Era (New York, 1989)
SchwarzGM B. Schwarz: Great Masters of the Violin D
SCISM Seventeenth-Century Italian Sacred Music E
SCKM Seventeenth-Century Keyboard Music (New York, 1987–8)
SCMA Smith College Music Archives E
SCMad Sixteenth-Century Madrigal E

SCMot Sixteenth-Century Motet E
SeegerL H. Seeger: Musiklexikon D
SEM Series of Early Music [University of California] E
SennMT W. Senn: Musik und Theater am Hof zu Innsbruck (Innsbruck, 1954)
SH Slovenská hudba P
SIMG Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft P
SKM Sovetskiye kompozitorï i muzïkovedï (Moscow, 1978–89)
SM see SMH
SMA Studies in Music [Australia] P
SMC Studies in Music from the University of Western Ontario [Canada] P
SMd Schweizerische Musikdenkmäler E
SMH Studia musicologica Academiae scientiarum hungaricae P
SmitherHO H. Smither: A History of the Oratorio (Chapel Hill, NC, 1977–)
SML Schweizer Musikerlexikon D
SMM Summa musicae medii aevi E
SMN Studia musicologica norvegica P
SMP Słownik muzyków polskich D
SMSC Solo Motets from the Seventeenth Century (New York, 1987–8)
SMw Studien zur Musikwissenschaft P
SMz Schweizerische Musikzeitung/Revue musicale suisse P
SOB Süddeutsche Orgelmeister des Barock E
SOI L. Bianconi and G. Pestelli, eds.: Storia dell'opera italiana (Turin, 1987–; Eng. trans., 1998–)
SolertiMBD A. Solerti: Musica, ballo e drammatica alla corte medicea dal 1600 al 1637 (Florence, 1905/R)
SouthernB E. Southern: Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians D
SovM Sovetskaya muzïka P
SpataroC B.J. Blackburn, E.E. Lowinsky and C.A. Miller: A Correspondence of Renaissance Musicians (Oxford, 1991)
SPFFBU Sborník prací filosofické [filozofické] fakulty brněnské university [univerzity] P
SpinkES I. Spink: English Song: Dowland to Purcell (London, 1974, repr. 1986 with corrections)
StevensonRB R. Stevenson: Renaissance and Baroque Musical Sources in the Americas (Washington DC, 1970)
Stevenson SCM R. Stevenson: Spanish Cathedral Music in the Golden Age (Berkeley, 1961/R)
StevensonSM R. Stevenson: Spanish Music in the Age of Columbus (The Hague, 1960/R)
StiegerO F. Stieger: Opernlexikon D
STMf Svensk tidskrift för musikforskning P
StrohmM R. Strohm: Music in Late Medieval Bruges (Oxford, 1985)
StrohmR R. Strohm: The Rise of European Music (Cambridge, 1993)
StrunkSR1, 2 O. Strunk: Source Readings in Music History (New York, 1950/R, rev. 2/1998 by L. Treitler)
SubiráHME J. Subirá: Historia de la música española e hispanoamericana (Barcelona, 1953)

TCM Tudor Church Music E
TCMS Three Centuries of Music in Score (New York, 1988–90)
Thompson1 [–11] O. Thompson: The International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians, 1st–11th edns D
TM Thesauri musici E
TSM Tesoro sacro musical P
TVNM Tijdschrift van de Vereniging voor Nederlandse muziekgeschiedenis [and earlier variants] P

UVNM Uitgave van oudere Noord-Nederlandsche Meesterwerken E

Vander Straeten MPB E. Vander Straeten: La musique aux Pays-Bas avant le XIXe siècle D
VannesD R. Vannes, with A. Souris: Dictionnaire des musiciens (compositeurs) D
VannesE R. Vannes: Essai d'un dictionnaire universel des luthiers D
VintonD J. Vinton: Dictionary of Contemporary Music D
VirdungMG S. Virdung: Musica getutscht (Basle, 1511/R)
VMw Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft P
VogelB E. Vogel: Bibliothek der gedruckten weltlichen Vocalmusik Italiens, aus den Jahren 1500 bis 1700 (Berlin, 1892/R)

WalterG F. Walter: Geschichte des Theaters und der Musik am kurpfalzischen Hofe (Leipzig, 1898/R)
WaltherML J.G. Walther: Musicalisches Lexicon, oder Musicalische Bibliothec D
Waterhouse-LangwillI W. Waterhouse: The New Langwill Index: a Dictionary of Musical Wind-Instrument Makers and Inventors D
WDMP Wydawnictwo dawnej muzyki polskiej E
WE The Wellesley Edition E
WECIS Wellesley Edition Cantata Index Series (Wellesley, MA, 1964–72)
Weinmann WM A. Weinmann: Wiener Musikverleger und Musikalienhändler von Mozarts Zeit bis gegen 1860 (Vienna, 1956)
WilliamsNH P. Williams: A New History of the Organ: from the Greeks to the Present Day (London, 1980)
WinterfeldEK C. von Winterfeld: Der evangelische Kirchengesang und sein Verhältniss zur Kunst des Tonsatzes (Leipzig, 1843–7/R)
WolfeMEP R.J. Wolfe: Early American Music Engraving and Printing (Urbana, IL, 1980)
WolfH J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19/R)
WurzbachL C. von Wurzbach: Biographisches Lexikon des Kaiserthums Oesterreich (Vienna, 1856–91)

YIAMR Yearbook, Inter-American Institute for Musical Research, later Yearbook for Inter-American Musical Research P
YIFMC Yearbook of the International Folk Music Council P
YoungHI P.T. Young: 4900 Historical Woodwind Instruments (London, 1993) [enlarged 2nd edn of Twenty Five Hundred Historical Woodwind Instruments (New York, 1982)]
YTM Yearbook for Traditional Music P

ZahnM J. Zahn: Die Melodien der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenlieder (Gütersloh, 1889–93/R)
ZDADL Zeitschrift für deutsches Altertum und deutsche Literatur (1876–)
ZfM Zeitschrift für Musik P
ŹHMP Źródła do historii muzyki polskiej E
ZI Zeitschrift für Instrumentenbau P
ZIMG Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft P
ZL Zenei lexikon D
ZMw Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft P
ZT Zenetudományi tanulmányok P

Discographical Abbreviations

20C	20th Century
20CF	20th Century-Fox
AAFS	Archive of American Folksong (Library of Congress)
A&M Hor.	A&M Horizon
ABC-Para.	ABC-Paramount
AH	Artists House
AIMP	Archives Internationales de Musique Populaire (Musée d'Ethnographie, Geneva), pubd by VDE-Gallo
Ala.	Aladdin
AM	American Music
Amer.	America
AN	Arista Novus
Ant.	Antilles
Ari.	Arista
Asy.	Asylum
Atl.	Atlantic
Aut.	Autograph
Bak.	Bakton
Ban.	Banner
Bay.	Baystate
BB	Black and Blue
Bb	Bluebird
Beth.	Bethlehem
BH	Bee Hive
BL	Black Lion
BN	Blue Note
Bruns.	Brunswick
BS	Black Saint
BStar	Blue Star
Cad.	Cadence
Can.	Canyon
Cand.	Candid
Cap.	Capitol
Car.	Caroline
Cas.	Casablanca
Cat.	Catalyst
Cen.	Century
Chi.	Chiaroscuro
Cir.	Circle
CJ	Classic Jazz
Cob.	Cobblestone
Col.	Columbia
Com.	Commodore
Conc.	Concord
Cont.	Contemporary
Contl	Continental
Cot.	Cotillion
CP	Charlie Parker
CW	Creative World
Del.	Delmark
DG	Deutsche Grammophon
Dis.	Discovery
Dra.	Dragon
EB	Electric Bird
Elec.	Electrola
Elek.	Elektra
Elek. Mus.	Elektra Musician
EmA	EmArcy
ES	Elite Special
Eso.	Esoteric
Ev.	Everest
EW	East Wind
Ewd	Eastworld
FaD	Famous Door
Fan.	Fantasy
FD	Flying Dutchman
FDisk	Flying Disk
Fel.	Felsted
Fon.	Fontana
Fre.	Freedom
FW	Folkways
Gal.	Galaxy
Gen.	Gennett
GM	Groove Merchant
Gram.	Gramavision
GTJ	Good Time Jazz
HA	Hat Art
Hal.	Halcyon
Har.	Harmony
Harl.	Harlequin
HH	Hat Hut
Hick.	Hickory
HM	Harmonia Mundi
Hor.	Horizon
Hyp.	Hyperion
IC	Inner City
IH	Indian House
ImA	Improvising Artists
Imp.	Impulse!
Imper.	Imperial
IndN	India Navigation
Isl.	Island
JAM	Jazz America Marketing
Jlgy	Jazzology
Jlnd	Jazzland
Jub.	Jubilee
Jwl	Jewell
Jzt.	Jazztone
Key.	Keynote
Kt.	Keytone
Lib.	Liberty
Lml.	Limelight
Lon.	London
Mdsv.	Moodsville
Mer.	Mercury
Met.	Metronome
Metro.	Metrojazz
MJR	Master Jazz Recordings
Mlst.	Milestone
Mlt.	Melotone
Moers	Moers Music
MonE	Monmouth-Evergreen
Mstr.	Mainstream
Musi.	Musicraft

Nat.	National
NewJ	New Jazz
Norg.	Norgran
NW	New World
OK	Okeh
OL	Oiseau-Lyre
Omni.	Omnisound
PAct	Pathé Actuelle
PAlt	Palo Alto
Para.	Paramount
Parl.	Parlophone
Per.	Perfect
Phi.	Philips
Phon.	Phontastic
PJ	Pacific Jazz
PL	Pablo Live
Pol.	Polydor
Prog.	Progressive
Prst.	Prestige
PT	Pablo Today
PW	Paddle Wheel
Qual.	Qualiton
Reg.	Regent
Rep.	Reprise
Rev.	Revelation
Riv.	Riverside
Roul.	Roulette
RR	Red Records
RT	Real Time
Sack.	Sackville
Sat.	Saturn
SE	Strata-East
Sig.	Signature
Slnd	Southland
SN	Soul Note
SolS	Solid State
Son.	Sonora
Spot.	Spotlite
Ste.	Steeplechase
Sto.	Storyville
Sup.	Supraphon
Tak.	Takoma
Tan.	Tangent
TE	Toshiba Express
Tei.	Teichiku
Tel.	Telefunken
The.	Theresa
Tim.	Timeless
TL	Time-Life
Tran.	Transition
UA	United Artists
Upt.	Uptown
Van.	Vanguard
Var.	Variety
Vars.	Varsity
Vic.	Victor
VJ	Vee-Jay
Voc.	Vocalion
WB	Warner Bros.
WP	World Pacific
Xan.	Xanadu

Library Sigla

The system of library sigla in this dictionary follows that used by Répertoire International des Sources Musicales, Kassel, as listed in its publication RISM-Bibliothekssigel (Kassel, 1999). Below are listed the sigla to be found; a few of them are additional to those published in the RISM list, but have been established in consultation with the RISM organization. Some original RISM sigla that have now been changed are retained here.

More information on individual libraries is available in the libraries list in volume 28.

In the dictionary, sigla are always printed in italic. In any listing of sources a national sigillum applies without repetition until it is contradicted.

Within each national list, entries are alphabetized by sigillum, first by capital letters (showing the city or town) and then by lower-case ones (showing the institution or collection).

A: AUSTRIA

Siglum	Library
A	Admont, Benediktinerstift, Archiv und Bibliothek
DO	Dorfbeuren, Pfarramt
Ed	Eisenstadt, Domarchiv, Musikarchiv
Ee	——, Esterházy-Archiv
Eh	——, Haydn-Museum
Ek	——, Stadtpfarrkirche
El	——, Burgenländisches Landesmuseum
ETgoëss	Ebenthal (nr Klagenfurt), Goëss private collection
F	Fiecht, St Georgenberg, Benediktinerstift, Bibliothek
FB	Fischbach (Oststeiermark), Pfarrkirche
FK	Feldkirch, Domarchiv
Gd	Graz, Diözesanarchiv
Gk	——, Universität für Musik und Darstellende Kunst
Gl	——, Steiermärkische Landesbibliothek am Joanneum
Gmi	——, Institut für Musikwissenschaft
Gu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
GÖ	Göttweig, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
GÜ	Güssing, Franziskaner Kloster
H	Herzogenburg, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Musikarchiv
HE	Heiligenkreuz, Zisterzienserkloster
Ik	Innsbruck, Tiroler Landeskonservatorium
Imf	——, Tiroler Landesmuseum Ferdinandeum
Imi	——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Universität
Iu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
Kk	Klagenfurt, Kärntner Landeskonservatorium, Stiftsbibliothek
Kla	——, Landesarchiv
Kse	——, Schlossbibliothek Ebental
KN	Klosterneuburg, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Stiftsbibliothek
KR	Kremsmünster, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
L	Lilienfeld, Zisterzienser-Stift, Musikarchiv und Bibliothek
LA	Lambach, Benediktinerstift
LIm	Linz, Oberösterreichisches Landesmuseum
LIs	——, Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek
M	Melk, Benediktiner-Superiorat Mariazell
MB	Michaelbeuern, Benediktinerabtei
MS	Mattsee, Stiftsarchiv
MT	Maria Taferl (Niederösterreich), Pfarre
MZ	Mariazell, Benediktiner-Priorat, Bibliothek und Archiv
N	Neuburg, Pfarrarchiv
R	Rein, Zisterzienserstift
RB	Reichersberg, Stift
Sca	Salzburg, Carolino Augusteum: Salzburger Museum für Kunst und Kulturgeschichte, Bibliothek
Sd	——, Dom, Konsistorialarchiv, Dommusikarchiv
Sk	——, Kapitelbibliothek
Sl	——, Landesarchiv
Sm	——, Internationale Stiftung Mozarteum, Bibliotheca Mozartiana
Smi	——, Universität Salzburg, Institut für Musikwissenschaft, Bibliothek
Sn	——, Nonnberg (Benediktiner-Frauenstift), Bibliothek
Sp	——, Bibliothek des Priesterseminars
Ssp	——, Erzabtei St Peter, Musikarchiv
Sst	——, Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek [in Su]
Su	——, Universitätsbibliothek
SB	Schlierbach, Stift
SCH	Schlägl, Prämonstratenser-Stift, Bibliothek
SE	Seckau, Benediktinerabtei
SEI	Seitenstetten, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
SF	St Florian, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Stiftsbibliothek, Musikarchiv
SL	St Lambrecht, Benediktiner-Abtei, Bibliothek
SPL	St Paul, Benediktinerstift St Paul im Lavanttal
ST	Stams, Zisterzienserstift, Musikarchiv
STEp	Steyr, Stadtpfarre
TU	Tulln, Pfarrkirche St Stephan
VOR	Vorau, Stift
Wa	Vienna, St Augustin, Musikarchiv
Waf	——, Pfarrarchiv Altlerchenfeld
Wdo	——, Zentralarchiv des Deutschen Orden
Wdtö	——, Gesellschaft zur Herausgabe von Denkmälern der Tonkunst in Österreich
Wgm	——, Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde
Wh	——, Pfarrarchiv Hernals
Whh	——, Haus-, Hof- und Staatsarchiv
Whk	——, Hofburgkapelle [in Wn]
Wk	——, St Karl Borromäus
Wkm	——, Kunsthistorisches Museum
Wlic	——, Pfarrkirche Wien-Lichtental
Wm	——, Minoritenkonvent
Wmi	——, Institut für Musikwissenschaft der Universität
Wn	——, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Wp	——, Musikarchiv, Piaristenkirche Maria Treu
Ws	——, Schottenabtei, Musikarchiv
Wsa	——, Stadtarchiv
Wsfl	——, Schottenfeld, Pfarrarchiv St Laurenz

Wsp	——, St Peter, Musikarchiv
Wst	——, Stadt- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Wu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
Wwessely	——, Othmar Wessely, private collection
WAIp	Waidhofen (Ybbs), Stadtpfarre
WIL	Wilhering, Zisterzienserstift, Bibliothek und Musikarchiv
Z	Zwettl, Zisterzienserstift, Stiftsbibliothek

AUS: AUSTRALIA

CAnl	Canberra, National Library of Australia
Msl	Melbourne, State Library of Victoria
Pml	Perth, Central Music Library
PVgm	Parkville, Grainger Museum, University of Melbourne
Sb	Sydney, Symphony Australia National Music Library
Scm	——, New South Wales State Conservatorium of Music
Sfl	——, University of Sydney, Fisher Library
Smc	——, Australia Music Centre Ltd, Library
Sml	——, Music Branch Library, University of Sydney
Sp	——, Public Library
Ssl	——, State Library of New South Wales, Mitchell Library

B: BELGIUM

Aa	Antwerp, Stadsarchief
Aac	——, Archief en Museum voor het Vlaamse Culturleven
Ac	——, Koninklijk Vlaams Muziekconservatorium
Ak	——, Onze-Lieve-Vrouw-Kathedraal, Archief
Amp	——, Museum Plantin-Moretus
As	——, Stadsbibliotheek
Asj	——, Collegiale en Parochiale Kerk St-Jacob, Bibliotheek en Archief
Ba	Brussels, Archives de la Ville
Bc	——, Conservatoire Royal, Bibliothèque, Koninklijk Conservatorium, Bibliotheek
Bcdm	——, Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale [CeBeDeM]
Bg	——, Cathédrale St-Michel et Ste-Gudule [in Bc and Br]
Bmichotte	——, Michotte private collection [in Bc]
Br	——, Bibliothèque Royale Albert 1er/Koninlijke Bibliotheek Albert I, Section de la Musique
Brtb	——, Radiodiffusion-Télévision Belge
Bsp	——, Société Philharmonique
BRc	Bruges, Stedelijk Muziekconservatorium, Bibliotheek
BRs	——, Stadsbibliotheek
D	Diest, St Sulpitiuskerk
Gc	Ghent, Koninklijk Muziekconservatorium, Bibliotheek
Gcd	——, Culturele Dienst Province Oost-Vlaanderen
Geb	——, St Baafsarchief
Gu	——, Universiteit, Centrale Bibliotheek, Handskriftenzaal
La	Liège, Archives de l'État, Fonds de la Cathédrale St Lambert
Lc	——, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, Bibliothèque
Lg	——, Musée Grétry
Lu	——, Université de Liège, Bibliothèque
LVu	Leuven, Katholieke Universiteit van Leuven
MA	Morlanwelz-Mariemont, Musée de Mariemont, Bibliothèque
MEa	Mechelen, Archief en Stadsbibliotheek
Tc	Tournai, Chapitre de la Cathédrale, Archives
Tv	——, Bibliothèque de la Ville

BR: BRAZIL

Rem	Rio de Janeiro, Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro, Escola de Música, Biblioteca Alberto Nepomuceno
Rn	——, Fundação Biblioteca Nacional, Divisão de Música e Arquivo Sonoro

BY: BELARUS

MI	Minsk, Biblioteka Belorusskoj Gosudarstvennoj Konservatorii

C: CUBA

HABn	Havana, Biblioteca Nacional José Martí

CDN: CANADA

Cu	Calgary, University of Calgary, Library
E	Edmonton (AB), University of Alberta
HNu	Hamilton (ON), McMaster University, Mills Memorial Library, Music Section
Lu	London (ON), University of Western Ontario, Music Library
Mc	Montreal, Conservatoire de Musique, Centre de Documentation
Mcm	——, Centre de Musique Canadienne
Mm	——, McGill University, Faculty and Conservatorium of Music Library
Mn	——, Bibliothèque Nationale
On	Ottawa, National Library of Canada, Music Division
Qmu	Quebec, Monastère des Ursulines, Archives
Qsl	——, Musée de l'Amérique Françcaise
Qul	——, Université Laval, Bibliothèque des Sciences Humaines et Sociales
Tcm	Toronto, Canadian Music Centre
Tu	——, University of Toronto, Faculty of Music Library
Vcm	Vancouver, Canadian Music Centre
VIu	Victoria, University of Victoria

CH: SWITZERLAND

A	Aarau, Aargauische Kantonsbibliothek
Bab	Basle, Archiv der Evangelischen Brüdersozietät
Bps	——, Paul Sacher Stiftung, Bibliothek
Bu	——, Universität Basel, Öffentliche Bibliothek, Musikabteilung
BEb	Berne, Burgerbibliothek/Bibliothèque de la Bourgeoisie
BEl	——, Schweizerische Landesbibliothek/Bibliothèque Nationale Suisse/Biblioteca Nationale Svizzera/Biblioteca Naziunala Svizra
BEsu	——, Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek
BM	Beromünster, Musikbibliothek des Stifts
BU	Burgdorf, Stadtbibliothek
CObodmer	Cologny-Geneva, Fondation Martin Bodmer, Bibliotheca Bodmeriana
D	Disentis, Stift, Musikbibliothek
E	Einsiedeln, Benedikterkloster, Musikbibliothek
EN	Engelberg, Kloster, Musikbibliothek
Fcu	Fribourg, Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire
FF	Frauenfeld, Thurgauische Kantonsbibliothek
Gc	Geneva, Conservatoire de Musique, Bibliothèque
Gpu	——, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire
Lmg	Lucerne, Allgemeine Musikalische Gesellschaft
Lz	——, Zentralbibliothek
LAac	Lausanne, Archives Cantonales Vaudoises
LAcu	——, Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire
LU	Lugano, Biblioteca Cantonale
MSbk	Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster
MÜ	Müstair, Frauenkloster St Johann
N	Neuchâtel, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire
OB	Oberbüren, Kloster Glattburg
P	Porrentruy, Bibliothèque Cantonale Jurasienne (incl. Bibliothèque du Lycée Cantonal)
R	Rheinfelden, Christkatholisches Pfarramt
S	Sion, Bibliothèque Cantonale du Valais
SAf	Sarnen, Benediktinerinnen-Abtei St Andreas
SAM	Samedan, Biblioteca Fundaziun Planta
SGd	St Gallen, Domchorarchiv
SGs	——, Stiftsbibliothek, Handschriftenabteilung
SGv	——, Kantonsbibliothek (Vadiana)
SH	Schaffhausen, Stadtbibliothek
SO	Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, Musiksammlung
SObo	——, Bischöfliches Ordinariat der Diözese Basel, Diözesanarchiv des Bistums Basel
W	Winterthur, Stadtbibliothek
Zi	Zürich, Israelitische Kultusgemeinde
Zma	——, Schweizerisches Musik-Archiv [in Nf]
Zz	——, Zentralbibliothek
ZGm	Zug, Pfarrarchiv St Michael

CO: COLOMBIA

B Bogotá, Archivo de la Catedral

CZ: CZECH REPUBLIC

Bam Brno, Archiv města Brna
Bb ——, Klášter Milosrdnych Bratří [in Bm]
Bm ——, Moravské Zemské Muzeum, Oddělení Dějin Hudby
Bsa ——, Státní Oblastní Archiv
Bu ——, Moravská Zemeská Knihovna, Hudební Oddělení
BER Beroun, Statní Okresní Archiv
BROb Broumov, Knihovna Benediktinů [in HK]
CH Cheb, Okresní Archiv
CHRm Chrudim, Okresní Muzeum
D Dačice, Knihovna Františkánů [in Bu]
H Hronov, Muzeum
HK Hradec Králové, Státní Vĕdecká Knihovna
HKm ——, Muzeum Východních Čech
HR Hradiště u Znojma, Knihovna Křižovníků[in Bu]
JIa Jindřichův Hradec, Státní Oblastní Archív Třeboňi
K Český Krumlov, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Trěboni, Hudební Sbírka
KA Kadaň, Děkansky Kostel
KL Klatovy, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Plzni, Pobočka Klatovy
KR Kroměříž, Knihovna Arcibiskupského Zámku
KRa ——, Státní y Zámek a Zahrady, Historicko-Umělecké Fondy, Hudební Archív
KRA Králíky, Kostel Sv. Michala [in UO]
KU Kutná Hora, Okresní Muzeum [in Pnm]
LIa Česká Lípa, Okresní Archív
LIT Litoměřice, Státní Oblastní Archiv
LO Loukov, Farní Kostel
LUa Louny, Okresní Archív
ME Mělník, Okresní Muzeum [on loan to Pnm]
MH Mnichovo Hradiště, Vlastivědné Muzeum
MHa ——, Státní Oblatní Archiv v Praze – Pobočka v Mnichovoě Hradiští
MT Moravská Třebová, Knihovna Františkánů [in Bu]
NR Nová Říše, Klášter Premonstrátů, Knihovna a Hudební Sbírka
OLa Olomouc, Zemeský Archiv Opava, Pracoviště Olomouc
OP Opava, Slezské Muzeum
OS Ostrava, Česky Rozhlas, Hudební Archiv
OSE Osek, Knihovna Cisterciáků [in Pnm]
Pa Prague, Státní Ústřední Archiv
Pak ——, Pražská Metropolitní Kapitula
Pdobrovského ——, Národní Muzeum, Dobrovského (Nostická) Knihovna
Pk ——, Konservatoř, Archiv a Knihovna
Pn ——, Knihovna Národního Muzea
Pnd ——, Národní Divadlo, Hudební Archiv
Pnm ——, Národní Muzeum
Pr ——, Česky Rozhlas, Archívní a Programové Fondy, Fond Hudebnin
Ps ——, Památník Národního Písemnictví, Knihovna
Psj ——, Kostel Sv. Jakuba, Farní Rad
Pst ——, Knihovna Kláštera Premonstrátů (Strahovská Knihovna) [in Pnm]
Pu ——, Národní Knihovna, Hudenbí Oddělení
Puk ——, Karlova Univerzita, Filozofická Fakulta, Ústav Hudební Vědy, Knihovna
PLa Plzeň, Městský Archiv
PLm ——, Západočeské Muzeum, Uměleckoprůmyslové Oddělení
POa Poděbrady, Okresní Archiv Nymburk, Pobočka Poděbrady
POm ——, Muzeum
R Rajhrad, Knihovna Benediktinského Kláštera [in Bm]
RO Rokycany, Okresní Muzeum
ROk ——, Děkansky Úřad, Kostel
SE Semily, Okresní Archiv v Semilech se Sídlem v Bystré nad Jizerou
SO Sokolov, Okresní Archiv se Sídlem Jindřchovice, Zámek
TC Třebíč, Městsky Archiv
TU Turnov, Muzeum, Hudební Sbírka [in SE]
VB Vyšší Brod, Knihovna Cisterciáckého Kláštera
Z Žatec, Muzeum
ZI Žitenice, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Litoměřicích
ZL Zlonice, Památník Antonína Dvořáka

D: GERMANY

Aa Augsburg, Kantoreiarchiv St Annen
Aab ——, Archiv des Bistums Augsburg
Af ——, Fuggersche Domänenkanzlei, Bibliothek
Ahk ——, Heilig-Kreuz-Kirche, Dominikanerkloster, Biliothek [in Asa]
As ——, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek
Asa ——, Stadtarchiv
Au ——, Universität Augsburg, Universitätsbibliothek
AAm Aachen, Domarchiv (Stiftsarchiv)
AAst ——, Öffentliche Bibliothek, Musikbibliothek
AB Amorbach, Fürstlich Leiningische Bibliothek
ABG Annaberg-Buchholz, Kirchenbibliothek St Annen
ABGa ——, Kantoreiarchiv St Annen
AG Augustusburg, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt der Stadtkirche St Petri, Musiksammlung
AIC Aichach, Stadtpfarrkirche [on loan to FS]
ALa Altenburg, Thüringisches Hauptstaadtsarchiv Weimar, Aussenstelle Altenburg AM Amberg, Staatliche Bibliothek
AN Ansbach, Staatliche Bibliothek
ANsv ——, Sing- und Orchesterverein (Ansbacher Kantorei), Archiv [in AN]
AÖhk Altötting, Kapuziner-Kloster St Konrad, Bibliothek
ARk Arnstadt, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek
ARsk ——, Stadt- und Kreisbibliothek
ASh Aschaffenburg, Schloss Johannisburg, Hofbibliothek
ASsb ——, Schloss Johannisburg, Stiftsbibliothek
Ba Berlin, Amerika-Gedenkbibliothek, Musikabteilung [in Bz]
Bda ——, Akademie der Künste, Stiftung Archiv
Bdhm ——, Hochschule für Musik Hanns Eisler
Bga ——, Geheimes Staatsarchiv, Stiftung Preussischer Kulturbesitz
Bgk ——, Bibliothek zum Grauen Kloster [in Bs]
Bhbk ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Bildende Kunst, Bibliothek
Bhm ——, Hochschule der Künste, Hochschulbibliothek, Abteilung Musik und Darstellende Kunst
Bim ——, Staatliches Institut für Musikforschung, Bibliothek
Bk ——, Staatliche Museen Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Kunstbibliothek
Bkk ——, Staatliche Museen Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Kupferstichkabinett
Br ——, Deutsches, Rundfunkarchiv Frankfurt am Main – Berlin, Historische Archive, Bibliothek
Bs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek [in Bz]
Bsb ——, Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin Preussischer Kulturbesitz
Bsommer ——, Sommer private collection
Bsp ——, Evangelische Kirche Berlin-Brandenburg, Sprachenkonvikt, Bibliothek
Bst ——, Stadtbücherei Wilmersdorf, Hauptstelle
BAa Bamberg, Staatsarchiv
BAs ——, Staatsbibliothek
BAL Ballenstedt, Stadtbibliothek
BAR Bartenstein, Fürst zu Hohenlohe-Bartensteinsches Archiv [on loan to NEhz]
BAUd Bautzen, Domstift und Bischöfliches Ordinariat, Bibliothek und Archiv
BAUk Bautzen, Stadtbibliothek
BAUm ——, Stadtmuseum
BB Benediktbeuern, Pfarrkirche, Bibliothek
BDk Brandenburg, Dom St Peter und Paul, Domstiftsarchiv und -bibliothek
BDH Bad Homburg vor der Höhe, Stadtbibliothek
BDS Bad Schwalbach, Evangelisches Pfarrarchiv
BE Bad Berleburg, Fürstlich Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburgsche Bibliothek

Siglum	Library
BEU	Beuron, Bibliothek der Benediktiner-Erzabtei
BFb	Burgsteinfurt, Fürst zu Bentheimsche Musikaliensammlung [on loan to MÜu]
BG	Beuerberg, Stiftskirche
BGD	Berchtesgaden, Stiftkirche, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
BH	Bayreuth, Stadtbücherei
BIB	Bibra, Pfarrarchiv
BIT	Bitterfeld, Kreis-Museum
BKÖs	Bad Köstritz, Forschungs- und Gedenkstätte Heinrich-Schütz-Haus
BMs	Bremen, Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek
BNba	Bonn, Beethoven-Haus, Beethoven-Archiv
BNms	——, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Rheinischen Friedrich-Wilhelm-Universität
BNsa	——, Stadtarchiv und Wissenschaftliche Stadtbibliothek
BNu	——, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek
BO	Bollstedt, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
BOCHmi	Bochum, Ruhr-Universität, Fakultät für Geschichtswissenschaft, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut
BS	Brunswick, Stadtarchiv und Stadtbibliothek
BUCH	Buchen (Odenwald), Bezirksmuseum, Kraus-Sammlung
Cl	Coburg, Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Cs	——, Staatsarchiv
Cv	——, Kunstsammlung der Veste Coburg, Bibliothek
CEbm	Celle, Bomann-Museum, Museum für Volkskunde Landes- und Stadtgeschichte
CR	Crimmitschau, Stadtkirche St Laurentius, Notenarchiv
CZ	Clausthal-Zellerfeld, Kirchenbibliothek [in CZu]
CZu	——, Technische Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Dhm	Dresden, Hochschule für Musik Carl Maria von Weber, Bibliothek [in Dl]
Dl	——, Sächsische Landesbibliothek – Staats- und Universitäts-Bibliothek, Musikabteilung
Dla	——, Sächsisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
Dmb	——, Städtische Bibliotheken, Haupt- und Musikbibliothek [in Dl]
Ds	——, Sächsische Staatsoper, Notenbibliothek [in Dl]
DB	Dettelbach, Franziskanerkloster, Bibliothek
DEl	Dessau, Anhaltische Landesbücherei
DEsa	——, Stadtarchiv
DGs	Duisburg, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek
DI	Dillingen an der Donau, Kreis- und Studienbibliothek
DL	Delitzsch, Museum, Bibliothek
DM	Dortmund, Stadt- und Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DO	Donaueschingen, Fürstlich Fürstenbergische Hofbibliothek
DS	Darmstadt, Hessische Landes- und Hochschulbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DSim	——, Internationales Musikinstitut, Informationszentrum für Zeitgenössische Musik, Bibliothek
DSsa	Darmstadt, Hessisches Staatsarchiv
DT	Detmold, Lippische Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DTF	Dietfurt, Franziskanerkloster [in Ma]
DÜha	——, Nordrhein-Westfälisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
DÜk	Düsseldorf, Goethe-Museum, Bibliothek
DÜl	——, Universitätss- und Landesbibliothek, Heinrich Heine Universität
DWc	Donauwörth, Cassianeum
Ed	Eichstätt, Dom [in Eu]
Es	——, Staats- und Seminarbibliothek [in Eu]
Eu	——, Katholische Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Ew	——, Benediktinerinnen-Abtei St Walburg, Bibliothek
EB	Ebrach, Katholisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek
EC	Eckartsberga, Pfarrarchiv
EF	Erfurt, Statd- und Regionalbibliothek, Abteilung Wissenschaftliche Sondersammlungen
EIa	Eisenach, Stadtarchiv, Bibliothek
EIb	——, Bachmuseum
EN	Engelberg, Franziskanerkloster, Bibliothek
ERu	Erlangen, Universitätsbibliothek
ERP	Landesberg am Lech-Erpfting, Katholische Pfarrkirche [on loan to Aab]
EW	Ellwangen (Jagst), Stiftskirche
F	Frankfurt, Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek
Ff	——, Freies Deutsches Hochstift, Frankfurter Goethe-Museum, Bibliothek
Frl	——, Musikverlag Robert Lienau
Fsa	——, Stadtarchiv
FBa	Freiberg (Lower Saxony), Stadtarchiv
FBo	——, Geschwister-Scholl-Gymnasium, Andreas-Möller-Bibliothek
FLa	Flensburg, Stadtarchiv
FLs	Flensburg, Landeszentralbibliothek Schleswig-Holstein
FRu	Freiburg, Albert-Ludwigs-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften, Alte Drucke und Rara
FRva	——, Deutsches Volksliedarchiv
FRIts	Friedberg, Bibliothek des Theologischen Seminars der Evangelischen Kirche in Hessen und Nassau
FS	Freising, Erzbistum München und Freising, Dombibliothek
FUl	Fulda, Hessische Landesbibliothek
FÜS	Füssen, Katholisches Stadtpfarramt St Mang
FW	Frauenchiemsee, Benediktinerinnenabtei Frauenwörth, Archiv
Ga	Göttingen, Staatliches Archivlager
Gb	——, Johann-Sebastian-Bach-Institut
Gms	——, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Georg-August-Universität
Gs	——, Niedersächsische Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek
GBR	Grossbreitenbach (nr Arnstadt), Pfarramt, Archiv
GD	Goch-Gaesdonck, Collegium Augustinianum
GI	Giessen, Justus-Liebig-Universität, Bibliothek
GLAU	Glauchau, St Georgen, Musikarchiv
GM	Grimma, Göschenhaus-Seume-Gedenkstätte
GMl	——, Landesschule [in Dl]
GOa	Gotha, Augustinerkirche, Notenbibliothek
GOl	——, Forschungs- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
GÖs	Görlitz, Oberlausitzische Bibliothek der Wissenschaften bei den Städtischen Sammlungen
GOL	Goldbach (nr Gotha), Pfarrbibliothek
GRu	Greifswald, Universitätsbibliothek
GRH	Gerolzhofen, Katholische Pfarrei [on loan to WÜd]
GÜ	Güstrow, Museum der Stadt
GZsa	Greiz, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv Rudolstadt, Aussenstelle Greiz
Ha	Hamburg, Staatsarchiv
Hkm	——, Kunstgewerbemuseum, Bibliothek
Hmb	——, Öffentlichen Bücherhallen, Musikbücherei
Hs	——, Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek Carl von Ossietzky, Musiksammlung
HAf	Halle, Hauptbibliothek und Archiv der Franckeschen Stiftungen
HAh	——, Händel-Haus
HAmi	——, Martin-Luther-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt, Institut für Musikwissenschaft, Bibliothek
HAmk	——, Marktkirche Unser Lieben Frauen, Marienbibliothek
HAu	——, Martin-Luther-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt
HAR	Hartha (Kurort), Kantoreiarchiv
HB	Heilbronn, Stadtarchiv
HEms	Heidelberg, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Rupert-Karls-Universität
HEu	——, Ruprecht-Karls-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften und Alte Drucke
HER	Herrnhut, Evangelische Brüder-Unität, Archiv
HGm	Havelberg, Prignitz-Museum, Bibliothek
HL	Haltenbergstetten, Schloss (über Niederstetten, Baden-Württemburg), Fürst zu Hohenlohe-Jagstberg'sche Bibliothek [in Mbs]

HOE Hohenstein-Ernstthal, Kantoreiarchiv der Christophorikirche
HR Harburg (nr Donauwörth), Fürstlich Oettingen-Wallerstein'sche Bibliothek Schloss Harburg [in Au]
HRD Arnsberg-Herdringen, Schlossbibliothek (Bibliotheca Fürstenbergiana) [in Au]
HSj Helmstedt, Ehemalige Universitätsbibliothek
HSk ——, Kantorat St Stephani [in W]
HVkm Hanover, Bibliothek des Kestner-Museums
HVl ——, Niedersächsische Landesbibliothek
HVs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek
HVsa ——, Staatsarchiv
IN Markt Indersdorf, Katholisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
ISL Iserlohn, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Varnhagen-Bibliothek
Jmb Jena, Ernst-Abbe-Bücherei und Lesehalle der Carl-Zeiss-Stiftung, Musikbibliothek
Jmi Jena, Friedrich-Schiller-Universität, Sektion Literatur- und Kunstwissenschaften, Bibliothek des ehem. Musikwissenschaftlichen Instituts [in Ju]
Ju ——, Friedrich-Schiller-Universität, Thüringer Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek
JE Jever, Marien-Gymnasium, Bibliothek
Kdma Kassel, Deutsches Musikgeschichtliches Archiv
Kl ——, Gesamthochschul-Bibliothek, Landesbibliothek und Murhardsche Bibliothek, Musiksammlung
Km ——, Musikakademie, Bibliothek
Ksp ——, Louis Spohr-Gedenk- und Forschungsstätte, Archiv
KA Karlsruhe, Badische Landesbibliothek
KAsp ——, Pfarramt St Peter
KAu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
KBs Koblenz, Stadtbibliothek
KFp Kaufbeuren, Protestantisches Kirchenarchiv
KIl Kiel, Schleswig-Holsteinische Landesbibliothek
KIu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
KMs Kamenz, Stadtarchiv
KNa Cologne, Historisches Archiv der Stadt
KNd ——, Kölner Dom, Erzbischöfliche Diözesan- und Dombibliothek
KNh ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Bibliothek
KNmi ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Universität
KNu ——, Universitäts- und Stadtbibliothek
KPs Kempten, Stadtbücherei
KPsl ——, Stadtpfarrkirche St Lorenz, Musikarchiv
KR Kleinröhrsdorf (nr Bischofswerda), Pfarrkirchenbibliothek
KZa Konstanz, Stadtarchiv
Lm Lüneburg, Michaelisschule
Lr ——, Ratsbücherei, Musikabteilung
LA Landshut, Historischer Verein für Niederbayern, Bibliothek
LB Langenburg, Fürstlich Hohenlohe-Langenburg'sche Schlossbibliothek [on loan to NEhz]
LEb Leipzig, Bach-Archiv
LEbh ——, Breitkopf & Härtel, Verlagsarchiv
LEdb ——, Deutsche Bücherei, Musikaliensammlung
LEm ——, Leipziger Städtische Bibliotheken, Musikbibliothek
LEmi ——, Universität, Zweigbibliothek Musikwissenschaft und Musikpädagogik [in LEu]
LEsm ——, Stadtgeschichtliches Museum, Bibliothek, Musik- und Theatergeschichtliche Sammlungen
LEst ——, Stadtbibliothek [in LEu and LEm]
LEt ——, Thomanerchor, Bibliothek [in LEb]
LEu ——, Karl-Marx-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Bibliotheca Albertina
LFN Laufen, Stiftsarchiv
LI Lindau, Stadtbibliothek
LIM Limbach am Main, Pfarrkirche Maria Limbach
LST Lichtenstein, Stadtkirche St Laurentius, Kantoreiarchiv
LÜh Lübeck, Bibliothek der Hansestadt, Musikabteilung
LUC Luckau, Stadtkirche St Nikolai, Kantoreiarchiv
Ma Munich, Franziskanerkloster St Anna, Bibliothek
Mb ——, Benediktinerabtei St Bonifaz, Bibliothek
Mbm ——, Bibliothek des Metropolitankapitels
Mbn ——, Bayerisches Nationalmuseum, Bibliothek
Mbs ——, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek
Mf ——, Frauenkirche [on loan to FS]
Mh ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Bibliothek
Mhsa ——, Bayerisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
Mk ——, Theatinerkirche St Kajetan
Mm ——, Bibliothek St Michael Mo ——, Opernarchiv
Msa ——, Staatsarchiv
Mth ——, Theatermuseum der Clara-Ziegler-Stiftung
Mu ——, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften, Nachlässe, Alte Drucke
MAl Magdeburg, Landeshauptarchiv Sachsen-Anhalt [in WERa]
MAs ——, Stadtbibliothek Wilhelm Weitling, Musikabteilung
ME Meissen, Stadt- und Kreisbibliothek
MEIk Meiningen, Bibliothek der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirchengemeinde
MEIl ——, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv
MEIr ——, Meininger Museen, Abteilung Musikgeschichte/Max-Reger-Archiv
MERa Merseburg, Domstift, Stiftsarchiv
MG Marburg, Westdeutsche Bibliothek [in Bsb]
MGmi ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Philipps-Universität, Abteilung Hessisches Musikarchiv
MGs ——, Staatsarchiv und Archivschule
MGu ——, Philipps-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
MGB Mönchen-Gladbach, Bibliothek Wissenschaft und Weisheit, Johannes-Duns-Skotus-Akademie der Kölnischen Ordens-Provinz der Franziskaner
MH Mannheim, Wissenschaftliche Stadtbibliothek
MHrm ——, Städtisches Reiss-Museum
MHst ——, Stadtbücherei, Musikbücherei
MLHb Mühlhausen, Blasiuskirche, Pfarrarchiv Divi Blasii [on loan to MLHm]
MLHm ——, Marienkirche
MLHr ——, Stadtarchiv
MMm Memmingen, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Martin, Bibliothek
MR Marienberg, Kirchenbibliothek
MT Metten, Abtei, Bibliothek
MÜd Münster, Bischöfliches Diözesanarchiv
MÜp ——, Bischöflishes Priesterseminar, Bibliothek
MÜs ——, Santini-Bibliothek [in MÜp]
MÜu ——, Westfälische Wilhelms-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
MÜG Mügeln, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Johannis, Musikarchiv
MY Mylau, Kirchenbibliothek
MZmi Mainz, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Johannes-Gutenberg-Universität MZp ——, Bischöfliches Priesterseminar, Bibliothek
MZs ——, Stadtbibliothek
MZsch ——, Musikverlag B. Schott's Söhne, Verlagsarchiv
MZu ——, Johannes-Gutenberg-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Musikabteilung
Ngm Nuremberg, Germanisches National-Museum, Bibliothek
Nla ——, Bibliothek beim Landeskirchlichen Archiv
Nst ——, Bibliothek Egidienplatz
NA Neustadt an der Orla, Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchgemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
NAUs Naumburg, Stadtarchiv
NAUw ——, St Wenzel, Bibliothek
NEhz Neuenstein, Hohenlohe-Zentralarchiv
NH Neresheim, Bibliothek der Benediktinerabtei
NL Nördlingen, Stadtarchiv, Stadtbibliothek und Volksbücherei
NLk ——, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Georg, Musikarchiv
NM Neumünster, Schleswig-Holsteinische Musiksammlung der Stadt Neumünster [in KIl]

NNFw Neunhof (nr Nürnberg), Freiherrliche Welser'sche Familienstiftung
NO Nordhausen, Wilhelm-von-Humboldt-Gymnasium, Bibliothek
NS Neustadt an der Aisch, Evangelische Kirchenbibliothek
NT Neumarkt-St Veit, Pfarrkirche
NTRE Niedertrebra, Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchgemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
OB Ottobeuren, Benediktinerabtei
OBS Gessertshausen-Oberschönenfeld, Abtei
OF Offenbach am Main, Verlagsarchiv André
OLH Olbernhau, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Pfarrarchiv
ORB Oranienbaum, Landesarchiv
Pg Passau, Gymnasialbibliothek
Po ——, Bistum, Archiv
PA Paderborn, Erzbischöfliche Akademische Bibliothek [in HRD]
PE Perleberg, Pfarrbibliothek
PI Pirna, Stadtarchiv
PL Plauen, Stadtkirche St Johannis, Pfarrarchiv
PO Pommersfelden, Graf von Schönbornsche Schlossbibliothek
POL Polling, Katholisches Pfarramt
POTh Potsdam, Fachhochschule Potsdam, Hochschulbibliothek
Rp Regensburg, Bischöfliche Zentralbibliothek, Proske-Musikbibliothek
Rs ——, Staatliche Bibliothek
Rtt ——, Fürst Thurn und Taxis Hofbibliothek
Ru ——, Universität Regensburg, Universitätsbibliothek
RAd Ratzeburg, Domarchiv
RB Rothenburg ob der Tauber, Stadtarchiv und Rats- und Konsistorialbibliothek
RH Rheda, Fürst zu Bentheim-Tecklenburgische Musikbibliothek [on loan to MÜu]
ROmi Rostock, Universitätsbibliothek, Fachbibliothek Musikwissenschaften
ROs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikabteilung
ROu ——, Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
RT Rastatt, Bibliothek des Friedrich-Wilhelm-Gymnasiums
RUh Rudolstadt, Hofkapellarchiv [in RUl]
RUl ——, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv
Sl Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek
SBj Straubing, Kirchenbibliothek St Jakob [in Rp]
SCHOT Schotten, Liebfrauenkirche
SHk Sondershausen, Stadtkirche/Superintendentur, Bibliothek
SHm ——, Schlossmuseum
SHs ——, Schlossmuseum, Bibliothek [in SHm]
SI Sigmaringen, Fürstlich Hohenzollernsche Hofbibliothek
SNed Schmalkalden, Evangelisches Dekanat, Bibliothek
SPlb Speyer, Pfälzische Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
STBp Steinbach (nr Bad Salzungen), Evangelische-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Pfarrarchiv
STOm Stolberg (Harz), Pfarramt St Martini, Pfarrarchiv
SUH Suhl, Wissenschaftliche Allgemeinbibliothek, Musikabteilung
SÜN Sünching, Schloss
SWl Schwerin, Landesbibliothek Mecklenburg-Vorpommern, Musiksammlung
SWs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikabteilung [in SWl]
SWth ——, Mecklenburgisches Staatstheater, Bibliothek
Tl Tübingen, Schwäbisches Landesmusikarchiv [in Tmi]
Tmi ——, Bibliothek des Musikwissenschaftlichen Institut
Tu ——, Eberhard-Karls-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
TEG Tegernsee, Pfarrkirche
TEGha ——, Herzogliches Archiv
TEI Teisendorf, Katholisches Pfarramt, Pfarrbibliothek
TIT Tittmoning, Pfarrkirche [in Fs]
TO Torgau, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Johann-Walter-Kantorei
TRb Trier, Bistumarchiv
TRs ——, Stadtbibliothek
TZ Bad Tölz, Katholisches Pfarramt Maria Himmelfahrt [in FS]
Us Ulm, Stadtbibliothek
Usch ——, Von Schermar'sche Familienstiftung, Bibliothek
UDa Udestedt, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt [in Dl]
URS Ursberg, St Josef-Kongregation, Orden der Franziskanerinnen
W Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, Handschriftensammlung
Wa ——, Niedersächsisches Staatsarchiv
WA Waldheim, Stadtkirche St Nikolai, Bibliothek
WAB Waldenburg, St Bartholomäus, Kantoreiarchiv
WD Wiesentheid, Musiksammlung des Grafen von Schönborn-Wiesentheid
WERhb Wernigerode, Harzmuseum, Harzbücherei
WEY Weyarn, Pfarrkirche, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
WF Weissenfels, Schuh- und Stadtmuseum Weissenfels (mit Heinrich-Schütz-Gedenkstätte) [on loan to BKÖs]
WFe ——, Ephoralbibliothek
WFmk ——, Marienkirche, Pfarrarchiv [in HAmk]
WGl Wittenberg, Lutherhalle, Reformationsgeschichtliches Museum
WGH Waigolshausen, Katholische Pfarrei [on loan to WÜd]
WH Bad Windsheim, Stadtbibliothek
WIl Wiesbaden, Hessische Landesbibliothek
WINtj Winhöring, Gräflich Toerring-Jettenbachsche Bibliothek [on loan to Mbs]
WO Worms, Stadtbibliothek und Öffentliche Büchereien
WRdn Weimar, Deutsches Nationaltheater und Staatskappelle, Archiv
WRgm ——, Goethe-National-Museum (Goethes Wohnhaus)
WRgs ——, Stiftung Weimarer Klassik, Goethe–Schiller-Archiv
WRh ——, Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt
WRiv ——, Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt, Institut für Volksmusikforschung
WRl ——, Thüringisches Hauptstaatsarchiv Weimar
WRtl ——, Thüringische Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung [in WRz]
WRz ——, Stiftung Weimarer Klassik, Herzogin Anna Amalia Bibliothek
WS Wasserburg am Inn, Chorarchiv St Jakob, Pfarramt [on loan to FS]
WÜd Würzburg, Diözesanarchiv
WÜst ——, Staatsarchiv
WÜu ——, Bayerische Julius-Maximilians-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Z Zwickau, Ratsschulbibliothek, Wissenschaftliche Bibliothek
Zsa ——, Stadtarchiv
Zsch ——, Robert-Schumann-Haus
ZE Zerbst, Stadtarchiv
ZEo ——, Gymnasium Francisceum, Bibliothek
ZGh Zörbig, Heimatmuseum
ZI Zittau, Christian-Weise-Bibliothek, Altbestand [in Dl]
ZL Zeil, Fürstlich Waldburg-Zeil'sches Archiv
ZZs Zeitz, Stiftsbibliothek

DK: DENMARK

A Århus, Statsbiblioteket
Ch Christiansfeld, Brødremenigheden (Herrnhutgemeinde)
Kar Copenhagen, Det Arnamagnaeanske Institut
Kc ——, Carl Claudius Musikhistoriske Samling [in Km]
Kk ——, Kongelige Bibliotek
Kmk ——, Kongelige Danske Musikkonservatorium
Ku ——, Det Kongelige Bibliotek Fiolstraede
Kv ——, Københavns Universitét, Musikvidenskabeligt Institut, Bibliotek
Ol Odense, Landsarkivet for Fyen

Ou ——, Universitetsbibliotek, Musikafdelingen
Sa Sorø, Sorø Akademi, Biblioteket
Tv Tåsinge, Valdemars Slot

E: SPAIN

Ac Avila, S Apostólica Iglesia Catedral de el Salvador, Archivo Catedralicio
Asa ——, Monasterio de S Ana
AL Alquézar, Colegiata
ALB Albarracín, Catedral, Archivo
AR Aránzazu, Archivo Musical del Monasterio de Aránzazu
AS Astorga, Catedral
Bac Barcelona, Archivo de la Corona de Aragón/Arixiu de la Corona d'Aragó
Bbc ——, Biblioteca de Catalunya, Seccíon de Música
Bc ——, S.E. Catedra Basiclica, Arixiu
Bcd ——, Centro de Documentació Musical de la Generalitat de Catalunya 'El Jardi Dels Tarongers'
Bih ——, Arixiu Históric de la Ciutat
Bim ——, Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, Departamento de Musicología, Biblioteca
Bit ——, Institut del Teatre, Centre d'Investigació, Documentació i Difusió
Boc ——, Orfeó Catalá, Biblioteca
Bu ——, Universitat Autónoma
BA Badajoz, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
BUa Burgos, Catedral, Archivo
BUlh ——, Cistercian Monastero de Las Huelgas
C Córdoba, S Iglesia Catedral, Archivo de Música
CA Calahorra, Catedral
CAL Calatayud, Colegiata de S María
CU Cuenca, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
CUi ——, Instituto de Música Religiosa
CZ Cádiz, Archivo Capitular
E San Lorenzo de El Escorial, Monasterio, Real Biblioteca
G Gerona, Catedral, Archivo/Arxiu Capitular
Gp ——, Biblioteca Pública
GRc Granada, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo Capitular [in GRcr]
GRcr ——, Capilla Real, Archivo de Música
GRmf ——, Archivo Manuel de Falla
GU Guadalupe, Real Monasterio de S María, Archivo de Música
H Huesca, Catedral
J Jaca, Catedral, Archivo Musical
JA Jaén, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
JEc Jerez de la Frontera, Colegiata
L León, Catedral, Archivo Histórico
Lc ——, Real Basilica de S Isidoro
LEc Lérida, Catedral
LPA Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Catedral de Canarias
Mah Madrid, Archivo Histórico Nacional
Mba ——, Archivo de Música, Real Academia de Bellas Artes de S Fernando Mc ——, Real Conservatorio Superior de Música, Biblioteca
Mca ——, Casa de Alba
Mcns ——, Congregación de Nuestra Señora
Md ——, Centro de Documentación Musical del Ministerio de Cultura
Mdr ——, Convento de las Descalzas Reales Mm ——, Biblioteca Histórica Municipal Mmc ——, Casa Ducal de Medinaceli, Biblioteca
Mn ——, Biblioteca Nacional
Mp ——, Patrimonio Nacional
Msa ——, Sociedad General de Autores y Editores
MA Málaga, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
MO Montserrat, Abadía
MON Mondoñedo, Catedral, Archivo
OL Olot, Biblioteca Popular
ORI Orihuela, Catedral, Archivo
OV Oviedo, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo
P Plasencia, Catedral, Archivo de Música
PAc Palma de Mallorca, Catedral, Archivo
PAp ——, Biblioteca Provincial
PAL Palencia, Catedral de S Antolín, Archivo de Música
PAMc Pamplona, Catedral, Archivo
PAS Pastrana, Museo Parroquial
RO Roncesvalles, Monasterio S María, Biblioteca
Sc Seville, Institución Colombina
SA Salamanca, Catedral, Archivo Catedralicio
SAc ——, Conservatorio Superior de Música de Salamanca, Biblioteca
SAu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
SAN Santander, Biblioteca de la Universidad Menéndez, Sección de Música
SC Santiago de Compostela, Catedral Metropolitana
SCu ——, Biblioteca de la Universidad
SD Santo Domingo de la Calzada, Catedral Archivo
SE Segovia, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
SEG Segorbe, Archivo de la Catedral
SI Silos, Abadía de S Domingo, Archivo
SU Seo de Urgel, Catedral
Tc Toledo, Catedral, Archivo y Biblioteca Capítulares
Tp ——, Biblioteca Pública Provincial y Museo de la S Cruz
TAc Tarragona, Catedral
TE Teruel, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
TO Tortosa, Catedral
TUY Tuy, Catedral
TZ Tarazona, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
V Valladolid, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo de Música
Vp ——, Parroquia de Santiago
VAa Valencia, Archivo Municipal
VAc ——, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo y Biblioteca, Archivo de Música
VAcp ——, Real Colegio: Seminario de Corpus Christi, Archivo Musical del Patriarca
VAu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
VI Vich, Museu Episcopal
Zac Zaragoza, Catedrale de La Seo y Basílica del Pilar, Archivo de Música de las Catedrales
Zcc ——, Colegio de las Escuelas Pías de S José de Calasanz, Biblioteca
Zs ——, La Seo, Biblioteca Capitular [in Zac]
Zvp ——, Iglesia Metropolitana [in Zac]
ZAc Zamora, Catedral

ET: EGYPT

Cn Cairo, National Library (Dar al-Kutub)
MSsc Mount Sinai, St Catherine's Monastery

EV: ESTONIA

TALg Tallinn, National Library of Estonia

F: FRANCE

A Avignon, Médiathèque Ceccano
Ac ——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
AB Abbeville, Bibliothèque Nationale
AG Agen, Archives Départementales de Lot-et-Garonne
AI Albi, Bibliothèque Municipale
AIXc Aix-en-Provence, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
AIXm ——, Bibliothèque Méjanes
AIXmc ——, Bibliothèque de la Maîtrise de la Cathédrale
AL Alençon, Bibliothèque Municipale
AM Amiens, Bibliothèque Municipale
AN Angers, Bibliothèque Municipale
APT Apt, Basilique Ste Anne
AS Arras, Médiathèque Municipale
ASOlang Asnières-sur-Oise, Collection François Lang
AUT Autun, Bibliothèque Municipale
AVR Avranches, Bibliothèque Nationale
B Besançon, Bibliothèque Municipale
Ba ——, Bibliothèque de l'Archevêché
BE Beauvais, Bibliothèque Municipale
BG Bourg-en-Bresse, Bibliothèque Municipale
BO Bordeaux, Bibliothèque Municipale
BS Bourges, Bibliothèque Municipale
C Carpentras, Bibliothèque Municipale (Inguimbertine)

CA Cambrai, Médiathèque Municipale
CAc ——, Cathédrale
CC Carcassonne, Bibliothèque Municipale
CF Clermont-Ferrand, Bibliothèque Municipale et Interuniversitaire, Département Patrimoine
CH Chantilly, Musée Condé
CHd ——, Musée Dobrie
CHRm Chartres, Bibliothèque Municipale
CLO Clermont-de-l'Oise, Bibliothèque
CO Colmar, Bibliothèque de la Ville
COM Compiègne, Bibliothèque Municipale
CSM Châlons-en-Champagne, Bibliothèque Municipale
Dc Dijon, Conservatoire Jean-Philippe Rameau, Bibliothèque
Dm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale
DI Dieppe, Fonds Anciens et Local, Médiathèque Jean Renoir
DO Dôle, Bibliothèque Municipale
DOU Douai, Bibliothèque Nationale
E Epinal, Bibliothèque Nationale
EMc Embrun, Trésor de la Cathédrale
EV Evreux, Bibliothèque Municipale
F Foix, Bibliothèque Municipale
G Grenoble, Bibliothèque Municipale
Lad Lille, Archives Départementales du Nord
Lc ——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
Lm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale Jean Levy
LA Laon, Bibliothèque Municipale
LG Limoges, Bibliothèque Francophone Municipale
LH Le Havre, Bibliothèque Municipale
LM Le Mans, Bibliothèque Municipale Classée, Médiathèque Louis Aragon
LYc Lyons, Conservatoire National de Musique
LYm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale
Mc Marseilles, Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation
MD Montbéliard, Bibliothèque Municipale
ME Metz, Médiathèque
MH Mulhouse, Bibliothèque Municipale
ML Moulins, Bibliothèque Municipale
MO Montpellier, Bibliothèque de l'Université
MOf ——, Bibliothèque Inter-Universitaire, Section Médecine
MON Montauban, Bibliothèque Municipale Antonin Perbosc
Nm Nantes, Bibliothèque Municipale, Médiathèque
NAc Nancy, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
O Orléans, Médiathèque
Pa Paris, Bibliothèque de l'Arsenal
Pan ——, Archives Nationales
Pc ——, Conservatoire [in Pn]
Pcf ——, Bibliothèque de la Comédie Française
Pcnrs ——, Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, Bibliothèque
Pd ——, Centre de Documentation de la Musique Contemporaire
Pe ——, Schola Cantorum
Peb ——, Ecole Normale Supérieure des Beaux-Arts, Bibliothèque
Pgm ——, Gustav Mahler, Bibliothèque Musicale
Phanson ——, Collection Hanson
Pi ——, Bibliothèque de l'Institut de France
Pim ——, Bibliothèque Pierre Aubry
Pm ——, Bibliothèque Mazarine
Pmeyer ——, André Meyer, private collection
Pn ——, Bibliothèque Nationale de France
Po ——, Bibliothèque-Musée de l'Opéra
Ppincherle ——, Marc Pincherle, private collection
Ppo ——, Bibliothèque Polonaise de Paris
Prothschild ——, Germaine, Baronne Edouard de Rothschild, private collection
Prt ——, Radio France, Documentation Musicale
Ps ——, Bibliothèque de la Sorbonne
Psal ——, Editions Salabert
Pse ——, Société des Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique
Psg ——, Bibliothèque Ste-Geneviève
Pshp ——, Société d'Histoire du Protestantisme Français, Bibliothèque
Pthibault ——, Geneviève Thibault, private collection [in Pn]
R Rouen, Bibliothèque Municipale
Rc ——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
RS Reims, Bibliothèque Municipale
RSc ——, Maîtrise de la Cathédrale
Sc Strasbourg, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
Sgs ——, Union Sainte Cécile, Bibliothéque Musicale du Grand Séminaire
Sim ——, Université des Sciences Humaines, Institut de Musicologie
Sm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale
Sn ——, Bibliothèque Nationale et Universitaire
Ssp ——, Bibliothèque du Séminaire Protestant
SDI St Dié, Bibliothèque Municipale
SEm Sens, Bibliothèque Municipale
SERc Serrant, Château
SO Solesmes, Abbaye de St-Pierre
SOM St Omer, Bibliothèque Municipale
SQ St Quentin, Bibliothèque Municipale
T Troyes, Bibliothèque Municipale
TLm Toulouse, Bibliothèque Municipale
TOm Tours, Bibliothèque Municipale
V Versailles, Bibliothèque
VA Vannes, Bibliothèque Municipale
VAL Valenciennes, Bibliothèque Municipale
VN Verdun, Bibliothèque Municipale

FIN: FINLAND

A Turku, Åbo Akademi, Sibelius Museum, Bibliotek ja Arkiv
Hy Helsinki, Helsingin Yliopiston Kirjasto/Helsinki University Library/Suomen Kansalliskikjasto
Hyf ——, Helsingin Yliopiston Kirjasto, Department of Finnish Music

GB: GREAT BRITAIN

A Aberdeen, University, Queen Mother Library
AB Aberystwyth, Llyfryell Genedlaethol Cymru/National Library of Wales
ABu ——, University College of Wales
ALb Aldeburgh, Britten-Pears Library
AM Ampleforth, Abbey and College Library, St Lawrence Abbey
AR Arundel Castle, Archive
Bp Birmingham, Public Libraries
Bu ——, Birmingham University
BA Bath, Municipal Library
BEcr Bedford, Bedfordshire County Record Office
BEL Belton (Lincs.), Belton House
BENcoke Bentley (Hants.), Gerald Coke, private collection
BEV Beverley, East Yorkshire County Record Office
BO Bournemouth, Central Library
BRp Bristol, Central Library
BRu ——, University of Bristol Library
Ccc Cambridge, Corpus Christi College, Parker Library
Ccl ——, Central Library
Cclc ——, Clare College Archives
Ce ——, Emmanuel College
Cfm ——, Fitzwilliam Museum, Dept of Manuscripts and Printed Books
Cgc ——, Gonville and Caius College
Cjc ——, St John's College
Ckc ——, King's College, Rowe Music Library
Cmc ——, Magdalene College, Pepys Library
Cp ——, Peterhouse College Library
Cpc ——, Pembroke College Library
Cpl ——, Pendlebury Library of Music
Cssc ——, Sidney Sussex College
Ctc ——, Trinity College, Library
Cu ——, University Library
CA Canterbury, Cathedral Library
CDp Cardiff, Public Libraries, Central Library
CDu ——, University of Wales/Prifysgol Cymru
CF Chelmsford, Essex County Record Office
CH Chichester, Diocesan Record Office
CHc ——, Cathedral
CL Carlisle, Cathedral Library
DRc Durham, Cathedral Church, Dean and Chapter Library

DRu	——, University Library
DU	Dundee, Central Library
En	Edinburgh, National Library of Scotland, Music Dept
Ep	——, City Libraries, Music Library
Er	——, Reid Music Library of the University of Edinburgh
Es	——, Signet Library
Eu	——, University Library, Main Library
EL	Ely, Cathedral Library [in Cu]
EXcl	Exeter, Cathedral Library
Ge	Glasgow, Euing Music Library
Gm	——, Mitchell Library, Arts Dept
Gsma	——, Scottish Music Archive
Gu	——, University Library
GL	Gloucester, Cathedral Library
GLr	——, Record Office
H	Hereford, Cathedral Library
HAdolmetsch	Haslemere, Carl Dolmetsch, private collection
HFr	Hertford, Hertfordshire Record Office
Ir	Ipswich, Suffolk Record Office
KNt	Knutsford, Tatton Park (National Trust)
Lam	London, Royal Academy of Music, Library
Lbbc	——, British Broadcasting Corporation, Music Library
Lbc	——, British Council Music Library
Lbl	——, British Library
Lcm	——, Royal College of Music, Library
Lcml	——, Central Music Library
Lco	——, Royal College of Organists
Lcs	——, English Folk Dance and Song Society, Vaughan Williams Memorial Library
Ldc	——, Dulwich College Library
Lfm	——, Faber Music
Lgc	——, Guildhall Library
Lk	——, King's Music Library [in Lbl]
Lkc	——, King's College Library
Llp	——, Lambeth Palace Library
Lmic	——, British Music Information Centre
Lmt	——, Minet Library
Lpro	——, Public Record Office
Lrcp	——, Royal College of Physicians
Lsp	——, St Paul's Cathedral Library
Lspencer	——, Woodford Green: Robert Spencer, private collection
Lst	——, Savoy Theatre Collection
Lu	——, University of London Library, Music Collection
Lue	——, Universal Edition
Lv	——, Victoria and Albert Museum, Theatre Museum
Lwa	——, Westminster Abbey Library
Lwcm	——, Westminster Central Music Library
LA	Lancaster, District Central Library
LEbc	Leeds, University of Leeds, Brotherton Library
LEc	——, Leeds Central Library, Music and Audio Dept
LF	Lichfield, Cathedral Library
LI	Lincoln, Cathedral Library
LVp	Liverpool, Libraries and Information Services, Humanities Reference Library
LVu	——, University, Music Department
Mch	Manchester, Chetham's Library
Mp	——, Central Library, Henry Watson Music Library
Mr	——, John Rylands Library, Deansgate
MA	Maidstone, Kent County Record Office
NH	Northampton, Record Office
NO	Nottingham, University of Nottingham, Department of Music
NTp	Newcastle upon Tyne, Public Libraries
NW	Norwich, Central Library
NWhamond	——, Anthony Hamond, private collection
NWr	——, Record Office
Oas	Oxford, All Souls College Library
Ob	——, Bodleian Library
Oc	——, Coke Collection
Occc	——, Corpus Christi College Library
Och	——, Christ Church Library
Ojc	——, St John's College Library
Olc	——, Lincoln College Library
Omc	——, Magdalen College Library
Onc	——, New College Library
Ouf	——, Faculty of Music Library
Owc	——, Worcester College
P	Perth, Sandeman Public Library
PB	Peterborough, Cathedral Library
PM	Parkminster, St Hugh's Charterhouse
R	Reading, University, Music Library
SA	St Andrews, University of St Andrews Library
SB	Salisbury, Cathedral Library
SC	Sutton Coldfield, Oscott College, Old Library
SH	Sherborne, Sherborne School Library
SHR	Shrewsbury, Salop Record Office
SHRs	——, Library of Shrewsbury School
SOp	Southampton, Public Library
SRfa	Studley Royal, Fountains Abbey [in LEc]
STb	Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's Birthplace Trust Library
STm	——, Shakespeare Memorial Library
T	Tenbury Wells, St Michael's College Library [in Ob]
W	Wells, Cathedral Library
WA	Whalley, Stonyhurst College Library
WB	Wimborne, Minster Chain Library
WC	Winchester, Chapter Library
WCc	——, Winchester College, Warden and Fellows' Library
WCr	——, Hampshire Record Office
WMl	Warminster, Longleat House Old Library
WO	Worcester, Cathedral Library
WOr	——, Record Office
WRch	Windsor, St George's Chapel Library
WRec	——, Eton College, College Library
Y	York, Minster Library
Ybi	——, Borthwick Institute of Historical Research

GCA: GUATEMALA

Gc	Guatemala City, Cathedral, Archivo Capitular

GR: GREECE

Aels	Athens, Ethniki Lyriki Skini
Akounadis	——, Panayis Kounadis, private collection
Aleotsakos	——, George Leotsakos, private collection
Am	——, Mousseio ke Kendro Meletis Ellinikou Theatrou
An	——, Ethnikē Bibliotēkē tēs Hellados
AOd	Mt Athos, Mone Dionysiou
AOdo	——, Mone Dohiariou
AOh	——, Mone Hilandariou
AOi	——, Mone ton Iveron
AOk	——, Mone Koutloumousi
AOml	——, Mone Megistis Lávras
AOpk	——, Mone Pantokrátoros
AOva	——, Vatopedi Monastery
P	Patmos
THpi	Thessaloniki, Patriarhikó Idryma Paterikon Meleton, Vivliotheke

H: HUNGARY

Ba	Budapest, Magyar Tudományos Akadémia Könytára
Bami	——, Magyar Tudományos Akadémia Zenetudományi Intézet, Könyvtár
Bb	——, Bartók Béla Zeneművészeti Szakközépiskola, Könyvtár [in Bl]
Bl	——, Liszt Ferenc Zeneművészeti Főiskola, Könyvtár
Bn	——, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár
Bo	——, Állami Operaház
Br	——, Ráday Gyűjtemény
Bs	——, Központi Szemináriumi Könyvtár
Bu	——, Eötvös Loránd Tudományegyetem, Egyetemi Könyvtár
BA	Bártfá, St Aegidius [in Bn]
Efko	Esztergom, Főszékesegyházi Kottatár
Efkö	——, Főszékesegyházi Könyvtár
Gc	Győr, Püspöki Papnevelő Intézet Könyvtára
Gk	——, Káptalan Magánlevéltár Kottatára
GYm	Gyula, Múzeum

K Kalocsa, Érseki Könyvtár
KE Keszthely, Helikon Kastélymúzeum, Könyvtár
P Pécs, Székesegyházi Kottatár
PH Pannonhalma, Főapátság, Könyvtár
Se Sopron, Evangélikus Egyházközség Könyvtára
SFm Székesfehérvár, István Király Múzeum
VEs Veszprém, Székesegyházi Kottatár

HR: CROATIA

Dsmb Dubrovnik, Franjevački Samostan Male Braće, Knjižnica
Klf Kloštar Ivanić, Franjevački Samostan
OMf Omiš, Franjevački Samostan
R Rab, Župna Crkva
Sk Split, Glazbeni Arhiv Katedrale Sv. Dujma
SMm Samobor, Samoborski Muzej
Vu Varaždin, Uršulinski Samostan
Zaa Zagreb, Hrvatska Akademija Znanosti i Umjetnosti, Arhiv
Zh ——, Hrvatski Glazbeni Zavod, Knjižnica i Arhiv
Zha ——, Zbirka Don Nikole Udina-Algarotti [on loan to Zh]
Zhk ——, Arhiv Hrvatsko Pjevačko Društvo Kolo [in Zh]
Zs ——, Glazbeni Arhiv Nadbiskupskog Bogoslovnog Sjemeništa
Zu ——, Nacionalna i Sveučilišna Knjižnica, Zbirka Muzikalija i Audiomaterijala
ZAzk Zadar, Znanstvena Knjižnica

I: ITALY

Ac Assisi, Biblioteca Comunale [in Af]
Ad ——, Cattedrale S Rufino, Biblioteca dell'Archivio Capitolare
Af ——, Sacro Convento di S Francesco, Biblioteca-Centro di Documentazione Francescana
ALTsm Altamura, Associazione Amici della Musica Saverio Mercadante, Biblioteca
AN Ancona, Biblioteca Comunale Luciano Benincasa
AO Aosta, Seminario Maggiore
AOc ——, Cattedrale, Biblioteca Capitolare
AP Ascoli Piceno, Biblioteca Comunale Giulio Gabrielli
APa ——, Archivio di Stato
AT Atri, Basilica Cattedrale di S Maria Assunta, Biblioteca Capitolare e Museo
Baf Bologna, Accademia Filarmonica, Archivio
Bam ——, Collezioni d'Arte e di Storia della Casa di Risparmio (Biblioteca Ambrosini)
Bas ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Bc ——, Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale
Bca ——, Biblioteca Comunale dell'Archiginnasio
Bl ——, Conservatorio Statale di Musica G.B. Martini, Biblioteca
Bof ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio (Padri Filippini), Biblioteca
Bpm ——, Università degli Studi, Facoltà di Magistero, Cattedra di Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
Bsf ——, Convento di S Francesco, Biblioteca
Bsm ——, Biblioteca del Convento di S Maria dei Servi e della Cappella Musicale Arcivescovile
Bsp ——, Basilica di S Petronio, Archivio Musicale
Bu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria, sezione Musicale
BAca Bari, Biblioteca Capitolare
BAcp ——, Conservatorio di Musica Niccolò Piccinni, Biblioteca
BAn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Sagarriga Visconti-Volpi
BAR Barletta, Biblioteca Comunale Sabino Loffredo
BDG Bassano del Grappa, Biblioteca Archivio Museo (Biblioteca Civica)
BE Belluno, Biblioteche Lolliniana e Gregoriana
BGc Bergamo, Biblioteca Civica Angelo Mai
BGi ——, Civico Istituto Musicale Gaetano Donizetti, Biblioteca
BI Bitonto, Biblioteca Comunale E. Bogadeo (ex Vitale Giordano)
BRc Brescia, Conservatorio Statale di Musica A. Venturi, Biblioteca
BRd ——, Archivio e Biblioteca Capitolari
BRq ——, Biblioteca Civica Queriniana
BRs ——, Seminario Vescovile Diocasano, Archivio Musicale
BRsmg ——, Chiesa della Madonna delle Grazie (S Maria), Archivio
BV Benevento, Biblioteca Capitolare
BZa Bolzano, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
BZf ——, Convento dei Minori Francescani, Biblioteca
BZtoggenburg ——, Count Toggenburg, private collection
CAcon Cagliari, Conservatorio di Musica Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina, Biblioteca
CARc Castell'Arquato, Archivio Capitolare (Parrocchiale)
CARcc ——, Chiesa Collegiata dell'Assunta, Archivio Musicale
CAS Cascia, Monastero di S Rita, Archivio
CATa Catania, Archivio di Stato
CATc ——, Biblioteche Riunite Civica e Antonio Ursino Recupero
CATm ——, Museo Civico Belliniano, Biblioteca
CATus ——, Università degli Studi di Catania, Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Dipartimento di Scienze Storiche, Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
CC Città di Castello, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in CCsg]
CCc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Giosuè Carducci
CCsg ——, Biblioteca Stori Guerri e Archivi Storico
CDO Codogno, Biblioteca Civica Luigi Ricca
CEc Cesena, Biblioteca Comunale Malatestiana
CF Cividale del Friuli, Duomo (Parrocchia di S Maria Assunta), Archivio Capitolare
CFm ——, Museo Archeologico Nazionale, Biblioteca
CFVd Castelfranco Veneto, Duomo, Archivio
CHc Chioggia, Biblioteca Comunale Cristoforo Sabbadino
CHf ——, Archivio dei Padri Filippini [in CHc]
CHTd Chieti, Biblioteca della Curia Arcivescovile e Archivio Capitolare
CMac Casale Monferrato, Duomo di Sant'Evasio, Archivio Capitolare
CMbc ——, Biblioteca Civica Giovanni Canna
CMs ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
COc Como, Biblioteca Comunale
COd ——, Duomo, Archivio Musicale
CORc Correggio, Biblioteca Comunale
CRas Cremona, Archivio di Stato
CRd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare [in CRsd]
CRg ——, Biblioteca Statale
CRsd ——, Archivio Storico Diocesano
CRE Crema, Biblioteca Comunale
CT Cortona, Biblioteca Comunale e dell'Accademia Etrusca
DO Domodossola, Biblioteca e Archivio dei Rosminiani di Monte Calvario [in ST]
E Enna, Biblioteca e Discoteca Comunale
Fa Florence, Ss Annunziata, Archivio
Fas ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Fbecherini ——, Becherini private collection
Fc ——, Conservatorio Statale di Musica Luigi Cherubini
Fd ——, Opera del Duomo (S Maria del Fiore), Biblioteca e Archivio
Ffabbri ——, Mario Fabbri, private collection
Fl ——, Biblioteca Medicea Laurenziana
Fm ——, Biblioteca Marucelliana
Fn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Dipartimento Musica
Folschki ——, Olschki private collection
Fr ——, Biblioteca Riccardiana
Fs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile Maggiore, Biblioteca
Fsa ——, Biblioteca Domenicana di S Maria Novella
Fsl ——, Parrocchia di S Lorenzo, Biblioteca
Fsm ——, Convento di S Marco, Biblioteca
FA Fabriano, Biblioteca Comunale
FAd ——, Duomo (S Venanzio), Biblioteca Capitolare
FAN Fano, Biblioteca Comunale Federiciana
FBR Fossombrone, Biblioteca Civica Passionei
FEc Ferrara, Biblioteca Comunale Ariostea
FEd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare
FELc Feltre, Museo Civico, Biblioteca

FEM Finale Emilia, Biblioteca Comunale
FERaa Fermo, Archivio Storico Arcivescovile con Archivio della Pietà
FERas ——, Archivio di Stato di Ascoli Piceno, sezione di Fermo
FERc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
FERd ——, Metropolitana (Duomo), Archivio Capitolare [in FERaa]
FERvitali ——, Gualberto Vitali-Rosati, private collection
FOc Forlì, Biblioteca Comunale Aurelio Saffi
FOLc Foligno, Biblioteca Comunale
FOLd ——, Duomo, Archivio
FRa Fara in Sabina, Monumento Nazionale di Farfa, Biblioteca
FZac Faenza, Basilica Cattedrale, Archivio Capitolare
FZc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Manfrediana, Raccolte Musicali
Gc Genoa, Biblioteca Civica Berio
Gim ——, Civico Istituto Mazziniano, Biblioteca
Gl ——, Conservatorio di Musica Nicolò Paganini, Biblioteca
Gremondini ——, P.C. Remondini, private collection
Gsl ——, S Lorenzo (Duomo), Archivio Capitolare
Gu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
GO Gorizia, Seminario Teologico Centrale, Biblioteca
GR Grottaferrata, Biblioteca del Monumento Nazionale
GUBd Gubbio, Biblioteca Vescovile Fonti e Archivio Diocesano (con Archivio del Capitolo della Cattedrale)
I Imola, Biblioteca Comunale
IBborromeo Isola Bella, Borromeo private collection
IE Iesi, Biblioteca Comunale
IV Ivrea, Cattedrale, Biblioteca Capitolare
La Lucca, Archivio di Stato
Las ——, Biblioteca-Archivio Storico Comunale
Lc ——, Biblioteca Capitolare Feliniana e Biblioteca Arcivescovile
Lg ——, Biblioteca Statale
Li ——, Istituto Musicale L. Boccherini, Biblioteca
Ls ——, Seminario Arcivescovile, Biblioteca
LA L'Aquila, Biblioteca Provinciale Salvatore Tommasi
LANc Lanciano, Biblioteca Diocesano (con Archivio della Cattedrale)
LT Loreto, Santuario della S Casa, Archivio Storico
LU Lugo, Biblioteca Comunale Fabrizio Trisi
LUi ——, Istituto Musicale Pareggiato G.L. Malerbi
Ma Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana
Malfieri ——, Famiglia Trecani degli Alfieri, private collection
Mas ——, Archivio di Stato
Mb ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Braidense
Mc ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Verdi, Biblioteca
Mcap ——, Archivio Capitolare di S Ambrogio, Biblioteca
Mcom ——, Biblioteca Comunale Sormani
Md ——, Capitolo Metropolitano, Biblioteca e Archivio
Mgallini ——, Natale Gallini, private collection
Mr ——, Biblioteca della Casa Ricordi
Ms ——, Biblioteca Teatrale Livia Simoni
Msartori ——, Claudio Sartori, private collection [in Mc]
Msc ——, Chiesa di S Maria presso S Celso, Archivio
Mt ——, Biblioteca Trivulziana e Archivio Storico Civico
Mu ——, Università degli Studi di Milano, Facoltà di Giurisprudenza, Biblioteca
Muc ——, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Biblioteca
MAa Mantua, Archivio di Stato
MAad ——, Archivio Storico Diocesano
MAav ——, Accademia Nazionale Virgiliana di Scienze, Lettere ed Arti, Archivio Musicale
MAc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
MAC Macerata, Biblioteca Comunale Mozzi-Borgetti
MC Montecassino, Monumento Nazionale di Montecassino, Biblioteca
MDAegidi Montefiore dell'Aso, Francesco Egidi, private collection
ME Messina, Biblioteca Regionale Universitaria
MEs ——, Biblioteca Painiana (del Seminario Arcivescovile S Pio X)
MOd Modena, Duomo, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolare
MOe ——, Biblioteca Estense e Universitaria
MOs ——, Archivio di Stato [in MOe]
MTc Montecatini Terme, Biblioteca Comunale
MTventuri ——, Antonio Venturi, private collection [in MTc]
MZ Monza, Parrocchia di S Giovanni Battista, Biblioteca Capitolare
Na Naples, Archivio di Stato
Nc ——, Conservatorio di Musica S Pietro a Majella, Biblioteca
Nf ——, Biblioteca Oratoriana dei Gerolamini (Filippini)
Ng ——, Monastero di S Gregorio Armeno, Archivio
Nlp ——, Biblioteca Lucchesi Palli [in Nn]
Nn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Vittorio Emanuele III
NON Nonantola, Seminario Abbaziale, Biblioteca
NOVd Novara, S Maria (Duomo), Biblioteca Capitolare
NOVg ——, Seminario Teologico e Filosofico di S Gaudenzio, Biblioteca
NOVi ——, Istituto Civico Musicale Brera, Biblioteca
NT Noto, Biblioteca Comunale Principe di Villadorata
Od Orvieto, Opera del Duomo, Biblioteca
OFma Offida, Parrocchia di Maria Ss Assunta, Archivio
OS Ostiglia, Opera Pia G. Greggiati Biblioteca Musicale
Pas Padua, Archivio di Stato
Pc ——, Duomo, Biblioteca Capitolare, Curia Vescovile
Pca ——, Basilica del Santo, Biblioteca Antoniana
Pci ——, Biblioteca Civica
Pl ——, Conservatorio Cesare Pollini
Ps ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
Pu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PAac Parma, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare con Archivio della Fabbriceria PAas ——, Archivio di Stato
PAc ——, Biblioteca Palatina, sezione Musicale
PAcom ——, Biblioteca Comunale
PAp ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Palatina
PAt ——, Archivio Storico del Teatro Regio [in PAcom]
PAVc Pavia, Chiesa di S Maria del Carmine, Archivio
PAVs ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
PAVu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PCc Piacenza, Biblioteca Comunale Passerini Landi
PCcon ——, Conservatorio di Musica G. Nicolini, Biblioteca
PCd ——, Duomo, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolare
PCsa ——, Basilica di S Antonino, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolari
PEas Perugia, Archivio di Stato
PEc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Augusta
PEd ——, Biblioteca Domincini
PEl ——, Conservatorio di Musica Francesco Morlacchi, Biblioteca
PEsf ——, Congregazione dell' Oratorio di S Filippo Neri, Biblioteca e Archivio
PEsl ——, Duomo (S Lorenzo), Archivio
PEsp ——, Basilica Benedettina di S Pietro, Archivo e Museo della Badia
PEA Pescia, Biblioteca Comunale Carlo Magnani
PESc Pesaro, Conservatorio di Musica G. Rossini, Biblioteca
PESd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in PESdi]
PESdi ——, Biblioteca Diocesana
PESo ——, Ente Olivieri, Biblioteca e Musei Oliveriana
PESr ——, Fondazione G. Rossini, Biblioteca
PIa Pisa, Archivio di Stato
PIp ——, Opera della Primaziale Pisana, Archivio Musicale
PIraffaelli ——, Raffaelli private collection
PIst ——, Chiesa dei Cavalieri di S Stefano, Archivio
PIt ——, Teatro Verdi
PIu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PLa Palermo, Archivio di Stato
PLcom ——, Biblioteca Comunale
PLcon ——, Conservatorio di Musica Vincenzo Bellini, Biblioteca

PLi ——, Università degli Studi, Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Istituto di Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
PLn ——, Biblioteca Centrale della Regione Sicilia tex (Nazionale)
PLpagano ——, Roberto Pagano, private collection
PO Potenza, Biblioteca Provinciale
PR Prato, Archivio Storico Diocesano, Biblioteca (con Archivio del Duomo)
PS Pistoia, Basilica di S Zeno, Archivio Capitolare
PSc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Forteguerriana
PSrospigliosi ——, Rospigliosi private collection
Ra Rome, Biblioteca Angelica
Raf ——, Accademia Filarmonica Romana
Ras ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Rbompiani ——, Bompiani private collection
Rc ——, Biblioteca Casanatense, sezione Musica
Rcg ——, Curia Generalizia dei Padre Gesuiti, Biblioteca
Rchg ——, Chiesa del Gesù, Archivio
Rcsg ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio di S Girolamo della Carità, Archivio [in Ras]
Rdp ——, Archivio Doria Pamphili
Rf ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio S Filippo Neri
Ria ——, Istituto di Archeologia e Storia dell'Arte, Biblioteca
Ribimus ——, Istituto di Bibliografia Musicale, Biblioteca [in Rn]
Rig ——, Istituto Storico Germanico di Roma, sezione Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
Rims ——, Pontificio Istituto di Musica Sacra, Biblioteca
Rli ——, Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei e Corsiniana, Biblioteca
Rlib ——, Basilica Liberiana, Archivio
Rmalvezzi ——, Lionello Malvezzi, private collection
Rmassimo ——, Massimo princes, private collection
Rn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale Vittorio Emanuele II
Rp ——, Biblioteca Pasqualini [in Rsc]
Rps ——, Chiesa di S Pantaleo (Padri Scolipi), Archivio
Rrai ——, RAI-Radiotelevisione Italiana, Archivio Musica
Rrostirolla ——, Giancarlo Rostirolla, private collection [in Fn and Ribimus]
Rsc ——, Conservatorio di Musica S Cecilia
Rscg ——, Abbazia di S Croce in Gerusalemme, Biblioteca
Rsg ——, Basilica di S Giovanni in Laterano, Archivio Musicale
Rslf ——, Chiesa di S Luigi dei Francesi, Archivio
Rsm ——, Basilica di S Maria Maggiore, Archivio Capitolare [in Rvat]
Rsmm ——, S Maria di Monserrato, Archivio
Rsmt ——, Basilica di S Maria in Trastevere, Archivio Capitolare [in Rvic]
Rsp ——, Chiesa di S Spirito in Sassia, Archivio
Rss ——, Curia Generalizia dei Domenicani (S Sabina), Biblioteca
Ru ——, Biblioteca Universitaria Alessandrina
Rv ——, Biblioteca Vallicelliana
Rvat ——, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana
Rvic ——, Vicariato, Archivio
RA Ravenna, Duomo (Basilica Ursiana), Archivio Capitolare [in RAs]
RAc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Classense
RAs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile dei Ss Angeli Custodi, Biblioteca
REm Reggio nell'Emilia, Biblioteca Panizzi
REsp ——, Basilica di S Prospero, Archivio Capitolare
RI Rieti, Biblioteca Diocesana, sezione dell'Archivio Musicale del Duomo
RIM Rimini, Biblioteca Civica Gambalunga
RPTd Ripatransone, Duomo, Archivio
RVE Rovereto, Biblioteca Civica Girolamo Tartarotti
RVI Rovigo, Accademia dei Concordi, Biblioteca
Sac Siena, Accademia Musicale Chigiana, Biblioteca
Sas ——, Archivio di Stato
Sc ——, Biblioteca Comunale degli Intronati
Sco ——, Convento dell'Osservanza, Biblioteca
Sd ——, Opera del Duomo, Archivio Musicale
Smo Asciano (nr Siena), Abbazia Benedettina di Monte Oliveto Maggiore, Biblioteca
SA Savona, Biblioteca Civica Anton Giulio Barrili
SAa ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
SE Senigallia, Biblioteca Comunale Antonelliana
SO Sant'Oreste, Collegiata di S Lorenzo sul Monte Soratte, Biblioteca
SPc Spoleto, Biblioteca Comunale Giosuè Carducci
SPd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare (Duomo di S Lorenzo)
SPE Spello, Collegiata di S Maria Maggiore, Archivio
SPEbc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Giacomo Prampolini
ST Stresa, Biblioteca Rosminiana
STE Vipiteno, Convento dei Cappuccini (Kapuzinerkloster), Biblioteca
Ta Turin, Archivio di Stato
Tci ——, Civica Biblioteca Musicale Andrea della Corte
Tco ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Verdi, Biblioteca
Td ——, Cattedrale Metropolitana di S Giovanni Battista, Archivio Capitolare, Fondo Musicale della Cappella dei Cantori del Duomo e della Cappella Regia Sabauda
Tf ——, Accademia Filarmonica, Archivio
Tfanan ——, Giorgio Fanan, private collection
Tn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, sezione Musicale
Tr ——, Biblioteca Reale
Trt ——, RAI – Radiotelevisione Italiana, Biblioteca
TAc Taranto, Biblioteca Civica Pietro Acclavio
TE Terni, Istituto Musicale Pareggiato Giulio Briccialdi, Biblioteca
TEd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare
TLp Torre del Lago Puccini, Museo di Casa Puccini
TOL Tolentino, Biblioteca Comunale Filelfica
TRa Trent, Archivio di Stato
TRbc ——, Castello del Buon Consiglio, Biblioteca [in TRmp]
TRc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
TRcap ——, Biblioteca Capitolare con Annesso Archivio
TRfeininger ——, Biblioteca Musicale Laurence K.J. Feininger [in TRmp]
TRmd ——, Museo Diocesano, Biblioteca
TRmp ——, Castello del Buonconsiglio: Monumenti e Collezioni Provinciali, Biblioteca
TRmr ——, Museo Trentino del Risorgimento e della Lotta per la Libertà, Biblioteca
TRE Tremezzo, Count Gian Ludovico Sola-Cabiati, private collection
TRP Trapani, Biblioteca Fardelliana
TSci Trieste, Biblioteca Comunale Attilio Hortis
TScon ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Tartini, Biblioteca
TSmt ——, Civico Museo Teatrale di Fondazione Carlo Schmidl, Biblioteca
TVco Treviso, Biblioteca Comunale
TVd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare della Cattedrale
Us Urbino, Cappella del Ss Sacramento (Duomo), Archivio
UD Udine, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in UDs]
UDa ——, Archivio di Stato
UDc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Vincenzo Joppi
UDs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile, Biblioteca
URBcap Urbania, Biblioteca Capitolare [in URBdi]
URBdi ——, Biblioteca Diocesana
Vas Venice, Archivio di Stato
Vc ——, Conservatorio di Musica Benedetto Marcello, Biblioteca
Vcg ——, Casa di Goldoni, Biblioteca
Vgc ——, Fondazione Giorgio Cini, Istituto per le Lettere, il Teatro ed il Melodramma, Biblioteca
Vlevi ——, Fondazione Ugo e Olga Levi, Biblioteca
Vmarcello ——, Andrighetti Marcello, private collection
Vmc ——, Museo Civico Correr, Biblioteca d'Arte e Storia Veneziana
Vnm ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana
Vqs ——, Fondazione Querini-Stampalia, Biblioteca
Vs ——, Seminario Patriarcale, Archivio
Vsf ——, Biblioteca S Francesco della Vigna

Vsm ——, Procuratoria di S Marco [in Vlevi]
Vsmc ——, S Maria della Consolazione detta Della Fava
Vt ——, Teatro La Fenice, Archivio Storico-Musicale
VCd Vercelli, Biblioteca Capitolare
VEaf Verona, Accademia Filarmonica, Biblioteca e Archivio
VEas ——, Archivio di Stato
VEc ——, Biblioteca Civica
VEcap ——, Biblioteca Capitolare
VEss ——, Chiesa di S Stefano, Archivio
VIb Vicenza, Biblioteca Civica Bertoliana
VId ——, Biblioteca Capitolare
VIs ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
VIGsa Vigévano, Biblioteca del Capitolo della Cattedrale
VRNs Chiusi della Verna, Santuario della Verna, Biblioteca

IL: ISRAEL

J Jerusalem, Jewish National and University Library, Music Dept
Jgp ——, Greek Orthodox Patriarchate, Library (Hierosolymitike Bibliotheke)
Jp ——, Patriarchal Library
Ta Tel-Aviv, American for Music Library in Israel, Felicja Blumental Music Center and Library
Tmi ——, Israel Music Institute

IRL: IRELAND

C Cork, Boole Library, University College
Da Dublin, Royal Irish Academy Library
Dam ——, Royal Irish Academy of Music, Monteagle Library
Dc ——, Contemporary Music Centre
Dcb ——, Chester Beatty Library
Dcc ——, Christ Church Cathedral, Library
Dm ——, Archbishop Marsh's Library
Dmh ——, Mercer's Hospital [in Dtc]
Dn ——, National Library of Ireland
Dpc ——, St Patrick's Cathedral
Dtc ——, Trinity College Library, University of Dublin

J: JAPAN

Tma Tokyo, Musashino Ongaku Daigaku, Ioshokan
Tn ——, Nanki Ongaku Bunko

LT: LITHUANIA

V Vilnius, Lietuvos Muzikos Akademijos Biblioteka
Va ——, Lietuvos Moksly Akademijos Biblioteka

LV: LATVIA

J Jelgava, Muzei
R Riga, Latvijas Mūzikas Akademijas Biblioteka

M: MALTA

Vnl Valletta, National Library

MD: MOLDOVA

KI Chişinău, Biblioteka Gosudarstvennoj Konservatorii im. G. Muzyčesku

MEX: MEXICO

Mc Mexico City, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo Musical
Pc Puebla, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo del Cabildo

N: NORWAY

Bo Bergen, Offentlige Bibliotek, Griegsamlingen
Ou Oslo, Universitetsbiblioteket
Oum ——, Nasjonalbiblioteket, Avdeling Oslo, Norsk Musikksamling
T Trondheim, Norges Teknisk-Naturvitenskapelige Universitet, Gunnerusbiblioteket

NL: THE NETHERLANDS

At Amsterdam, Toonkunst-Bibliotheek
Au ——, Universiteitsbibliotheek
DEta Delden, Huisarchief Twickel
DHa The Hague, Koninklijk Huisarchief
DHgm ——, Haags Gemeentemuseum, Muziekafdeling
DHk ——, Koninklijke Bibliotheek
E Enkhuizen, Archief Collegium Musicum
L Leiden, Gemeentearchief
Lml ——, Museum Lakenhal
Lt ——, Bibliotheca Thysiana [in Lu]
Lu ——, Rijksuniversiteit, Bibliotheek
LE Leeuwarden, Provinciale Bibliotheek van Friesland
R Rotterdam, Gemeentebibliotheek
SH 's-Hertogenbosch, Illustre Lieve Vrouwe Broederschap
Uim Utrecht, Letterenbibliotheek, Universiteit
Uu ——, Universiteit Utrecht, Universiteitsbibliotheek

NZ: NEW ZEALAND

Aua Auckland, University of Auckland, Archive of Maori and Pacific Music
Wt Wellington, Alexander Turnbull Library

P: PORTUGAL

AR Arouca, Mosteirode de S Maria, Museu de Arte Sacra, Fundo Musical BRp Braga, Arquivo Distrital
BRs ——, Arquivo da Sé
Cmn Coimbra, Museu Nacional de Machado de Castro
Cs ——, Arquivo da Sé Nova
Cug ——, Universidade de Coimbra, Biblioteca Geral, Impressos e Manuscritos Musicais
Cul ——, Faculdade de Letras da Universidade Em Elvas, Biblioteca Municipal EVc Évora, Arquivo da Sé, Museu Regional
EVp ——, Biblioteca Pública e Arquivo Distrital
F Figueira da Foz, Biblioteca Pública Municipal Pedro Fernandes Tomás
G Guimarães, Arquivo Municipal Alfredo Pimenta
La Lisbon, Biblioteca da Ajuda
Lac ——, Academia das Ciências, Biblioteca
Lant ——, Arquivo Nacional da Torre do Tombo
Lc ——, Biblioteca do Conservatório Nacional
Lcg ——, Fundação Calouste Gulbenkian, Biblioteca Geral de Arte, Serviço de Música
Lf ——, Fabrica da Sé Patriarcal
Ln ——, Biblioteca Nacional, Centro de Estudos Musicológicos
Lt ——, Teatro Nacional de S Carlos
LA Lamego, Arquivo da Sé
Mp Mafra, Palácio Nacional, Biblioteca Pm Porto, Biblioteca Pública Municipal Va Viseu, Arquivo Distrital
Vs ——, Arquivo da Sé
VV Vila Viçosa, Fundaçao da Casa de Brangança, Biblioteca do Paço Ducal, Arquivo Musical

PL: POLAND

B Bydgoszcz, Wojewódzka i Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna, Dział Zbiórów Specjalnych
BA Barczewo, Kościóła Parafialny, Archiwum
CZ Częstochowa, Klasztor Ojców Paulinów: Jasna Góra Archiwum
GD Gdańsk, Polska Akademia Nauk, Biblioteka Gdańska
GDp ——, Wojewódzka Biblioteka Publiczna
GNd Gniezno, Archiwum Archidiecezjalne
GR Grodzisk Wielkopolski, Kościół Parafialny św. Jadwigi [in Pa]
Kc Kraków, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka Czartoryskich
Kcz ——, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka Czapskich
Kd ——, Biblioteka Studium OO. Dominikanów
Kj ——, Uniwersytet Jagielloński, Biblioteka Jagiellońska
Kk ——, Archiwum i Biblioteka Krakowskiej Kapituły Katedralnej
Kn ——, Muzeum Narodowe
Kp ——, Biblioteka Polskiej Akademii Nauk
Kpa ——, Archiwum Państwowe
Kz ——, Biblioteka Czartoryskich
KA Katowice, Biblioteka Śląska

KO Kórnik, Polska Akademia Nauk, Biblioteka Kórnicka
KRZ Krzeszów, Cysterski Kościół Parafialny [in KRZk]
KRZk ——, Klasztor Ss Benedyktynek
Lw Lublin, Wojewódzka Biblioteka Publiczna im. H. Lopacińskiego
LA Łańcut, Biblioteka-Muzeum Zamku
LEtpn Legnica, Towarzystwa Przyaciół Nauk, Biblioteka
LZu Łódź, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka
MO Mogiła, Opactwo Cystersów, Archiwumi Biblioteka
OB Obra, Klasztor OO. Cystersów
Pa Poznań, Archiwum Archidiecezjalna
Pm ——, Biblioteka Zakładu Muzykologii Uniwersytetu Poznańskiego
Pr ——, Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna im. Edwarda Raczyńskiego
Pu ——, Uniwersytet im. Adama Mickiewicza, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Sekcja Zbiorów Muzycznych
PE Pelplin, Wyższe Seminarium Duchowne, Biblioteka
R Raków, Kościół Parafialny, Archiwum
SA Sandomierz, Wyższe Seminarium Duchowne, Biblioteca
SZ Szalowa, Archiwum Parafialne
Tm Toruń, Książnica Miejska im. M. Kopernika
Tu ——, Uniwersytet Mikołaja Kopernika, Biblioteka Głowna, Oddział Zbiorów Muzycznych
Wm Warsaw, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka
Wn ——, Biblioteka Narodowa
Wtm ——, Warszawskie Towarzystwo Muzyczne im Stanisława Moniuszki, Biblioteka, Muzeum i Archiwum
Wu ——, Uniwersytet Warszawski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Gabinet Zbiorów Muzycznych
WL Wilanów, Biblioteka [in Wn and Wm]
WRk Wrocław, Biblioteka Kapitulna
WRu ——, Uniwersytet Wrocławski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka
WRzno ——, Zakład Narodowy im. Ossolińskich, Biblioteka

RO: ROMANIA

Ba Bucharest, Academiei Române, Biblioteca
BRm Braşov, Biblioteca Judeteana
Cu Cluj-Napoca, Universitatea Babes Bolyai, Biblioteca Centrală Universitară Lucian Blaga
J Iaşi, Biblioteca Centrală Universitară Mihai Eminescu, Departmentul Colecţii Speciale
Sa Sibiu, Direcţia Judeţeană a Arhivelor Naţionale
Sb ——, Muzeul Naţional Bruckenthal, Biblioteca

RUS: RUSSIAN FEDERATION

KA Kaliningrad, Oblastnaya Universal'naya Nauchnaya Biblioteka
KAg ——, Gosudarstvennaya Biblioteka
KAu ——, Nauchnaya Biblioteka Kalingradskogo Gosudarstvennogo Universiteta
Mcl Moscow, Rossiyskiy Gosudarstvennïy Arkhiv Literaturï i Iskusstva (RGALI)
Mcm ——, Gosudarstvennïy Tsentral'nïy Muzey Musïkal'noy Kul'turï imeni M.I. Glinki
Mim ——, Gosudarstvennïy Istoricheskïy Muzey
Mk ——, Moskovskaya Gosudarstvennaya Konservatoriya im. P.I. Chaykovskogo, Nauchnaya Muzïkal'naya Biblioteka imeni S.I. Taneyeva
Mm ——, Gosudarstvennaya Publichnaya Istoricheskaya Bibliotheka
Mrg ——, Rossiyskaya Gosudarstvennaya Biblioteka
Mt ——, Gosudarstvennïy Tsentral'nïy Teatral'nïy Musey im. A. Bakhrushina
SPan St Petersburg, Rossiyskaya Akademiya Nauk, Biblioteka
SPia ——, Gosudarstvennïy Tsentral'nïy Istoricheskïy Arkhiv
SPil ——, Biblioteka Instituta Russkoy Literaturï Rossiyskoy Akademii Nauk (Pushkinskiy Dom)
SPit ——, Rossiyskiy Institut Istorii Iskusstv
SPk ——, Biblioteka Gosudarstvennoy Konservatorii im. N.A. Rimskogo-Korsakova
SPph ——, Gosurdarstvennaya Filarmoniya im D.D. Shostakovicha
SPsc ——, Rossiyskaya Natsional'naya Biblioteka
SPtob ——, Gosudarstvennïy Akademichesky Mariinsky Teatr, Tsentral'naya Muzïkal'naya Biblioteka

S: SWEDEN

A Arvika, Ingesunds Musikhögskola
B Bålsta, Skoklosters Slott
Gu Göteborg, Universitetsbiblioteket
Hfryklund Helsingborg, Daniel Fryklund, private collection [in Skma]
HÄ Härnösand, Länsmuseet-Murberget
HÖ Höör, Biblioteket
J Jönköping, Per Brahegymnasiet
K Kalmar, Stadtsbibliotek, Stifts- och Gymnasiebiblioteket
Klm ——, Länsmuseet
L Lund, Universitet, Universitetsbiblioteket, Handskriftsavdelningen
LB Leufsta Bruk, De Geer private collection [in Uu]
LI Linköping, Linköpings Stadsbibliotek, Stiftsbiblioteket
N Norrköping, Stadsbiblioteket
Sdt Stockholm, Drottningholms Teatermuseum
Sfo ——, Frimurare Orden, Biblioteket
Sic ——, Svensk Musik
Sk ——, Kungliga Biblioteket: Sveriges Nationalbibliotek
Skma ——, Statens Musikbibliothek
Sm ——, Musikmuseet, Arkiv
Smf ——, Stiftelsen Musikkulturens Främjande
Sn ——, Nordiska Museet, Arkivet
Ssr ——, Sveriges Radio Förvaltning, Musikbiblioteket
St ——, Kung. Teatern [in Skma]
Sva ——, Svenskt Visarkiv
STr Strängnäs, Roggebiblioteket
Uu Uppsala, Universitetsbiblioteket
V Västerås, Stadsbibliotek, Stiftsavdelningen
VIl Visby, Landsarkivet
VX Växjö, Landsbiblioteket

SI: SLOVENIA

Lf Ljubljana, Frančiškanski Samostan, Knjižnica
Ln ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Glavni Knjižni Fond Lna ——, Nadškofijski Arhiv
Lng ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Glasbena Zbirka
Lnr ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Rokopisna Zbirka
Ls ——, Katedral, Glazbeni Arhiv
Nf Novo Mesto, Frančiškanski Samostan, Knjižnica
Nk ——, Kolegiatni Kapitelj, Knjižnica
Pk Ptuj, Knjižnica Ivana Potrča

SK: SLOVAKIA

BRa Bratislava, Štátny Oblastny Archív
BRhs ——, Knižnica Hudobného Seminára Filozofickej Fakulty Univerzity Komenského
BRm ——, Archív Mesta Bratislavy
BRmp ——, Miestne Pracovisko Matice Slovenskej [in Mms]
BRnm ——, Slovenské Národné Múzeum, Hudobné Múzeum
BRsa ——, Slovenský Národný Archív
BRsav ——, Ústav Hudobnej Vedy Slovenská Akadémia Vied
BRu ——, Univerzitná Knižnica, Narodné Knižničné Centrum, Hudobný Kabinet
BSk Banská Štiavnica, Farský Rímsko-Katolícky Kostol, Archív Chóru
J Júr pri Bratislave, Okresny Archív, Bratislava-Vidiek [in MO]
KRE Kremnica, Štátny Okresny Archív Žiar nad Hronom
Le Levoča, Evanjelická a.v. Cirkevná Knižnica
Mms Martin, Matica Slovenská
Mnm ——, Slovenské Národné Múzeum, Archív

MO Modra, Štátny Okresny Archív Pezinok
NM Nové Mesto nad Váhom, Rímskokatolícky Farsky Kostol
TN Trenčín, Štátny Okresny Archív
TR Trnava, Štátny Okresny Archív

TR: TURKEY

Ino Istanbul, Nuruosmania Kütüphanesi
Itks ——, Topkapi Sarayi Müzesi
Iü ——, Üniversite Kütüphanesi

UA: UKRAINE

Kan Kiev, Natsional'na Akademiya Nauk Ukraïni, Natsional'na Biblioteka Ukraïni im V.I. Vernads'kyy
Km ——, Spilka Kompozytoriv Ukrainy, Centr. 'Muz. Inform'
LV L'viv, Biblioteka Vyshchoho Muzychnoho Instytutu im. M. Lyssenka

US: UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

AAu Ann Arbor, University of Michigan, Music Library
AB Albany (NY), New York State Library
AKu Akron (OH), University of Akron, Bierce Library
ATet Atlanta (GA), Emory University, Pitts Theology Library
ATu ——, Emory University Library
ATS Athens (GA), University of Georgia Libraries
AU Aurora (NY), Wells College Library
AUS Austin, University of Texas at Austin, The Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center
AUSm ——, University of Texas at Austin, Fine Arts Library
Ba Boston, Athenaeum Library
Bc ——, New England Conservatory of Music, Harriet M. Spaulding Library
Bfa ——, Museum of Fine Arts
Bgm ——, Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, Library
Bh ——, Harvard Musical Association, Library
Bhs ——, Massachusetts Historical Society Library
Bp ——, Public Library, Music Department
Bu ——, Boston University, Mugar Memorial Library, Department of Special Collections
BAep Baltimore, Enoch Pratt Free Library
BAhs ——, Maryland Historical Society Library
BApi ——, Arthur Friedheim Library, Johns Hopkins University
BAu ——, Johns Hopkins University Libraries
BAue ——, Milton S. Eisenhower Library, Johns Hopkins University
BAw ——, Walters Art Gallery Library
BAR Baraboo (WI), Circus World Museum Library
BEm Berkeley, University of California at Berkeley, Music Library
BER Berea (OH), Riemenschneider Bach Institute Library
BETm Bethlehem (PA), Moravian Archives
BL Bloomington (IN), Indiana University Library
BLl ——, Indiana University, Lilly Library
BLu ——, Indiana University, Cook Music Library
BO Boulder (CO), University of Colorado at Boulder, Music Library
BU Buffalo (NY), Buffalo and Erie County Public Library
Cn Chicago, Newberry Library
Cp ——, Chicago Public Library, Music Information Center
Cu ——, University, Joseph Regenstein Library, Music Collection
Cum ——, University of Chicago, Music Collection
CA Cambridge (MA), Harvard University, Harvard College Library
CAe ——, Harvard University, Eda Kuhn Loeb Music Library
CAh ——, Harvard University, Houghton Library
CAt ——, Harvard University Library, Theatre Collection
CAward ——, John Milton Ward, private collection [on loan to CA]
CF Cedar Falls (IA), University of Northern Iowa, Library
CHua Charlottesville (VA), University of Virginia, Alderman Library
CHum ——, University of Virginia, Music Library
CHAhs Charleston (SC), The South Carolina Historical Society
CHH Chapel Hill (NC), University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
CIhc Cincinnati, Hebrew Union College Library: Jewish Institute of Religion, Klau Library
CIp ——, Public Library
CIu ——, University of Cincinnati College – Conservatory of Music, Music Library
CLp Cleveland, Public Library, Fine Arts Department
CLwr ——, Western Reserve University, Freiberger Library and Music House Library
CLAc Claremont (CA), Claremont College Libraries
COhs Columbus (OH), Ohio Historical Society Library
COu ——, Ohio State University, Music Library
CP College Park (MD), University of Maryland, McKeldin Library
CR Cedar Rapids (IA), Iowa Masonic Library
Dp Detroit, Public Library, Main Library, Music and Performing Arts Department
DAu Dallas, Southern Methodist University, Music Library
DAVu Davis (CA), University of California at Davis, Peter J. Shields Library
DMu Durham (NC), Duke University Libraries
DN Denton (TX), University of North Texas, Music Library
DO Dover (NH), Public Library
E Evanston (IL), Garrett Biblical Institute
Eu ——, Northwestern University
EDu Edwardsville (IL), Southern Illinois University
EU Eugene (OR), University of Oregon
FAy Farmington (CT), Yale University, Lewis Walpole Library
FW Fort Worth (TX), Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary
G Gainesville (FL), University of Florida Library, Music Library
GB Gettysburg (PA), Lutheran Theological Seminary
GR Granville (OH), Denison University Library
GRB Greensboro (NC), University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Walter C. Jackson Library
Hhc Hartford (CT), Hartt College of Music Library, The University of Hartford
Hm ——, Case Memorial Library, Hartford Seminary Foundation [in ATet]
Hs ——, Connecticut State Library
Hw ——, Trinity College, Watkinson Library
HA Hanover (NH), Dartmouth College, Baker Library
HG Harrisburg (PA), Pennsylvania State Library
HO Hopkinton (NH), New Hampshire Antiquarian Society
I Ithaca (NY), Cornell University
IDt Independence (MO), Harry S. Truman Library
IO Iowa City (IA), University of Iowa, Rita Benton Music Library
K Kent (OH), Kent State University, Music Library
KC Kansas City (MO), University of Missouri: Kansas City, Miller Nichols Library
KCm ——, Kansas City Museum, Library and Archives
KN Knoxville (TN), University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Music Library
Lu Lawrence (KS), University of Kansas Libraries
LAcs Los Angeles, California State University, John F. Kennedy Memorial Library
LApiatigorsky ——, Gregor Piatigorsky, private collection [in STEdrachman]
LAs ——, The Arnold Schoenberg Institute Archives
LAuc ——, University of California at Los Angeles, William Andrews Clark Memorial Library
LAum ——, University of California at Los Angeles, Music Library

LAur ——, University of California at Los Angeles, Special Collections Dept, University Research Library
LAusc ——, University of Southern California, School of Music Library
LBH Long Beach (CA), California State University
LEX Lexington (KY), University of Kentucky, Margaret I. King Library
LOu Louisville, University of Louisville, Dwight Anderson Music Library
LT Latrobe (PA), St Vincent College Library
M Milwaukee, Public Library, Art and Music Department
Mc ——, Wisconsin Conservatory of Music Library
MAhs Madison (WI), Wisconsin Historical Society
MAu ——, University of Wisconsin
MB Middlebury (VT), Middlebury College, Christian A. Johnson Memorial Music Library
MED Medford (MA), Tufts University Library
MG Montgomery (AL), Alabama State Department of Archives and History Library
MT Morristown (NJ), National Historical Park Museum
Nf Northampton (MA), Forbes Library
Nsc ——, Smith College, Werner Josten Library
NA Nashville (TN), Fisk University Library
NAu ——, Vanderbilt University Library
NBu New Brunswick (NJ), Rutgers – The State University of New Jersey, Music Library, Mabel Smith Douglass Library
NEij Newark (NJ), Rutgers – The State University of New Jersey, Rutgers Institute of Jazz Studies Library
NH New Haven (CT), Yale University, Irving S. Gilmore Music Library
NHoh ——, Yale University, Oral History Archive
NHub ——, Yale University, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
NO Normal (IL), Illinois State University, Milner Library, Humanities/Fine Arts Division
NORsm New Orleans, Louisiana State Museum Library
NORtu ——, Tulane University, Howard Tilton Memorial Library
NYamc New York, American Music Center Library
NYbroude ——, Broude private collection
NYcc ——, City College Library, Music Library
NYcu ——, Columbia University, Gabe M. Wiener Music & Arts Library
NYcub ——, Columbia University, Rare Book and Manuscript Library of Butler Memorial Library
NYgo ——, University, Gould Memorial Library [in NYu]
NYgr ——, The Grolier Club Library
NYgs ——, G. Schirmer, Inc.
NYhs ——, New York Historical Society Library
NYhsa ——, Hispanic Society of America, Library
NYj ——, The Juilliard School, Lila Acheson Wallace Library
NYkallir ——, Rudolf F. Kallir, private collection
NYlehman ——, Robert O. Lehman, private collection [in NYpm]
NYlibin ——, Laurence Libin, private collection
NYma ——, Mannes College of Music, Clara Damrosch Mannes Memorial Library
NYp ——, Public Library at Lincoln Center, Music Division
NYpl ——, Public Library, Center for the Humanities
NYpm ——, Pierpont Morgan Library
NYpsc ——, New York Public Library, Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture in Harlem
NYq ——, Queens College of the City University, Paul Klapper Library, Music Library
NYu ——, University Bobst Library
NYw ——, Wildenstein Collection
NYyellin ——, Victor Yellin, private collection
OAm Oakland (CA), Mills College, Margaret Prall Music Library
OB Oberlin (OH), Oberlin College Conservatory of Music, Conservatory Library
OX Oxford (OH), Miami University, Amos Music Library
Pc Pittsburgh, Carnegie Library, Music and Art Dept
Ps ——, Theological Seminary, Clifford E. Barbour Library
Pu ——, University of Pittsburgh
Puf ——, University of Pittsburgh, Foster Hall Collection, Stephen Foster Memorial PHci Philadelphia, Curtis Institute of Music, Library
PHf ——, Free Library of Philadelphia, Music Dept
PHff ——, Free Library of Philadelphia, Edwin A. Fleisher Collection of Orchestral Music
PHgc ——, Gratz College
PHhs ——, Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library
PHlc ——, Library Company of Philadelphia
PHmf ——, Musical Fund Society [on loan to PHf]
PHphs ——, The Presbyterian Historical Society Library [in PHlc]
PHps ——, American Philosophical Society Library
PHu ——, University of Pennsylvania, Van Pelt-Dietrich Library Center
PO Poughkeepsie (NY), Vassar College, George Sherman Dickinson Music Library
PRs Princeton (NJ), Theological Seminary, Speer Library
PRu ——, Princeton University, Firestone Memorial Library
PRw ——, Westminster Choir College
PROhs Providence (RI), Rhode Island Historical Society Library
PROu ——, Brown University
PRV Provo (UT), Brigham Young University
R Rochester (NY), Sibley Music Library, University of Rochester, Eastman School of Music
Su Seattle, University of Washington, Music Library
SA Salem (MA), Peabody and Essex Museums, James Duncan Phillips Library
SBm Santa Barbara (CA), Mission Santa Barbara
SFp San Francisco, Public Library, Fine Arts Department, Music Division
SFs ——, Sutro Library
SFsc ——, San Francisco State University, Frank V. de Bellis Collection
SJb San Jose (CA), Ira F. Brilliant Center for Beethoven Studies, San José State University
SL St Louis, St Louis University, Pius XII Memorial Library
SLug ——, Washington University, Gaylord Music Library
SLC Salt Lake City, University of Utah Library
SM San Marino (CA), Huntington Library
SPma Spokane (WA), Moldenhauer Archives
SR San Rafael (CA), American Music Research Center, Dominican College
STu Palo Alto (CA), University, Memorial Library of Music, Department of Special Collections of the Cecil H. Green Library
STEdrachmann Stevenson (MD), Mrs Jephta Drachman, private collection; Mrs P.C. Drachman, private collection
STO Stony Brook (NY), State University of New York at Stony Brook, Frank Melville jr Memorial Library
SY Syracuse (NY), University Music Library
SYkrasner ——, Louis Krasner, private collection [in CAh and SY]
TA Tallahassee (FL), Florida State University, Robert Manning Strozier Library
U Urbana (IL), University of Illinois, Music Library
Uplamenac ——, Dragan Plamenac, private collection [in NH]
V Villanova (PA), Villanova University, Falvey Memorial Library
Wc Washington, DC, Library of Congress, Music Division
Wca ——, Cathedral Library
Wcf ——, Library of Congress, American Folklife Center and the Archive of Folk Culture
Wcg ——, General Collections, Library of Congress
Wcm ——, Library of Congress, Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division
Wcu ——, Catholic University of America, Music Library

Wdo ——, Dumbarton Oaks
Wgu ——, Georgetown University Libraries
Whu ——, Howard University, College of Fine Arts Library
Ws ——, Folger Shakespeare Library
WB Wilkes-Barre (PA), Wilkes College Library
WC Waco (TX), Baylor University, Music Library
WGc Williamsburg (VA), College of William and Mary, Earl Gregg Swenn Library WI Williamstown (MA), Williams College Library
WOa Worcester (MA), American Antiquarian Society Library
WS Winston-Salem (NC), Moravian Music Foundation, Peter Memorial Library
Y York (PA), Historical Society of York County, Library and Archives

YU: YUGOSLAVIA (REPUBLICS OF MONTENEGRO AND SERBIA)

Bn Belgrade, Narodna Biblioteka Srbije, Odelenje Posebnih Fondova

ZA: SOUTH AFRICA

Csa Cape Town, South African Library

A Note on the Use of the Dictionary

This note is intended as a short guide to the basic procedures and organization of the dictionary. A fuller account will be found in the Introduction, vol. 1, pp.xix–xxix.

Abbreviations in general use in the dictionary are listed on pp.vii–xi; bibliographical ones (periodicals, reference works, editions etc.) are listed on pp.xiii–xviii and discographical abbrevations on pp.xix–xx.

Alphabetization of headings is based on the principle that words are read continuously, ignoring spaces, hyphens, accents, bracketed matter etc., up to the first comma; the same principle applies thereafter. 'Mc' and 'M'' are listed as 'Mac', 'St' as 'Saint'.

Bibliographies are arranged chronologically (within section, where divided), in order of year of first publication, and alphabetically by author within years.

Cross-references are shown in small capitals, with a large capital at the beginning of the first word of the entry referred to. Thus 'The instrument is related to the BASS TUBA' would mean that the entry referred to is not 'Bass tuba' but 'Tuba, bass'.

Signatures where the article was compiled by the editors or in the few cases where an author has wished to remain anonymous are indicated by a square box (□).

Work-lists are normally arranged chronologically (within section, where divided). Italic symbols used in them (like D-Dl or GB-Lbl) refer to the libraries holding sources, and are explained on pp.xxi–xxxvii; each national sigillum stands until contradicted.

Contents

D

[continued]

Đàn tranh [đàn thap lục]. Vietnamese 16-string board zither (đàn: 'instrument'; thap lục: 'sixteen'). It measures 90 to 110 cm in length and, usually, 20 cm in width at one end and 13 cm at the other. It has a convex resonator, and the 16 steel strings, divided into two sections by a series of 16 movable bridges (nhạn), are stretched along a wooden soundboard. At one end the strings wind around 16 wooden pegs (trục), while at the other they pass through 16 holes near the tailpiece where they are attached with small pieces of paper. In performance the musician uses plectra (móng đàn) of tortoiseshell, metal or plastic on the thumb and forefinger of his right hand after the southern Vietnamese tradition (see illustration), or on the thumb, forefinger and middle finger after the central and northern Vietnamese tradition. A performer might also use the fingernails to pluck the strings near the tailpiece. Right-hand techniques consist of single notes, arpeggios and double stops, and left-hand techniques of nhan (pressing), vuot (sliding), rung (vibrating), nhay (jumping) and mo (staccato). The left hand presses with the forefinger, middle finger and ring finger more or less heavily on the section of the strings between the pegs and the bridges to alter the tension and consequently the pitch of the notes. New compositions for đàn tranh often employ new instrumental techniques: tremolo, pizzicato with the strings muted by the left hand, the simultaneous playing of a melody in the right hand with a countermelody or rising arpeggio in the left hand etc. Prominent composers for the instrument include Phạm Thuy Hoan, Quang Hai, Nguyễn Vǎn Đoi, Xuan Khai, Trǎn Quang Hải and Lê Tuǎn Hùng. Some prominent performers namely Nguyễn Vĩnh Bảo, Ba Dư Trǎn Vǎn Khê, Phong Nguyễn, Nguyễn Thị Hải Phương are the most representative. Innovations in the construction of the đàn tranh have also been undertaken by Phuong Bao. A favourite instrument of young Vietnamese girls in both ancient and modern societies, it can be played solo or as part of the instrumental ensembles of the cải lương (reformed theatre) and folk groups, and more recently to accompany the sung poetry ngâm thơ and the popular music tân nhạc.

Dàn tranh (16-string board zither) played in the southern Vietnamese tradition

See also VIETNAM, §2(ii).

RECORDINGS

Cithare vietnamienne/Vietnamese Zither, perf. Trǎn Quang Hải, Playasound PS 65103 (1993)

Việt-Nam: le đàn tranh – musiques d'hier et d'aujourd' hui, OCORA C 560055 (1994)

Việt-Nam: poésies et chants, OCORA C 560054 (1994)

TRÂN QUANG HAI

Danuser, Hermann (b Frauenfeld, 3 Oct 1946). Swiss musicologist, active in Germany. After completing a teaching diploma for the oboe (1967), and a diploma in piano teaching and performance (1968, 1970), he took the doctorate in 1975 at the University of Zürich with the dissertation Musikalische Prosa. He then moved to Berlin, where he conducted postgraduate research with Dahlhaus at the Technische Universität while working there as an assistant; he also spent one year at Cornell as a Fellow of the Society of the Humanities, 1979–80. He completed the Habilitation at the Technische Universität in 1982 with a work on 20th-century music, published in 1984 as the seventh volume of the Neues Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft. That same year he was made professor at the Hochschule für Musik in Hannover, and in 1988 he was appointed professor at Freiburg University. He became chair of the music history department of the Humboldt University, Berlin in 1993. His other professional appointments include guest professor at Stanford University (1991), and council member (from 1988) and research co-ordinator (from 1992) of the Paul Sacher-Stiftung.

A prolific author and leading scholar on 19th- and 20th-century music, Danuser has published important works on Wagner, Mahler, 20th-century music, music theory, aesthetics and historiology, and the history of interpretation and hermeneutics. Danuser is particularly interested in examining links between German literature and music, and surveying shifting contexts of interpretation. He is also renowned as an editor, and has been responsible for preparing volumes of the Neues Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft (as Dahlhaus's successor, 1989–95), Meisterwerke der Musik (from 1993), Musiktheorie (with Peter Cahn, Renate Groth and Giselher Schubert, 1986–96), congress reports, Festschriften (1980, 1988), and the second of volume of Hindemith's string quartets for the collected edition (Mainz, 1992).

WRITINGS

Musikalische Prosa (diss., U. of Zürich, 1975; Regensburg, 1975)
'Der Orchestergesang des Fin de siècle: eine historische und ästhetische Skizze', Mf, xxx (1977), 425–52
'Symphonisches Subjekt und Form in Berlioz' Harold en Italie"', Melos/NZM, iii (1977), 203–12
'Musikalische Prosa', Handwörterbuch der musikalischen Terminologie, ed. H.H. Eggebrecht (Wiesbaden, 1978) 1–20
ed., with C. Keller: Aspekte der musikalischen Interpretation: Sava Savoff zum 70. Geburtstag (Hamburg, 1980)
Die Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts (Habilitationsschrift, Technical U. Berlin, 1982; Laaber, 1984)
'Aspekte einer Hommage-Komposition: zu Brahms' Schumann-Variationen opus 9', Brahms-Analysen: Kiel 1983, 91–106
'Der Klassiker als Janus? Wandlungen in Paul Hindemiths Bach-Verständnis', Alte Musik als ästhetische Gegenwart: Bach – Händel – Schütz: Stuttgart 1985, i, 190–97
Gustav Mahler: Das Lied von der Erde (Munich, 1986)
'Das imprévu in der Symphonik: Aspekte einer musikalischen Formkategorie in der Zeit von Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach bis Hector Berlioz', Musiktheorie, i (1986), 61–81
'"Energie" als musiktheoretische Kategorie bei Ernst Kurth und Boris Assafjew', Schweizer Jb für Musikwissenschaft, newser., vi (1986–7), 71–94
ed., with D. Kämper and P. Terse: Amerikanische Musik seit Charles Ives (Laaber, 1987)
'Abschied vom Espressivo? Zu Paul Hindemiths Vortragsstil in den zwanziger Jahren', Hindemith-Jb 1988, 26–40
ed.: Gattungen der Musik und ihre Klassiker (Laaber, 1988)
ed., with others: Das musikalische Kunstwerk: Festschrift Carl Dahlhaus (Laaber, 1988)
ed., with F. Krummacher: Rezeptionsästhetik und Rezeptionsgeschichte in der Musikwissenschaft (Hanover, 1988)
'Max Regers "Symphonischer Prolog zu einer Tragödie" im Kontext der Weltanschauungsmusik der Moderne', Probleme der symphonischen Tradition im 19. Jahrhundert: Bonn 1989, 395–414
Neues Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft (Laaber, 1989–95)
'Biographik und musikalische Hermeneutik: zum Verhältnis zweier Disziplinen der Musikwissenschaft', Neue Musik und Tradition: Festschrift Rudolf Stephan, ed. J. Kuckertz and others (Laaber, 1990), 571–602
'Inspiration Rationalität, Zufall: über musikalische Poetik im 20. Jahrhundert', AMw, lxxvi (1990), 87–102
Gustav Mahler und seine Zeit (Laaber, 1991)
'Musik jenseits der Narrativität? Über Edgard Varèses Intégrales', Edgard Varèse: Hamberg 1991, 81–105
ed.: Neue Musik im politischen Wandel: Darmstadt 1991
'Rationalität und Zufall: John Cage und die experiementelle Musik in Europa', Ästhetik im Widerstreit: Interventionen zum Werk von Jean-François-Lyotard, ed. W. Welsch and C. Pries (Weinheim, 1991), 91–105
'Was ist Populismus in der Musik?' Ethnomusikologie und historische Musikwissenschaft: Mainz 1991, 162–76
ed.: Gustav Mahler (Darmstadt, 1992)
ed.: Musikalische Interpretation (Laaber, 1992)
'Vers- oder Prosaprinzip? Mozarts Streichquartett in d-Moll (KV 421) in der Deutung Jérome-Joseph de Momignys und Arnold Schönbergs', Musiktheorie, viii (1992), 245–63
ed., with G. Katzenberger: Vom Einfall zum Kunstwerk: der Kompositionsprozess in der Musik des 20 Jahrhunderts (Laaber, 1993)
ed., with T. Plebuch: Musik als Text: Freiburg 1993 [incl. 'Der Text und die Texte: über Singularisierung und Pluralisierung einer Kategorie', 38–44
ed., with F. Meyer and U. Mosch: Igor Strawinsky: Trois pièces pour quatour à cordes: Skizzen, Fassungen, Dokumente, Essays (Wintherthur, 1994)
'"Klaviersonate e-Moll op.90",' Beethoven: Interpretationen seiner Werke, ed. A. Riethmüller, C. Dahlhaus and A.L. Ringer, ii (Laaber, 1994), 25–34; see also 'Streichquartett f-Moll Quartetto serioso op.95', '2 Cellosonaten C-Dur und D-Dur op.102', ibid., 78–85, 121–31
ed., with S. Mauser: Neue Musik und Interpretation: Darmstadt 1994
ed., with W. Frisch: 19CM, xviii (1994–5) [incl. 'Musical Manifestations of the End in Wagner and in Post-Wagnerian Weltanschauungsmusik', 64–82; Ger. trans. in K. Stierle and R. Warning, eds.: Das Ende: Figuren einer Denkform (Munich, 1996), 95–122
'Arnold Schönberg und die Idee einer deutschen Musik', Zwischen Wissenschaft und Kunst, ed. P. Becker, A. Edler and B. Schneider (Mainz, 1995), 253–261
'Das Ende als Anfang: Ausblick von einer Schlußfigur bei Joseph Haydn', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 818–27
ed.: Die klassizistische Moderne in der Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts: Basel 1996
ed., with G. Borio: Im Zenit der Moderne: die Internationalen Ferienkurse für Neue Musik Darmstadt: 1946–1966: Geschichte und Dokumentation (Freiburg, 1997)
'Die Kategorie Krise in ihrer Bedeutung für Leben Kunst', Biographische Konstellation und künstlerisches Handeln, ed. G. Schubert (Mainz, 1997), 303–18
'On Postmodernism in Music', International Postmodernism: Theory and Literary Practice, ed. H. Bertens and D. Fokkema (Amsterdam, 1997), 157–66
'Schoenberg's Concept of Art in Twentieth-Century Music History', Constructive Dissonance: Arnold Schoenberg and the Transformations of Twentieth-Century Culture, ed. J. Brand and C. Hailey (Berkeley, 1997), 179–87
'"Verschönernder Tod – seliger Kuss": über die musikalische Liebe-Tod-Dialektik in Arnold Schönbergs Gurreliedern', Traditionen – Neuansätze: für Anna Amalie Abert (1906–1996), ed. K. Hortschansky and H. Schneider (Tutzing, 1997), 145–66
'Vom Künstlerdrama zum Hoffest: die Entfaltung der Liebe in Jean-Philippe Rameaus Acte de ballet Pigmalion', Pygmalion: die Geschichte des Mythos in der abendländischen Kultur, ed. M. Mayer and G. Neumann (Freiburg, 1997), 371–91
'Instruktion durch den Autor: zur Vortragsästhetik von Schönbergs 2. Streichquartett op. 10', Musikwissenschaft zwischen Kunst, Ästhetik und Experiment: Festschrift Helga de la Motte-Haber, ed. R. Kopiez (Würzburg, 1998), 75–87
'Natur-Zeiten in transzendenter Landschaft: Gustav Mahlers Faust-Komposition in der Achten Symphonie', Goethe und die Verzeitlichung der Natur, ed. P. Matussek (Munich, 1998), 301–25
'Paul Hindemiths amerikanische Lieder', Hindemith-Jb 1998, 155–79
'Riddles in Writing: Retracing the Act of Composition', '"Musica non absoluta": Dedications and Tributes in Music History', Settling New Scores: Music Manuscripts from the Paul Sacher Foundation, ed. F. Meyer (Mainz, 1998), 99–102, 211–14
'Composers in Exile: the Question of Musical Identity', Driven into Paradise: the Musical Migration from Nazi Germany to the United States, ed. R. Brinkmann and C. Wolff (Berkeley, 1999), 155–71
'Wer hören will, muss fühlen: Anti-Kunst oder Die Kunst des Skandals', Der musikalische Futurismus, ed. D. Kämper (Laaber, 1999), 95–110
'Krisis und Grenzüberschreitung: Arnold Schönbergs Streichquartett op.10', Werk und Diskurs: Karlheinz Stierle zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. D. Ingenschay and Helmut Pfeiffer (Munich, 1999), 355–74
ed., with H. J. Hinrichsen and T. Plebuch: Carl Dahlhaus: gesammelte Schriften in 10 Bänden (Laaber, forthcoming)

ed., with H. Münkler: 'Was deutsch und echt. . .': Mythos, Utopie, Perversion: Nationale Selbstfindung in der Musik (Laaber, forthcoming)

□

Danyel [Daniel], John (b Wellow, nr Bath, bap. 6 Nov 1564; *d c*1626). English lutenist and composer. His elder brother was Samuel Daniel (b 1562), the court poet. He was a student at Christ Church, Oxford, and supplicated for the degree of BMus on 16 December 1602; he was awarded the degree on 14 July 1603. The Stationers' Register for 9 April 1606 records the entry of Thomas Adams to publish 'A booke of songes in folio for the Lute violl and voices by Master John Daniell bachelour in Musicke'. Danyel dedicated the collection to 'Mrs Anne Grene the worthy Daughter to Sr William Grene of Milton Knight'; from the dedicatory poem and the title of the lute solo which ends the book we can infer that Danyel was Anne Grene's lute teacher, and from the Grenes' address that he worked in the Oxford area. He received livery as a musician of the royal household for the mourning for Prince Henry in 1612. On 10 July 1615 his brother Samuel was granted a warrant to build up 'a company of youths to perform Comedies and Tragedies' at Bristol. One week after the grant of this warrant the direction of the players at Bristol was given over officially to John, and in 1618 John again replaced his brother, now as 'allower of the plays' at Philip Rosseter's Blackfriars playhouse. He collaborated with Simon Waterson the printer to produce a complete edition of Samuel's poetry in 1623. In 1625 Danyel is last mentioned as one of the royal musicians (at the funeral of King James I), and he can be presumed to have died shortly afterwards. Though contemporary references to his activities as a composer and player are few, Danyel seems to have been held in high regard. Tomkins dedicated the two parts of a madrigal in his Songs of 3. 4. 5. and 6. parts (London, 1622) to Dowland and to Danyel: this linking of Danyel's name with that of the best-known lutenist of his day is surely a significant tribute to his skill.

Danyel's most characteristic songs are settings of serious texts and are mournful, even lugubrious, in tone. They display a marked contrapuntal tendency and come close in style to some of the more extended and emotional songs of Dowland. Notable among Danyel's songs is Like as the lute delights, in which he indulged his talent for word-painting: at 'a wailing descant on the sweetest ground' the voice 'wails' with suspensions and a false relation over an ascending and descending scale in the bass (ex.1). Perhaps his best-known song, however, is Can dolefull notes (in three sections), which seems to be his contribution to the arguments of the time about the best kind of music to accompany poetry. The accompaniment here is relentlessly contrapuntal, and a chromatic motto phrase in the second section, 'No, let chromatique tunes', anticipates part of Dowland's setting of From silent night (A Pilgrimes Solace, London, 1612). The affinity with Dowland is explicit in Eyes, look no more, which pays homage to that composer's famous Lachrimae pavan. What delight can they enjoy illustrates the lighter side of Danyel: this is one of only two airs in which the composer provided a partsong version for four voices. Danyel's lute music shows him to have been a skilful player, with a distinctive variation technique. Mrs Anne Grene her leaves bee greene is the first English solo to use the French cordes avallées tuning, in this case A″–D′–G–A–e–a–c♯–f♯′.

Ex.1 Like as the lute delights

WORKS

Songs for the Lute, Viol and Voice (London, 1606/R); ed. E. H. Fellowes, rev. D. Scott, EL, 2nd ser., viii (1926, rev. 2/1970); 2 airs ed. in MB, liv (1989)

Lute: A fancy, inc.; Mounsiers Almayne; Mrs Anne Grene her leaves bee greene; Passymeasures Galliard; Pavan; Rosamund: ed. M. Shepherd, The Complete Works of John Danyel, i (n.p., 1997)

Other lute pieces which may be by him or Daniel Bachelor are discussed by Rooley and Shepherd

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Rees: Samuel Daniel: a Critical and Biographical Study (Liverpool, 1964)
A. Rooley: 'The Lute Solos and Duets of John Danyel', LSJ, xiii (1971), 18–27
D. Scott: 'John Danyel, his Life and Songs', LSJ, xiii (1971), 7–17
D. Lindley: 'John Danyel's "Eyes looke no more"', LSJ, xvi (1974), 9–16
R.H. Wells: 'The Ladder of Love: Verbal, and Musical Rhetoric in the Elizabethan Lute Song', EMc, xii (1984), 173–89
R. McGrady: '"Chromatique Tunes and Measur'd Accents": John Danyel's "Can Dolefull Notes"', MR, l (1989), 79–92
U. Sommerrock: Das englische Lautenlied 1597–1622 (Regensburg, 1990)
J. Craig-McFeely: English Lute Manuscripts and Scribes 1530–1630 (diss., U. of Oxford, 1994)

DAVID SCOTT/DAVID GREER

Danzi [Danzy]. German family of musicians of Italian origin.

(1) Innocenz Danzi (b Italy, *c*1730; d Munich, 17 April 1798). Cellist. In F.W. Marpurg's list of members of the Mannheim orchestra (1756) he is noted as being 'from Italy'. He joined Johann Stamitz's Mannheim court orchestra on 29 May 1754 and married Barbara Toeschi, the sister of Carl Joseph Toeschi. With 1000 gulden a year he was one of the highest-paid musicians in Mannheim. In 1778 he moved with the court to Munich, and in 1783 retired on a pension. Mozart met him at the rehearsals for Idomeneo in Munich (letter of 24 November 1780).

(2) Franziska [Francesca] (Dorothea) Danzi (b Mannheim, 24 March 1756; d Berlin, 14 May 1791). Soprano and composer, daughter of (1) Innocenz Danzi. See LEBRUN family, §(2).

(3) Johann Baptist Danzi (b Mannheim, bap. 17 Jan 1758; d after 1785). Violinist, son of (1) Innocenz Danzi. He was a supernumerary violinist of the Mannheim court orchestra from 1773 to 1776 and held a permanent post from 1777 to 1785.

(4) Franz (Ignaz) Danzi (b Schwetzingen, bap. 15 June 1763; d Karlsruhe, 13 April 1826). Composer, son of (1) Innocenz Danzi. He studied the piano, the cello and singing with his father and at the age of 15 joined the celebrated Mannheim orchestra. When the Elector Palatine Carl Theodor transferred his court to Munich in 1778, Danzi remained in Mannheim, in the orchestra of the newly established Nationaltheater. He studied composition with G.J. Vogler and before leaving Mannheim wrote a duodrama, a Singspiel and incidental music for at least eight plays.

In 1784 he was appointed to replace his father as principal cellist in the court orchestra at Munich. Although he wanted to compose operas for the court, Danzi received no major commissions until 1789; Die Mitternachtstunde (formerly dated 1788) was not performed until 1798. In 1790 he married the singer Margarethe Marchand. The couple visited Hamburg, Leipzig, Prague, Florence and Venice, spending two years in the Guardasoni company. In 1796 they returned to Munich. After the successful première of Die Mitternachtstunde, Danzi was appointed vice-Kapellmeister on 18 May 1798 and placed in charge of German opera and church music. He was recognized at this time not only as one of Munich's leading musicians, but also as a prominent member of the city's literary circles, with articles in the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (including an unsigned proposal in 1804 encouraging the development of German opera), the literary journal Aurora, and other publications.

The next few years were marked by a series of personal and professional setbacks. Danzi's father died in 1798, and his wife died in 1800 after a long illness. The death of Carl Theodor in 1799 had a greater impact on Danzi's career: the new elector, Maximilian IV Joseph, was less sympathetic to German opera and imposed financial restrictions on the theatres. Further, Danzi faced opposition from rivals, including the new intendant Joseph Marius Babo and the Kapellmeister Peter Winter. When his serious German opera Iphigenie in Aulis was finally given in 1807, it was poorly prepared and had only two performances; bitter and disappointed, Danzi left Munich for Stuttgart.

In October 1807, the King of Württemberg offered Danzi the position of Kapellmeister at Stuttgart, where Zumsteeg had been active. There Danzi met Carl Maria von Weber and encouraged the younger composer as he completed his Singspiel Silvana. In 1811 the king established an institute for music: Danzi was appointed a director, to teach composition and supervise instruction on wind instruments. However, he was so overworked between court duties and the institute that he apparently had no time for composition, producing only a single one-act opera and very little other music in his five years in Stuttgart.

Danzi left Stuttgart in 1812 to become Kapellmeister in Karlsruhe. The musical organization there was inexperienced and weak, and he spent the rest of his tenure trying to build a respectable company. He remained an active correspondent with Weber and directed his operas soon after their premières. None of his own operas written in Karlsruhe produced a popular success, but during the last decade of his life Danzi found a willing outlet for his instrumental compositions in the publisher Johann André, for whom he provided numerous pieces of chamber music. Among them were the works for which he is best known today, his woodwind quintets opp.56, 67 and 68.

Although his public career, like that of most court musicians, revolved around his work for the operatic stage, Danzi composed in all the major genres. From the early 1790s until 1825 he published chamber and orchestral works. He also wrote dozens of songs and partsongs and more than 100 sacred choral works. He anticipated the Romantic movement by combining musical and literary activities: his poetry circulated privately in Munich and he set some of his own texts in his Deutsche Lieder op.15. He wrote at least one opera libretto, set to music by Poissl as Die Opernprobe, and may have written the libretto 'after Gozzi' for his own Turandot.

His instrumental works are characterized by a high degree of craftsmanship, pleasant, idiomatic melodies, and a conservative, formulaic approach to form. His harmonic language was mildly adventurous at the outset of his career, with unexpected cross- relations and diminished sonorities resulting from chromatic part-writing, and a fondness for starting movements away from the tonic key. This combination of harmonic adventurousness with a rigid, classicizing approach to traditional forms is of course a hallmark of the emerging Romantic style, to which Danzi made a modest contribution at the outset of the 19th century. However, his music suffers from the unimaginative working out of its material, revealed in literal recapitulations and entire movements built of regular 2-, 4- and 8-bar phrases, and by the 1820s his style was old-fashioned enough that its chief appeal was to the amateur music-buying public.

Despite being remembered mainly for his chamber music, Danzi was in fact one of the most important German opera composers of Mozart's generation. His early dramatic work, Cleopatra, has many of the Sturm und Drang qualities of the operas performed at Mannheim in the late 1770s. In an approbatory essay on Iphigenie, Friedrich Rochlitz placed it beside Schweitzer's Alceste and Holzbauer's Günther von Schwarzburg in the tradition of serious German opera. Danzi's comic operas are more successful: Die Mitternachtstunde and Der Kuss rank alongside the best of Winter's and Weigl's works in this genre. Colourful orchestration, chromatic harmonies and cantabile melodic writing are distinguishing features of Danzi's operas. In choosing exotic subjects and folk tales, he anticipated Weber and later German Romantic opera composers.

WORKS

Catalogue: V. von Pechstaedt: Thematisches Verzeichnis der Kompositionen von Franz Danzi (1763-1826) (Tutzing, 1996); reviewed by P.M. Alexander, Notes, Liii (1996–7), 1144–7

STAGE

Cleopatra (duodrama, 1, J.L. Neumann), Mannheim, National, 30 Jan 1780, D-Bsb, US-Wc

Azakia (Spl, 3, C.F. Schwan), Mannheim, National, 6 June 1780, lost, lib in D-MHrm

Der Tod des Orpheus (ballet-pantomime, 4, P. Crux), Munich, Hof, 10 Oct 1784, lost

Der Teufel in allen Ecken (comic ballet, 1, Crux), Munich, Hof, 28 Jan 1785, lost

Der Sylphe, ? by 1785 (Operette, 1, F.L.W. Meyer), ?Munich, 1788, lost

Der Triumph der Treue (Spl, 3, J.F. von Binder, after C.M. Wieland: Oberon), Munich, 7 Feb 1789, lost, lib in Mbs
Der Quasimann (komische Oper, 2, M.G. Lambrecht), Munich, Aug 1789, 1 aria A-Wgm
Die Mitternachtstunde (Spl, 3, Lambrecht, after Dumaniant [A.-J. Bourlin]: La guerre ouverte), Munich, Hof, 16 Feb 1798, D-Bsb, Mbs, excerpts (Offenbach, 1799), vs (Bonn, *c*1800)
Der Kuss (tragisch komische Oper, 3, Lambrecht), Munich, Hof, 27 June 1799, US-Wc, vs, 2 arias, 2 duets (Munich, *c*1799), excerpts (Offenbach, 1799)
El Bondokani [Der Calif von Bagdad] (Spl, 1, Lambrecht), Munich, Hof, 20 Aug 1802, 1 aria (Munich, 1804), 1 aria in Balladen und Romanzen, op.46 (Leipzig, *c*1814)
L'enlèvement de Proserpine (ballet), ?Munich, Hof, 11 Oct 1803, arr. pf 4 hands in Délassement musicale (Munich, 1807)
Iphigenie in Aulis (ernsthaftee Oper, 3, K. Reger), Munich, Hof, 27 Jan 1807, vs, 2 arias and a march (Munich, *c*1807)
Deucalion et Pirrha (Oper, 1, ? H.J. von Högger [J.-J. Baron d'Hogguer]), *c*1810, ?unperf., GB-Lbl
Dido (melodrama, 1, G. Reinbeck), Stuttgart, 18 Dec 1811, lost
Camilla und Eugen, oder Der Gartenschlüssel (Spl, 1, F.C. Hiemer), Stuttgart, 15 March 1812, D-Bsb, Sl
Die Blumenfée (mythical scene, 1), Karlsruhe, 29 Sept 1812, lost
Der Berggeist, oder Schicksal und Treue [Rübezahl] (romantische Oper, 2, C. von Lohbauer), Karlsruhe, Hof, 19 April 1813, *Mbs
Malvina (grosse Oper, 2, G.C. Römer), Karlsruhe, Hof, 26 Dec 1814, lost Turandot (heroisches-komisches Spl, 2, ? F. Danzi, after C. Gozzi), Karlsruhe, Hof, 26 Dec 1816, *Mbs, ov. HR
Die Zauberhöhle, oder Arlequin's Triumph (comic-magic-pantomime, 2), Karlsruhe, 6 June 1819, lost
L'Abbé de l'Attaignant, oder Die Theaterprobe (Spl, 1, Hiemer), Karlsruhe, Hof, 14 Sept 1820, Bsb
Incid music, written for Mannheim, all lost: Der Wiederkauf (S.F. Schletter), *c*1780; Der Schiffbruch (J.C. Brandes), 4 March 1781; Sturm von Boxberg (J. Meier), ? 19 April 1781; Albert von Turneisen (W.A. Iffland), 27 May 1781; Laura Rosetti (B.C. d'Arien), 15 Aug 1781; Die Räuber (F. von Schiller), 13 Jan 1782; Lanasa (K.M. Plümecke), 29 Dec 1782; Der Liebhaber ohne Namen (F.W. Gotter), 30 Jan 1783; Franz von Sickingen (A. von Klein), 27 Feb 1783; Liebe um Liebe (Iffland), 20 Nov 1785
Incid music, written for Karlsruhe, all lost: König Lear (W. Shakespeare), ? 7 Oct 1812 [rev. of Sturm von Boxberg]; Mädchenfreundschaft (A. von Kotzebue), 4 April 1815; Faust (E.A. Klingemann), 20 March 1817; Die Spartaner (J. von Auffenberg), 7 March 1819; Die Flibustier (Auffenberg), 13 June 1820; Tagesbefehl (K. Töpfer), 3 July 1820; Romeo und Juliet (Shakespeare), 31 Oct 1822
Other incid music: March in Agnes Bernauerin (J.A. von Törring-Guttenzell), ? Mannheim, 6 Jan 1781 (Munich, 1799); Vater stammeln zitternd, chorus for Die Hussiten vor Naumburg im Jahre 1432 (Kotzebue), Leipzig, Sept 1802, D-Mbs, Sl, GÖbw, F-Pn; Columbus (Klingemann), Stuttgart, 25 July 1809, lost; Wedding march in Medea (Munich, 1809); march in Die Tochter Jephthas (L. Robert), Karlsruhe, 5 Nov 1812, D-Sl terzet in Wilhelm Tell (Schiller), Karlsruhe, *c*1815, Rp other incid music lost; Viola (Auffenberg), ?Karlsruhe, 31 Aug 1823, Mbs
Other works: Die Blumerfée (prol, Friedrich), Karlsruhe, 29 Sept 1812, lost; Die Probe (op, 1), Karlsruhe, 29 Dec 1814, lost, probably a pastische; insert arias to ops by other comps., incl. D. Cimarosa: Gli Orazi ed i Curiazi, Munich, Hof, 2 Sept 1806, Mbs

SACRED

Preiss Gottes (cant.) D-Sl (Leipzig, 1803)
Abraham auf Moria (orat), Stuttgart, 1 Jan 1808, Bsb, Sl
Masses: no.1, 4vv, org (Offenbach, *c*1814); no.2, 4vv, insts, org (Offenbach, c1814); 6 others, A-Wn, CZ-Pnm, D-Mbs, Mf, Mk, F-Pn, 1 lost; Requiem, SATB, orch, org, Pn
Other works: Der 6. Psalm, SATB, org, op.60 (Offenbach, 1823); Psalmus 128, SATB, orch, op.65 (Leipzig, 1823); 9 lateinische Vesper-Psalmen, S, A, T, B, str, org (Munich, n.d.); Tantum ergo, Salve regina, Ave regina, Alma Redemptoris, lits, 4-5vv, insts, org (Munich, n.d.); TeD, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, 14 Jan 1806, D-Bsb, F-Pn; more than 80 other works, D-Bsb, Mbs, Mf, Mk

OTHER VOCAL

Das Freudenfest (cant.), S, T, B, SATB, orch (Leipzig, 1804)
Cantate am Jahrestage von Mozard's Tod zu singen, SSTB, kbd (Munich, 1808)
An die Freude (ode, Schiller), S, SSTB, pf (Berlin, n.d.)
Aufs Königs Geburtstag, SATB, pf, D-Tl
Songs, for 1v, pf: 6 canzonette, op.13 (Munich, 1802); 6 deutsche Lieder, op.14 (Munich, 1803); 6 deutsche Lieder, op.15 (Leipzig, 1803); 6 deutsche Gesänge, op.19 (Munich, 1805); 8 Volkslieder (Schubart) (Leipzig, 1809); 6 deutsche Lieder (Munich, 1810); 6 romances françaises (Bonn, 1812); 12 canzonette, op.40 (Munich, 1813); 6 deutsche Gesänge (Leipzig, 1813–14); Balladen und Romanzen, op.46 (Leipzig, c1814); 6 Gesänge, op.63 (Offenbach, 1823); 3 canzonette con variazioni, op.65 (Offenbach, 1823); 6 Lieder, op.69 (Leipzig, 1823); 6 Lieder, op.70 (Leipzig, 1824); arias, S/T, some with insts, pubd Munich or MS; other single lieder
Songs, for 2–4vv, pf: 12 Gesänge, SSB and STB, op.16, 2 vols. (Leipzig, 1803); 8 Gesänge, S, S, T, B, op.17 (Leipzig, 1803); 6 petits duos, SS (Offenbach, *c*1818); 6 qts, S, S, T, B (Bonn, 1821); 3 Soldatenlieder, TTBB, op.58 (Offenbach, *c*1822); Gesänge der Hellenen, TTBB, op.72 (Leipzig, *c*1824); 6 Gesänge, S, S, T, B, op.74 (Leipzig, *c*1825); other single lieder, canons etc.
Concert arias, with orch: Ah che incertezza, Dunque mi lascia (Munich, 1813); others, Mbs, F-Pn, GB-Lbl
Singing exercises, incl. opp.24, 32, 50 (Berlin, Leipzig and Paris, 1804–23)

ORCHESTRAL

Edition: Franz Danzi: Three Symphonic Works, ed. P.M. Alexander, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, v (New York, 1983) [incl. thematic index]
Syms. and syms. concertantes: Sinfonia concertante, E♭, fl, ob, hn, bn, by 1785, D-Rtt, ed. H. Zirnbauer (Mainz, 1939) [for fl, ob, cl, bn, 1786, SW1]; Simphonie concertante, B♭, 2 vn (Paris and Zürich, 1803–4); Sinfonie, d, op.19, by 1796 (Leipzig, 1804); Sinfonie, C, op.20 (Leipzig, 1804); Concertante, fl, cl, op.41 (Offenbach, 1813–14); Concerto concertant, cl, bn (Bonn, 1818), as Concertante, op.47 (Leipzig, 1818); 2 grande sinfonie, B♭, D (Offenbach, *c*1818); Ov. (Sinfonia), D, by 1790, Bsb, Rtt; Sinfonia, E♭ by 1790, Bsb; Concertante, 2 bn, perf. Munich, 1812, lost; Concertante, 2 hn, perf. Königsberg, 1818, lost; Concertino, 2 cl, perf. Vienna, 1820, lost, doubtful Concs.: 1 for pf, E♭, op.4 (Mainz, n.d.; Munich, *c*1800); 1 for pf, D, Bsb; 1 for kbd, C, A-Wgm; 4 for fl, no.1, G, op.30 (Leipzig, *c*1804), no.2, d, op.31 (Leipzig, *c*1804), no.3, d, op.42 (Leipzig, *c*1813), no.4, D, op.43 (Leipzig, *c*1813); 1 for vn, perf. Munich, 1805, lost; 3 for vc, A, B♭ (Zürich, *c*1802), e, D-Mbs; Concertino, D, vc, op.46 (Leipzig, *c*1814); 1 for ob, perf. Stockholm, 1817, lost; 5 for bn, C, F, Bsb, F, Mbs, F, g, DO; 2 for hn, E, *c*1790, Rtt, F, by 1821,
Other works: Ov., E♭, 10 insts, by 1793, AB; 3 potpourris, cl, orch, no.1, op.45 (Leipzig, *c*1813), nos.2–3 (Bonn, *c*1818); Pot-pourri, B♭, vn, orch, op.61 (Offenbach, 1823); Andante, d, kbd, str, Bsb [arr. from Qnt op.54]

CHAMBER

For 5-6 insts: Sestetto, E♭, ob/vn, 2 va, 2 hn, vc, op.10 (Munich, 1802; Mainz, n.d.); Sextuor, E, 2 vn, va, vc, 2 hn, op.15 (Munich, 1803); Qnt, d, pf, ww, op.41 (Leipzig, 1810) also as Pf Qt op.40; 3 qnts, E♭, b, D, fl, str, op.50 (Offenbach, *c*1818); 2 qnts, F, D, pf, ww, opp.53–4 (Offenbach, 1820–21); 3 qnts, ww, B♭, g, F, op.56 (Paris and Berlin, 1819–20); 3 str qnts, E♭, f, A, op.66 (Offenbach, 1823–4); 6 qnts, G, e, E♭, A, F, d, ww, opp.67–8 (Offenbach, 1823–4)
For 3-4 insts: 3 sonates, B♭, C, A, pf, vn, b, op.1 (Paris, *c*1792); 3 str qts, C, E♭, E, op.5 (Munich, *c*1800); 3 str qts, C, B♭, g, op.6 (Munich, *c*1801); 3 str qts, E♭, c, F, op.7 (Munich, *c*1802; Mainz, n.d.); Str Qt, A, op.16 (Munich, c1804); 3 str qts, C, a, D, op.29 (Leipzig, 1804–05); Pf qt, d, op.40 (Leipzig, 1810), also as Qnt op.41; 5 pièces détachées, fl/ob, vn, va, vc (Bonn, *c*1813); 3 qts, C, d, B♭, vn, va, bn, vc, op.40 (Offenbach, *c*1814); Sonata, D, 2 pf, vn, op.42 (Offenbach, *c*1814); 3 str qts, D, e, B♭, op.44 (Leipzig, 1814); 3 str qts, E♭, f, E, op.55 (Offenbach, 1820-21); 3 qts, D, d, F, fl, vn, va, vc, op.56 (Offenbach, 1820–21); 3 trios, G, e, D, fl, vn, vc, op.71 (Offenbach, 1824–5); Pf Trio, E♭, Bsb
Duos: 3 for va, vc (Paris and Zürich, 1801–2); 3 for va, vc, op.9 (Munich, *c*1802); 6 sonatas, 2 vc, op.1 (Zürich, 1802–3); Sonata, E♭, pf, hn/vc, op.28 (Leipzig, *c*1804); Sonatine, e, pf, fl/vn, op.34 (Munich, *c*1809); Sonata, e, pf, hn/vc, op.44 (Leipzig, *c*1813); Sonata, B♭, cl, pf (Bonn, 1817–18); Sonatine, D, pf, fl (Munich and Mainz, 1818); Sonata, F, basset-hn/vc, op.62 (Offenbach, 1823); 3 petits duos, fl, vc, op.64 (Offenbach, 1823–4); Sonata, 2 org, I-Md, doubtful

Pf: Andantino (Nuremberg, 1783); 3 sonatas, 4 hands, E♭ (Paris, c1795), C, op.2 (Munich, c1799), B♭, op.9 (Leipzig, c1806); 3 sonatas, F, op.3 (Munich, c1800), d, op.12 (Mainz, c1802), F, in Délassement musical (Munich, 1807); 3 pièces détachées, 4 hands, op.11 (Munich, c1802); Potpourri, 4 hands (Munich, 1807); 12 Waltzes (Munich, 1807); Andante, F, Allegretto, C (Munich, 1812); Larghetto-Allegretto, F (Munich, 1814); 6 pièces faciles, op.73 (Leipzig, 1824–5); Marche des chevaliers (n.p., n.d.), doubtful; 6 montferrines (n.p., n.d.), doubtful

(5) (Maria) Margarethe Danzi [née Marchand] (b Munich, 1768; d Munich, 11 June 1800). German soprano and composer. She was the daughter of the singer, actor and theatre director Theobald Marchand, who came from Strasbourg and whose troupe was active in Mainz, Frankfurt, Mannheim and Munich. From an early age she played children's roles in the theatre and performed as a pianist and singer. In Munich she received tuition from the soprano Franziska Lebrun (née Danzi), who later became her sister-in-law. She and her younger brother Heinrich lived in Salzburg from 1781 to 1784 with Leopold Mozart, who taught her singing and the keyboard (she is often mentioned in his letters as 'Gretl'). He supported her first attempts at composition (sonatas for piano or for violin and piano) and tried to have them published by the Viennese publisher Christoph Torricella, but without success. Wolfgang Mozart heard her sing on his visits to Salzburg in 1782 and 1783, and liked her voice well enough to offer to write an aria for her (although if he finished the aria, it has been lost). She made her singing début in Munich in 1786, as Calloandra in Salieri's La fiera di Venezia, and in the following season sang the role of Telaira in Vogler's Castore e Polluce. She later became famous for her Mozart roles. In 1790 she married the composer Franz Danzi, with whom she toured in Germany, Austria and Italy. For two years she was prima donna with the Guardasoni troupe in Prague, where she was especially popular, and from 1796 she was a member of the Deutsches Theater in Munich. Two of her works were published by Falter in Munich: three sonatas for piano and violin op.1 (1801; no.1 ed. R. Münster in Varie musiche di Baviera, i, Giebing, 1967) and the Marche de Marseillois varié op.2 for piano (1802). A third work, an Andante with variations for piano, was published under her husband's name as the central movement of his Piano Sonata in F major, op.3 (*c*1800).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL; LipowskyBL; SchillingE; SchmidlDS

K.C.: : 'Biographische Nachrichten', AMZ, iv (1801), 124–6

F. Rochlitz: 'Franz Danzi', AMZ, xxviii (1826), 581–7; repr. in Für Freunde der Tonkunst, iii (Leipzig, 1830, rev. 3/1868 by A. Dörffel), 170–86

Neue Nekrolog der Deutschen, Jg.4: 1826, (1828)

E. Reipschläger: Schubaur, Danzi und Poissl als Opernkomponisten (Berlin 1811)

G. Haas: Geschichte des ehemaligen Grossherzoglich-Badischen Hoftheaters Karlsruhe (Karlsruhe, 1934)

J. Warrack: Carl Maria von Weber (London, 1968, 2/1976)

J. Warrack: 'German Operatic Ambitions at the Beginning of the 19th Century', PRMA, civ (1977–8), 79–88, esp. 84–5

P.M. Alexander: The Chamber Music of Franz Danzi: Sources, Chronology, and Style (diss., Indiana U., 1986)

M. Holl: 'Theaterdirektor Theobald Marchand und seine Tochter Margarete Marchand-Danzi: zwei Aquarellstudien des Malers Joseph Franz von Goez', Festschrift Wolfgang Rehm, ed. D. Berke are H. Heckmann (Kassel, 1989), 146–54

J. Veit: Der junge Carl Maria von Weber: Untersuchungen zum Einfluss Franz Danzis und Abbé Georg Jospeh Voglers (Mainz, 1990)

ROLAND WÜRTZ (1–3), PAUL CORNEILSON/PETER M. ALEXANDER (4), BRIGITTE HÖFT/PETER M. ALEXANDER, PAUL CORNEILSON

Danzi, Franziska. German singer. See LEBRUN family, (2).

Danzig (Ger.). See GDAŃSK.

Danzón. A formal ballroom couple-dance in rondo form derived from the contredanse and the habanera traditions of the 19th century, both considered part of the flowering of Cuban musical nationalism in the late colonial period when a distinctly Cuban light classical music arose. When Spanish colonial rule was replaced by North American hegemony, many composers reacted by turning to proletarian non-European artistic sources, most notably African. A sophisticated Afro-Cubanism arose, exemplified by the work of Amadeo Roldán (1900–39) and Alejandro García (1906–40). The Cuban danzón developed in part from the French contredanse which arrived on the island from Haiti, evolving the danza and danzonete forms. Written in 2/4 metre, it is slower, more cadenced and varied than other related forms. Its inclusion in the repertory of urban charanga and tipica orchestras resulted in greater contrast between the first and second parts of its overall binary structure. Most specifically, African percussion textures, instrumentation and rhythms, including extensive use of symmetrical cinquillo and tresillo patterns, were staggered rhythmically to create complex instrumental cross-rhythms; while flute or clarinet, violin or brass, developed virtuoso passages. The first premièred example was Miguel Failde's Las alturas de Simpson in Matanzas in 1879. In the 20th century danzón interacted with other Cuban genres, feeding into son, and to the development of the mambo and cha cha cha. The dance itself is extremely formal with the set footwork working on syncopated beats, and involving elegant pauses when the couple stand and listen to an instrumental section. At the end of the 20th century, it was still danced in Cuba and Mexico, albeit by an older generation; and it formed part of the repertory of various popular musicians and orchestras who continued to compose new pieces.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Leon: 'Of the Axle and the Hinge: Nationalism, Afro-Cubanism and Music in Pre-Revolutionary Cuba', Essays on Cuban Music: North American and Cuban Perspectives, ed. P. Manuel (Lanham, MD, 1991), 267–82

WILLIAM GRADANTE/JAN FAIRLEY

Daoud, Rageh (Sami) (b Cairo, 23 Nov 1954). Egyptian composer. He entered the Cairo Conservatory at the age of nine, where he took piano lessons. He took graduate studies in piano with Ettore Puglisi and studied composition with Abdel-Rahim, with whom he also studied the Arab modal system. In 1977 he obtained a diploma in composition with distinction, and the following year he was appointed a composition teacher at the Cairo Conservatory. After receiving a state scholarship to continue his postgraduate studies in composition, he studied with Thomas Christian David and Francis Burt at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik (1981–7). After graduation he returned to Egypt to resume his teaching career at the Cairo Conservatory. In 1995 he won a state prize for chamber music. In the same year, he founded the Chamber Orchestra of the Hanager Centre, which he has conducted in performances of contemporary Egyptian music.

Almost all Daoud's output is chamber music, some of which has been performed throughout Europe. He has composed scores for 25 films, several of which have won awards. In his earlier works, such as Glimpse of Egypt, the Piano Trio and the Piano Sonata, he writes in a modal style using the tetrachords, pentachords, irregular metres and rhythmic modes characteristic of Arab music. In some of his recent compositions he uses a simpler style with clear tonality, tonal harmony, traditional progressions and unchanging metres; an example is his Passacaglia for lute, organ and strings (1993).

WORKS

Glimpse of Egypt, orch, 1978; Lied, S, pf, 1978; Pf Sonata, 1978; 4 Dances, str qt, 1982; Fantasy, hp, vc, perc, 1982; Fantasy, ww, str, 1983; Str Qt, 1983; Lied, A, pf, 1984; Takassim, cl, 1984; Ww Qt, 1984; 4 Pieces, str, 1985; Fugue, str, 1986; Meditation, str, 1986; Der neue Ankommende, Lied, A, b cl, vib, 1986; Portrait no.1, str, 1986; 3 Children's Pictures, 2 pf, 1987; 3 Pictures, ob, pf, 1987; Portrait no.2, str, 1987; Pf Trio, 1988; Rhapsody, str, 1988; Nocturne, pf, 1989; Nocturne, vc, pf, 1989; Requiem, chorus, orch, 1990; 30 Songs, children's chorus, chbr orch, 1991; Rhapsody, fl, vn, orch, 1992; Suite, a fl, 1992; suite, fl, pf, 1992; Passacaglia, lute, org, str, 1993

AWATEF ABDEL KERIM

Da-Oz [Daus], Ram [Avraham] (b Berlin, 17 Oct 1929). Israeli composer of German birth. He moved to Palestine with his parents in 1934 and began studies of the piano in 1945 and the oboe in 1947. Blinded in the [Israel] War of Independence of 1948, he studied theory and composition privately with Hajos for three years, and he graduated from the Israel Academy of Music, Tel-Aviv, in 1953. Two years later he had a string quartet, a piano sonata and some songs publicly performed. Parts of these works showed a personal expressive quality, which reached a highpoint in the sombre orchestral Alei yagon va'nocham ('Metamorphosis of Grief and Consolation'). Earlier tendencies toward fast chromatic modulations developed into atonal writing in the piano Capriccio, the String Trio and the Lea Goldberg Songs (1962); the influences of Prokofiev and Bartók gave place to those of Schoenberg. The dodecaphony ruling the Movimenti quasi sonata for piano, the Third Quartet and the Piano Trio (both 1964) was then replaced by shorter motivic sets, as in the imaginative and well-shaped Changing Phantoms for chamber orchestra and Improvisation on a Song. Since the Rhapsody on a Yemenite Jewish Melody (1971), Da-Oz has employed traditional styles in combination with 'free tonality', for example in Quasi Menuet (1992) and Two-Part Inventions (1995). He has also continued his quasifolksong writing, and played an influential part in musical life in Haifa, through his music committee membership and educational works, including music for piano, recorder and chorus, for example Echo for children's choir (1991).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Suite in the Old Style, str, 1958; Alei yagon va'nocham [Metamorphosis of Grief and Consolation], 1959–60; Conc. da camera, vn, str; Concertino, rec, str, 1965; Changing Phantoms, chbr orch, 1967; Rhapsody on a Yemenite Jewish Melody, pf, str, 1971; 3 Romances, vn, chbr orch, 1976; Introduction and Passacaglia, 1981

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1955; Trio, pf left hand, vn, vc, 1956; Str Qt no.2, 1958; Sonata, vn, pf, 1960; Str Trio, 1961; Suite, fl, ob, vc, hpd, 1963; Str Qt no.3, 1964; Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1964; 10 Dialogues, 2 cl, 1966; Illuminations, vn, 1966; Prelude and Dance, rec, hpd, 1968; Improvisations on a Song, ens, 1968; Divertimento, brass qt, 1977; Pa'amei aviv [Sounds of Spring], rec ens, 1980; Falling Leaves, rec ens, 1982; I Loved a Shepherdess: Fantasy on Sephardic Melodies, vn, pf, 1991

Pf: Sonata, 1955; Capriccio, 1960; Movimenti quasi sonata, 1963; A Farewell to Bach, 1972; Quasi Menuet, 1992; 10 Two-Part Inventions, 1995

Vocal: 3 duets, S, Mez, 1960; 6 songs, 1v, pf, 1955; 3 songs, 1v, pf, 1962; 3 madrigals, SATB, 1967; Jubilee Chants, SATB, orch, 1984; Echo, children's vv, 1991

Principal publishers: Israel Music Institute, Israeli Music Publications

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Tischler: A Descriptive Biography of Art Music by Israeli Composers (Warren, MI, 1988)

Y. Cohen: Neimej smiroth Israel [The Heirs of the Psalmist: Israel's New Music] (Tel-Aviv, 1990)

NATHAN MISHORI

Da Palermo, Mauro. See CIAULA, MAURO.

Daphnis. Mythical Sicilian shepherd and singer. According to the ancient sources, he was the son or favourite of Hermes. Found by shepherds and educated by nymphs, he was taught to play the syrinx by Pan; this and his singing won him the favour of Artemis, with whom he hunted, and either he or the shepherds who sang about him invented bucolic poetry. But he broke a vow of fidelity to the nymph Echenais and was blinded; after his death he was raised to Olympus. (The early myths are transmitted in Aelian, Varia historia. x.18; Diodorus Siculus, Bibliothēkē, iv.84.2–4; Parthenius, Amatoriae narrationes, xxix.) It has been suggested that laments for Daphnis as shepherd-god are related to the numerous surviving laments for the ancient Mesopotamian shepherd-god Dumuzi (see Halperin, 'The Forebears', 1983; cf also the traditional LINUS laments). STESICHORUS was supposed to have inherited bucolic poetry from Daphnis and to have composed an ode about him.

Against these myths, the first idyll of THEOCRITUS contains a song (lines 66ff) in which the whole of nature laments a Daphnis who apparently dies rather than yield to love, although the details of the story are unclear; and the sixth idyll presents Daphnis in a singing contest with his older lover, Damoetas. Daphnis is lamented as ideal shepherd-god and praised for the blessings he brings to humankind in Virgil's fifth eclogue, where he has traditionally, but not without some difficulty, been identified as Julius Caesar. And from late antiquity Longus's pastoral romance Daphnis and Chloe (date uncertain) depicts the sexual awakening, courtship and marriage of two foundlings.

Some of these incarnations of Daphnis have been important in musical settings. A number of Baroque composers, especially in Germany, set works in which Virgil's Daphnis is used as a pastoral cognomen for Christ, for example, in the Mirantisches Flötlein (1682) of Laurentius von Schnüffis ('in which Christ, under the name Daphnis, awakens Clorinda, sunk in the sleep of sin, to a better life') and in some pastorellas. Daphnis is used as a generic pastoral name in such works as Rameau's pastorale-héroïque Daphnis et Eglé (1753) and Mondonville's Daphnis et Alcimadure (using the Gascon dialect, 1754). Longus's Daphnis and Chloe, first popularized through Jacques Amyot's French translation (1559), became the basis for many French compositions of the 18th century and later, including operas of that name by Boismortier (1747), J.-J. Rousseau (1779), Offenbach (1860), Henri Maréchal (1895) and Henri Büsser (1897), and the well-known ballet by Ravel (1909–12).

See also PASTORAL.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf: 'Daphnis', Reden und Voträge, i (Berlin, 4/1925), 259–91

E.A. Schmidt: 'Die Leiden des verliebten Daphnis', Hermes, xcvi (1968), 539–52

G. Wojaczek: Daphnis: Untersuchungen zur griechischen Bukolik (Meisenheim, 1969)
C.P. Segal: '"Since Daphnis Dies": the Meaning of Theocritus' First Idyll', Museum helveticum, xxxi (1974), 1–22
D.M. Halperin: Before Pastoral: Theocritus and the Ancient Tradition of Bucolic Poetry (New Haven, CT, 1983)
D.M. Halperin: 'The Forebears of Daphnis', Transactions of the American Philological Association, cxiii (1983), 183–200
R.L. Hunter, ed.: A Study of 'Daphnis and Chloe' (Cambridge, 1983)
G. Barber: Daphnis and Chloe: the Markets and Metamorphoses of an Unknown Bestseller (London, 1989)
B.D. MacQueen: Myth, Rhetoric, and Fiction: a Reading of Longus's 'Daphnis and Chloe' (Lincoln, NE, 1990)
K.J. Gutzwiller: Theocritus' Pastoral Analogies: the Formation of a Genre (Madison, WI, 1991)

GEOFFREY CHEW

Da Ponte, Lorenzo [Conegliano, Emmanuele] (b Ceneda [now Vittorio Veneto], 10 March 1749; d New York, 17 Aug 1838). Italian librettist. His involvement in the remarkable flowering of opera buffa in Vienna from 1783 to 1790 and his collaborations with Martín y Soler, Salieri and, above all, Mozart make him arguably the most significant librettist of his generation: his three librettos for Mozart (Le nozze di Figaro, Don Giovanni and Così fan tutte) are justifiably regarded as peaks of the genre.

1. Life. Da Ponte's biographers rely largely on his Memorie. Begun at the age of 60 as an apologia for a life plagued by (often self-induced) misfortune, they present a carefully constructed image of the man and his work. Accounts of raffish adventures in the manner of his friend Casanova mix with vainglorious statements of achievement and accusations of treachery by friend and foe; sometimes fact can only with difficulty be separated from fiction.

Born Emmanuele Conegliano, Da Ponte adopted the name of the Bishop of Ceneda, Lorenzo da Ponte, when his father, a Jewish tanner, converted to Christianity in 1763. Da Ponte's early training in Ceneda and Portogruaro prepared him for the priesthood (he was ordained in 1773) and for teaching (at seminaries in Portogruaro, 1770–73, and Treviso, 1774–6). However, his penchant for liberal politics and married women led to a ban on his teaching in the Veneto and, on 17 December 1779, a 15-year exile from Venice. He went first to Gorizia and then to Dresden, believing that his friend, the poet and librettist Caterino Mazzolà, would secure him a court post: in Dresden he worked with Mazzolà translating and arranging plays and librettos (including Quinault's Atys; Da Ponte had already collaborated with his brother, Girolamo, on a translation of J.-F. de La Harpe's Le comte de Warwick in 1780). Mazzolà then provided Da Ponte with a recommendation to Salieri in Vienna: he arrived there in late 1781, meeting Metastasio just before his death. Da Ponte attracted the favour of Joseph II, and when Joseph abandoned his pursuit of German opera and revived the Italian company (in 1783), Da Ponte was appointed poet to the court theatre.

Da Ponte's facility for versifying, his ready wit and sound knowledge of languages made him an ideal theatre poet. His work included translating texts from French to Italian, reworking old librettos for revivals and providing new works (themselves often adaptations) for Viennese composers. He began his career as librettist in Vienna by making an Italian translation of Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride, not for the court theatre, but for Antonia Bernasconi's production at the Kärntnertortheater. His first new libretto for Salieri as musical director of the court theatre, Il ricco d'un giorno, was a failure (Da Ponte blamed the music). But in 1786 his position was assured by the success of his Il burbero di buon cuore for Martín y Soler. That year saw a remarkable output of six librettos, including Le nozze di Figaro for Mozart and the hugely popular Una cosa rara (again set by Martín y Soler).

Da Ponte had an uneasy relationship with Count Rosenberg, director of the theatre, and his rivalry with the poet Giambattista Casti found expression in satirical poems (notably the Epistola nell'Abate Casti, Vienna, 1786) and even on the stage. Nor did Da Ponte's arrogance (see Michael Kelly's Reminiscences, 1826) help matters. He managed to regain Salieri's favour, providing Axur re d'Ormus (based, like Figaro, on Beaumarchais) at the same time as writing L'arbore di Diana for Martín y Soler and Don Giovanni for Mozart; he later produced three other librettos for Salieri. He also published a volume of Saggi poetici (Vienna, 1788). In 1789 Da Ponte was involved in the revival of Figaro, probably providing the new texts for arias to be sung by his mistress, Adriana Ferrarese (the new Susanna), and he also wrote Così fan tutte in that year (Ferrarese was Fiordiligi). In addition, he claims to have saved the Italian opera in Vienna from threatened closure. However, the death of his patron Joseph II on 20 February 1790 and court intrigue on the succession of Leopold II led to his dismissal (for which he blamed Salieri, among others) in 1791.

The poet was denied permission to return to Venice, and although a reported meeting (in Trieste) with the short-lived Leopold II and the support of Leopold's successor Francis II went some way towards healing the rift, he never re-established himself in Vienna. Instead, having 'married' an Englishwoman, Ann (Nancy) Grahl, on 12 August 1792, he set off for Paris and then, discouraged by the unstable political situation there, headed for London. Doubtless he hoped to join forces with his former colleagues in Vienna, the singer Michael Kelly and the composer Stephen Storace. After a futile year attempting to establish Italian opera in Brussels, Rotterdam and The Hague, he was appointed to the King's Theatre, Haymarket, by the new manager, William Taylor. While there Da Ponte arranged operas by Cimarosa and others, collaborated again with Martín y Soler on two operas during the composer's stay in London for the 1795 season and also provided librettos for Francesco Bianchi. A trip to Italy in 1798 to recruit singers for the theatre reunited him with his family and his beloved Venice, although his old enemies forced a quick departure. His return to London saw his position blocked by intrigue – he was dismissed in 1799 – and the King's Theatre in financial disarray: his unwise involvement in Taylor's dubious dealings led to Da Ponte declaring himself bankrupt in February 1800. He was reinstated at the theatre in 1801 and collaborated with Peter Winter on three new operas, but, pursued by creditors, he followed Nancy to America in 1805.

Da Ponte became a grocer and general merchant in New York, then Sunbury (Pennsylvania) and Philadelphia, supplementing his income with private teaching and dealing in Italian books (an activity begun in London). He also produced an early version (1807) of what was to become a compendious autobiography. Returning to New York in 1819, he was determined to bring Italian culture to his newly adopted country (he took American citizenship) through teaching and book-dealing; he also occupied the (largely honorary) post of Professor of Italian at Columbia College in 1825 and from 1827 until his death. The publication both of a complete version of the Memorie (1823–7) and of a volume of Poesie varie (New York, 1830) seems to have formed part of this endeavour; he also issued other translations (e.g. of Byron), catalogues and miscellaneous prose (including a Storia della lingua e della letteratura italiana in New York, 1827). His interest in opera revived in his later years; he saw Don Giovanni performed by Manuel García's visiting company in 1826, and a new edition of Figaro, Don Giovanni, Axur and his tragedy Il Mezenzio (reportedly the only dramatic works from his European period that he had with him in America) was published that year. Notwithstanding his grief at Nancy's death (he issued a volume of commemorative verse in 1832), Da Ponte became financially involved in the ill-fated tour of the Montresor company in 1832–3 (he published an account in 1833) and acted briefly as manager of the newly built Italian Opera House. The initiative brought financial loss and also a sense that his life's work had been for nothing – a projected final volume of the Memorie was never completed – although by all accounts his elaborate funeral offered significant recognition of his achievement.

2. WORKS. Accounts of Da Ponte's working methods rely heavily on the Memorie, and one need not set much store by his claim of writing Axur re d'Ormus, L'arbore di Diana and Don Giovanni concurrently, sustained by his snuff-box, a bottle of Tokay and the ministrations of a 16-year-old Calliope ('whom I would have liked to love simply as a daughter, but ...'). However, the Memorie offers intriguing insights into theatre life in Vienna, London and New York, as well as into Da Ponte's own perception of his art: 'poetry is the door to music, which can be very handsome, and much admired for its exterior, but nobody else can see its internal beauties if the door is wanting'. He also made comments on contemporary librettists (whom he generally derided) and on the composers with whom he worked. Da Ponte was well aware of the different talents of his collaborators and carefully crafted his librettos to suit their needs. Although an obvious admirer of Mozart, he was less enthusiastic than one might expect (which may reflect Mozart's mixed critical reception in the early 19th century), while he praised Salieri (with only a little irony) as an educated and worthy maestro di cappella. But his favourite composer seems to have been Martín y Soler: Da Ponte viewed L'arbore di Diana as his best libretto. Other composers such as Vincenzo Righini and Francesco Piticchio are roundly dismissed.

Lorenzo Da Ponte: painting by an unknown artist, early 19th century (Columbia University, New York)

The prodigiousness of Da Ponte's output was doubtless due to his facility as a poet: significantly, he was a skilled improviser. But it also reflects his reliance on existing works: nearly all his librettos involve some adaptation, and he appears less happy when inventing original dramatic situations. However, adaptation was common in the period, and Da Ponte's skill lay in his precise knowledge of the dynamics of opera: he condensed situations, pinpointed characters and focussed the action in a manner allowing the composer freedom to create drama through music. Beaumarchais, Da Ponte reported, admired the libretto of Le nozze di Figaro for 'contracting so many colpi di scena in so short a time, without the one destroying the other'. Even if the remark is apocryphal, it reflects Da Ponte's perception of his achievement.

Da Ponte had a profound sense of the literary and dramatic traditions within which he was working. He claimed to have admired Metastasio from childhood; echoes of and quotations from Metastasio abound in his librettos. But Da Ponte took his heritage further back still to the Renaissance. His linking of Axur with Tasso, L'arbore di Diana with Petrarch and Don Giovanni with Dante is no coincidence: as his later teaching proved, he was intimately familiar with Italian Renaissance poetry. Again, references and quotations in his librettos emphasize the point: Dante, Petrarch, Boccaccio, Ariosto, Sannazaro, Tasso and Guarini all make appearances (and Da Ponte arranged Guarini's celebrated pastoral play Il pastor fido for Salieri in 1789). Moreover, Da Ponte made careful use of rhyme and metre as well as complex syntactical and rhetorical patterns. The rich resonances and subtle structures give his librettos a literary emphasis that sets them apart from the workaday efforts of his contemporaries. He was well aware of his skill: his texts often refer to, as they deliberately surpass, verse by Bertati, Casti and Mazzolà.

Two dramatists rarely mentioned in the Memorie are Goldoni and Carlo Gozzi, perhaps because they were too close to home. Da Ponte's first success, Il burbero di buon cuore, was an adaptation of Goldoni, and from him Da Ponte learnt the secret of comic pacing, of lexical manipulation (in particular, witty '-ino' and '-etto' diminutives) and of taut poetic structures. The debt is particularly apparent in Don Giovanni, notwithstanding its more immediate borrowings from Giovanni Bertati's recent 'Don Giovanni' libretto (set by Gazzaniga; Da Ponte later reworked this version in London). Da Ponte's

'dramma giocoso' (the term itself derives from Goldoni) owes much to Goldoni's play Don Giovanni Tenorio, as well as to Molière, and Leporello's opening solo has clear echoes of Il servitore di due padroni. Da Ponte claimed that the mixture of comedy and seriousness in the opera was his idea, not Mozart's, and it relates directly to Goldoni's notion of a new kind of drama for the 18th century.

As for Gozzi (whom he knew in Venice in the late 1770s), Da Ponte entered his fantasy world in L'arbore di Diana, while Gozzi's Le droghe d'amore (1777) may have influenced Così fan tutte. In Così (which the librettist always called La scuola degli amanti), Da Ponte's sense of literary play reaches its peak. It is perhaps best viewed as an opera about opera – failure to do so accounts for the oft-perceived 'problems' of the work – in the vein of Casti's Prima la musica e poi le parole (there are echoes in the text). Da Ponte ranked the libretto below Figaro and Don Giovanni, probably because of the opera's poor critical reception, but, as Dent realized, it contains his best work. Attempts to find a single source for the story have largely failed (but there are roots in Ovid, Boccaccio and particularly Ariosto). However, Da Ponte clearly placed the drama in the time-honoured tradition of the pastoral (in Act 1 Don Alfonso quotes directly from Sannazaro: 'Nel mare solca e nell arena semina'). He also revelled in the allegorical play of essentially abstract characters and situations. Whether or not Mozart fully grasped this aspect of the libretto is another matter; moreover, opera was soon to move in very different directions. But Così marks an eloquent testament both to Da Ponte's literary heritage and to opera in the Age of Enlightenment.

WORKS SET TO MUSIC

LIBRETTOS

La scuola degli gelosi [rev. of C. Mazzolà lib for Salieri], Vienna, 22 April 1783
Ifigenia in Tauride [trans. of N.-F. Guillard and M.F.L.G.L. Roullet lib for Gluck: Iphigénie en Tauride], Vienna, 14 Dec 1783
Il ricco d'un giorno (dg, after G. Bertati), Salieri, Vienna, 6 Dec 1784
Il burbero di buon cuore (dg, after C. Goldoni: Le bourru bienfaisant), Martín y Soler, Vienna, 4 Jan 1786
Il finto cieco (dramma buffo, after M.-A. Legrand: L'aveugle clairvoyant), Gazzaniga, Vienna, 20 Feb 1786
Le nozze di Figaro (commedia per musica, after P.-A. Beaumarchais: La folle journée, ou Le mariage de Figaro), Mozart, Vienna, 1 May 1786; Paer, Parma, Jan 1794, as Il nuovo Figaro
Il demogorgone, ovvero Il filosofo confuso (dg, after P. Zaguri:Leone e Giuletta), Righini, Vienna, 12 July 1786
Una cosa rara, o sia Bellezza ed onestà (dg, after L. Vélez de Guevara: La luna de la Sierra), Martín y Soler, Vienna, 17 Nov 1786
Gli equivoci (dramma buffo, after W. Shakespeare: The Comedy of Errors), Storace, Vienna, 27 Dec 1786
Il Bertoldo (dg, after G. Brunati), Piticchio, Vienna, 22 June 1787; A. Brunetti, Florence, carn. 1788
L'arbore di Diana (dg), Martín y Soler, Vienna, 1 Oct 1787
Il dissoluto punito, o sia Il Don Giovanni (dg, after Bertati lib for Gazzaniga: Don Giovanni Tenorio, o sia Il convitato di pietra), Mozart, Prague, 29 Oct 1787
Axur re d'Ormus (dramma tragi-comico, after Beaumarchais lib for Salieri: Tarare), Salieri, Vienna, 8 Jan 1788
Il talismano [rev. of Goldoni lib for Salieri], Vienna, 10 Sept 1788
Il pastor fido (dramma tragicomico, after B. Guarini), Salieri, Vienna, 11 Feb 1789
L'ape musicale (commedia per musica, after ?Goldoni), Vienna, 27 Feb 1789 [pasticcio incl. music by Anfossi, Cimarosa, Gassmann, Gazzaniga, Giordani, Martín y Soler, Mombelli, Mozart, Paisiello, Piccinni, Salieri, Tarchi]
La cifra (dg, after G. Petrosellini lib for Salieri: La dama pastorella), Salieri, Vienna, 11 Dec 1789
Così fan tutte, o sia La scuola degli amanti (dg), Mozart, Vienna, 26 Jan 1790
Nina, o sia La pazza per amore [rev. of G. Carpani lib for Paisiello], Vienna, 13 April 1790, addl items by Weigl
La quacquera (quakera) spiritosa [rev. of G. Palomba lib for P.A. Guglielmi], Vienna, 13 Aug 1790
La caffettiera bizzarra (dg, after Goldoni), Weigl, Vienna, 15 Sept 1790
Il pasticcio (dg, Act 1 after L'arbore di Diana, Act 2 after rev. of Bertati lib for Anfossi: Il trionfo delle donne), Udine, sum. 1791
Il matrimonio segreto [rev. of Bertati lib for Cimarosa], London, 11 Jan 1794
I contadini bizzarri [rev. of T. Grandi lib for Sarti: Le gelosie villane], London 1 Feb 1794, addl items by Paisiello
Il capriccio drammatico [rev. of G.M. Diodati lib for Cimarosa: L'impresario in angustie], London, 1 March 1794
Il Don Giovanni [rev. of Bertati lib for Gazzaniga], London, 1 March 1794, addl items by Sarti, Federici and Guglielmi
La bella pescatrice [rev. of F.S. Zini lib for P.A. Guglielmi], London, 18 March 1794
La prova dell'opera, London, 1 April 1794 [pasticcio with music by ?Cimarosa]
La Semiramide [rev. of Moretti lib for F. Bianchi: La vendetta di Nino], London, 26 April 1794
La Frascatana [rev. of F. Livigni lib for Paisiello], London, 5 June 1794
La scuola de' maritati (La capricciosa corretta, I sposi in contrasto, La moglie corretta) (comic op), Martín y Soler, London, 27 Jan 1795
Alceste, o sia Il trionfo dell'amore conjugale [rev. of R. de' Calzabigi lib for Gluck], London, 30 April 1795
L'isola del piacere, or The Island of Pleasure (comic op, after Bertati lib for Lucchesi: L'isola della fortuna), Martín y Soler, London, 26 May 1795
Le nozze dei contadini spagnuoli (int), Martín y Soler, London, 28 May 1795
La bella Arsene [trans. of C.-S. Favart lib for Monsigny], addl items by Mazzinghi, London, 12 Dec 1795
Antigona (os, ? after M. Coltellini), Bianchi, London, 24 May 1796
Il tesoro (ob), Mazzinghi, London, 14 June 1796
Zemira e Azor [trans. of J.-F. Marmontel lib for Grétry], London, 23 July 1796
Il consiglio imprudente (ob, after Goldoni: Un curioso accidente), Bianchi, London, 20 Dec 1796
Evelina, or The Triumph of the English over the Romans [trans. of Guillard lib for Sacchini: Arvire et Eveline], London, 10 Jan 1797
Merope (os, after Voltaire), Bianchi, London, 10 June 1797
Cinna (os, ? after A. Anelli), Bianchi, London, 20 Feb 1798
Angelina, ossia Il matrimonio per susurro [rev. of C.P. Defranceschi lib for Salieri: Angiolina], London, 29 Dec 1801
Armida (os), Bianchi, London, 1 June 1802
La grotta di Calipso (dramma), Winter, London, 31 May 1803
Castor e Polluce, o Il trionfo dell'amor fraterno, or The Triumph of Fraternal Love (os), Winter, London, 22 March 1804
Il ratto di Proserpina, or The Rape of Proserpine (os), Winter, London, 3 May 1804

OTHER TEXTS

Il sogno (cant.), Martín y Soler, 1787; Il sacrifizio di Jefte [? Jefte (orat), Sacchini, 1788]; I voti della nazione napolitana (cant.), Piticchio, 1791; Flora e Minerva (cant.), Weigl, 1791; Il Davide (orat), 1791; La vittoria (cant.), ?Paisiello, 1794; Six Italian Canzonetts, Martín y Soler (Edinburgh, ?1795); Le nozze del Tamigi e Bellona (cant., for naval victory of 14 Feb 1797, originally for wedding of Prince of Wales), Bianchi, 1797

Lost: Per la ricuperata salute da Ophelia, Salieri, Mozart, Cornet, Vienna, 1785; Il ritorno felice, Vienna; Eco e Narciso, London; Il disinganno de' morti, London

WRITINGS

Storia compendiosa della vita di Lorenzo da Ponte scritta da lui medesimo a cui si aggiunge la prima letteraria conversazione tenuta in sua casa, il giorno 10 di marzo dell'anno 1807, in New York, consistenti in alcuni composizioni italiane … tradotto in inglese dai suoi allievi (New York, 1807)
An Extract from the Life of Lorenzo da Ponte with the History of Several Dramas Written by him, and among Others, il Figaro, il Don Giovanni and La scuola degli amanti, Set to Music by Mozart (New York,1819; It. trans., ed. M. Siniscalchi and F. Ricci, 1989)

Memorie di Lorenzo da Ponte da Ceneda scritte da esso (New York, 1823–7, enlarged 2/1829–30); ed. C. Pagnini (Milan, 1971); Eng. trans., ed. L.A. Sheppard (London,1929), ed. A. Livingston and E. Abbott (Philadelphia, 1929/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBI (G. Scarabello); ES (F. d'Amico); SartoriL
G. Casanova: Mémoires(Leipzig, 1826–38); ed. R. Vèze (Paris, 1924–35)
M. Kelly: Reminiscences(London, 1826, 2/1826/*R*1968 with introduction by A.H. King); ed. R. Fiske (London, 1975)
J. Bernardi: Cenni storici intorno la chiesa e diocesi di Ceneda (Ceneda, 1842)
E. Masi: L'Abbate L. da Ponte (Bologna, 1881)
A. Marchesan: Della vita e delle opere di Lorenzo da Ponte (Treviso, 1900)
E.J. Dent: Mozart's Operas: a Critical Study (London, 1913, 2/1947, 3/1955)
H. Boas: 'Lorenzo da Ponte als Wiener Theaterdichter', SIMG, xv (1913–14), 325–38
P. Molmenti, ed.: Carteggi casanoviani (Milan, 1917–19)
H. Abert: W.A. Mozart (Leipzig, 1919–21, 3/1955–6)
R. Payer von Thurn: Joseph II als Theaterdirektor: ungedruckte Briefe und Aktenstücke aus den Kinderjahren des Burgtheaters (Vienna, 1920)
J.L. Russo: Lorenzo da Ponte: Poet and Adventurer (New York, 1922)
G. Gugitz: Denkwürdigkeiten des Venezianers Lorenzo da Ponte (Dresden, 1924) [incl. detailed list of writings]
A. Livingston: Da Ponte in America (Philadelphia, 1930)
F. Nicolino: 'La vera ragione della fuga di Lorenzo da Ponte da Venezia', Archivio storico italiano, 7th ser., xiv (1930), 129–38
C. Pagnini: Lorenzo da Ponte e il contribuito di Trieste alla propaganda italiana in America (Parenzo, 1934)
A. Loewenberg: 'Lorenzo da Ponte in London: a Bibliographical Account of his Literary Activity, 1793–1804', MR iv (1943), 171–89
H.R. Marraro: 'Documents on Da Ponte's Italian Library', Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, lviii (1943), 1057–72
D. Rossetti: Scritti inediti pubblicati dal Municipio di Trieste, ii: Epistolario, ed. C. Pagnini (Udine, 1944)
P.S. Orsi: 'Il bando da Venezia di Lorenzo da Ponte', Ateneo veneto, cxxxvi/2 (1952), 129–31
F. Gaeta: 'Un ignorato episodio della vita dell'abate Lorenzo da Ponte', Giornale storico della letteratura italiana, cxxxi (1954), 195–208
P. Nettl: 'Frühe Mozartpflege in Amerika', MJb 1954, 78–88
A. Fitzlyon: The Libertine Librettist: a Biography of Mozart's Librettist Lorenzo da Ponte (London, 1955/*R*1982 as Lorenzo da Ponte: a Biography of Mozart's Librettist)
W.C. Smith: The Italian Opera and Contemporary Ballet in London 1789–1820: a Record of Performances and Players with Reports from the Journals of the Time (London, 1955)
W. Freitag: 'Lorenzo da Ponte in Amerika', Musica, xiv (1960), 560–65
C. Pagnini: Bibliografia Dapontiana (Trieste, 1960)
O. Michtner: 'Der Fall Abbe da Ponte', Mitteilungen des Österreichischen Staatsarchivs, xix (Vienna, 1966), 170–209
A. Rosenberg: Don Giovanni: Don Juans Gestalt und Mozarts Oper (Munich, 1968)
O. Michtner: Das alte Burgtheater als Opernbühne: von der Einführung des deutschen Singspiels (1778) bis zum Tod Kaiser Leopolds II. (1792) (Vienna, 1970)
S. Kunze: Don Giovanni vor Mozart: die Tradition der Don-Giovanni-Opern im italienischen Buffa-Theater des 18. Jahrhunderts (Munich, 1972)
D. Goldin: 'Mozart, Da Ponte e il linguaggio dell'opera buffa', Venezia e il melodramma nel Settecento: Venice 1973–5, ii, 213–77
S. Kunze: 'Elementi veneziani nella librettistica di Lorenzo da Ponte', ibid., 279–92
L. Zorzi: '"Teatralità" di Lorenzo da Ponte tra Memorie e libretti d'opera', ibid., 313–21
F. Petty: Italian Opera in London, 1760–1800 (Ann Arbor, 1980)
B. Brophy: 'Da Ponte and Mozart', MT, cxxii (1981), 454–6
D. Goldin: 'Da Ponte librettista fra Goldoni e Casti', Giornale storico della letteratura italiana, clviii (1981), 396–408
D. Goldin: 'Aspetti della librettistica italiana fra 1770 e 1830', AnMc, no.21 (1982), 128–91
D. Goldin: La vera Fenice: libretti e librettisti tra Sette e Ottocento (Turin, 1985)
S. Hodges: Lorenzo da Ponte: the Life and Times of Mozart's Librettist (London, 1985) [incl. detailed list of writings]
T. Carter: W.A. Mozart 'Le nozze di Figaro' (Cambridge, 1987)
P. Gallarati: 'Rifacimento e parodia ni libretti viennesi di Lorenzo Da Ponte', Lorenzo Da Ponte, librettista di Mozart: New York 1988, 237–45
M. Maymome Siniscalchi: L'ape musicale di Lorenzo Da Ponte (Rome, 1988)
A. Steptoe: The Mozart-Da Ponte Operas: the Cultural and Musical Background to 'Le nozze di Figaro', 'Don Giovanni', and 'Così fan tutte'(Oxford, 1988)
F. Fido: 'Da Ponte dei libretti o da Ponte dei libri?', Revista di letterature moderne e comparate, xlii (1989), 235–52
D. Heartz: 'The Poet as Stage Designer: Metastasio, Goldoni, and Da Ponte', Mozart's Operas, ed. T. Bauman (Berkeley, 1990), 89–105
A. Lanapoppi: Un certain Da Ponte, Fr. trans., ed. D. Authier (Paris, 1991; Ital. orig., Venice, 1992; as Lorenzo Da Ponte: Realtà e leggenda nella vita del librettista di Mozart)
D. Link: The Da Ponte Operas of Vicente Martín y Soler (diss., U. of Toronto, 1991)
P. Gallarati: 'I libretti non mozartiani di Lorenzo da Ponte (1784–1789)', Zwischen Opera buffa und Melodramma: Italienische Oper im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert, ed. J. Maehder and J. Stenzl (Frankfurt, 1994), 99–118
R. Angermüller: 'Anti-da Ponte', Mitteilungen der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum, xliii (1995), 1–49
B.A. Brown: W.A. Mozart 'Così fan tutte' (Cambridge, 1995)
D. Link: 'L'arbore di Diana: A Model for Così fan tutte', Wolfgang Amadè Mozart: Essays on his Life and Work, ed. S. Sadie (Oxford, 1996), 362–73
D. Link: 'Vienna's Private Theatrical and Musical Life, 1783–92, as reported by Count Karl Zinzendorf', JRMA, cxxii (1997), 205–57
D. Link: The National Court Theatre in Mozart's Vienna: Sources and Documents 1783–1792(Oxford, 1998)
L. della Chà, ed.: Libretti viennesi (Parma, 1999)

TIM CARTER (with DOROTHEA LINK)

Daquin [Dacquin, D'Acquin, D'Aquin], Louis-Claude (b Paris, 4 July 1694; d Paris, 15 June 1772). French organist, harpsichordist and composer. Descended from a family of intellectuals of Jewish origin, the son of Claude Daquin and Anne Treisant, Louis-Claude was an infant prodigy. After taking some harpsichord lessons from his godmother Elisabeth Jacquet de la Guerre, and composition lessons from Nicolas Bernier, he was capable of playing before Louis XIV at the age of six and of conducting his own Beatus vir in the Sainte-Chapelle at the age of eight. In 1706 he was appointed organist at the convent of Petit St Antoine and was able to play on the organ of the Sainte-Chapelle. On 12 July 1722 he married Denise-Thérèse Quirot; they had only one child, Pierre-Louis D'Aquin de Châteaulion (*c*1722–97), whose Lettres trace the brilliant career of a father greatly admired by Parisian society. Louis-Claude's marriage contract tells us that at the time he was ordinaire de la musique to Louis-Armand II de Bourbon, the Prince de Conti, and he probably remained in that position until 1727. He gained the post of organist at St Paul on 28 April 1727, in competition with Rameau, and in 1732 succeeded his former teacher Louis Marchand as organist of the Cordeliers. On 1 April 1739, at the height of his career, Daquin was appointed, without competition, to succeed Jean-François Dandrieu as organist of the Chapelle Royale. On the death of Antoine Calvière in 1755 he also obtained one of the four positions of organist at Notre Dame. Besides holding these glittering appointments as organist, Daquin several times played the organ in the Palais des Tuileries (the home of the Concert Spirituel), performing there in 1749 and between 1751 and 1754. He also had two divertissements played at the Concerts Français in 1728 and 1729. In 1770 Daquin resigned from his post at the Chapelle Royale in favour of Armand-Louis Couperin; the reason is not known, but perhaps he was already affected by the illness which was to cause his death.

Daquin was the best virtuoso improviser of his generation, and his published works give only a faint idea of his art. His most elaborate work is the Livre de pièces de clavecin (printed twice, in January 1735 and in 1739). Although some of the pieces (such as L'hirondelle) are more or less direct imitations of François Couperin (ii), most of them display great originality: the Trois cadances, in almost perfect sonata form, owes its title to the triple trill which Daquin was the first in France to use, and Le coucoû is an example of his taste for the single melodic unit which he repeats throughout the piece instead of developing its thematic possibilities. Except for the gavotte in the Plaisirs de la chasse, Daquin's pieces hardly seem to have been influenced at all by Rameau's. The Nouveau livre de noëls, published in November 1757, is the fruit of many improvisations, and although it is certainly the best and longest of its genre in this period, it remains the organist's most impersonal work. The twelve noëls follow the structure traditional since Gigault (1683), Lebègue (1685) and Raison (1714): the timbre is first enunciated without ornamentation (unless it is played en taille) and then followed by a series of diminutions before the piece ends in a majestic peroration. The absence of modulations is concealed by varied registration and spontaneity in the art of variation. Virtuosity (nos.3 and 5) goes side by side with charming passages of pastoral writing (nos.9 and 11). Amis, en ce festin, a duo à boire, is the only extant vocal work by Daquin.

WORKS

Premier livre de pièces, hpd (Paris, 1735); ed. J.H.A. Farrenc, Le trésor des pianistes, ix (Paris, 1869); ed. P. Brunold and H. Expert (Paris, 1926); ed. C. Hogwood (London, 1983)

Nouveau livre de noëls, org/hpd (Paris, 1757), most also for vns/fls/obs/other insts; ed. A. Guilmant and A. Pirro, Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, iii (Paris, 1901); ed. N. Dufourcq, F. Raugel and J. de Valois, Orgue et liturgie, xxvii–xxviii (Paris, *c*1925); ed. N. Dufourcq (Paris, 1955); ed. C. Hogwood (London, 1984)

La Rose, cant., 1v, bc (Paris, 1762), lost

Air à boire, in Ballard's Recueil (Paris, 1718); ed. F. Robert, Airs sérieux et à boire (Paris, 1968)

Vocal and instrumental music, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

La BordeE

P.-L. D'Aquin: Lettres sur les hommes célèbres du siècle de Louis XV (Amsterdam, 1752, 4/1755 as Le siècle de Louis XV)

'Eloge de M. d'Acquin', Le nécrologue des hommes célèbres de France (Paris, 1774), 191–203

J.-P. Montagnier: La vie et l'oeuvre de Louis-Claude Daquin (1694–1772) (Lyons, 1992)

J.-P. Montagnier: 'Les pièces de clavecin de Louis-Claude Daquin: leurs modèles chez François Couperin', L'orgue, no.233 (1995), 15–24

JEAN-PAUL MONTAGNIER

Darabukka [darbuka, darabuke, derbuga, derbukka common to many Arab musical traditions]. A single-headed goblet drum (fig.1). It is made from pottery, wood or metal; the bottom is open and the skin head is directly attached by nails, glue or binding. Traditionally the head of the drum was goatskin, although the skins of dogs and rams were also used. During the 20th century plastic heads became popular; these can be tuned with a key and retain their pitch regardless of temperature and humidity.

1. Darabukka (goblet drum)

The instrument is most frequently played held across the left knee and hip. The curved fingers of the left hand rest close to the rim and strike or are flicked across the edge of the head of the drum. The flat fingers of the right hand strike either the centre of the head, producing a deep note, or the edge, producing a higher pitch. These positions are reversed for left-handed players.

The origin of the term darabukka is somewhat obscure but probably lies in the Arabic word darba ('to strike'). Similar instruments are known by various (often onomatopoeic) names according to location and tradition, the most important being tombak or zarb (Iran), derbuga or derbukka (Morocco and Algeria) and darbuka, deblek or dümbelek (Turkey).

The darabukka is found in a range of sizes, particularly in North Africa, where several may be played together in ensembles (fig.2). Single instruments used to accompany groups of melodic instruments tend to be between 40 and 50 cm long; the diameter of the heads of such instruments is usually between 20 and 25 cm. The Turkish darbuka (usually of metal or pottery) is used principally in traditional ensembles to accompany dancing. The large Iranian tombak is carved from a solid block of wood, usually decorated with an inlay design, often ornate; it is the principal percussion instrument in a classical Persian music ensemble and is played by many classical musicians as a second instrument. Andalusian ensembles from Algeria and Morocco play a pottery derbuga in their traditional ensembles, and in Egypt the goblet drum of Nile boatmen and other traditional musicians is called the hoqa. The darabukka is also found in Albania and Bulgaria; in Albania it is known as the darabuke and is made of potter's clay, while in Bulgaria it is known as the tarambuka, tarabuka or darabuka. Other forms are found

2. Darabukka ensemble in an Algerian wedding band in Malaysia and Indonesia; these have a snakeskin head laced with split cane to a wooden body. On Sulawesi (formerly Celebes) one large form serves as a temple instrument, set on the ground when played: this is a survival of the original use of goblet drums in Babylonia and Sumeria from as early as 1100 BCE. The darabukka has been used in western European orchestral music by Ibert (Suite symphonique, 1932) and Orff (Prometheus, 1963–7).

See also ALGERIA, §1(i, iii); IRAN, §I–III; MOROCCO, §2(i); and TURKEY, §II, 4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. el-Dabh: The Derabucca (New York, 1965)
J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, rev. 4/1992)
S. Marcuse: A Survey of Musical Instruments (New York, 1975), 14
L. Picken: Folk Musical Instruments of Turkey (London, 1975), 115–28
J. Jenkins and P. Rovsing Olsen: Music and Musical Instruments in the World of Islam (London, 1976), 74
A. Aydoun: Musiques du Maroc (Casablanca, 1992)

WILLIAM J. CONNER, MILFIE HOWELL/TONY LANGLOIS

D'Arányi, Adila. See FACHIRI, ADILA.

Darasse, Xavier (b Toulouse, 3 Sept 1934; d Toulouse, 24 Nov 1992). French organist and composer. He studied first with his mother, who was organist of Toulouse Cathedral, then at the Paris Conservatoire with Duruflé (harmony), Plé-Caussade (counterpoint and fugue), Falcinelli (organ and improvisation), Rivier (composition) and, most influentially, Messiaen (analysis). In 1962 he joined the radio station France Musique as a producer, and in 1963 won second prize in the Prix de Rome; he was appointed professor of organ and composition at Toulouse Conservatoire in 1965. During this period he gave many recital tours in Europe and the USA. In 1976, as director of music at the Centre Culturel in Toulouse, he founded an organ competition, a festival and a summer school. That year a serious road accident deprived him of the use of his right arm, and he subsequently devoted himself to composition and teaching, giving masterclasses in Europe, Japan and the USA. He was appointed professor of organ at Lyons Conservatoire in 1985, and director of the Paris Conservatoire in 1991. As a performer, Darasse specialized in contemporary repertory, and gave the first performance of works by Pablo, Chaynes, Ligeti, Xenakis and others. He also played music by early Baroque composers, notably Sweelinck, and as a member of the Commission Supérieure des Orgues Historiques presided over the rebuilding of several historic instruments. He contributed several articles to Guide de la musique d'orgue (ed. G. Cantagrel, Paris, 1991).

WORKS
(selective list)

Organum I, org, 1970; Organum VIII 'In memoriam Jean-Pierre Guézac', org, 2 tpt, trbn, hn, tuba, perc, 1972; Messe des Jacobins, audience, chorus, brass, perc, 1974; Organum II, org, 1978; Str Trio, 1981; Organum IV, org, perc, 1981; Organum V, org, 1983; A propos d'Orphée, 16vv, perc, 1984; Septembre, str sextet, 1988; Organum VII (Dante), S, org, 1989; Organum IX, org, 1991

Principal publisher: Salabert

GILLES CANTAGREL

Darbellay, Etienne (b Lausanne, 14 Oct 1946). Swiss musicologist. After studying at the Geneva Conservatory with André Perret, Louis Bronarski and Ervin Laszlo, gaining the prize for piano virtuosity in 1968, he studied musicology and philosophy at the University of Fribourg. In 1971 under the supervision of Tagliavini he obtained the doctorate with a critical edition of Frescobaldi's two volumes of Toccate. He was a research assistant at the University of Fribourg from 1972 to 1979. Concurrently he taught at the Geneva Conservatory (1975–9) and was lecturer in the musicology department at the University of Geneva (1976–81), where he later became director of research (1985–8) and professor (from 1988). He also held posts as assistant professor (1979) and full professor (1983–5) of musicology at Laval University, Quebec. He has been a visiting professor at a number of institutions including the McGill University in Montréal (1985), the University of Fribourg (1990–91) and the Paris Ecole Normale Supérieure (1991–2, 1996). His principal areas of research are the history and theory of music of the Renaissance and Baroque periods, particularly the theory and practice of the tactus, tempo, proportion, and the history of mensural notation. He has in addition examined the technique and procedure of producing musical editions and has developed computer software for this purpose. Other areas of interest include the keyboard repertory in Italy during the 17th century, particularly the work of Frescobaldi, and the philosophy of the perception of time in music.

WRITINGS

Primo et secondo libro des toccate de Girolamo Frescobaldi, édition critique: en marge des deux livres de toccate de Girolamo Frescobaldi, étude de style (diss., U. of Fribourg, 1971)
'Peut-on découvrir des indications d'articulation musicale dans la graphie des tablatures de clavier de Claudio Merulo, Girolamo Frescobaldi et Michel-Angelo Rossi?', IMSCR XI: Copenhagen 1972, 342–50
'Liberté, variété et "affetti cantabili" chez Girolamo Frescobaldi', RdM, lxi (1975), 197–243
'Un manuscrit frescobaldien à Genève', L'organo, xiii (1975), 49–69
'Giovanni Henrico Albicastro alias Heinrich Weissenburg un compositeur suisse au tournant des XVIIe et XVIIIe siècles', SMz, cxvi (1976), 1–11, 448–9
'La musique à la cour de Maximilien I (1459–1519)', SMz, cxviii (1978), 1–10
'Originalité ou épigonalité: les 15 sonates pour pianoforte de Ferdinand Ries (1784–1838)', Schweizer Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, iv (1980), 51–101
'L'énigme de la première édition (1624) des capricci de Girolamo Frescobaldi', Canadian University Music Review, iii (1982), 123–57
'I manoscritti Chigi Q.IV.24 e Q.VIII.205/206 come fonti frescobaldiane: criteri filogici di autenticità', 'Le cento partite di Frescobaldi: metro, tempo e processo di composizione 1627–1637', Girolamo Frescobaldi: Ferrara 1983, 107–24, 361–74
'Tempo Relationships in Frescobaldi's Primo Libro di Capricci', Frescobaldi Studies: Madison, WI, 1983, 301–26
'L'Esemplare du Padre Martini: une exégèse musicologique moderne du stile osservato?', Padre Martini: Bologna 1984, 137–71
'C.P.E. Bach's Aesthetic as Reflected in his Notation', C.P.E. Bach Studies, ed. S.L. Clark (Oxford, 1988), 43–63
'Une lecture de ". . .wie die Zeit vergeht. . ." de Stockhausen', Karlheinz Stockhausen, Contrechamps, no.9 (1988), 143–68
ed., with P. Albèra: Composition et perception: Geneva 1987 [Contrechamps, no.10 (1989)] [incl. 'La question musicale du XXe siècle', 5–11]
'Mesure et démesure du tempo dans le stile fantastico frescobaldien', Le mouvement en musique à l'époque baroque: Metz 1994, 189–208
'Bruits et tautologies: réflexions sur l'analyse musicale', Equinoxe, no.14 (1995), 67–79
'Continuité, cohérence et formes de temps: à propos des Night Fantasies d'Elliott Carter', Saggiatore musicale, ii (1995), 297–327
'Forme, temps et mémoire: l'intrigue comme modèle d'unité chez Girolamo Frescobaldi', Musicus perfectus: studi in onore di Luigi Ferdinando Tagliavini, ed. P. Pellizzari (Bologna, 1995), 201–36

ed.: Le temps et la forme: pour une épistémologie de la connaissance musicale: Geneva 1995 [incl. 'Les masques du temps', 191–219]
'L'espace des perspectives chez Domenico Scarlatti et Giambattista Tiepolo', Echos de France et d'Italie: liber amicorum Yves Gérard, ed. J.-M. Nectoux, M.-C. Mussat and J. Mongrédien (Paris, 1997), 329–47

EDITIONS

Girolamo Frescobaldi: Opere complete, ii: Il primo libro di toccate d'intavolatura di cembalo e organo, 1615–1637, Monumenti musicali italiani, iv (Milan, 1977), iii: Il secondo libro di toccate d'intavolatura di cembalo e organo, 1627–1637, Monumenti musicali italiani, v (Milan, 1979); iv: Il primo libro di capricci fatti sopra diversi soggetti et arie (1624), Monumenti musicali italiani, viii (Milan, 1984); Il primo libro di canzoni . . . 1628 et 1634, Monumenti musicali italiani (forthcoming)
Le toccate e i capricci di Girolamo Frescobaldi (Milan, 1988) [suppl. to vols.ii, iii and iv of Girolamo Frescobaldi: Opere complete]
Girolamo Frescobaldi: 'Fioretti e Sonate': canzoni, toccate, partite, capricci e ricercari per cembalo e organo (Londres, MS Add.40080 - Rome, MS Chigi Q.IV.25) (Geneva, 1996)

□

D'Arcais, Francesco, Marquis of Valverde (b Cagliari, 15 Dec 1830; d Castel Gandolfo, 14 Aug 1890). Italian critic and composer. In 1853 he became music critic for the Rivista contemporanea of Turin and of L'opinione in Rome, with which he was associated for 36 years; he also wrote for the Gazzetta musicale di Milano and other periodicals. Originally hostile to Wagner and Boito, he came to admire both. He joined a 'league of orthography' which was directed against the claques then powerful in the Rome theatres and which upheld an ideal of the theatre as 'art'. He composed vocal and dramatic music, including three comic operas: I due precettori (Turin, Rossini, 1858), Sganarello (Milan, Re, 1861) and La guerra d'amore (Florence, Niccolini, 7 December 1870).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchmidlD
A. De Angelis: 'Il marchese d'Arcais', Musica d'oggi, vii (1925), 347–51 [with additional bibliography]
A. Della Corte: La critica musicale e i critici (Turin, 1961)
G. Pestelli: 'Beethoven a Torino e in Piemonte nell'Ottocento', NRMI, iv (1970), 1013–86
S. Martinotti: Ottocento strumentale italiano (Bologna, 1972)

SERGIO MARTINOTTI

Darcis [d'Arcis, d'Arcy], François-Joseph (b Vienna, 1759–60; d ?Moscow, *c*1783). French composer. He was so precocious that his parents, a French actor-singer in the Opéra-Comique troupe at Vienna and his German wife, were encouraged to try 'to write the second volume of the young Mozart' (Grimm). He was brought to Paris about 1769, exhibited at court to Mme Adélaïde and the Duke of Chartres (whose protection was acknowledged in the dedications of his first two publications), and entrusted to the tutelage of Grétry, who was persuaded to take him on as his first student by the sight of the nine-year-old boy, pulled away from the piano by his younger brother and sobbing on the floor, clutching his pen and still committing precious music to paper. In April 1771 he had a prodigy's triumph at the Concert Spirituel, playing a concerto by J.C. Bach and pieces by Schobert and Wagenseil. His first stage work, Le bal masqué, a one-act opéra comique, was given in 1772 before the royal family at Versailles; Grimm (or Diderot), who heard it at the Comédie-Italienne, said that 'the music . . . by a 12-year-old scamp named Darcis . . . is pitiable from start to finish . . . Not the shadow of talent . . . He could spend 20 years with Grétry and would come out as inept as he went in'. The public liked it well enough to support a run of six performances and a revival. A one-act comédie, La fausse peur, which opened in 1774, had more success: the Mercure de France (October 1774) called the airs 'agreeable and effective; the piece has action and humour that give it appeal in the provinces'.

By the time it was revived, in 1778, his parents had sent him to Russia on the advice of the police (Grétry). 'His passions were a continual storm', according to Grétry; 'he loved women, and they liked him, for besides his talents he had a charming face'. In 1778 L'intendant, on a Russian libretto by N. Nikolev, was given at the Grand Theatre in Moscow: it was a brilliant success, and there are records of performances for 21 years, rare for a Russian comic opera of the period. However, Darcis' outbursts included a suicide threat if Grétry should cut him off, and he made good on his threat for unknown reasons in Russia, according to a report there (Mooser). The story that filtered back to Grétry was that he was killed in a duel.

The style of Darcis' ariettes is hardly different from that of his sonatas, and both are very like those of the young Mozart. The writing is mostly in two parts, the accompaniments to formula, the phrases clear and symmetrical with little contrast. His first book of keyboard sonatas already suggests the resources of a piano, and the Quintetto is the first work by a Frenchman to cite only that instrument on the title page.

WORKS

all printed works published in Paris

STAGE

Le bal masqué (oc, 1, B.-J. Marsollier des Vivetières), Versailles, 31 March 1772, F-Pc, Ariettes détachés du Bal masqué (n.d.)
La fausse peur (comédie with ariettes, 1, Marsollier des Vivetières), Paris, Comédie-Italienne, 18 July 1774 (engraved after Oct 1774), excerpts pubd separately
L'intendant (comédie with ariettes, 1, N. Nikolev), Moscow, Grand, July 1778, lost [orig. in Russian; mentioned in MooserA]

OTHER WORKS

Chbr: Quintetto concertant, pf, acc. vn, va, bn, b (1776)
Kbd: 6 sonates, hpd/pf, [op.1] (*c*1770); 6 sonates, hpd/pf, vn ad lib, op.2 (1773); Petits airs de Lucile [Grétry] et de Julie [Dezède], variations, hpd, op.3 (1773)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBF (M. Briquet); FétisB; MooserA
A.E.M. Grétry: Mémoires, ou Essai sur la musique (Paris, 1789, enlarged 2/1797/R), 382ff
F.M. von Grimm: Correspondance littéraire, philosophique et critique (Paris, 1812–14); complete edn, ed. M. Tourneux (Paris, 1877–82/R), ix, 481–2
B. Gustafson and D. Fuller: A Catalogue of French Harpsichord Music, 1699–1780 (Oxford, 1990)

DAVID FULLER/BRUCE GUSTAFSON

Darclée [Haricly, de Hartulary], Hariclea (b Brăila, 10 June 1860; d Bucharest, 10 or 12 Jan 1939). Romanian soprano. She studied in Paris with Jean-Baptiste Faure, and in 1888 made her début at the Opéra in Faust. In 1890 she scored a great success at La Scala in Massenet's Le Cid, and was immediately engaged by all the leading Italian theatres. Between 1893 and 1910 she appeared frequently in Moscow, St Petersburg, Lisbon, Barcelona, Madrid and Buenos Aires; she returned several times to La Scala, where in 1892 she created the title role in Catalani's La Wally, and to the Costanzi in Rome, where she sang in the first performances of Tosca and Mascagni's Iris. Her repertory ranged from the coloratura soprano roles (Gilda, Ophelia) to the dramatic falcon or heavier Verdi roles (Valentine, Aida), including many others in the Franco-Italian lyric repertory: Violetta, Desdemona, Manon, Manon Lescaut, Mimì and Santuzza.

Hariclea Darclée in the title role of Puccini's 'Tosca'

Among Darclée's exceptional qualities were power, tonal beauty, evenness, agility and an excellent technique. She was extremely handsome, with a stage presence as elegant as her vocal line. A certain coldness of temperament, however, diminished her conviction in the verismo repertory. She sang until 1918, when she appeared in Roméo et Juliette at the Teatro Lirico, Milan.

Darclée's son, the composer Ion Hartulary-Darclée (b Paris, 7 July 1886; d Bucharest, 2 April 1969), was known particularly as a writer of operettas.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (R. Celletti); GV (R. Celletti; R. Vegeto)
G. Sbârcea and I.Hartulary-Darclée: Darclée (Bucharest, 1972)

RODOLFO CELLETTI/VALERIA PREGLIASCO GUALERZI

Dardespin, Melchior. See ARDESPIN, MELCHIOR D'.

Dare, Phyllis [Dones, Phyllis Haddie] (b London, 15 Aug 1890; d Brighton, 27 April 1975). English soprano. After a precocious beginning as a schoolgirl in Bluebell in Fairyland at the Vaudeville Theatre (1901), she went on to make her name in The Belle of Mayfair at the same theatre (1906), replacing its original star, Edna May, who left abruptly after a dispute with the management. Dare subsequently also took over from Gertie Millar in The Quaker Girl, but her biggest success was in The Arcadians (1909), the most popular English musical of the pre-War era. In this she introduced the song 'The Girl with a Brogue', demonstrating that she could project her personality as well as do justice to the music. Although she sang in American musicals, most notably in Kern's Music in the Air (1934), she was happiest in English shows, however Ruritanian the setting, and was brought back from retirement to play the king's mistress in Ivor Novello's King's Rhapsody (1949). Largely a speaking role, her one number was the comic song 'The Mayor of Perpignan'. Her sister, Zena (1887–1975), was also an early star of musical comedy – they had both been pin-up girls during World War I – and she also appeared in King's Rhapsody, as the king's mother. Both sisters were given the honour of a place in the tribute list of Edwardian stars in 'Vitality', sung by Cicely Courtneidge in Novello's last musical, Gay's the Word (1951).

PAUL WEBB

Darewski, Herman(n E.) (b Minsk, 17 April 1883; d London, 2 June 1947). British composer and bandleader. His father, Eduard Darewski, was a Polish singing professor. Herman Darewski was educated in London and studied music in Vienna (1897–1900). After his first successful songs he joined the publishers Francis, Day & Hunter (1906), for whom he wrote music hall, pantomime and musical comedy songs, including Sister Susie's sewing shirts for soldiers (1914). He composed a series of successful revues, his style concentrating on light, undemanding and rhythmically engaging songs. In 1919 he formed a publishing company, which was short-lived, and a successful band in the style of the American dance bands then in vogue. He became musical director at the resorts of Bridlington (1924–6, 1933–9) and Blackpool (1927–30) and at a London cinema (1930–32). His brother Max Darewski (1894–1929) was a child prodigy composer and conductor and a pianist and composer for revues in London.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage (all in London): The Chorus Girl (1, H. Grattan), Palladium, 20 July 1914; Rosy Rapture, the Pride of the Beauty Chorus (burlesque, 7 scenes, J.M. Barrie and F.W. Mark [E.V. Lucas]), Duke of York's, 22 March 1915, collab. J. Kern; The Better 'Ole (fragment from France, two explosions, seven splinters and a gas attack, B. Bairnsfather, A. Eliot and J. Heard), Oxford Theatre, 4 Aug 1917; Flora (comedy with music, 3, H. Grattan, D. Burnaby and J. Heard), Prince of Wales's, 12 March 1918, collab. M. Gideon

Jolly Jack Tar (musical nautical drama, prol, 2, S. Hicks, A. Shirley, Burnaby, Heard and J.P. Harrington), Prince's, 29 Nov 1918; The Eclipse (farce, 3, F. Thompson, E. Phillips Oppenheim and A. Ross), Garrick, 12 Nov 1919 [addl. music by Gideon]; Oh! Julie (musical comedy, 3, F. Shephard, L. Banson and H. Simpson), Shaftesbury, 22 June 1920, collab. H. Sullivan Brooke; Listening In (W. David and W. Hay), Apollo, 31 July 1922

Contribs. to revues, incl. Mind Your Backs, 1913; Push and Go, 1915; Joyland, 1915; Razzle Dazzle, 1916; Carminetta, 1917; Buzz-Buzz, 1918; As You Were, 1918; Just Fancy!, 1920

Many songs, incl. Au revoir, my little Hyacinth (A.E. Sidney Davis) (1906); In the Twi-Twi-Twilight (C. Wilmott) (1907); Sue, Sue, Sue (L. Barrett) (1908); I used to sigh for the silv'ry moon (Barrett) (1909); Mamie May (Barrett) (1911); Make me the king of your heart (H. Trevor) (1914); My Brown-Eyed Loo (Barrett) (1914); Sister Susie's sewing shirts for soldiers (R.P. Weston) (1914); Which switch is the switch, Miss, for Ipswich? (W. David) (1915)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GänzlEMT
H.E. Darewski: Musical Memories (London, 1937)

ANDREW LAMB

Dargason [Sedany]. An eight-bar 'circular' tune (having no conclusion on the key-note) which has lent itself to combination with others, as in the three-men song 'Oft have I ridden' in Ravenscroft's Pammelia (1609) and the ostinato movement of Holst's St Paul's Suite (1913). As an instrumental piece it occurs in Dowland's lute manuscripts (GB-Cu D.d.2.11, D.d.3.18, D.d.4.23, D.d.9.33, D.d.14.24), in Playford's New Lessons for Gittern (1652), in his Dancing Master (1651, 8/1690; ed. C. Sharp, Country Dance, ii, 1911), where it is allied to the dance 'Sedany', in Edward Jones's Musical Relicks of the Welsh Bards (1784) as 'Melody of Cynwyd', in the Journal of the Welsh Folk-Song Society, i/3 (1911), p.115, as 'Sidanen', and in Holst's Second Military Band Suite op.28 (1911). Dargason was known as a ballad tune in the early 16th century: 'The mery ballet of the Hawthorne Tre' (GB-Lbl Cotton, Vespasian A25; published in Ritson's Ancient Songs, 1790) is to be 'songe after "Donkin Dargason"', and similarly 'Shropshire Wakes' (in Ob Douce, Ballads, f.207, and Cmc Pepys).

According to Chappell, it appears that the word 'dargason', perhaps derived from Anglo-Saxon duergar ('dwarf', 'fairy'), is a personal name occurring in an unidentified romance (hence 'Donkin Dargason'), and is used to signify fairyland in John Day's Isle of Gulls (1606) and Ben Jonson's Tale of a Tub (1633). Sidanen (Welsh: 'silken') is a Tudor epithet for a fine woman; the dance 'Sedany', as described by Playford, like its tune, proceeds ad infinitum.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Percy: Reliques of Ancient English Poetry (London, 1765); ed. H.B. Wheatley (London, 1886) [Note to 'Come follow me']

W. Chappell: Popular Music of the Olden Time (London, 1855–9, rev. 2/1893/R by H.E. Wooldridge as Old English Popular Music)

W.W. Skeat: Glossary of Tudor and Stuart Words, ed. A. Mayhew (Oxford, 1891)

MARGARET DEAN-SMITH

D'Argentille, Charles. See CHARLES D'ARGENTILLE.

Dargies, Gautier de. See GAUTIER DE DARGIES.

D'Argillières [Dargillières, Desargillières]. French family of organ builders and organists. They were based in Paris and played an important part in the development of French Renaissance organ building.

(1) Antoine d'Argillières (b before 1515; d Paris, 1572). He was employed by the Parisian firm of Pierre Dugué, whose daughter he married in 1534. He had eight children of whom five became organ builders. He worked under the supervision of the master organ builder Crinon on the organ at the Ste Chapelle, and succeeded him as 'facteur des orgues des chapelles du Roi' in 1553. He built instruments at St Gervais, St Jean-en-Grève and Ste Geneviève-des-Ardents, all in Paris. His organs outside Paris show little influence of the Flemish style of organ building.

(2) Gabriel d'Argillières (*b c*1535; d Paris, 1585). Son of (1) Antoine d'Argillières. He was trained by his father, and then worked for Josse Lebel and finally for Josseline in Rouen. He worked in a number of French towns. In 1559 he built the organ at Sarcelles, near Paris, and at Ste Madeleine-de-la-Cité, the Hôtel-Dieu and St Pierre-des-Arcis (all in Paris). His work in Paris consists of small instruments that show the Italian influence that was being introduced at the time.

(3) Jean d'Argillières (*b c*1540; d Normandy, 1588). Second son of (1) Antoine d'Argillières. Trained by his father, he worked for Nicolas Dabenet, with whom he worked on the organ at Notre Dame. He succeeded his father in the service of the king and also had a partnership with Jean de Segré. In 1576 Dabenet offered him a position succeeding him in Normandy and he settled in Rouen. His instruments in that area included organs at St Michel in Rouen, Notre Dame in Le Havre, Fécamp and Montivilliers (1587).

(4) Roch [Roul, Paul] d'Argillières (b Paris, 1559; d ?Evreux, *c*1615). Son of (1) Antoine d'Argillières. Trained by his father and eldest brother, he joined (3) Jean d'Argillières in Normandy, and settled in Evreux to maintain the organ of the puy de musique. Roch succeeded his brothers in the region between Paris and Rouen, building organs at Chartres (the cathedral and the church of the abbey of St Père-en-Vallée), Beaumont-le-Roger, Pontoise and Mantes. He remained faithful to the pre-classical tradition of French organ building. Roch's sons, Pierre (*c*1580–after 1631) and Guillaume (*c*1585–after 1621), trained with him and then worked together, based in Treguier. Subsequently they worked on their own account, but their work was eclipsed by new developments in French organ building (see ORGAN, §V, 7).

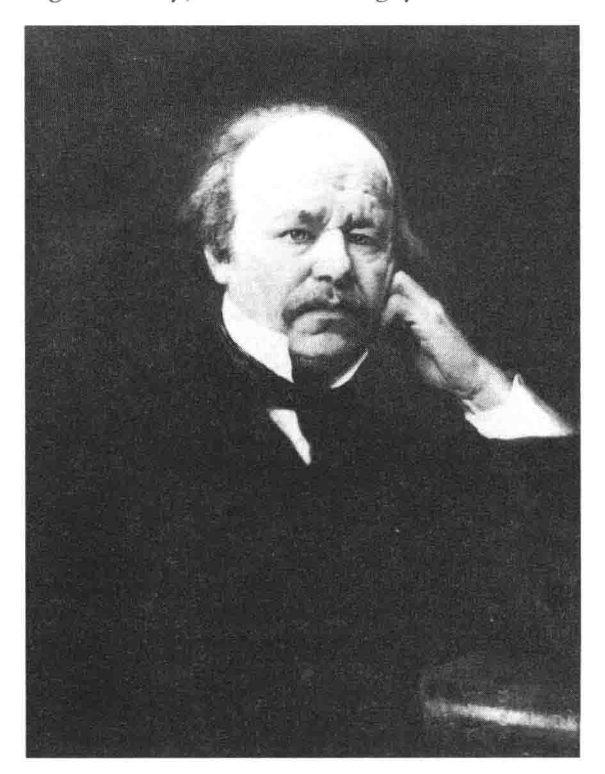
BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Lesure: 'La facture instrumentale à Paris au seizième siècle', GSJ, vii (1954), 11–52

P. Hardouin: 'Du matériel pour l'histoire de l'orgue', Connaissance de l'orgue, nos.7–8 (1973), 25–7 [see also no.26 (1978), 5 only; no.28 (1978), 10, 13 only]

PIERRE HARDOUIN

Dargomïzhsky, Aleksandr Sergeyevich (b Troitskoye, Tula district, 2/14 Feb 1813; d St Petersburg, 5/17 Jan 1869). Russian composer. The outstanding figure in Russian opera between Glinka's lapse into creative impotence and the advent of Tchaikovsky and The Five, Dargomïzhsky had an influence, and has a historical importance, out of all proportion to the frequency with which his music was ever performed. His songs and orchestral works are also of historical importance in the development of Russian music.



Dargomïzhsky's father, the illegitimate son of a nobleman, and a wealthy landowner in the Smolensk district, possessed a caustic wit his son was to inherit. He had eloped with Princess Kozlovskaya, a minor poet whose sentimental verses and pallid dramatic scenes were published during the 1820s and 1830s. Her interest in French culture was communicated to their six children. Though it is recorded that she disliked music, her eldest son Viktor was an accomplished violinist, a daughter played the harp, and Aleksandr showed remarkable early promise as a pianist and composer. He was born on his father's country property where his parents had taken refuge from the Napoleonic army. A sickly child, he began to speak only at the age of five. Thanks to lessons with the fashionable master Benedict Zeibig, he was to become a noted singing teacher, but his voice was always high-pitched and squeaky. In 1817 the family settled in St Petersburg. The children received the customary home-based education in which the arts played an important role. Dargomïzhsky's first piano teacher was his German governess, Louise Wohlgeboren, but he soon made sufficient progress to take lessons with Adrian Danilevsky, whom he later described as 'a fine musician'. Danilevsky did not consider composition a fitting occupation for a young aristocrat and tried to discourage his pupil's creative tendencies. (Apparently he met with little success since a number of songs and piano pieces, chiefly dances, survive from the 1820s.) Dargomïzhsky completed his practical studies with Franz Schoberlechner, a pupil of Hummel, and was much in demand as a pianist at society gatherings and charity concerts. From 1822 he studied the violin with P.G. Vorontsov. Although he was often asked to make up a quartet, he never fully mastered the problems of intonation (a shortcoming celebrated by his brother Viktor in satirical verse) and soon lost interest in the instrument.

Following in his father's footsteps, he entered government service in autumn 1827; a reputation for efficiency won him regular promotion. Like most young men of his class, he regarded music as a leisure activity rather than a serious pursuit. He engaged in sociable forms of music-making and attended the opera, where he probably heard an Italian company in works by Rossini, Mozart, Fioravanti, Mercadante and Pacini, among others. Though several of his compositions were published – some in journals, others perhaps at his own expense – he received no training in the theory of music. However, in winter 1833–4 he was introduced to Glinka, who lent him the notebooks in which he had worked exercises in thoroughbass and counterpoint for Siegfried Dehn. With Glinka he played piano duets, organized concerts, and analysed Beethoven's symphonies and Mendelssohn's overtures. He also attended the orchestral rehearsals of A Life for the Tsar and determined to follow Glinka's example by writing a full-length opera. His love of French literature led him to base his first libretto on Hugo's Lucrèce Borgia, but he had made little progress by 1837 when, on the advice of Zhukovsky, he gave his attention to the libretto which Hugo had prepared for Louise Bertin from Notre-Dame de Paris (Hugo's novel was in great vogue in Russia during the late 1830s). By 1841 Dargomïzhsky had completed the music and a Russian translation of the text of his first opera, Ėsmeralda, and had given the score to the director of the Imperial Theatres. However, the opera is rooted in the tradition of French grand opéra, and at this time the repertory of the Russian opera houses was dominated by Italian works, so the young composer had to wait until 1847 for its première. In spite of the generally acknowledged power of the dramatic passages and the assured handling of the choral scenes – surprising in so inexperienced a composer – it had little success and was not revived until many years after the St Petersburg première in 1851.

Dargomïzhsky was understandably depressed by the delay in obtaining a performance of his first large-scale work, and his feelings were exacerbated by Glinka's continuing popularity. However, he obtained some comfort from the flattering attentions of his numerous female singing pupils. (V.T. Sokolov recalled that he gave lessons 'only to ladies and girls' and took no monetary payment.) Indeed, about this time he remarked, 'If there had been no women in the world, I should never have been a composer. They have inspired me throughout my life'. For these uncritical admirers he wrote a series of songs (the larger part of his vocal music is for women's voices), many of which were published and became popular. While most are typical examples of the abstract romance, chiefly interesting for their melody, several, including Vlyublyon ya ('I am in love'), Lileta and V krovi gorit ('The Fire of Desire'), suggest an early interest in melodic declamation.

In September 1844 Dargomïzhsky went abroad for six months, staying mainly in Berlin, Brussels, Paris and Vienna. He became acquainted with Fétis and Vieuxtemps, and was introduced to Auber, Donizetti, Halévy and Meyerbeer. The grands opéras which he had previously admired now struck him as unnatural, but he was full of praise for the satirical vaudevilles and fascinated by the steady procession of rogues through the French law courts. Like Glinka a decade earlier, not until he was absent from his native land did he realize the merits of its culture; he wrote to a friend on his return in May 1845, 'There is no nation in the world better than the Russian, and, if the elements of poetry exist in Europe, they exist in Russia'. He began to experiment in his songs with the imitation of characteristic melodic patterns of folk music and the intonation of Russian speech (Dushechka-devitsa: 'Darling Girl', Likhoradushka and Mel'nik: 'The Miller') and undertook a serious study of Russian folksong, the fruits of which were seen in the opera Rusalka.

Aleksandr Sergeyevich Dargomïzhsky: portrait by Konstantin Makovsky

This was the great project of Dargomïzhsky's middle period and his most enduring work for the stage. It was based upon Pushkin's unfinished verse tragedy of the same name, and the composer worked on it from 1848 to 1855. Anything but realistic in impulse, Pushkin's play was a romantic Singspiel libretto in the tradition of Kauer's Das Donauweibchen, long a Russian favourite. Dargomïzhsky's opera could be seen as the culmination of a long line of German and Russian water-nymph operas. Yet the accent with him (as, arguably, with Pushkin) is not on the supernatural aspect of the subject, or on the means of its embodiment in 'fantastic' music, but on the highly charged confrontations of the main characters – a Kievan Prince, a Miller and the latter's daughter (Natasha in the opera), whom the Prince seduces and abandons, and who, having thrown herself into the Dnepr, becomes the queen of the river nymphs (rusalki) and lures her tormentor to his doom.

In a letter to Prince Vladimir Odoyevsky, written at the height of his labours on the opera, Dargomïzhsky summed up his attitude towards Rusalka and what he took to be his task and achievement as a Russian composer:

> The more I study the components of our national music, the more varied the aspects I discern in them. Glinka, who alone up to now has given Russian music a grand scale, in my opinion, has as yet touched only one of its sides – the lyrical side. His dramaturgy is too plaintive, the comic aspect loses its national character . . . To the extent that I am able I am working, in my Rusalka, to develop our dramatic components.

Both the comic and the dramatic 'components' in Rusalka intersect at fullest strength on the character of the Miller. His main aria, which opens the opera, is cast in a jolly comic-opera patter style, but one not so obviously modelled on the opera buffa as is, for example, Farlaf's rondo in Ruslan and Lyudmila, which must have been in Dargomïzhsky's mind when he criticized Glinka's handling of 'the comic aspect'. Otherwise the Miller takes part only in ensembles. The most striking of these is his duet with the Prince in Act 3, which begins with a lengthy accompanied recitative set directly to Pushkin's original verses, in which the bereft and demented father, thinking himself a raven, pathetically recounts his daughter's suicide. It amounts to a veritable mad scene.

The vast historical importance of this passage for Russian opera was catalysed by Aleksandr Serov, Russia's leading music critic by the time of Rusalka's première in 1856. In a mammoth review which appeared in ten instalments in the St Petersburg weekly, Teatral'nïy muzïkal'nïy vestnik ('The Theatrical and Musical Courier'), Serov raved about Dargomïzhsky's success in realizing the greatest of all music's potentials, that of combining with words to produce a 'dramatic truth' greater than either art could achieve alone. After a 'theoretical' evaluation of the composer's achievement along these lines, he proceeded to a minute explication de texte that impressed many readers, among them Dargomïzhsky himself. He sent Serov revealing congratulations for the latter's 'penetration of my innermost and even unconscious thoughts'; for he had not thought the Act 3 duet anywhere near so important. (His own favourite part of Rusalka was the Act 4 finale, where he had had not only to write the music – uncharacteristically complex and 'symphonic' music, in which he took especial pride – but also to give the drama the ending Pushkin's torso lacked.) He immediately acceded to the critic's view; starved as he was for approbation, he was exceptionally vulnerable to the influence of those who praised him. In the majority of his songs composed after about 1847 his chief concern was with the 'direct expression' of the emotional content of the text through 'simple and natural' musical means – usually a basically declamatory vocal line and straightforward harmonic accompaniment. His interest in humanity was not that of a philanthropist; when in the late 1850s, stimulated by his involvement with a group of progressive writers and artists, he wrote a handful of songs (Starïy kapral: 'The Old Corporal', Chervyak: 'The Worm', Titulyarnïy sovetnik: 'Titular Councillor') which deal with 'subjects drawn from everyday life', his choice of texts was determined as much by their humorous and dramatic content as by their social relevance.

Nevertheless, there is little doubt that Dargomïzhsky was encouraged to sustain an interest in the expressive potential of music by the prevailing aesthetic philosophy of his day. In 1857 he wrote an oft-quoted letter to a friend and pupil, in which he attacked those who loved Italian opera with its 'melodies flattering to the ear'. He continued, 'I want the note to express the word directly. I want truth'. This manifesto marks the beginning of a new and final phase in Dargomïzhsky's career. He forsook society drawing-rooms to move in higher artistic circles. In 1859 he was elected to the committee of the newly founded Russian Musical Society, and formed a slightly uneasy relationship with the group of young composers which had grown up around Balakirev, The Five. But, as he cast around for a suitable subject for another opera – rejecting Pushkin's Poltava, abandoning a fairy opera, Rogdana, and (as he later recorded) 'recoiling' (for the time being at least) from the 'huge undertaking' of setting Kamennïy gost' ('The Stone Guest'; the third of Pushkin's Malenkiye tragedii, 'Little tragedies') – Rusalka was withdrawn from the repertory of the Imperial Theatres and once again he grew dissatisfied with his position in Russian musical life. The Balakirev circle, weary of his self-centred grumblings and apparent hypochondria, dubbed his group of friends 'the Invalids', and no longer frequented his soirées. As in the dark days of the early 1840s, he turned his thoughts to Europe and, no doubt reckoning that orchestral pieces were more likely to gain a performance there than an opera, completed two fantasias based on folksongs, Baba-Yaga and Kazachok. From late 1864 to early 1865 he was abroad, visiting Warsaw, Leipzig, Paris, London (with which he was favourably impressed) and Brussels, where he achieved public success with Kazachok and excerpts from Rusalka. Moreover, the management of the opera house expressed a wish to produce Esmeralda; however, Dargomïzhsky pressed the claims of his opera-ballet, Torzhestvo Vakkha ('The triumph of Bacchus'), completed in 1848 but still unperformed, and eventually negotiations foundered. On this journey also he was cordially received by Liszt.

In the spring following his return to Russia, heartened by his success in Brussels, he embarked upon an ambitious project, the culmination of his quest for truthful and accurate musical expression of emotions. Reconsidering the play he had previously put aside, Pushkin's The Stone Guest, he decided to set it 'just as it stands, without altering a single word' (in fact, he made a few minor alterations) so that the underlying meaning, the inner 'truth' of the text, should in no way be distorted. To this end also, he employed the most 'simple and natural' compositional techniques – 'continuous melodic recitative' supported by a mainly chordal accompaniment. This 'strange work', as he himself described it, attracted the attention of The Five, in particular Cui, who was at that time formulating his own theories of operatic reform. The composer was spurred on by the encouragement of these young composers, and the opera was given a great many run-throughs, at various stages of its gestation, the composer taking the part of Don Juan, Musorgsky that of Leporello, Dargomïzhsky's singing pupil Aleksandra Purgold both female roles, with her sister Nadezhda – the future Mme Rimsky-Korsakov – accompanying. Dargomïzhsky shook off his depression at the disastrous failure of the first performance of The Triumph of Bacchus and worked at his operatic experiment 'in a kind of fever', but the demands made upon his time by the presidency of the Russian Musical Society, to which he was elected in 1867, weakened his already failing health. As he prophesied, The Stone Guest was to be his swan song. He died in January 1869, leaving the opera in piano score and still incomplete. At his request, Cui wrote the Prelude and the end of the first scene, and Rimsky-Korsakov finished the orchestration by the end of 1870. However, as a matter of principle, Dargomïzhsky had insisted upon a higher performing fee than the Imperial Theatres were empowered by law to pay. Eventually the balance was raised by public subscription, and The Stone Guest was staged in February 1872. It met with a cool reception, and, unlike Rusalka, which soon recovered from an unsatisfactory first performance and now commands a more or less regular place in the repertory, it has never been popular, even in Russia.

A full-length 'numberless' opera (but for two interpolated songs), it exemplified for the 'kuchkists' the true music of the future (the Wagnerian being of course the false), for it embodied what they saw as the most salubrious of all possible operatic reforms. That is to say, it did away with artificial 'form' while retaining the traditional lyric style. Set throughout in a kind of heightened arioso (or 'melodic recitative', as Cui called it), consisting of romance-like vocal phrases set to a figurative and harmonically regular accompaniment, *The Stone Guest*might best be viewed as a gigantic through-composed art song in which the whole shaping force, save at the pettiest level, is exercised by the text. Its manner was very influential on Musorgsky, who paid heartfelt tribute to the late Dargomïzhsky in a pair of dedications as the 'great teacher of musical truth'. Many of Dargomïzhsky's individual expressive phrases are indeed inspired trouvailles, extraordinarily memorable and seemingly definitive. To those who understand and love the words on which it was modelled, The Stone Guest can seem a masterpiece; to others it can seem only 'a famous but rather dull opera'.

In Russia Dargomïzhsky's songs are acknowledged as an important contribution to the repertory. They range from the attractive and expressive lyrical romances and the engagingly simple 'composed folksongs' of the late 1840s and early 1850s (pieces which point the way to Tchaikovsky's vocal music) to the vivid and powerful dramatic ballads and the low-key but telling comic sketches of his later years, in which he proves himself a worthy forerunner of Musorgsky. His orchestral pieces, full of high spirits, are effective curtain-raisers, though neither the use of a programme nor of a series of variations on a folksong can prevent Baba-Yaga and Kazachok from showing up Dargomïzhsky's limited powers of musical architecture. Indeed, there is little doubt that his predilection for vocal music was a result, at least in part, of the need to use a text as a formal prop. The Finnish Fantasy, Dargomïzhsky's only essay in sonata form, is more successful. Historically, these pieces are important for continuing the series of orchestral works initiated by Glinka which was to form the basis of the Russian symphonic tradition developed by subsequent generations.

For well over a century Dargomïzhsky has been remembered since his death, in western Europe at least, for the supposed influence of The Stone Guest rather than for his achievements. In his own country, his reputation as a composer in his own right rests assured. Though he cannot be ascribed to the first rank of Russian composers, the merits of his songs alone suggest that a reassessment of his music by Western writers and performers is now overdue.

WORKS

printed works first published in St Petersburg unless otherwise stated

Editions: A. Dargomïzhskiy: Polnoye sobraniye romansov i pesen [Complete collection of romances and songs], ed. M.S. Pekelis (Moscow and Leningrad, 1947) [S]
A. Dargomïzhskiy: Polnoye sobraniye vokal'nïkh ansambley i khorov [Complete collection of vocal ensembles and choruses], ed. M.S. Pekelis (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950) [C]
A. Dargomïzhskiy: Sobraniye sochinenii dlya fortep'yano [Collected piano works], ed. M.S. Pekelis (Moscow and Leningrad, 1954) [P]
A. Dargomïzhskiy: Sochineniya dlya simfonicheskogo orkestra [Works for symphony orchestra], ed. M.S. Pekelis (Moscow, 1967) [O]

STAGE

Ėsmeralda (op, 4, Dargomïzhsky, after V. Hugo: Notre-Dame de Paris), 1838–41, Moscow, Bol'shoy, 5/17 Dec 1847, ed. M.S. Pekelis (Moscow, 1961)
Torzhestvo Vakkha [The Triumph of Bacchus] (opera-ballet, after A. Pushkin), 1843–8, Bol'shoy, 11/23 Jan 1867, vs (Paris, 1867), fs ed. (Moscow, 1969) [orig. comp. as cant., 1843–6, perf. St Petersburg, 1 April 1846]
Rusalka (op, 4, Dargomïzhsky, after Pushkin), 1848–55, St Petersburg, Circus, 4/16 May 1856, vs (1858), fs ed. (Moscow, 1949)
Mazepa (op), 1859 or 1860, inc.; Duet (1872), see VOCAL
Rogdana (magic op), 1860–7, inc.; 5 excerpts (1874–5), see VOCAL
Kamennïy gost' [The Stone Guest] (op, 3, Pushkin), 1866–9, completed C. Cui, orchd N. Rimsky-Korsakov, St Petersburg, Mariinskiy, 16/28 Feb 1872, vs (1871, rev. 1906), fs (Leningrad, 1929)

ORCHESTRAL

all ed. in O

Bolero, late 1830s, St Petersburg, sum. 1830, pf score (1839)
Baba-Yaga (S Volgi v Rigu) [From the Volga to Riga], fantasia, completed 1862, St Petersburg, 19/31 Jan 1870 (1872–3)
Kazachok, fantasia, completed 1864, Brussels, 14/26 Dec 1864, score and arr. (by Tchaikovsky), pf 4 hands (1868)
Chukhonskaya fantaziya [Finnish Fantasy], *c*1863–7, St Petersburg, 22 Feb/6 March 1869 (1872–3)

VOCAL

for 2 voices and piano unless otherwise stated
all ed. in C

Deva i roza [The Maiden and the Rose] (A. Del'vig), early 1830s (1843)
Chto, moy svetik luna [What, my radiant moon] (Vyazemsky), early 1840s (1844)
Rïtsari [The Knights] (Pushkin), 1842 (1844)
Tï i vï [Tu et vous] (Pushkin), late 1830s – early 1840s (1848); orig. 1v, pf, 1830s–40s; arr. pf, late 1840s
Devitsï, krasavitsï [Beautiful Girls] (Pushkin), arr. 2vv, orch, RUS-Spk, 1844–5 (1849)
Nenaglyadnaya tï [You my wondrous beauty], *c*1849 (1849)
Yesli vstrechus' s toboy [If I encounter you] (A. Kol'tsov), *c*1849 (1849)
[13] Peterburgskiye serenadï [Petersburg Serenades], chorus, mid-1840s – early 1850s, nos.1–9 (1850), complete (early 1850s): Iz stranï, stranï dalekoy [From a Far-Off Land] (Yazïkov); Gde nasha roza [Where is our rose] (Pushkin); Voron k voronu letit [The raven flies to the crow] (Pushkin); Pridi ko mne (Come to me] (Kol'tsov); Chto smolknul vesel'ye glas [What has silenced the laughter in your eyes] (Pushkin); Pyu za zdraviye Meri [I drink to Mary's health] (Pushkin); Na severe dikom [In the Wild North] (Lermontov); Po volnam spokoynïm [On Calm Waves]; V polnoch' leshiy [The Wood-Goblin at Midnight]; Prekrasnïy den', chastlivïy den' [Fine Day, Happy Day] (Del'vig); Burya, mgloyu nebo kroyet [The storm covers the sky with darkness] (Pushkin); Govoryat, yest'strana [They say there is a land] (Timofeyev); Vyanet, vyanet leto krasnoye [Glorious summer is fading, fading] (Pushkin)
Zastol'naya pesnya [Drinking-Song] (Del'vig), 1v, chorus, 1844–5 (1851)
Dushechka-devitsa [Darling Girl] (trad.), 1v, female chorus, 1850 (1851); orig. 1v, pf, 1849–50
Minuvshikh dney ocharovaniya [The Fascination of the Past] (Del'vig), early 1850s (1852)

Skazhi, chto tak zadumchiv tï? [Tell me, why are you so thoughtful?] (Zhukovsky), 3vv, pf, 1851–2 (1852)
Nochevala tuchka zolotaya [In the night there was a golden cloud] (M. Lermontov), 3vv, mid-1850s (1856)
Nocturne (trans. S. Levik), mid-1850s (1856)
Schastliv, kto ot khlada let [Happy is he who from years of coldness] (Zhukovsky), mid-1850s (1857)
Ne trite glaza [Do not rub your eyes], 3vv, pf, ?1856–64, pubd in Muzïkal'noye obozreniye (1887), no.26
Chto mne do pesen [What good are songs to me] (1857)
K druz'yam [To my Friends] (Pushkin) (1858); orig. 1v, pf, 1850–51
Vladïko dney moikh [Master of my Days] (Pushkin) (1860)
Molitva [Prayer] (Pushkin), 4vv, pf, 1860; orig. 1v, pf, after 1837
Nad mogiloy [Above the Grave] (Del'vig), 4vv, pf, early 1860s (1861); orig. Epitafiya, 1v, pf (1852)
Duets from Ėsmeralda (Hugo, trans. Dargomïzhsky), 1830s – early 1840s (1858)
Kamen' tyazholïy [Heavy Stone], early 1860s (1863); orig. 1v, pf, early 1830s
Duet from Mazepa (Pushkin), early 1860s (1872)
5 excerpts from Rogdana, early 1860s (1874–5): Komicheskaya pesnya [Comic Song] (Weltman), 1v, chorus; Duettino; Vostochnïy khor otshel'nikov [Eastern Chorus of Hermits] (Pushkin); Khor volshebnïkh dev nad spyashchey knyaznoy Rogdanoy [Chorus of Enchanted Maidens over the Sleeping Princess Rogdana]; Khor devushek [Chorus of Girls] (Weltman)
Many arrs. of works by other composers, 2–3vv, all in C for solo voice and piano

all ed. in S

Kolïbel'naya pesnya (Bayu, bayushki, bayu) [Lullaby] (M.B. Dargomïzhskaya), 1830 (1831)
Tol'ko uznal ya tebya [If only I had recognized you] (Del'vig), 1835–6 (1836)
O, ma charmante (Drug moy prelestnïy) [My Charming Friend] (Hugo, trans. Solovtsova), 1830s (1836)
V tyomnuyu nochku v chistom pole [In the dark night in the open field] (Dargomïzhskaya), 1830s (1836–7)
Lezginskaya pesnya [Lezghinka Song], after 1835 (1839)
La sincère (Iskrenneye priznaniye) [A Sincere Confession] (Desbordes-Valmore, trans. Solovtsova) (1839)
Golubïye glaza [Blue Eyes] (Tumansky), early 1830s (1843)
Kayus', dyadya [I confess it, uncle] (Timofeyev), ?1835 (1843)
Svad'ba (The Wedding] (Timofeyev), after 1835 (1843)
Moy suzhenïy, moy ryazhenïy [My promised one, my parted one] (Del'vig), ballad, mid-1830s (1843)
Molitva [Prayer] (Vladïko dney moikh) [Master of my Days] (Pushkin), after 1837 (1843), arr. 4vv, pf, 1860
Baba staraya [The Old Woman] (Timofeyev), after 1838 (1843)
Kak mila yeyo golovka [How dear is her little head] (Tumansky), 1839–40 (1840–41)
Odelas' tumanami Sierra-Nevada [The Sierra Nevada was covered with mist] (Shirkov), bolero, 1839–40 (1843)
Skroy menya, burnaya noch' [Hide me, stormy night] (Del'vig), 1842 (1843)
Vertograd [Garden] (Pushkin), early 1840s (1843)
Ya umer ot schast'ya [I died of happiness] (Uhland, trans.), early 1840s (1843)
Ya vas lyubil [I loved you] (Pushkin), early 1840s (1843)
Ėlegiya [Elegy] (Ona pridyot) [She will come] (Yazïkov) (1843); arr. 1v, va/vc, 1861
Privet [Greetings] (Kozlov, after Byron) (1843)
Tï khoroshen'kaya [You are a pretty one], early 1830s (?1843)
Nochnoy zefir struit ėfir [The night zephyr stirs the air] (Pushkin), 1830s–40s (1844)
Tï i vï [Tu et vous] (Pushkin), 1830s–40s (1844); arr. 2vv, pf, 1830s–40s, pf, late 1840s
Vlyublyon ya, deva-krasota [I am in love, my maiden, my beauty] (Yazïkov), 1830s–40s (1844)
Molitva [Prayer] (V minutu zhizni trudnuyu) [At a difficult moment in life] (Lermontov), 1840–42 (1844)
Tuchki nebesnïye [Heavenly Clouds] (Lermontov), 1841–2 (1844)
Yunosha i deva [The Girl and the Youth] (Pushkin), 1841–2 (1844)
Lileta (Del'vig), 1842 (1844)
Ne sudite, lyudi dobrïye [Do not judge, good people] (Timofeyev), 1843 (1844)
Ėlegiya [Elegy] (Ne sprashivay, zachem) [Do not ask why] (Pushkin), early 1840s (1844)
Shestnadtsat' let [Sixteen Years] (Del'vig), early 1840s (1844)
Sleza [A Tear] (Pushkin), early 1840s (1844)
V krovi gorit ogon' zhelan'ya [The fire of desire burns in my blood] (Pushkin), early 1840s (1844)
Tï skoro menya pozabudesh' [You will soon forget me] (Zhadovskaya), 1846 (1847)
Dieu, qui sourit (Bog vsem darit) [God bestows upon all] (Hugo), 1846, facs. (1913)
I skuchno i grustno [It is both tedious and sad] (Lermontov), 1847 (1847)
Ballade (from A. Dumas: Catherine Howard, trans. Solovtsova), early 1840s (1848)
Ne nazïvay yeyo nebesnoy [Do not call her heavenly] (Pavlov), 1848 (1848)
Ya skazala, zachem [I have said why] (Rostopchina), 1847–8 (1849)
Mne grustno [I am sad] (Lermontov), 1848 (1849)
Slïshu li golos tvoy [Do I hear your voice] (Lermontov), *c*1848–9 (1849)
Dayte krïl'ya mne [Give me Wings] (Rostopchina), 1849–50 (1851)
Dushechka-devitsa [Darling Girl] (trad.), 1849–50 (1851); arr. 1v, female chorus, 1850 (1851)
Likhoradushka (trad.), 1849–50 (1851)
Ne skazhu nikomu [I shall tell no-one] (Kol'tsov), 1849–50 (1851)
Bog pomoch'vam! [God Help you!] (Pushkin), 1850–51 (1851)
Bushuy i volnuysya glubokoye more [Rage and be turbulent, deep O deep sea] (Rostopchina), 1850–51 (1851)
K druz'yam [To my Friends] (Pushkin), 1850–51 (1851); arr. 2vv, pf (1858)
K slave [To Fame] (Obleukhov), 1850–51 (1851)
Mechtï, mechtï [Dreams, Dreams] (Pushkin), 1850–51 (1851)
Mel'nik [The Miller] (Pushkin), 1850–51 (1851)
Potseluy [A Kiss] (Baratïnsky), 1850–51 (1851)
Ya vsyo yeshchyo yego lyublyu [I still love him] (Zhadovsky), 1851 (1851)
Okh, tikh, tikh, tikh, tï (Kol'tsov), 1850–52 (1852)
Kudri [Curls] (Del'vig), 1852 (1852)
Vostochnïy romans [Eastern Romance] (Pushkin), 1852 (1852)
Zastol'naya pesnya [Drinking-Song] (Del'vig), early 1850s (1852)
Ėpitafiya [Epitaph] (Del'vig) (1852), arr. as Nad mogiloy [Above the Grave], 4vv, pf, early 1860s
Ya zateplyu svechu [I will light the candle] (Kol'tsov), early 1850s (early 1850s)
Kamen' tyazholïy [Heavy Stone], early 1830s (mid-1850s); arr. 2vv, pf, early 1860s
Starina [Olden Times] (Timofeyev), ?early 1840s (mid-1850s)
Au bal (Na balu) (Virs), 1840s (1856)
Bez uma, bez razuma [At One's Wit's End] (Kol'tsov), early 1850s (1856)
Jamais (Nikogda), early 1850s (1856)
Kak u nas na ulitse [As in Our Streets] (Dargomïzhsky), early 1850s (1856)
Lyubila, lyublyu ya, vek budu lyubit' [I have loved, I love, for ever I will love], early 1850s (1856)
Moya milaya, moya dushechka [My Dear, my Sweetheart] (Davïdov), early 1850s (1856)
O, milaya deva [O Dearest Maiden] (Mickewicz), early 1850s (1856)
Ispanskiy romans [Spanish Romance] (Pushkin, from The Stone Guest), mid-1850s (1856)
Ėlegiya [Elegy] (Ya pomnyu, gluboko) [Deep down I remember] (Davïdov), ?*c*1855–6 (1856)
U nego li rusï kudri [He has light brown curls], gypsy song, early 1850s (1857)
Rusaya golovka [Light Brown Hair] (Polonsky), 1855–7 (1857)
Kak chasto slushaya [How often I listen] (Zhadovsky), *c*1857 (1857)
Chto mne do pesen [What good are songs to me], mid-1850s (1858)
Chervyak [The Worm] (Béranger, trans. Kurochkin), after 1856 (1858)
Starïy kapral [The Old Corporal] (Béranger, trans. Kurochkin), 1857–8 (1858)
Vostochnaya ariya [Eastern Aria] (O deva-roza, ya v okovakh) [O maiden rose, I am in chains] (Pushkin), 1858 (1858)
Chto v imeni tebe moyom? [What is my name to you?] (Pushkin), 1859 (1859)
Mne vsyo ravno [It's all the same to me] (Miller), 1859 (1859)
Titulyarnïy sovetnik [Titular Councillor] (Weinberg), 1859 (1859)
Paladin (Zhukovsky), ballad, *c*1859 (1859)
Rasstalis' gordo mï [We parted proudly] (Kurochkin), *c*1859 (1859)
O, schastlivitsa tï, roza [O you Lucky Rose], ?1840s (1850s)
Mchit menya v tvoi ob"yatya [I rush into your arms] (Kurochkin), 1859 (1860)

Pesn' rïbki [Song of the Fish] (Lermontov), 1860 (1861)
Tï vsya polna ocharovan'ya [You are quite fascinating] (Yazïkov), recit, *c*1860 (1861)
Charuy menya, charuy [Bewitch me] (Zhadovsky), 1861 (1861)
Yeshchyo molitva [Still a Prayer] (Zhadovsky), 1861 (1861)
Kolïbelnaya pesnya [Lullaby], *c*1861 (1861)
Bezumno zhazhdat' tvoyey vstrechi [They madly long to meet you] (Hubert), *c*1858–62 (1862), on theme by Johann Strauss (ii)
Na razdol'ye nebes [In the Expanse of the Heavens] (Shcherbina), 1865–6 (1866)
Nozhki [Little Feet] (Pushkin), *c*1866 (1866)
Vï ne sbïlis' [You did not appear] (Yazïkov), *c*1866 (1866)
Chto delat' s ney [What can you do with her], late 1850s – early 1860s (1872)
Kak prishyol muzh iz-pod gorok [A man came from the hills], late 1850s – early 1860s (1872)
Lyubit' sebya ya pozvolyayu [I allow self-love] (Martïnov) (1872), on theme by Johann Strauss (ii)
Ratibor Kholmogorskiy [Ratibor from Kholmogorsk] (from Rogdana), early 1860s (1875)
Jaloux du bel objet (Revnuyesh' tï) (Hubert), late 1850s – early 1860s (n.d.)
Ya zdes', Inezil'ya [I am here, Inezilya] (Pushkin, from The Stone Guest), late 1860s, RUS-SPsc
Two songs (Calderón, trans. Grekov), *c*1866, ed. M.S. Pekelis (Leningrad, 1947): 1 V adu nam suzhdeno [In hell we are fated], 2 Tsvetï poley [The Flowers in the Field]
Tï ne ver', molodets [Fine fellow, do not believe it], ed. M.S. Pekelis (Leningrad, 1947)

PIANO

all ed. in P

5 early pieces, 1820s: Marche, Française (Kontradans), Valse mélancolique, Valse, Cosaque (Kazachok)
Blestyashchiy val's [Brilliant waltz], 1829–30 (1831)
Variations on a Russian theme (Vinyat menya v narode) [They accuse me among the people], late 1820s – early 1830s (1836)
Mechtï Ėsmeraldï [Esmeralda's Dreams], fantasia, 1838 (1839)
2 novïye mazurki [2 new mazurkas], late 1830s (1840)
Galop, from Ėsmeralda, 1838–41 (early 1840s)
Polka, *c*1844 (1844)
Scherzo, 1842–3 (1844)
Tabakerochnïy val's [Snuff-Box Waltz], 1845 (1846)
Pïlkost' i khladnokroviye [Passion and Composure], scherzo, *c*1845–7 (1847)
Pochta [The Post], quadrille, mid-1830s–40s (late 1840s)
2 dances on themes from Ėsmeralda, completed *c*1847 (late 1840s): Polka-mazurka, Mazurka
March, from Ėsmeralda, 1838–41 (Paris, 1850)
Pesnya bez slov [Song without Words], mid-1840–50s (1851)
Fantasia on themes from Glinka's Ivan Susanin, early 1850s (1854–5)
Tï i vï [Tu et vous], romance, ?late 1840s (mid-1850s); orig. 1v, pf, 1830s–40s
Slavyanskaya tarantella, pf 4 hands, 1864–5 (Paris, 1866)
Waltz, ed. (?Moscow, 1954)
Other pieces, inc., in RUS-SPk, incl. 120-bar sketch for sym. fantasia, in O

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SOURCE MATERIAL

N. Findeyzen, ed.: A.S.Dargomïzhsky (1813–1869): avtobiografiya, pis'ma, vospominaniya sovremennikov [Autobiography, letters, recollections of contemporaries] (Petrograd, 1921)
M.S. Pekelis, ed.: A.S. Dargomïzhsky: izbrannïye pis'ma [Selected letters] (Moscow,1952)
A.S. Ogolevets, ed.: Materialï i dokumentï po istorii russkoy realisticheskoy muzïkal'noy ėstetiki [Material and documents on the history of Russian realistic musical aesthetics], i (Moscow, 1954)
M.S. Pekelis, ed.: 'Ob avtobiografii Dargomïzhskogo' [On Dargomïzhsky's autobiography], SovM (1957), no.7, pp.89–97
M. Velimirović: 'Russian Autographs at Harvard', Notes, xvii (1959–60), 539–55
M.S. Pekelis, ed.: 'Pis'ma Dargomïzhskogo Stanislavu Monyushko' [Dargomïzhsky's letters to Stanislav Moniuszko], SovM (1963), no.2, pp.50–52

LIFE AND WORKS

S. Bazunov: A.S. Dargomïzhsky: yego zhizn' i muzïkal'naya deyatel'nost' [Life and musical activity] (St Petersburg, 1894)
I. Korzukhkin: 'A.S. Dargomïzhsky', Artist (1894), nos.37–8
N. Findeyzen: A.S. Dargomïzhsky: ocherk yego zhizni i muzïkal'noy deyatel'nosti [Outline of his life and activity] (Moscow, 1904)
S.B. Frid: A.S. Dargomïzhsky: kratkiy biograficheskiy ocherk s predisloviyem Tsezarya Kyui [Short biographical outline with a foreword by César Cui] (St Petersburg,1913)
G. Timofeyev: 'A.S. Dargomïzhsky: yego sem'ya, pervïye shagi na kompozitorskom poprishche' [A.S. Dargomïzhsky: his family, the beginning of his career as a composer], MS (1917), nos.7–8
A.N. Drozdov: Aleksandr Sergeyevich Dargomïzhsky (Moscow, 1929)
M.S. Pekelis: A.S. Dargomïzhsky (Moscow, 1932)
M.S. Pekelis: 'O realizme Dargomïzhskogo' [Dargomïzhsky's realism], SovM (1934), no.4, pp.47–61
G. Abraham: 'The Stone Guest', Studies in Russian Music (London, 1935/R), 68–86
T. Popova: A.S. Dargomïzhsky 1813–1869 (Moscow, 1938)
G. Abraham: 'Dargomïzhsky's Orchestral Pieces'; 'Glinka, Dargomïzhsky and The Rusalka', On Russian Music (London, 1939/R)
R.I. Genkina: A.S. Dargomïzhsky: zhizn' i tvorchestvo [Life and works], ed. M.S. Pekelis (Moscow, 1940)
I. Martïnov: A.S. Dargomïzhsky (Moscow, 1944)
I. Martïnov: A.S. Dargomïzhsky (Moscow, 1947)
V. Yakovlev: Pushkin i muzïka [Pushkin and music] (Moscow, 1949, 2/1957), 64ff
B. Levik: 'Kammenïy gost'' Dargomïzhskogo – 'Motsart i Sal'yeri' N. Rimskogo-Korsakova – 'Skupoy rïtsar'' S. Rakhmaninova [Dargomïzhsky's The Stone Guest, N. Rimsky-Korsakov's Mozart and Salieri and S. Rakhmaninov's The Miserly Knight] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1949)
S.K.: 'Ėsmeralda A.S. Dargomïzhskogo v ėfire' [A.S. Dargomïzhsky's Esmeralda on the radio], SovM (1950), no.5, pp.76–7
A.N. Serov: Articles on Rusalka in Izbrannïye stat'i [Selected articles] (Moscow, 1950–57)
M.S. Pekelis: Dargomïzhsky i narodnaya pesnya [Dargomïzhsky and folksong] (Moscow, 1951)
S.I. Shlifshteyn: A.S. Dargomïzhsky: lektsiya [A.S. Dargomïzhsky: a lecture] (Moscow,1951, 3/1960)
Ts.A. Cui: Articles on Rusalka and The Stone Guest in Izbrannïye stat'i [Selected articles] (Leningrad, 1952)
S. Powołocki: 'A. S. Dargomïzhsky', Muzyka, v/3–4 (1954), 45–51
R. Smith Brindle: 'The Sagra Musicale Umbra at Perugia', MT, xcvi (1955), 661 [on The Stone Guest]
T. Livanova: Stasov i russkaya klassicheskaya opera [Stasov and Russian classical opera] (Moscow, 1957)
K. Ivanova: 'Ėsmeralda', SovM (1958), no.12, pp.64–6
T. Livanova: 'Dargomïzhsky i Glinka', Pamyati Glinki [Memories of Glinka], ed. V.A. Kiselyov, I.N. Livanova and V.V. Protopopov (Moscow, 1958)
M.S. Pekelis: 'Stsenicheskaya istoriya Ėsmeraldï' [Stage history of Esmeralda], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1958), no.15, pp.20–22
D. Rabinovich: 'K vozobnovleniyu Kamennogo gostya' [The revival of The Stone Guest], SovM (1960), no.1, pp.62–5
A.D. Alekseyev: Russkaya fortep'yannaya muzïka [Russian piano music] (Moscow, 1963, 2/1969)
N. Blagovidova: 'Kamennïy gost'' [The Stone Guest], SovM (1963), no.7, pp.87–8
M.S. Pekelis: 'Dva ocherka o Dargomïzhskom' [Two studies of Dargomïzhsky], SovM (1963), no.2, pp.43–50
M.S. Pekelis: 'Stranitsï iz avtobiografii Yu.F. Platonovoy' [Extracts from the autobiography of Yu. F. Platonova], SovM (1963), no.2, pp.53–6
L. Polyakova: 'Obnovlennaya Rusalka' [Rusalka revived], SovM (1963), no.7, pp.81–4
I. Rïkin: 'Chukhonskaya fantaziya' [Finnish Fantasy], SovM (1963), no.2, pp.38–43
L.N. Lebedinsky: 'Shalyapin poyot Dargomïzhskogo' [Chaliapin sings Dargomïzhsky], SovM (1964), no.6, pp.87–95
M.S. Pekelis: Aleksandr Sergeyevich Dargomïzhsky i yego okruzheniye [A.S. Dargomïzhsky and his milieu] (Moscow, 1966–83)
I. Bremini: 'Trieste', Opera, xx (1969), 535 only [on The Stone Guest]

G. Mashevsky: Article on the performance of Dargomïzhsky's songs in Voprosï teorii i ėstetiki muzïki [Problems of theory and aesthetics of music], ix (Leningrad, 1969), 215–31
M.S. Pekelis: 'Dargomïzhsky i Shchepkin', SovM (1969), no.2, pp.88–93
R. Allorto: 'Aleksandr Sergieivic Dargomiski e la conquista del recitativo melodico', Chigiana, new ser., vi–vii (1969–70), 105–13
R. Taruskin: 'Realism as Preached and Practiced: the Russian Opera Dialogue', MQ, lvi (1970), 431–54
J. Baker: 'Dargomïzhsky, Realism and The Stone Guest', MR, xxxvii (1976), 193–208
G. Mashevsky: Vokal'no-ispolnitel'skiye i pedagogicheskiye printsipï Dargomïzhskogo [Dargomïzhsky's principles of vocal performance and teaching] (Leningrad, 1976)
G. Miksheyeva: 'Simfonicheskiye fantazii A. Dargomïzhskogo: k voprosu o kharakteristicheskom v muzïkal'nom stile kompozitora' [A. Dargomïzhsky's symphonic fantasias: on the question of the characteristic in the composer's musical style],Iz istorii russkoy i sovetskoy muzïki, iii, ed. M. Pekelis and I. Givental' (Moscow,1978), 121–37
F. Monfort: 'Quelques mots au sujet du personnage de Don Juan et de l'opéra L'hôte de pierre de Dargomijsky', Bulletin de la Société liégeoise de musicologie, xxvii (1979), 11–19
G. Miksheyeva: 'O dramaturgicheskoy roli garmonii v Kamennom goste Dargomïzhskogo' [The dramaturgical role of harmony in Dargomïzhsky's The Stone Guest], Problemï stilevogo obnovleniya v russkoy klassicheskoy i sovetskoy muzïke, ed. A.I. Kandinsky, Ye.B. Dolinskaya and Ye.G. Sorokina (Moscow, 1983), 35–53
S. Shrader: Realism in Late Nineteenth-Century Opera: a Comparative View (diss., Northwestern U., 1983)
Ye. Ratser: 'Zagadki Kamennogo gost'ya' [The puzzles of The Stone Guest], SovM (1988), no.6, pp.86–95, 98–100
L.M. Tarasov: Dargomïzhsky v Peterburge [Dargomïzhsky in St Petersburg] (Leningrad, 1988)
I.A. Medvedeva: A.S. Dargomïzhsky (Moscow, 1989)

JENNIFER SPENCER, RICHARD TARUSKIN, STUART CAMPBELL

D'Arienzo, Nicola (b Naples, 24 Dec 1842; d Naples, 25 April 1915). Italian composer, writer on music and teacher. Because of paternal opposition he first studied music secretly, but when his father later relented he made rapid progress, aided by Mercadante. His first opera, Monzù Gnazio, a comic opera in Neapolitan dialect, was performed at the Teatro Nuovo in 1860. During the next 20 years he wrote eight more, all in the comic or semi-serious genres, of which Il cuoco (1873) was the most widely performed and La figlia del diavolo (1879) the most controversial, because of its verismo tendencies. After 1880 he had only one more opera performed, devoting himself mostly to instrumental and sacred music and to teaching and writing.

In 1872 he won the competition for the chair of harmony and counterpoint at the music school of the Real Albergo dei Poveri and in 1874 became director. In 1875 he moved to the conservatory where he taught harmony and, from 1877, counterpoint and composition; Leoncavallo was among his pupils. In 1878 he published the Introduzione del sistema tetracordale nella musica moderna, which attempts to formulate a new harmonic system based on a scale related to the Phrygian mode and which he linked historically to Neapolitan folk music with its flattened 'Neapolitan' second. He claimed to have put this system into use in La figlia del diavolo. He later published a number of historical and critical studies, most notably on the old Neapolitan opera buffa. In 1904 he won the chair of music history at the conservatory. In 1909 he became director, but he gave up the post in 1911 and retired from teaching in 1912. D'Arienzo's uncle, Marco d'Arienzo (1811–77), a government bureaucrat by profession, was a librettist by avocation. Between 1839 and 1877 he wrote about 30 librettos for Neapolitan theatres, collaborating with Mercadante, De Giosa, Lauro Rossi, Luigi Ricci, Petrella and others. Among the best-known were Ricci's La festa di Piedigrotta (1852) and De Giosa's Napoli di carnevale (1876).

WORKS

OPERAS

comic and first performed in Naples unless otherwise stated

Monzù Gnazio, o La fidanzata del parrucchiere (A. Passaro), 1860; I due mariti (A. Spadetta), 1866, rev. 1871, vs (Milan, ?1876); Le rose (Spadetta), 1868; Il cacciatore delle Alpi (Spadetta), 1870; Il cuoco e il segretario (Spadetta), 1873; I viaggi (Spadetta), Milan, 1875; La figlia del diavolo (A. Laudì), 1879; I tre coscritti (L.E. Bardare), 1880; La fiera (S. Di Giacomo), 1887

Not perf.: Rita di Lister (M. d'Arienzo), before 1875; Lesbo di Rodio (N. d'Arienzo); Capitan Fracassa

OTHER WORKS

Orch: A Roma, conc. sinfonico, 1871; Orlando, sym., D; Pensiero sinfonico, perf. 1871, arr. pf, 4 hands (Milan, n.d.); Piccolo [Vc] Conc., c, 1881, with pf acc. (Milan, 1885); Vn Conc., a, 1880, with pf acc. (Milan, 1912); Vn Conc.-fantasia, with pf acc. (Milan, 1912)

Chbr: Pf Trio, C, perf. Feb 1864; Vc Sonata, perf. 1884; Str Qt, 1888; Nonet, 1889; pf pieces; hp pieces, *c*100 songs

Sacred: Cristo sulla croce (orat), solo vv, vv, orch, before 1875; Miserere, 5vv; Stabat mater, 6 solo vv, vv, str orch

WRITINGS

Introduzione del sistema tetracordale nella musica moderna (Milan, 1878)

Dell'opera comica dalle origini a G.B. Pergolesi(1887)

'Origini dell'opera comica (delle origini della musica moderna)', RMI, ii (1895), 597–628; iv (1897), 421–59; vi (1899), 473–95; vii (1900), 1–33; also pubd separately (Turin, 1900)

La musica in Napoli (Naples, 1900)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; FlorimoN; SchmidlD
M. Caputo: 'Nicola D'Arienzo', GMM, xlii (1887), 135–6
A. Della Corte: 'Un maestro: Nicola D'Arienzo', RMI, xxii (1915), 327–41
G. Napoli: 'Nicola D'Arienzo', Arte pianistica, ii (1915)
G. Pannain: 'Saggio su la musica a Napoli nel sec. XIX, da Mercadante a Martucci', RMI, xxxix (1932), 51–72; repr. in Ottocento musicale italiano: saggi e note (Milan, 1952), 150–72
F. Schlitzer: Salvatore di Giacomo: ricerche e note bibliografiche, ed. G. Doria and C. Ricottini (Florence, 1966), 123

ANDREA LANZA

Dark [Darke], John (*b c*1495; d ?1569). English composer. He was perhaps the John Darke who supplicated for the BMus at Oxford on 10 November 1511, having studied for eight years. A Darke whose first name is unknown, who was an organist at All Souls College in 1509, may be the same man, as may be the John Darke who was a vicar-choral of Exeter Cathedral from about 1519 to about 1569. Another Darke with an unknown first name, who was organist and informator at New College in the early 1480s, probably belongs to the previous generation. John Dark's only surviving composition, a five-part Magnificat now lacking one voice, occurs in a set of partbooks whose repertory has strong Oxford connections (GB-Cu Peterhouse 471–4). The missing Tenor book probably contained the contratenor voice of Dark's setting; the surviving Contratenor book contains what is probably the tenor, which quotes an unidentified cantus firmus whose beginning is perhaps fortuitously reminiscent of one of the saeculorum formulae of the eighth psalm tone. Dark's is one of the few English pre-Reformation Magnificat settings not to be based on a faburden melody; it is also atypical in being written entirely in duple metre. Otherwise it conforms to the usual pattern, setting only the even-numbered verses and alternating verses for full choir with verses in fewer parts. The overall compass of the setting, two octaves and a 6th, suggests that the top part is for means. On the evidence of this work Dark appears to have been a composer of limited ability; the music is short-winded, aimless and clumsy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HarrisonMMB

H. Benham: Latin Church Music in England, c.1460–1575 (London, 1977)

N.J. Sandon: The Henrician Partbooks belonging to Peterhouse, Cambridge (Cambridge, University Library, Peterhouse Manuscripts 471–474): a Study, with Restorations of the Incomplete Compositions Contained in them (diss., U. of Exeter, 1983)

NICHOLAS SANDON

Darke, Harold (Edwin) (b London, 29 Oct 1888; d Cambridge, 28 Nov 1976). English organist. He studied the organ with Parratt and composition with Stanford at the RCM. As organist of St Michael's, Cornhill, for 50 years (1916–66), he gave a midday recital each Monday that made him a city institution. Bach (played in the legato style of Schweitzer) was his speciality, and although he made every organ he played sound like that of St Michael's, he won a worldwide reputation as a performer. He founded the St Michael's Singers in 1919, and remained its conductor until 1966. Vaughan Williams and Howells, among others, composed works for his choral festivals. During the absence on war service of Boris Ord, Darke was acting organist of King's College, Cambridge (1941–5), and then a Fellow (1945–9). In later years his powers did not diminish: he recorded Elgar's Organ Sonata in his early 70s and gave recitals at the Royal Festival Hall to mark his 75th, 80th and 85th birthdays. He composed extensively for organ and choir, but will probably be best remembered for his Meditation on Brother James's Air and for his tuneful setting of the carol In the bleak mid-winter. An Oxford DMus and an honorary Cambridge MA, he was president of the Royal College of Organists (1940–41) and a member of the RCM teaching staff (1919–69). He was appointed CBE in 1966.

STANLEY WEBB

Darmstadt. City in Germany. From 1567 to 1918 it was the residence of the Landgraves of Hesse, and also, from 1806, that of the Grand Dukes of Hessen-Darmstadt; from 1919 to 1945 it was the regional capital, and has since been a centre of local government. Its musical and theatrical traditions date from the 17th century, when Singballette, tournaments and masquerades were performed. The Pädagogium, founded in 1629, had a boys' choir to provide sacred music. In 1670 a comedy theatre was established; among works performed there were Das triumphierende Siegesspiel der wahren Liebe (1673) by Wolfgang Carl Briegel, Hofkapellmeister from 1671 to 1712, and Lully's Acis et Galatée (1687). Under Count Ernst Ludwig, himself a composer, court music flourished, particularly opera. In 1712 the count appointed as Hofkapellmeister Christoph Graupner, who composed hundreds of church cantatas, at least three operas and other works for Darmstadt.

Under Grand Duke Ludwig I (1790–1830) the court opera reached its peak. The Hofkapelle, often conducted by Ludwig himself, comprised 89 musicians, in addition to a chorus of 54, and included many fine singers. Georg Joseph Vogler was Hofkapellmeister and director of a music school, and Weber and Meyerbeer were among his pupils. J.C.H. Rinck was organist between 1805 and 1846. In 1819 the Grossherzogliches Hoftheater was opened with a performance of Spontini's Ferdinand Cortez. The theatre was burnt down in 1871, replaced in 1879 and finally destroyed, together with many of Darmstadt's other musical institutions, in 1944. Important Wagner productions, produced by Kapellmeister Louis Schindelmeisser in collaboration with the scenic designer Carl Brandt (who had worked in Bayreuth), were mounted after 1850. Subsequent conductors have included Willem de Haan, Weingartner, Michael Balling, Böhm, Erich Kleiber, Szell, Hans Drewanz and Marc Albrecht. The last grand duke, Ernst Ludwig (1892–1918), was sympathetic towards modern art, and a tradition of contemporary opera production grew up, with such directors as Carl Ebert and Arthur Maria Rabenalt working in Darmstadt.

Musical societies flourished in the 19th century, including the Musikverein (founded in 1832; conducted by C.A. Mangold, 1839–89), the Mozartverein (1843), the Stadtkirchenchor (1874; conducted by Arnold Mendelssohn, 1891–1912) and the Instrumentalverein (1883). The Städtische Akademie für Tonkunst, founded in 1851, encouraged chamber music and orchestral playing. Today the academy is divided into a music school for amateurs and a department offering professional training. The chair in musicology at the Technische Hochschule (renamed the Technische Universität in 1997) has been held by Wilibald Nagel (1898–1913), Friedrich Noack (1920–58) and Lothar Hoffmann-Erbrecht (1961–90). A new choir, the Konzertchor Darmstadt, was founded in 1987 and a summer festival, Sommerspiele Kranichstein, inaugurated in 1994.

After World War II a temporary theatre was established at the Orangeriehaus, enabling the operatic tradition to be maintained, and in 1972 a new theatre, the Grosses Haus, was opened. Darmstadt's operatic tradition has also been enriched by the city's associations with contemporary music, particularly that of the avant garde. The Internationale Ferienkurse für Neue Musik ('Darmstadt summer courses') were initiated in 1946 by Wolfgang Steinecke, who continued to be closely associated with them until his death in 1961. His successors have been Ernst Thomas (1962–81), Friedrich Hommel (1981–94) and Solf Schaefer (1995–). The courses, held annually until 1970 and subsequently every two years, have encompassed both composition and interpretation and include premières of new works. They have made Darmstadt a major centre of modern music. Among the many distinguished lecturers to have appeared are Adorno, Fortner, Alois Hába, Heiss, Krenek, Leibowitz, Messiaen, Varèse, Scherchen, Kolisch, Rehfuss, Steuermann, Wildgans, Babbitt, Berio, Boulez, Cage, Christoph Caskel, Morton Feldman, Gazzelloni, Henze, Lejaren Hiller, Aloys Kontarsky, Ligeti, Maderna, Nono, Palm, Pousseur, Rihm, Stockhausen, David Tudor and Xenakis.

The Städtisches Fachinstitut für Neue Musik was founded by Steinecke in 1948 to provide an institutional basis for the courses. It was known as the Kranichsteiner Musikinstitut from 1949 to 1962, and in 1963 became the Internationales Musikinstitut Darmstadt, an international information centre for contemporary music, housing a library and various archives. In 1983 an international jazz centre was founded as part of the institute; it became an independent organization, the Jazzinstituts Darmstadt,

Performance of the collective composition 'Ensemble', with Karlheinz Stockhausen as time-keeper, at the Internationales Musikinstitut Darmstadt, 1967 in 1990, and houses a library and an extensive collection of historic recordings and photographs of jazz musicians. The archives of the music department of the Hessische Landes-und Hochschulbibliothek also contains important documents, including the autograph manuscripts of 1450 cantatas by Graupner. The Institut für Neue Musik und Musikerziehung, founded in Bayreuth in 1948 to encourage the inclusion of contemporary music in German musical education, moved its base to Darmstadt in 1951. Since then its annual spring conferences have made an important contribution to music teaching in Germany.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (F. Noack)
W. Nagel: Zur Geschichte der Musik am Hofe zu Darmstadt (Leipzig, 1900)
K. Steinhäuser: Die Musik an den Hessen-Darmstädtischen Lateinschulen im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert (Düsseldorf, 1936)
H. Kaiser: Barocktheater in Darmstadt (Darmstadt, 1951)
H. Kaiser: Modernes Theater in Darmstadt, 1910–1933 (Darmstadt, 1955)
Darmstädter Beiträge zur Neuen Musik(Mainz, 1958–94) [DBNM]
H. Kaiser: Das Grossherzogliche Hoftheater zu Darmstadt, 1810–1910 (Darmstadt, 1964)
E. Noack: Musikgeschichte Darmstadts vom Mittelalter bis zur Goethezeit (Mainz, 1967)
H. Unverricht and K. Oehl, eds.: Musik in Darmstadt zwischen den beiden Weltkriegen (Mainz, 1980)
E.G. Franz and C. Wagner: Darmstädter Kalendar: Daten zur Geschichte unserer Stadt (Darmstadt, 1994)
H. de la Motte-Haber and J.Gerlach, eds.: Vom Singen und Spielen zur Analyse und Reflexion: eine Dokumentation anlässlich der 50. Arbeitstagung des Instituts für Neue Musik und Musikerziehung (Darmstadt, 1996)
R. Stephan and others, eds.: Von Kranichstein zur Gegenwart: 50 Jahre Darmstädter Ferienkurse, 1946–1996 (Stuttgart, 1996)
Darmstadt-Dokumente I, Musik-Konzepte (1998) [special issue]

ERNST THOMAS/WILHELM SCHLÜTER

Darmstadt School. A designation associated primarily with the serial music written in the 1950s by Nono, Maderna, Stockhausen and Boulez and promoted by them in the 1950s at the Darmstadt summer courses. The term was coined by Nono in his 1957 Darmstadt lecture, 'Die Entwicklung der Reihentechnik' (the development of serial technique). The lecture presented analyses of the serial practice in Schoenberg's Variations for Orchestra op.31 and Webern's Variations op.30, before going on to a briefer consideration of new developments in recent works by Boulez (the first movement of Structures I), Maderna (his 1955 string quartet), Stockhausen (Elektronische Studie II and Zeitmasze) and Nono himself (Incontri).

Nono explicitly located the new serial techniques within the historical development of musical modernism, claiming direct lineage from the Second Viennese School. He also drew parallels between the work of the Darmstadt School and that of the Weimar and Dessau Bauhaus in the 1920s and 30s. In the work of the new generation of composers, Nono argued, the series no longer has any thematic function; instead the series, together with its various permutations, had become the basis for the entire composition, determining not only pitch but also tempo, duration, register, dynamic and articulation.

Although the principal composers associated with the School were Nono, Maderna, Stockhausen and Boulez, the compositional techniques of the Darmstadt School were widely adopted by other composers anxious to be at the cutting edge of modernism. Darmstadt serialism may have grown out of expressive necessity but, like any philosophy for which historical inevitability is invoked, it soon hardened into dogmatic orthodoxy for its disciples. The activities of these zealots – Franco Evangelisti called them the 'dodecaphonic police' – has led in latter years to the use of 'Darmstadt' as a pejorative term, implying a desiccated, slavishly rule-based music.

The adherence of the School's founders to their collegial aesthetic ended with the 1950s. Nono reacted with some hostility to the analysis of his Il canto sospeso in Stockhausen's 1958 essay 'Musik und Sprache'; Stockhausen in turn was angered when Nono's 1959 Darmstadt lecture, 'Presenza storica nella musica d'oggi' indirectly attacked the work of John Cage. Aleatory, electronic and 'moment' forms took the music of all four composers in new, divergent directions and by 1961 the Darmstadt School had effectively dissolved, though Boulez, Stockhausen and Maderna continued to be active at the summer courses.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Stockhausen: 'Musik und Sprache', Die Reihe, vi (1960), 36–58; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, vi (1964), 40–64
J. Stenzl, ed.: Luigi Nono: Texte, Studien zu seiner Musik (Zürich, 1975)
E. Restagno, ed.: Nono (Turin, 1987)
R. Fearn: Bruno Maderna (London, 1990)
A. Trudu: La 'Scuola' di Darmstadt (Milan, 1992)
R. Stephan and others, eds.: Von Kranichstein zur Gegenwart (Stuttgart, 1996)
C. Fox: 'Luigi Nono and the Darmstadt School', CMR, xviii/2 (1999), 111–30

CHRISTOPHER FOX

Darnton, (Philip) Christian (b nr Leeds, 30 Oct 1905; d Hove, 14 April 1981). English composer. He studied with Harry Farjeon and later at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge (1923–6), with Charles Wood, where he wrote the highly chromatic Piano Sonata op.33 and cultivated a close friendship with Walter Leigh. He subsequently studied the bassoon and conducting at the RCM (1926–7) and composition privately with Butting in Berlin (1928). Following a brief, unsuccessful appointment at Stowe School (1929), he became assistant editor of the Music Lover (newly launched under the editorship of Edwin Evans, 1931). Principal works of this period are the Piano Concerto (1933), the cadenza of which is an early attempt to notate an inner tempo of extreme waywardness, and Swansong (1935, now lost) for soprano and orchestra. In 1936, with Hallis, Sophie Wyss, Rawsthorne and Britten, he became a founder member of the Hallis Concerts Society, for which his Suite concertante was written (first peformed with Sascha Parnes as solo violinist and Goodall as conductor, London, 1937). Further successes were the remarkably advanced Five Orchestral Pieces (ISCM Festival, Warsaw 1939), the publication of a general introduction to music (You and Music, 1940) and a left-wing cantata Ballad of Freedom (1941–2). From 1944 to 1946 he provided scores for newsreels and documentary films. During the war he was injured in a fall, and left partially paralysed. A conversion to communism necessitated a severe simplification of his dissonant avant-garde style, in response to a desire for a more widespread understanding of his work. This change of direction, together with discouragement at his lack of recognition, resulted in the loss of his ability to compose further for almost 20 years: the most notable works from this 'populist' period are the unstaged opera Fantasy Fair (1949–51) and a second cantata Jet Pilot (1952). The appearance of the Concerto for Orchestra (1970–73), founded on the pattern of ancient Greek drama, and of the Fourth Symphony (1975–8), based on the tritone and therefore subtitled 'Diabolus in musica', revealed a strikingly original mind still at work.

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Incid music: Music for the People, 1939; Fuente Avejuna (L. de Vega), chbr orch, 1943; Polyphemus (pastoral mime for puppet theatre, R. Nichols), *c*1944; Romeo and Juliet (W. Shakespeare), 1945; The Tragedy of Good Intentions (P. Ustinov), 1945; The Merchant of Venice (Shakespeare), 1946; King Lear (Shakespeare), 1947

Film music: Gen, 1944; A Harbour Goes to France, 1944 [also arr. as orch suite Atlantic]; The Route to Moscow, 1944; The Antwerp Story, 1945; Birth Day, 1945; Channel Islands, 1945; D.3, 1945; Marine Salvage, 1945; Muscle Menders, 1945; River Tyne, 1945; You Can't Kill a City, 1945; Green Fields Beyond, 1946; Le monde en marche

Other: Floriana (ballet, L. Hurry), Birmingham, 16 Dec 1938; Fantasy Fair (op, R. Swingler), 1949–51 [unperf.]

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Monet, 1924; 2 Preludes, op.22, 1924; Piece, op.17 no.2, chbr orch, 1925; 2 Preludes, op.25 nos.1–2, 1925, arr. pf duet; Ov., *c*1925; Sinfonietta, ww, brass, op.32, 1925 arr. pf duet; Concertino, pf, chbr orch, 1926; Intermezzo, chbr orch, *c*1927–8; Vn Conc., 1928; Ernste, ov., *c*1928; Lustspielovertüre, *c*1928; Movement, 1929; Vn Conc., *c*1930; Sym. no.1, 1929–31, arr. pf duet; Pf Conc., 1933; Sinfonietta, chbr orch, 1933–4; Conc., va, str, 1933–5; Conc., hp, wind, 1934; 4 Pieces in the First Position, str, 1934 [2 sets]; 3 Easy Pieces in the First Position, str, 1934; 3 Slow Movts, 1934 [arr. of J.S. Bach]; Suite concertante, vn, chbr orch, 1936; Studies, str, 1938; 5 Orch Pieces, 1938; Sym. no.2 'The Anagram', *c*1939–40, arr. pf duet; Triptych Variations, str, 1939–40; Stalingrad, ov., 1943; Untitled movt, str, 1943; Sym. no.3, D, 1944; Cantilena, str, 1946, rev. 1947; 2 Fanfares, brass, *c*1947; A Country Ov. (A Comedy Ov.), 1948; Concertino, C, pf, str, 1948, arr. 2 pf; Epic, 1953, arr. pf duet; Conc., orch, 1970–73; Sym. no.4 'Diabolus in musica' (20 Minute Sym.), 1975–8; arr. of P. Jarnach: Sonatina, op.18, 1928; Serenade – a quodlibet, ww qt, str

Chbr: Dance, 5 str, 1924; Life, a Psychological Study, vn, pf, 1924; Movement, pf trio, 1924; Movement, op.31, vc, pf, 1924; Second Rhapsody, vn, pf, 1924; Ballet, 7 str, perc, 1924; 3 Duos, fl, pf, 1924–5; Str Qt no.1, op.23, 1924–5; 4 Short Pieces, op.26 no.1, fl, cl, bn, cornet, 1925; Movement, str qt, 1925; Trio, op.28, fl, vc, pf, 1925; Rondo and Presto, op.26 no.2, fl, cl, bn, va, 1926, rev. 1928; Octet, fl, cl, bn, A-cornet, vn, va, vc, db, 1926–7, rev. 1928 [1 movt arr. pf duet, op.30]; 5 Short Studies, str qt, 1928; Toccata-Rondino, Cadenza and Serenata, vn, hp, 1928; Sonatina, 2 vn/(vn, va), *c*1928; Dance Suite, perf. 1930; Str Trio, 1930; Str Qt no.2 'For Amateurs', 1933; Sonatina, fl, ob, pf, 1934; Str Qt no.3, 1934; Suite, fl, vn, va, hp, 1935; 5 Pieces, str qt, 1938; Sonatina, fl, hp, pf, *c*1938; 5 Pieces, vc, pf, 1938–9; Epic Suite, vn, pf, 1947; Str Qt no.4, 1973

Kbd (for pf unless otherwise stated): Commemoration, 1924; 4 Pieces 'Psychogenesis', 1924; Hommage à Ravel, 1924; In the Nursery, 1924; Minuet, 1924; The Primitive Exists in Every Man, pf duet, 1924; To a Dead Goldfish, 1924; 4 Pieces, 1924–5; Movement, 2 pf, 1924–6; An English Set of Lessons for Walter Leigh, kbd, 1925; Movement, op.30, 2 pf, 1925; Piece, pf duet, 1925; Sonata, op.33, 1925; 3 Pieces, op.31, 1926; 3 Pieces, 1928; 2 Compositions, pianola, 1929; Arabesque, pianola, 1930; Suite no.1, 1930; Movement, *c*1930; Study, A, *c*1930; Suite no.2, 1932; Suite no.3, 1932; Duo concertante, 2 pf, 1933; Nicholas's Lullaby, 1933; Toccata, 1934; Sonata no.2, 1944; Capriccio, 1949; 3 Variations, *c*1950; Fantasia in Homage to J.S. Bach, 2 pf/pf duet, 1953; Village Wedding Ov., pf duet, 1953; Moto perpetuo, pf duet, 1954

VOCAL

With orch: Swansong (R. Nichols), S, orch, 1935 [lost]; Ballad of Freedom (R. Swingler), T, nar, SATB, orch, 1941–2; 2 Songs,

SATB, orch, *c*1944; Jet Pilot (cant., Swingler), Bar, SATB, str, 1952; A Set of Loves, spkr, S, Bar, orch
Songs (for 1v, pf): The Nun (A. Symons), 1924; The Chosen People (W.N. Ewer), 1924; During Music (Symons), 1924; Vale (N.A.G.), 1924; Les trois amis (C. Hallis), 1936; Vale (Swingler), drinking song, 1941; Nigeria, We Hail Thee; A New World Growing (Swingler)
Principal publishers: Lengnick, Goodwin and Tabb, Winthrop Rogers

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.C. Darnton: You and Music (Harmondsworth, 1940, 2/1945)
D. ApIvor: 'Christian Darnton', Composer, no.74 (1981–2), 13–19

ANDREW PLANT

Darokhin, Wladzimir Vasil'yevich (b Slonim, Grodno district, 1 Jan 1948). Belarusian composer. He graduated from the Leningrad Conservatory in 1973 having studied composition with Vladislav Uspensky. He was board secretary of the Belarusian Composers' Union (1978–89) before he started teaching at the National Conservatory in Minsk in 1989. He was made an Honoured Representative of the Arts of the Belarusian SSR in 1988. In his works of the early 1970s, contrasting stylistic tendencies manifested themselves: the instrumental pieces display the influence of the Second Viennese School and the Polish avant garde, whereas the vocal compositions bear the imprint of Sviridov's 'new simplicity'. His First Symphony displays such polystylistic tendencies – including folk music, a collage of 19th-century idioms and contemporary light music – and portrays a mottled image of the modern world. In the individual and atonal Second Symphony, late 20th-century dramatic and lyrical concepts are reinterpreted through a Baroque aesthetic which emphasized soloistic writing and polyphonically motivated structuring processes. The early 1980s witnessed a shift towards the neo-romantic and the resultant programmatic and nationalistic bias is evident in works which utilize 19th-century forms within a contemporary harmonic language. In these widely-recognized works, which include Pastoral', Memariyalï ('Memorial') and the Third Symphony Frantsïsk Skarïna – zhïtstsyo i bessmyarotnasts' ('Frantsisk Skarïna – Life and Immortality'), national and historical themes are given philosophical and lyrical interpretations. His creative evolution from polystylism to monostylism has been characterized by a constant striving towards emotional expression in music. (Vladimir Dorokhin, Moscow, 1987)

WORKS

Choral: Zyamlya Belaruzi [The Land of Belarus] (orat, P. Brovka), 1981; Arabskie pritchi [Arabian Parables] (cant., A. Nuvas), 1996
Orch: Sym. no.1, 1976; Sym. no.2, str qt, chbr orch, 1979; Pf Conc., 1983; Memarïyal [Memorial], suite, chbr orch, 1984; Prinosheniye svyashchennomu ognyu [Offering to the Sacred Fire], sym. poem, 1985; Pastoral', ob, chbr orch, 1988; Sym. no.3, Frantsïsk Skarïna – zhïtstsyo i bessmyarotnasts' [Frantsisk Skarïna – Life and Immortality], 1990; Videniye i plach o pokinutoy derevne [Vision and Lament about the Abandoned Village], sym. poem, 1992; Maggiore sempre (Alleluia), sym. poem, 1997
Chbr and solo inst: Variations, pf, 1969; Sonata, fl, pf, 1970; Kontsertnaya fantaziya [Conc. Fantasy], cimb, pf, 1977; Urok muzïki [Lesson of Music], cycle, pf, 1986; Muzïka dlya fleytï i kammernogo ansamblya [Music for Flute and Chbr Ens], 1994
Song cycles (1v, pf) after A. Blok, I. Bunin, 1973
Incid music, other inst pieces
Principal publishers: Sovetskiy Kompozitor, Muzïka

RADOSLAVA ALADOVA

Darondeau, Henry (b Strasbourg, 28 Feb 1779; d Paris, 30 July 1865). French composer and theatre musician. He was the son of the composer and singing teacher Benoni Darondeau (b Munich, 1740; d Paris) whose volumes of 'petits airs' and opera Le soldat par amour were published in Paris. In 1802 Henry entered the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied the piano with Ladurner and composition with Berton. Although he achieved no formal academic distinction there, he was a sound student and became an able and respected teacher. He lived in Bourges from 1836 to 1860, when he returned to Paris. As composer and musical arranger to the Théâtre des Variétés he moved in the same circles as Adolphe Adam and Habeneck, with both of whom he became friendly.

Darondeau was a prolific composer of popular romances, piano variations, fantasies and theatrical potpourris. His tune 'Amis, jamais l' chagrin n' m'approche' was set six times by Béranger, was used as the basis of Gustave Leroy's Les aristos, and also found its way into the vaudeville Préville et Taconnet (see Locke, with musical example). He also wrote two operas and many ballets, which were staged at the Opéra and Porte Saint Martin. A volume of his church music appeared in 1857. His music possesses little interest today since his inventive power was small and his imagination commonplace. Occasionally, however, his songs have a harmonic piquancy or rhythmic interest which is attractive and typical of the salon taste of the period at its best.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R. Cotte) [with list of works]
H. Gougelot: La romance française sous la Révolution et l'Empire (Melun, 1938)
R.P. Locke: 'The Music of the French Chanson, 1810–1850', Paris in the Eighteen-Thirties: Northampton, MA, 1982, 431–56

BRIAN PRIMMER/R

Darré, Jeanne-Marie (b Givet, 30 July 1905; d le Port-Marly, 26 Jan 1999). French pianist. She studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Marguerite Long and Isidor Philipp, receiving a premier prix in 1919. Pronounced a 'born pianist' after her Paris début in 1920, she came to international attention in 1926 when she played all five concertos by Saint-Saëns in one programme with the Lamoureux Orchestra under Paray. She subsequently performed throughout Europe and the USA and appeared with such conductors as Henry Wood, Ansermet, Münch and Ormandy. From 1958 to 1975 she taught at the Paris Conservatoire. Her style, marked by extreme clarity, rhythmic alacrity and a spontaneous effervescent quality, was ideally suited to the virtuoso repertory. Her outstanding recordings include the five concertos of Saint-Saëns, conducted by Louis Fourestier, and her 1947 accounts of Liszt's La Campanella and Feux follets and seven of Chopin's études.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Elder: Pianists at Play (Evanston, IL, 1982)

CHARLES TIMBRELL

Darreg, Ivor [O'Hara, Kenneth Vincent Gerard] (b Portland, OR, 5 May 1917; d San Diego, CA, 13 Feb 1994). American composer, instrument inventor and theorist. He studied the cello, the piano and wind instruments at an early age. A composition student of Charles Wakefield Cadman, he began to compose using quarter-tones and just intonation during the 1930s. Although ill health prevented him from attending college, he taught himself electrical engineering and invented pioneering electro-acoustical instruments, including the microtonal keyboard oboe (1936), the amplifying clavichord (1940), the amplified cello (1941) and the electric keyboard drum (around 1945). During the 1960s he designed and built a 60-tone electronic organ with an 'elastic tuning' system that automatically justified traditional musical intervals.

In 1962 M. Joel Mandelbaum's 19-tone compositions and Ervin Wilson's microtonal instrument patents introduced Darreg to new tuning systems. He began an intensive programme of musical exploration and discovered that all equal temperaments have uniquely valuable musical properties ('moods'). To hear these scales, he refretted guitars to 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 22, 24 and 31 notes per octave and constructed metallophones with 5, 10, 13, 14, 15, 17, 19, 22, 24 and 53 notes per octave. During the 1970s he created justly-tuned Megalyra and Kosmolyra amplified steel-guitar-like instruments, the sound of which has been described as 'tuned thunder'. His last compositions use retunable MIDI synthesizers.

A gifted communicator, Darreg wrote more than 120 articles on music, linguistics, art, creativity and vocalized mathematical notation (Numaudo Code, 1960). His musical legacy includes over 200 recordings of compositions, improvisations, lectures and demonstrations. He coined the term 'xenharmonic' in 1963 to describe 'music which sounds unlike that composed in the familiar 12-tone equal temperament'. Recordings of his music have been issued by the Microtonal Record Shelf and the Ivor Darreg Memorial Fund.

WORKS
(selective list)

information in square brackets specifies tuning in notes per octave

Five Subminor Sketches, vn [24 tones], 1943
More Microtonal Music, 1957–90; posthumous collection
Excursions into the Enharmonic, ji [17, 19, 22, 31 tones], vc, gui, elecs, 1962–75
In Limbo, elec org [elastic tuning: 12, 31 tones], tape, 1962
Colorless Green Ideas Sleep Furiously, ji [22 tones], 1972–5
Piano Tuna Fish Scale, musique concrète, pf [randomly tuned], 1972
Preludes, guis [19, 31 tones], 1975–81
Purple Bedroom, Blues, gui [19 tones], 1978
Teen Tunes, vols.i–ii, synth [13–19 tones], 1988–9
Beyond the Xenharmonic Frontier, vols. i–iii, synth [9–53 tones], 1990; engineered by B. McLaren]
Multiples of Five, synth [5–60 tones], 1993; engineered by McLaren Detwelvulate, synth [various tunings], 1994; posthumous collection

WRITINGS

'Music and Electronics', Pacific Coast Musician, xxxv/1 (1945), 8–9
'The Quartertone Question' (1947) [self-published pamphlet]
'Shall We Improve the Piano?' (1965, rev. 1967) [self-published booklet]
Xenharmonic Bulletin, i–xii (1966–83); repr. as Xenharmonikôn, i–xii (1972–89), ed. J.H. Chalmers
'Non-12 Tone Guitar, Refretting Instruments for Unusual Harmonic Possibilities', Guitar Player, xxii/2 (1978), 24–5, 82ff [incl. score and fretting tables] with B. McLaren: 'Biases in Xenharmonic Scales', Xenharmonikôn, xiii, 5–19
'Megalyra, Drone and Newel Post', Experimental Musical Instruments, ii/2 (1986), 22–24

JOHN CHALMERS, BRIAN MCLAREN

Darrell, Peter (b Richmond, Surrey, 16 Sept 1929; d Glasgow, 2 Dec 1987). English choreographer. See BALLET, §3(iv).

Dart, (Robert) Thurston (b Kingston, Surrey, 3 Sept 1921; d London, 6 March 1971). English musicologist, performer and teacher. He was educated at Hampton Grammar School, where he was a chorister of the Chapel Royal, Hampton Court. He studied at the RCM (1938–9) and subsequently read mathematics at University College, Exeter (BSc 1942). After the war he studied in Belgium with Charles Van den Borren. In 1946 he returned to England and began a career as a harpsichordist; the next year he was appointed an assistant lecturer in music at Cambridge University.

Dart was editor of the Galpin Society Journal from its inception in 1947 to 1954. From 1950 to 1965 he was secretary of Musica Britannica, and remained the driving force behind the series to the end of his life. He became a member of the Royal Musical Association council in 1952, and later a member of the editorial committee of the Purcell Society. During this period he gave frequent recitals on the harpsichord, clavichord and organ, and many broadcast talks. About 1950 there began his long association with L'Oiseau-Lyre, for which he made many recordings both as solo keyboard player and continuo player. He became in 1952 a full lecturer at Cambridge, and in 1953 a fellow of Jesus College. In 1955 he became the artistic director of the Philomusica of London; from then until 1959, when ill-health compelled him to reduce his commitments, he lived an immensely energetic triple life of teaching, writing and editing, and concert-giving. In 1962 he was appointed professor of music at Cambridge. His strife-ridden tenure of the Chair ended in 1964 when he was offered the newly created King Edward Professorship of Music in the University of London, where he established a teaching Faculty of Music at King's College and proceeded to create radically revised syllabuses for the London music degrees.

Dart's main fields of scholarship and performance lay in the music of J.S. Bach, in keyboard and consort music of the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries, and particularly in the life and music of John Bull (on whom he left a book unfinished at his death). He wrote a great many articles on a wide variety of subjects. The essence of his work was his preoccupation with musical sources themselves. Most of his hypotheses – which were often audacious – arose directly from the study of a source, its preparation, ownership and use. A dynamic teacher, he trained a generation of scholars not only in clear, critical thinking about musical topics but also in palaeographic, diplomatic and bibliographic skills, and emphasized the study of the history and techniques of printing. Towards the end of his life he advanced controversial theories concerning Bach's orchestral suites and Brandenburg Concertos, and embodied them in recordings with the Academy of St Martin-in-the-Fields. Among his 90 recordings are 'Masters of Early English Keyboard Music', keyboard works by Bach, Froberger, Handel and Purcell, and Couperin's Les nations. Apart from his own numerous editions (many as co-editor) he also supervised revised editions of E.H. Fellowes's series the English Madrigal School (as the English Madrigalists) and the Collected Vocal Works of William Byrd (as the Collected Works of William Byrd) as well as Maurice Cauchie's edition of François Couperin. He was a widely cultured man, possessing not only a fine collection of musical instruments and a vast personal library including manuscripts and early printed editions, but also a large collection of 20th-century drawings, paintings and sculpture.

EDITIONS

with N. Fortune: J. Dowland: Ayres for Four Voices, MB, vi (1953, 2/1963)
Thomas Morley: Keyboard Works (London, 1954, rev. 2/1964) with W. Coates: Jacobean Consort Music, MB, ix (1955, 2/1966)
Clement Matchett's Virginal Book (1612) (London, 1957, 2/1969)

Henry Purcell: Miscellaneous Odes and Cantatas, Works, xxvii (London, 1957) [with A. Lewis, D. Arundell and A. Goldsbrough]; Fantasias and other Instrumental Music, ibid., xxxi (London, 1959, rev.2/1968)
The Second Part of Musick's Hand-Maid, Revised and Corrected by Henry Purcell (London, 1958, 3/1969) with H.K. Andrews: T. Morley: Collected Motets (London, 1959) with P. Brunold: L. Couperin: Pièces de clavecin (Monaco, 1959)
Clavichord Music of the Seventeenth Century (London, 1960)
L. Marchand: Pièces de clavecin (Monaco, 1960)
Invitation to Madrigals (London, 1961–80)
with M. Laurie: H. Purcell: Dido and Aeneas (London, 1961)
Parthenia (London, 1962, rev. 2/1962)
John Bull: Keyboard Music: II, MB, xix (1963, 2/1970) with P. Brunold: L.N. Clérambault: Oeuvres complètes (Monaco, 1964) with P. Brunold: E.-C. Jacquet de la Guerre: Pièces de clavecin (Monaco, 1965) with W. Oxenbury: Intabulatura nova di balli (Venice, 1551) (London, 1965, 2/1968)
Invitation to Medieval Music (London, 1967–78)
J.C. de Chambonnières: Les deux livres de clavecin (Monaco, 1969)
The First Part of Musick's Hand-Maid (London, 1969)

WRITINGS

'Morley's Consort Lessons of 1599', PRMA, lxxiv (1947–8), 1–9
'Simone Molinaro's Lute-Book of 1599', ML, xxviii (1947), 258–61
'The Cittern and its English Music', GSJ, i (1948), 46–63 with R. Donington: 'The Origin of the In Nomine', ML, xxx (1949), 101–6
'Tregian's Anthology', ML, xxxii (1951), 205–16
'English Music and Musicians in 17th-century Holland', IMSCR V: Utrecht 1952, 139–45
'The Cibell', RBM, vi (1952), 24–30
'The Mock Trumpet', GSJ, vi (1953), 35–40
'Rôle de la danse dans l'"ayre" anglais', Musique et poésie au XVIe siècle Paris 1953, 203–9
The Interpretation of Music (London, 1954, 4/1967/R; Ger. trans., 1959; Swed. trans., 1964)
'New Sources of Virginal Music', ML, xxxv (1954), 93–106
'Origines et sources de la musique de chambre en Angleterre (1500–1530)', 'Le manuscrit pour le virginal de Trinity College, Dublin', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 77–84, 237–9
'Jacobean Consort Music', PRMA, lxxxi (1954–5), 63–75
'A Hand-List of English Instrumental Music Printed before 1681', GSJ, viii (1955), 13–26
'The Printed Fantasies of Orlando Gibbons', ML, xxxvii (1956), 342–9
'Lord Herbert of Cherbury's Lute-Book', ML, xxxviii (1957), 136–48
'Miss Mary Burwell's Instruction Book for the Lute', GSJ, xi (1958), 3–62
'The Dartmouth Magnificat', ML, xxxix (1958), 209–17
'The Repertory of the Royal Wind Music', GSJ, xi (1958), 70–77
with H.K. Andrews: 'Fourteenth-Century Polyphony in a Fountains Abbey MS Book', ML, xxxix (1958), 1–12
'Purcell's Chamber Music', PRMA, lxxxv (1958–9), 81–93
'John Bull's "Chapel"', ML, xl (1959), 279–82
'Sweelinck's "Fantazia on a Theme used by John Bull"', TVNM, xviii/4 (1959), 167–9
'The Organ-Book of the Crutched Friars of Liège', RBM, xvii (1963), 21–8 with W. Emery and C. Morris: Editing Early Music: Notes on the Preparation of Printer's Copy (London, 1963)
'Two New Documents relating to the Royal Music, 1584–1605', ML, xlv (1964), 16–21
'Robert ap Huw's Manuscript of Welsh Harp Music (*c*1613)', GSJ, xxi (1968), 52–65
'Elizabeth Edgeworth's Keyboard Book', ML, l (1969), 470–74
'Quelques précisions sur la notation des pièces de clavecin de François Couperin', L'interprétation de la musique française aux XVIIème et XVIIIème siècles: Paris 1969, 213–20
'Bach's Early Keyboard Music: a Neglected Source (Brussels, B.R., Fétis 2960)', AcM, xlii (1970), 236–8
'An Early Seventeenth-Century Book of English Organ Music for the Roman Rite', ML, lii (1971), 27–38
'Bononcini sets Handel a Test', MT, cxii (1971), 324–5

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituaries: A. Vlasto, Chelys, ii (1970), 3–4; [S. Sadie], The Times (8 March 1971); R. Donnington, JAMS, xxiv (1971), 502–3; S. Jeans, GSJ, xxiv (1971), 2–4; A. Lewis, ML, lii (1971), 236–8; N. Marriner, Gramophone, xlix (1971–2), 423–4; A. Percival, MT, cxxii (1971), 478 only
I. Bent, ed.: Source Materials and the Interpretation of Music: a Memorial Volume to Thurston Dart (London, 1981) [incl. complete list of writings and discography]

IAN D. BENT

Dartington International Summer School. A combination of advanced coaching, musical holiday and concert festival organized each summer at Dartington Hall, an arts and education centre near Totnes, Devon. It was established in 1947 as Bryanston Summer School and was held at Bryanston School, Dorset; it was registered the following year as a non-profit-distributing company, and it moved to Dartington in 1953, where it became the Dartington Summer School. It originated in a suggestion by the pianist Schnabel, at the inaugural Edinburgh Festival (1947), that students, teachers and artists might work together as a festival community. William Glock (a Schnabel pupil) was the first director of music, succeeded in 1980 by Peter Maxwell Davies, and from 1985 by Gavin Henderson. In the same year it was renamed the Dartington International Summer School. Administrators have been John Amis (1948–82), Gill Kay (1982–8) and Marcus Davey since 1989.

From the first year, when tutors included Nadia Boulanger, Hindemith and Schnabel, the summer school has continued to attract distinguished international and leading British composers and other musicians to coach, lecture and perform in a variety of subjects. The mixture of instruction, musical participation and professional performance attracts people with many abilities and interests. Most enrol on a fee-paying basis, but a limited number of bursaries are provided for music students who could not otherwise afford to attend. Over 120 concerts are given each year and, since 1985, courses in music theatre, composition and dance have been developed. The general aim of the summer school is to supplement the normal academic training for students, and to broaden and refresh musical enthusiasm among amateurs, in the surroundings of a summer holiday.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Amis: 'Summer Schools of Music', Concert Goer's Annual, ii (1958), 70–75
P. Cox and others, eds.: Imogen Holst at Dartington (Dartington, 1988)

NOËL GOODWIN

Darvas [Steinberger], Gábor (b Szatmárnémeti, 18 Jan 1911; d Budapest, 18 Feb 1985). Hungarian composer and musicologist. He studied bassoon (1926–32) and then composition with Kodály at the Budapest Academy of Music (1929–32). From 1939 to 1948 he lived in Chile where he worked as assistant conductor to Erich Kleiber (1939–41) and later as a musicologist concerned with music of the 15th and 16th centuries. After returning to Hungary he worked for Hungarian Radio (1949–50, 1953–60), was editor-in-chief at Editio Musica Budapest (1955–7), artistic director of Hungaraton (1957–9) and music adviser to the Hungarian Copyright Office (1960–72). His main compositional work took place after 1960. His synthesis of Bartókian ideas with aleatoricism and serialism can be heard in the orchestral works Improvisations symphoniques and Section aurea. Darvas was one of the first Hungarian composers to work with tape: Medália (1965) was performed at the 1966 ISCM Festival and in Darmstadt in 1968.

WORKS
(selective list)

Improvisations symphoniques, pf, orch, 1963; Varianti, orch, 1964; Sectio aurea, orch, 1964; Medália [Medal] [A. József), S, perc, kbd, tape, 1965; A torony [The Tower], S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1967, version for chorus, tape, 1984; Rotation for 5, vib, mar, gui, hpd, pf, 1968; Prelude, tape, 1970; Passiózene [Passion Music], vv, tape, 1974–8; Bánat [Grief] (G. Karinthy), B, orch, tape, 1978; Reminiszenciák [Reminiscences], tape, 1979; Poèmes électroniques, tape, 1982–3; Fantasia, pf, chbr ens, 1983; Szonfonikus etűdök [Sym. Etudes], orch, 1984

Orchestrations: Bakfark: Three Fantasies, 1951; Liszt: Spanish Rhapsody, 1952; Liszt: Concerto pathetique, 1953; Liszt: Csárdás macabre, 1954; Liszt: Sunt lacrimae rerum, 1957

Principal publisher: Editio Musica

WRITINGS

A zenekari muzsika műhelytitkai [Workshop secrets of orchestral music] (Budapest, 1960)

Évezredek hangszerei [Instruments of 1000 years] (Budapest, 1961)

A zene anatómiája [The anatomy of music] (Budapest, 1974)

Kniga o muzyke [A book about music] (Moscow, 1983)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Várnai: 'Hungarian Composers Today: the Middle Generation', Tempo, no.88 (1969), 25–33

F. ANDRÁS WILHEIM/RACHEL BECKLES WILLSON

Darwīsh, 'Alī al- (b Aleppo, Syria, 1884; d Aleppo, 26 Nov 1952). Syrian musician and music researcher. He studied music and muwashshaḥ singing in Aleppo and Istanbul. From 1912 to 1920 he lived in Turkey, where he taught music and wrote an unpublished book entitled The Real Theories in the Science of Musical Readings. On return to Aleppo he became leader of the Mawlawi Sufi group, playing the flute (nāy) during the ceremonies and teaching muwashshaḥ singing.

In 1927 he was invited to teach at the Royal Institute of Music in Cairo; his pupils included the composers RIYĀD AL-SUNBAṬĪ and Muḥammad 'Abd al-Wahhāb. In Egypt he documented many old muwashshaḥ and musical pieces. In 1931 he went to Tunisia to do joint research with the French musicologist Baron D'Erlanger, and while resident in Tunis taught muwashshaḥ for six years. He made the first notations of Tunisian Andalusian NAWBA suites, for which he was awarded the Medal of Pride. In 1932 he participated in the Cairo International Conference on Arab Music, presenting important research material on modes of the eastern Arab world and on rhythms.

In 1939 he returned to Aleppo, but was later invited to Damascus to teach music. In 1945 he moved to Baghdad to teach muwashshaḥ, and during that period recorded over 120 sung examples. In 1951 he returned to Aleppo where he recorded numerous muwashshaḥ suites and Andalusian nawba suites for the radio. He also composed muwashshaḥ and melodies and made recordings of his excellent flute playing. His son Nadīm al-Darwīsh continued his musical work.

SAADALLA AGHA AL-KALAA

Darwīsh, Sayyid [Sayed] (b Alexandria, 17 March 1892; d Alexandria, 15 Sept 1923). Egyptian composer and singer. He is the most popular figure in Egyptian music. He had a hard childhood, during which he learnt the Qur'an and religious chants, as well as picking up the current secular songs. For two years he studied Islamic theology at a branch of the Al Azhar mosque, but he then decided to make his career as a singer-composer. He had to sing at modest local cafés, and he attributed his early compositions to a famous composer. Under family pressure he was sometimes forced to take manual jobs, and his early marriage, the first of four, complicated matters. Once, while working as a builder and singing to entertain his fellow workers, he was heard by the Syrian brothers Attalah, who engaged him to sing with their drama troupe on a trip to Syria. During his travels he learnt a great deal about classical Arab vocal forms from the master 'Uthmān al-Mawṣilī.

Returning to Egypt he achieved some fame as a singer-composer. An important turning-point came when he went to Cairo, probably in 1917, and Salāma Ḥijāzī introduced him to his theatre public. This was the beginning of a brilliant career as a composer for the theatre. Although his first 'operetta', Faysouzshah, was a failure, he soon achieved success, becoming the favourite composer in this genre and even forming his own (short-lived) troupe. His 26 operettas opened up new vistas for Egyptian music: the slow, repetitive, over-ornamented vocal style was replaced by a light, truly expressive manner, making apt use of the choir, and he introduced some spontaneous counterpoint in Shahrazād. Darwīsh's operettas owed their immense popularity to their social and patriotic subjects, and their workers' songs. The telling musical characterization is essentially Egyptian and strongly reminiscent of folk music. Darwīsh may have been influenced by the Italian opera performed in Cairo: he admired Verdi and had planned, just before his early death, to study in Italy.

A prolific composer, he was a master of the old forms as well as the new theatre music; his ten dawr pieces and 21 muwashshaḥ songs (another 17 are of doubtful attribution) are classics of the repertory, reflecting his deep understanding of the modal subtleties and rhythmic complexities of traditional art music. Many of his tunes have been orchestrated by younger composers such as Abū-Bakr Khayrāt and Gamāl 'Abdal-Raḥīm. In recognition of his importance, a concert hall in Cairo was named after him.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.A. Hammād: Sayyid Darwīsh: ḥayāh wa nagham [Life and music] (Cairo, 1970)

M. El-Hefny: Sayyid Darwīish: ḥayātuhu wa athar 'abqariyyatihi [His life and monuments of his genius] (Cairo, 1974/R)

H. Darwīsh: Min agl abī [For my father] (Cairo, 1990)

S. Darwīsh: Aldhikrā al-mi'awiyya li mīlād almūsīqār Sayyid Darwīsh [The centenary of the birth of the musician] (1992)

M. El-Sayyed Hilail: Taḥlīl al-adwār al 'ashara li Sayyid Darwīsh [Analysis of Sayyid Darwīsh's ten dawrs] (thesis, Cairo Academy of Arts, n.d.)

SAMHA EL KHOLY

Dārzi š, Emīls (b Jaunpiebalga, 3 Nov 1875; d Riga, 31 Aug 1910). Latvian composer and writer on music. He studied the organ with L. Homilius and composition with Rimsky-Korsakov at the St Petersburg Conservatory (1898–1901). From 1901 he lived in Riga; his early death occurred when he was run over by a train. He was one of the first notable Latvian composers of solo and choral songs. In his lifetime he was also known as a symphonist, but most of his orchestral works have been lost, apart from the Valse mélancolique; only a fragment of the piano score of his opera Rožainās dienas ('Rosy Days') has survived. All his extant works have won a firm place in the Latvian repertory; his songs, in particular, are captivating for their rich melodies and powerful emotional appeal. Especially remarkable are his large choral songs in symphonic style, such as the epic-dramatic Lauztās priedes ('Broken Pines') and Senatne ('Times of Yore'), and the lyrical-dramatic Sapņu tālumā ('In Dreamy Distances'). Dārziņš was also one of the founders of professional Latvian music criticism and, through his writings, a leader of Latvian musical thought in the early 20th century.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Rožainās dienas [Rosy days], 1908–10
Orch: Valse mélancolique, 1904
Choral: Lauztās priedes [Broken Pines]; Sapņu tālumā [In Dreamy Distances]; Senatne [Times of Yore]
Collected edns: 15 lettische Chöre für gemischten Chor (Vienna, 1940); Lieder-Album lettischer Komponisten (Vienna, 1940); Dziesmas balsij un klavierēm [Songs for Voice and Piano] (Riga, 1959); Dziesmas koriem [Choral Songs] (Riga, 1960); Latviešu kordziesmas antoloģija [Anthology of Latvian choral songs], i (Riga, 1986)

WRITINGS

'Alfrēds Kalniņš', Zalktis, no.2 (1907), 127–45
'Par operas izcelšanos' [On the origins of opera], Zalktis, no.3 (1907), 138–64
'Jāzeps Vītols', Zalktis, nos.5–7 (1908)
ed. J. Vītoliņš: Par mūziku: rakstu krājums [On music: a collection of writings] (Riga, 1951)
ed. A. Darkevics: Raksti [Writings] (Riga, 1975)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Peņģerots, ed.: Emīls Dārziņš: pieminas krājums [Dārziņš: memorial collection] (Riga, 1925)
A. Stankevičs: Dvēseles atbalss [A response of the soul] (Riga, 1978)

JĒKABS VĪTOLIŅŠ

Dārzi š, Volfgangs (b Riga, 26 Sept 1906; d Seattle, 24 June 1962). Latvian composer, pianist and critic, son of Emīls Dārziņš. He graduated in 1929 from Vītols's composition class and in 1934 from Nadežda Kārkliņa's piano class at the Latvian State Conservatory. From 1928 he worked as a pianist and critic in Riga, but in 1944 fled from the advancing Soviets and worked in the same occupations in Esslingen, Germany, until 1950. Afterwards Dārziņš lived in the USA, teaching first at the Spokane Conservatory in Washington State, then moving in 1955 to Seattle, where he took part in the concerts of the University of Washington School of Music.

In his early music, Dārziņš followed the French post-Impressionists Dukas and Roussel, and also experimented with exoticism, for example in the Spanish Dance Suite (1931). In the 1940s he developed the goal of integrating the unique qualities of Latvian folk music with those of 20th-century art music, much in the manner of Bartók. The results included hundreds of folk melody arrangements and original piano music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Spanish Dance Suite, 1931; Latvju deju svīta [Suite of Latvian Dances], 1932; Pf Conc., 1934; Pf Conc., 1938
Vocal: 200 latviešu tautasdziesmu [200 Latvian Folksongs], 1v, pf, 1953, 1960–64
Pf: Variations, 1942; Sonata, 1948; Sonata, 1955; Suite, A, 1956; Sonatina, G, 1957; Triade de preludes, 1957; Trittico barbaro, 1958; 8 mazās svītas [8 Little Suites], 1960; Treludes (Prelude, Interlude, Postlude), 1980
Choral works, cants., incid music

Principal publishers: Arnolds Kalnājs, Dow Publishers

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Dārziņš: 'Latvju tautas melodiju veidi un īpatnības' [Kinds and peculiarities of Latvian folk melodies], Latviešu tautas dziesmas/Chansons populaires lettonnes, ed. A. Švābe, K. Straubergs and E. Hauzenberga-Sturma, xi (Copenhagen, 1956), 577–613
K. Leņsiš: 'Volfganga Dārziņa skanīgais mantojums' [The musical heritage of Volfgangs Dārziņš], Latvju mūzika, vi (1973), 523–42

ARNOLDS KLOTIŅŠ

Daser, Ludwig (b Munich, *c*1525; d Stuttgart, 27 March 1589). German composer. From an early age he was a member of the Bavarian Hofkapelle at Munich; he received his musical training there and in 1550 was a tenor. In 1552 he was promoted to Kapellmeister. He was a success in this post but he was relieved of it in 1563 because of strained relations with Duke Albrecht, which probably arose because he was a Protestant serving at a Catholic court. He was replaced by Lassus. In 1572 he was appointed Kapellmeister at the Württemberg court at Stuttgart, which had broken with the Roman Church in 1538; he appears to have carried out his duties effectively. After his death he was succeeded by Balduin Hoyoul, who was his son-in-law. The Munich court granted him a pension, which was paid until his death. He was admired in his day for his music, which shows that he was a well-trained and very able composer with a pronounced lyrical gift. It is conservative in style, as can be seen by the high proportion of his works for four (rather than five) voices and by his use of cantus firmus technique in ten of his 22 masses. That he was well aware of current styles, however, is shown by his five parody masses and by some of his motets and German psalms and hymns, which date from his years at Stuttgart.

WORKS
principal source, D-Mbs

MASSES

'Ave Maria', 4vv; 'Beati omnes', 5vv; De virginibus, 4vv; 'Dixerunt discipuli', 5vv; Dominicalis (i), 4vv; Dominicalis (ii), 4vv; 'Ecce nunc benedicite', 4vv; Ferialis, 5vv; 'Fors seulement', 5vv; 'Grace et vertu', 4vv (doubtful); 'Jerusalem surge', 5vv; In feriis quadragesimae, 5vv; 'Inviolata', 5vv; Maria Magdalena, 5vv; 'Mins liefkins braun augen', 4vv; Paschalis, 4vv; 'Pater noster', 5vv; Per signum crucis, 4vv (?by Senfl); Praeter rerum seriem, 6vv; 'Qui habitat', 4vv; Sexti modi, 5vv; 'Un gay bergier', 4vv
Mass proper De Sancto Spiritu infra septuagesima, 4vv
Mass proper De veneratione BVM, 4vv

OTHER SACRED

Patrocinium musices: passionis Domini nostri Jesu Christi historia, 4vv (Munich, 1578)
4 org transcrs., 1589^{17}, 1594^{3}, 1617^{24}
2 Magnificat, 4–8vv
24 motets, 4–8vv, ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xlvii (1964)
34 German hymns and psalms

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BoetticherOL; EitnerQ
G. Bossert: 'Die Hofkantorei unter Herzog Ludwig', Württembergische Vierteljahrshefte für Landesgeschichte, new ser., ix (1900), 253–91
E. Schmid: 'Der Vorgänger Orlando di Lassos in der Leitung der Münchener Hofkapelle', 75 Jahre Stella Matutina, i (Feldkirch, 1931), 453
W. Boetticher: Aus Orlando di Lassos Wirkungskreis (Kassel, 1963)
D.T. Politoske: Balduin Hoyoul: a Netherlander at a German Court Chapel (diss., U. of Michigan, 1967)

DANIEL T. POLITOSKE

Dash. This term is used for both the short vertical line (also commonly called 'stroke'; see also STRICH), and the horizontal line. The former mark is most commonly used as an indication for STACCATO, but it is sometimes also encountered with more specialized meanings, such as to cancel inequality (see NOTES INÉGALES) or to indicate TASTO SOLO passages in Baroque thoroughbass notation; the horizontal dash generally signifies either that the note should be accented or held for its full value.

The vertical dash is one of three commonly encountered forms of staccato mark, the others being the dot and the wedge. All three forms occur in printed music, but the wedge was rarely, if ever, employed in manuscript. Although the slur had long been used as a sign for legato, the use of staccato marks did not become general until well into the 18th century. It seems unlikely that any distinction was, at first, intended between different forms of staccato mark; the early staccato mark seem sometimes to have indicated merely a detached execution and sometimes an accented and detached execution. By the mid-18th century some theorists, for example Riepel and Quantz, proposed differentiated meanings for dots and vertical dashes while others, such as C.P.E. Bach felt that a single sign for staccato was more appropriate (part of Bach's argument was that the use of staccato dots would obviate the possibility of confusion with the dashes used to indicate tasto solo). Nevertheless, there is little firm evidence to suggest that composers, including Mozart, used more than one form of the mark with differentiated meanings at that stage (see STACCATO). In the 19th century composers became increasingly concerned to convey their intentions to performers with greater precision, and some began consciously to use two forms of staccato mark. However, the vertical dash acquired rather different meanings in Germany, where it tended to be associated with a sharper attack than the dot, and in France, where it implied greater lightness and shortness than the dot (see ARTICULATION MARKS, §6).

The horizontal dash began to gain currency in 19th-century music. This mark was not used by Beethoven or Schubert but, either alone, in combination with a dot, or in combination with slurs, it is quite often found in music of the next generation of composers. At first it was associated primarily with accentuation (perhaps by analogy with the symbol for a stressed syllable in poetry). Henri Herz (Méthode complète de piano: op.100, Manz and Antwerp, 1838) considered a horizontal dash with a dot under it to indicate a heavy accent, and J.A. Hamilton's Dictionary of Two Thousand Musical Terms (London, 4/1837) illustrated the horizontal dash alone, as well as with a dot, as an accent sign. A.B. Marx (Allgemeine Musiklehre, Leipzig, 1839, 10/1884) considered the dash with dot to imply lingering as well as accent. Others, especially string players equated the horizontal dash with portato and employed it under slurs to avoid confusion with dots under slurs meaning slurred staccato (see BOW, §II, 3(iii)). Later 19th-century writers often associated it with TENUTO. However, the sign appears to have had a range of subtly different meanings for particular composers, which can only be determined from an examination of their particular usage.

A horizontal dash is also used following a number or sign in FIGURED BASS to indicate the continuation of the same harmony upon as many bass notes as the dash covers.

For bibliography, see STACCATO.

CLIVE BROWN

Dashow, James (Hilyer) (b Chicago, 7 Nov 1944). American composer. He studied at Princeton University (BA 1966) where his teachers included Milton Babbitt, J.K. Randall, Edward T. Cone and Earl Kim, and at Brandeis University (MFA 1969) with Arthur Berger, Seymour Shifrin and Martin Boykan, among others. He pursued further study with Petrassi at the Accademia di S Cecilia, Rome (diploma 1971). He has taught at the Canneti Music Institute (Vicenza), MIT and Princeton. He has also directed the Studio di Musica Elettronica Sciadoni (from 1975) and has been associated with the Centro Sonologia Computazionale at the University of Padua (1980–89). His many honours include a Rockefeller Foundation grant (for his opera The Little Prince, commissioned by the Venice Biennale), an award from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, a Guggenheim Fellowship, Fromm and Koussevitzky Foundation commissions, and numerous other commissions and prizes.

Dashow's vocal music, which often sets modern American poetry, makes particular use of speechlike declamation; his textures are complex and almost pointillistic. His main contribution to electronic music is his 'dyad system', in which pitch structure and electronic timbre become functionally interdependent. Two 'generating pitches' are manipulated by the computer to produce sounds then used in composition. The resulting harmonic complex allows for tightly-woven live instrumental integration. His articles appear in Interface, Computer Music Journal, Perspectives of New Music and other periodicals.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: Timespace Extensions, fl, pf, 2 perc, 1969; Duo, vn, pf, 1970, rev. 1989; Astrazioni pomeridiane, orch, 1970–71; Punti di vista, pf: I Forte Belvedere, 1975–6; II Montiano, 1977–8, rev. 1988; 4/3, pf trio, 1989–90, rev. 1991; Un primo frammento di anti-post-neo-romanticismo, cl, 1991; A Sheaf of Times, fl + a fl + pic, cl + b cl, vn, vc, pf, hp, perc, 1992–4; Personaggi ed interpreti, fl + pic + a fl, cl + b cl, vn, pf, 1997

Vocal: Songs of Despair (E.A. Robinson, A. MacLeish, V. Lindsay, T.S. Eliot), amp S, 11 insts, 1968–9; Ashbery Settings (J. Ashbery), S, fl, pf, 1971–2; Maximus (C. Olson), S, 3 ww, pf, perc, 1972–3; Maximus, to Himself (Olson), S, fl, pf, 1973; Some Dream Songs (J. Berryman), S, vn, pf, 1974–5; Songs from a Spiral Tree (T. Roethke), Mez, fl, hp, 1984–6

El-ac: Burst! (J. Kerouac), S, tape, 1971; Mappings, vc, tape, 1974; At Delphi (Sioux Indian, trans. F. Densmore), S, tape, 1975; Whispers out of Time, tape, 1975–6; Effetti collaterali, cl, tape, 1976; A Way of Staying (Ashbery), S, tape, 1976–7; Second Voyage (Ashbery), T, tape, 1977–9; Partial Distances, tape, 1978; Conditional Assemblies, tape, 1980; Mnemonics, vn, tape, 1981–2, rev. 1984–5; In Winter Shine, tape, 1983; Sequence Symbols, tape, 1984; Oro, argento, e legno, fl, tape, 1987; Archimede, scene ii, mime, cptr, 1988; Disclosures, vc, tape, 1988–9; Ritorno a Delfi, a fl, tape, 1990; Reconstructions, hp, cptr, 1992; Morfologie, tpt, cptr, 1993; First Tangent on the Given Curve, pf, cptr, 1995–6; Media Survival Kit (radio satire, 3 pts, B. Ballardini), 1995–6; Le tracce di Kronos, i Passi, dancer, cl, cptr, 1995; Far Sounds, Broken Cries, 12 insts, tape, 1997–8

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Roads, ed.: 'Interview with James Dashow', Composers and the Computer (Los Altos, CA, 1985), 27–45

S. Momo: 'Interview with James Dashow', Music with Computers, Wergo 2018-50 (1989), 1–13 [disc notes]

BRUCE SAYLOR

Dasian [daseian] notation. A Western system of notation used in the 9th and 10th centuries. It was based on a set of signs deriving from the daseia of ancient Greek prosody, a symbol that indicated the rough breathing ('h' at the start of a word) and was originally written as , and later as a round sign '. The signs of dasian notation (the full set contains 18) are used in a group of treatises of the late 9th and 10th centuries, principally the Musica enchiriadis, Scholica enchiriadis and the Commemoratio brevis de tonis et psalmis modulandis (ed. Schmid). The spelling

'dasia' is used in these treatises. The intervals between the signs are clearly defined so that the musical examples in these treatises may be transcribed accurately. (For illustration, see NOTATION, §III, 1, ex.4; see also NOTATION, §II, 7 and ORGANUM, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Schmid, ed.: Musica et Scolica enchiriadis una cum aliquibus tractatulis adiunctis (Munich, 1981)

B. Hebborn: Die Dasia-Notation (Bonn, 1995)

DAVID HILEY

Dassoucy [D'Assoucy; Coypeau, Coipeau, Couppeau], Charles [Assoucy, Charles d'] (b Paris, 16 Oct 1605; d Paris, 29 Oct 1679). French poet, lutenist and composer. In 1637, through the Duke of St Simon (father of the author of the Mémoires), Dassoucy came to the attention of Louis XIII. Until 1653 he stayed in Paris and made friends with the libertins Tristan l'Hermite, Paul Scarron, François de La Mothe le Vayer, Cyrano de Bergerac and Jean de La Chapelle, and with musicians such as Pierre de Nyert and Luigi Rossi, whom he met at court, where he worked as a lutenist and composer. The king admired his musical verve and his astonishing powers as a lutenist, and he made him music master to the future Louis XIV. Dassoucy's major works, the music of which is nearly all lost, were probably all composed towards the close of this period in his life.

After 1653 he left Paris and toured the provinces; at Lyons he met Molière, with whom he travelled to Avignon and Montpellier, where he was imprisoned. He later went to Turin, where he worked for Christine, Duchess of Savoy (Louis XIII's sister), and travelled to Mantua, Modena, Florence and Rome, where in the early 1660s the French ambassador, the Duke of Chaulnes, protected him. Accused of atheism, he was imprisoned again, as he recorded in his Les aventures d'Italie (Paris, 1677). He returned to Paris about 1670, when Molière was at the height of his career and Lully well launched on his. Unable to rival the latter, Dassoucy hoped to renew his friendship with Molière, but the playwright preferred to work with Charpentier. Furthermore, the art of lute playing was going out of fashion. Nevertheless, in 1673, undeterred, Dassoucy announced a series of novel works, 'concerts chromatiques'; they have not survived and were never performed, for he was again imprisoned, perhaps as a result of Lully's jealousy. He spent his last years adding to his output of literary works, of which he published eight, between 1651 and 1677.

The music for Corneille's Andromède and the words and music of Les amours d'Apollon et de Daphné (both 1650), a musical comedy dedicated to the king, were important stages in the development of French theatre music towards opera; both works combine numerous songs, dialogues and instrumental pieces, designed to enhance the effects of spectacle and to arouse emotion. The patchwork effect of songs and dialogues, of intrigues and rivalries, stitched together, is both a comment on the continuing significance attached to the words in these works and an anticipation of styles that were to be developed in the comic operas of the 18th century.

WORKS

STAGE

Les amours d'Apollon et de Daphné (comedy), 1650, text and music lost

Andromède (tragedy), 1650, music lost except for a few extracts in Airs

Les biberons (ballet), lost

Les enseignes des cabarets de Paris (ballet), lost

SONGS

Airs à 4 (Paris, 1653), inc.

Other songs in F-Pn Vm[7] 275, inc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AnthonyFB

E. Colombey: Aventures burlesques de Dassoucy (Paris, 1858)

P. Lacroix: Les hauts faits de Charles d'Assoucy: une famille de musiciens (Paris, 1889)

H. Prunières: L'opéra italien en France avant Lulli (Paris, 1913/R)

J. Tiersot: La musique dans les comedies de Molière (Paris, 1921)

H. Prunières: 'Véridiques aventures de Charles Dassoucy', Revue de Paris, vi (1922), 105–37

H. Prunières: 'Les singulières aventures de Monsieur Dassoucy', ReM, nos.175–9 (1937), 209–16; nos.180–4 (1938), 14–31, 96–97, 273–81; nos.185–7 (1938), 23–31; nos.188–91 (1939), 190–202

R. Cotte: 'Un artiste maudit: Dassoucy', Courrier des arts et des lettres (16 June 1948)

G. Durosoir: L'air de cour en France, 1571–1655 (Liège, 1991)

M. Benoit: Dictionnaire de la musique en France au XVIIe et au XVIIIe siècles (Paris, 1992)

MARGARET M. McGOWAN

D'Ath, Andreas. See ATH, ANDREAS D'.

Dattari [Dal Dattaro], Ghinolfo (b Bologna, *c*1535; d Bologna, 1617). Italian composer and singer. He sang in the choir of S Petronio, Bologna, from February 1555 to 1617. He was appointed acting maestro di cappella there in June 1597 after the death of Andrea Rota, but returned to his position as singer two years later, in January 1599, when Pompilio Pisanelli received the permanent appointment. His delightful villanellas of 1568 are all chordal, strophic, dance-like and popular in tone. The harmonies are strongly tonal in their frequent dominant-tonic relationships, and there are occasional parallel triads in stepwise motion. The entire collection is dedicated to a Bolognese nobleman, Count Giulio Pepoli, and each piece is individually dedicated to different Bolognese noblemen and ladies.

WORKS

[34] Canzoni villanesche, 4vv (Milan, 1564)

Le [30] villanelle, 3–5vv (Venice, 1568); 16 ed. in Maestri bolognesi, iii (1955)

2 works, 1569[24], 1570[19]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBI (A. Morelli); EitnerQ; VogelB

G. Gaspari: Miscellanea musicale (MS, I-Bc UU.12/4), 61ff; repr. in Musica e musicisti a Bologna (Bologna, 1969)

F. Piperno: Gli 'eccellentissimi musici della città di Bologna'(Florence, 1985), 43ff

O. Gambassi: La cappella musicale di S. Petronio: maestri, organisti, cantori e strumentisti dal 1436 al 1920 (Florence, 1987), 10, 74ff

FRANK TIRRO

Dattila. A sage (muni) in ancient Indian legend. He was the putative author of the Dattilam, a Sanskrit text on music theory composed probably in the early centuries CE. Dattila is mentioned in the Nāṭyaśāstra as one of the numerous offspring of Bharata, to whom that composite treatise is traditionally attributed. The Dattilam describes a system of music apparently akin to that of the Nāṭyaśāstra, but is more restricted in its coverage. If one assumes that it has survived in its entirety and was intended by its author to be self-sufficient (as is strongly argued by Lath in his edition and commentary, 1978), it appears to deal with gāndharva (music), defined as a discrete form or body of forms of music different in nature and function from the later saṅgīta. It seems that the repertory of music it describes was that of the ritual preliminaries (pūrvaraṅga) of the Sanskrit drama, while the Nāṭyaśāstra was concerned with the drama as a whole.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Wiersma-te Nijenhuis: Dattilam: a Compendium of Ancient Indian Music (Leiden, 1970)

M. Lath: A Study of Dattilam: a Treatise on the Sacred Music of Ancient India (New Delhi, 1978; 2/1988)

JONATHAN KATZ

D'Attili, Dario (b Rome, 26 March 1922). American violin maker and restorer of Italian origin. His family left Rome and emigrated to the USA in 1935; in 1938 he went to work at the bench of Fernando Sacconi in the shop of Emil Herrmann in New York. Apart from a period in the armed forces in World War II, he worked with Sacconi continuously until 1973. In 1951, when Herrmann moved from New York, they both joined the firm of REMBERT WURLITZER, establishing a workshop there that became second to none. Following Wurlitzer's death, D'Attili was appointed general manager in 1964. In spite of the demands of restoration work and (following the firm's acquisition of the Hottinger Collection of rare violins in 1965) of appraisals and other business, he continued to make new violins at his home until about 1974. His fine-sounding and much appreciated instruments show a keen understanding of violins by the Italian masters, and a special admiration for those of Pietro Guarneri of Mantua. D'Attili devoted much time to the study of violin varnish, with excellent results. When Wurlitzer closed in 1974, D'Attili became associated with William Moennig & Son of Philadelphia through that firm's purchase of the Wurlitzer collection, and he continued to advise them on former Wurlitzer instruments until 1982. He has continued to work as an independent appraiser, and is one of the most highly respected authorities on early violins and bows. Between 1992 and his retirement in 1998 he worked from his home in Ocoee, Florida.

CHARLES BEARE/PHILIP J. KASS

Daube, Johann Friedrich (b ?Hesse, *c*1730; d Vienna, 19 Sept 1797). German theorist and composer. At the age of 11 he was a theorbist at the Berlin court of Frederick the Great. In 1744 he went to Stuttgart, where on 29 July he was appointed Cammer-Theorbist to the Prince of Württemberg. In 1750 he was listed in court records as chamber flautist, a position he retained until 1755. At this time, for unknown reasons, he was dismissed, and when he was re-employed in 1756 he received the much lower rank of flautist in the court orchestra. In 1770 he appeared in Vienna with the title of 'Council and First Secretary' to the royal Franciscan Academy of Free Arts and Sciences, an organization centred in Augsburg where Daube may have spent some time after 1765.

Although Daube remains an obscure figure, his several treatises on performing practice and composition prove him to be a scholar of great knowledge, and are valuable resources for insight into the compositional practices and music aesthetics of the Classical period. His first work, the General-Bass in drey Accorden (1756), reflects the impact of Rameau's theories on the harmonic thought of Classical composers and theorists. Daube seems to have been the first to import into Germany the French theorist's concept of the three fundamental chords (I, IV^6_5, V^7), which he used to generate all other harmonies in realizing a thoroughbass. In addition the work throws much light on thoroughbass realization in the mid-18th century. His Der musikalische Dilettant (1770–73), as Benary has emphasized, is a remarkably original contribution to a doctrine of composing expressly orientated to the Classical style. Still reflecting the Baroque tradition of the thoroughbass as the primary foundation of compositional rules, Daube nevertheless put forth a number of original views, calling for a reduction in the number and complexity of contrapuntal passages, melodic and formal symmetry, and appropriate orchestration in symphonic writing. In his final treatise, Anleitung zur Erfindung der Melodie und ihrer Fortsetzung (1797), he wrote with enthusiasm about the contemporary Viennese musical scene, with Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Salieri, Vanhal, Weigl and others as his inspiration. This treatise provides a detailed guide to melodic composition in the Classical style, with emphasis on periodicity among many other characteristics. Daube deserves to be included together with such major 18th-century theorists as Mattheson, Quantz, Kirnberger and Koch.

WORKS

Orch: 3 sinfonias, 2 vn, va, 2 hn, b, A-Wgm, *D-Bsb (?lost); sinfonias, nos.1–3, formerly DS, lost

Chbr: trio, lute, fl, bc, ROs, ?lost, ed. H. Lemacher: Handbuch der Hausmusik, ccclv (Berlin, 1927); pf sonata in Oeuvre mêlées, xi/2 (Nuremberg, 1765)

Inst and kbd works, arias, lieder, in suppls. to Der musikalische Dilettant

WRITINGS

published in Vienna unless otherwise stated

General-Bass in drey Accorden, gegründet in den Regeln der alt- und neuen Autoren (Leipzig, 1756); Eng. trans. in Wallace

Der musikalische Dilettant, i: eine Abhandlung der Composition, welche nicht allein die neuesten Setzarten der 2-, 3-, und mehrstimmigen Sachen sondern auch die meisten künstlichen Gattungen der alten Canons, der einfachen und Doppelfugen deutlich vorträgt und durch ausgesuchte Beispiele erläutert (1770); ii: eine Abhandlung des Generalbasses durch alle 24 Tonarten, mit untermengten Opernarien, etc., Solis, Duetten und Trio für die meisten Instrumenten (1771); iii: eine Abhandlung der Komposition ... durch ausgesuchte Beispiele erkläret (1773) [orig. pubd weekly as Der musikalische Dilettant: eine Wochenschrift]; Eng. trans. in Snook-Luther

Beweis, dass die gottesdientliche Musik von den allerältesten Zeiten an unter allen Völkern des Erdbodens fortgewähret und auch in Ewigkeit dauern werde (1782)

Anleitung zur Erfindung der Melodie und ihrer Fortsetzung, i (1797); ii: welcher die Composition enthält (1798) [both vols. also pubd as Anleitung zum Selbstunterricht in der musikalischen Composition, sowohl für die Instrumental- als Vocalmusik (1798)]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Wurzbach

H. Riemann: Geschichte der Musiktheorie im IX.–XIX. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1898, 2/1921; Eng. trans. of pt iii, 1977)

P. Benary: Die deutsche Kompositionslehre des 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1961)

M. Karbaum: Das theoretische Werk Johann Friedrich Daubes, der Theoretiker J.F. Daube: ein Beitrag zur Kompositionslehre des 18. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Vienna, 1969)

G.J. Buelow: 'The Concept of Melodielehre: a Key to Classic Style', MJb 1978–9, 182–95

B.K. Wallace: A Translation and Commentary on 'General-Bass in drey Accorden' by Johann Friedrich Daube (diss., North Texas State U., 1983)

J. Lester: Compositional Theory in the Eighteenth Century (Cambridge, MA, 1992)

S.P. Snook-Luther, ed.: The Musical Dilettante: a Treatise on Composition (Cambridge, MA, 1992)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Daubenrock, Georg (fl early 17th century). German music teacher, active in Austria. He referred to himself as

'Vinariâ Tyrigeta'; it may be assumed, therefore, that he originated from (or near) Weimar in Thuringia. Apparently he studied in Regensburg, since in his theoretical work he mentioned his teacher, Andreas Raselius, who was working there. In the first years of the 17th century he was in Eferding, near Linz, the territory of the Count of Starhemberg in what was at that time Protestant Upper Austria. In 1609 he became school Kantor in Steyr, which was also a predominantly Protestant city; he was still employed there in 1617–18. Daubenrock was one of a number of Kantors who went to Austria from the heart of the Lutheran areas after the Reformation and before the Counter-Reformation reached Austria. His only known work is Epitome musices pro tyronibus scholarum trivialium utriusque tam latinae quam teutonicae linguae collecta (Nuremberg, 1613); it is a bilingual music primer set out in what was the normal practice of listing by subject (definition of music, clefs, sol-fa etc.). Three-part examples based on the hexachord and a cantus firmus show that Daubenrock was a skilful composer. (H.J. Moser: Die Musik im frühevangelischen Österreich, Kassel, 1954)

WALTER BLANKENBURG

Daublaine-Callinet. French firm of organ builders. It was founded in Paris in 1831 by Abbé J.-L. Cabias to market a plainsong accompaniment device he had patented. André-Marie Daublaine and B.L.J. Girard, who were civil engineers by profession, took over (from 1834 and 1841 respectively), and Louis Callinet merged his activity with the firm's in 1838; accordingly, the titles Daublaine & Cie, Maison Daublaine-Callinet or Girard et Cie were variously to be found on contracts. Callinet was dismissed in 1843 after destroying much of the St Sulpice organ under reconstruction, in a fit of spite after a personal disappointment. Charles Spackman Barker took charge of the workshop in 1841; at that time, a branch was set up in Lyons under Théodore Sauer. Félix Danjou became the principal commercial agent and aesthetic apologist from 1839 to 1845, when Pierre Alexandre Ducroquet, an appraiser-auctioneer, purchased the firm and appended his name to the instruments. The firm was taken over by Joseph Merklin in 1855, who significantly altered its aesthetic thrust.

Prior to Cavaillé-Coll's breakthrough in about 1840, Daublaine-Callinet was the foremost organ-building firm in Paris. It attracted outstanding French and foreign craftsmen in the context of a period of religious reawakening and incipient government funding of church construction and furnishings; several leading Parisian and provincial builders of the mid-19th century began their careers with the firm. However, by maintaining a conservative, non-orchestral style, while adopting relatively superficial innovations such as the occasional use of 61-note compasses, the firm progressively lost ground in the face of Cavaillé-Coll's openness to secular musical developments, novel tonal ideas and stunning technical quality. Openly incorporating German traits such as double pedal keyboards and free reeds, and advocating Rinck and Hesse as organistic models, may have discredited it in the eyes of some. Stops tended to be specified in blocks (e.g. Gambas or Euphones at 16′, 8′ and 4′), a transitional solution vaguely reminiscent of Abbé Vogler's precepts and perhaps favoured by organists such as A.-C. Fessy and J.-C.-A. Miné, while Cavaillé-Coll was emphasizing orchestral variety and gradation, power and purity of tone. Significant instruments built by the firm include: St Denis du Saint-Sacrement, Paris (1839); Notre-Dame, Vitré (built for the London Great Exhibition, 1851); St Eustache, Paris (1844; destroyed in a fire accidentally started by Barker, and replaced by a new instrument in 1854; for illustration, see ORGAN, fig.47); and Notre-Dame, Roubaix (built for the Paris Exposition of 1855).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. de Pontécoulant: 'Exposition des produits de l'industrie', La France musicale, ii (1839), 394–6, 412–14; rev., pubd separately as Exposition de 1839: les orgues (Paris, 1839)
F. Danjou: Manufacture d'orgues: ancienne maison Daublaine-Callinet à Paris et à Lyon: exposition de 1844 (Paris, 1844)
F. Danjou: Revue de la musique religieuse, populaire et classique (Paris, 1845–8)
P. de Fleury: Dictionnaire biographique des facteurs d'orgues (Paris, 1926)
M. Jurine: Joseph Merklin, facteur d'orgues européen: essai sur l'orgue français au XIXe siècle, i (Paris, 1991), 101–30

KURT LUEDERS

Dauer, Alfons Michael (b Bamberg, 16 April 1921). German ethnomusicologist. He studied musicology at the University of Mainz with E.L. Rapp, concentrating on the study of African cultures to compensate for the lack of courses in ethnomusicology at German universities after the war. After lecturing on jazz at American cultural institutes in Germany (from 1950) he completed Der Jazz (1958); through its high standard of scholarship on African and American music, and its accurate transcriptions of unwritten musics (including important jazz recordings), this work provided an important model for academic studies in black American music. Dauer took the doctorate in ethnology at Mainz in 1960 with a dissertation on the Mangbetu and in 1965 he joined the Institut für den Wissenschaftlichen Film at Göttingen, where he supervised the production of over 400 ethnographical films, of which many were on Africa. In 1976 he was appointed chair of the department of Afro-American Studies at the Graz Musikhochschule (Austria), the first such post created in Europe. He retired in 1991.

Dauer's perspective as a scholar shifted during his career: originally convinced that West Africa had been the main source of black American musical traditions, he later concluded that the Sudanic regions were another place of origin. He also changed his view of jazz, regarding it initially as an isolated musical phenomenon, and later as a manifestation of ethnographic music traditions. Leading a study group which collected data from different musical cultures, he categorized musical elements according to their area of origin (a system he dubbed 'Arealisitik') to demonstrate that certain aspects of jazz and blues which had formerly been described generally as 'African', represent the musical traditions of specific locations that were simply neglected by jazz scholars. Through this re-evaluation of musical sources, he hoped to gain a non-ideological approach towards the jazz phenomenon. In this regard, his study of vocal blues as part of the poetic tradition of the Spielmannsepik ('singers of epics') is particularly insightful.

WRITINGS

with S. Longstreet: Knaurs Jazz Lexikon (Munich, 1957)
Der Jazz: seine Ursprünge und seine Entwicklung (Eisenach, 1958)
Studien zur Ethnogenese bei den Mangbetu (diss., U. of Mainz, 1960)
Jazz – die magische Musik: ein Leitfaden durch den Jazz (Bremen, 1961)
'Afrikanische Musik und völkerkundlicher Tonfilm: ein Beitrag zur Methodik der Transkription', Research Film, v (1966), 439–56

'Towards a Typology of the Vocal Blues Idiom', Jazzforschung/Jazz Research, xi (1979), 9–92
Zur Syntagmatik des ethnographischen Dokumentationsfilms (Vienna, 1980)
'Das Lydisch-Chromatische Tonsystem von George Russell und seine Anwendung', Jazzforschung/Jazz Research, xiv (1982), 61–132
Blues aus hundert Jahren: 43 Beispiele zur Typologie der vokalen Bluesformen (Frankfurt, 1983)
'Mister Charlie: a Type of Chantefable-Blues', Jazzforschung/Jazz Research, xv (1983), 115–45
Tradition afrikanischer Blasorchester und Entstehung des Jazz (Graz, 1985)
'Derler I: ein System zur Klassifikation von Rhythmen: musiktheoretische und musikhistorische Aspekte', Jazzforschung/Jazz Research, xx (1988), 117–54
'Don't Call my Music Jazz: zum Musiktransfer von der Alten zur Neuen Welt und dessen Folgen', Beiträge zur Popularmusikforschung, xi (1993), 42–5

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Von Arealen und Moden: Alfons Michael Dauer im Gespräch mit Werner Grünzweig', ÖMZ, xlvi (1991), 606–13
'. . . und der Jazz ist nicht von Dauer': Aspekte afro-amerikanischer Musik: Festschrift für Alfons Michael Dauer, ed. B. Hoffmann and H. Rösing (Karben, 1998), 424–7 [incl. list of writings]

WERNER GRÜNZWEIG

Dauer, Johann [Joseph] Ernst (b Hildburghausen, 1746; d Vienna, 12 Sept 1812). German tenor. He began his career in 1768, and in 1771 was engaged in Hamburg, where he sang in Singspiele. In 1775 he went to Gotha and in 1777 to Frankfurt and Mannheim. In 1779 he was engaged at the court theatre in Vienna, initially singing in the Singspiel company (making his début as Alexis in Monsigny's Le déserteur) and, the following year, also acting in the spoken theatre company. He created Pedrillo in Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail (1782) and Sturmwald in Dittersdorf's Der Apotheker und der Doktor (1786). He was a useful though uninspired performer: according to the actor F.L. Schröder, 'He touched the heart in neither serious nor comic roles. His manner was a little cold and remote; his movement somewhat wooden' (O. Michtner: Das alte Burgtheater als Opernbühne, Vienna, 1970, pp.369, 521). He played secondary lovers, character roles and sturdy, unpolished lads.

CHRISTOPHER RAEBURN, DOROTHEA LINK

Daugherty, Michael (b Cedar Rapids, IA, 28 April 1954). American composer. He grew up playing the keyboard in jazz, rock and funk bands. He studied at North Texas State University (1972–6), at the Manhattan School of Music (1976–8) and at Yale University (DMA 1986), where his teachers included Earle Brown, Jacob Druckman, Bernard Rands and Roger Reynolds. He also spent a year at IRCAM as a Fulbright Fellow (1979–80), collaborated with jazz musician Gil Evans in New York (1980–82) and studied with Ligeti in Hamburg (1982–4). After teaching composition at Oberlin College Conservatory (1986–91), he was appointed to a post at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor in 1992.

Daugherty's compositions are known for their innovative musical ideas and carefully constructed compositional structures. He first came to national attention in the USA when Snap! – Blue Like an Orange (1987) won a Kennedy Center Friedheim Award in 1989. The work, which established the primary characteristics of his compositional style, combines rigorous polyrhythmic counterpoint with a playful and pointed use of the popular music of his youth. This lively mixture is presented in many works with a wry sense of timing, deft orchestration and a sensitivity to the spatial dimension of music. The Metropolis Symphony (1988–93) and Bizarro (1993) were inspired by Daugherty's enthusiasm for the Superman comic strip of the 1950s and 60s. The symphony inaugurated a series of works concerned with American icons. Other works in the series include Desi (1991), a Latin big band tribute to Desi Arnaz's portrayal of Ricky Ricardo in the television show 'I Love Lucy'; the chamber work Dead Elvis (1993); and a piano concertino, Le tombeau de Liberace (1996). Works commissioned by the Kronos Quartet include Sing Sing: J. Edgar Hoover (1992), featuring the voice of the infamous FBI director, and Elvis Everywhere (1993) for three Elvis impersonators and string quartet. The chamber opera Jackie O (1997), set in the late 1960s, explores the interplay of musical idioms associated with 'high' and 'popular' culture.

WORKS
(selective list)

Pf Plus, pf, 1985; Snap! – Blue Like an Orange, chbr orch, 1987; Bounce, 2 bn, 1988; Metropolis Sym., orch, 1988–93; 1. Lex 2. Krypton 3. Mxyzptlk 4. Oh, Lois!; 5. Red Cape Tango; Lex, elec vn, 2 synth, timp, 4 perc, 1989; Strut, str orch, 1989; Beat Boxer, str qt, tape, 1991; Desi, sym. wind ens, 1991; Firecracker, solo ob, fl + pic, b cl, vn, vc, perc, pf, 1991; Flamingo, chbr orch, 1991; Viola Zombie, 2 va, 1991; Sing Sing: J. Edgar Hoover, str qt, tape, 1992; Bizarro, sym. wind ens, 1993; Dead Elvis, solo bn, cl, tpt, trbn, vn, db, perc, 1993; Elvis Everywhere, str qt, tape, 1993; Lounge Lizards, 2/4 pf, 2 perc, 1994; Motown Metal, brass, perc, 1994; Paul Robeson Told Me, str qt, tape, 1994; Shaken not Stirred, elec db, 3 perc, 1995; What's that Spell?, 2 amp S, chbr orch, 1995; Concrete Jungle, orch, 1996; Jackie's Song, vc/(solo vc, fl + pic, b cl, vn, perc, pf), 1996; Le tombeau de Liberace, pf, chbr orch, 1996; Jackie O (chbr op, 2, W. Koestenbaum), 1997, Houston, 14 March 1997; Niagara Falls, band, 1997; Route 66, orch, 1998; Hell's Angels, 4 bn, orch, 1999; UFO, perc, orch, 1999; Sunset Strip, chbr orch, 1999

Principal publishers: Peermusic Classical (Faler)

Principal recording companies: Argo, Nonesuch, Sony Classical

TODD VUNDERINK

Dauney, William (b Aberdeen, 27 Oct 1800; d Georgetown, British Guiana [now Guyana], 28 July 1843). Scottish musical scholar. The son of William Dauney of Falmouth, Jamaica, he was educated at Dulwich College, London, and at Edinburgh University. He was called to the Scottish Bar in 1823. About 1839 he left Scotland for British Guiana, where he became solicitor-general.

Dauney's importance as a scholar rests on his book Ancient Scotish Melodies from a Manuscript of the Reign of James VI (Edinburgh, 1838/R), which consists of a partial transcript of the Skene Manuscript as well as a lengthy 'Dissertation Illustrative of the History of the Music of Scotland' and some historical documents, also transcribed. The manuscript, in mandore tablature, was compiled about 1625 by John Skene of Hallyards, Midlothian. It contains some 115 items of which over half are Scottish native airs, or folksongs, and the rest – Scottish, English, French, Dutch and Italian – comprise ballad tunes, dance tunes and partsong arrangements. In Dauney's time it belonged to the Advocates' Library in Edinburgh, now the National Library of Scotland (Adv.5.2.15). Dauney's transcription was valuable in drawing attention to early, simple versions of such Scottish tunes as The Flowers of the Forest and John Anderson my Jo. During the 18th century such tunes had become – at least in polite circles – encrusted with rococo melodic ornaments; the generation of arrangers after Dauney, however, were able to go back to these unadorned versions and interpret the Scottish national song tradition anew. Dauney's transcription is incomplete (84 items) and slightly inaccurate, though highly commendable by the editorial standards of his time; his commentary is often well-informed. The 'Dissertation', largely concerned with 17th-century music, contains much valuable information and is free of the anecdotal quality of earlier treatises on the subject. Dauney was imaginative in searching for facts, but level-headed in evaluating them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Langley: The English Musical Journal in the Early Nineteenth Century (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1983)

W.H. HUSK/DAVID JOHNSON/KENNETH ELLIOTT

Dauphin (i). German family of organ builders. It seems likely that Johann Eberhard (b Hoheneiche, *c*1670; bur. Hoheneiche, 20 April 1731) was trained by a Thuringian master, probably Johann Friedrich Wender in Mühlhausen, where he was living in about 1707. On moving to Iba, near Bebra, in 1715 Johann Eberhard began to build numerous instruments for the village churches of the Eschwege region, an area whose churches had lacked organs hitherto. Without exception, Johann Eberhard built organs with a single manual and pedals and a five-section façade consisting of two pointed towers on either side and a round tower in the middle. He built instruments at Iba (1715), Ronshausen (1716), Reichenbach (1722), Malsfeld (1724), Mitterode (1728) and Hoheneiche (1731).

His younger brother Johann Christian Dauphin (i) (b Gummersbach, 22 Feb 1682; d Kleinheubach, 14 May 1730) is known to have studied for eight years with Wender in Mühlhausen. In 1707 he came to Kleinheubach to build an organ (probably his first); he established his workshop there and married in 1710. In 1713 the abbot of Seligenstadt Abbey commissioned him to build the organ in Walldürn. In 1714 he was assigned the care of the organs in the earldom of Erbach. He built instruments in Kleinheubach (1707–10); Buchen (1713); Walldürn (1717–23) and Hergershausen (1721). His son Johann Christian (ii) (b Kleinheubach, 12 June 1713; d 8 May 1772) carried on the workshop, but received few contracts for new organs, building one in Seckmauern (1755) and another in Spachbrücken (1760). His last work, at Dudenhofen (1771–3) had to be completed by his son Johann Christian (iii) (b 16 Jan 1752; d 2 May 1792); later his younger son Johann Georg (b 25 Aug 1763; d 22 Feb 1809) also entered the business. Of the works of the third generation, only instruments at Breitenbrunn (1782) and Sandbach (1787) survive.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.F. Schmid: Die Orgeln der Abtei Amorbach (Buchen, 1938, rev. 2/1963 by F. Bösten as Die Orgeln von Amorbach: eine Musikgeschichte des Klosters)

D. Grossmann: 'Die Orgelbauer Dauphin', Beiträge zur Geschichte der evangelische Kirchenmusik und Hymnologie in Kurhessen und Waldeck (Kassel, 1967), 91–105

H. Fischer: 'Der mainfränkisch Orgelbau bis zur Säkularisation', Acta organologica, ii (1968), 101–204

H.M. Balz: Orgeln und Orgelbauer im Gebiet der ehemaligen hessischen Provinz Starkenburg (Marburg, 1969), 122–34

based on MGG (xv, 1711–12) by permission of Bärenreiter

HERMANN FISCHER

Dauphin (ii) [Dauphiné]. See FEZANDAT, MICHEL.

Dauprat, Louis François (b Paris, 24 May 1781; d Paris, 17 July 1868). French horn player, teacher and composer. As a boy he was a chorister at Notre Dame in Paris until 1791. He began studying the horn in 1794, with Kenn, a cor basse, at the Institut National de Musique, and continued with him in the first Conservatoire class. In 1797 he was awarded the first-ever premier prix for the horn. The silver-mounted horn by L.-J. Raoux which he received on this occasion is in the Musée de la Musique of the Paris Conservatoire. From 1799 he travelled with the National Guard and Consular Guard bands to campaigns in Egypt and Italy, returning to Paris where he played at the Théâtre Montansier (1801–6). Discontented with the quality of the horn music, he re-entered the Conservatoire to study harmony with Catel and composition with Gossec. Later between 1811 and 1814 he studied with Reicha, whose wind quintets were composed in part for him. From 1806 to 1808 he played solo horn at the Grand Théâtre of Bordeaux; he then returned to Paris to succeed Kenn at the Opéra, becoming solo horn in 1817 on Duvernoy's retirement. He held this position until 1831, when he retired after a dispute with the management.

There are differing accounts of his position at the Conservatoire; the most likely lists him as an adjunct professor from 1816 to 1818, becoming full professor in 1818. After a distinguished teaching career there, he was succeeded by his student, Gallay, in 1842. In 1811 he became an honorary member of the imperial chapel of Napoleon; he also succeeded Domnich in the private bands of Louis XVIII in 1816, and continued under Charles X until 1830. When the court was re-established under Louis-Philippe, Dauprat continued (1832–42) as a cor basse. He was one of the founders of the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire in 1828, serving as principal horn until 1838. In 1842 he withdrew completely from public musical activities, moving to Egypt, where he remained (except for occasional visits to Paris) until shortly before his death.

Despite considerable abilities as a player, with a beautiful tone and elegant phrasing, Dauprat preferred teaching, orchestral playing and composing for the horn. He was a supreme teacher, with numerous successful, prominent students. He unsuccessfully attempted to direct composers and performers away from the implied inequality of 'first' and 'second' designations, using 'alto' and 'basse' instead. His Méthode de cor alto et cor basse remains one of the most exhaustive instrumental tutors in history, containing practical instruction and exercises, insights into performing practices and advice to teachers. A strong advocate of the natural horn, he preferred the sound of the E♭ crook, but was also an important (though reluctant) supporter of Meifred in formulating a compromise position for the valved horn.

WORKS

all published in Paris, before 1828 unless otherwise stated

Hn concs.: no.1, op.1; no.2, F, op.9; no.3, 2 hn, E, op.18; no.4, F, op.19

Acc. hn: Sonate, hn, pf, op.2; Sonate, hn, hp, op.3; Tableau musical, ou scène en duo, hn, pf, vn ad-lib, op.5; 3 quintetti, hn, str qrt, op.6; Duo, hn, pf, op.7; 3 solos, hn, pf/orch, op.11; 2 solos et un duo, 1–2 hn, pf/orch, op.12; Trios, 3 hn, pf/orch, op.15; 3 solos, hn, pf, op.16; 3 solos, hn, pf, op.17; 3 solos, hn, pf, op.20; Air écossais varié from Boieldieu's La dame blanche, hn, hp, op.22; Premier thème varié suivi d'un rondo-bolero, hn, pf/orch, op.23 (Paris and Leipzig, before 1834); Deuxième thème varié, terminé en rondeau, hn, pf, op.24; 3 mélodies, lettres A, B, C, 1–3 hn, pf/orch, op.25 (1843); Concertino per corno misto, 1825, F-Pn; Solo, hn, wind orch, n.d., Pn

Unacc. hn: 3 grands trios, 3 hn, op.4; [6] Quatuors, 4 hn, op.8; Sextuor, 6 hn, op.10; 6 grands duos, 2 hn, op.13; 20 duos, 2 hn, op.14; Grand trio, 3 hn, op.26; Canon fermé à l'octave, 2 hn, 1857, F-Pn; Canon retrograde, 2 hn, n.d., Pn

Other works: Ouverture, airs de danse et de pantomime placés dans le ballet de Cythère assiégée, Bordeaux, 1808, mentioned in FétisB; Branle sur un air breton du XVIe siècle, arr. pf (Mainz, 1888); La fontanelle, air breton du XVIe siècle, arr. pf (Mainz, 1888); Nous allons le voir, opéra de circonstance composé à Bordeaux pour le passage de l'empereur Napoléon à Bordeaux, n.d., mentioned in FétisB; O salutaris, T, hn and hp obb., str, n.d.; Symphonies à grand orchestre, n.d.

WRITINGS

Méthode de cor alto et cor basse (Paris, 1824; Eng. trans., J. Snedeker, in Historic Brass Society Journal, iv (1992), 160–92; v (1993), 42–74; vi (1994), 269–303; vii (1995), 36–66; viii (1996), 69–89, and V. Roth (Bloomington, IN, 1994))

Du cor à pistons, extrait d'un traité théorique et pratique (Paris, 1829)

Nouveau traité théorique et pratique des accords en préceptés et exemples d'harmonie et d'accompagnement de basse continue (Paris, 1856)

Le professeur de musique, ou l'enseignement de cet art (Paris, 1857)

Cours d'harmonie et d'accompagnement de la basse chiffrée et non chiffrée de la mélodie sur la basse [mentioned in FétisB]

Essai sur le quatrième livre des partimenti de Fenaroli [mentioned in FétisB]

Théorie analytique de la musique destinée aux élèves de collèges [mentioned in FétisB]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1(R. Cotte)

C.F. Whistling: Handbuch der musikalischen Literature (Leipzig, 1828, 2/1834/R)

T. Lassabathie: Histoire du Conservatoire imperial de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1860)

C. Pierre: Le Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1900)

B. Coar: A Critical Study of the Nineteenth-Century Virtuosi in France (De Kalb, IL, 1952)

R. Morley-Pegge: The French Horn (London, 1960, 2/1973)

R. Gregory: The Horn (London, 1961, 2/1969)

H. Fitzpatrick: The Horn and Horn-Playing and the Austro-Bohemian Tradition 1680–1830 (London, 1970)

G. Green: Louis François Dauprat: his Life and Works (diss., U. of Northern Colorado, 1970) [incl. facs. copies of opp.5, 4, 2, 1 (parts)]

REGINALD MORLEY-PEGGE/HORACE FITZPATRICK/JEFFREY L. SNEDEKER

Dauriac [d'Auriac], Lionel(-Alexandre) (b Brest, Finistère, 19 Nov 1847; d Paris, 26 May 1923). French musicologist and philosopher. He was educated at the Lycée Louis-le-Grand and, from 1867, at the Ecole Normale, where he studied philosophy, gaining the agrégation in 1872; in 1878 he took the doctorate with the dissertation Des notions de matières et de force dans les sciences de la nature and in the same year published his first philosophical work. He held a lectureship in the arts faculty of the University of Lyons (1879–81) and then the chair of philosophy at the University of Montpellier. In the early 1890s he became interested in music and the value of musicology as a university discipline, and travelled to Germany (1894) to study methods of teaching music in universities there. In 1895, when he became professor of philosophy at the Sorbonne, he tried to have a chair of music psychology founded there; this attempt failed and instead Dauriac was given the newly created professorship of musical aesthetics (1896–1903). In 1904 he co-founded, with Ecorcheville and Prod'homme, the Paris section of the IMS, of which he became president in 1907; in 1917, together with La Laurencie, he was a founder-member of the Société Française de Musicologie.

WRITINGS

Introduction à la psychologie du musicien (Paris, 1891)

De l'oreille musicale: essai sur la psychologie du musicien (Orléans, 1892)

La psychologie dans l'opéra français: Auber, Rossini, Meyerbeer (Paris, 1897)

Essai sur l'esprit musical (Paris, 1904)

Rossini (Paris, 1905)

Le musicien-poète Richard Wagner: étude de psychologie musicale (Paris, 1908)

Enquête sur la mémoire tonale (Paris, 1910)

Meyerbeer (Paris, 1913, 3/1930)

Preface to J.G. Prod'homme: Oeuvres en prose de Richard Wagner, iv (Paris, 1913)

JOHN TREVITT/JEAN GRIBENSKI

Daussoigne [Daussoigne-Méhul], (Louis) Joseph (b Givet, Ardennes, 10 June 1790; d Liège, 10 March 1875). French music educator, composer and writer on music. He was the nephew of Méhul (in 1855 the French govenment acceded to his request to add legally his uncle's surname to his, as he had done unofficially for over two decades). At Méhul's insistence, Daussoigne went to Paris in February 1796, and enrolled at the Conservatoire in 1799, where he studied with Adam, Catel, Cherubini and his uncle (in whose home he lived). In 1807 Daussoigne completed for the Prix de Rome, but received only the second prize. Two years later he was successful; the years he spent in Italy and those on his return to Paris were his most productive as composer. In 1816 he was appointed professor of harmony at the Conservatoire, where Halévy was among his pupils. Still, Daussoigne's goal was to write an opera. Méhul urged him to decline the Saulnier libretto, to avoid serious or melodramatic librettos intended for the Opéra-Comique (like Les amants corsaires) and to seek out lighter and shorter texts. Daussoigne's début work for the Opéra, Aspasie et Périclès, a gentle love story, fits these recommendations, and it achieved some success. But the next, Les deux Salem, a fairy tale in an exotic setting, did not. Even though, after Méhul's death, Cherubini stepped in to support and promote Daussoigne, he became discouraged in his attempts to become an opera composer in Paris, in spite of the success of his revision of his uncle's Valentine de Milan (1822).

In 1827, thanks to Cherubini's warm recommendation, Daussoigne became director at the new conservatory in Liège. Under his guidance, the institution achieved pre-eminence in Belgium, second only to that in Brussels. Among the pupils was César Franck. Daussoigne was made a Chevalier de l'Ordre de Léopold in 1842, and retired from the conservatory in 1862.

In 1846 Daussoigne became an associate of the Classe de Beau-Arts of the Académie Royale de Belgique, and he took seriously his responsibiliies to promote music education in the country, as numerous reports of his attest. Conservative by nature and training, he argued for a solid grounding in counterpoint and harmony, and prepared editions of choral music for inclusion in the school curriculum. As a composer, Daussoigne followed the precedents of Méhul, Cherubini and other Frenchmen of the Empire. With the Rossini-mania sweeping Paris during the 1820s, he was marginalized. Many of his works written in Liège for official occasions hark back to public French festivals of the Revolution, Consulate and Empire. He contributed many articles to the Bulletins de l'Academie royale des sciences, des lettres et des beaux-arts de Belgique from the 1840s to the 1860s.

His younger son, Alexandre Gustave Daussoigne (later Daussoigne-Méhul) (b Liège, 30 March 1829; d ?Bouillon, after 1896), was an accomplished pianist and organist who was active in Paris during the 1850s. His prize-winning work for a four-part male chorus, Le printemps (1861), his pieces and arrangements for the orgue espressif and other works are often misattributed to his father. He spent most of his career in Britain (principally in Glasgow) before retiring to Belgium.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Amphion (V.J.E. de Jouy), inc., unperf; Aspasie et Périclès (1, J.P.G. Viennet), Paris, Opéra, 17 July 1820, *F-Po; Les deux Salem (opéra féerie, 1, P. de Lespinasse), Paris, Opéra, 12 July 1824, *Po

Addns or revs. for ops by Méhul: Gabrielle d'Estrées, *Pn; Stratonice, *Po; Valentine de Milan, *Pn; other excerpts

There is no evidence that Daussoigne set the following librettos cited by Fétis: Robert Guiscard; Le faux inquisiteur; Les amants corsaires; Le testament; Les deux nuits

Sacred: Off, 1810, *Pn, *B-Bc; TeD, 1810, *F-Po; Ave Maria; O crux ave, *B-Lc; Super flumina Babylonis, *Lc; Domine salvum fac regem, *Lc

Secular: Ariane à Naxos (J.M.B.B. de Saint-Victor), scène lyrique, 1807, *F-Pn; Agar dans le désert (V.J.E. de Jouy), scène lyrique, 1809, *Pn; A la mémoire de Grétry (W. Lafontaine), cant., 1828 (n.p., 1828), *B-Lc; Simphonie héroïque: Bruxelles en 1830–31, vv, orch, 1834 (Liège, 1834), *Lc; Cantata on popular airs, 1856, *Lc; Hommage à Grétry, vv, orch, 1862, *Lc; others

Inst: 3 str qts, op.1, 1810, *F-Pn; Ov., orch, 1810, *Pn, *B-Bc; pieces for pf

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; FétisBS

J.T. Radoux: 'Notice sur Joseph Daussoigne Méhul, associé de l'Académie', Annuaire de l'Académie royale des sciences, des lettres et des beaux-arts de Belgique, xlix (1883), 271–306

J. Quintin and H. Pousseur: 'Le Conservatoire Royal de Musique de Liège hier, aujourd'hui et demain', 150e anniversaire du Conservatoire royal de musique de Liège (Liège, 1977), 35–80

M.E.C. Bartlet: Etienne Nicolas Méhul and Opera: Source and Archival Studies of Lyric Theatre during the French Revolution, Consulate, and Empire (Saabrücken, forthcoming)

M. ELIZABETH C. BARTLET

Dauvergne [D'Auvergne], Antoine (b Moulins, 3 Oct 1713; d Lyons, 11 Feb 1797). French composer, violinist and administrator. His father, Jacques Dauvergne, was a musician and probably his first teacher. Antoine began his career as a violinist in Moulins and Clermont-Ferrand before moving to Paris in the late 1730s. According to Pierre de Bernis, he studied composition with Rameau (not with Leclair, as stated by La Laurencie and Pincherle). In 1739 he became a violinist in the chambre du roi and registered the privilege to publish his op.1, Sonates en trio (granted in 1740). He joined the Opéra orchestra in 1744 and by 1752 had assumed some of the conducting responsibilities. His first stage work, Les amours de Tempé, a ballet in four acts, was presented at the Opéra in 1752 and received a favourable review in the Mercure de France. Dauvergne's most enduring operatic success, Les troqueurs, was staged the following year and established a theatrical career which was to last over 20 years.

Dauvergne was named composer to the chambre du roi and successor to François Rebel as master of the chambre du roi in 1755, and surintendant of this establishment nine years later. In 1762 he became, with Nicolas-René Joliveau and Gabriel Capperan, a co-director of the Concert Spirituel. The repertory was modified (Mondonville having resigned as director and removed all his manuscripts), new artists were introduced to the orchestra and chorus, and Pierre Gaviniès was appointed leader-conductor. Dauvergne's sacred works were all written for this organization, mostly in the earlier part of his 11-year term there. His tenure passed without notable incident until administrative and artistic misfortunes beset his final two years.

In 1769 Dauvergne became, with Joliveau, P.-M. Berton and J.-C. Trial, a director of the Opéra. Perhaps the most significant aspect of his first term as director of the Opéra was his involvement in negotiations with Gluck (1772–4). Dauvergne was unimpressed by Roullet's proposal to bring Gluck and his operas to Paris, so Gluck himself wrote to Dauvergne, enclosing the first act of Iphigénie en Aulide as a sample. Although Dauvergne admitted the novelty and potential influence of Gluck's work, he continued to discourage the composer by demanding five other operas. Marie-Antoinette then intervened, and the première of Iphigénie at the Opéra in 1774 was a triumph.

Dauvergne's 1773 arrangement of Destouches' Callirhoé stimulated much adverse criticism of his knowledge of contemporary taste. Nevertheless, he was named composer to the Opéra in March 1776, and the following month resigned as director. In 1780 he again became its director, but shortly thereafter numerous musicians complained in writing of his perpetual nagging and inept management. He was unable to rally support, and resigned in 1782, pleading for an adequate pension. In 1783 and 1784 he was urged to assume the directorship of the newly established Ecole Royale de Chant but declined the offers because of the low salary. He became director of the Opéra for the third time in 1785. Although his merit, honesty and wisdom were cited in the appointment, another series of letters, critical of his age, taste and management, made this term as unpleasant as the last. The death of his second wife in 1787, the increasing political instability (which inevitably caused financial and artistic difficulties) and his diminished abilities forced him to retire in 1790. He died, nearly forgotten, seven years later.

Dauvergne's earliest works are purely instrumental and, though clearly French, show some of the Italian traits which were being accepted in Paris during the 1730s and 40s. The influence of the Italians, particularly Locatelli, on Dauvergne's melodic style has been well documented by La Laurencie. Among the three-movement Sonates en trio, four begin with a slow movement and two with a quick French overture; all end with a minuet. Ten of the 12 Sonates à violon seul op.2 are four-movement works beginning with a slow movement. The motifs and thematic material in these sonatas fall into two types: brilliant, triadic, angular melodies, or fluid, ornamented, cantabile melodies. The sonatas require advanced technique, including agility in the higher positions and the ability to play double stops in these positions, thus indicating that Dauvergne's own technique must have been prodigious. Each of the Concerts de simphonies opp.3–4 consists of two suites for two violins, viola and bass. In their fast movements the violins play in unison or in 3rds or 6ths, while in slow movements the second violin provides accompaniment to the melodic first. Throughout, the viola and bass supply harmonic background and movement somewhat independently of each other. The suites are entirely typical of the mid-18th century. La Laurencie recognized traces of Gluck in them, particularly in the dispositions of the melodies and the impressions of grandeur and serenity.

Although Dauvergne's sacred works have not apparently survived, reviews in the Mercure were generally approving, and six of the motets were performed 12 or more times in the years 1763–70. Burney, however, who heard the Diligam te and the Te Deum at the Concert Spirituel on 8 December 1770, reported that 'M. Dauvergne is a very dull and heavy composer even in the oldest and worst French style'.

A significant proportion of Dauvergne's operas were reworkings of earlier models, which did not always suit current tastes. His reputation as a stage composer rests largely on Les troqueurs, one of the earliest opéras comiques to be set throughout to original music and constructed on Italian models. Italian influence is evident in the opening sinfonia and the profusion of vocal ensembles, in the use of recitative (a compositional device quickly denied the burgeoning genre since the Paris Opéra swiftly forbade its use at rival theatres) and through such devices as tremolos, widely varied dynamics and large melodic leaps. Les troqueurs was an immediate success, due in part to the scheming of the new director of the Opéra-Comique, Jean Monnet, who had originally billed the work as that of an Italian composer resident in Vienna; it enjoyed numerous revivals, stagings in several European capitals and at least two parodies. According to Maret, Rameau admired the work: 'Forecasting to what degree of perfection this form might be carried in the future, he [Rameau] would think with emotion of the progress that taste for this opera would bring about in good music'. La Borde regarded Dauvergne's other operas highly: 'The arias are pleasing and often of great beauty. He combines great talent with modesty'.

WORKS

all printed works published in Paris

STAGE

first performed in Paris unless otherwise stated

Les amours de Tempé (ballet-héroïque, 4, L. de Cahusac), Opéra, 7 Nov 1752 (*c*1753)

Les troqueurs (intermède, 1, J.-J. Vade, after La Fontaine), Foire St Laurent, 30 July 1753 (*c*1755), excerpts also pubd

La coquette trompée (comédie lyrique, 1, C.-S. Favart), Fontainebleau, 13 Nov 1753 (n.d.)

La sibylle (ballet, 1, F.-A.P. de Moncrif), Fontainebleau, 13 Nov 1753

Enée et Lavinie (tragédie lyrique, 5, B.L. de Fontenelle), Opéra, 14 Feb 1758 (1762)

Les fêtes d'Euterpe (ballet, 3, Favart, A. Danchet and Moncrif), Opéra, 8 Aug 1758 (*c*1759); incl. La coquette trompée, La sibylle

Le rival favorable (entrée added to Les fêtes d'Euterpe, P.N. Brunet), Italien, 14 April 1760

Canente (tragédie, prol, 5, A.H. de Lamotte), Opéra, 11 Nov 1760 (*c*1761)

Hercule mourant (tragédie lyrique, 5, J.F. Marmontel), Opéra, 3 April 1761, F-Po

Alphée et Aréthuse (ballet, 1, Danchet), Choisy-le-Roi, 15 Dec 1762

Polyxène (tragédie lyrique, 5, N.-R. Joliveau), Opéra, 11 Jan 1763 (*c*1763)

Le triomphe de Flore, ou Le retour de printemps (ballet-héroïque, 1, Vallier [L. Tolmer]), Fontainebleau, 29 Oct 1765

La Vénitienne (comédie-ballet, 3, Lamotte), Opéra, 3 May 1768, selected airs (1768)

La tour enchantée (ballet figuré, 1, Joliveau), Versailles, 20 June 1770

Le prix de la valeur (ballet-héroïque, 1, Joliveau), Opéra, 4 Oct 1771

Le Sicilien, ou L'amour peintre (comédie-ballet, 1, F. Levasseur, after Molière), Versailles, 10 March 1780

La mort d'Orphée (tragédie, Marmontel), unperf.

Semiramis (tragédie, P.-C. Roy), unperf.

Other stage music: new airs for Lully: Persée, 1758, collab. F. Rebel, F. Francoeur and B. de Bury; airs for Linus (opéra, C.-A. Le Clerc de la Bruère), 1758 inc., F-Pn, collab. J.-C. Trial and P.-M. Berton; arr. of Collin de Blamont: Fêtes grecques et romaines, 1770; arr. of A.C. Destouches: Callirhoé, 1773

OTHER WORKS

L'heureux retour, cantatille, 2vv (n.d.)

Motets with orch (all first perf. Paris, Concert Spirituel, music lost): Te Deum, choir, 1763; Benedic anima mea, choir, 1763; Exultate justi, 2 solo vv, 1764; Miserere mei, choir, 1764; De profundis, choir, 1764; Regina coeli, choir, 1764; Omnes gentes, choir, 1764; Diligam te, 1v, 1764; Cantate Domino, 1v, 1764; Domine audivi, choir, 1764; Jubilate Deo, 2 solo vv, 1765; Regina coeli, 2 solo vv, choir, 1766; Quare fremuerunt, 1v, 1766; Exultate Deo, 1v, 1771

Inst: 6 sonates en trio, 2 vn, bc, op.1 (1740); [12] Sonates, vn, bc, op.2 (1740); [2] Concerts de simphonies, 2 vn, va, b, op.3 (1751); [2] Concerts de simphonies, 2 vn, va, b, op.4 (1751), ed. E. Lemaître (Versailles, 1994)

Numerous vocal and inst works in contemporary anthologies

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyFI; La BordeE; La LaurencieEF; PierreH

Spectacles de Paris [title varies] (1752–94, 1800–01, 1815)

Etat actuel de la musique du roi et des trois spectacles de Paris (Paris, 1759–60, 1767–78)

H. Maret: Eloge historique de M. Rameau (Dijon, 1766)

F.J. de Pierre de Bernis: 'Eloge de M. LeClair', Nécrologe des hommes célèbres de France (Paris, 1767)

Du Route de Paulin: La vie et les oeuvres d'Antoine d'Auvergne (Paris, 1911)

L. de La Laurencie and G. de Saint-Foix: 'Contribution à l'histoire de la symphonie française vers 1750', Année musicale, i (1911), 1–123

L. de La Laurencie: 'Deux imitateurs français des Bouffons: Blavet et Dauvergne', Année musicale, ii (1912), 65–125

E. Cook: Duet and Ensemble in the Early Opéra-Comique (New York, 1995)

MICHAEL A. KELLER/ELISABETH COOK

Dauverné, François Georges Auguste (b Paris, 16 Feb 1799; d ?Paris, 4 Nov 1874). French trumpeter. The nephew and pupil of Buhl, he was first trumpeter in the orchestra of the Académie Royale de Musique and the Musique des Gardes-du-Corps du Roi (which he had entered at the age of 15), a founding member of the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire, and in 1833 became the first professor of trumpet at the Paris Conservatoire, retiring on 1 January 1869. In 1826 Spontini had sent some valved brass instruments, including a three-valved F trumpet, to Paris from Prussia, and it was Dauverné who realized their far-reaching importance. He persuaded composers to write for the new instrument; the first such works were Chelard's Macbeth (1827), Berlioz's overture Waverley (1827) and Rossini's Guillaume Tell (1829). He also induced Halary to build, in 1828, the first successful copies, which at first had only two valves.

Four-fifths of his comprehensive and influential Méthode pour la trompette is devoted to the natural trumpet, the remaining material being for the slide and valved instrument. In the prefaces of several smaller methods he gives an eyewitness account of the introduction of the various types of valved instrument. His most famous pupil was Arban.

WRITINGS

Théorie ou tabulature de la trompette à pistons (Paris, *c*1827–8)

Méthode de trompette à pistons (Paris, *c*1834–5)

Méthode théorique & pratique de cornet à pistons ou à cylindres (Paris, *c*1846)

Méthode pour la trompette (Paris, 1857)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Pierre: Le Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1900), 441

F. Anzenberger: Ein Überblick über die Trompeten- und Kornettschulen in Frankreich, England, Italien, Deutschland und Österreich von ca. 1800 bis ca. 1880 (diss., Vienna U., 1989)
E. Tarr: 'The Romantic Trumpet', Journal of the Historic Brass Society, v (1993), 213–61; vi (1994), 110–215
D. Bickley: 'The Trumpet Shall Sound: some Reasons that Suggest why Berlioz Altered the Part for Trompette à pistons in his Overture Waverley', Journal of the Historical Brass Society, vi (1994), 61–83

EDWARD H. TARR

D'Auxerre [Du Camp Guillebert], Pierre (fl 1534–55). French singer and composer. Chappuys referred to him in his Discours de la court (Paris, 1543) as a well-educated singer of the king. D'Auxerre also belonged to a royal band of oboists and violinists made up mainly of Italian musicians. He sang in the chapel of the Duke of Orléans until 1545, and in 1552 he was given the title of singer and valet de chambre to the king. Apparently he was still at court in 1572. One chanson of his, Oeil peu constant, survives in Attaingnant's 15th book of chansons (RISM 1544^7), and was reprinted by Du Chemin in 1549. It is a short, melancholy love song in the style of Sermisy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Merlet, ed.: Inventaire-sommaire des archives départmentales antérieures à 1790: Eure et Loir, ser.E, suppl.2 (Paris, 1884), 368

CAROLINE M. CUNNINGHAM

D'Avalos, Francesco (b Naples, 11 April 1930). Italian composer and conductor. Born into a family with a longstanding musical tradition, he studied composition with Renato Parodi, the piano with Vincenzo Vitale and conducting with Paul van Kempen, Celibidache and Franco Ferrara. His first major composition was his First Symphony for soprano and orchestra, first performed by the NDR SO in 1957. In 1964 he made his conducting début, with the RAI SO in Rome. D'Avalos has written an opera in two acts, Maria di Venosa (1994), which has been recorded. His other orchestral works include Hymne an die Nacht (1958), Studio sinfonico (1964), Qumrān (1968), Line for soprano and orchestra (1967) and Die stille Stadt for soprano, string orchestra and timpani (1995). He has also composed chamber music, including a string quintet (1960) and a quintet for piano and strings (1967). As a conductor he has worked frequently with many leading European orchestras. His numerous recordings, mostly with the Philharmonia, include the complete orchestral music of Clementi, Mendelssohn and Martucci and the symphonies of Franck and Chausson. He taught at the Bari Conservatory from 1972 to 1979, and was appointed a professor at the Naples Conservatory in 1979.

RENATO MEUCCI

Davantes [Antesignanus], Pierre (b Rabestenne, Hautes-Pyrénées, 1525; d Geneva, 31 Aug 1561). French philologist and printer. He practised as a doctor and was known as a humanist. In 1554 he collaborated with Matthieu Bonhomme at Lyons, editing texts by Clenardo, Hippocrates and Terence. He settled at Geneva early in 1559 and on 25 May 1560 was granted a privilege to print 'une nouvelle invention de musique sur les Pseaulmes'. This invention was a new and simple mnemonic aid for memorizing the music; it is explained and illustrated in a collection of 83 psalms printed by Michel Du Bois in 1560. The system, based on numbers rather than solmization syllables, was later adopted by Jean-Jacques Rousseau (Projet concernant de nouveaux signes pour la musique, Geneva, 1781; ed. and trans. B. Rainbow, Kilkenny, 1982). (See NOTATION, fig.148.) Pidoux (1986 and 1993) suggested that Davantes was the author of 42 melodies for the new psalm paraphrases by Bèze, published together in the Huguenot psalter in 1562.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. and E. Haag: La France protestante, v (2/1886), 164
O. Douen: Clément Marot et le psautier huguenot (Paris, 1878–9/R)
P.-F. Geisendorf, ed.: Le livre des habitants de Genève, i (Geneva, 1957), 151
P. Pidoux, ed.: Le psautier huguenot du XVIe siècle, i–ii (Basle, 1962)
P. Pidoux: Preface to Les psaumes en vers français avec leurs mélodies: Clément Marot et Théodore de Bèze (Geneva, 1986) [repr. of Les pseaumes mis en rime françoise, Geneva, 1562]
L. Guillo: Les éditions musicales de la Renaissance lyonnaise (Paris, 1991), 75
F. Dobbins: Music in Renaissance Lyons (Oxford, 1992), 152–3
P. Pidoux: Franc, Bourgeois, Davantés: leur contribution à la création des mélodies du psautier de Genève (collected material, 1993, CH-Gpu, F-Pshp)

FRANK DOBBINS

Davaux [Davau, D'Avaux], Jean-Baptiste (b La Côte-St André, 19 July 1742; d Paris, 2 Feb 1822). French composer and violinist. He received a sound general and musical education from his parents and about 1767 went to Paris, where he soon established a reputation as a gifted composer and violinist. He held a number of non-musical posts during his career: he served in the household of the Prince of Rohan from 1775, and later as Secrétaire des Commandements to the Prince of Guénémée; after the Revolution he was an official in the Ministry of War, and he was head of the Grand Chancellory of the Légion d'Honneur from 1803 until it closed in 1815, when he was granted a pension of 4000 livres. On 28 September 1814 he was elected to the Légion d'Honneur in recognition of his 30 years of government service. Davaux was a member of the Société des Enfants d'Apollon, withdrawing after his retirement in 1816 to become a corresponding member.

Davaux's first published compositions were the ariettes Les charmes de la liberté and Le portrait de Climène (1768). Except for a few similar vocal pieces and his two comic operas, his output consisted of instrumental music. Although he always referred to himself as an amateur, he enjoyed great public and critical acclaim; with the possible exception of Gossec, he was the French symphonist most esteemed by his countrymen. His fame was also extensive abroad; his works appeared in numerous (usually pirated) editions in the Netherlands, England and Germany, and his quartets were heard in the USA as early as 27 April 1782 (New York Royal Gazette). His music was popular, being uncomplicated, rich in short, pleasing themes and having a relative lack of technical problems.

A composer of appealing chamber music for strings, Davaux published six duos, six trios, at least 25 quartets and four quintets. The quartets represent a significant contribution to the history of the genre, and featured prominently in the popular weekly concerts held, for many years, at his house each winter. In the quartets, particularly those marked 'concertants', there is a tendency for all four instruments to be treated soloistically, a trait more characteristic of the symphonie concertante. All but one of the quatuors concertants op.9 are in two movements (a sonata-form movement followed by a rondo or presto).

Davaux's published orchestral output includes three symphonies, four violin concertos and 13 symphonies concertantes. He was most famous for the last, which offered a novel alternative to the symphony and the solo concerto, and permitted capable instrumentalists to achieve status and financial independence by displaying their artistry while avoiding both the musical excess and technical demands of solo virtuosity. All except the two that appeared after the Revolution have two movements: an Allegro in ritornello form, comprising four tuttis alternating with three longer solo sections, and a Minuet or Rondo. Various melodic ideas are presented, but sonata-form elements, such as thematic development and full recapitulation of material, are lacking. Most are scored for two principal violins and strings, sometimes featuring the paired oboes or horns that are always present, and, in a few cases, with a third solo instrument – viola, cello or flute. All the movements of the symphonies concertantes, like those of the symphonies, are in major keys, though the latter works exhibit a greater variety of mood. Davaux's first symphonies concertantes were published about 1772 and his last in 1800. The sinfonie concertante of 1794 includes patriotic airs in each movement, including La marseillaise in the first and Ça ira in the third. His music was prominently featured in the programmes of the Concert Spirituel between 1773 and 1788, as the new directors, Gossec, Simon Leduc and Gaviniès, provided a fresh stimulus for the increased performance of instrumental music rather than the traditional vocal music with Latin texts. There, Davaux's music was interpreted by such famous Parisian instrumentalists as Capron, Devienne, Pierre Leduc and Giornovichi. In 1783, an opera-ballet choreographed by Gardel l'aîné entitled La rosière, which ended with a pas de six to one of Davaux's symphonies concertantes, received great praise (Mercure de France, August 1783).

Davaux's theatrical ventures were less successful. His two comic operas, Théodore, ou Le bonheur inattendu (1785), based on Hugh Kelly's comedy False Delicacy, and Cécilia, ou Les trois tuteurs (1786), based on Fanny Burney's well-known novel, were praised for their music, but severely criticized for their dramatic ineffectiveness.

Davaux introduced his chronomètre device with the publication of his Trois simphonies à grand orchestre, op.11 (1784), well before Maelzel. Numerical indications in the first violin parts give the precise tempo setting for each movement. The purpose and operation of this mechanism were explained in the Journal de Paris (8 May 1784) and in the Mercure de France (12 June 1784). France had been in the forefront of similar activity since the inventions of Loulié (1696), Sauveur (1701), Onzembray (1732) and Choquel (1762). Inspired by the discussion of such devices in Rousseau's Dictionnaire de musique, Davaux had his plans executed by Breguet, a manufacturer of scientific instruments. The Davaux–Breguet chronomètre appeared concurrently with the plexichronomètre invented by the harpist Renaudin, touching off extended polemics in the press.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated

INSTRUMENTAL

Symphonies concertantes: 2, no.1, F, for 2 vn, vc, orch, no.2, D, for 2 vn, orch, op.5 (*c*1772), as op.3 (The Hague, *c*1780), no.1 ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. D, v (New York, 1983); 2, no.1, C, for 2 vn, va, orch, no.2, A, for 2 vn, 2 ob, orch, op.7 (1773), as op.4 (The Hague, *c*1780), no.2 ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. D, v (New York, 1983); 2, no.1, B♭, for 2 vn, orch, no.2, D, for 2 vn, fl, orch, op.8 (1776), as op.5 (The Hague, *c*1781); 2, no.1, G, for 2 vn, orch, no.2, D, for 2 vn, fl, orch, op.12 (1784), as op.9 (The Hague, n.d.); Ouverture et entractes de Théodore formant une simphonie concertante, fl, ob/vn, bn/vc, orch (1785), lost; 2, D, A, 2 vn, orch, op.13 (1787); Sinfonie concertante mêlée d'airs patriotiques, G, 2 vn, orch (1794); Simphonie concertante, D, 2 vn, orch, op.16 (1800)

Other orch: [4] Conc., vn, orch (1769–71), as op.2 (The Hague, 1775–9); 3 simphonies, E♭, F, D, str, 2 ob, 2 hn, op.11 (1784), no.3 ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. D, v (New York, 1983); 1 sym., C, unpubd, mentioned by Eitner, I-Mc

Chbr: 6 quartettos, 2 vn, va, b, op.6 (1773), as op.1 (The Hague, n.d.), numerous other edns; 6 quatuors concertants, str qt, op.9 (1779), as op.6 (The Hague, n.d.); 6 quatuors d'airs connus, str qt, op.10 (1780); 6 duos, 2 vn (1788), as op.7 (The Hague, n.d.), as op.9 (London, n.d.); 4 quartetti, str qt, op.14 (London, 1790); 6 trios, 2 vn, va, op.15 (*c*1792); 3 quatuors concertans, 2 vn, vc, b, op.17 (?1800); 4 Quintettos, 2 vn, 2 va, vc (London, n.d.), as op.10, bks 1 and 2; Qt, D, fl, vn, va, vc, *c*1776, D-Rtt, ed. H.-D. Sonntag (Berlin, 1959), doubtful, previously attrib. (J.) M. Haydn

VOCAL

Théodore, ou Le bonheur inattendu (cmda, 3, B.-J. Marsollier des Vivetières, after H. Kelly: False Delicacy), Fontainebleau, 4 March 1785, lost; numerous pubd airs, arrs. extant

Cécilia, ou Les trois tuteurs (cmda, 3, Descombles, after F. Burney, Comédie-Italienne, 14 Dec 1786, F-Pc (partly autograph)

Ariettes: Les charmes de la liberté (1768), lost; Le portrait de Climène, 'à grande symphonie' (1768), lost; other works

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookSF; Choron-FayolleD; EitnerQ; FétisB; La LaurencieEF; MGG1(A. Sorel-Nitzberg) [incl. addl early bibliography]

J.-B. Davaux: [untitled letter] 'sur un instrument ou pendule nouveau', Journal encyclopédique, lvii (1784), 534–7

E.G.–J. Gregoir: 'Grandes exécutions musicales à Paris au XVIIIme et au XIXme siècles', Bibliothèque musicale populaire (Brussels, 1877–9)

F.M. Grimm: Correspondance littéraire, philosophique et critique (Paris, 1812–4); complete version, ed. M. Tourneux (Paris, 1877–82/R), xiv

O.G. Sonneck: Early Concert-Life in America (1731–1800) (Leipzig, 1907/R, 3/1959)

J.M. Levy: The Quatuor Concertant in Paris in the Latter Half of the Eighteenth Century (diss., Stanford U., 1971)

C. Pierre: Histoire du Concert Spirituel, 1725–1790 (Paris, 1975)

J. LaRue: 'The Mysterious Chronometer of Davaux', New Perspectives on Music: Essays in Honor of Eileen Southern, ed. J. Wright and S.A. Floyd (Warren, MI, 1992), 63–7

P. Oboussier: 'The French String Quartet, 1770–1800', Music and the French Revolution, ed. M. Boyd (Cambridge, 1992), 74–92

BARRY S. BROOK, JOEL KOLK, DONALD H. FOSTER

Daveluy, Raymond (b Victoriaville, PQ, 23 Dec 1926). Canadian organist and composer. He was first taught by his father, then took private lessons in theory and composition with Gabriel Cusson in Montreal (1939–48), and studied the organ with Conrad Letendre in Montreal (1942–8) and with Hugh Giles in New York (1948–9); he was awarded the Prix d'Europe in 1948. Daveluy held the post of organist at several Montreal churches before taking up his principal church appointment, at St Joseph's Oratory, Montreal, in 1960. As a recitalist, he has played throughout North America and in Europe and East Asia, and has recorded music by Bach, Marchand and Gaspard Corrette; he is also known for his skills as an improviser. He gave classes at McGill University in 1966, and was organ professor at the Conservatoire de Trois-Rivières, 1966–7, and later its director, 1970–74; at the Conservatoire de Musique in Montreal, he was associate director, 1970–74, and director, 1974–8, continuing to teach there and at Trois-Rivières from 1978 to 1988. Daveluy's compositions (some of them published) include an organ concerto (1980–81), chamber music, sonatas and chorale preludes for organ and a Messe en l'honneur de Saint-Joseph (1952) for mixed choir, organ and brass.

JACQUES THÉRIAULT/R

Davenant, Sir William (b Oxford, bap. 3 March 1606; d London, 7 April 1668). English dramatist, theatre manager and poet. After his arrival in London in 1622, he found employment in the households of various members of the nobility until in 1634 he entered the service of Charles I's queen. He then provided the texts of the last five court masques performed before the Civil War: The Temple of Love (1635), Britannia triumphans (1638), Luminalia (1638) and Salmacida spolia (1640), all staged at Whitehall, and The Triumphs of the Prince d'Amour (1636), given in the Middle Temple (the 2nd and 5th ed. M. Lefkowitz, Trois masques à la cour de Charles Ier d'Angleterre, Paris, 1970). The last was unusual in being entirely set to music (by Henry and William Lawes). In December 1638 the king granted Davenant an annual pension of £100, which in effect created him Poet Laureate, although he was never officially so entitled until after his death. Three months later he obtained a royal patent to build a new theatre 'wherein plays, musical entertainments, scenes, or other like presentments may be presented', but this attempt to bring music and spectacle to a wider public came to nothing. He was appointed governor of the Cockpit Theatre in June 1640, but by then he was becoming involved in the approaching Civil War. Five years later he went into exile in France. He was captured by Commonwealth forces while on a voyage to Maryland in 1650 and imprisoned in the Tower of London. In August 1654 he was released; deeply in debt, he sought to raise money by providing entertainment, even though the staging of plays was banned. In May 1656 he produced at his home, Rutland House, a series of dialogues interspersed with music entitled The First Dayes Entertainment. By 3 September 1656 he had prepared an opera, The Siege of Rhodes, which was probably staged at Rutland House later that month. It was apparently set mainly in recitative, though each of its five 'entries' ends with a chorus. Although influenced by masques it differs from both the masques and the operas of the period in having a unified, dramatic plot based on a modern, heroic subject. The vocal music was written by Henry Lawes, Henry Cooke and Matthew Locke, the instrumental music by Charles Coleman and George Hudson; unfortunately none of it survives. Davenant staged two further entertainments, The Cruelty of the Spaniards in Peru and The History of Sir Francis Drake, in a proper theatre, the Cockpit, in 1658–9. Both contained dialogue, spectacle and music but were propaganda pieces with little dramatic action.

After the Restoration, Davenant obtained a patent to set up the Duke's Theatre. He made no attempt, however, to stage another opera; indeed he soon produced The Siege of Rhodes, in expanded form, as a spoken play. Nevertheless, he had a profound influence on the subsequent development of English opera through his encouragement of the use of incidental music in the plays produced at the Duke's Theatre and particularly through his adaptations of Shakespeare's Macbeth (1663) and The Tempest (with Dryden, 1667), into which he introduced spectacular musical scenes performed by subsidiary supernatural characters.

For illustrations see MASQUE, figs.4*c* and 7.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Hotson: The Commonwealth and Restoration Stage (Cambridge, 1928/R), chap.3
A. Harbage: Sir William Davenant: Poet Venturer (1606–1668) (Philadelphia, 1935)
A.M. Gibbs, ed.: Sir William Davenant: the Shorter Poems, and Songs from the Plays and Masques (Oxford, 1972)
E.W. White: A History of English Opera (London, 1983)
M. Edmund: Rare Sir William Davenant (Manchester, 1987)

MARGARET LAURIE

Davenport, Francis William (b Wilderslowe, nr Derby, 9 April 1847; d Scarborough, 1 April 1925). English composer and writer on music. He read law at University College, Oxford, then studied music with Sir George Macfarren, whose only daughter he married. He was a professor of harmony and counterpoint from 1879, and subsequently undertook local examining for the RAM. In 1882 he became a professor at the GSM, and was from 1883 to 1889 honorary secretary of the Musical Association. His Symphony no.1 in D minor won first prize at the Alexandra Palace competition of 1876, together with Stanford's Symphony in B♭. His Elements of Music and Elements of Harmony and Counterpoint have been widely used as basic handbooks. He also wrote another symphony and other orchestral works, a piano trio and pieces for cello and piano and for piano solo.

WRITINGS

Elements of Music (London, 1884/R)
Elements of Harmony and Counterpoint (London, 1887) with J.P. Baker: A Guide for Pianoforte Students (London, 1891) with J.P. Baker: Local Examinations in Music: Questions and Exercises for the Use of Students (London, 1891)

STEPHEN BANFIELD

Davesne [d'Avesne, Davesnes], Pierre Just (fl Paris, *c*1745–66; d after 1783). Cellist and composer, probably of French extraction. A Davesne was given Parisian publishing rights for sonatas, a trio and other instrumental works in 1743, and, according to Brenet, Pierre Davesne's motet Venite exultemus was presented at the Concert Spirituel in 1747. The work remained popular. Davesne was a member of the Opéra orchestra by 1750, and his motets, symphonies and an oratorio were performed at the Concert Spirituel between 1749 and 1773. In 1754 he composed music for two ballets by Dourdé, presented at the Théâtre Français. In the same year the Spectacles de Paris noted him as a composer of motets which were heard 'with pleasure' and several 'bonnes ouvertures d'opéras comiques'. The anonymous writer added that Davesne was then composing an opera but the object of this reference is unclear; the Mercure de France (August 1760) announced the presentation of Le petit philosophe, a comedy with couplets by Davesne, and a Huberty catalogue of about 1768 advertised three opéras comiques by him. He retired from the Opéra orchestra in 1766 and was still alive in 1784.

Davesne's orchestral and chamber works were well received; in May 1757 the Mercure de France announced his collection of 'ariettes italiennes mises en symphonies' as a new genre whose effect was 'très agréable & fort pittoresque'. His overtures are in three or four movements after the manner of a French suite. Although La Laurencie and Saint-Foix claimed that Davesne was among the first composers to indicate graduated dynamics in the score, such changes are found in earlier works of Italian and French composers, including Rameau's Hippolyte et Aricie (1733). He should not be confused with Jean Pierre Davesne (1714–42), the librettist of many comic works.

WORKS

Motets: Venite exultemus, 1747, Laudate pueri, Deus misereatur, *c*1751, all mentioned in EitnerQ; Deus noster, 1749, lost; Cantate Domino, 1749, lost; Laudate Dominum, 1749, lost

Other vocal: La conquête de Jérico (orat), 1760, lost; Parmi nous la simple nature, vaudeville in Mercure de France (Aug 1755); Le faux derviche, Justine et Mathurin, Le triomphe des arts, opéras comiques, *c*1768, pubd, lost

Inst: 6 ouvertures à 4, str, nos.1, 3, 5–6, with hns ad lib, op.1 (Paris, 1755); Ière suite de menuets, vns, fls, obs, b/bn, other insts (Paris, *c*1755); Ie [IVe, VIe, XIe, XIIe] suite de contredances, vns, fls, obs, b/bn, other insts (Paris, *c*1755); [6] Ariettes italiennes mises en symphonies, str, nos.1, 4, 6 with 2 hns, op.1 (Paris, 1757)

Ballets: La fête villageoise, 10 June 1754; Les contre-danses, 1754: both lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrenetC; BrooksF; EitnerQ; FétisB; JohanssonFMP; PierreH

E.G.J. Gregoir: Bibliothèque musicale populaire, i (Brussels, 1877)

L. de La Laurencie and G. de Saint-Foix: 'Contribution à l'histoire de la symphonie française vers 1750', Année musicale, i (1911), 1–123

C.D. Brenner: A Bibliographical List of Plays in the French Language 1700–1789 (Berkeley, 1947, 2/1979)

MARY CYR

Davey, Henry (b Brighton, 29 Nov 1853; d Hove, 28 Aug 1929). English musicologist and pianist. He studied at the Leipzig Conservatory (1874–7), principally with Jadassohn, Reinecke, Richter and Wiedenbach, returning to Brighton, where he worked as a journalist and taught until 1903. His research was primarily concerned with English music of the 16th and 17th centuries, to which his History of English Music (London, 1895, 2/1921/R) is mainly devoted. In 1901 he catalogued the library of the Royal Academy of Music where (with J.S. Shedlock) he unearthed Purcell's manuscript of The Fairy Queen. His other writings include The Student's Musical History (London, 1891/R). Davey's History of English Music is valuable for its accounts, based on his own research, of nearly all the early manuscripts and prints known at the time, and of the Puritan attitude to music.

RUTH SMITH/STANLEY SADIE

Davey, Shaun (Carrick) (b Belfast, 18 Jan 1948). Irish composer. He studied at Trinity College, Dublin (1968–72), and the Courtauld Institute of Fine Art, London (MA 1974), but was self-taught as a composer. His compositions synthesize elements from Irish folk music and popular music and are often based on medieval Celtic or modern Irish historical subjects. Central to his compositional approach is collaboration with folk musicians. At his best, the integrity of the oral traditions on which he draws is enhanced by his orchestral writing.

Davey's first concert work, The Brendan Voyage (1980), achieved international popularity and commercial success. Displaying a characteristic interest in idiomatic writing for uilleann pipes within an orchestral context, the work relates the recreation of St Brendan's 6th-century voyage from Ireland to Newfoundland. The Pilgrim (1983), commissioned for the Lorient Interceltic Festival, celebrates the spread of Celtic Christianity during the Middle Ages. Granuaile (1985), an orchestral song suite, sets texts that celebrate the 16th-century Irish chieftain and pirate queen, Grace O'Malley. Other works include commissions commemorating the tercentenary of the Siege of Derry and the bicentenary of the Belfast Harp Festival. Davey also composes for theatre, television and film. In 1985 he received the People of the Year Award for his contribution to Irish culture.

WORKS

The Brendan Voyage (T. Severin), suite, uilleann pipes, orch, 1980; The Pilgrim (medieval Celtic texts), suite, soloists, chorus, pipe band, orch, 1982; Granuaile (after A. Chambers), song suite, solo vv, uilleann pipes, gui, hp, perc, chbr orch, 1985; Conc., uilleann pipes, orch, 1987; The Relief of Derry Sym., orch, 12 tpt, pipeband, org, 1989; Conc., 2 hp, orch, 1992; Guilliver (Pss), choral sym., chorus, orch, 1994; incid music for the Royal Shakespeare Co.; film and radio scores for the BBC, Granada, RTÉ.

MICHAEL MURPHY

Davico, Vincenzo (b Monaco, 14 Jan 1889; d Rome, 8 Dec 1969). Italian composer, conductor and critic. He studied at Turin and with Reger at the Leipzig Conservatory, gaining a diploma there in 1911. In his early 20s he made his début as a conductor in Rome. From 1918 until 1940 he was resident mainly in Paris: Debussian tendencies, already present in his previous works, were reinforced, though he did much to promote modern Italian music. He subsequently returned to Rome, where he worked for Italian radio. Davico's very uneven output includes several large-scale compositions, some of which achieved success. Yet even in the colourful La tentation de St Antoine and the Requiem per la morte di un povero, which are notable for many refinements and personal touches in detail, there is a certain self-consciousness in overall conception. For Davico was by nature a miniaturist, at his best in his songs. Often conceived on a tiny scale, these have aptly been compared to the Japanese tanka and to the poetry of the imagists and the crepuscolari. Taken in quantity they suffer from a certain uniformity: a delicate, shadowy, evanescent atmosphere prevails for much of the time, enhanced in orchestral songs like Offrande by evocative instrumentation. Yet from time to time this mood is offset by more forceful accents – for example, in the 'Baccanale' from the Impressioni liriche (1908) with its almost Schoenbergian final dissonances, or in the second of the Trois stipes with its clanging major 7ths, minor 9ths and tritones. In the postwar Cinque canzoni d'Isotta there are even incidental suggestions of serialism in some of the melodic and harmonic contours.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

La dogaressa (op, 1, G.M. Gatti), Monte Carlo, 26 Feb 1920; L'agonia della rosa (ballet), Paris, 1927; Berlingaccio (op, 3, G. Pierotti della Sanguigna), 1931, unperf.; La principessa prigioniera (op, 1, G. Gros, trans. Pierotti della Sanguigna), before 1932, Bergamo, Donizetti, 29 Sept 1940; Narciso (ballet), San Remo, 1935

VOCAL

Choral: La tentation de St Antoine (op da concerto, after G. Flaubert), S, S, A, Bar, chorus, orch, 1914; Cant. breve (Bible: Job), Bar, chorus, orch, 1945; Requiem per la morte di un povero, S, Bar, spkr, chorus, orch, 1949–50

Over 200 songs, with pf unless otherwise stated, incl.: Impressioni liriche, 1908; 5 chants brefs, 1907–15; 3 chants d'amour, 1910–16; 5 chants d'orient, 1916; 3 croquis, 1920; 6 quatrains populairs portugais, 1920; Liriche giapponesi, 1920; Offrande, 1v, orch, 1921; 3 epigrammes antiques, 1923; 3 poèmes agrestes, 1924; Invocation de Sapho, 1v, orch, 1926; 3 stipes, 1927; 5 canti popolari toscani, 1928; Triptyque persan, 1930; 3 canti popolari toscani, 1930; 3 facezie, 1932; 2 canti trecenteschi, 1v, vc, 1934; 5 liriche romantiche, 1944; Liriche infantili, 1947; 5 notturni, 1949; 3 nuove liriche, 1950; 5 canzoni d'Isotta, 1955

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Polifemo, 1910; La principessa lontana, 1911; Impressioni pagane, 1912; Poema erotico, 1913; Impressioni romane, 1913; Impressioni antiche, 1916; other works

Chbr: Sonata, vc, pf, 1909; Pf Trio, 1911; Sonatina rustica, vn, pf, 1926; other works incl. at least 33 small pf pieces

Principal publishers: Arlequin (Paris), Bongiovanni, Carisch, Delrieu (Nice), Eschig, Ricordi, Rouart-Larolle, Suvini Zerboni, Joseph Williams

For fuller lists see Rocca and Valabrega

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBI (A. Bisconti)

G.M. Gatti: 'Vincenzo Davico', Musicisti moderni d'Italia e di fuori (Bologna, 1920, 2/1925), 55–61

G.M. Gatti: 'Some Italian Composers of Today, v: Davico', MT, lxii (1921), 403–5

E. Jenco: 'Profili: Vincenzo Davico', Pensiero musicale, ii (1922), 177–82 [incl. fuller bibliography]

R. Petit: 'Le liriche di Vincenzo Davico', Fiamma, i (1925), 272–6

G.M. Gatti: 'Four Composers of Present-Day Italy, ii: Vincenzo Davico', MQ, xii (1926), 456–60

E. Carducci-Agustini: 'Musicisti contemporanei: Vincenzo Davico', Il pianoforte, viii (1927), 312–17

L. Rocca: 'Vincenzo Davico', Bollettino bibliografico musicale, vii/11 (1932), 5–10 [incl. list of works]

M. Saint-Cyr: 'Vincenzo Davico', Rassegna dorica, iv (1932–3), 113–16

C. Valabrega: La lirica da camera di Vincenzo Davico (Rome, 1953) [incl. fuller bibliography, 45–7]

R. Zanetti: La musica italiana nel Novecento (Busto Arsizio, 1985), 260–61, 823–5

R.C. Lakeway and R.C. White: Italian Art Song (Bloomginton, IN, 1989), 203–30

JOHN C.G. WATERHOUSE

David (*fl c*1010–961 BCE). Founder, king and charismatic ruler of the united kingdom of Israel. He occupies a central position in Jewish and Christian musical tradition.

1. History. 2. Tradition.

1. HISTORY. The story of David is told in the books of Samuel, dating from nearly contemporary sources, and 1 Chronicles, from the 4th century BCE, containing material of somewhat lesser reliability. He was obviously a man of special talent. Born the youngest son of Jesse (Yishai), a sheep herder from Bethlehem, he acquired, by a combination of prowess at arms, vision, opportunism and force of personality, the kingship of Judah upon the death of Saul, united it to the northern provinces of Israel, established his court at Jerusalem and conquered the neighbouring rivals of Israel within an area stretching from the frontier of Mesopotamia to Egypt. His political achievement, which showed signs of disintegration in his later life, was never again equalled in ancient Israel. Thus he became the ideal of Jewish kingship and was also closely related to the Messianic ideal. These ideals carried over into Christianity so that a medieval ruler like Charlemagne was referred to as the 'novus David', and Jesus of Nazareth, whom the Christians accepted as the Messiah, was, according to the Gospels, the 'son of David' of the 'tree of Jesse'.

It is not uncommon to find military leadership and musical ability together in heroes from what might loosely be called the Homeric age of a civilization. Yet the musical achievements associated with David are quite beyond the ordinary. According to 1 Samuel xvi.14–23, he first came to the royal court and earned Saul's favour as the skilful player whose music dispelled Saul's evil spirit – an anecdote, incidentally, in conflict with 1 Samuel xvii.1–18, which has David first coming to Saul's attention as the shepherd boy who slew the Philistine giant Goliath with his sling. Varying traditions attribute at least 73 of the Psalter's 150 psalms to David. This is no doubt an exaggeration, but it is possible that David wrote at least some psalms, since he seems definitely to have composed the moving laments over the deaths of Saul and Jonathan (2 Samuel i.19–27). There is also his association with the musical aspects of the translation of the Ark to Jerusalem and the subsequent establishment of the musical Offices of the Temple. The earlier version of these events (2 Samuel vi–vii), which has David girded only in a linen ephod 'dancing with all his might before the Lord' and 'David with all Israel playing before the Lord on all manner of musical instruments', is entirely credible. On the other hand, the version in 1 Chronicles xiii–xvi, which adds that David established the Levite orders of Temple musicians, including the leaders Heman, Asaph, Ethan and Idithun, appears for the most part to be a reading of later events into the original history.

2. TRADITION. Whatever the historical reality, the medieval tradition of David's musical involvement is of at least equal interest to the student of music history. The decisive factor in the development of this tradition was the adoption by the Christian Church of the Psalter as its liturgical hymnbook. Patristic authors spoke of it with great enthusiasm. Athanasius stated that 'the words of this book include the whole life of man', while Ambrose called a psalm 'the blessing of the people ... the language of the assembly, the voice of the church, the sweet sounding confession of the faith', and Pseudo-Chrysostom exclaimed that wherever and whenever the faithful and clergy assemble to pray 'David is first, middle and last'. This final reference in particular reflects the actual liturgical situation. The Book of Psalms became so central to Christian worship that the singing of it in its entirety each week became the primary function, the opus Dei, of monks and canons during the early Middle Ages. At this time the Psalter was used as a reading primer for young clerics, and a common test of someone's worthiness to accept a bishopric was the recitation of the 150 psalms from memory.

1. David playing the harp: illuminated initial from a psalter, 12th century (NL-DHk 76.Fr.13, f.29r)

2. 'David-in-Penitence': miniature from a Book of Hours, 15th century (F-LA 243, f.87)

As a result, copies of the Psalter are among the most common of all medieval manuscripts, and commentaries on the Psalter are the most common type of medieval exigetical text. This accounts for the most dramatic stage of the Davidic tradition: the emergence of David the musician as one of the primary subjects of medieval art. He appears regularly in the frontispiece of early medieval psalters holding a string instrument of one sort or another and surrounded by his four companion musicians Heman, Asaph, Ethan and Idithun. David's appearance here is a typical instance of the medieval author portrait, but the special musical character of the illustration is determined by a short preface of Pseudo-Bede that frequently appears at the beginning of a psalter. This preface, following Eusebius of Caesarea, paraphrases 1 Chronicles xiii–xvi and speaks of David with his psaltery and his four principal musicians from the tribe of Levi with various instruments including the cymbala, cyrnira, kithara and tuba cornea.

In the 12th and 13th centuries a new type of illustrated psalter was developed, the so-called 'ferial' or 'liturgical' psalter, in which the initials of just eight psalms are illustrated, those that initiate Matins for each day of the week and Vespers for Sunday. Most of these initials picture David in some task or another inspired by the first verse of the psalm in question; two – the 'B' of Psalm i, Beatus vir, and the 'E' of Psalm lxxx, Exultate Deo – show him in musical poses. Beatus vir has David seated on a throne playing a string instrument (for an example see fig.1), and Exultate Deo usually has him playing the tuned bells of the CYMBALA and occasionally shows him with a diverse group of instrumentalists. There are also rare instances of Exultate illustration where he is shown playing the organ. A number of particularly splendid early 15th-century ferial psalters survive in which the standard illustrations are replaced by an elegantly painted life of David. Two scenes of musical significance appear in these books: David playing the harp for Saul and David playing a portative organ as he walks beside the Ark. Probably the most prominent instance of 15th-century Davidic musical iconography was the newly developed type of 'David-in-Prayer' or 'David-in-Penitence', which was used in books of Hours to illustrate Domine ne in furore tua arguas me, Psalm vi, the first of the seven Penitential Psalms. David is pictured kneeling and praying to God the Father above, his harp (or other instruments) abandoned before him (fig.2).

The Davidic tradition took something of a new turn with the Protestant Reformation, this time manifested more in literature and music than in art. Luther, for example, emphasized the curing of Saul by David as a precedent for his own strongly felt belief in music's power to dispel melancholy and intensify religious fervour. Theoretical treatises such as the first volume of Praetorius's Syntagma musicum (1614–15) engaged in discussion of Old Testament music in a manner that owes much to patristic psalm commentaries. At the same time, collections of concerted church music, such as Schütz's Psalmen Davids (1619, 1628), were published along with more numerous collections of chorales and psalm settings for congregational usage, many of which invoke the name of David in prefaces and titles.

However, as the Enlightenment outlook spread through Europe in the 18th century, the Davidic tradition ceased to exist as a living force in the thinking of most important musical figures. Instead it was from time to time invoked in more sophisticated and historically conscious ways, as, for example, metaphor in Schumann's Davidsbündler (1837), or homage to a remote but intriguing ancient saint in Honegger's Le roi David (1921).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (J.W. McKinnon)

G. Haseloff: Die Psalterillustration im 13. Jahrhundert (Kiel, 1938)

H. Steger: David, rex et propheta (Nuremberg, 1961)

J. Myers: 'David', The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, ed. G.A. Buttrick and others, i (New York, 1962), 771–82

J. Hennig: 'Zur Stellung Davids in der Liturgie', Archiv für Liturgiewissenschaft, x (1967), 157–70

T. Seebass: Musikdarstellung und Psalterillustration im früheren Mittelalter (Berne, 1973)

J. McKinnon: 'The Late Medieval Psalter: Liturgical or Gift Book?', MD, xxxviii (1984), 133–57
M. Boyer-Owens: 'The Image of King David in Prayer in Fifteenth-Century Books of Hours', Imago musicae, vi (1989), 23–38
J.W. McKinnon: 'Desert Monasticism and the Later Fourth-Century Psalmodic Movement', ML, lxxv (1994), 505–21

JAMES W. McKINNON

David, Félicien(-César) (b Cadenet, Vaucluse, 13 April 1810; d Saint Germain-en-Laye, 29 Aug 1876). French composer. His predilection for oriental subjects, reflected particularly well in Le désert and Lalla-Roukh, influenced generations of later French composers.

1. 1810–44. 2. 1844–76.

1. 1810–44. David's mother died soon after he was born and at the age of five he also lost his father, a capable amateur violinist. Garnier, first oboist at the Paris Opéra, recommended the development of his musical talents, and in 1818 he was sent as a chorister to the maîtrise of St Sauveur in Aix-en-Provence. There his teachers for solfège, harmony and singing were the Abbé Michel and, later, Marius Roux; David was soon composing motets, hymns and a string quartet. In 1825 he went to the Jesuit college of St Louis at Aix, and began to discover the music of opéras comiques (in the guise of church music) as well as the sacred works of Haydn, Mozart and Cherubini. On the closure of the college in 1828 he worked briefly as assistant conductor in the Aix theatre, then as a lawyer's clerk and then as maître de chapelle at his old school, the maîtrise of St Sauveur. His inclination at this period was more towards church music than the theatre, although he wrote a number of vocal nocturnes and romances in conformity with the fashion of the day.

The young David was clearly restless in temperament. After a year at St Sauveur, he decided to move to Paris. He was interviewed by Cherubini, director of the Paris Conservatoire, who reduced David to tears of inferiority before admitting him to Millault's class for counterpoint. He also attended the classes of Fétis (counterpoint and fugue) and Benoist (organ), studied privately with Reber, and made a meagre living from giving lessons. Hampered by poverty, and having won no prizes at the Conservatoire, he left in 1831 to give his life yet another new direction by joining the SAINT-SIMONIANS.

Whether from a lack of direction in his musical studies or from genuine sympathy with Saint-Simon's doctrines, David became the most prominent musician in a sect whose programme of equality and social realignment received considerable encouragement from the July Revolution of 1830. David was introduced by the painter Paul Justus, and when the Saint-Simonians split within themselves late in 1831, David followed 'Père' Enfantin to Ménilmontant, outside Paris, where the Saint-Simonian community worked out its social and economic programme, while David was charged with composing music for the cult's ceremonials. Choruses for four-part male choir were written for the daily liturgy, and many were later published in La ruche harmonieuse. Some occasional pieces mark the arrival or departure of Enfantin, the death of an apostle or the inauguration of a temple.

Indirectly David's association with Saint-Simonism had the most far-reaching effects, for the community was disbanded by government order in 1832 and dispersed in groups. David left with a small band of friends to preach the Saint-Simonian gospel to the orient with the hope of restoring Egypt to its ancient prosperity. They passed through Lyons and Marseilles, then sailed on 22 March 1833 to Constantinople, Smyrna, Jaffa, Jerusalem and finally Egypt, where the ardour of their apostolic mission was gradually superseded by the fascination of the East, at least in David's mind, for he clearly recognized a powerful source of musical inspiration in the customs, religions and landscape of the countries he visited. The journey was one of adventure and discovery. David took with him a small travelling piano given to him by a follower in Lyons, and devoted much time during the voyage to composing songs and piano pieces, mainly of an oriental mould. He stayed nearly two years in Cairo, giving music lessons and exploring the desert. Eventually a recurrence of plague drove him from Egypt; he travelled overland to Beirut and there set sail for Genoa and Marseilles, arriving in June 1835.

In Paris the following year David published at his own expense a collection of Mélodies orientales (for the piano) which had little success, partly because a fire destroyed the plates and some of the stock, but also because a public that enjoyed Hugo's Orientales had not yet developed more than a passing taste for orientalism in musical form. David's preface explains that the melodies are genuinely oriental, made acceptable to European ears by the addition of harmony. Once again David changed direction; unwilling to embroil himself in Paris, and feeling his muse to be 'too severe and too religious' for the public, he settled in Igny, making the 30-km journey to Paris once a week, on foot. He now turned his attention to instrumental music, composing a series of 24 miniature quintets for strings in four books under the title Les quatre saisons, two nonets for brass and his first two symphonies. The First Symphony was played in Paris in 1838 at the Concerts Valentino, and a nonet was given by Musard in 1839, and by Valentino in 1840. Many songs also date from this period, including a number recalling the eastern journey: Le pirate, L'égyptienne and Le bédouin. In 1841 David moved to Paris and completed his third symphony, in E♭.

2. 1844–76. 1844 was the turning-point in David's career. In July he completed Le désert, which received its first performance on 8 December that year in a concert consisting entirely of his own music. Its success was instantaneous, and it initiated a series of descriptive works in many genres that explore the French passion for oriental subjects, a predilection that can be seen in Reyer, Gounod, Bizet, Delibes, Saint-Saëns, Roussel, Messiaen and many others. The genre itself of Le désert, an ode-symphonie, was novel; each of its three movements, for soloists and male-voice chorus, includes a recitation for speaker at the beginning. Within each movement are a number of separate scenes, describing a desert storm, a prayer to Allah, the caravan, the 'rêverie du soir' and the muezzin's call. The opening is particularly striking with a long-repeated pedal C representing the vast wastes of the desert; the picturesque orchestration won Berlioz's admiration. The last movement, largely a reprise of the first, is the weakest, although one may discern there David's modern concern for formal unity, expressed in a much earlier letter:

> Unity is one of the most difficult and yet the most important qualities in a composition. Making a work into a totality with a single, dominant idea appearing in different forms, yet without tiring with too much repetition, – this is the composer's art, this is how the imagination must flower without being chained down.

The music is rarely strictly oriental in inflection – even the muezzin is diatonic – and the straightforward tunefulness of the hymn to Allah accounts for some of its popularity. Yet the character and colour of the East had left its mark. Berlioz's notice was extravagantly favourable, although his view of David's music later cooled significantly.

Riding on the success of Le désert, David toured Germany and Austria in 1845 (see illustration), meeting Mendelssohn in Frankfurt and Meyerbeer in Berlin, and attending the Beethoven celebrations in Bonn. He returned with an oratorio, Moïse au Sinaï (1846), unsuccessful at first despite its desert setting, and then Christophe Colomb, a second ode-symphonie, which again described the storm and calm, as in Le désert, with vigorous sailors' choruses and some fine expressive orchestral writing. L'Eden (1848), a mystère (oratorio) in two parts, was a further venture in descriptive writing, again in an oriental setting.

From this series of concert works, David ventured finally to write for the stage, and his La perle du Brésil appeared at the Opéra-National (later the Théâtre-Lyrique) in 1851; making further play with the descriptive elements of the sea (another storm) and Brazilian local colour, it has more decorative than dramatic vitality, but remained in the repertory for over 30 years. Zora's coloratura aria with flute obbligato, 'Charmant oiseau', became quite widely known and is still sometimes performed. Herculanum, his next opera (1859), though more stagily Meyerbeerian, is not among his best works. It was first conceived as a melodrama entitled La fin du monde, with a finale depicting the Last Judgment, and was later reworked by Méry into a grand opera, whose first title was Le dernier amour. Herculanum contrasts the Christian and pagan worlds and concludes with the cataclysmic eruption of Vesuvius. The more modest Lalla-Roukh (1862) was much more appropriate to David's gifts; its delicate evocation of Thomas Moore's Kashmir, its dreamy atmosphere and aromatic orchestration mark it as his masterpiece. It quickly became popular and established David's success. La captive, similarly set in the East, was withdrawn from rehearsal in 1864 at the request of the librettist and never performed. Le saphir (1865), based on Shakespeare's All's Well that Ends Well, responded with only moderate success to Auber's mot 'I wish he'd get off his camel' by eschewing any kind of exotic or descriptive element. Discouraged, David never again wrote for the stage.

Félicien David: engraving by August Prinzhofer, 1845

Public recognition came to David as Officier de la Légion d'honneur in 1862. In 1867 he was awarded a prize of 20,000 francs by the Académie des Beaux Arts for Herculanum and Lalla-Roukh, and in 1869 he succeeded Berlioz as member of the Institute and also as librarian of the Conservatoire, an office which he discharged with even less devotion and interest than his predecessor.

David retained his Saint-Simonian faith to the end of his days; his loyalty to Enfantin never wavered. Yet apart from the music specially written for the Saint-Simonians in 1832, there is no trace of social dogma or idealism in his work, and he seems content to have exploited his talent for the picturesque and the evocative. In some respects his music echoes Berlioz, especially Harold en Italie, but his Romanticism did not extend to the dynamic imagination of the Symphonie fantastique or La damnation de Faust, and he showed no awareness of the richer harmonic language of Chopin and Liszt. Rather his music falls into the French tradition of being agreeable diversion, strongly coloured but emotionally naive; in this he preceded and greatly influenced a whole school, including Gounod, Thomas, Lalo, Saint-Saëns, Massenet and, probably most strongly, Delibes. René Dumesnil regarded David as second only to Berlioz among French composers of his time, and even if this implies much about the state of French music in this period, it is a judgment with which few would wish to quarrel.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris

STAGE

Le jugement dernier, ou La fin du monde (incid music, J. Gabriel and E. de Mirecourt), *c*1849, unperf., F-Pc

La perle du Brésil (oc, Gabriel and S. Saint-Etienne), Paris, Opéra-National, 22 Nov 1851 (1852), rev. 1859–61 (1873)

Le fermier de Franconville (oc, 1,? A. de Leuven), ?*c*1857, unperf., Pc

Herculanum (op, J. Méry and T. Hadot), Opéra, 4 March 1859 (1859)

Lalla-Roukh (oc, H. Lucas and M. Carré, after T. Moore), OC (Favart), 12 May 1862 (*c*1863)

La captive (oc, Carré), *c*1860–64, unperf., vs (1883), fs, Pc

Le saphir (oc, Carré, Hadot and de Leuven, after W. Shakespeare: All's Well that Ends Well), OC (Favart) 8 March 1865, vs (1865), fs lost

ODE-SYMPHONIES AND ORATORIOS

Le désert (A. Colin), ode-symphonie, T solo, male vv, female vv ad lib, speaker, orch, perf. 1844 (1845)

Moïse au Sinaï (Saint-Etienne, after a prose sketch by B.-P. Enfantin), orat, perf. 1846, vs (*c*1853), fs (*c*1861)

Christophe Colomb (Méry, C. Chaubet and Saint-Etienne), ode-symphonie, perf. 1847 (1847)

L'Eden (Méry), mystère (orat), perf. 1848, vs (*c*1853), fs lost

SAINT-SIMONIAN CHORUSES

many are reprinted in Locke, 1986

most for men's voices; all piano accompaniment

MM – announced for publication under common title Ménilmontant, chant religieux (1832–3); some unpubd

RH – arr. and pubd with different text in La ruche harmonieuse (*c*1854) [see below]

Hymne à Saint-Simon [Gloire à celui] (R. Bonheur), MM; Appel (Bergier), MM; Avant et après le repas (E. Barrault), MM, 2 settings, no.1 lost, RH no.2, no.2 unpubd, lost; Le retour du Père [Salut] (A. Rousseau), MM, RH no.27; Le nouveau temple (?Barrault), MM, lost; Au travail, lost; Prise d'habit (Enfantin), MM, lost; Prière du matin (Barrault), MM, RH no.7; Prière du soir (G. d'Eichthal), MM, RH no.4; Tout est mort [La mort et l'espérance] (C. Duveyrier), MM; Chant de vie (?Duveyrier), lost; Au peuple (Duveyrier), MM, RH no.1; Ronde [Soldats, ouvriers, bourgeois] (E. Pouyat), MM, RH no.5

Danse des astres (Duveyrier, Rousseau), MM; Peuple fier! peuple fort! (Rousseau), MM; Prière du Père (Enfantin), MM, RH no.21; Je ne veux plus être exploité [La voix du peuple] (Rousseau), MM, lost; Frères, levez-vous, MM, unpubd, lost; Paris est là, MM, unpubd, lost; La prison du Père (Barrault), MM, RH no.3; Le Compagnonage de la Femme (Barrault), lost; La nuit: à la Mère, orientale [Les étoiles] (P. Granal), Pc; Prière ('Les temps sont accomplis'), Pc, RH no.6; Sérénade, Pc; Belle, oh belle comme l'ange, Pc, RH no.10

OTHER CHORAL

6 motets religieux, most acc. org, 1828–30 (*c*1853)

La ruche harmonieuse, 30 choruses, men's vv, unacc., incl. choruses from Moïse, L'Eden, La perle du Brésil, arrs. of Saint-Simonian choruses with new texts, other works from 1828–30 (*c*1854)

Others: Promenade sur le Nil (T. de Seynes) (1837), lost; Choeur des conjurés (Saint-Etienne), men's vv, orch/brass, 1842, Pn, pubd in La ruche harmonieuse, no.12; Le sommeil de Paris, 1844, lost; Chant du soir (Saint-Etienne), men's vv, orch, 1844 (*c*1867), rev. of Danse des astres; Hymne à la fraternité (Colin), 1848, same music as Peuple fier!; Hymne à la paix universelle, 1855, lost; Chant du travail (P. Delombre), men's vv, unacc. (1861); Te Deum [Invocation] (E. de Lonlay), men's vv, unacc. (1861); Hymne à Dieu, chorus, orch, lost; Les martyres aux arènes, chorus, orch, lost; Hymne à la paix universelle, choruses, solo vv, orch, perf. 1885, lost songs mostly in Tunley, 1996

OTHER VOCAL

Sacred: O salutaris, 1v, pf; Musée-Bibliotheque Paul Arbaud, Aix-en-Provence

Songs (1836–43): J'ai peur de l'aimer (J. Rességuiers); Le bédouin (J. Cognat); La pluie [La rosée] (E. Tourneux); Le jour des morts (A. de Lamartine), also orchd; La chanson du pêcheur [Lamento] (T. Gautier); Le pirate (Saint-Etienne); Le Rhin allemand (A. de Musset); Adieux à Charence (Mme E.T[ourneux de Voves]); L'absence; L'égyptienne (Cognat), also orchd; Saltarelle (A. Deschamps), also orchd; Retraite (Mme [?Jenny] Montgolfier) (*c*1836–44)

Songs (1844–5): Le fou de Bicêtre (M. Constantin) [melodrama with sung sections]; Les hirondelles (Volny l'Hôtelier), also pubd as duet, also orchd; (La) Rêverie (Mme Tourneux de Voves); Oubli (Constantin), also orchd, lost; Le pêcheur à sa nacelle (C. Poncy); Le Chybouk [Le Tchibouk] (L. Jourdan), also orchd; Le sommeil d'enfant (G. Monavon); Les perles d'orient (T. Gautier, Constantin, E. Brazier), collection of 6 songs; Crainte d'amour, lost; Eveillez-vous (?G. de Larenaudière)

Songs (1846–7): Le captif (Saint-Etienne); Le mourant (Saint-Etienne); Un amour dans les nuages (Constantin); La bayadère [Joie et tristesse] (L. Escudier); Sultan Mahmoud (Gautier); Dormez, Marie (E. Barateau); Qui t'aime plus que moi? (Barateau); L'étoile du pêcheur (Chaubet); La fleur et l'oiseau mouche (V. Séjour); En chemin (Barateau); Le nuage (E. Plouvier); Fleur de bonheur (Barateau); Gardez-vous, mon coeur, de l'aimer [J'ai peur de l'aimer] (Barateau); Magdeleine (Barateau); Partons (E. Deschamps), 2vv; L'amour créateur (T. Tastet); Formosa (Tastet); L'oublier . . . jamais (Barateau)

Songs (1851–66): Eoline (Plouvier); Le ver luisant (Constantin); Le ramier (Constantin); L'ange rebelle (E. Hanapier); Le cri du Bosphore (Chaubet); Cri de charité (Chaubet), also orchd; Gronde, océan [L'océan] (C. de Marecourt), also orchd; La Providence à l'homme (Lamartine); La vengeance des fleurs ([?L.] Fonteille), also orchd; Les roses et le printemps [Le vieillard et les roses] (Fonteille); Plainte amoureuse (Fonteille); Au couvent (E. Bouscatel); L'amitié (Chaubet); Amour perdu [= Perles de l'orient, no.6] (Tastet); Dors, petit; Une plainte ('Belle inhumaine')

Songs (?posth.): La savoisienne (E. l'Héritier)

ORCHESTRAL AND CHAMBER

Orch: Sym., F, 1837, F-Pc; Sym., E, 1838, Pc, Sym., E♭ (1846); Sym., c, 1849, Pc, Andante, Scherzo, arr. pf (*c*1853); Solo, E, cornet, orch, ?*c*1840, Pc; Souvenir d'Orient (*c*1836–44), US-Eu

Chbr: Pieces on Arab themes, brass, 1835, lost; Nonet no.1, F, 2 cornets, 4 hn, 2 trbn, ophicleide, 1839, lost; Nonet no.2, c, 2 cornets, 4 hn, 2 trbn, ophicleide, 1839, Pc; Les quatre saisons, 24 qnts, str qt, vc/db (1845–6); Str Qt, f (1868); 3 str qts, A, d, e (inc.), after 1869, Pc; 3 pf trios, E♭, d, c (1857); Fantaisie concertante sur . . . Sans amour de F. Masini, cornet, pf (1843), collab. J. Forestier; 12 mélodies in 6 bks, vn/vc, pf (1854)

PIANO

Accompagnement de piano dans le choléra, 1832, Pc; Ménilmontant, mes amours, 2 ser. of waltzes, 1832, 1st ser. (1833), 2nd ser. lost; Pensées à Ménilmontant, 1832, one piece Pc, others lost; Mélodies orientales, 22 pieces in 7 bks (1836), bks 1–6 also pubd as Brises d'Orient, some with altered titles (1845), bk 7 also pubd as Les minarets, one with altered title (1845); Mélodie (*c*1841); Pensée (1845), S-Smf; L'absence (1845); Andante [Mazurka], by 1845, F-Pc; Andante (1845); 3 valses expressives (1846)

Rêverie (1848); 2 bluettes (1850); 2 méditations (1850); 3 mélodies-valses (1851); La bergeronette (1853); Les deux amies (1854); Doux souvenir, quatrième mélodie-valse [Mélodie] (1856); 6 ésquisses symphoniques (1856); Romance sans paroles [Andantino] (1863); Le soir, rêverie (1864); Allegretto agitato (1864); Tristesse (1869); Henriette, waltz (1873)

Pf accs. to 4 folksongs in collections by P. Lamazou, and to 2 chansons

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PEM (A. Gerhard, H. Schneider)

S. Saint-Etienne: Biographie de Félicien David (Marseilles, 1845)

H. Berlioz: 'Première représentation de La perle du Brésil', Journal des débats (27 Nov 1851)

E. de Mirecourt [C.J.B. Jacquot]: Félicien David (Brussels, 1854, 3/1869)

H. Berlioz: 'Première représentation d'Herculanum', Journal des débats (12 March 1859)

T. Gautier: Histoire de l'art dramatique en France depuis vingt-cinq ans, vi (Brussels and Paris, 1859), 273–9

D. Tajan-Rogé: Fausses notes (Paris, 1862)

H. Berlioz: 'Première représentation de Lalla Roukh', Journal des débats (23 May 1862)

A. Azevedo: Félicien David: coup d'oeil sur sa vie et son oeuvre (Paris, 1863)

P. Scudo: La musique en l'année 1862 (Paris, ?1863), 26–38

E. Reyer: Notes de musique (Paris, 1875)

C. Saint-Saëns: Harmonie et mélodie (Paris, 1885)

A. Jullien: Musiciens d'aujourd'hui, 2nd ser. (Paris, 1894), 113–27

H. Berlioz: Les musiciens et la musique, ed. A. Hallays (Paris, 1903/R)

J.G. Prod'homme: 'Félicien David, d'après sa correspondance inèdite', BSIM, iii (1907), 105–25, 229–75

R. Brancour: Félicien David (Paris, 1909)

J.G. Prod'homme: 'Correspondance inédite de Félicien David et du Père Enfantin', Mercure de France (1 May 1910)

F. Noske: La mélodie française de Berlioz à Duparc (Amsterdam and Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev., 1970)

D.V. Hagan: French Musical Criticism between the Revolutions (1830–1848) (diss., U. of Illinois, Urbana, 1965)

M.J. Achter: Félicien David, Ambroise Thomas, and French Opéra Lyrique 1850–1870 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1972)

P. Besnier: 'Musique pour la fin du monde', Missions et démarches de la critique: mélanges offerts à J.A. Vier (Paris, 1973), 171–82

P. Gradenwitz: 'Félicien David (1810–1876) and French Romantic Orientalism', MQ, lxii (1976), 471–506

M. Conati: Interviste e incontri con Verdi (Parma, 1980; Eng. trans., London, 1984, as Interviews and Encounters with Verdi 1984, as Encounters with Verdi) and Ithaca, NY, 5–11

T.J. Walsh: Second Empire Opera: the Théâtre Lyrique, Paris 1851–1870 (London, 1981)

J.-P. Bartoli: 'La musique Française et l'Orient: à propos du Désert de Félicien David', Revue internationale de musique française, no.6 (1981), 29–36
R.P. Locke: 'Musique engagée? The Experience of the Saint-Simonians at Ménilmontant', IMSCR XIII: Strasbourg 1982, i, 145–55
F. Reinisch: Das französische Oratorium von 1840 bis 1870 (Regensburg, 1982)
J. Cooper: The Rise of Instrumental Music and Concert Series in Paris, 1828–1871 (Ann Arbor, 1983), 21–37
G. Favre: Musiciens méditerranéens oubliés (Paris, 1985)
D.V. Hagan: Félicien David, 1810–1876: a Composer and a Cause (Syracuse, NY, 1985)
J.-M. Fauquet: Les sociétés de musique de chambre à Paris de la Restauration à 1870 (Paris, 1986)
R.P. Locke: Music, Musicians, and the Saint-Simonians (Chicago and London, 1986)
J.-P. Bartoli: 'A propos de deux ouvrages sur Félicien David et les Saint-Simoniens: une lettre inédite de David', RdM, lxxv (1988), 65–76
R.P. Locke: 'Félicien David, compositeur saint-simonien et orientalisant', Les Saint-Simoniens et l'Orient: vers la modernité, ed. M. Morsy (Aix-en-Provence, 1990), 135–54
R. Gulrich: Exotismus in der Opera und seine szenische Realisation (1850–1910) unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Münchener Oper (Salzburg, 1993), 130–33, 260–67
C. Larkin: 'Félicien David's Nonetto en ut mineur: a New Discovery and New Light on the Early Use of Valved Instruments in France', Historic Brass Society Journal, v (1993), 192–202
C. Sprang: 'Die Prozesse um Félicien Davids Ode-Symphonie "Le Désert" (1845–46)', Grand Opéra vor Gericht (Baden-Baden, 1993), 143–58
A. Fauser: Der Orchestergesang in Frankreich zwischen 1870 und 1920 (Laaber, 1994), 28–49, 76–8
D. Tunley, ed.: Romantic French Song: 1830–1870, ii: Songs by Félicien David (1810–1876) (New York, 1996)
J.-P. Bartoli: 'L'évolution des procédés exotiques de Félicien David à Saint-Saëns ou comment s'est ponctuée la musique orientale en France au XIXe siècle', RBM, li (1997), 137–70
R.P. Locke: 'The French Symphony: David, Gounod and Bizet to Saint-Saëns, Franck, and their Followers', The Nineteenth-Century Symphony, ed. D.K. Holoman (New York, 1997), 163–94
R.P. Locke: 'Cutthroats and Casbah Dancers, Muezzins and Timeless Sands: Musical Images of the Middle East', Exotic Styles in Western Music, ed. J. Bellman (Boston, 1998), 104–36, 326–33
M. Pisani: '"I'm an Indian Too": Creating Native American Identities in Nineteenth- and Early Twentieth-Century Music', The Exotic in Western Music, ed. J. Bellman (Boston, 1998), 218–57
A. Fauser: 'Félicien Davids Christophe Colomb: eine saint-simonistische Parabel?', Die Entdeckung Amerikas auf der Opernbühne, ed. M. Kuss and J. Maehder (Frankfurt, forthcoming)

HUGH MACDONALD (text), RALPH P. LOCKE (work-list)

David, Ferdinand (b Hamburg, 19 June 1810; d Klosters, Switzerland, 18 July 1873). German violinist, composer and teacher. His date of birth is given in many sources as 19 January, but 19 June is more probably correct. The son of a well-to-do business man, he and his pianist sister, Louise (1811–50), were both prodigies. He studied the violin with Spohr and theory with Moritz Hauptmann in Kassel from 1823 to 1825. During the next two years he and Louise played in Copenhagen, Leipzig, Dresden and Berlin. In correspondence with Mendelssohn in the summer of 1826, he discussed possible openings in Berlin at either the Royal or Königstadt theatres. While a violinist at the Königstadt (1826–9), he became friendly with Mendelssohn, often playing chamber music with him and Julius and Edward Rietz. After a six-year period (1829–35) as a quartet leader under the patronage of Karl von Liphart in Dorpat (Tartu, Estonia), he went to Leipzig in 1836 to assume the leadership of the Gewandhaus orchestra under Mendelssohn, a post he held for the rest of his life. He also became orchestral leader at the Stadttheater and took charge of church music in Leipzig. The same year he married Sophie von Liphart, the daughter of his former patron. He quickly established himself as an important musical figure in Leipzig, playing frequently in sonata and chamber concerts with Mendelssohn and giving regular quartet matinées.

In the spring of 1839 David visited England, where he gave recitals with Moscheles and appeared with the Philharmonic Society in one of his own violin concertos on 18 and 22 March. Moscheles wrote of him: 'This worthy pupil of Spohr played his master's music in a grand and noble style, his own bravuras with faultless power of execution, and his quartet playing at the soirées of Mori and Blagrove delighted everyone with any genuine artistic taste'. After concerts in Manchester and Birmingham and again in London, David played at the Lübeck Festival (26–8 June) before returning to Leipzig. A second visit to England two years later was less successful.

When the Leipzig Conservatory opened on 27 March 1843, David headed a violin department that included Moritz Klengel and Rudolf Sachse; among his first pupils was Joachim, who went to him at Mendelssohn's suggestion. On 13 March 1845 he gave the first performance of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, which was subsequently dedicated to him; the success of the work is partly due to David's invaluable advice and suggestions during the period of its composition. Mendelssohn's death in 1847 was a terrible blow to David, who served as a pall-bearer at the funeral. Paul Mendelssohn later asked him to join Moscheles, Hauptmann and Julius Rietz in editing his brother's manuscripts.

In 1851 David considered an appointment at Cologne. By early 1852, however, he had renewed his contract at the Gewandhaus; his official duties were lightened and his salary was increased. During the last 15 years of his life he was increasingly active as a conductor. In 1861 the 25th anniversary of his appointment as leader was celebrated by his pupils and friends, and he received an ovation at the Gewandhaus.

David's health began to fail in his last years, and a nervous affliction often made it painful for him to play. When his physician urged him not to play, he answered: 'I should not wish to live any more if I cannot play the violin'. Despite chest ailments that caused severe breathing difficulties, he continued to perform; his final public appearance was on 16 March 1873, when he performed in Mozart's Clarinet Quintet, Mendelssohn's Andante and Scherzo from op.81 and Schubert's D minor Quartet. He died of a heart attack while on the Siloretta glacier near Klosters, where he was on holiday with his children.

David's most significant achievements were as an orchestral leader, teacher and editor. He possessed all the attributes of the ideal leader: an energetic attack, full tone and solid technique, together with responsibility, quickness of perception and musical intelligence, qualities which also made him an excellent conductor. An imaginative and stimulating teacher, he made the Leipzig Conservatory a centre of violin study. His most famous pupils were Joachim, Wilhelmj and Wasielewski. He prepared excellent editions of studies by Kreutzer, Rode, Fiorillo, Gaviniés and Paganini, and of concertos by Kreutzer and Rode. He brought out the first practical edition of Bach's unaccompanied violin works, which he often played in public. His Violinschüle (1863) and supplementary études opp.44 and 45 were widely used until the end of the 19th century. Although Moser criticized David's Hohe Schule des Violinspiels, which contains works of famous 17th- and 18th-century composers, for its stylistic inaccuracies and interpolations, he nevertheless acknowledged David's important contribution in making these and other works available. His editions of chamber music are particularly valuable and are completely free of editorial eccentricities.

David was a prolific composer. His output includes five concertos and other solo works for violin and orchestra, concert pieces for various wind instruments, a String Sextet and a String Quartet. He also wrote a number of songs and a few choral works. He withdrew his only opera, Hans Wacht, after its second performance (Leipzig, 1852). While he was better known during his lifetime for his numerous transcriptions and editions than for his own compositions, it is for his didactic works that he is now chiefly remembered. Two compositions for wind instruments are currently in print: a Concertino for trombone and orchestra op.4, a seminal work in the history of the trombone repertory, and a Concertino for bassoon and orchestra op.12. David's editions of Rode's violin concerto no.7 in A minor and Viotti's concerto no.23 in A major are still in print, along with his editions of Tartini's L'arte del arco and Corelli's 'La Follia' Variations.

Two fine violins are associated with David: the 'Lark', a long Stradivari of 1694, and a Guarneri del Gesù of 1742, for many years the preferred instrument of Jascha Heifetz.

WORKS

op.
2 Introduction and Variations on original theme, vn, orch
3 Concertino no.1, A, vn, orch
4 Concertino, E♭, tbn, orch (also vn, orch)
5 Introduction and Variations on 'Je suis le petit tambour', vn, orch
6 Introduction and Variations on 'Der rote Sarafan', vn, orch
7 Introduction, Adagio and Rondeau brillante, vn, orch
8 Introduction and Variations on 'Sehnsucht' Waltzes (F. Schubert), cl, orch
9 6 Caprices, vn
10 Violin Concerto no.1, e
11 Introduction and Variations on 'Wenn die Lieb und deinen blauen Augen' (W.A. Mozart), vn, orch
12 Concertino, E♭, bn/va, orch
13 Introduction and Variations on original theme, vn, orch
14 Violin Concerto no.2, D
15 Introduction and Variations on 'Lob der Tränen' (Schubert), vn, orch
16 Andante and Scherzo capriccioso, vn, orch
17 Violin Concerto no.3, A
18 Variations de Concert on original theme, vn, orch
19 Introduction and Variation brillante on original theme, vn, orch
20 6 Caprices, vn, orch
21 Introduction and Variations on Scottish theme, vn, orch
22 Concert-Polonaise, D, vn, orch
23 Violin Concerto no.4, E
24 12 Salon pieces, 3 bks, vn, pf
25 Salon duet on a song by E. Haase ('The Fearless Finlay' by R. Burns), vn, pf
26 6 Lieder, bk 1, 1v, pf
27 6 Lieder, bk 2, 1v, pf
28 5 Salon pieces, vn, pf
29 6 Lieder, bk 3, 1v, pf
30 Bunte Reihe, 24 pieces, vn, pf
31 6 Lieder, bk 4, 1v, pf
32 String Quartet, A
33 Psalm cxxi, 2 S, pf
34 7 Stücke, vc, pf
35 Violin Concerto no.5, d
36 Kammerstücke, 2 bks, vn, pf
37 4 Marches, pf 4 hands
38 Sextet, G, vn, va, 2 vc
39 Dur und Moll, 25 Etudes, Caprices and Character Pieces, vn, pf
40 3 Impromptus in the form of a waltz, vn, pf
41 Nachklänge (continuation of Bunte Reihe op.30), 15 pieces, vn, pf
42 Festmarsch, orch
43 Suite, vn
44 Zur Violinschule, 24 Etudes
45 Zur Violinschule, 18 Etudes
46–50 Aus der Ferienzeit, 5 bks, vn, pf

Also arrs. and edns of works by J.S. Bach, Beethoven, Handel, Mozart, Paganini, Schubert, Spohr, Leclair, Chopin, Mendelssohn, Moscheles and others

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (U. Lehmann) [with list of works]; MoserGV; PazdírekH
F. Hofmeister: Handbuch der musikalischen Literatur (Leipzig, 1817)
W.J. von Wasielewski: Die Violine und ihre Meister (Leipzig, 1869, 8/1927/R)
C. Moscheles, ed.: Aus Moscheles Leben, ii (Leipzig, 1872; Eng. trans., 1873/R as Recent Music and Musicians described in the Diaries and Correspondence of Ignatz Moscheles)
A. Dörffel: Geschichte der Gewandhausconcerte zu Leipzig (Leipzig, 1884/R)
J.Eckardt: Ferdinand David und die Familie Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (Leipzig, 1888)
A. Moser: 'Zu Johann Sebastian Bachs Sonaten und Partiten für Violine allein', BJb 1920, 30–65
E. van der Straeten: The History of the Violin (London, 1933/R)
E. Arro: 'Ferdinand David und das Liphart-Quartett in Dorpat 1829–1835', Baltische Monatshefte (1935), no.1, pp.19–30
W. Schwarz: 'Eine Musikerfreundschaft des 19. Jahrhunderts: unveröffentlichte Briefe von Ferdinand David an Robert Schumann', Zum 70. Geburtstag von Joseph Müller-Blattau, ed. C.H. Mahling (Kassel, 1966), 282–303
W.S. Newman: 'Three Musical Intimates of Mendelssohn and Schumann in Leipzig: Hauptmann, Moscheles and David', Mendelssohn and Schumann: Essays on their Music and its Content, ed. J. Finson and L. Todd (Durham, NC, 1984), 87–98

ALBERT MELL

Dávid, Gyula (b Budapest, 6 May 1913; d Budapest, 14 March 1977). Hungarian composer. He studied composition with Kodály at the Liszt Academy of Music from 1938 and gained practical experience as a violist with the Municipal Orchestra (1940–43) and as a conductor at the National Theatre (1945–9). From 1950 to 1960 he was professor of wind chamber music at the academy, appointed professor of chamber music at the Budapest Conservatory in 1964, and in 1967 he took a similar post at the teachers' training college of the Liszt Academy. He received two Erkel Prizes (1952, 1955) and a Kossuth Prize (1957).

Dávid belongs to the generation of composers whose careers began under the direction of Kodály. While an academy student he engaged in folksong collecting, and it was he who discovered a particular variety of song in Karád, on the basis of which Kodály composed the Karádi nóták. Other early and decisive influences included Gregorian chant and Renaissance polyphony. As a result of his experience as an orchestral player, conductor and stage composer his music is always clearly composed and professionally crafted.

It is possible to divide Dávid's output into two main periods. The first, the 'folksong period', lasted until 1960; the most successful work of this phase is the Viola Concerto, though there are other important pieces, including the first two wind quintets, the Flute Sonata, the Piano Sonata and two choral–orchestral song cycles.

These works are characterized by classical forms, a healthy combination of homophony and polyphony, and a diatonicism coloured by pentatonic and modal scales. The main change in the second-period compositions is towards chromaticism and 12-note serialism, a transition well represented by the unaccompanied choral works of 1959–64. At the same time Dávid's structures became more concise, as shown in the scherzo of the Third Symphony and in the Sinfonietta. However, even in his 12-note works he retained such typical features of his earlier music as classical forms, Hungarian melodies and the aim to make direct contact with his audience.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1948; Tánczene [Dance Music], 1950; Va Conc., 1950; Színházi zene [Theatre Music], 1955; Sym. no.2, 1958; Sinfonietta, 1960; Sym. no.3, 1960; Vn Conc., 1966; Sym. no.4, 1970; Hn Conc., 1971; Ünnepi nyitány [Festive Ov.], 1972

Choral–orch: 5 Csokonai dal [Csokonai Songs], 1955; Lakjatok vígan [Be Merry], 1956; Dob és tánc [Drumming and Dancing] (S. Weores), 1961

Unacc. choral: 5 Female Choruses (A. József), 1959; Tavaszi szeretők verse [Poem of Lovers in Spring] (M. Radnóti), 1959; Arany Lacinak [Dedicated to Laci Arany], 1963; Változások [Mutations] (4 madrigals), 1964

Solo vocal: A rózsa lángolás [The Rose is Flaming] (I. Vass), female v, fl, va, 1966

Chbr: Wind Qnt no.1, 1949; Wind Qnt no.2 (Serenade), 1955; Str Qt, 1962; Wind Qnt no.3, 1964; Miniatűrök, brass sextet, 1968; Wind Qnt no.4, 1968; Pf Trio, 1972; Str Qt, 1973

Solo inst: Pf Sonata, 1955; Sonata, fl, pf, 1955; Prelude, fl, pf, 1964; Sonata, vn, pf, 1968; Sonatina, va, pf, 1969; Sonata, vn, 1971; Pezzo, va, pf, 1974

Principal publisher: Editio Musica

ANTAL BORONKAY

David, Hans T(heodor) (b Speyer, 8 July 1902; d Ann Arbor, 30 Oct 1967). American musicologist of German birth. He studied at the Universities of Tübingen, Göttingen and Berlin: his teachers included Johannes Wolf and Friedrich Ludwig, and he took the doctorate at Berlin in 1928 with a dissertation on Schobert. By the age of 26 he had published work which established him as a leading Bach scholar. He left Germany in 1933 for Holland and in 1936 settled in the USA. In the following year he became music editor of the New York Public Library and he held appointments as lecturer at New York University (1939), professor and head of the department of musicology at Southern Methodist University in Dallas (1945) and professor of music history and theory at the University of Michigan (1950). His important editions of and commentaries on Bach's Die Kunst der Fuge and Musicalisches Opfer show his special interests in contrapuntal and canonic artifice and in cyclical works and unified collections and he summed up his view of Bach in his article in The Bach Reader (1945). For the New York Public Library and with the aid of the American Philosophic Society he produced a series of editions of music by the early Moravian settlers in Pennsylvania; for other publishers he also edited numerous choral pieces by masters of the 16th century to the 18th. He was a leading figure in the second generation of American musicologists, bringing the experience of German scholarship to the development of American musicology. Some of his letters and articles were published posthumously in Bach, i–ii (1970–71).

WRITINGS

'Die Gestalt von Bachs Chromatischer Fantasie', BJb 1926, 23–67

'Kritischer Anhang: Zu Bachs "Kunst der Fuge"', JbMP 1927, 55–63

Johann Schobert als Sonatenkomponist (diss., U. of Berlin, 1928; Borna, 1928)

'Die Gesamtanlage von Bachs "H-moll" Messe', Musikwissenschaftliche Beiträge: Festschrift für Johannes Wolf, ed. W. Lott, H. Osthoff and W. Wolffheim (Berlin, 1929/R), 13–23

'Bach's "Musical Offering"', MQ, xxiii (1937), 314–32 with A.T. Rau: A Catalog of Music by American Moravians, 1742–1842, from the Archives of the Moravian Church at Bethlehem, Pa. (Bethlehem, PA, 1938)

'Ephrata and Bethlehem in Pennsylvania: a Comparison', PAMS 1941, 97–104

'Themes from Words and Names', A Birthday Offering to Carl Engel, ed. G. Reese (New York, 1943), 67–78

J.S. Bach's 'Musical Offering': History, Interpretation and Analysis (New York, 1945/R)

ed. with A. Mendel: The Bach Reader (New York, 1945, enlarged 2/1966, rev. and enlarged 3/1998 by C. Wolff as The New Bach Reader) [incl. 'Johann Sebastian Bach: a Portrait in Outline', 1–27]

'The Cultural Function of Music', Journal of the History of Ideas, xii (1951), 423–39 with others: A List of Doctoral Dissertations in Musicology and Allied Fields (Denton, TX, 1952)

'Mozartean Modulations', MQ, xlii (1956), 193–212; repr. in The Creative World of Mozart, ed. P.H. Lang (New York, 1963), 56–75

'A Lesser Secret of J.S. Bach Uncovered', JAMS, xiv (1961), 199–23

Musical Life in the Pennsylvania Settlements of the 'Unitas Fratrum' (Winston-Salem, NC, 1959)

ed. E. Barber: 'Structures of Some Composite Works of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries', Bach, i/4 (1970), 28–30

ed. E. Barber: 'Hebrew Letters in Polyphonic Settings by Christian Composers', Bach, ii/2 (1971), 6–17

ed. E. Barber: 'The Six-Four Chord without Theory: an "Unofficial" History', Bach, ii/3 (1971), 7–14; ii/4 (1971), 3–9

EDITIONS

E. Romano: Musica duorum: Rome, 1521, MRM, vi (1975)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Mendel: 'Hans T. David', JAMS, xxi (1968), 407–9 [obituary]

E. Barber: 'Hans Theodore David: a Portrait in Outline', Bach, i/3 (1970), 25–9

C.E. Steinzor: 'Hans Theodor David', American Musicologists, c.1890–1945: a Bio-Bibliographical Sourcebook to the Formative Period (New York, 1989), 35–9

ARTHUR MENDEL

David, Johann Nepomuk (b Eferding, Upper Austria, 30 Nov 1895; d Stuttgart, 22 Dec 1977). Austrian composer and teacher. He received his early musical education at the Augustinian monastery of St Florian near Linz and at the Benedictine Gymnasium at Kremsmünster. For a short time before World War I he taught at a primary school, and he returned to teaching after his military service. From 1920 to 1923 he studied composition with Joseph Marx at the Vienna Academy of Music; he then worked in Wels (1924–34) as a primary school teacher, organist and choirmaster, while continuing his study of composition alone. In 1934 he was appointed to the staff of the Leipzig Landeskonservatorium (later Hochschule für Musik), where he was made director in 1942. He was director and composition teacher at the Salzburg Mozarteum from 1945 to 1947; following this he was professor of composition at the Stuttgart Hochschule für Musik (1948–63). Awards made to him include the Franz Liszt Prize of Thuringia (1949), the Prize of the City of Vienna (1951), the Buxtehude Prize of Lübeck (1952), the Austrian State Prize for Music (1953), the Bach Prize of Hamburg (1963), the Basle Goethe Foundation Prize (1966) and an honorary doctorate of the Protestant theological faculty of Mainz University (1970). David received membership of the academies of arts in Berlin, Munich, Vienna and Hamburg.

The large quantity of music that David produced before 1927 – including more than 100 chamber pieces and songs, two symphonies, a symphonic prologue and a Concerto grosso on B–A–C–H – was for the most part destroyed by David himself, and those works that he retained were lost in the 1943 bombing of Leipzig. Although he did not regret their disappearance, the loss of these early endeavours is unfortunate, not only because they included genres to which David did not return (such as piano music, the string quartet and the song), but also because they would have afforded an opportunity to see how David developed the influences that were important to him in his student years: Debussy, Ravel, Skryabin and, particularly, Schoenberg, whom David regarded as his most decisively influential master after Marx, and under whose influence he wrote a symphony that he later described as 'purely atonal'. That part of David's music which has survived manifests, in the main, debts in other directions, to music that he knew from his childhood and adolescence: Gregorian chant, Josquin, Bach and Bruckner, and also Reger, without whose example David's extensive organ output would not have been possible. Together with these influences there are parallels with middle-period Stravinsky and traces of jazz, and David is linked with his contemporary Hindemith by a love for old forms, a frequent use of German folktunes of the late Middle Ages and Renaissance, and similar extensions to tonal harmony. There are further correspondences between David and Hindemith in the polyphonic foundation of their art and their emphasis on craftsmanship, combined in David's case with an unequivocal religious belief.

David employed characteristically 20th-century harmonic materials – an extended tonality, often organized into polytonal layers, and an emphasis on the 4th in chord construction – along with the ostinato principle, variation techniques of different kinds and, above all, the contrapuntal arts of imitation, mirror, stretto, augmentation, diminution and cancrizans. Polyphony was such a pervasive presence that, in David's own words, whatever he wrote 'turned into a fugue', signifying that counterpoint was always present in the essential creative idea. This gives his work a speculative aspect, often mystical and sometimes scholastic, but balanced by an intensity of expressiveness and, in the orchestral works, a fullness of individual colour.

The development of David's music shows a general trend from instrumental pieces to organ works, culminating in the years 1927–35, after which instrumental compositions and a cappella choral music came increasingly into the forefront, but without completely stemming the flow of organ pieces. The 21 volumes of his Choralwerk for organ display the strength of his roots in the Lutheran chorale and faithfully reflect the evolution of David's procedures and ideas, constituting almost a compendium of polyphonic practice and organ technique from Reger onwards. David's major contribution to the renewal of German church music in his numerous liturgical vocal works aligns him with Distler and Pepping, as well as betraying an ecumenical spirit: alongside his Protestant chorales and motets there are settings of the mass and the requiem.

Polyphony imbues even David's orchestral music, with a mastery of counterpoint evident in the smallest detail – frequently in the exposition of the thematic material. Movements are often artfully constructed in fugal manner, while monothematicism is characteristic of the cyclic forms, especially the symphonies. In these monothematic examples, however, the motivic kernel is not necessarily presented at the outset: the work may, as in the Sinfonia breve, grow towards it, using a technique that David learned from his analysis of Mozart's 'Jupiter' Symphony. Thematic inversion and retrograde were important to David's outlook over many years; in as early a work as the Flute Concerto (1936), the main theme is identical to its retrograde. This instinctive thinking in mirror forms reveals superficial parallels with the procedures of the Second Viennese School, which David, in the latter half of the 1950s, began once again to confront: the increasing saturation of his music with chromatic elements reached its logical culmination in the use of 12-note series in the Second Violin Concerto (1957). Nevertheless, even in this work David did not succumb entirely to Schoenbergian orthodoxy, in that the series are built around tonal centres of gravity and function as principal motifs, although they lead to an extension of harmonic resources. Serial writing also provided a stimulus for David's speculative leanings, as is shown in his works based on series derived from the magic quadrant in Dürer's engraving Melancholia, or from the witches' 'One times one' from Goethe's Faust. The orchestral waltz Spiegelkabinett is a playground for such numerological mirror constructions. David's chamber music moves on a less esoteric level; it brings out his playful, musicianly side, his craftsmanlike perfection.

Over the three decades between 1927 and 1957, David's music gave the impression of a historically-orientated art, maintaining strong connections with tradition, despite the incorporation of contemporary elements. The later works counteract this view, with music of greater harmonic diversity and stronger, more disjunct melodic shaping, and yet there were no fundamental changes of style. David achieved a masterly and highly individual blend of inherited tradition and the musical thinking of his own generation.

WORKS

ORCHESTRAL

op.
—	Flute Concerto, 1936
—	Partita no.1, 1935
18	Symphony no.1, a, 1937
20	Symphony no.2, 1938
24	Kume, kum, geselle min, Divertimento nach alten Volksliedern, 1939
27	Partita no.2, 1940
28	Symphony no.3, 1941
29a	Variationen über ein Thema von Johann Sebastian Bach, 1942
29b	Symphonische Variationen über ein Thema von Heinrich Schütz, 1942
39	Symphony no.4, 1948
40/1	Concerto no.1, str, 1950
40/2	Concerto no.2, str, 1951, Vienna, 1951
41	Symphony no.5, 1951, rev. 1953, Stuttgart, 3 May 1952
44	Sinfonia preclassica super nomen HASE, 1953, St Veit, Carinthia, 16 Oct 1954
45	Violin Concerto no.1, 1952,Stuttgart, 25 April 1954
—	Deutsche Tänze, str, 1953, Wiesbaden, 7 July 1954
46	Symphony no.6, 1954, rev. 1966, Vienna, 22 June 1955
47	Sinfonia breve, 1955, Baden-Baden, 4 March 1956
49	Symphony no.7, 1957, Stuttgart, 10 Oct 1957
50	Violin Concerto no.2, 1957, Munich, 22 April 1958
52	Magische Quadrate, 1959, Recklinghausen, 23 March 1960
53	Melancholia, va, chbr orch, 1958, Lucerne, 31 Aug 1961
54	Sinfonia, str, 1959, Linz, 30 Nov 1960
55	Spiegelkabinett, waltz, 1960, Dresden, 20 Nov 1960

56 Violin Concerto no.3, 1961, Berlin, 30 Oct 1980
59 Symphony no.8, 1964–5, Stuttgart, 20 Nov 1965
61 Organ Concerto, 1965, Cologne, 28 Nov 1966
62 Variationen über ein Thema von Josquin Desprez, fl, hn, str, 1966, Munich, 17 April 1969
68 Concerto, vn, vc, small orch, 1969, Stuttgart, 20 Nov 1970
71 Chaconne, 1972, Salzburg, 3 Feb 1974
74 Concerto no.3, str, 1974, Berlin, 20 Feb 1975

SACRED CHORAL

— Stabat mater, SSATBB, 1927
— Ezzolied, orat, 1932, lost
— 3 Choralmotetten, SATB, 1935
— Ex Deo nascimur – In Christo morimur – Ex Spiritu Sancto reviviscimus, 2 SATB, 1936
— Ich wollt, dass ich daheime wär, SATB, 1936
— Der Gerechten Seelen sind in Gottes Hand, motet, SATB, 1937
— Kyrie 'Herr Gott, erbarme dich', motet, SAB, 1937
23 2 Motets, S(S)ATB, 1939
— Fröhlich wir nun all' fangen an, S, A, B, ob, org, 1941
35/1 Victimae pascali laudes, SATB, 1948
35/2 Ut queant laxis, Hymnus super voces musicales, SSATB, 1946
42 Deutsche Messe, SATB, 1952, Leipzig, 19 Feb 1953
43 Missa choralis de angelis, SATB, 1953, Linz, 17 Jan 1954
48 Requiem chorale, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, 1956, Vienna, 11 June 1957
51 Ezzolied, 2 S, B, SATB, orch, 1957 [second setting], Berlin, 17 May 1960
— Veni creator Spiritus, SATB, 1957
— 6 Evangelienmotetten, SATB, 1958, Vienna, 1 June 1959
— O Heiland, reiss die Himmel auf, 3vv, 1959
— Psalm cxxxix, SATB, 1961, Berlin, July 1971
— Maria durch den Dornwald ging, SATB, 1962
60 5 Choralkantaten, S, A, B, org, 1965
63 Marienpreis, after Walther von der Vogelweide, S, SAATTB, 1966, Innsbruck, 20 May 1967
65 O wir armen Sünder, A, SATB, org, 1966
67 Mass, SSAA, 1968
— Kyrie de angelis, 3vv, org, 1968; Bozen, 11 July 1968
69 3 Evangelienmotetten, SATB, insts, 1972
— 3 Satze aus dem 'Cherubinischen Wandersmann', TBarB, 1971
72 Komm, Heiliger Geist, cant., STB, SATB, orch, 1972
- Mitten wir im Leben sind mit dem Tod umfangen, SATB, 1973
- Macht hoch die Tür, SATB, 1975

SECULAR VOCAL

— Säerspruch (C.F. Meyer), SATB, 1937
— Mensch werde wesentlich, TBarB, 1937
— Ich stürbe gern aus Minne (M. von Magdeburg), S, org, 1942
34/1 Die Welt ist Gottes Haus (Paracelsus), SATB, 1945
34/2 Empfangen und genährt (M. Claudius), SATB, 1956, Vienna, 7 May 1957
34/3 Komm Trost der Nacht (H.J.C. von Grimmelshausen), SATB, 1956, Vienna, 7 May 1957
36 3 Tierlieder, SATB, 1945
— 10 Volksliedsätze, 3–5vv, 1949
— 10 neue Volksliedsätze, 1952, Munich, 22 Sept 1952
— Jeder denkt nur an sich selber, canon, 1957
— Es ging ein Maidelein zarte, 1961, Vienna, 24 May 1961
— Es ist ein Schnee gefallen, 4vv, 1961
— 2 vierstimmige Sätze, SATB, 1961
64 Wân Denken, after Walther von der Vogelweide, SATB, fl, hn, 1966, Bozen, 1967
76 3 Chorsätze, SATB, 1970–75

ORGAN

— Chaconne, a, 1927
— 2 Hymnen, 1928
— Passamezzo und Fuge, g, 1928
— Toccata und Fuge, f, 1928
— Fantasia super 'L'homme armé', 1929
— Praeambel und Fuge, d, 1930
— Kleine Präludien und Fugen, a and G, 1931
— Das Choralwerk: vols.1–5, 1932–5, vol.6, 1937, vol.7, 1939, vol.8, 1941, vol.9, 1945, vol.10, 1947, vol.11, 1952, vol.12, 1952, vol.13, 1959, vol.14, 1962, vol.15, 1965, vol.16, 1967, vols.17–19, 1969, vol.20, 1973, vol.21, 1973
— 2 Fantasien und Fugen, e and C, 1935
— Ricercare, a, 1937
25 Introit, Chorale und Fuge über ein Thema von Anton Bruckner, org, 9 wind, 1939, Bremen, 12 Nov 1939
— Partita über 'Innsbruck, ich muss dich lassen', 1953–5
— Chaconne und Fuga, 1962
— Toccata und Fuge, 1962
— Partita über B–A–C–H, 1964, Stuttgart, 4 July 1965
66 12 Orgelfugen durch alle Tonarten, 1967–8, Heidelberg, 26 June 1969
— Partita, 1970, Vienna, 31 Jan 1971
70 Hölderlin: Ode – Elegie – Hymne, 1970, Düsseldorf, Feb 1971
— Thomas von Aquin, aus 'Pange lingua', 1972
— Franz von Assisi, 1972
75 Sonata, vn, org, 1975
— Sonata, vc, org, 1975

CHAMBER

— Sonata, hpd, 1933
— String Trio, G, 1928–35
19 Duo concertante, vn, vc, 1937
26 Sonata, fl, va, gui, 1940
30 Trio, fl, vn, va, 1942
31 Sonatas: 31/1, fl, 1942; 31/2, vn, 1943; 31/3, va, 1943; 31/4, vc, 1944; 31/5, lute, 1943
32 Sonatas: 32/1, fl, va, 1943; 32/3, 2 vn, 1945; 32/4, cl, pf, 1948
32/2 Variationen über ein eigenes Thema, rec/fl, lute, 1943
33 4 String Trios: no.1, Nicolo Amati in memoriam, 1945; no.2, Antonio Stradivario in memoriam, 1945; no.3, Giuseppe Guarneri del Gesù in memoriam, 1948; no.4, Jacobo Stainer in memoriam, 1948
37/1 Es steht ein Lind in jenem Tal, partita, vn, 1950
57 Sonata, 3 vc, 1962
58/1 Sonata no.2, vn, 1963
58/2 Mozarts Wiegenlied, variations, vn, 1971
73 Trio, fl, vn, vc, 1974

Principal publisher: Breitkopf & Härtel

WRITINGS

Die Jupitersymphonie (Göttingen, 1953)
Die zweistimmigen Inventionen von Johann Sebastian Bach (Göttingen, 1957)
Die dreistimmigen Inventionen von Johann Sebastian Bach (Göttingen, 1959)
Das wohltemperierte Klavier: Versuch einer Synopsis (Göttingen, 1962)
'Vom Wesen der Orgel', Freie Jb der Akademie der Künste (Hamburg, 1962)
Der musikalische Satz im Spiegel der Zeit (Graz, 1963)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Klein: 'Johann Nepomuk David und die Reihentechnik', ÖMz, xv (1960), 505–10
G. Sievers: 'Magische Quadrate', Musica, xiv (1960), 208–13
H. Federhofer: 'Johann Nepomuk Davids Analysen von Werken Johann Sebastian Bachs', AMw, xix–xx (1962–3), 147–59
R. Klein: Johann Nepomuk David (Vienna, 1964)
G. Sievers: 'Das Ezzolied in der Vertonung von Willy Burkhard und Johann Nepomuk David: ein Vergleich', Festschrift Hans Engel, ed. H. Heussner (Kassel, 1964), 335–63
H.G. Bertram: Material – Struktur – Form: Studien zur musikalischen Ordnung bei Johann Nepomuk David (Wiesbaden, 1965)
D.C. Johns: 'Technik und Problematik der cantus-firmus-Bearbeitung in Johann Nepomuk Davids "Choralwerk"', Musik und Kirche, xxxv (1965), 242–51
H.H. Stuckenschmidt: Johann Nepomuk David (Wiesbaden, 1965)
H.G. Bertram: 'Von der Einheit in der Vielfalt der Stilepochen bei Johann Nepomuk David', NZM, Jg.127 (1966), 424–8
R. Klein: 'Die jüngsten Werke von Johann Nepomuk David', ÖMz, xxiii (1968), 593–600
W. Dallmann: Zwölf Orgelfugen durch alle Tonarten von Johann Nepomuk David (Wiesbaden, 1969)

H.G. Bertram: 'Johann Nepomuk David: Partita über B-A-C-H für Orgel: Versuch einer "synoptischen" Interpretation', Musik und Kirche, xl (1970), 412–24
R. Klein: 'Von der Kunstwahrheit in den Analysen von Johann Nepomuk David', ÖMz, xxv (1970), 165–71
G. Sievers, ed.: Ex Deo nascimur: Festschrift zum 75. Geburtstag von Johann Nepomuk David (Wiesbaden, 1970)
G. Sievers: 'Johann Nepomuk Davids Josquin-Variationen (1966): Entstehung, Analyse, Deutung', HJbMw, iv (1979), 115–43
W. Dallmann: 'Johann Nepomuk Davids spätes Orgelwerk', Musik und Kirche, lii (1982), 15–23
P. Revers: 'Dodekaphonik als System kontrapunktischer Tradition: zu Johann Nepomuk Davids 8. Symphonie', Dodekaphonie in Osterreich nach 1945 (Vienna, 1988), 149–65
S. Lieberwirth: 'Gestaposache, streng Geheim! Aktenzeichen: Johann Nepomuk David', Musikstadt Linz, Musikland Oberösterreich: Linz 1990, 241–56
W. Dallmann: Johann Nepomuk David: Das Choralwerk für Orgel (Frankfurt, 1994)

JOSEF HÄUSLER

David, Léon (b Les Sables d'Olonne, Vendée, 18 Dec 1867; d Les Sables d'Olonne, 27 Oct 1962). French tenor. He studied in Nantes and in Paris, making his début in February 1892 at Monte Carlo as Euxenos in Noël Desjoyeaux's Gyptis. In June the same year he began a long engagement at the Opéra-Comique, Paris, by singing Iopas in Les Troyens. His repertory included Almaviva, George Brown (La dame blanche), Gerald (Lakmé), Des Grieux (Manon), Wilhelm Meister (Mignon), Nadir, Vincent (Mireille), Werther and Don José. Between 1900 and 1907 he sang at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels, where his roles included Belmonte and Dimitri in Alfano's Risurrezione. In 1913 he created Paco in Falla's La vida breve at Nice. His voice, a lyric tenor, was of beautiful quality. He retired from the Opéra-Comique in 1920 and was professor of singing at the Paris Conservatoire from 1924 to 1937. His autobiography, La Vie d'un ténor, was published in 1950.

ELIZABETH FORBES

David, Mack (b New York, 5 July 1912; d Rancho Mirage, CA, 30 Dec 1993). American lyricist and composer. He started writing lyrics for popular songs in the early 1930s, achieving his first major successes (1939–40) in partnership with André Kostelanetz. He subsequently wrote over 1000 songs, including many for film and television, receiving eight Academy Award nominations, the first in 1950 for his song 'Bibbidi, Bobbidi, Boo' from the Walt Disney animated film of Cinderella. In the early 1950s he wrote songs with Jerry Livingston for three musicals for Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis; other collaborators have included Ellington, Bacharach, Basie, Gold and Mancini.

He contributed the title songs to many films, including Walk on the Wild Side (1962), Hud (1963), It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World (1963), The Dirty Dozen (1967), and also wrote the score for Cat Ballou (1965). His work on Broadway has ranged from contributions to revue in Bright Lights of 1944 through to his musical Molly (1973). In 1975 he was granted a patent for an 'electronic composer', a system for composing a variety of different songs from fragmentary recordings. His brother Hal David has also been a successful lyricist, most notably in his collaborations with Bacharach.

RICHARD C. LYNCH

David, Thomas Christian (b Wels, 22 Dec 1925). Austrian composer, conductor and teacher, son of Johann Nepomuk David. After early musical tuition at home he attended the Thomasschule in Leipzig and began to study at the Leipzig Musikhochschule in 1943. After wartime interruption he resumed his studies (flute, piano, organ, harpsichord, composition, conducting) in 1947 at the Salzburg Mozarteum, where he also taught the flute (1945–8). In 1948 he moved to Stuttgart where he directed the Suddeutscher Madrigalchor, while studying at Tübingen University. He undertook numerous concert tours as flautist and conductor before being appointed to a post at the Vienna Music Academy (later the Hochschule) in 1957, where he taught composition from 1963. After a period in Tehran (1968–73), during which he set up the music school at the university and was conductor of the national television orchestra, he returned as professor of composition to the Vienna Musikhochschule, where he remained until his retirement in 1985. He was principal conductor of the Berlin SO (1980–95), artistic director of the Cairo Opera (1992) and president of the Österreichischer Komponistenbund (1986–8). His numerous prizes and awards include the Radio Paris composition prize in 1963, the Austrian Medal for Science and Art (first class) in 1981 and the Austrian Grand Medal in Gold in 1996.

David understands music as a language which must be spoken in an idiom understandable to players and listeners alike. His expanded tonal idiom is characterized by the development of extensive complexes from small motivic units and the synthesis of accomplished polyphonic writing and cantabile lines. Especially prominent is the concertante element, as the archetype of rational dialogue.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Atossa (Hassani [Persian]), 1967–9; Der Weg nach Emmaus (church op, 3, H. Vogg, after Bible: Luke), 1981; Luzifer (ballet-orat, H.P. Wertitisch), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1990–91

Orch: Divertimento, str, 1954; Serenade, str, 1957; Conc. [no.1], str orch, 1961; Pf Conc., 1961; Conc., 5 wind, str, 1962; Vn Conc. no.1, 1962; Conc., gui, chbr orch, 1963; Conc., 12 str, 1964; Conc. for Orch, 1967; Conc., vn, str, 1970; Conc. no.2, str orch, 1972; Conc. no.3, str orch, 1974; Ob Conc., 1975; Org Conc., 1976; Conc., 2 vn, str, 1978; Conc., db, str, 1979; Conc. grosso, 2 vn, vc, db, str, 1979; Duplum, wind orch, 1979; Conc., 3 vn, str, 1980; Fl Conc., 1981; Vc Conc., 1982; Sinfonia concertante, vn, cl, pf, wind orch, 1986; Vn Conc. no.2, 1987

Vocal: Missa in Adventu Christi, mixed chorus, 1961; Missa in honorem Mariae, mixed chorus, 1963; Das Lied des Menschen (orat, H. Schrift), S, T, B, mixed chorus, boys' chorus, orch, 1975; Die Vögel (cant., J.F. von Eichendorff), S, fl, cl, pf, 1981; madrigals and motets; songs, 1v, pf

Chbr: Trio no.1, fl, vn, va, 1948–9; Str Qt [no.1], 1950; Str Qt no.2, 1951; Str Qt no.3, 1953; Trio [no.2], fl, vn, va, 1954; Sonata, fl, va, 1958; Qt, fl, str trio, 1959; Conc. for 9 Solo Inst (fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, vn, va, vc, db), 1961; Sonatine, 2 vc, 1962; 3 Intermezzos, vn, pf, 1963; Qnt, cl, str trio, db, 1963; Str Qt no.4, 1965; 3 Canzonen, 3 gui, 1966; Variationen über ein deutsches Volkslied, va, positive org, 1966; Wind Qnt no.1, 1966; Str Qt no.5, 1967; Sonata, vc, pf, 1970; 3 Canzonen, vn, pf, 1977; Tricinium, fl, eng hn/va, vc, 1977; Trio no.1, vn, cl, pf, 1978; Qt, ob, str trio, 1979; Wind Qnt no.2, 1979; Sonata, cl, vn, 1980; Sonata, fl, cl, 1980; Sonata, gui, vc, 1980; Sonata, vn, va, 1980; Sonata, vn, va, 1981; Str Trio no.1, 1984; Pf Trio, 1985; Serenade, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn, 1985; Toccata, 9 fl, 1985; Trio, fl, va, gui, 1985; Schubertliede, vn, cl, pf, 1987; Sonata, 2 fl, 1988; Sonata, vc, db, 1988; Str Trio no.2, 1989; Trio no.2, vn, cl, pf, 1989; Qt, 2 fl, vn, vc, 1990 [version of Sonata, 2 fl, 1988]; Sonata, vn, pf, 1990; Qt, 2 fl, vn, vc, 1993; Trio, vn, cl, pf, 1995

Solo inst: Sonata, fl, 1951; 5 Orgelchoräle, 1961; 5 Orgelchoräle, 1963; 5 Bagatellen, pf, 1964; Fantasia 'Dux Michael', org, 1965; Sonata, pf, 1967; Capriccio, vn, 1977; Prelude und Fugue, org, 1980; 6 Preludes and Fugues, org, 1985–94; 'Für Ines', fl, 1991; 3 Stücke, cl, 1997; Sonata, pf, 1997

Principal publisher: Doblinger

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LZMÖ [incl. further bibliography]

G. Brosche, ed.: Musikalische Dokumentation: Thomas Christian David (Vienna, 1984)

G. Scholz, ed.: Österreichische Musik der Gegenwart (Vienna, 1993)

HERBERT VOGG

David ben Judah (Messer Leon) (b Mantua, ?1470; d Salonika [now Thessaloniki], ?1526). Rabbi, philosopher. He was the son of the scholar Judah Messer Leon. David refers to music, briefly, in his treatise Shevaḥ ha-nashim ('Praise of women'), a commentary on Proverbs xxxi. Acknowledging the wonders of music in ancient Israel, he praises the skills of the Levites and the power of music to awaken prophecy. It is not enough to sing, rather the singer must be well trained and have a sweet voice. Song is intrinsic to life's activities: King David is said to have sung to God at all times, in sickness and in health. The author explains the origins of the term selah as a combination of the syllables sol and la. In the course of his exposition, he mentions an earlier work, Abir Ya'aqov ('The Cavalier Jacob'), now lost, where he claims to have treated 'the science of music' in chapter 7.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Adler, ed.: Hebrew Writings Concerning Music in Manuscripts and Printed Books from Geonic Times up to 1800, RISM, B/IX/2 (1975), 114–17

DON HARRÁN

Davide [David], Giovanni (b Naples, 15 Oct 1790; d St Petersburg, 1864). Italian tenor. Son and pupil of the tenor Giacomo Davide, he appeared with his father at Siena in 1808 in Mayr's Adelaide di Guesclino. Engagements in Brescia, Padua and Turin followed, and in 1814 he created Narciso in Il turco in Italia at La Scala, the first of many Rossini premières in which he took part. Two years later he went to Naples and sang in the first performances of Otello (as Roderigo), Ricciardo e Zoraide (Ricciardo), Ermione (Orestes), La donna del lago (James V) and Zelmira (Ilo). He also sang in Tancredi, La gazza ladra, Matilde di Shabran, Bianca e Falliero, Mosè in Egitto, Semiramide and Otello (in the title role). In 1830 he appeared in Paris, and the following season in London, but by then his voice, notable for its extreme agility and amazing compass of three octaves up to b♭″, was beginning to decay. After his retirement he went to St Petersburg to direct the Italian opera.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Davidenko, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich (b Odessa, 1/13 April 1899; d Moscow, 1 May 1934). Russian composer. From 1918 he studied at the Odessa Conservatory and from 1922 at the Moscow Conservatory with Glier. For a number of years he headed Prokoll, a 'production collective' whose aim was to write music in the spirit of the new revolutionary era and to propagate it among the widest possible audiences. Most of his compositions are choral; all his work is closely bound up with the stormy atmosphere of the 1920s when Soviet music was only beginning to emerge. His music has a vividly expressed folksong element, with bold melodic outlines and polyphony which combines Russian folk with Western traditions; the harmony is fresh and inventive. Although dated in theme, his choral works, which influenced Shostakovich and other Soviet composers, have retained their value.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: 1919 god [The Year 1919], 1930, inc.; 1905 god [The Year 1905] (3, S. Mstislavsky), 1933–5, collab. B. Shekhter, vs (Moscow, 1963)

Large-scale choral: Put' oktyabrya [The October Road], collab. other Prokoll members; Pro Lenina [About Lenin], musical poster

Choruses and choral songs: Kak rodnaya menya mat' provozhala [How my Own Mother Accompanied Me], Kommunist, Konnitsa Budyonnogo [Budyonny's Cavalry], Leviy marsh [Leftward March], Mat' [Mother], More yarostno stonalo [The Sea Groaned Fiercely], Na desyatoy versti ot stolitsï [At Ten Versts from the Capital], Pis'mo [The Letter], Ulitsa volnuyetsya [There is Agitation in the Street], Vintovochka [My Lovely Little Rifle], many others

Arrs. of revolutionary and other Russ. songs: Kazn' [Execution], Krasnoye znamya [Red Banner], Na barrikadï [To the Barricades], Uznik [The Prisoner], many others

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Bely: 'Tvorchestvo Aleksandr Davidenko' [The work of Davidenko], SovM (1952), no.9, pp.22–7

D. Shostakovich: 'Aleksandr Davidenko', Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1959), no.6, p.8

K. Dmitriyevskaya: 'Massovaya pesnya A. Davidenko' [Davidenko's mass songs], Voprosï sovremennoy muzïki, ed. M.S. Druskin (Lenningrad, 1963), 5–25

A. Davidenko: Vospominaniya, stat'i, materialï [Reminiscences, articles, materials], ed. N. Martïnov (Leningrad, 1968)

N. Martïnov: A.A. Davidenko: tvorcheskiy put'. Chertï stilya [Davidenko: artistic career. Features of style] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1977)

GALINA GRIGOR'YEVA

Davidoff [Levinson], Aleksandr (b Poltava, 4 Sept 1872; d Moscow, 28 June 1944). Ukrainian tenor. He studied in Odessa and Kiev, joining the opera at Tbilisi in 1893. His Moscow début was with Savva Mamontov's Moscow Private Russian Opera Company in 1896, and with this company in early 1898 he took the title role in the première of Rimsky-Korsakov's Sadko. From 1900 to 1912 he sang at the Mariinsky in St Petersburg, appearing first as Hermann in The Queen of Spades, the opera with which he became most closely associated until increasing deafness brought his career to an end. His voice, which was that of a lyric tenor, was heavily taxed by roles such as Otello and Canio, yet his contemporary, Sergey Levik, held that his special ability lay in bringing lyric qualities to such roles. He also sang in Paris, where in 1934 he briefly became director of the Opéra Russe de Paris. Recordings show him as an unusually interesting and often stylish singer, at his best both graceful and expressive.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Levik: Zapiski opernogo pevtsa (Moscow, 1955, 2/1962; Eng. trans., 1995, as The Levik Memoirs)

J.B. STEANE

Davïdov, Karl Yul'yevich (b Goldingen, Courland [now Kuldīga, Latvia], 3/15 March 1838; d Moscow, 14/26 Feb 1889). Russian cellist, composer and administrator. The son of a Jewish doctor and amateur violinist (Davidhoff), he studied mathematics at Moscow University, graduating in June 1858. He then went to Leipzig to study composition with Moritz Hauptmann. Moscheles and Ferdinand David happened to hear him play, and he was invited to perform his own B minor Concerto with the Gewandhaus Orchestra on 15 December. In the following year he succeeded Friedrich Grützmacher as principal cellist of the orchestra and cello professor at the conservatory; against his will, he was obliged to recognize his vocation as a cellist rather than as a composer. Despite his notorious distaste for intensive practising he was soon acclaimed as one of the greatest players of his day, superb as a soloist, perhaps even finer in chamber music.

Returning to Russia in 1862, Davïdov was appointed professor at the St Petersburg Conservatory in 1863; at the same time he became principal cellist of the Imperial Italian Opera and a member of the Russian Musical Society's Quartet, led after 1868 by Auer. In 1875 he began an opera Poltava, with a libretto by V.P. Burenin based on Pushkin's poem, but in 1876, on his appointment as director of the conservatory, he broke off the composition and in 1881 sent the libretto to Tchaikovsky, who used it with modifications for his Mazeppa. Davïdov was also the dedicatee of Tchaikovsky's Italian Capriccio (1880). In January 1887 Davïdov was manoeuvred out of the directorship to make way for Rubinstein's return. He settled in Moscow, and in the year before his death wrote the first part of a Violoncell-Schule (Leipzig, 1888) and made concert tours in the West and in Russia.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Darï Tereka [The Gifts of the Terek], sym. picture after Lermontov, op.21, 1871–2; Suite, op.37, 1886
Vc concs.: no.1, b, op.5, 1859; no.2, a, op.14, 1863; no.3, D, op.18, 1868; no.4, e, op.31, 1878
Other vc and orch: Fantasie über russische Lieder, op.7, ?1860; Allegro de concert, op.11, 1862; Ballade, op.25, 1875
Chbr: Str Sextet, op.35, 1879; Str Qt, op.38, 1882; Pf Qnt, op.40, 1883
Pieces for vc and pf, songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.A. Laroche, ed.: Muzïkal'nïye fel'etonï i zametki Petra Il'yicha Chaykovskogo [Musical feuilletons and notices of Peter Il'yich Tchaikovsky] (Moscow, 1898)
S.L. Ginzburg: K.Yu. Davïdov (Leningrad, 1936)
L.S. Ginzburg: K.Yu. Davïdov (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950)
V. Gutor: K.Yu. Davïdov kak osnovatel' shkolï [Davïdov as the founder of a school] (Moscow and Leningrad, 1950)
L.S. Ginzburg: Istoriya violonchel'nogo iskusstva [The history of cello playing], ii (Moscow, 1957)

GERALD ABRAHAM

Davïdov, Stepan Ivanovich (b nr Chernigov, 1/12 Jan 1777; d Moscow, 10/22 May 1825). Russian composer, conductor and pedagogue. From 1786 he was a member of the St Petersburg court chapel choir and at the age of 18 began studying with Giuseppi Sarti. In 1797 he succeeded Bortnyansky as conductor of the chapel choir at St Petersburg, a position he held for three years. In 1800 he succeeded Fomin at the imperial theatre school; there he taught singing, acted as répétiteur and was required to compose music for stage productions. Due to ill health he left in 1804, but he was reappointed in 1806 and remained associated with the school until 1810. He then moved to Moscow; in 1815 he was musical director to Count D.N. Sheremet'yev's private theatre on his estate, Ostankino, near Moscow, and later taught singing at the Moscow Drama School.

Davïdov was one of the most important opera composers in Russia during the early years of the 19th century, and is now remembered principally for his contributions to a Russian adaptation of Kauer's highly successful Singspiel Das Donauweibchen. Kauer's own music, with six additional numbers by Davïdov, was used for part 1 of the adaptation, entitled Rusalka and given in St Petersburg in 1803 with a Russian libretto recast from the original German by N.S. Krasnopol'sky. A second part, first performed in 1804, also uses Kauer's score, with some additions by Catterino Cavos. For parts 3 and 4 Davïdov composed new music: part 3, entitled Lesta, Dneprovskaya rusalka ('Lesta, the Dnepr Water-Nymph'), was performed in St Petersburg in 1805, and the final part (Rusalka) appeared two years later. In his music for the opera Davïdov made substantial use of folk melodies and imbued his score with a distinctive Russian character. It was immediately successful, and remained popular for many years; part 4 was revived during the 1850s.

Davïdov devoted much of his time to writing for the stage, although he composed only two full-scale operas. He also composed church music, including a setting of the liturgy and 13 vocal concertos. Much of this music appears to date from Davïdov's period of attachment to the court chapel choir in St Petersburg. Two early ballets, Uvenchannaya blagost' ('Virtue Crowned', 1801) and Zhertvoprinosheniye blagodarnosti ('Thank Offering', 1802), were both choreographed by Walberg and probably formed part of the official celebrations for the accession of Aleksandr I. Davïdov also composed incidental music, principally for neo-classical tragedies, and in 1817 wrote a cantata, Apollon u Admeta ('Apollo with Admetus'). Besides one other ballet, Torzhestvo pobedï ('The Victory Celebration', 1814 or 1815), Davïdov concentrated on composing comical divertissements during the last ten years of his life. Of these there are five examples, based on subjects of Russian folklore and containing many folk melodies. In 1826 Glinka wrote a set of five variations for piano based on Davïdov's song Sredi dolinï rovnïye ('In the midst of the gentle Valleys').

WORKS

SACRED
all published in Moscow, n.d.

Liturgy, 4vv
10 concs., 4vv
3 concs., double chorus
Trio with chorus

STAGE
MSS in RUS-SPtob unless otherwise stated

Uvenchannaya blagost' [Virtue Crowned] (ballet, Walberg and A.I. Klushin), St Petersburg, 25 Sept/7 Oct 1801
Zhertvoprinosheniye blagodarnosti [Thank Offering] (ballet, Walberg and Klushin], St Petersburg, 1802
Rusalka (6 addl numbers for Kauer's Das Donauweibchen, 3, N.S. Krasnopol'sky after K.F. Hensler), St Petersburg, 26 Oct/7 Nov 1803
Lesta, dneprovskaya rusalka [Lesta, the Dnyepr Water-Nymph] (op, 3, N.S. Krasnopol'sky), St Petersburg, 25 Oct/6 Nov 1805 [excerpts in IRMO, ii (1969), 32–73]
Rusalka (op, 3, A.A. Shakhovskoy), St Petersburg, 1807 (St Petersburg, n.d.)
Irod i Mariamna [Herod and Mariamme] (4 orch interludes for Derzhavin's tragedy), 1808
Elektra i Orest [Electra and Orestes] (chorus for A.N. Gruzintsev's tragedy), 1809 [in IRMO, ii (1969), 74ff]
Semik, ili Gulyan'ye v Mar'inoy roshche [Semik, or A Promenade in Mar'ina grove], divertissement, 1815
Filatka s Fyodoroy u kacheley pod Novinskim [Filatka and Fyodora at the Swing near Novinsky], divertissement, Moscow, 13/25 Dec 1815, lost
Torzhestvo pobedï [The Victory Celebration], ballet, 1814 or 1815
1 maya, ili Gulyan'ye v Sokol'nikakh [1 May, or A Promenade in the Sokol'niki], divertissement, Moscow, 1/13 Sept 1816
Gulyan'ye na Vorob'yevïkh gorakh [A Promenade in the Vorob'yev Hills], divertissement, 1816
Apollon u Admeta [Apollo with Admetus], cant, 1817
Dmitriy Donskoy (incid music to Ozerov's tragedy), 1824, lost
Prazdnik na Presnenskikh prudakh [Festival at Presnensky Ponds], divertissement, 1824, 1 duet only Prazdnik zhatvï [Harvest Festival], divertissement, 1824, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

IRMO

A. Rabinovich: Russkaya opera do Glinki [Russian opera before Glinka] (Moscow, 1948) [incl. excerpt from Lesta in fs]

P.V. Grachov: 'S.I. Davïdov', Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki 1790–1825 [Essays on the history of Russian music 1790–1825], ed. M.S. Druskin and Yu.V. Keldïsh (Leningrad, 1956), 263–82

L. Fedorovskaya: Kompozitor Stepan Davïdov (Leningrad, 1977)

Yu.V. Keldïsh: 'S.I. Davïdov', Istoriya russkoy muzïki, iv (Moscow, 1986), 145–67

GEOFFREY NORRIS

Davidovich, Bella (b Baku, 16 July 1928). American pianist of Russian origin. She began formal study of the piano at the age of six and made her début three years later in Baku, performing a Beethoven concerto. From 1947 to 1954 she attended the Moscow Conservatory, where she studied with Konstantin Igmunov and later with Yakov Fliyer. While still a student she won first prize in the Chopin Competition in Warsaw (1949), laying the foundation for a flourishing career that included annual concerts with the Leningrad PO from 1950. In 1962 she was appointed to a professorship at the Moscow Conservatory. Davidovich first appeared in the West in the Netherlands in 1967, and in 1971 she made her first tour of Italy. Her foreign engagements were cancelled after her son, the violinist Dmitry Sitkovetsky, defected to the USA in 1977, and she left the Soviet Union the following year, becoming an American citizen in 1984. She made her American début at Carnegie Hall in 1979 and quickly re-established her career, giving recitals and playing with leading orchestras throughout Europe and the USA. In 1983 she became a professor of piano at the Juilliard School and she has been sought after as a masterclass teacher in America and Europe, including at the Yehudi Menuhin School in England. Her playing of the 19th-century repertory, with which she is most closely associated and of which she has made notable recordings, is colourful and intelligent, although markedly unsentimental. Her recordings include music by Schumann and Liszt, notable for their fiery strength and vividness of character.

MICHAEL FLEMING/R

Davidovsky, Mario (b Buenos Aires, 4 March 1934). American composer of Argentine birth. He studied the violin as a child and began to compose at the age of 13. Subsequently he studied composition, theory and history in Buenos Aires, where his principal teacher was Graetzer. In 1958 he studied at the Berkshire Music Center with Copland and met there Babbitt, who encouraged him to move to New York to work at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center. He has taught at the University of Michigan (1964), the Instituto Torcuato di Tella of Buenos Aires (1965), the Manhattan School (1968–9), Yale University (1969–70) and City College, CUNY (1968–80). His association with Columbia University began in 1960 with his appointment as associate director of the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center and ended with his tenure as professor of music (1981–93). In 1993 he joined the staff at Harvard University. He has been the recipient of almost every major award in the USA, including the Koussevitzky fellowship (1958), two Rockefeller fellowships (1963, 1964), two Guggenheim fellowships (1960, 1971) and a Pulitzer Prize (1971).

Davidovsky was first acknowledged nationally and internationally for his electro-acoustic works. His series of works entitled Synchronisms were among the first successful collaborations employing electro-acoustic and instrumental resources. The ability to record sound was, in his opinion, the single most important technical breakthrough of the 20th century; it enabled sound to be frozen in time and used as an architectural element of musical form. Space in Davidovsky's works is an independent element of music used in much the same manner as Schoenberg and Webern had used timbre earlier in the century. In Synchronisms no.10 for guitar and electronic sounds (1992) the extended guitar solo (lasting almost half the duration of the entire composition) contains an opening motif that is transformed through use of registral shifts, harmonics, strummed chords, arpeggios, sustained chords, hammerings and percussive blows to the body of the instrument, each representing a certain mode of attack. Phrases are constructed through association of these attacks and lead to an implied counterpoint which becomes apparent with the entrance of the electronic sounds. The spatial location of those sounds identify and move individual lines through the complex contrapuntal texture.

Davidovsky's purely instrumental compositions, which make up the majority of his works since the 1970s, concentrate on musical elaboration and development. In the Divertimento (1984) one immediately identifies the gestures of the solo cello, and the commentary on that material by the orchestra, with the textures and techniques most often associated with electro-acoustic works. From the opening raw low C of the cello (which suggests a sawtooth wave from an oscillator) to the resonating accompaniment of the winds and brass, the orchestration is not unlike the mixing of a multi-track electro-acoustic composition. Rapid changes in register and mode of attack give way to the layering of broad band harmonies approximating the spectra of waveforms.

In the opening of the Concertante (1990) the orchestra acts as a reverberation chamber for the opening string quartet passage. The rapid woodwind passages resemble the speed-transposition typical of tape pieces, and effects such as beating, reverberation and masking – to create a sense of electronic filtering and the use of noise – differentiate and extend traditional timbres. The careful control of sound envelopes of whole groups of instruments highlight motivic associations. Most importantly perhaps, as part of the composer's concept of space and time, the string quartet and orchestra project their material towards each other, thereby creating a further hybrid timbre-space dimension.

WORKS

Synchronisms: no.1, fl, elecs, 1963; no.2, fl, cl, vn, vc, elecs, 1964; no.3, vc, elecs, 1965; no.4 (Ps xiii), male vv/mixed chorus, elecs, 1967; no.5, perc ens, elecs, 1969; no.6, pf, elecs, 1970; no.7, orch, elecs, 1973; no.8, ww qnt, elecs, 1974; no.9, vn, elecs, 1988; no.10, gui, elecs, 1992

Orch: Concertino, perc, str, 1954; Suite sinfonica para 'El payaso', 1955; Serie sinfonica, 1959; Contrastes no.1, str orch, elecs, 1960; Planos, 1961; Transientes, 1972; Consorts, sym. band, 1980; Divertimento, vc, orch, 1984; Concertante, str qt, orch, 1990; Concertino, vn, chbr orch, 1995

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1954; Qnt, cl, str, 1955; 3 Pieces, ww qt, 1956; Noneto, 9 insts, 1956; Str Qt no.2, 1958; Trio, cl, tpt, va, 1962; Inflexions, chbr ens, 1965; Junctures, fl, cl, vn, 1966; Music for Solo Vn, 1968; Chacona, vn, vc, pf, 1971; Str Qt no.3, 1976; Pennplay, 16 players, 1978; Str Qt no.4, 1980; Str Trio, 1982; Capriccio, 2 pf, 1985; Quartetto no.1, fl, str trio, 1987; Quartetto no.2, ob, str trio, 1996; Festino, gui, va, vc, db, 1993; Flashbacks, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1995

Vocal-inst: Scenes from Shir-ha-shirim (Bible: Song of Solomon), S, 2 T, B, chbr orch, 1975; Romancero (14th–16th century Sp.), S, fl, cl, vn, vc, 1983; Biblical Songs, S, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1990; Shulamit's Deam, S, orch, 1993

Tape: Elec Study no.1, 1961, no.2, 1962, no.3, 1965
Principal publishers: Marks, McGinnis & Marx, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD
C. Wuorinen: 'Younger American Composers: Mario Davidovsky' PNM, iv/2 (1966), 144–9
S.M. Gryc: 'Stratification and Synthesis in Mario Davidovsky's Synchronisms no.6', In Theory Only, iv/4 (1978–9), 8–39
A. de la Vega: 'Latin American Composers in the United States', Latin American Music Review/Revista de musica Latinoamericana, i/2 (1980), 162–75
C. Gagne and T. Caras: 'Mario Davidovsky', Soundpieces: Interviews with American Composers (Metuchen, NJ, 1982), 131

NOEL B. ZAHLER

Davidson, George Henry (b ?1800–01; d London, 4 July 1875). English music printer and publisher in London. He is first known as a general printer from about 1833. He began to publish both literary and musical works about 1844 and in 1847–8 he issued the two volumes of Davidson's Universal Melodist, a collection of popular and standard songs of the period. At the same time he republished a collection of Dibdin's songs, edited by George Hogarth, which had originally been printed by a different George Davidson and issued by How & Parsons in 1842. From 1850 Davidson had an enormous trade in the issue of cheap editions of popular music. He published much sheet music in the Musical Treasury series, and from 1854 he issued Davidson's Musical Opera Books, a series of librettos with music of the principal airs. From 1860 to 1881 the business continued as the Music Publishing Co., though major sales of copyrights, plates and stock took place in 1868 and 1872.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CooverMA; Humphries-SmithMP

FRANK KIDSON/WILLIAM C. SMITH/PETER WARD JONES

Davidson, Tina (b Stockholm, 30 Dec 1952). American composer and pianist. She graduated in piano and composition from Bennington College, Vermont, where she studied with Henry Brant, Louis Calabro, Vivian Fine and Lionel Nowak. She has been composer-in-residence for the Orchestra Society of Philadelphia, director of the Philadelphia New Orchestral project and president of the New Music Alliance. Davidson has been awarded many commissions, state and national fellowships, including the Pew Fellowship in 1992, and Meet the Composer Awards, gaining residencies with Opera Delaware and the Newark SO.

Davidson has been influenced by the highly individual styles of American composers such as Ruggles and Cowell. Her rhythmically driven music achieves striking effects with simple changes in harmony. She skilfully manages tension and release, often unfolding her works in linear fashion, with one event ending as the next begins. She brings a sense of beauty and emotion to a strict organizational structure.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: 2 Beasts from the Forest of Imaginary Beings, orch, 1975; Dancers, 1980; Pf Conc., 1981; Blood Memory: a Long Quiet after the Call, vc, orch, 1985; In the Darkness I Find a Face (It is Mine), 1989; The Selkie Boy, nar, orch, 1991; Blessings (Sacred Space), a sax, orch, 1992; They Come Dancing, 1994
Chbr: Recollections of Darkness, str trio, 1975; Piece for Cello, pf, 1975; Snapshots, vc, pf, 1980; Wait for the End of Dreaming, 2 bar sax, db/bn, 1983; Cassandra Sings, str qt, 1988; Dark Child Sings, 4 vc, 1988; I Hear the Mermaid Singing, va, vc, pf, 1990; Bleached Thread, Sister Thread, str qt, 1991; Fire on the Mountain, vib, mar, pf, 1993; Since Singing is Being, 2 wind qnt, pf, 1994; It is My Heart Singing, str sextet, 1996
Vocal: 5 Songs (Amerindian), S, va, 1975; Witches' Hammar (anon.), Mez, home-made perc, 1979; Unicorn/Tapestry (M.L. Polak), Mez, vc, tape, 1982; Black Riders and Other Lines (S. Crane), male v, pf, perc, 1985; Transparent Victims (no text), S, a sax, tape, 1987; Over Salt River, v, orch, 1995; Quietly, (v, pf)/ childrens' chorus, 1995; Touching the Rocks, S, female chorus, mar, 1995
Kbd: 7 Macabre Songs, 1979; Day of Rage, 1984; I am the Last Witness, pf 1 hand, 1984; Star Myths, 1987; The Dancing Sword, 2 pf, 1992
Mixed media: The Game of Silence (anon.), nar, mime, dance, 1976

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wester: ' Between the Quiet and the Clamor: a Conversation with Tina Davidson', American Women Composers News/Forum, vii/ 5–6 (1987), 10
C. McCurdy: ' Applause and Curtain Calls for New Music Premieres in Philadelphia', Chamber Music, viii/2 (1991), 16–19
T. Davidson: ' Cassandra Sings', Ms., ii/4 (1992), Jan–Feb, 64–67

SAM DI BONAVENTURA

Davidsson, Åke (b Örebro, 4 March 1913). Swedish musicologist, bibliographer and librarian. After working as an organist in Örebro (1931–9) he studied musicology with Moberg, art history and the history of science at Uppsala University (1939–43), and held appointments as assistant librarian (1946) and head of the music department (1957) at Uppsala University Library. He took the doctorate at Uppsala in 1957 with a dissertation on music printing in Sweden before 1750 and was a lecturer in musicology from 1957 to 1962 while continuing his work as librarian; subsequently he was appointed senior lecturer in library science (1963) and keeper of manuscripts (including music) at the university library (1965–78). Davidsson has published several extremely useful bibliographical works, especially the long-awaited completion of Mitjana's splendid catalogue (begun 40 years before) of the rich collection of music printed before 1700 in Uppsala University Library, the catalogue of the Gimo collection of Italian manuscript music, and some studies in the history of music printing.

WRITINGS

'Den musikaliska tidskriftslitteraturen i Sverige under 1800-talet', STMf, xxvii (1945), 95–126; Eng. trans., FAM, xxxiii (1986), 194–209
'Från Musikaliska Sällskapet till Philomele', Samfundet Örebro stads- och länsbiblioteks vänner, xv (1947), 56–108
Bibliografi över svensk musiklitteratur 1800–1945 (Uppsala, 1948, 2/1980)
Catalogue critique et descriptif des imprimés de musique des XVIe et XVIIe siècles conservés à la Bibliothèque de l'Université Royale d'Upsala, ii–iii (Uppsala, 1951)
Catalogue critique et descriptif des imprimés de musique des XVIe et XVIIe siècles conservés dans les bibliothèques suédoises, excepté la Bibliothèque de l'Université Royale d'Upsala (Uppsala, 1952)
Catalogue critique et descriptif des ouvrages théoriques sur la musique imprimés au XVIe et au XVIIe siècles et conservés dans les bibliothèques suédoises (Uppsala, 1953)
Musikbibliographische Beiträge (Uppsala, 1954)
Studier rörande svenskt musiktryck före år 1750 (diss., U. of Uppsala, 1957; Uppsala, 1957) [incl. Ger. summary]
'Isländskt musiktryck i äldre tider', STMf, xliii (1961), 99–108
Bibliographie der musiktheoretischen Drucke des 16. Jahrhunderts (Baden-Baden, 1962)
Danskt musiktryck intill 1700-talets mitt (Uppsala, 1962)
'The Origin of the Collections of Old Music in Swedish Libraries', Nordisk tidskrift för bok- och biblioteksväsen, xlix (1962), 109–24; enlarged in FAM, xxxiii (1986), 135–45
'Das Typenmaterial des älteren nordischen Musikdrucks', Annales Academiae regiae scientiarum upsaliensis, vi (1962), 76–101

Catalogue of the Gimo Collection of Italian Manuscript Music in the University Library of Uppsala (Uppsala, 1963)
'Cultural Background to Collections of Old Music in Swedish Libraries', FAM, xi (1964), 21–8
Bibliographie zur Geschichte des Musikdrucks (Uppsala, 1965)
'Korrektur till ett danskt musiktryck år 1620' [Thomas Schattenberg's Motets], Nordisk tidskrift för bok- och biblioteksväsen, liii (1966), 97–103
'En "Christina-opera" på Carolina Rediviva', Nordisk tidskrift för bok- och biblioteksväsen, liv (1967), 9–19
'Kring Uppsalaakademiens förvärv av musikalier på 1600-talet', Nordisk tidskrift för bok- och biblioteksväsen, lvi (1969), 66–107
'A Collection of Italian Manuscript Music in the University Library of Uppsala', Annales Academiae regiae scientiarum upsaliensis, xiv (1970), 7–29
ed.: Resa med Jenny Lind: sällskapsdamen Louise Johanssons dagböcker (Stockholm, 1986)
Åke Davidssons tryckta skrifter 1940–1993 (Uppsala, 1993) [incl. complete writings list]

JOHN BERGSAGEL

Davies. See DAVIS.

Davies, Arthur (b Wrexham, 11 April 1941). Welsh tenor. After studying at the RNCM in Manchester with Joseph Ward, he made his début with the WNO in 1972 as Squeak (Billy Budd); over the next 12 years he sang some 35 roles, including Nemorino, Almaviva, Ferrando, Albert Herring, Yannakos (Martinů's Greek Passion), Jack (The Midsummer Marriage), Quint, Rodolfo and Don José. Having made his Covent Garden début in Henze's We Come to the River (1976), he then sang Alfredo, Števa (Jenůfa), Pinkerton and Foresto (Attila). Davies's roles for the ENO have included Essex (Gloriana), Don Ottavio, Faust, Lensky, Werther, Riccardo (Ballo in maschera) and the Duke, which he sang in Jonathan Miller's Mafia production of Rigoletto (1982–95). For Scottish Opera he has sung David (Die Meistersinger) and Cavaradossi, while for Opera North his roles have included Gaston in the British stage première of Verdi's Jérusalem (1990), Walton's Troilus (which he repeated at Covent Garden), Nadir, and Rodolfo in Luisa Miller. He has also performed in Europe, North and South America and Australia. His once light, lyric voice has grown heavier and more dramatic while retaining its flexibility and smoothness of tone.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Davies, Ben(jamin Grey) (b Pontardawe, South Wales, 6 Jan 1858; d Bristol, 28 March 1943). Welsh tenor. The son of an engineer, he sang as a boy in Caradoc's Choir on one of its visits to Crystal Palace, London (1873), and was brought up to read Tonic Sol-fa. But it was not until he had won first prize in a solo competition at the Swansea Eisteddfod (1877), and on the instigation of Brinley Richards, that he was able to give up working in a store in Swansea to study under Fiori at the RAM (1878–80), where he quickly established himself as an exponent of impeccable bel canto style. His performances in RAM concerts led to oratorio engagements in Dublin and an invitation to sing in the Carl Rosa Opera Company. Following his stage début, in Birmingham (Balfe's Bohemian Girl, 11 October 1881), he sang a number of minor roles before being engaged in 1887 as the lead tenor in Cellier's Dorothy, a role he filled for two years. Less successful, however, was Sullivan's Ivanhoe (1891), in which Ben Davies sang the lead at a reputed '£60 for three performances a week, or £80 for four'. In the same year he also appeared as Clément Marot in Messager's Basoche. At the height of his powers in the 1890s, he began increasingly to sing in oratorio. He gave a command performance for Queen Victoria at Windsor on 14 July 1892, and was in demand throughout the country, in Germany as well as in the USA where he first sang in 1893 at the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago. The frequent performances he gave in Wales were eagerly awaited, and he appeared often with his well-known (though not related) contemporaries Mary Davies and David Ffrangcon Davies. He was invited regularly to sing at the National Eisteddfod of Wales, for example in Joseph Parry's oratorio Saul of Tarsus at Rhyl in 1892. He had a singing career of over 40 years, appearing successfully as late as 1920 in Walford Davies's Harlech Festival and in the 1926 Handel Festival, giving his last public performance before royalty in Caernarfon in 1937. He had a superb technique, an appealing and expressive voice, and was distinguished by the clarity of his diction, as some surviving recordings testify.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Ben Davies', MT, xl (1899), 513–18
R.D. Griffith: 'Davies, Benjamin', Y Bywgraffiadur Cymreig 1941–1950[Dictionary of Welsh Biography] (London, 1970), 7

OWAIN EDWARDS

Davies, Cecilia (*b c*1756/7; d London, 3 July 1836). English soprano. She and her sister Marianne (b 1743/4; bur. Marylebone, London, 5 Jan 1819) were well-known performers, as children and adults. Marianne played the harpsichord and flute and sang a little at concerts in London and Dublin from April 1751, when she was seven. In 1762 Marianne began her career as a virtuoso on the armonica, or glass harmonica (musical glasses), in Bath, Bristol and London. She played and sang in Dublin, 1763–4, and in Autumn 1764 travelled to Paris with her parents and Cecilia, whose first singing teacher she was. Cecilia sang to Marianne's armonica in London in August 1767 and later that year the family went to the Continent. When they were in Vienna the Mozart family heard the armonica and Cecilia studied singing with Hasse, while she and Marianne taught his daughters English. Hasse wrote music for the sisters to perform and they became favourites at court. Although Hasse thought her unready, Cecilia appeared in his Ruggiero at Naples in January 1772, at the age of 15, and 'L'Inglesina' also sang at Florence. (According to Burney she was the first Englishwoman to appear on the Italian stage.) They returned to England; Cecilia was the prima donna in the 1773–4 and 1776–7 Italian opera seasons, when Burney heard her and admired her voice, and she sang in London concerts and provincial festivals including the Three Choirs Festival in 1774. The sisters went back to the Continent, and there are records of Cecilia singing in Venice, Florence, Genoa and Livorno between 1779 and 1780 and in 1784 at Florence, where Mount-Edgcumbe later found them 'unengaged, and poor'. They were helped to return to England in 1786; Cecilia sang in a London concert series in 1787 and in the 1791 Handel oratorio season, after which they faded into obscurity and poverty.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; LS; SartoriL
Correspondence: Cecilia and Mary Ann Davies and J.A. Hasse to G.M. Ortes, 1770–78 (I-Vmc Cod. Cicogna 3197–8 bis)
Musical World (1836), i, 30, 47; ii, 143
B. Matthews: 'The Davies Sisters, J.C. Bach and the Glass Harmonica', ML, lvi (1975), 150–69
J. Hemlow, ed.: The Journals and Letters of Fanny Burney, xii (Oxford, 1984)

L.E.. Troide, ed.: The Early Journals and Letters of Fanny Burney, ii (Oxford, 1990)

OLIVE BALDWIN, THELMA WILSON

Davies, Clara Novello [Novello-Davies, Clara] (b Cardiff, 7 April 1861; d London, 1 March 1943). Welsh singing teacher and choral conductor, mother of IVOR NOVELLO. After early tuition from her father, a gifted amateur musician, she established herself in Cardiff as a teacher of piano and singing. She founded the Welsh Ladies Choir who, after notable performances both locally and in London, won the Ladies' Choral Prize at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago (1893) and were awarded royal patronage by Queen Victoria. The choir toured extensively, winning further prizes at the Paris Exposition of 1899. Davies became a prominent international choral conductor, active well into her seventies, and in 1937, when her choir was again invited to sing at the Paris Exposition, she was awarded the Médaille de Mérite by the French government and the gold medal of the Renaissance Française.

As a teacher she developed a systematic method of voice training that concentrated on diaphragmatic support and tonal development, and whose linking of the production techniques of speech to singing were influential. The entire chapter on the throat in her voice tutor You Can Sing (London, 1928) consists of the two words 'Forget it!'. Although mainly based in London, she also taught in New York (1918–25), where her pupils included leading performers from Broadway, notably Dorothy Dickson and Mary Ellis, who were both later to star in London in musicals by her son. She also taught Wilfried Douthitt, who subsequently became an international baritone, then tenor, under the name of Louis Graveure. She composed several successful songs including Mother! (1911) with words by Douthitt, and Friend! (1905).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.N. Davies: You Can Sing (London, 1928)
C.N. Davies: The Life I Have Loved (London, 1940) [autobiography]

JOHN SNELSON

Davies, David Ivor. See NOVELLO, IVOR.

Davies, Dennis Russell (b Toledo, OH, 16 April 1944). American conductor. He made his début as a pianist with the Toledo SO in 1961, going on to study with Goldsand, Epstein and Gorodnitzki at the Juilliard School of Music. He made his conducting début in New York in 1968 with the Juilliard Ensemble (later re-formed as the Ensemble), which he co-founded with Berio and directed from 1968 to 1974; from 1969 they gave the 'New and Newer Music' series at Lincoln Center. In 1970 Davies conducted the première of Berio's Opera at Sante Fe; the same year he appeared at the Royan Festival. His successful début with the Los Angeles PO in 1972 coincided with his appointment as music director of the St Paul Chamber Orchestra, a position he held until 1980. Davies made that orchestra both interesting and important, conducting a wide repertory and building a considerable audience. In 1973 he conducted Pelléas et Mélisande for the Netherlands Opera, and appeared at the Aspen and Alaska festivals. He made his Bayreuth début with Der fliegende Holländer in 1978. Under Davies's direction from 1975 to 1991, the Cabrillo Festival in California became a West Coast centre for striking new music, much of it conducted by Davies himself. In 1977 he co-founded the American Composers' Orchestra in New York, and as its music director has been responsible for more than 100 premières and for a remarkable programme of sight-reading new music. Since 1980 Davies has made his base in Germany. From 1980 to 1987 he was Generalmusikdirektor at Stuttgart Opera, and there established a reputation for bold, imaginative and frequently controversial productions. As well as programming Mozart, Wagner and Verdi, he also presented important premières, including Glass's Akhnaten and William Bolcom's Songs of Innocence and Experience. He was Generalmusikdirektor of Bonn Opera and the Beethovenhalle Orchester from 1990 to 1995, and of the Brooklyn PO from 1992 to 1996. Davies made his Met début in March 1996 with Philip Glass's opera The Voyage. In 1995 he became chief conductor of the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, and in 1996 chief conductor of the ÖRF SO. In Europe he has appeared as guest conductor with the Berlin PO, Munich PO, Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra and the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande; in America, he has conducted the major orchestras of Cleveland, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia. In opera, concert and some 50 recordings, Davies has proved an able champion of a wide range of contemporary American and European music, and has conducted first performances of works by Berio, Cage, Carter, Denhoff, Feldman, Kagel, Maderna, Pärt, Rzewski and Schwertsik.

CHARLES BARBER, JOSÉ BOWEN

Davies, Fanny (b Guernsey, 27 June 1861; d London, 1 Sept 1934). English pianist. She spent a year (1882–3) at the Leipzig Conservatory under Carl Reinecke, Oscar Paul and Salomon Jadassohn and then two years with Clara Schumann at Frankfurt. Her London début was at the Crystal Palace on 17 October 1885 in Beethoven's Fourth Concerto, and during that season she began a collaboration with Joachim and Piatti on the London Popular Concerts that continued for many years. Her Berlin début, in a recital assisted by Joachim, was at the Singakademie on 15 November 1887; other continental appearances followed in Leipzig, Rome, Bonn (the Beethoven House Festival, 1893), Vienna and Bergamo (Donizetti Centenary Festival, 1897). She performed with the Joachim and Rosé String Quartets, and in later years with Casals and with the Czech String Quartet. She played the English premières of Brahms's D minor violin sonata (1889, with Ludwig Straus), clarinet trio (1892, with Mühlfeld and Piatti) and two clarinet sonatas (1895, with Mühlfeld). Davies was the first pianist to give a recital in Westminster Abbey (July 1921), and she performed recitals in other English cathedrals.

Though Davies was one of the last representatives of the Clara Schumann tradition, the 'quietly noble mood' so central to her teacher's art was, according to George Bernard Shaw, 'not in her temperament'. Her interpretations were spirited and at times irreverant. Shaw enjoyed the 'speed, lilt, life and energy' of her Bach fugue and the 'unrestricted impulsiveness' and 'most inspiriting dash' of her Tchaikovsky piano trio, and considered her 'willing, affable, slapdash treatment' of Beethoven's Choral Fantasy 'a wonder'. The music of Brahms (whom she knew) and of Beethoven and Schumann was featured most prominently in her programmes; her sound recordings of Schumann's Piano Concerto, Kinderszenen and Davidsbündlertänze (1928–30) are celebrated, and she also recorded on Welte Mignon piano rolls (1909). A pioneer in the revival of English virginal music, Davies championed the music of contemporary Czech, Spanish and English composers; Elgar dedicated his Concerto Allegro to her.

WRITINGS

'Some Personal Recollections of Brahms as Pianist and Interpreter', Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music (London, 1929–30), 182–4

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Miss Fanny Davies: A Biographical Sketch', MT, xlvi (1905), 365–70
D. McVeagh: 'Elgar's Concert Allegro', MT, cx (1969), 135–8
D. Mayer: 'Fanny Davies', Recorded Sound, nos.70–71 (1978), 776–9
P. Saul and C. Ellis: 'Fanny Davies Recordings', ibid., 779–80

FRANK DAWES/GEORGE S. BOZARTH

Davies, Harry Parr [Parr-Davies, Harry] (b Briton Ferry, 24 May 1914; d London, 14 Oct 1955). Welsh composer and lyricist. He learned the organ from Walford Davies, and his impressive piano skills gained him the role of accompanist to Gracie Fields when he was 18. He was her principal accompanist until 1945 and wrote many of her songs, especially for film, including the title number of Sing as we Go (1934) which became one of Field's defining performances. Film songs written for George Formby include 'In my Little Snapshot Album' (I See Ice, 1938). Davies toured extensively with Fields, including America (1937) and Canada (1940), but left her in 1945, having already established himself as a composer for musical theatre. He contributed songs to the revue Full Swing and additional music to a revival of Kerker's The Belle of New York, both in 1942. The following year he had a major success with The Lisbon Story, a contemporary wartime romance that included one of his most famous songs, 'Pedro the Fisherman', and through which, along with 'Serenade for Sale' and 'Music at Midnight', he further demonstrated an ability to write immediately memorable and inventive melodies. The wide-ranging lyricism of that show's 'Never say goodbye' is typical of his sometimes demanding vocal writing, possibly influenced by his years of work with the unique characteristics of Field's voice; the arpeggio head-motifs that her fluid voice handled well in Davies's early songs became a melodic characteristic that was to run through much of his later work. Many of his songs and most of his shows invoked stoicism, optimism or patriotism, tones which added to their great contemporary appeal; these include 'Happy Ending' (This Week of Grace, 1933), 'Wish me luck (as you wave me goodbye)' (Shipyard Sally, 1939), 'I leave my heart in an English garden' (Dear Miss Phoebe, 1950) and the star vehicle for Anna Neagle, The Glorious Days (1953), that capitalized on the fervour surrounding the coronation of Elizabeth II. His sudden death from a stomach haemorrhage ended a proposed musical version of Peg of my Heart as Marry Me, Margaret for the producer Emile Littler. (GänzlBMT; GänzlEMT).

WORKS
(selective list)

Musical plays (dates those first London performance): Full Swing, 1942, collab. G. Posford; The Knight was Bold, 1943; The Lisbon Story, 1943 [incl. Music at Midnight; Never say goodbye; Pedro the Fisherman; Serenade for Sale; film 1946]; Jenny Jones, 1944; Her Excellency, 1949, collab. M. Sherwin [addl. music by R. Probst]; Blue for a Boy, 1950; Dear Miss Phoebe, 1950 [incl. I leave my heart in an English garden, Whisper while you waltz]; The Glorious Days, 1953

Contribs. to: Black Velvet (revue), 1939; Come Out to Play! (revue), 1940; Top of the World (revue), 1940; Gangway (revue), 1941; The Belle of New York (musical play), 1942 [revival of show by G. Kerker]; Best Bib and Tucker (revue), 1942; Big Top (revue), 1942; Happidrome (revue), 1942 [after BBC radio show]; The Rest is Silence (play), 1944; Fine Feathers (revue), 1945; The Shepard Show (medley of mirth and music), 1946

Songs associated with films: Happy Ending, My Lucky Day (in This Week of Grace, 1933); Sing as we go (Sing as we Go, 1934); Look up and laugh, Love is everywhere (Look Up and Laugh, 1935); Binkie's Lullaby (Keep your Seats, Please, 1936); My First Love Song, Why did I have to meet you (Queen of Hearts, 1936); In my Little Snapshot Album (I See Ice, 1938); It's in the air (It's in the Air, 1938); Swing your way to happiness (Keep Smiling, 1938); The Trek Song, The Sweetest Song in the World (We're Going to be Rich, 1938); Heaven will be heavenly (Band Wagon, 1939); Wish me luck (as you wave me goodbye) (Shipyard Sally, 1939); Sing a happy-go-lucky song (Sailors Three, 1940); All ashore (It Happened One Sunday, 1943)

Many other popular songs, incl. Bring back the girl in the old-fashioned gown; 'Erbert 'Enery 'Eppelthwaite; The Fairy on the Christmas Tree; It always rains before the rainbow; Joe the Jolly Marine; Let's have an old-fashioned Christmas

Principal publishers: Chappell, Keith Prowse

JOHN SNELSON

Davies [Davis], Hugh (i) (*b c*1580; d Hereford, 1644). English cathedral musician and composer. In 1605 he was appointed a vicar-choral of Hereford Cathedral, and may have succeeded William Inglott as organist there in 1611, although the first reference to Davies as organist is dated 1630. His seven-part full anthem Awake, up my glory is highly imitative and rather after the manner of Thomas Tomkins, but technically less assured.

WORKS

8 anthems: Awake, up my glory, 7vv, GB-GL, Lbl, US-NYp; Defend us, Lord, full (inc.), GB-Och; Have mercy upon me, O God, verse (inc.), Lcm, Och; Lord, from thy throne, verse (inc.), GL, Ob; Lord, in thy wrath, verse (inc.), GL; O sing unto the Lord, verse (inc.), GL; Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous, 5vv, Lbl, Ob, Och, US-NYp; The peace of God, verse (inc.), GB-GL, Ob

By 'Davies': Preces and psalms xxiv, cxxxvi, GB-GL

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Morehen: The Sources of English Cathedral Music, c.1617–c.1644 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1969)
R.T. Daniel and P. Le Huray: The Sources of English Church Music, 1549–1660, EECM, suppl.i (London, 1972)
W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists (Oxford, 1991)

PETER LE HURAY/JOHN MOREHEN

Davies, Hugh (Seymour) (ii) (b Exmouth, 23 April 1943). English composer, instrument inventor, performer and writer on music. After reading music at Oxford University (1961–4) he worked with Stockhausen between 1964 and 1966; in the following year he became director of the electronic music studio at Goldsmiths' College, London, later becoming its research consultant (1986–91). He was the first Secretary of the International Confederation for Electroacoustic Music (1982–6) and an external consultant for electronic musical instruments at the Gemeentemuseum, The Hague (1986–93). Since 1999 he has been a part-time researcher in sonic art at the Centre for Electronic Arts, Middlesex University.

Starting in 1968 he has been active in a number of groups specializing in improvisation and the realization of indeterminate scores. Since 1967 he has devised and constructed over 120 instruments, sound sculptures, sound installations and musical toys, many of which incorporate found objects and cast-off materials. About half, primarily the concert instruments, are electroacoustic, using mainly contact and magnetic microphones; they include different types of 'shozyg' (Davies's generic name for the instruments he has built using a selection of commonplace sound-producing objects mounted inside everyday containers) and a family of a dozen 'springboards' (amplified springs stretched over blockboard). He has composed for conventional forces, tape, live electronics and his own instruments, including several music theatre works, and has devised environmental music projects and documented unusual sound environments.

WORKS

(selective list)

Specially constructed insts: Shozyg I, II, I+II, 1968; Spring Song, 1970; Shozyg Sequence no.1, 1971; HD Breadbins, 1972; Gentle Springs, 1973; Music for Bowed Diaphragms, 1973; My Spring Collection, 1975; Jigamaree, 1977; Salad, 1977; Shozyg Sequence no.2, 1977; At Home, 1978; The Search for the Music of the Spheres, 1978; I have a Dream, 1984–5; Strata, 1987; Shozyg Sequence no.3, 1990–92

El-ac: Interfaces, tape, live elecs, 1967–8; Qnt, live elecs, 1967–8; The Birth of Live Electronic Music, 2 vocalists, Stroh vn, acoustic modifications, 1971; Mobile with Differences, 5 insts, live elecs, 1973, rev. 1982; Natural Images, tape, 1976, rev., invented insts, found objects, tape, 1992; Ex una voce, T, synth, 1979, rev. 1981; Tapestries, tape, 1982–3, rev. wind inst, tape, 1989; Celeritas, tape, 1987; Vision, tape, 1987

Other: Contact, pf, 1963; Vom ertrunkenen Mädchen, S, fl, cl, pf, 1964; Kangaroo, org, 1968; Beautiful Seaweeds, players, dancers, slide projection, 1972–3; Raisonnements, pf, 1973; Differentials, 3 high wind insts, 1973–5; The Musical Educator, spkr, players, dancers, slide projection, 1974; Meldoci Gestures, fl (+ a fl)/vn, vc, pf, 1978; Meldoci Gestures from the British Isles, fl, tuba, 1979; 4 Songs, 1v, inst, 1979–81; Rapport, S, fl, pf, 1981; Inventio, improvising soloist, ens, 1994

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Répertoire internationale des musiques électroacoustics/International Electronic Music Catalog (Cambridge, MA, 1968)

'A History of Recorded Sound', Poésie sonore internationale, ed. H. Chopin (Paris, 1979), 13–40

'A Survey of New Instruments and Sound Sculpture', Echo: the Images of Sound, ed. P. Panhuysen (Eindhoven, 1987), 6–20

'L'univers sonore, les instruments et la musique de Luigi Russolo', Vitalité et contradictions de l'avant-garde: Italie–France 1909–1924, ed S. Briosi and H. Hillenaar (Paris, 1988), 255–62; Eng. trans., rev., in Resonance, ii/2 (1994), 14–22

'A History of Sampling', Experimental Musical Instruments, v/2 (1989), 17–19; rev. in Organised Sound, i/1 (1996), 3–11

'The Musical Potential of Found Objects in New Instruments Invented by Young People', Musicworks, no.57 (1994), 14–20 [with CD]

'My Invented Instruments and Improvisation', Rubberneck, no.22 (1996), 36–43; rev. in Avant, no.1 (1997), 12–15

Numerous articles on 20th-century instruments in this dictionary and GroveI

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Roberts: 'Hugh Davies: Instrument Maker', Contact, no.17 (1977), 8–13

P. Renaud and A. Chauvat: 'Interview: Hugh Davies', Notes [France], no.37 (1991), 16–18

M. Adamčiak: 'Magický svet Hugha Daviesa', Dotyky [Slovakia], iv/1 (1992), 29–30

J. Martin: 'Musique concrète live: der Instrumenterfinder und Performer Hugh Davies', MusikTexte, no.75 (1998), 36–40

C. Wagner: 'Der Mann mit dem Koffer: Christoph Wagner sprach mit Hugh Davies, dem englischen Instrumentenerfinder, Komponisten und Experten elektroakustischer Musik', NZM, Jg.160, no.2 (1999), 29–31 [interview]

DAVID ROBERTS/R

Davies, Marianne [Mary Ann]. English instrumentalist, sister of CECILIA DAVIES.

Davies [Davys], Mary [Moll] (i). See DAVIS, MARY.

Davies, Mary (ii) (b London, 27 Feb 1855; d London, 22 June 1930). Welsh mezzo-soprano. Her father, William Davies 'Mynorydd' (1826–1901), a sculptor in London and a gifted amateur singer, brought her up to perform in chapel and in Welsh Society concerts in which she came to early prominence. She was first taught by Brinley Richards and Megan Watts-Hughes, receiving special encouragement from the prominent soprano Edith Wynne (1842–97), and she was a member of the Welsh Choral Union under John Thomas. She made her professional début at Brinley Richards's lecture-recital of 12 June 1873 at the Hanover Square Rooms, and in the same year entered the RAM on a scholarship sponsored by the Welsh Choral Union initially for three years but extended to five in recognition of her outstanding progress. While still a student she began singing at the National Eisteddfod of Wales, the Harlech and Worcester festivals, and at the London Ballad Concerts, with all of which she was associated for many years. She appeared at festivals throughout the country, reaching her peak in the 1880s. She enjoyed particular success as an interpreter of Berlioz's music: in 1880 she sang Marguerite in the complete production of La damnation de Faust under Hallé at Manchester, London and elsewhere, and in 1886 Mary in L'enfance du Christ at Crystal Palace. The poor health of her husband William Cadwaladr Davies, first registrar of the University College of North Wales, Bangor, whom she married in 1888, caused her finally to give up her professional activities in the 1890s. Although she returned to London after her husband's death in 1905, she continued to show her commitment to Welsh music. She was a founder-member and president of the Welsh Folk Song Society in 1906, and was awarded the honorary MusD by the University of Wales in 1916 for her services to her nation's music. She had a clear, rather small voice with a range from b to c″ and a most attractive stage presence. (R.D. Griffith: 'Davies, Mary', Dictionary of Welsh Biography down to 1940, ed. J.E. Lloyd and R.T. Jenkins (London, 1959), 143)

OWAIN EDWARDS

Davies, (Albert) Meredith (b Birkenhead, 30 July 1922). English conductor and organist. An organ scholar of Keble College, Oxford, he was appointed organist of St Alban's Cathedral in 1947, moving in 1949 to Hereford Cathedral, where he was principal conductor of the Three Choirs Festival in 1952 and 1955. He studied conducting with Previtali at the Accademia di S Cecilia, Rome, in 1954 and again in 1956, the year in which he was appointed organist at New College, Oxford. He resigned in 1960 to concentrate on conducting, having become conductor of the City of Birmingham Choir in 1957 and associate conductor (later deputy musical director) of the CBSO. After his performance of Britten's Spring Symphony, the composer engaged him to conduct The Rape of Lucretia and A Midsummer Night's Dream at the Aldeburgh Festival in 1960 and 1961, and elsewhere. He gave the North American première of A Midsummer Night's Dream in 1961. He was co-conductor with Britten of the War Requiem at its première in the new Coventry Cathedral in 1962 and in many subsequent performances. Davies continued to work with Britten as music director of the English Opera Group from 1963 to 1965, and conducted Peter Grimes at Covent Garden and Sadler's Wells. After conducting Delius's A Village Romeo and Juliet at Sadler's Wells he directed the first recording of the opera; he subsequently made admired recordings of Delius's Requiem and Vaughan Williams's Riders to the Sea. During the 1960s Davies also gave premières of works by Bennett, Searle and others at the Cheltenham Festival, and conducted the first performance of Berkeley's opera Castaway at the 1967 Aldeburgh Festival. He was music director of the Vancouver SO from 1964 to 1971 and conductor of the BBC Training Orchestra in Bristol from 1969 to 1972, while his positions as music director of the Leeds Philharmonic Society (1975–84) and of the Royal Choral Society (1972–85) confirmed his mastery of the British choral tradition. In 1979 Davies was appointed principal of Trinity College of Music, London, and successfully steered it through the administrative difficulties created by government reforms. He retired in 1988 to work as a freelance conductor. He was made a CBE in 1982.

ARTHUR JACOBS/BERNARD KEEFFE

Davies, Peter Maxwell (b Salford, Greater Manchester, 8 Sept 1934). English composer. His finest achievements have a depth of symbolism and historical reference rarely encountered elsewhere in contemporary music. He has cultivated various styles, from the unbridled Expressionism of his music-theatre pieces of the late 1960s to the majestically unfolding landscapes of his later orchestral works. He has gained considerable popularity with his lighter pieces, many of them inspired by the folk traditions of Orkney, where he settled in 1971. He has also made a significant contribution to music education in Britain.

1. LIFE. Davies demonstrated an early inclination towards music, which his parents encouraged by arranging piano tuition. Composition rapidly became an extension of his piano studies, his earliest juvenilia dating from 1942. At Leigh Grammar School music was not recognized as an academic subject, but Davies pursued further studies independently of his general education, obtaining entry to both the RMCM and Manchester University. He took parallel courses there between 1953 and 1956, but the principal stimulus came from his association with Alexander Goehr, Birtwistle and others in the New Music Manchester Group (see MANCHESTER SCHOOL). Goehr functioned as catalyst, providing access to the latest developments in serial technique via recent scores by the postwar generation of European composers. Davies supplied at least two items to the group's concerts – the Trumpet Sonata op.1 for Howarth and the Five Piano Pieces op.2 for Ogdon – as well as the Clarinet Sonata for Birtwistle to perform at one of the Darmstadt summer courses.

In 1956 Davies began sketching the libretto and first compositional ideas for the opera Taverner, choosing a now discredited account of the Tudor composer's career because it embodied themes of treachery, betrayal and the distortion of reality that he wished to explore. Shortly thereafter an Italian government scholarship enabled him to study with Petrassi in Rome (1957–8). Petrassi was devising a personal brand of serialism, and though his teaching was non-dogmatic, he emphasized the need to develop a rigorous compositional technique. From 1959 to 1962 Davies was director of music at Cirencester Grammar School, where the significance he attached to performance, by pupils of all musical abilities, had a lasting impact on British music education. He relinquished the post in favour of a Harkness Fellowship, leading to a period of study in the graduate school at Princeton (1962–5). There his principal teachers were Kim, Sessions and Babbitt, who introduced him to set theory and the concept of combinatoriality. While at Princeton he completed the first act of Taverner.

After a year teaching at the University of Adelaide, he returned to Britain in 1967 to co-found the Pierrot Players with Birtwistle. This was a time when British culture was unusually responsive to radical ideas, and Davies entered the most turbulent phase of his career. The stylistic upheaval associated with the composition of Taverner (1962–8) was expressed through a violent form of parody that came out also in a number of related works, usually, though not always, scored for the Pierrot Players, in which the expressive vocabulary and theatrical implications of Schoenberg's Pierrot lunaire were considerably extended and made explicit. In the orchestral Worldes Blis Davies attempted to reintegrate the main elements of his style, thereby more or less concluding his direct involvement with the most radical aspects of Central European modernism. However, it was only after settling in Orkney in 1971 that a measure of cohesion began to be achieved. In the same year the Pierrot Players were disbanded and reconstituted as the Fires of London under Davies's sole direction. The group became the main focus of his composing and conducting over the next 16 years, through a general change from theatrical pieces to more reflective song cycles and substantial works for instrumental ensemble. He also commissioned for the group and conducted many scores by younger composers.

Meanwhile the stark lands and seascapes of Orkney, the stability of a relatively traditional community, and its history and mythology as mediated through the poetry and fiction of George Mackay Brown, began to have a lasting impact on Davies' creative imagination. He adopted a more detached approach, analogous to that of Mackay Brown's writing. Parody was largely excluded, and there was less emphasis on innovation or experimentation. The chamber opera, The Martyrdom of St Magnus (1976), composed for St Magnus Cathedral in Kirkwall, marked a decisive stage in Davies's identification with the Orkney community and its distinctive culture. The work's first performance inaugurated the St Magnus Festival, which Davies founded and directed between 1977 and 1986, subsequently becoming president. The festival was designed to introduce international musicians, writers and artists to Orkney, while also encouraging local participation. Several of Davies's major works have been associated with the festival, as have many pieces written for the local community, particularly schoolchildren at both secondary and primary levels.

In 1979 Davies became artistic director of the Dartington Summer School, where he had previously taught for more than a decade. He directed five courses there, the first in 1980, the last in 1984. In the late 1980s he established a summer school on Hoy, Orkney, for student composers, which lasted until 1996. His post as associate composer-conductor of the Scottish Chamber Orchestra (1985–94) also included an educational element. Besides the Fourth Symphony, Davies composed his ten Strathclyde Concertos for the orchestra, each linked to a schools project within Strathclyde, and involving young composers alongside local children. He later accepted posts as associate composer and conductor with the BBC PO and the RPO. For the former he embarked on two extended series of works: one dealing with recollections of his

1. Peter Maxwell Davies in Orkney

Manchester childhood, the other originally entitled Sails in St Magnus, but subsequently re-named Orkney Saga. Among the works written for the RPO are the Sixth Symphony and the Piccolo Concerto. Another community project, on which he collaborated with WNO, led to the commissioning of The Doctor of Myddfai, his second full-scale opera.

Davies has received honorary awards from many academic and musical institutions. He was made a CBE in 1981 and was knighted in 1987. In 1997 he was appointed president of the Society for the Promotion of New Music.

2. WORKS. On one level Davies's output reflects the steady development and refinement of technical procedures he began to establish at the outset of his career. These have been discussed by many writers, often resulting in different interpretations, but the most authoritative study is David Roberts's dissertation (1986), which provides a detailed analysis of the significant works up to A Mirror of Whitening Light (1976–7). Davies's technical facility has remained a constant factor through many changes of style, and has been adapted to virtually every genre, so that the same underlying principles govern the composition of symphonies, operas or occasional pieces. These principles have invariably involved numerical sequences, generally outlined in precompositional sketches or charts. Except in the earliest scores, they have been combined with fragments of pre-existing material, usually plainchant, subjected to various forms of permutation.

Initially, in the Trumpet Sonata (1955), Davies used a species of serialism, incorporating tonal elements, laid out as a transposition square comprising a 12 × 12 grid. This enabled him to generate hierarchical structures in which the serial method was applied to more than one level of organization – a procedure that was systematically extended in subsequent works, not least by developing durational schemes in conjunction with an increasingly rigorous approach to the ordering of pitch. After the five Piano Pieces (1955–6) Davies abandoned strict 12-note composition in favour of sets of varying length, establishing by 1959 a formidable repertory of compositional strategies. Prolation (1958) for orchestra, represented the culmination of this phase. As the title indicates, proportions here reflected a preoccupation with the principles underpinning medieval and Renaissance polyphony.

By this stage Davies had begun to employ pre-existing material, initially in the instrumental sextet Alma redemptoris mater (1957). Further insight is provided by the programme note for St Michael (1957), subtitled 'Sonata for 17 Wind Instruments', which reveals a wide-ranging view of musical history and an attachment as much to symbolic as to technical features. The alternative tonal repertory Davies arranged or created for pupils at Cirencester – particularly a performing edition of several movements from Monteverdi's Vespers and his own choral-instrumental sequence O magnum mysterium (1960) – contributed to a general broadening of style. Monteverdi's Sonata sopra Sancta Maria was particularly influential in this respect: it permeated the String Quartet (1961) and Sinfonia (1962), of which the latter evinced greater flexibility in the handling of large-scale structures and introduced a greater degree of expressivity. The expressivity was developed further in response to the intense poetry of the Leopardi Fragments (1961).

The Monteverdi-inspired works established the principal features that made possible the composition of Taverner, and those works also illustrated Davies's tendency to forge links between scores by means of motivic or thematic ideas as well as compositional procedures – a tendency he extended throughout the 1960s. His preoccupation with the In Nomine from Taverner's Gloria Tibi Trinitas mass was not restricted to technical or historical considerations but had a symbolic aspect in relation to the 'death chord' (D, E, F♯, G♯), whose symbolism pervaded many Taverner-related scores and was revived in The Martyrdom of St Magnus. Davies's programme notes for Antechrist (1967) and Vesalii icones (1969), together with Stephen Arnold's detailed outline of the compositional methods employed in Taverner, indicate a clear relation between the introduction of transformation processes and the growing significance of symbolism.

Transformation processes involved the systematic alteration of sets of pitch or interval classes, thereby turning a theme into its inversion, or transforming a fragment of one plainsong into another. Davies's choice of source material almost invariably reflects the connotations of the implied text, so that, for example, in Act 1 scene iv of Taverner the thematic transformations are linked with Taverner's conversion from Catholic musician to Protestant zealot (fig.2). In the Second Fantasia on John Taverner's In Nomine (1965), Davies reinterpreted Act 1 of the opera in 'symphonic' terms, producing a pair of works, the act and the fantasia, to crown the first phase of his career. His compositional technique had evolved to the point where it could be applied to a variety of styles, and during the phase of psychological turbulence associated with the second act of the opera, it gave rise to works of remarkable stylistic diversity.

The Trakl setting Revelation and Fall (1965–6), employed the same source material and compositional procedures as Taverner and the Second Fantasia, but replaced the Mahlerian influence with a violent form of Expressionism, extending the implications of Schoenberg's early atonal scores. Davies drew a parallel between the destructive nature of religious ideology in the 16th century, and the inherent danger of the dogmatic pursuit of integral serialism by the postwar avant garde. In the process of rejecting the more extreme aspects of their aesthetic, he responded to the lurid imagery of Trakl's verse by introducing unconventional, brightly coloured percussion, and a blood red nun's habit, together with loudhailer, for the mezzo-soprano soloist. There were also stylistic allusions to the popular music of Trakl's era, thereby establishing a parallel between the decadence of pre-World War I Vienna and the increasing cultural fragmentation of the 1960s.

Yet Davies benefited from the increasing cultural freedom during the later 1960s by incorporating theatrical elements into his scores, which frequently confronted the audience with controversial subjects. The provocative tone was evident at the inaugural concert of the Pierrot Players, which opened with Antechrist. In L'homme armé (1968) he subjected a 15th-century mass fragment to a parody of different styles from the early Renaissance to the 1960s in a manner for which he found example in Joyce's Ulysses. Primitive electronic devices were also deployed, but replaced in the revised version, Missa super L'homme armé (1971), by an actress declaiming the biblical narrative of Christ's betrayal by Judas.

Davies's profound sense of history was even more vividly displayed in Eight Songs for a Mad King (1969), where the crazed monologues of George III, as portrayed in Randolph Stow's text, were entrusted to the unique vocal skills of the actor Roy Hart. Again, there were allusions to appropriate music of the period, and the work became an archetype for an extended sequence of mainly theatrical evocations of hysteria or madness (fig.3), including the music for The Devils (1971), Miss Donnithorne's Maggot (1974) and the two-act ballet Caroline Mathilde (1990). In these and other works madness stems from some form of rejection of authority (frequently represented by a king figure) and entails self-destruction (often mockingly marked by a jester). Parody enabled Davies to confront these issues, and he became increasingly vehement in response to the distortion of religious

2. Act 1 scene iv of Peter Maxwell Davies's 'Taverner', Covent Garden, London, 1972; set design by Ralph Koltai, directed by Michael Geliot truth. It reached its peak in Vesalii icones, where a male dancer established links between the Stations of the Cross and a sequence of 16th-century anatomical drawings, the work concluding with a mock resurrection accompanied by a foxtrot. Foxtrots were equated with bad taste – a clear indication of falsity – and elsewhere in the work were associated with the same Victorian hymn tune as in both versions of Missa super L'homme armé.

3. Performance of Peter Maxwell Davies's 'Eight Songs for a Mad King' with Judith Pearce (flute) and William Pearson (the King), 1972

In St Thomas Wake (1969), foxtrots were allocated to a small ensemble functioning as a kind of concertino, interposing 1930s dance-band material into the main orchestral discourse. The Expressionist and foxtrot phases culminated, respectively, in the scores for two Ken Russell films: The Devils and The Boy Friend (1973). Though there were further examples of the former – Blind Man's Buff (1972), dealing with the question of identity, and Miss Donnithorne's Maggot, a counterpart to Eight Songs – they were generally less hysterical than hitherto. Indeed, the more contemplative movements of Vesalii icones had already foreshadowed the style Davies was to develop in Orkney, while the 'motet for orchestra' Worldes Blis (1966–9) prefigured the slowly unfolding landscape he was to discover on Hoy. It also defined some structural and technical features subsequently developed in Hymn to St Magnus (1972).

Hence a strong element of continuity was established at the technical level, and Davies's propensity for creating series of works was encouraged by the writings of George Mackay Brown. His settings of Mackay Brown texts exemplify the extent to which his output reflects extra-musical influences. Beginning with From Stone to Thorn (1971), he rapidly discovered a compositional equivalent to Mackay Brown's style, and identified with two of the author's archetypal characters: the historical Magnus Erlendson, patron saint of Orkney, and the mythological Storm Kolson, also known as the Blind Fiddler. These characters were associated with ritual aspects of Orkney life, particularly during the medieval era, when religious observance and folklore were integral features of daily experience. Davies was thus able to extend the religious symbolism of the earlier works into a different perspective, so that some elements of Taverner, particularly the political dimension, recur in The Martyrdom of St Magnus, based on Mackay Brown's novel Magnus. At the same time, The Blind Fiddler (1976) was the great peak in a sequence of song cycles and can be regarded as the counterpart of the chamber opera. Then and later, Mackay Brown's influence reached beyond scores directly associated with his texts.

Hymn to St Magnus incorporates a 12th-century monody commemorating St Magnus into complex isorhythmic structures, employing procedures previously developed in Worldes Blis, and expanding a structural outline originally adumbrated in the String Quartet. Medieval and Renaissance compositional techniques were also combined with Classical sonata form to create a work of symphonic proportions. In the orchestral song cycle Stone Litany (1973) Davies achieved even greater flexibility, together with a wider range of expression, by creating sonic evocations of landscapes and seascapes to function as commentaries on the settings of Runic inscriptions found in the Viking burial chamber of Maeshowe.

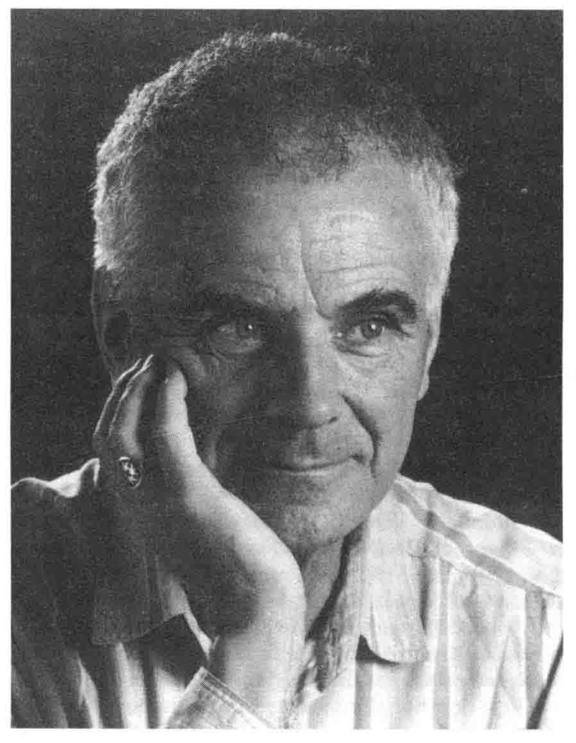
These two works, Hymn to St Magnus and Stone Litany, established the basis for the series of symphonies on which Davies embarked in the mid-1970s, and together with the Mackay Brown settings demonstrated the extent of the composer's identification with Orkney. Davies's compositions gained a sense of place, and the introduction of magic squares to control transformation processes over long time-spans encouraged stylistic consistency. Ave maris stella (1975) was the first major work to be based entirely on a magic square, the choice being determined by symbolic as well as technical considerations. The magic square of the Moon corresponded to the plainsong text, praising Our Lady of the Sea, and in order to establish a symbolic link with the character of Blind Mary, who plays a crucial role in The Martyrdom of St Magnus, Davies employed the same square in the chamber opera, but in a different formulation. Its 9 × 9 grid is reflected in the fact that both works have nine distinct sections; equally important was the fact that in the opera Davies devised pathways through the square, corresponding to the significance of the weaving motif in the novel.

By reworking precompositional material Davies forged links between works in different genres, so that Ave maris stella infiltrated the slow movement of the First Symphony as that work evolved from a single movement, provisionally called Black Pentecost (a title later re-used), into a four-movement structure.

The First Symphony (1975–6) crowned several years' work, and each subsequent symphony has also emerged as the culmination of a cluster of compositions: the only difference is that Symphonies nos.2–6 were conceived as such from the outset. The First Symphony also laid the groundplan that was developed in nos.2 and 3, one that was decisively influenced by Sibelius. Besides the impact of Sibelius's Fifth Symphony on the second and fourth movements of Davies's First, the complete cycle of Sibelius's symphonies suggested an alternative to the Austro-German symphonic tradition. They embodied, like the writings of Mackay Brown, a Nordic sensibility and made use of transformation processes rather than conventional developmental procedures. These processes were associated with pitch material, intervallic contours and durational values, as well as larger structure. Their influence could extend over the entire work, or over single movements or local events. Contrast was achieved by alternating different types of material, often associated with different magic squares, but equally important was the tension generated by the use of these procedures in the context of allusions to traditional forms. Underpinning the symphonies has been an attempt to achieve a balance between the Austro-German and Nordic traditions, with Mahler's example remaining as potent an influence as that of Sibelius.

Above all, the symphonies dramatize the problem of creating an extended discourse without resorting to conventional tonality. Though Davies modified the unbridled Expressionism that had characterized his output during the later 1960s, he remained committed to the principles of Schoenberg, and to techniques derived from early music. By emphasizing the modal aspects of the latter, he developed a harmonic language in which tonal centres could assume the functions of tonic and dominant within a non-tonal context. Primary importance was assigned to the interval of the tritone, and thus the first three symphonies, as well as several related works, were based on formulations revolving around the tritone B–F and concentrating on intervals that have a minor 3rd or diminished 7th relationship. The first three symphonies also had extra-musical associations: for example, where no.1 was concerned with landscape, no.2 was the fruition of a sequence of scores dominated by seascapes, or inspired by texts evoking small island communities. In Westerlings (1976–7), for chamber choir, Davies interspersed settings of four Mackay Brown poems describing the Vikings' discovery of and settlement in Orkney with interludes evoking the sea. Similar precompositional material was used in A Mirror of Whitening Light (1976–7), a chamber symphony alluding, especially through the prominence of pitched percussion, to the reflected light in the bay below the composer's croft. By combining the magic square of Mercury with the plainsong Veni sancte Spiritus, he was able to symbolize the work's transformation process in terms of both alchemical and spiritual purification; a religious dimension was more obviously present in Le jongleur de Notre Dame (1978) and the three-act ballet Salome (1978). However, it was a further sequence of Orkney-inspired works, including three based on Mackay Brown texts, which led to the Second Symphony.

The Two Fiddlers (1978), derived from an Orcadian legend, satirized the notion of continuous progress by depicting an island community reduced to passivity by no longer having to work. This was also Davies's first stage work for young performers, and together with the pantomime opera Cinderella (1980) it inaugurated his extensive contribution to music education in Orkney. Solstice of Light (1979), for solo tenor, chorus and organ, written for the St Magnus Singers, outlined the various waves of settlers who have colonized the islands, while Black Pentecost (1979), a 'song-symphony' for soprano, bass-baritone and orchestra, dramatized the final chapter of the novel Greenvoe, describing the pollution and ultimate destruction of a small island by a military project. This work can also be regarded as an indication that the traditions of the conventional novel and the symphony tend to be sustained by similar communities. Together with The Yellow Cake Revue (1980) for reciter-singer and piano, for which Davies produced his own satirical text, Black Pentecost was written in support of a campaign to prevent uranium mining in Orkney. It included elements of parody and Expressionism, but presented in a style whose objectivity distinguished it from the intensely personal output of the later 1960s. The same approach was adopted in The Lighthouse (1979), Davies's second chamber opera, which dealt with the unexplained disappearance of three lighthouse keepers. He wrote his own libretto in the manner of Mackay Brown, and by presenting the growing hysteria of the three keepers with a measure of detachment, enhanced the power of the drama.



The Second Symphony was more closely associated with Black Pentecost than The Lighthouse, but the depiction of turbulent seascapes reflected the drama of the opera. Davies's observation of different types of wave pattern provided the underlying metaphor of the symphony, and contrasting material was generated from two series of magic squares. The work also contained more explicit references to both standard symphonic forms and tonality than had the First Symphony. Davies reworked some of the pre-compositional material from it in the Piano Sonata (1981), and possibly the Brass Quintet (1981), but thereafter the character of his orchestral output changed substantially, in that he dispensed with pitched percussion as an integral element of the discourse. The change introduced a certain austerity, already foreshadowed in the relatively sombre Image, Reflection, Shadow for instrumental ensemble (1982) and first fully expressed in Into the Labyrinth (1983), a cantata for tenor and chamber orchestra to a text by Mackay Brown. This piece contained echoes of Black Pentecost but also formed the centrepiece of a triptych, together with the Sinfonia concertante for single winds, timpani and strings (1982) – written for the Academy of St Martin-in-the-Fields – and the slightly less severe Sinfonietta accademica for chamber orchestra (1983), which marked the beginning of Davies's long association with the Scottish Chamber Orchestra. That association prompted him to embark on a second orchestral repertory, for a Haydn-Mozart ensemble, alongside the larger scores for its 19th-century counterpart. His growing commitment to the Scottish Chamber Orchestra ultimately precipitated the demise of the Fires of London, but not before he had completed a further major work, The No.11 Bus, for mime, singers, dancers and instrumental ensemble (1984).

The Third Symphony was more clearly indebted to the Austro-German tradition than its predecessors, with many commentators citing Mahler's Ninth as the model for its overall structure, as well as for significant features of individual movements. It has also been suggested that here Davies reaffirmed his allegiance to a modernist sensibility, as originally defined by Schoenberg. Reference is again made to the standard symphonic movements, but the unifying function of the transformation processes is underlined by Davies's statement that each movement explored the same material from a different perspective. He also mentioned Brunelleschi's church architecture as a significant influence on the total design, relating it to the proportions of natural phenomena. The Symphony no.3 summed up Davies's orchestral output of the 1970s and early 1980s. Apart from the Violin Concerto (1985), the Trumpet Concerto (1988) and the two-act ballet Caroline Mathilde (1990), his orchestral scores of the next ten years were conceived for the Scottish Chamber Orchestra. Most attention was devoted to the Strathclyde Concerto project. This project consisted of six single concertos, two double concertos, a concerto grosso for six woodwinds and strings, and a concluding Concerto for Orchestra. The fact that the finale of the latter summarized the main features of the previous concertos illustrated the extent to which the whole was planned as a series. Nevertheless, the individual concertos represented a variety of responses to the form, frequently reflecting the composer's wider preoccupations.

Davies's scores of the late 1980s and early 90s were often characterized by a re-examination, from a relatively tranquil perspective, of compositional ideas from the 1960s, in conjunction with their underlying symbolism. The catalyst was the opera Resurrection (1987), in which he sought to recapture the style of his late 1960s scores. Prompted by the destructive effects of rampant commercialism, the work was originally conceived in 1963. In the final version, the mock television advertisements were developed from The Two Fiddlers, while the prologue-plus-single-act structure was indebted to The Lighthouse. However, the degree of detachment Davies had achieved also prevented the music expressing the ferocity suggested by the text, even if the opera was a powerful satire of establishment values, encapsulating Davies's familiar themes: various forms of authoritarianism, associated with different political or religious dogmas, distortions of reality, questions of identity. Symbolism, alchemical and Christian, was integral to the imagery, and the music incorporated a variety of styles, including a crucial role for a rock group. Hence there were allusions not only to Davies's preoccupations with foxtrots but also to the popular style he had begun to cultivate in several shorter orchestral scores, beginning with An Orkney Wedding with Sunrise (1985).

Thereafter Davies largely abandoned vocal composition until the mid-1990s, except for a series of music-theatre pieces for young children (1989–91). Like the Strathclyde Concertos, the Fourth Symphony (1989) was written for the Scottish Chamber Orchestra, and in consequence gained a particular character. It resembled the previous symphonies only in terms of its time-scale, and here the usual four movements were absorbed into a single span. As such, it was an enlargement of Schoenberg's Kammersymphonie op.9, and recalled Davies's single-movement orchestral works of the 1960s. Caroline Mathilde also contained echoes of the 1960s in its depiction of a royal court where madness prevailed, while the source material of the Strathclyde Concerto no.5 (1991), Joan Albert Ban's Vanitas, embodied the same sentiments as the Worldes Blis monody. The multi-layered structure of the Fifth Symphony (1994), reflected similar preoccupations to those of St Thomas Wake or Vesalii icones, and in the Sixth Symphony (1996), Davies returned to the three-movement structure, with slow finale, of the Second Taverner Fantasia. The pastiche national anthems in Time and the Raven (1995) can be traced back to earlier works involving the use of parody, of which there are echoes in The Beltane Fire (1995), where a folk group reflects the dance band of St Thomas Wake. However, within its symphonic framework The Beltane Fire also developed the idea of creating a musical narrative, analogous to the outlines of a Mackay Brown short story. Finally, the two-act structure and political dimension of The Doctor of Myddfai (1995) formed a parallel with Taverner, though The Doctor of Myddfai was based on a vision of the future, rather than on historical sources. This was also Davies's first operatic collaboration with a librettist. At the same time, the cantata The Three Kings (1995) and the oratorio Job (1997) were significant developments as regards large-scale choral-orchestral composition, besides being manifestations of a religious sensibility that has pervaded Davies's output, whether on the material level represented by his extensive use of plainchant (with attendant verbal significations) or in his frequent choice of subject matter.

4. Peter Maxwell Davies, 1998

Davies has been remarkably consistent in his exploration of certain themes – a tendency encouraged by his encounter with the writings of Mackay Brown. He has also maintained a firm allegiance to European modernism, which he absorbed at the outset of his career, and which has provided the aesthetic as well as the technical basis of his output, notwithstanding various stylistic modifications. His preoccupations with music education, early music and various kinds of popular music from different eras have been equally constant factors. After he settled in Orkney, the process of reintegrating the various facets of his style gave rise to many works designed for the local community, as well as attempts to incorporate popular elements into larger works. Above all, the Orkney works exemplify an increased emphasis on the harmonic dimension, as he has sought to create a discourse which listeners can follow rather as they follow tonal music. While exhibiting Classical and Romantic traits, he has been able, through his harmony, to avoid any suggestion of neo-classicism or neo-romanticism. The language he has forged occasionally suggests an element of postmodernism in the more popular scores, but in his larger creations, the individuality of his approach to the renewal of traditional forms is readily apparent. Critical opinion generally regards the works of the 1960s and 1970s as superior to their successors, yet the stability of the Orkney community has enabled Davies to pursue the vision he formed in his early scores, and from which he was diverted during the most turbulent phase of his career.

WORKS

F6 indicates the Fires of London instrumentation of fl, cl, pf, perc, vn, vc, with whatever doublings; F5 indicates a quintet drawn from this group

DRAMATIC

Richard II (incid music, W. Shakespeare), 1961, London, Old Vic, 1962, unpubd

The Pagoda Fugue (incid music, radio play), 1965, unpubd, London, BBC, 1965

Revelation and Fall (monodrama, G. Trakl), S, 16 insts, 1965–6, rev. 1980, M. Thomas, Pierrot Players, cond. Davies, London, Conway Hall, 26 Feb 1968

Notre Dame des Fleurs (mini-op, Davies [in Fr.]), S, Mez, Ct, F6, 1966 cond. Davies, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 17 March 1973

L'homme armé [after 15th-century mass] (Bible: Luke xxii [in Lat.]), F6, tape, 1968, cond. Davies, London, Conway Hall, 26 Feb 1968; rev. as Missa super L'homme armé, spkr, F6, 1971, cond. Davies, Perugia, 28 Sept 1971

Taverner (op, 2, Davies, after 16th-century documents), 1962–8, partly reconstructed 1970, cond. E. Downes, London, CG, 12 July 1972

Eight Songs for a Mad King (R. Stow), Bar/B, F6, 1969 cond. Davies, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 22 April 1969

Vesalii icones, male dancer, vc, F5, 1969, cond. Davies, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 9 Dec 1969

Nocturnal Dances (ballet), S, F6, 1970, London Contemporary Dance Theatre, London, The Place, 31 May 1970; concert version, cond. Davies, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 19 Sept 1970, unpubd

The Devils (film score, dir. K. Russell), 1971; concert suite, cond. Davies, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 11 Dec 1971

The Boy Friend [after S. Wilson] (film score, dir. Russell), 1971; concert suite, S, light music orch, cond. Davies, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 11 Dec 1971

Blind Man's Buff (masque, Davies, after nursery rhymes and G. Büchner: Leonce und Lena), S, Mez, mime, orch, 1972, cond. Boulez, London, Round House, 29 May 1972; alternative version, Mez, mime, F6, gui, 1972, cond. Davies, The Place, 24 Nov 1972

Miss Donnithorne's Maggot (Stow), S, F6, 1974, cond. Davies, Adelaide, 9 March 1974

Der heisse Ofen (comic opera), 1975, collab. Henze and others, Kassel, Staatstheater, 18 March 1989, unpubd

The Martyrdom of St Magnus (chbr op, 1, Davies, after G. Mackay Brown: Magnus), Mez, T, 2 Bar, B, 10 insts, 1976, cond. Davies, Kirkwall, St Magnus Cathedral, 18 June 1977

Le jongleur de Notre Dame (masque, 1, Davies), Bar, mime, F6, children's band (wind, perc), 1978, cond. Davies, Stromness, 18 June 1978

Salome (ballet, 2, F. Flindt), 1978, cond. J. Fürst, Copenhagen, 10 Nov 1978

The Lighthouse (chbr op, prol, 1, Davies), T, Bar, B, 12 insts, 1979, cond. Dufallo, Edinburgh, 2 Sept 1980

The Medium (monodrama, Davies), Mez, Thomas, Kirkwall, 21 June 1981

The Well (incid music, Mackay Brown), vv, ens, 1981, cond. Davies, Kirkwall, 20 June 1981, unpubd

Island of the Saints (incid music, Mackay Brown), ens, 1983, Kirkwall, 18 June 1983, unpubd

The No.11 Bus (Davies), Mez, T, Bar, 2 dancers, mime, F5, 1984, cond. Bauer-Schenk, London, Queen Elizabeth Hall, 20 March 1984

Resurrection (op, prol, 1, Davies), Mez, Ct, 2 T, 2 Bar, B, 5 dancers, orch, Salvation Army Band, rock group, elec vocal qt, 1987, cond. Drewanz, Darmstadt, Staatstheater, 18 Sept 1988

Caroline Mathilde (ballet, 2, Flindt), orch, 1990, cond. Lehtinen, Copenhagen, Royal, 14 March 1991

The Road to Colonnus (incid music, Mackay Brown), ens, 1991, Kirkwall, 21 June 1991, unpubd

Witch (incid music, Mackay Brown), ens, 1991, Kirkwall, 21 June 1991, unpubd

The Doctor of Myddfai (op, 2, D. Pountney), 1995, cond. Armstrong, Llandudno, North Wales, 20 July 1996

INSTRUMENTAL

Full orch: Prolation, 1958; First Fantasia on an In Nomine of John Taverner, 1962; Second Fantasia on John Taverner's In Nomine, 1964; Worldes Blis: Motet for Orch, 1966–9; St Thomas Wake: Foxtrot for Orch on a Pavan by John Bull, dance band, orch, 1969; Walton Tribute, 1972, unpubd; Sym. no.1, 1975–6; Salome, suite, 1979; Sym. no.2, 1980; Sym. no.3, 1984; An Orkney Wedding with Sunrise, bagpipes, orch, 1985; Vn Conc., 1985

Jimmack the Postie, 1986; Tpt Conc., 1988; Ojai Festival Ov., 1991; Caroline Mathilde, suite from Act 1, 1991; Cross Lane Fair, Northumbrian pipes, boodhran, orch, 1994; Sym. no.5, 1994; The Beltane Fire, choreographic poem, 1995; Time and the Raven, 1995; Sym. no.6, 1996; Throstle's Nest Junction, 1996; Mavis in Las Vegas, 1997; Orkney Saga I, 1997 [orig. entitled Sails in St Magnus I]; Pic Conc., 1997; Pf Conc., 1997

Chbr orch: Sinfonia, 1962; A Mirror of Whitening Light, 1976–7; Sinfonia concertante, 1982; Sinfonietta accademica, 1983; Strathclyde Conc. no.1, ob, orch, 1986; Strathclyde Conc. no.2, vc, orch, 1987; Strathclyde Conc. no.3, hn, tpt, orch, 1989; Sym. no.4, 1989; Threnody on a Plainsong for Michael Vyner, 1989; Strathclyde Conc. no.4, cl, orch, 1990; Strathclyde Conc. no.5, vn, va, str, 1991

Strathclyde Conc. no.6, fl, orch, 1991; Vanitas, str, 1991 [arr. of work by Ban]; Sir Charles His Pavan, 1992; Strathclyde Conc.

no.7, db, orch, 1992; A Spell for Green Corn: The MacDonald Dances, vn, orch, 1993; Strathclyde Conc. no.8, bn, orch, 1993; Carolísima, serenade, 1994; Strathclyde Conc. no.9, 6 ww, str, 1994; Strathclyde Conc. no.10, conc. for orch, 1996

8 or more insts: Octet, ww, 1954, unpubd; St Michael: Sonata for 17 Wind, 1957; Ricercar and Doubles on 'To Many a Well' [after 15th-century carol], wind qnt, hpd, va, vc, 1959; Shakespeare Music, 11 insts, 1964; 7 In Nomine, wind qnt, hp, str qt, 1963–5 [incl. arrs. of Taverner, Bull, Blitheman]; Canzona [arr. of G. Gabrieli: Canzon septimi toni octo vocum], wind, str, 1969; Eram quasi agnus, 7 wind, handbells, hp, 1969; Points and Dances, 10 insts, 1970 [from Taverner]; 3 Studies, 11 perc, 1975; Mishkenot, 9 insts, 1988; Thaw, 9 insts, 1995

Fires ens: Antechrist, pic, b cl, 3 perc, vn, vc, 1967; Stedman Caters, F6, 1968; Fantasia on a Ground and 2 Pavans, 1v ad lib, F6, 1968 [after Purcell]; Veni Sancte Spiritus, F6, 1972 [arr. of Dunstaple with orig. section]; Prelude and Fugue, c♯, F6, 1972 [arr. from Bach: '48', i]; Four Quartets (incid music, T.S. Eliot), F6, 1972, unpubd [after Machaut: Ma fin est mon commencement]; Fantasia on One Note, F6, 1973 [after Purcell]; Renaissance Scottish Dances [arr.], F5, gui, 1973; Si quis diligit me, F6, 1973 [arr. of D. Peebles, F. Heagy]; All Sons of Adam, F6, 1974 [arr. of 16th-century Scottish motet]

Ps cxxiv, F6, 1974 [after Peebles, J. Fethy, 16th-century anon.]; Nach Bergamo – Zur Heimat, F6, 1974, unpubd; Prelude and Fugue, C♯, F6, 1974 [arr. from Bach: '48', i]; Ave maris stella, F6, 1975; Kinloche His Fantassie [arr.], F6, 1976; Our Father Which in Heaven Art [arr.], F6, 1977; Runes from a Holy Island, F6, 1977; Dances from The Two Fiddlers, vn, F5, 1978; The Bairns of Brugh, F6, 1981; Image, Reflection, Shadow, F6, 1982; Unbroken Circle, F5, 1984; Farewell – A Fancye, F6, 1986 [arr. of Dowland]

Other works for 3–7 insts: Qt Movt, str qt, 1952; Burchiello, perc, 1955, unpubd; Alma Redemptoris mater, fl, ob, 2 cl, bn, hn, 1957; Sextet, fl, cl, b cl, pf, vn, vc, 1958, rev. as Septet, F6, gui, 1972, unpubd; Str Qt, 1961 [after Ave Maria: Hail Blessed Flower]; Canon in memoriam I.S., fl, cl, hp, str qt, 1971; Brass Qnt, 1981; 4 Voluntaries, brass qnt, 1982, arr. brass band, 1983 [arrs. of Tallis]; 2 Motets, brass qnt, 1982, arr. brass band, 1982 [arrs. of Gesualdo]; March: The Pole Star, brass qnt, 1982, arr. brass band, 1982; Birthday Music for John, fl, va, vc, 1983

2 insts: Sonata, D tpt, pf, 1955; Sonata, cl, pf, 1956; Hymnos (Hymnos hesperinos), cl, pf, 1967; Stedman Doubles, cl, perc, 1955, rev. 1968; Sonatina, vn, cimb, 1984; 2 Dances from Caroline Mathilde, fl, hp, 1993

Org: Fantasia on O magnum mysterium, 1960; 3 Voluntaries (Preludes), 1976 [arr. of 16th-century Scottish]; Sonata, 1982; Reliqui domum meum, 1996

2 kbds: Epistrophe, 2 pf, 1968, unpubd; 4 Lessons, 1978

Pf: Sonata, 1954, unpubd; 5 Pieces, 1955–6; 5 Little Pieces, 1960–64; Sub tuam protectionem, 1969 [arr. of Dunstaple]; Ut re mi, 1969; Stevie's Ferry to Hoy, 1975; Farewell to Stromness, Yesnaby Ground, 1980 [from The Yellow Cake Revue]; Sonata, 1981; 6 Secret Songs, 1993

Other solo instr: Solita, fl, musical box ad lib, 1969, rev. 1972; Turris campanarum sonantium (Bell Tower), perc, 1971, unpubd; Lullaby for Illian Rainbow, gui, 1972; The Seven Brightnesses, cl, 1975; The Door of the Sun, va, 1975; The Kestrel Paced Around the Sun, fl, 1975; Nocturne, a fl, 1979; Hill Runes, gui, 1981; Sea Eagle, hn, 1982; Sonata, gui, 1984; First Grace of Light, ob, 1991

CHORAL

Five Motets (Lat.), S, A, T, B, double chorus, 1959, rev. with 16 insts, 1962
Veni Sancte Spiritus, S, A, B, chorus, chbr orch, 1963
Ecce manus tradentis (Bible: Luke xxii), S, A, T, B, chorus, 10 insts, 1965
Canon ad honorem I.S. (Bible: Ezekiel i), SATBBB, 1967, unpubd
Tenebrae super Gesualdo, SATB, F6, 1972, also solo version
Ave Rex angelorum, SATB, 1976
Westerlings (Mackay Brown, Norn Paternoster), SATB, 1976–7
Solstice of Light (Mackay Brown), T, SATB, org, 1979
Lullabye for Lucy (Mackay Brown), SATB, 1981
One Star at Last (Mackay Brown), SATB, 1984
House of Winter (Mackay Brown), AATBBB soloists/chorus, 1986
Sea Runes (Mackay Brown), AATBBB soloists/chorus, 1986
Hallelujah! The Lord God Almichtie (early Scottish), SA soloists/semichorus, SATB, org, 1989
Apple Basket: Apple Blossom (Mackay Brown), SATB, 1990
Hymn to the Word of God (Byzantine), 2 T, SATB, 1990
Corpus Christi, with Cat and Mouse (R. Hill: Commonplace Book), SATB, 1993
A Hoy Calendar (Mackay Brown), SATB, 1994
Invocation to Mercurius, SATB, crotales, 1994
The Three Kings (Mackay Brown), S, Mez, T, Bar, SATB, orch, 1995
Job (Bible), S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, 1997

OTHER VOCAL

Leopardi Fragments (Frammenti di Leopardi) (G. Leopardi), S, A, 8 insts, 1961
Songs to Words by Dante, Bar, small orch, 1967, unpubd
Epitaph (G. Büchner, Novalis, W. von der Vogelweide), S, fl, pf, handbells, *c*1967, lost
Also hat Gott die Welt geliebet, S, fl, vn, vc, org + cel, 1970 [arr. of Buxtehude with orig. interlude]
From Stone to Thorn (Mackay Brown), Mez, cl/basset cl, gui, hpd, perc, 1971
Hoquetus David, S, ens, 1971 [arr. of Machaut], unpubd
Fool's Fanfare (W. Shakespeare), spkr, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, ukelele + mand, perc, 1972
Tenebrae super Gesualdo, Mez, F6, gui, 1972, also choral version
Hymn to St Magnus (Lat.), Mez, F6, 1972 [after 12th-century Orcadian hymn]
Fiddlers at the Wedding (Mackay Brown), Mez, a fl, mand, gui, perc, 1973
Stone Litany: Runes from a House of the Dead (Norn), Mez, orch, 1973
Dark Angels (Mackay Brown), S, gui, 1974
My Lady Lothian's Lilt, Mez, F5, 1975
The Blind Fiddler (Mackay Brown), Mez, F6, gui, 1976
Anakreontika (Gk.), Mez, a fl, perc, hpd, vc, 1976
Black Pentecost (Mackay Brown), Mez, Bar, orch, 1979
The Yellow Cake Revue (Davies), 1v, pf, 1980
Into the Labyrinth (Mackay Brown), T, orch, 1983
Agnus Dei, 2 S, va, vc, 1984
Excuse Me (arr. Dibdin), Mez, F6, 1986
Winterfold (Mackay Brown), Mez, F6, gui, 1986
Tractus clausum et reconditum, Mez, gui, 1990, unpubd
Caroline Mathilde, suite from Act 2, SA soloists/small chorus, orch, 1992
A Birthday Card for Hans, Mez, ens, 1996

MUSIC FOR YOUNG PERFORMERS

Stage: The Two Fiddlers (children's op, 2, Davies, after Mackay Brown), 1978; Cinderella (pantomime-op, 2, Davies), 1980; The Rainbow (Davies), 1981; The Great Bank Robbery (Davies), 1989; Dinosaur at Large (Davies), 1989; Jupiter Landing (Davies), 1989; Dangerous Errand (Davies), 1990; The Spider's Revenge (Davies), 1991

School orch: Pavan and Galliard, 1959, unpubd; 5 Canons, 1959, unpubd; 5 Klee Pictures, 1960, rev. 1976; 3 Dances of William Byrd, *c*1960; 5 Voluntaries, *c*1960 [arrs. of Croft, Clarke, Attaignant, L. Couperin]; many other unpubd arrs., 1959–62; Chat Moss, 1993

Vocal-inst: O magnum mysterium (Eng. medieval), SATB, ens, org, 1960; Vespers of 1610, chorus, school orch, 1961, unpubd [arr. of Monteverdi]; Te lucis ante terminum, SATB, ens, 1961; The Shepherd's Calendar (Eng. medieval), Tr, SATB, ens, 1965; Kirkwall Shopping Songs (Davies), 1979; Songs of Hoy (Davies), 1981; First Ferry to Hoy (Davies), SATB, recs, perc, ens, 1985; The Peatcutters (Davies), SATB, brass band, 1985; 6 Songs for St Andrews (Davies), 1988; A Selkie Tale (Davies), 1992; The Turn of the Tide, with professional orch, 1992; 7 Summer Songs, 1993

Choral carols: 4 Carols from O magnum mysterium, SATB, 1960; 4 Carols, SATB, 1961–2; 5 Carols, SSA, 1966; Shepherds of Hoy (Mackay Brown), 1993

Other choral: Ave Maria: Hail Blessed Flower (Eng. medieval), SATB, 1961; The Lord's Prayer, SATB, 1962; Ave plena gracia, S, A, T, SATB, org ad lib, 1965; Shall I Die for Mannis Sake? (Eng. medieval), SA, pf, 1965; 7 Songs Home (Davies), unacc., 1981

Other inst: A Welcome to Orkney, wind qnt, 2 str qts, db, 1980; Sonatina, tpt, 1981

MSS in GB-Lbl

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Chester, Schott

WRITINGS

An Introduction to Indian Music (diss., U. of Manchester, 1956)
'The Young British Composer', The Score, no.16 (1956), 84–5

'Problems of a British Composer Today', The Listener, lxii (1959), 563–4
'Composing Music for School Use', Making Music, no.46 (1961), 7–8
'Music Composition for Children', Music in Education, ed. W. Grant (London, 1963), 108–24
'The Young Composer in America', Tempo, no.72 (1965), 2–6
'Where our Colleges Fail', Times Educational Supplement (10 Feb 1967)
'Sets or Series', The Listener (22 Feb 1968)
'Peter Maxwell Davies on Some of his Recent Work', The Listener (23 Jan 1969)
'Taverner: Synopsis and Documentation', Tempo, no.101 (1972), 4–11
'Pax Orcadiensis', Tempo, no.119 (1976–7), 20–22
'Symphony', Tempo, no.124 (1978), 2–5

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PRIMARY SOURCES

M. Schafer: British Composers in Interview (London, 1963), 173–82
L. Pinzauti: 'A colloquio con Peter Maxwell Davies', NRMI, vi (1972), 87–92
S. Walsh: 'Taverner', MT, cxiii (1972), 653–5 [interview with Davies]
'Safer Out than In: Peter Maxwell Davies in Conversation with Alison Hennegan', Gay News, no.168 (1978), 19–21
R. Bolley: 'Ancient and Modern', EMc, viii (1980), Oct. suppl., 3–5 [interview]
P. Griffiths: New Sounds, New Personalities: British Composers of the 1980s in Conversation (London, 1985)
G. Persche: Interview, Opernwelt, xxix (1988), 64–6
C. Bayliss: The Music of Sir Peter Maxwell Davies: an Annotated Catalogue (Beverley, 1991)
C.J. Smith: Peter Maxwell Davies: a Bio-Bibliography (Westport, CT, 1995)
R.E. McGregor: 'The Maxwell Davies Sketch Material in the British Library', Tempo, no.196 (1996), 9–19; no.197 (1996), 20–22

GENERAL CRITICAL STUDIES

R. Henderson: 'Peter Maxwell Davies', MT, cii (1961), 624–6
M. Chanan: 'Dialectics in Peter Maxwell Davies', Tempo, no.90 (1969), 12–22
B. Northcott: 'Peter Maxwell Davies', Music and Musicians, xvii/8 (1968–9), 36–40, 80–82
J. Kerman: 'Popish Ditties', Tempo, no.102 (1972), 20–24
K. Potter: 'The Music of Peter Maxwell Davies', Contact, no.4 (1972), 3–9
S. Pruslin: 'An Anatomy of Betrayal', Music and Musicians, xx/11 (1971–2), 28–30
B. Schiffer: 'Englische Orchester erteilen Auftrage an junge Komponisten', Melos, xxxix (1972), 302–6
B. Schlotel: 'Peter Maxwell Davies' Music for Young People', Music Teacher, lii (1973), 13–14
C. Ford: 'Om Peter Maxwell Davies', Nutida musik, xviii/1 (1974–5), 5
S. Arnold: 'Peter Maxwell Davies', British Music Now, ed. L. Foreman (London, 1975), 71–85
S. Pruslin: 'Returns and Departures: Recent Maxwell Davies', Tempo, no.113 (1975), p.22–8
H.W. Henze: Musik und Politik: Schriften und Gesprache 1955–1975 (Munich, 1976, enlarged 2/1984; Eng. trans., 1982) [incl. discussion of Ps xxiv, Missa super l'homme armé]
A. Porter: 'Peter Maxwell Davies: a Personal View', Keynote Magazine, iv (1980), 15–19
D. Biermann: 'German and English Music Educationalists: a Survey of their Philosophies', Music Teacher, lxi (1982), 12–13, 17
R. Jeutner: Peter Maxwell Davies: ein Komponistenporträt (Bonn, 1983)
J. Schneider: 'The Contemporary Guitar: Peter Maxwell Davies', Soundboard, x/1 (1983), 43–5
L. Davies: 'Maxwell Davies' Organ Music', MT, cxxv (1984), 525–7
K.A. Kleszynski: Peter Maxwell Davies' Instrumental Music for Young Performers (diss., Michigan State U., 1984)
J. Warnaby: 'Peter Maxwell Davies' Orchestral Music', Music and Musicians, (1984), Dec, 6–8
J. Warnaby: 'Peter Maxwell Davies's Educational Music: the Orkney Years', Music Teacher, lxiv (1985), 10–11
P. Griffiths: 'The Heat is On; Peter Maxwell Davies Creates Unique Theatre Pieces for the Fires of London', ON, l (1985–6), 14, 16–17
H. Lohner: 'Komponieren wider die Indifferenz: der englische Komponist Peter Maxwell Davies im Gespräch', NZM, cxlvii/2 (1986), 21–4
T. Walker: 'Sir Peter Maxwell Davies', Classical Guitar, vi (1987–8), no.4, pp.11–18; no.5, pp.19–22
M. Tumelty: 'Sir Peter Maxwell Davies and the Strathclyde Concertos', Scottish Chamber Orchestra Yearbook 1988, 33–5
S. Christiansen: 'Peter Maxwell Davies: en introduktion', DMt, lxv (1990), 39–40, 42–3
J.-P. Mathez: 'Sir Peter Maxwell Davies: l'écriture de feu', Brass Bulletin, no.76 (1991), 58–61, 63, 65
R.P. Morgan: Twentieth-Century Music: a History of Musical Style in Modern Europe and America (New York, 1991), 277–482 passim
B. Schlotel: 'Personalities in World Music Education, no.12: Peter Maxwell Davies', International Journal of Music Education, no.17 (1991), 43–7
J. Purser: Scotland's Music: a History of the Traditional and Classical Music of Scotland from the Earliest Times to the Present Day (Edinburgh, 1992), 267–8, 272, 274
J.C. and D.L. Crawford: Expressionism in Twentieth-Century Music (Bloomington, IN, 1993), 276, 278–9
E. Schwartz and D.Godfrey: Music since 1945: Issues, Materials and Literature (New York, 1993), 230–32, 244, 252, 442
O. Karolyi: Modern British Music: the Second British Musical Renaissance – from Elgar to P. Maxwell Davies (Cranbury, NJ, 1994), 104–129 passim
J. Salau: 'Uraufführung zum Jubiläum: zum 60. Geburtstag von Peter Maxwell Davies', Fono-Forum, xxxix (1994), 16, 18
M. Seabrook: Max: the Life and Music of Peter Maxwell Davies (London, 1994)
T. Rübenacker: 'Ein Komponist am Ende der Welt: Sir Peter Maxwell Davies', Stereoplay(1996), no.2, 136–8
R. Welten: '"I'm not Ill, I'm Nervous": Madness in the Music of Sir Peter Maxwell Davies', Tempo, no.196 (1996), 21–4
A. Whittall: 'Peter Maxwell Davies and the problem of Classicizing Modernism', Die klassizistische Moderne in der Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts, ed. H. Danuser (Basel, 1997), 143–51
A. Whittall: 'Cross-Currents and Convergencies: Britten, Maxwell Davies and the Sense of Place', Tempo, no.204 (1998), 5–11

GENERAL ANALYTICAL STUDIES

M.C. Preheim: The Choral Music of Peter Maxwell Davies (diss. U. of Cincinnati, 1972)
Tempo, no.124 (1978) [Maxwell Davies issue, incl.: S. Pruslin: 'Maxwell Davies's Symphony: an Introduction', 6–9; O. Knussen: 'Maxwell Davies's Five Klee Pictures', 17–21]
A.K. Flerlage: The Use of Pre-Existent Material in the Works of Peter Maxwell Davies and George Rochberg (diss., Northwestern U., 1978)
S. Pruslin, ed.: Peter Maxwell Davies: Studies from Two Decades, Tempo booklet, ii (London, 1979)
P. Griffiths: Peter Maxwell Davies (London, 1982)
W.L. Davies: Astudiaeth o waith Peter Maxwell Davies (o'r Sonata op.1 hyd Le Jongleur de Notre Dame, 1978) [A study of the work of Peter Maxwell Davies (from Sonata op.1 to Le Jongleur de Notre Dame)] (diss., U. of Wales, Aberystwyth, 1983)
D.M. Outwin: Transformation Processes and other Compositional Techniques in some Larger Works of Peter Maxwell Davies (diss., Council for National Awards, 1983)
C.A. Tongier: Pre-Existent Music in the Works of Peter Maxwell Davies (diss., U. of Kansas, 1983)
M. Miller: Vocal Music of Peter Maxwell Davies Based on the Poetry of George Mackay Brown (diss., Florida State U., 1984)
S. Pruslin: '"One if by Land, Two if by Sea": Maxwell Davies the Symphonist', Tempo, no.153 (1985), 2–6
D.L. Roberts: Techniques of Composition in the Music of Peter Maxwell Davies (diss., U. of Birmingham, 1986)
A. Whittall: 'The Theorist's Sense of History: Concepts of Contemporaneity in Composition and Analysis', JRMA, cxii (1987–8), 1–20
D.W. Cargile: Music by Sir Peter Maxwell Davies for the Guitar: an Analysis by Pitch Reduction of the Solo Works (diss., U. of Texas, El Paso, 1989)
J. Warnaby: The Music of Sir Peter Maxwell Davies based on the Writings of George Mackay Brown (diss., Open U., 1990)

P. Owens: 'Revelation and Fallacy: Observations on Compositional Technique in the Music of Peter Maxwell Davies', MAn, xiii (1994), 161–99
S. Sweeney-Turner: 'Resurrecting the Antechrist: Maxwell Davies and Parody – Dialectics or Deconstruction?', Tempo, no.191 (1994), 14–20
J. Warnaby: 'Maxwell Davies' Resurrection: Origins, Themes and Symbolism', ibid., 6–10
A. Whittall: 'The Bottom Line', MT, cxxxv (1994), 544–50
A. Whittall: 'Comparatively Complex: Birtwistle, Maxwell Davies and Modernist Analysis', MAn, xiii (1994), no.2, 139–59

INDIVIDUAL WORKS

PEM ('The Lighthouse', T. Siedhoff; 'Taverner', J. Liebscher)
A. Payne: 'First Performances', Tempo, no.70 (1964), 15–19 [on Veni Sancte Spiritus]
J.C.G. Waterhouse: 'Peter Maxwell Davies: Towards an Opera', Tempo, no.69 (1964), 18–25
R. Henderson: 'First Performances', Tempo, no.72 (1965), 15–18 [on Shakespeare Music]
A. Payne: 'Peter Maxwell Davies's Five Motets', Tempo, no.72 (1965), 7–11
S. Pruslin: 'Maxwell Davies's Second Taverner Fantasia', Tempo, no.73 (1965), 2–11
D. Peart: 'Peter Maxwell Davies: The Shepherd's Calendar', MMA, i (1966), 249–55
R. Smalley: 'Some Recent Works of Peter Maxwell Davies', Tempo, no.84 (1968), 2–5
J. Andrewes: 'Maxwell Davies's The Shepherds' Calendar', Tempo, no.87 (1968–9), 6–9
J. Harvey: 'Maxwell Davies's Songs for a Mad King', Tempo, no.89 (1969) 2–6
P. Lawson: 'First Performances', Tempo, no.90 (1969), 23–7 [on Worldes Blis]
T. Sutcliffe: 'The Origins of Vesalius', Music and Musicians, xviii/4 (1969–70), 24, 74
M. Taylor: 'First Performances', Tempo, no.92 (1970), 22–7 [on Vesalii icones]
T. Sutcliffe: 'A Question of Identity: Blind Man's Buff and Taverner', Music and Musicians, xx/10 (1971–2), 26–8
S. Arnold: 'The Music of Taverner', Tempo, no.101 (1972), 20–39
G. Josipovici: 'Taverner: Thoughts on the Libretto', Tempo, no.101 (1972), 12–19
S. Pruslin: 'The Triangular Space: Davies's Ave maris stella', Tempo, no.120 (1977), 16–22
D. Roberts: 'Maxwell Davies in Orkney: The Martyrdom of St Magnus', MT, cxviii (1977), 633–5
A. Clements: 'Maxwell Davies' New Symphony', Music and Musicians, xxvi/6 (1977–8), 24–6
G. McBurney: 'The Two Fiddlers', Tempo, no.126 (1978), 33–5
J.L. Montgomery: Dualism in Eight Songs for a Mad King by Peter Maxwell Davies (diss., Southern Illinois U., 1978)
D. Roberts: 'Reviews of Scores by Peter Maxwell Davies', Contact, no.19 (1978), 26–31; no.23 (1981), 26–9
D.B. Borwick: Peter Maxwell Davies' Antechrist: an Analysis (diss., U. of Rochester, 1979)
A.L. Silsbee: Peter Maxwell Davies' Stone Litany: Integration and Dynamic Process (diss., Cornell U., 1979)
J. Jacob: Peter Maxwell Davies' Vesalii Icones: Origins and Analysis (DMA diss., Peabody Institute, Johns Hopkins U., 1980)
P.J. Smith: 'Reports: Boston', MT, cxxii (1981), 259 [review of Symphony no.2]
C. Wintle: 'Tradition, Imagination and Self-Parody: Peter Maxwell Davies' Second Symphony, The Lighthouse', Times Literary Supplement (7 Aug 1981)
P. Griffiths: 'Peter Maxwell Davies' Piano Sonata', Tempo, no.140 (1982), 5–9
J. Warnaby: 'First Performances', Tempo, no.146 (1983), 55–7 [on Into the Labyrinth]
J. Warnaby: 'Westerlings: a Study in Symphonic Form', Tempo, no.147 (1983), 15–22
D. Harvey: 'Hill Runes', Tempo, no.149 (1984), 14–18
A. Whittall: Reviews of Revelation and Fall and The Yellow Cake Revue, ML, lxvi (1985), 191–3
J. Warnaby: 'Maxwell Davies's Violin Concerto in Orkney', Tempo, no.158 (1986), 46–7
A. Whittall: Reviews of Image, Reflection, Shadow for Chamber Ensemble, Into the Labyrinth and An Orkney Wedding, With Sunrise, ML, lxviii (1987), 306–8
W.E. von Lewinski: 'Die Uraufführung von Peter Maxwell Davies' Resurrection', Oper und Tanz, no.154 (1988), 13 only
A. Whittall: 'The Martyrdom of St Magnus', ML, lxix (1988), 136–7
A. Whittall: Reviews of Sinfonia Concertante and Symphony no.3, ML, lxix (1988), 137–9
A. Whittall: Review of Sinfonietta Accademica for Chamber Orchestra, ML, lxix (1988), 313–14
P. Griffiths: 'A Night at the Opera', ON, liii/6 (1988–9), 46–7 [on Resurrection]
S. Pruslin: 'Peter Maxwell Davies' Symphony No.4', MT, cxxx (1989), 520–23
J. Warnaby: 'First Performance', Tempo, no.171 (1989), 44–5 [on Symphony no.4]
C.J. Smith: 'Taverner', International Dictionary of Opera, ed. C.S. LaRue and L. Shrimpton (Detroit, 1993)
J. Beecroft: 'Maxwell Davies's 5th Symphony', Tempo, no.191 (1994), 2–5
J. Warnaby: 'The Beltane Fire and 5th Symphony', Tempo, no.194 (1995), 33–5
R. Dunnett: 'The Doctor of Myddfai', Tempo, no.198 (1996), 35–6
J. Meph: 'Past or Future', MT, cxxxvii (1996), 33 [review of Symphony no.6]
M. Tumelty: 'Maxwell Davies' 6th Symphony', Tempo, no.198 (1996), 36–7
A.K. McNamee: 'Elison and Structural Levels in Peter Maxwell Davies's Dark Angels', Music Theory in Concept and Practice, ed. J.M. Barker, D.W. Beach and J.W. Bernard (Rochester, NY, 1997), 481–520
N. Jones: '"Preliminary Workings": the Precompositional Process in Maxwell Davies's Third Symphony', Tempo, no.204 (1998), 14–22
N. Jones: 'Peter Maxwell Davies's "Submerged Cathedral": Architectural Principles in the Third Symphony', ML, lxxxi (2000), 402–32

JOHN WARNABY

Davies, Ryland (b Cwm, Ebbw Vale, 9 Feb 1943). Welsh tenor. He studied at the RMCM, where he made his début in 1964 with the WNO as Rossini's Almaviva. At Glyndebourne he sang in the chorus, making his solo début in 1965 as the Marschallin's Major-Domo (Rosenkavalier). Over the next 25 years he sang Nemorino with the Glyndebourne touring company, Belmonte, Lensky, Ferrando, Flamand (Capriccio), Tamino, Lysander, the Prince (The Love for Three Oranges) and Tichon (Kát'a Kabanová). In 1967 he sang Essex (Gloriana) at Sadler's Wells and in Lisbon. He made his Covent Garden début in 1969 as Hylas (Les Troyens), then sang Don Ottavio, Ernesto, Fenton, Enéas (Esclarmonde) and Ferrando, the role of his San Francisco (1970), Paris Opéra (1974) and Metropolitan (1975) débuts. He sang Cassio (Otello) at Salzburg (1970), Pelléas at Stuttgart (1979), Berlin (1984) and Hamburg, and Weber's Oberon at Montpellier (1987). He had a sweet-toned, lyrical voice and excellent diction, as demonstrated in his performance as Armand de Clerval in Massenet's Thérèse and in his recordings of Mozart (notably Idamantes with Colin Davis) and of Haydn's The Seasons. In the 1990s he sang a number of comprimario roles at Covent Garden and elsewhere, revealing a gift for deft and witty characterization.

ALAN BLYTH

Davies, Tudor (b Cymmer, Glam., 12 Nov 1892; d Penault, Mon., 2 April 1958). Welsh tenor. He studied first while working in the local coalmine, and later at the RCM, London, under Gustave Garcia. After touring in the USA and Canada he joined the British National Opera Company, making his Covent Garden début on the first night of the 1921 season as Rodolfo in La bohème, a role he repeated, opposite Melba, the following year. He created the part of Hugh the Drover in Vaughan Williams's opera at His Majesty's Theatre in 1924, and in 1925 sang in the first performance, at Manchester, of Holst's At the Boar's Head. With the Sadler's Wells Company (1931–41) and later the Carl Rosa (1941–6) he sang a wide range of roles until his retirement from opera in 1946. His voice came under strain, but in his prime, as gramophone records show, he sang with ringing, incisive tone and lively temperament. On record he played a prominent part in the Wagner-in-English series conducted by Albert Coates. (A.D. Hillier and J. Jarrett: 'Tudor Davies: a Biography and Discography', Record Advertiser, ii (1971–2), no.4, pp.2–21; no.5, pp.2–9)

J.B. STEANE

Davies, Sir (Henry) Walford (b Oswestry, Shropshire, 6 Sept 1869; d Wrington, Somerset, 11 March 1941). English organist, composer and educationist. He began his musical training in the choir of St George's Chapel, Windsor, where for five years he was pupil assistant to Walter Parratt. In 1890 a composition scholarship took him to the RCM. There he studied with both Parry and Stanford and in 1895 joined the staff as a teacher of counterpoint. During those years he drew attention as a church organist, first at St George's Kensington, later at St Anne's, Soho, and then at Christ Church, Hampstead. In 1898 he became organist and choirmaster at the Temple Church, a post he held with much distinction for 21 years. From 1903 to 1907 he was conductor of the Bach Choir and in 1918 was appointed director of music to the Royal Air Force; the march he wrote for the RAF (scored by Dyson) is now his best-known composition. His engaging, outgoing personality and flair for the spoken word made him much in demand as a lecturer and adjudicator.

With one exception Davies' early works are quite unknown. In addition to two (unpublished) string quartets and three piano quartets, they include orchestral works, in particular a Symphony in D (1894) (his published Symphony, in G, dates from 1911), an Overture in D minor (1897) and the possibly autobiographical Welshmen in London (1897). His setting of Browning's Prospice for baritone and string quartet (or, with its optional double bass part, with string orchestra) has been hailed by Banfield as an 'extraordinary work'. Its breadth of conception, its dramatic pioneering string quartet accompaniment and soaring melody give it a lasting power he found it hard to repeat.

Colles's list of Davies' published works is very extensive, and includes many smaller works including various collections of hymns and popular songs. But apart from a few church anthems, including his familiar setting of 'Let us Now Praise Famous Men', and the two celebrated occasional encores Solemn Melody and RAF March Past, there remains little basis in performance on which to assess his achievement as a composer. In the 40 years after 1960 only three of his choral works enjoyed a single hearing, and performance even of these is now in doubt owing to the reversion of the contract with his publisher. Yet these three works – the ebullient folksong cantata Three Jovial Huntsmen (1902), his most celebrated work, the 74-minute oratorio Everyman (1904) and the more conventional cantata Song of St Francis (1912) – all revealed attractive music of some personality. In its day Everyman followed Elgar's The Dream of Gerontius as a widely popular choral work, though Davies's revision in the mid-1930s remained almost unknown.

Though he never gave up composing, Davies came to recognize that his natural bent lay in other directions. From 1919 to 1926 he was professor of music at Aberystwyth, and sought to broaden Welsh musical horizons through the work of the Welsh National Council of Music, whose chairmanship he retained until his death. In 1924 he succeeded Bridge as Gresham Professor of Music in the University of London and in the same year made his first broadcast to schools. He also held the post of organist at St George's Chapel, Windsor (1927–32), and served in an advisory capacity at the BBC (1927–39). In 1922 he was knighted and on the death of Elgar (1934) became Master of the King's Musick. By then he was a familiar voice to a great many music lovers; his popular radio series 'Music and the Ordinary Listener' had begun in 1926, and his gift for revealing the substance of music, analytically but painlessly, had gained him a devoted audience. Something of that gift can be glimpsed in his book The Pursuit of Music (London, 1935). No less important were his innumerable broadcasts to schools and his instructive recordings of the 1920s for His Master's Voice: Melody Lectures (HMV C 1063 to 1701) and Twelve Talks on Melody (HMV C 1759 to 1767). His manuscripts are held at the RCM.

WRITINGS

Rhythm in Church (London, 1913)
'Music in Poetry', Proceedings of the Royal Institution, xxi (1915), 510–27
First Steps in Music: an Introduction to the Study and Teaching of Music (London, 1933)
A Four Years' Course of Music with Lesson Notes: for the Use of Music Teachers in Primary and Secondary Schools (London, 1933)
'Music Pure and Applied', Proceedings of the Royal Institution, xxvii (1933), 922–50 with H. Grace: Music and Worship (London, 1935)
The Pursuit of Music (London, 1935)
'One Aspect of English Music', Journal of the Royal Society of Arts, lxxxiv (1936), 756–73

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.C. Colles: Walford Davies: a Biography (London, 1942)
G. Cox: '"Changing the Face of School Music": Walford Davies, the Gramophone and the Radio', B J Music, xiv (1977), 45–55
S. Banfield: 'Narrative Song-Cycle and Dramatic Scena: Somervell and Walford Davies', Sensibility and English Song (Cambridge, 1985), 54–8
H. Brian: 'Walford Davies: a Feast of Good Things', 'Genius and Mystic', Havergal Brian on Music, ed. M. MacDonald, i (London, 1986), 247–51, 252–4
K. Shenton: 'A Forgotten Organist: Henry Walford Davies (1869–1941)', The Organ, lxxi (1991–2), 13–15
D.I. Allsobrook: Music for Wales: Walford Davies and the National Council of Wales 1918–1941 (Cardiff, 1992)

HUGH OTTAWAY/LEWIS FOREMAN

Davis [Davies]. Several musicians of this name were active in Dublin and London during the 18th century; usually no first name is given by which they may be identified. The following attempt to sort them out is based on the known facts and logical conjecture.

The earliest musician called Davis known to have been active in Dublin is John, a vicar-choral at St Patrick's Cathedral, 1672–*c*1675.

A Mrs Davis or Davies (fl 1726–32), probably a pupil of J.C. Pepusch, who sang in his benefit performance at Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, in 1726–7, went to Dublin in 1729 with Thomas Elrington of the Smock Alley Theatre; it may have been she who sang an Israelite in Esther and Eurilla in Acis and Galatea in Handel's company at the King's Theatre, London, in 1732.

A Mr Davis (fl 1735–45) was an organist, harpsichord player and composer in Dublin; he took part in Acis and Galatea at the Aungier Street Theatre in 1735, where there were 'dances between the acts composed by him'. He is last reported as selling tickets at his house for a concert by his wife and daughter. He was married to the singer Mrs Davis (fl 1730–51), née Clegg, sister of the violinist John Clegg and the singer Miss Clegg. She first appeared in December 1730 at Baily's Room, Dublin, under her maiden name, advertised as a pupil of Bononcini; in 1733 she sang at a benefit for her brother, and entered upon her main period of popularity as a singer. From 1742 until 1747, when she had an accident, she devoted much energy to the promotion of her daughter's career, and in 1745 sang at her daughter's London début at Hickford's Room. She is last mentioned as singing at a benefit for Marella in December 1751. This daughter, known as Miss Davis (b Dublin, *c*1736; d ?Dublin, after 1755), was a child prodigy harpsichord player, a singer and a composer, who made her début on 5 February 1743 at the age of six; she gave annual benefit concerts in Dublin up to 1750, including one where she sang Italian songs of her own composition. She later gave up harpsichord playing in public but continued to teach.

A different Mrs Davis sang in works by Arne at the Aungier Street Theatre, 1743–6; Richard Davis (or Davies) was a flautist, 1739–40.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveW (B. Boydell)
B. Boydell: A Dublin Musical Calendar 1700–1760 (Dublin, 1988)

BRIAN BOYDELL

Davis, Sir Andrew (Frank) (b Ashridge, Herts., 2 Feb 1944). English conductor. He studied at the RCM and at King's College, Cambridge, where he was an organ scholar. He then went to the Accademia di S Cecilia, Rome, to study conducting under Franco Ferrara. He took part in the Royal Liverpool PO's 1969 seminar for young British conductors, and in 1970 began a two-year engagement as associate conductor of the BBC Scottish SO. He has been principal guest conductor of the Royal Liverpool PO, 1974–7, music director of the Toronto SO, 1975–88, chief conductor of the BBC SO, 1988–2000, and music director of Glyndebourne Opera, 1989–2000 (his début at the house was in 1973 with Capriccio). He became music director of the Lyric Opera of Chicago in 2000. In these posts he has conducted a wide and eclectic repertory, stretching from Mozart to modern scores. At Glyndebourne his readings of Mozart, Rossini, Tchaikovsky, Janáček and Richard Strauss have been particularly admired. He conducted Hänsel und Gretel at the Metropolitan in 1996–7, returning the following year for Capriccio. On the concert platform his advocacy of British music from Elgar (notably the première and first recording of Anthony Payne's completion of the Third Symphony) to Tippett (especially The Mask of Time, which he has also recorded) and his direction of choral works on the largest scale have provoked admiration, as has his understanding of Shostakovich. Several of his most notable Glyndebourne performances have been recorded on video. Davis has appeared regularly at the Proms with the BBC SO, and has made many recordings with the orchestra, including acclaimed readings of symphonies by Elgar and Vaughan Williams. He is a conductor whose technical skill is enhanced by an inborn enthusiasm for and dedication to the task in hand that he is able to transfer to the forces before him. He was appointed CBE in 1992 and knighted in 1999.

ALAN BLYTH

Davis, Anthony (b Paterson, NJ, 20 Feb 1951). American composer. A graduate of Yale University, where he was the first Lustman Fellow, he gained international recognition in the 1970s as a virtuoso pianist and as the director of Episteme, a chamber ensemble specializing in improvisation. In 1992 Davis became Professor of Music in Afro-American Studies at Harvard, and in 1998 he assumed a full-time professorship at the University of California at San Diego; he has also held academic positions at Cornell and Yale. Best known as an operatic composer, Davis's works exemplify his aesthetic desire to create an authentic American operatic art form through the use of vernacular musical styles, as well as his attempt to break down the divisions between popular culture and serious art. His other work in the theatre includes his collaboration with the choreographer Ralph Lemon and his Broadway début, in 1993, as the composer for Tony Kushner's play Angels in America.

Davis's first opera, X: the Life and Times of Malcolm X, was developed at the American Music Theater Festival in Philadelphia and first performed in 1986 at the New York City Opera. Its stark and powerful libretto, by Thulani Davis, the composer's cousin, is based on a story by the composer's brother, Christopher Davis; in a series of fast-moving vignettes, it sketches the galvanic life and career of the American black activist Malcolm X. Featuring a dark, atonal palette, complex rhythmic patterns and poignant lyricism, X is stylistically typical of Davis's works. It is influenced by classical, popular and non-Western sources, including swing, scat, modal jazz and rap, which combine with the libretto's emulation of contemporaneous literary styles to re-create the sound of the era. Although the score includes some improvisatory passages, it is mainly constructed on traditional operatic lines. X was one of the first of an important new American genre: opera on a contemporary political subject. Davis's futuristic Under the Double Moon (1989, Opera Theater of St Louis), set to a libretto by the science-fiction writer Deborah Atherton, deals with human choice and change on the planet Undine. More intimate and lyrical than X, it draws musical inspiration from Balinese sources. The surrealistic Tania (1992, American Music Theater Festival) is loosely based on the 1974 abduction of American heiress Patricia Hearst. Its libretto by Michael-John LaChiusa explores the loss and destruction of identity and the ultimate search to regain it. The most jazz-orientated of Davis's operas, Tania provides a critique of contemporary American society and its dependence on political icons and media soundbites. In his non-linear fourth opera, Amistad (1997, Lyric Opera of Chicago), he and librettist Thulani Davis contemplate contradictions they believe implicit in the American ethic. Dramatizing the 1839 Amistad rebellion, a successful uprising of African captives on a ship bound for America, it also examines the emergence of the black American as an essential, ironic cultural entity. Notable for its evocative sea music and poignant choral writing, Amistad is arguably Davis's most sophisticated and musically diverse opera. Its score merges musical styles from the characters' cultures (Spanish, Anglo-American and African), satirizes American minstrel shows and portrays African gods and famous historical figures.

Davis's orchestral works, performed by the symphony orchestras of Chicago, New York, San Francisco and Pittsburgh, among others, share the angular musical style of his operas. The harmonies and textures of later orchestral works are less hard-edged, and at times evoke an elegaic mood (Jacob's Ladder) or an impressionistic atmosphere (Tales (Tails) of the Signifying Monkey). His chamber music is also in demand: Carnegie Hall commissioned his Violin Sonata for its centennial celebrations. In works such as Happy Valley Blues, Davis reveals his roots in jazz as well as a continued exploration of extended improvisation.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: X: the Life and Times of Malcolm X (op, 3, T. Davis, C. Davis, R. Levine), 1985–6, New York, 28 Sept 1986; Under the Double Moon (op, 2, D. Atherton), 1988–9, St Louis, 15 June 1989; Tania (op, 1, M.-J. LaChiusa), 1991, Philadelphia, 14 June 1992; Dance (ballet, R. Lemon), 1995, New York, 17 Nov 1995; Amistad (op, 2, T. Davis), 1996–7, Chicago, 29 Nov 1997

Orch: Wayang V, pf conc., 1985; Maps, vn conc., 1988; Notes from the Underground, 1988; Esu Variations, 1995; Jacob's Ladder, 1997; Tales (Tails) of the Signifying Monkey, 1998

Vocal: Lost Moon Sisters (D. DiPrima), S (vn, pf, perc)/(cl, b cl, bn, vn, vc, db, pf, perc), 1990; Voyage through Death to Life upon these Shores (R. Haydn), S, chorus, 1991; In this House of Blues (J. Ashbery), S, cl, pf, 1994

Chbr and solo inst: Wayang II, fl, trbn, vn, vc, db, pf, vib, mar, 1982; Middle Passage, pf, 1983; Litany of Sins, wind qnt, str qt, db, hp, 1991; Sonata, vn, pf, 1991; Happy Valley Blues, vn, gui, db, pf, 1995

Recorded interviews in US-NHob

Principal publisher: Schirmer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Rockwell: 'Malcolm X – Hero to Some, Racist to Others – is now the Stuff of Opera', New York Times (28 Sept 1986)

K.R. Schwarz: '. . . and an Opera from Outer Space . . .', New York Times (11 June 1989)

P. Kennicott: 'Symbionese Liberation Opera', Los Angeles Times (14 June 1992)

K.R. Schwarz: 'A Composer Between Two Worlds', New York Times (7 June 1992)

K.R. Schwarz: article in Anthony Davis (New York, 1996) [Schirmer catalogue]

J. Davidson: 'Slave Ship', ON, lxii/4 (1997–8), 38 only

MARY LOU HUMPHREY

Davis, Carl (b Brooklyn, NY, 28 Oct 1936). American composer and conductor. He attended the New England Conservatory of Music and Bard College, studying composition first with Paul Nordoff and Hugo Kauder, and later with Per Nørgård in Copenhagen, where he worked with the Royal Danish Ballet. Following the success of the off-Broadway revue Diversions (1958), of which he was co-author, it was presented at the Edinburgh Festival in 1961. Davis moved to England that year and wrote music for the satirical television programme 'That Was the Week that Was', which launched his career. A remarkably prolific composer, he is best known for his many scores for film and television (including commercials). His score for The French Lieutenant's Woman (1981) won both BAFTA and Ivor Novello awards. In 1980 he wrote a new score to accompany Abel Gance's silent film, Napoleon; this was the first of many full-length scores for silent films in which he assumes styles at once historically apt and yet still identifiably his work. These have contributed to an international revival of 'live' screenings of these classics and, through the Thames Silents series, in their television presentation. His music for television has also raised and enhanced the profile of the craft of scoring for the small screen.

Davis has also composed theatre music, working with the Royal Shakespeare Company and the National Theatre. His ballet scores include the commission for the Northern Ballet Theatre's A Simple Man (1988), on images from the works of the painter L.S. Lowry. Much of Davis's output reinvents and reinterprets existing musical styles, as in his use of themes by Tchaikovsky for Alice in Wonderland (1995) for English National Ballet. Other compositions include musicals, opera and orchestral works. To mark the 150th anniversary of the Royal Philharmonic Society he collaborated on Paul McCartney's Liverpool Oratorio (1991). As a conductor, his work has also been wide-ranging, encompassing the deliberately populist programming of the 'Summer Pops' concerts with the Royal Liverpool PO and, since 1990, a position as Principal Guest Conductor of the Munich SO. In 1983 he was made a Chevalier de l'ordre des arts et des lettres.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC WORKS

Paul McCartney's Liverpool Orat., S, A, T, B, chorus, boy's chorus, orch (1991) [collab. McCartney]

Ops: The Arrangement, 1967 [TV]; Orpheus in the Underground, 1976 [TV]; Peace, 1978

Ballets: Dances of Love and Death, 1981; Fire and Ice, 1986; The Portrait of Dorian Gray, 1987; A Simple Man, 1987; Liaisons Amoureuses, 1988; Lippizaner, 1988; A Christmas Carol, 1992; Savoy Suite, 1993; Alice in Wonderland, 1995

Musicals: The Projector, 1971; Pilgrim, 1975; Cranford, 1976; Alice in Wonderland, 1978; The Wind in the Willows, 1985; Kip's War, 1987

Incid music for stage: Forty Years On, 1969; Habeas Corpus, 1973

ORCHESTRAL

Nar and orch: The Pigeon's Progress (1988); A Duck's Diary (1990); The Town Fox (1990)

Orch: Ov. on Australian Themes (1981); Vars on a Polish Beggar's Song, vn, orch (1983); Lines on London, sym. (1984); Cl Conc. (1984); Philharmonic Fanfare (1986); Glenlivet Firework Music (1987); Eine Kleine Bach Musik (1987); A Christmas Carol Suite (1993); Corsican Suite (1996); A Circle of Stones (1996)

With str orch: Fantasy, fl, str, hpd (1985); Beginners Please!, str, pf, perc (1987)

Several fanfares for brass ens; arrs for orch, wind and brass band of concert suites and themes from films

FILM AND TELEVISION

Silent film scores: Napoleon, 1980; The Crowd, 1981; Flesh and the Devil, 1982; The Wind, 1983; The Thief of Bagdad, 1984; The Big Parade, 1985; Greed, 1985; Ben-Hur, 1987; City Lights, 1988 [re-creation of score by C. Chaplin]; Intolerance, 1988; The Immigrant, 1991; The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, 1992; The Gold Rush, 1993 [re-creation of score by Chaplin]; The Phantom of the Opera, 1996

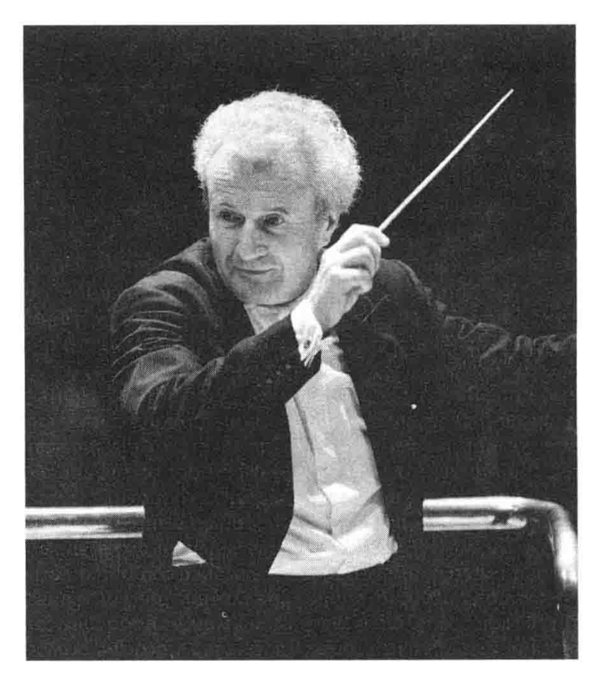
Film scores: The Other World of Winston Churchill, 1967; The Only Way, 1970; Up the Chastity Belt, 1971; Up Pompeii, 1971; The Lovers, 1973; The National Health, 1973; The French Lieutenant's Woman, 1981; Champions, 1984; The Rainbow, 1988; Scandal, 1988; Fragments of Isabella, 1989; Frankenstein Unbound, 1989; The Trial, 1993; Liberation, 1994; Widows' Peak, 1994; Anne Frank Remembered, 1995

TV scores: The World at War, 1972; The Naked Civil Servant, 1975; Treasure Island, 1977; The Mayor of Casterbridge, 1978; Our Mutual Friend, 1978; The Old Curiosity Shop, 1979; Fair Stood the Wind for France, 1980; Hollywood, 1980 [series]; Oppenheimer, 1980; Pickwick Papers, 1981; La Ronde, 1982; The Far Pavilions, 1983; Macbeth, 1983; The Tale of Beatrix Potter, 1983; The Unknown Chaplin, 1983; Silas Marner, the Weaver of Raveloe, 1985; Hotel du lac, 1986; The Accountant, 1989

The Secret Life of Ian Fleming, 1990; The Crucifer of Blood, 1991; The Diary of a Madman, 1991; A Year in Provence, 1992; Thatcher, the Downing Street Years, 1993; The Return of the Native, 1994; Pride and Prejudice, 1995; Cinema Europe, the

Other Hollywood, 1996; A Dance to the Music of Time, 1997; The Cold War, 1998; Coming Home, 1998; Real Women, 1998

Principal publisher: Faber Music



DAVID KERSHAW

Davis, Sir Colin (Rex) (b Weybridge, 25 Sept 1927). English conductor. He studied the clarinet under Frederick Thurston at the RCM and was a bandsman in the Household Cavalry. Unable to play the piano, he was barred from the RCM conducting class, but when a group of RCM players formed the Kalmar Orchestra Davis often conducted it. From that came the Chelsea Opera Group, whose Mozart performances of the early 1950s under Davis, in Oxford and Cambridge, impressed those who heard them for their brilliance, spirit and sensitivity. His inability to play the piano precluded an opera-house apprenticeship; after some lean years in odd jobs (coaching in Cambridge, conducting suburban choirs), he was appointed assistant conductor of the BBC Scottish Orchestra in 1957. He came to prominence at his Sadler's Wells début (Die Entführung, 1958), at an Edinburgh Festival concert the following year (Stravinsky's Danses concertantes and Mozart's 'Prague' Symphony), and later in 1959 at the Royal Festival Hall, taking over Don Giovanni from an ill Klemperer, when he met with critical acclaim. In 1960, at Glyndebourne, he conducted Die Zauberflöte when Beecham was ill. He was appointed chief conductor at Sadler's Wells Opera in 1959 and from 1961 to 1965 was the company's music director. There he excelled in Idomeneo, The Rake's Progress and Oedipus rex, and Fidelio; his Wagner, Verdi and Puccini were less successful. He introduced Weill's Mahagonny, and Pizzetti's Assassinio nella cattedrale to the British public and conducted the première of Bennett's The Mines of Sulphur (1965).

In 1965 Davis left Sadler's Wells and was increasingly in demand as a symphonic conductor, particularly with the LSO. In 1966 he made his Metropolitan Opera début, with Peter Grimes. From 1967 to 1971 he was principal conductor of the BBC SO; William Glock was controller of music, and it was an appointment in line with Glock's adventurous policy. In 1971 he conducted the Berlin PO with great success; in 1972 the Boston SO engaged him as principal guest conductor. He had made his Covent Garden début with the Royal Ballet in 1960 (La valse and The Fairy's Kiss) and with the opera company in 1965 (Le nozze di Figaro), and conducted there, among other works, productions of Les Troyens (1969) and of Tippett's The Midsummer Marriage (1970), and the première of Tippett's The Knot Garden (1970).

Davis succeeded Solti as music director of Covent Garden in 1971, and during his 15 years there he conducted more than 30 operas, most significantly works by Mozart, Berlioz and Verdi (notably Otello, with Vickers in the title part, and Falstaff), Peter Grimes (also with Vickers), and operas by Tippett (he gave the première of The Ice Break, a work dedicated to him, in 1977). He also conducted a complete Ring cycle, in Götz Friedrich's exciting production (1974–6), and the completed three-act Lulu (1981). His début at the Bayreuth Festival came with Tannhäuser, also with Friedrich, in 1977, and his début at the Vienna Staatsoper in 1986.

After leaving Covent Garden in 1986 Davis worked most frequently in the concert hall, as music director of the Bavarian RSO (1983–92), as honorary conductor of the Dresden Staatskapelle, and with the LSO, of which he became principal conductor in 1995. He had already resumed his fruitful connection with the orchestra in 1987, and he conducted a Sibelius cycle in 1992 and a concert performance of Les Troyens the following year, both of which have become the stuff of legend. More recently he has added grand performances of Bruckner, Richard Strauss and Elgar, the première of Tippett's last major work, The Rose Lake (1995), and a Berlioz cycle begun with Benvenuto Cellini in 1999, all confirming his partnership with the LSO as one of the most important of its time.

Colin Davis conducting the LSO at the Barbican Concert Hall, London, 1995

Davis has developed from the enthusiastic, impulsive firebrand of his early years into a mature master; yet he remains as passionate and involved in his work as ever. He is essentially a visionary and an inspirational conductor, and has often managed to bring those characteristics into the recording studio. His extensive discography ranges from thrilling accounts of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony (with the RPO) and Oedipus rex (with Sadler's Wells), both from 1961, through much Mozart and Berlioz (Idomeneo, Don Giovanni, Così fan tutte, La clemenza di Tito and Les Troyens are especially notable) to his pioneering Tippett, his impassioned Sibelius and his powerfully individual readings of Britten's Peter Grimes and The Turn of the Screw. Davis was knighted in 1980.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Blyth: Colin Davis (London, 1972) [with discography]
H. Matheopoulos: 'Sir Colin Davis', Maestro: Encounters with Conductors of Today (London, 1982), 147–66
R. Alston: Colin Davis – for the Record (London, 1997) [with discography]
G. Kay: 'Opera's Odysseus', Opera, l (1999), 1276–81

ANDREW PORTER/ALAN BLYTH

Davis, (Blind) Gary (b between Clinton and Laurens, SC, 30 April 1896; d Hammonton, NJ, 5 May 1972). American gospel and blues singer and guitarist. He was blinded as a child, but learnt the harmonica, banjo and guitar by the age of seven. When his left wrist was broken it was incorrectly set, and the distortion enabled him to play unorthodox chords. As a member of a country string that included the legendary Blind Willie Walker, Davis acquired a broad repertory of rags, reels, carnival tunes and blues. His free-flowing blues technique, as in I'm throwin' up my hands (1935, ARC) and recorded under the name of Blind Gary, had a great influence on other blues guitarists in the eastern USA. In 1933 Davis was ordained a minister in Washington, North Carolina, and afterwards played religious music almost exclusively. Lord stand by me (1935, ARC) is a rare recording of his preaching style. Twelve Gates to the City (1935, ARC), with its rolling rhythms, reveals his great speed and fluency on the guitar, alternating thumb and finger picking.

In 1940 Davis moved to New York as a street singer in Harlem. Blow Gabriel and If I had my way (1956, Riv.) show his outstanding guitar technique with its slides and syncopations, and the husky, somewhat high-pitched and strained voice, interspersed with cries and comments, with which he sang his 'holy blues'. His importance as a leading black American religious singer was widely recognized only in the mid-1960s, when he was recorded extensively for Prestige, Vanguard and Folkways, and appeared at festivals and on concert tours.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SouthernB
S. Grossman: disc notes, Rev. Gary Davis 1935–1939, Yazoo 1023 (1970)
S. Grossman: Rev. Gary Davis: Blues Guitar (New York, 1974)
R. Tilling, ed.: 'Oh, What a Beautiful City': a tribute to Rev. Gary Davis 1896–1972 (Jersey, 1992)

PAUL OLIVER

Davis, Gussie Lord (b Dayton, OH, 3 Dec 1863; d New York, 18 Oct 1899). American songwriter. He had little formal training in music but studied privately with teachers at the Nelson Musical College, Cincinnati, where he was employed as a janitor. The moderate success of his first published song, We Sat Beneath the Maple on the Hill (1880), encouraged him to continue writing. Later he became a protégé of the songwriter James E. Stewart, who undoubtedly helped him to gain entry into the music publishing world. In 1890 he moved to New York and within three years had become one of the top songwriters of Tin Pan Alley. More than a million copies of his most popular song, In the Baggage Coach Ahead (1896), were sold. Davis was the first black songwriter to win international acclaim for his ballads, which combined sweet lyrical melodies in waltz rhythms with heart-wrenching texts. He wrote more than 600 songs (sacred, comic, minstrel and ethnic as well as lyrical), of which approximately 300 were published.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: A Hot Old Time in Dixie (musical), 1899; King Herod (cant), 1892

*c*600 songs, lyrics by Davis unless otherwise stated, incl. We Sat Beneath the Maple on the Hill, 1880; Irene, Good Night, 1886; The Lighthouse by the Sea, 1886; 'Neath the Maples Long Ago, 1886; The Court House in de Sky (J. Macon), 1887; My Sailor Lad's Return (J. Ring), 1887; Wait Till the Ride Comes In (G. Propheter), 1887; The Fatal Wedding (W. Windom), 1894; Picture 84, 1894; Down in Poverty Row, 1896; In the Baggage Coach Ahead, 1896; Send Back the Picture and the Ring, 1896; Just Set a Light (H. Neal), 1897; My Creole Sue, 1898

MSS in US-Wc

Principal publishers: Haviland, Howley, G. Propheter, Spaulding & Gray

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SouthernB
D. Gilbert: Lost Chords: the Diverting Story of American Popular Songs (Garden City, NY, 1942, 2/1971)
M. Marcuse: Tin Pan Alley in Gaslight: Saga of the Songs that Made the Gray Nineties 'Gay' (Watkins Glen, NY, 1959)
E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York, 1971, 2/1983)
E. Southern and J. Wright: 'In Retrospect: Gussie Lord Davis', BPM, vi (1978), 188–230 [incl. list of more than 200 songs in the Whittlesey Files, US-Wc and reprints of 7 songs]

EILEEN SOUTHERN

Davis, Ivan (b Electra, TX, 4 Feb 1932). American pianist. He studied with Silvio Scionti before receiving a Fulbright Award to work with Carlo Zecchi at the Accademia di S Cecilia in Rome in 1955. Later he studied privately with Horowitz in New York. A number of competition successes followed, including second prize in the Busoni International Competition in 1958 and the Liszt Prize in New York in 1960, leading to his début with the New York PO in Carnegie Hall (1962) and an international career. His Queen Elizabeth Hall début recital in London in 1968 caused a sensation, and has become a collector's item on record. Further recordings, largely of 19th-century showpieces, have confirmed his exceptional exuberance and technical brilliance, most notably a Gottschalk recital of true virtuoso flair. In 1965 Davis was appointed a piano professor at the University of Miami, Coral Gables.

BRYCE MORRISON

Davis [Davies, Davys], Mary [Moll] (*b c*1650; d London, bur. 24 Feb 1708). English soprano, dancer and actress. From her first appearance on the stage as a girl in the early 1660s Mary Davis was particularly praised, by Pepys and others, for her dancing. Late in 1667 her singing of 'My lodging it is on the cold ground' so attracted Charles II that it 'Rais'd her from her Bed on the Cold Ground, to a Bed Royal'. As his mistress she sang and danced at court, appearing in John Crowne's masque Calisto in 1675 and singing Venus in Blow's Venus and Adonis, in which her daughter by the king, Lady Mary Tudor, was Cupid. In 1686 she married the French-born composer and woodwind player James Paisible.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDA; DNB (J. Knight); LS
J. Downes: Roscius Anglicanus (London, 1708); ed. J. Milhous and R.D. Hume (London, 1987)
J.H. Wilson: All the King's Ladies (Chicago, 1958)
O. Baldwin and T. Wilson: 'An English Calisto', MT, cxii (1971), 651–3
R. Luckett: 'A New Source for Venus and Adonis', MT, cxxx (1989), 76–9
A.R. Walkling: 'Masque and Politics at the Restoration Court: John Crowne's Calisto', EMc, xxiv (1996), 27–62

OLIVE BALDWIN, THELMA WILSON

Davis, Miles (Dewey, III) [Prince of Darkness] (b Alton, IL, 25 May 1926; d Santa Monica, CA, 28 Sept 1991). American jazz trumpeter and bandleader. An original, lyrical soloist and a demanding group leader, he was the most consistently innovatory musician in jazz from the late 1940s until the mid-1970s.

1. Life. 2. Music.

1. Life. Davis grew up in East St Louis and took up the trumpet at the age of 13; two years later he was already playing professionally. He moved to New York in September 1944, ostensibly to enter the Institute of Musical Art but actually to locate his idol, Charlie Parker. He joined Parker in live appearances and recording sessions (1945–8), at the same time playing in other groups and touring in the big bands led by Benny Carter and Billy Eckstine. In 1948 he began to lead his own bop groups, and he participated in an experimental workshop centred on the arranger Gil Evans. Their collaborations with Gerry Mulligan, John Lewis and Johnny Carisi culminated in a series of nonet recordings for Capitol under Davis's name and later collected and reissued as Birth of the Cool. In 1949 Davis performed with Sonny Rollins and Art Blakey, and with Tadd Dameron, until heroin addiction interrupted his public career intermittently from mid-1949 to 1953. Although he continued to record with famous bop musicians, including Parker, Rollins, Blakey, J.J. Johnson, Horace Silver and members of the Modern Jazz Quartet, he worked in clubs infrequently and with inferior accompanists until 1954.

In 1955 Davis appeared informally at the Newport Jazz Festival. His sensational improvisations there brought him widespread publicity and sufficient engagements to establish a quintet (1955–7) with Red Garland (piano), Paul Chambers (double bass), Philly Joe Jones (drums) and John Coltrane, who in 1956 was joined and later replaced by Rollins. In May 1957 Davis made the first of several remarkable solo recordings on trumpet and flugelhorn against unusual jazz orchestrations by Gil Evans. In the autumn he organized a quintet, later joined by Cannonball Adderley, that proved short-lived; in the same year he wrote and recorded music in Paris for Louis Malle's film Ascenseur pour l'échafaud.

On his return to the USA Davis reformed his original quintet of 1955 with Adderley as a sixth member. For the next five years he drew the rhythm sections of his various sextets and quintets from a small pool of players: the pianists Garland, Bill Evans (1958–9) and Wynton Kelly; the drummers Jones and Jimmy Cobb; and the bass player Chambers. Personnel changes increased in early 1963, and finally Davis engaged a new rhythm section as the nucleus of another quintet: Herbie Hancock (1963–8), Ron Carter (1963–8) and Tony Williams (1963–9). To replace Coltrane, who had left in 1960, Davis tried a succession of saxophonists, including Sonny Stitt, Jimmy Heath, Hank Mobley (1961), George Coleman (1963–4) and Sam Rivers; ultimately he settled on Wayne Shorter (1964–70).

Because of his irascible temperament and his need for frequent periods of inactivity, these sidemen were by no means entirely faithful to Davis. Nevertheless, the groups of 1955–68 were more stable than his later ones of 1969–75. Often the instrumentation and style of his ever-changing recording ensembles (up to 14 players) diverged considerably from that of his working groups (generally sextets or septets). Influential new members joined him in the late 1960s and early 1970s: Chick Corea, Joe Zawinul, Keith Jarrett, John McLaughlin, Dave Holland, Billy Cobham, Jack DeJohnette and Airto Moreira. As with Davis's previous colleagues, the excellence of these sidemen bore eloquent witness to his stature among jazz musicians.

Davis had sickle-cell anaemia. For years he had combatted the effects of this congenital disease by hand exercises – he trained as a boxer – but in 1975 the deterioration of his joints obliged him to retire. He had major operations on his hip and also suffered from a stomach ulcer and gallstones. In 1980 he made new recordings, and in the summer of 1981 began to tour extensively with new quintets and sextets. Although he was incapacitated by a stroke in February 1982, he resumed an active career in the spring of that year. Only the drummer Al Foster remained with him, serving as a sideman to 1975 and again from 1980 to 1985. New young members of Davis's groups included Branford Marsalis, the guitarist John Scofield and the saxophonist Kenny Garrett.

Miles Davis, 1969

In his final decade Davis was described as a 'living legend', a title he detested because it went against his continuing inclination to be associated with new popular music and energetic youthful activities, but one that was nonetheless accurate, since it reflected his position as the former partner of both Parker and Coltrane. He received an honorary Doctorate of Music from the New England Conservatory in 1986 in honour of his longstanding achievements.

2. Music. Davis rejected the standards set for jazz trumpeters in the 1940s by Dizzy Gillespie's bop improvisations, partly because of his limited technique (some of his early recordings were marred by errors), but principally because his interests lay elsewhere. He created relaxed, tuneful melodies centred in the middle register. Not reluctant to repeat ideas, he drew from such a small collection of melodic formulae that many solos seemed as much composed as improvised. Harmonically he was also conservative, and tended to play in close accord with his accompanists. Beneath this apparent pervasive simplicity lay a subtle sense of rhythmic placement and expressive nuance.

These characteristics remained central to Davis's playing throughout his career. Their mature expression first came on the nonet sessions (in particular Move/Budo, Jeru/Godchild and Boplicity/Israel, all 1949, Cap.), which inspired the cool-jazz movement. Davis's liking for moderation meshed perfectly with his arranger's concern for smooth instrumental textures, restrained dynamics and rhythms, and a balance between ensemble and solo passages. In the 1950s, as cool jazz became popular, Davis ignored this style, instead surrounding himself with fiery bop players.

Davis's fallow period in the early 1950s came to an end with his celebrated blues improvisation Walkin' (1954, Prst.). In a session with Sonny Rollins in the same year he introduced the stemless harmon mute to jazz; its intense sound led to delicate recordings by his first quintet (for example, Bye Bye Blackbird and 'Round Midnight on Round about Midnight, 1955–6, Col.), which are even more memorable than the fierce swing of the Garland-Chambers-Jones rhythm section on fast bop tunes. Many jazz trumpeters turned to flugelhorn after Davis had demonstrated its potential in his collaborations with Gil Evans (notably Summertime, on Porgy and Bess, 1958, Col.); these recordings offer rare examples in jazz of lush orchestral settings with sustained emotional substance, and present an ideal foil for the relaxed tunefulness, melodic and harmonic simplicity and subtle swing of Davis's improvisations (ex.1).

By the late 1950s Davis had tired of bop structures, and turned to a new approach formulated at this time by Gil Evans and Bill Evans and later called 'modal playing'. However, the use of modes in Davis's recordings of 1958–9 (Milestones, on Milestones, 1958, Col., So What, Flamenco Sketches, on Kind of Blue, 1959, Col.) had less significance for the future than the slowing of harmonic rhythm. In place of fast-moving, functional chord progressions, Davis used diatonic ostinatos (vamps), drones, half-tone osciallation familiar from flamenco music and tone-dominant alternation in the bass line.

Until 1965 Davis's groups performed a small repertory of bop, blues, popular songs and ostinato tunes. During these years the technical and emotional compass of his playing expanded greatly, which can be heard to advantage on My Funny Valentine and Fair and More (both 1964, Col.). The addition of Wayne Shorter to the ensemble led to a change in repertory that began with E.S.P.(1965, Col.). Discarding standard tunes, Davis's groups recorded improvisations in a chordless, tonally ambiguous bop style, as well as new ostinato pieces on which the Hancock-Carter-Williams rhythm section found extraordinarily flexible ways of expressing 4/4 rhythms.

In 1968–9 Davis turned to jazz-rock. In a Silent Way and Bitches Brew (both 1969, Col.) blended the sounds of acoustic and electronic instruments, and melodic jazz improvisations with open-ended rock accompaniment. From this point on Davis regularly edited his recordings from lengthy taped performances, both live and in the studio. Thus Teo Macero, his recording engineer, and producer from 1959 to 1983, became in a sense the most important 'member' of Davis's ensembles. From 1969 to 1975 these various groups made use of electronically altered trumpet, Indian sitār and tablā, and African and Brazilian percussion, as well as funky black-American dance rhythms (Big fun, 1969–72, Col., and On the Corner, 1972, Col.). Their music is best described by the term fusion, which embraces a blend of musical elements broader than jazz-rock. During Davis's efforts to resume his career in the 1980s, the results were a rough juxtaposition of disparate sounds rather than a fusion, but the album Decoy (1983–4, Col.) offers fine examples of his style. Davis himself concentrated on trumpet, but he also played synthesizer; his performance on both instruments can be heard on the title track of Star People (1982–3, Col.). Among his projects in his final years was an effort to unite jazz and rap music.

Ex.1 Davis's improvisation on the first chorus of Summertime, from Porgy and Bess (1958, Col.); transcr. B. Kernfeld

The identification of Davis's compositions is not a simple matter. He wrote several important bop themes, including Donna Lee and Half Nelson (recorded with Parker) and Boplicity (with the nonet). As a leader, he sometimes followed the widespread practice of appropriating music: such pieces popularized by and credited to Davis include Tune-up and Four (actually by Eddie 'Cleanhead' Vinson), Solar (actually Sonny by Woody Herman) and Blue in Green (almost certainly by Bill Evans). But a number of pieces from this decade, including Milestones, So What, All Blues and Freddie Freeloader, are Davis's own. Flamenco Sketches exemplifies another commonplace approach to jazz composition, in which he would develop an idea from a sideman (in this instance, Evans again) according to his approach at the time; later, during his jazz-fusion decades, this collaborative approach characterized Davis's music-making. Nardis, first heard on Adderley's Portrait of Cannonball (1958, Riv.) and subsequently a staple of Evans's repertory, became a jazz standard without his ever having introduced it on record.

Two volumes of transcriptions of Davis's solos have been published: Miles Davis: Jazz Improvisation by T. Hino (Tokyo, 1975) and Miles Davis by S. Isacoff (New York, 1978), the latter based entirely on Hino's edition.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans, rev. 1956/R, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence)
N. Hentoff: 'An Afternoon with Miles Davis', JR, i/2 (1958), 9–12
M. James: Miles Davis (London, 1961) [incl. discography]; repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, 1978), 75–108
N. Hentoff: The Jazz Life (New York, 1961/R) [incl. previously pubd articles]
D. Heckman: 'Miles Davis Times Three', Down Beat, xxix/23 (1962), 16–19
G. Hoefer: 'The Birth of the Cool', Down Beat, xxxii/21 (1965), 24–5, 40
G. Hoefer: 'Early Miles', Down Beat, xxxiv/7 (1967), 16–19
D. DeMichael: 'Miles Davis', Rolling Stone (13 December 1969)
L. Feather: 'Miles', From Satchmo to Miles (New York, 1972/R), 225–58
M.C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, 2/1985)
D. Baker: The Jazz Style of Miles Davis: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
B. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981)
T. Naitho: Miles (Pyworthy, nr Holsworthy, 1981)
I. Carr: Miles Davis: a Critical Biography (London, 1982) [incl. discography by B. Priestley]
H. Brofsky: 'Miles Davis and My Funny Valentine: the Evolution of a Solo', Black Music Research Journal, iii (1983), 23–45

J. Chambers: Milestones, i: The Music and Times of Miles Davis to 1960 (Toronto, 1983); ii: The Music and Times of Miles Davis since 1960 (Toronto, 1985); complete edn (1989)
A. Baraka: 'Miles Davis', New York Times Magazine (16 June 1985)
F. Davis: 'The Unsure Egoist Is Not Good for Himself', In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, 1986), 248–52
B. McRae: Miles Davis (London, 1988) [incl. discography]
M. Davis (with Q. Troupe): Miles: the Autobiography (New York, 1989)
'Miles: the Final Bow', Down Beat, lviii/12 (1991) [memorial issue]
G. Tomlinson: 'Cultural Dialogics and Jazz: a White Historian Signifies', Black Music Research Journal, xi (1991), 229–64
G. Giddins: 'Juilliard Dropout Makes Good', Faces in the Crowd: Players and Writers (New York, 1992), 151–63
J. Lohman: The Sound of Miles Davis: the Discography (Copenhagen, 1992)
L. Cugny: Electrique: Miles Davis, 1968–1975 (Marseilles, 1993)
R. Williams: Miles Davis: the Man in the Green Shirt (London, 1993)
G. Camer, ed.: The Miles Davis Companion: Four Decades of Commentary (New York, 1996)
K. Vail: Miles' Diary: the life of Miles Davis, 1947–1961 (Chessington, 1996)
B. Kirchner, ed.: A Miles Davis Reader (Washington DC, 1997)
Oral history material in US-NEij

BARRY KERNFELD

Davis, Richard (d Worcester, April 1688). English composer. He was a chorister at Worcester from 1639 to 1644. At the Restoration he was appointed one of the Worcester lay clerks and in 1664 cathedral organist and (probably) Master of the Choristers (he was certainly listed as Instructor choristarum in 1671). Towards the end of his tenure he seems to have suffered ill-health. He wrote a Service in C and 12 anthems (GB-WO) but, unfortunately, reconstruction of most of this music is problematic owing to missing treble parts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c1538 (Oxford, 1991)
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music, 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995)

IAN SPINK

Davis, William (d Worcester, *c*1745). English composer and organist, son of Richard Davis. He was a chorister at Worcester Cathedral during the 1680s, becoming a lay clerk in 1693 and some time later organist of the 'Little Organ', situated at the west end of the nave. For a short time he seems to have been organist of York Minster (1721–2), but returned to Worcester as Master of the Choristers (1723–45).

His anthems are good examples of what Croft's provincial contemporaries were capable of. Most of them are to be found in his autograph manuscript (GB-Ob Mus c.16), along with a St Cecilia Ode ('Assist you mighty Sons of art') and numerous songs. A book of keyboard pieces inscribed 'Will Davis / Eius Liber' (Lbl) is also in his hand. It contains mainly organ music by Blow, and some harpsichord pieces, including a suite signed 'Will Davis'.

WORKS

Jub, d, full with verses, *c*1715, *GB-Ob, WO (inc.), substitute for Bs in Bevin's Dorian Service
Service, g (incl. chant for Ven), WO (inc.)
Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, f, full, Ob
18 anthems: Behold God is my salvation, SSB, *Ob; Cry aloud and spare not, SATB, org, *Ob, WO (inc.); Have mercy upon me, O God, A/SATB, org, *Ob; Help, Lord, for the godly man, A/SAATB, org, *Ob, WO (inc.); I will give thanks, WO (inc.); Let God arise, A, A, B/SATB, org, 1705, *Ob, WO (inc.); Lord grant my just request, SSB, org, *Ob; Lord why sleepest thou, A/SSATB, org, *Ob, Ob; O be merciful, WO (inc.); O Lord make thy servant Anne, A, A, B/SATB, org, *Ob, WO (inc.); O sing unto the Lord, Ob (inc.); Ponder my words, O Lord, WO (inc.); Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem, for the peace of Ryswick, 1697, WO (inc.); The word of the Lord is tried in the fire, for the victory at Ramillies, 1706, A, T, T, B/SATB, org, *Ob, WO (inc.); They that go down to the sea, A, T, B/SATB, org, 1702, *Ob, WO (inc.); They that put their trust in the Lord, A, T, B/SATB, org, *Ob, WO (inc.); Who can tell how oft he offendeth, WO (inc.); Why standeth thou so far off, O Lord, WO (inc.)
Assist you mighty sons of art (ode), A, B, SAB, str, *Ob
18 songs: 9 for S, bc, *Ob, Ob; 4 for S, B, bc, *Ob; Hail happy pair (A Song upon Mr Spelman's Wedding), 1697, *Ob; In vain I seek to charm, S, b, *Ob; Let's drink disappointment (Dr Sacheverell's Health), 1710, *Ob; Love and law (London, *c*1710); Malpeg: A Worster health, to six generals, 2vv (London, *c*1709)
Such a bargain, catch, *Ob
Almand, saraband, hpd, Lbl, doubtful

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.F. Rimbault: The Old Cheque-Book, or Book of Remembrance of the Chapel Royal (London, 1872/R), 18
H.W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c.1538 (Oxford, 1991)
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music, 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995)

IAN SPINK

Davison, A(rchibald) T(hompson) (b Boston, 11 Oct 1883; d Brant Rock, MA, 6 Feb 1961). American music educationist and choral conductor. He studied at Harvard University (AB 1906, AM 1907), where he gained the doctorate in 1908 with a dissertation on Debussy's harmony. Except for his studies with Widor in Paris (1908–9) he was associated with Harvard throughout his career, as Austin Teaching Fellow (1909–10), organist and choirmaster (1910), lecturer (1912–17), assistant professor (1917–20), associate professor (1920–29), professor of choral music (1929–40) and James Edward Ditson Professor of Music (1940–54); he was also curator of the Isham Memorial Library (1941–55). As director of the Harvard Glee Club (1912–33) and the Radcliffe Choral Society (1913–28) he was responsible for introducing the repertory of serious music (including, in particular, Renaissance a cappella music) to American collegiate choral societies. Davison published important educational works on choral conducting and composition, and several historical studies of church music and music education. The Historical Anthology of Music, compiled in collaboration with Willi Apel, is well known to students and teachers of music history, and his Concord Series of Educational Music was the most widely used in the USA before World War II. His compositions, written early in his career, include two comic operas, a musical, a symphonic poem Hero and Leander and a Tragic Overture.

WRITINGS

The Harmonic Contributions of Claude Debussy (diss., Harvard U., 1908)
Protestant Church Music in America (Boston, 1920, enlarged 2/1933/R)
'Popular Music', Playground, xv (1921–2), 192–6
'Style in Church Music', Princeton Seminary Bulletin, xviii/1 (1924), 11
Music Education in America (New York, 1926)
Choral Conducting (Cambridge, MA, 1940/R)
The Technique of Choral Composition (Cambridge, MA, 1945)
ed., with W. Apel: Historical Anthology of Music, i (Cambridge, MA, 1946, 2/1950); ii (1950)
Bach and Handel: the Consummation of the Baroque in Music (Cambridge, MA, 1951/R)
'The Humanistic Approach to the Teaching of Music', Music Teachers National Association: Proceedings, xliii (1949), 67–79
Church Music: Illusion and Reality (Cambridge, MA, 1952/R)
Words and Music (Washington DC, 1954); repr. in Lectures on the History and Art of Music (New York, 1968), 95–120 [Lecture, Library of Congress, 10 Dec 1953]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Essays on Music in Honor of Archibald Thompson Davison (Cambridge, MA, 1957) [incl. complete list of writings, compositions, editions and arrangements]

D.J. Grout: 'The Scholar and Teacher', College Music Symposium, i (1961), 18–19

G.W. Woodworth: 'The Conductor and Reformer', College Music Symposium, i (1961), 15–17

C.E. Steinzor: American Musicologists, c.1890–1945: as Bio-Bibliographical Sourcebook to the Formative Period (New York, 1989), 39–43

JON NEWSOM/R

Davison, Frederick (b c1815; d London, 12 Nov 1889). English organ builder. See under GRAY & DAVISON.

Davison, J(ames) W(illiam) (b London, 5 Oct 1813; d Margate, 24 March 1885). English critic. Born in Bloomsbury, where he lived most of his life, he learned singing and the piano from his mother, the actress Maria Duncan. At London University he excelled in French, classics and literature, but had no formal music training except, at about 18, some piano lessons from W.H. Holmes and harmony from G.A. Macfarren. In bursts of enthusiasm in the 1830s and early 40s, he composed overtures, songs and piano pieces. The songs of 1842–4, including Swifter far than summer's flight, The Lover to his Mistress and I have wept mine eyes tearless, were probably his best works; they were the only ones he acknowledged in later years.

By 1835 Davison had begun to find his real voice in music journalism; that year he wrote for the Musical Magazine under the name 'Arthur Pendragon'. In 1838–40 he was a music reviewer and translator for Harrison's Monthly Collection, and by 1842 a contributor to the Court Gazette and Musical World; this last he edited from late April 1843 until his death, meanwhile writing most of Wessel & Stapleton's house journal, the Musical Examiner (1842–4). His colourful persona as a spokesman for 'native talent', advocating the music of his friends Macfarren, William Sterndale Bennett, Henry Smart, Thomas Mudie and Edward Loder, gained attention. This tack was a writer's prerogative, meant to encourage real achievement by young British composers, but as a critical stance it was used too often. Like Davison's own concert-giving and later, overt friendliness with visiting musicians and marriage to the pianist Arabella Goddard (in 1859), it tended to undercut his independence and credibility.

In late 1845 Davison substituted for C.L. Kenney on The Times, and by August 1846, with a big piece on Mendelssohn's Elijah at Birmingham, Davison had become that paper's chief musical writer, a post he held more or less regularly for 32 years. He valued the power of the critic, believing it his duty to promote good musical taste among a broad public. His writing for The Times though pointed and confident, was sober compared with that in the weekly Musical World, which, aimed at music professionals and under his own control, printed his more personal effusions from the provocative to the silly. It was the combination of these two posts, both so prominent and so long held, rather than the depth of his musical intellect, that elevated Davison among London critics. He also contributed to the Pall Mall Gazette (mid-1860s), Saturday Review (1865–75) and Graphic (1874–85).

As a professional critic Davison was in his prime in the 1850s and 60s, but his opinions had solidified by 1846. Whether from the limits of his musical education or simply personal preference, his taste was firmly rooted in the German classics from Bach to Beethoven. Mendelssohn became his ultimate idol, so that when he heard much of the new music by Chopin, Liszt, Verdi, Gounod, Schumann, Brahms, Wagner and even Schubert, his opinions were often negative and protectionist, even hostile. His polemical tone, use of overstatement and love of verbal jousting – all part of an instinctive journalistic style – only added to his later reputation as a reactionary, out of step and overly partial to a few favourites. But against any picture of Davison as a villain (Reid's book is grossly one-sided in its attempts to discredit him) must be placed a fuller, more nuanced view of his work. In the mid-1840s he was both articulate about late Beethoven and enthusiastic about Chopin (though he later regretted the latter position). He was also one of the first English critics to acknowledge Berlioz's originality and power though he did not always like or understand his music. The two men became close friends, and Berlioz dedicated his overture Le corsaire to Davison in 1852. On Wagner, Davison vacillated between hostility and praise. In 1855 he was highly critical of the composer, but after attending Bayreuth in 1876 became a convert to the Ring; he was rhapsodic over Tristan. His larger-than-life personality and vast circle of friends bear witness to an extraordinary sociability.

Davison's real influence is debatable. Certainly he created Wagner as a public issue, affected the provincial careers of many touring musicians, and more than once encouraged innovatory concert series: the chamber music focus of the important Monday Popular Concerts was largely his idea, and he wrote their analytical programme notes from 1859 to his death.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove1 (G. Grove)

Correspondence: GB-Lbl Add.MSS 71920–5

Obituary, The Times (26 March 1885)

J. Bennett: Forty Years of Music, 1865–1905 (London, 1908)

H. Davison, ed.: From Mendelssohn to Wagner: being the Memoirs of J.W. Davison (London, 1912)

L. Langley: The English Musical Journal in the Early Nineteenth Century (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1983)

C. Reid: The Music Monster: a Biography of James William Davison (London, 1984)

T. Muir: Wagner in England: Four Writers before Shaw (diss., CUNY, 1997)

LEANNE LANGLEY

Davisson, Ananias (b Virginia, 2 Feb 1780; d Weyer's Cove, Rockingham Co., VA, 21 Oct 1857). American composer, printer and tune book compiler. His Kentucky Harmony (Harrisonburg, VA, 1816/R, 5/1826) was the first shape-note tune book to be published in the South and the first of 13 shape-note tune books to be published before 1860 in the Shenandoah Valley. Davisson printed each of his tune books himself, following Kentucky Harmony with Supplement to the Kentucky Harmony (Harrisonburg, 1820, 3/1825), An Introduction to Sacred Music (Harrisonburg, 1821), and A Small Collection of Sacred Music (Mount Vernon, VA, ?1826). In spite of the term 'Supplement' in its title, the Supplement to the Kentucky Harmony was the most innovative of Davisson's tune books, containing a much larger proportion of folk hymns and thus a greater orientation toward the South than his Kentucky Harmony. Davisson claimed 47 tune settings which are predominantly in the southern folk-hymn style; some of these, including the most popular, 'Idumea' and 'Tribulation', were among the tunes most frequently reprinted in later Shenandoah Valley tune books, as well as those of the deep South, such as William Walker's Southern Harmony (1835) and B.F. White and E.J. King's The Sacred Harp (1844).

See also SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Eskew: Shape-note Hymnody in the Shenandoah Valley, 1816–1860 (diss., Tulane U., 1966)

R.A.B. Harley: Ananias Davisson: Southern Tune Book Compiler (1780–1857) (diss., U. of Michigan, 1972)

D.W. Music: 'Ananias Davisson, Robert Boyd, Reubin Monday, John Martin, and Archibald Rhea in East Tennessee, 1816–26', American Music, i/3 (1983), 72–84

HARRY ESKEW

Davul. A large thong-braced, double-headed cylindrical drum of Turkey and many other countries of the Middle East and South-eastern Europe where it is known by related names, including daouli (Greece), daule (Albania), dohol (Iran), dhol (Armenia), doli (Georgia) and ṭabl turkī (Arab countries). The Turkish davul is made by stitching together the ends of a large wooden plank (which is steamed or put through a wood-bending mangle) and fitting strengthening hoops internally at both ends of the cylinder. The two heads, one thicker than the other, are usually made from sheepskin or goatskin and are tensioned to each other by a variety of zigzag lacings around the cylinder. Two beaters are used: one large heavy crook- or club-shaped beater called tokmak ('mallet') or çomak ('stick') and another, smaller and lighter, called çubuk ('shoot' or 'twig'). When played the drum is suspended over the left shoulder and the heavier beater used on the thicker head, generally to mark the strong beat or beats. The davul is nearly always played with one or more zurna (oboe) for outdoor dancing and processional music: hence the term davul-zurna, standing for both the instrumental ensemble and its repertory (see TURKEY, §VI, 1(iii)). Sometimes davul alone is used to accompany the voice; it is also used as a signalling instrument, for example to announce the beginning and end of each period of fasting during Ramadan. Picken described and discussed Turkish types in detail and mentioned its ceremonial use at cirit (a traditional equestrian game), horse racing and wrestling – reminders of its historical association with Islamic chivalry. In discussing its origins he related davul to the 8th-century Akkadian term tabālu, but added that the main constructional features of the davul were known in South Asia 1500 years before the first records of its use in the eastern Mediterranean (14th century). He concluded that the type evolved some time after the earliest migration of Indo-European speakers into Western Asia. Variants of the name are used for a variety of barrel-shaped double-headed laced drums in many parts of South Asia, including ḌHOL (widespread, also including Afghanistan), ḍhol or duhl (Pakistan), daula (Sri Lanka) and ḌHOLAK (in India and Pakistan). The Turkish davul also migrated westwards as far as Spain where it is known as atabal or atabal turqués.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.P. Reiche: 'Stilelement südtürkischer Davul-Zurna-Stücke', Jb für musikalische Volks- und Völkerkunde, v (1970), 9–54

S. Marcuse: A Survey of Musical Instruments (Newton Abbot and New York, 1975)

L. Picken: Folk Musical Instruments of Turkey (London, 1975)

□

Davy, Charles (b Norwich, 1722/3; d Onehouse, Suffolk, 8 April 1797). English divine and writer. He was educated at Caius College, Cambridge, and held appointments as rector in East Anglia. About 1766–7 Davy studied music theory with a 'Mr S.', whom he hoped would set the texts Davy had written in 1769 for two oratorios, Balaam and Ruth. It is possible that 'Mr S.' was Christopher Smear, with whom Davy wrote An Essay upon the Principles and Powers of Vocal and Instrumental Music (GB-Lbl). Proposals to print were issued in 1768 and the Essay was completed in 1772, when Davy requested permission to dedicate it to Charles Burney (the request was declined); but the work never appeared. To gain 'a just idea of the Grecian music', Davy had compared the compass of the voice in song with the compass of the voice in speaking; this was published in his Conjectural Observations on the Origin and Progress of Alphabetic Writing (London, 1772). From about 1773 he wrote on music and other subjects in a series of letters to his two sons, published in Letters ... upon Subjects of Literature (Bury St Edmunds, 1787).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (T. Cooper)

J.C. Kassler: The Science of Music in Britain, 1714–1830 (New York, 1979), i, 266–9

A. Ribeiro, ed.: The Letters of Dr Charles Burney, i: 1751–1784 (Oxford, 1991), 122–3, 165–6, 176–8, 184–5

JAMIE C. KASSLER

Davy, John (b Upton Hellions, nr Crediton, 23 Dec 1763; d London, 22 Feb 1824). English composer. He was illegitimate and was brought up by a Devonshire blacksmith who played the cello in the local church choir. He displayed a precocity in music at a very young age, and was taught the harpsichord by James Carrington and then Richard Eastcott; by the age of 12 he was an articled pupil of William Jackson, organist of Exeter Cathedral. When he moved to London in 1790 and began playing the violin in the Covent Garden orchestra Davy made little mark; perhaps he was a timid character. About this time he published a set of glees as his op.1, and some simple songs followed; but his natural bent was for instrumental music. The theatres were slow to encourage him. His first two theatrical scores, the opera A Pennyworth of Wit (which had no spoken dialogue) and the ballet Alfred the Great, were for Sadler's Wells; neither survives. He was 37 before he got a chance to write an opera for a West End theatre, What a Blunder!, his most ambitious work. It had the usual spoken dialogue, a heroine called Leonora and a Spanish setting; the songs and ensembles are unremarkable, but the overture is among the best of its time. The themes are interesting and tautly developed with adventurous modulations in the Viennese style. (The work survives only in piano arrangement.) The overture to Harlequin Quicksilver is also of some interest, with a Polacca that looks like the finale of a violin concerto; presumably Davy played it himself.

Because of the vogue for the harp, Davy was able to find a publisher for some well-written divertimentos for harp and piano and an outstanding sonata for harp solo. In the outer movements the second subjects have unusual charm and the themes are developed with a power shown by no other English composer of the time. But Davy had to spend most of his creative energy collaborating with indifferent composers in a succession of trivial Covent Garden operas, ballets and pantomimes, and as he lost heart his own contribution lapsed into near nonsense. Between 1808 and 1818 he composed hardly anything. His last theatre score, for Shakespeare's The Tempest, was no more than a pastiche. By this time Davy was drinking too much, and he died in poverty. Today he is remembered, if at all, for a fine sea-song, 'The Bay of Biscay', introduced in his opera Spanish Dollars. In fact the tune was that of a shanty sung to him by the tenor Charles Incledon, who had picked it up when he was a sailor in the 1780s.

WORKS

all first performed in London; all printed works published in London

STAGE

LCG – Covent Garden
LLH – Little Theatre, Haymarket

A Pennyworth of Wit, or The Wife and the Mistress (op, T.J. Dibdin), Sadler's Wells, 18 April 1796; lost
Alfred the Great, or The Danish Invasion (ballet d'action, M. Lonsdale), Sadler's Wells, 4 June 1798; lost
What a Blunder! (comic op, J.G. Holman), LLH, 14 Aug 1800, vs as op.5 (1800)
[La] Perouse, or The Desolate Island (ballet d'action, J. Fawcett), LCG, 28 Feb 1801, collab. J. Moorehead; 6 airs arr. pf/hp (1801)
The Cabinet (op, Dibdin), LCG, 9 Feb 1802, vs (1802); collab. Braham, Corri, Moorehead and Reeve
The Brazen Mask, or Alberto and Rosabella (ballet d'action, Dibdin and Fawcett), LCG, 5 April 1802, songs (1802); collab. J. Mountain
The Caffres, or Buried Alive (op, E. Eyre), LCG, 2 June 1802; lost
Red Roy, or Oswyn and Helen (ballet d'action), LLH, 10 Aug 1803, ov. as op.7 (1803)
The Miller's Maid (op, F. Waldron), LLH, 25 Aug 1804; lost
Thirty Thousand, or Who's the Richest? (op, Dibdin after M. Edgeworth), LCG, 10 Dec 1804, vs (1805); collab. Braham and Reeve
Harlequin Quicksilver, or The Gnome and the Devil (pantomime, Dibdin), LCG, 26 Dec 1804, ov. and songs (1805)
Spanish Dollars, or The Priest of the Parish (op, A. Cherry), LCG, 9 May 1805; vs (1805)
Harlequin's Magnet, or The Scandinavian Sorcerer (pantomime, Dibdin), LCG, 30 Dec 1805, songs (1806)
The Blind Boy (melodrama, W.B. Hewetson), LCG, 1 Dec 1808, ov., background music and one song (1806)
The Lord of the Manor (op, 3, J. Burgoyne), LCG, 24 Oct 1812, GB-Lcm; after Jackson's opera; collab. Bishop, Doyle, Reeve, R. Welsh
The Farmer's Wife (comic op, 3, C.I.M. Dibdin), LCG, 1 Feb 1814; collab. Bishop, Reeve and others
Rob Roy Macgregor, or Auld Lang Syne (op, I. Pocock after W. Scott), LCG, 12 March 1818, vs as op.15 (1819); 1 chorus by Bishop
The Fisherman's Hut (melodrama, J. Tobin), Drury Lane, 20 Oct 1819, songs (1819); collab. M.P. King
Women's Will – a Riddle (op, E.L. Swift), LCG, 20 July 1820, vs as op.16 (*c*1820)
The Tempest (after W. Shakespeare), LCG, 15 May 1821, ov. and addl music to F. Reynolds's version, with other music by H. Purcell, T. Arne and T. Linley (ii), vs (1821)
Songs in other stage works, many pubd singly, incl.: Family Quarrels (T. Dibdin), LCG, 18 Dec 1802; Harlequin's Habeas, or The Hall of Spectres (T. Dibdin), LCG, 27 Dec 1802, songs (1802); Guy Mannering, or The Gipsey's Prophecy (D. Terry and Scott), LCG, 12 March 1816

OTHER VOCAL

6 Quartetts for Voices, op.1 (*c*1790)
12 Favorite Songs, 1v, pf, op.2 (1792)
3 Vocal Duets, 2vv, pf (1807)
6 Madrigals (Shakespeare), 4vv, op.13 (*c*1814)
Numerous songs pubd singly, incl. The Brunette, T, fls, vns, bc (*c*1790), and Just like Love is yonder Rose, lv, pf (?1801)
Lord, who shall dwell in thy Tabernacle, verse anthem, 4/4vv, org; Ponder my words, O Lord, verse anthem, 2/4vv, org: both 1811, *GB-Lbl
2 double and 4 single chants, *c*1812, *Lbl
Ode for the Anniversary of Nelson's Victory and Death, LCG, 21 Nov 1806, ?lost, cited in Loewenberg
Ah, better far beneath the Spreading Shade, glee, 3vv; Why should the Lover, glee, 3vv: both *Lbl

INSTRUMENTAL

A Favorite Duett for 2 Performers, pf/hpd (*c*1800); [4] Divertimentos, hp, pf, op.6 (*c*1803); Grand Sonata, hp (1805); Sonata, pf (1820)
Cease your Funning, the Favorite air. . . in the Beggar's Opera, arr. pf (n.d.)
Numerous songs arr. pf/hpd, pubd singly

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDA; DNB (G. Goodwin)
R. Eastcott: Sketches of the Origin, Progress, and Effects of Music (Bath, 1793), 95–9
The Thespian Dictionary (London and Dublin, 1802, 2/1805)
Obituary, Gentleman's Magazine, xciv (1824), 280–81

ROGER FISKE/R

Davy [Davys], Richard (*b c*1465, d 1538). English composer. He is one of the most important composers represented in the Eton Choirbook, where it is noted that he wrote the antiphon O Domine caeli terraeque in a single day while at Magdalen College, Oxford. A Richard Davy was a scholar of Magdalen from about 1483, and may be the same person of that name who in 1490–91 held the posts of organist and informator choristarum jointly with William Bernard; Davy was the sole holder of both posts in 1491–2. By 1494 Davy had left the choir at Madgalen, and in the following year the college paid for the binding of a book containing his songs, masses and antiphons.

The composer's career is difficult to trace after 1494. A Richard Davy was ordained subdeacon and deacon in the diocese of Exeter in 1491 (Grattan Flood gives an undocumented assertion that the Magdalen Davy was ordained priest in 1497; see also MB, xi, p.xiii). It is probable that the Exeter Davy is the same 'Sir Richard Davy' who was paid in 1493–4 for mending pricksong books for the parish church of St Andrew, Ashburton, in Devon (John Harper, unpublished research), and who at Michaelmas 1494 was appointed to the college of vicars-choral at Exeter Cathedral. The Exeter Davy remained at the cathedral until at least 1506 (his name is not on the list drawn up in 1509).

By 1512 a Richard Davy was employed as one of the senior singing-men at Fotheringhay College, some 60 miles north-east of Oxford, in Northamptonshire (a county in which Magdalen College controlled much land). Fotheringhay was founded in 1411 by the House of York, and the Yorkist kings Richard III and Edward IV are known to have visited Magdalen in September 1481 and July 1483 respectively; one might speculate that these occasions sparked some sort of personnel exchange between Oxford and Fotheringhay. The records of the latter institution are comparatively sparse, but it is known that at least one other singing-man, a certain Thomas Fletcher, who was at Magdalen in 1509, migrated to Fotheringhay in 1512. By 1528 the Fotheringhay Davy was drawing the largest salary among the clerks, and was still receiving payment there in 1535. In his will, dated 31 March 1538, Davy, 'seyke and dysseased in body', requested to be buried in the parish side of the church in the middle aisle between the west door and the gravestone of the Fotheringay composer Cotterell.

None of these Davys seems compatible with the Richard Davy who was chaplain, from 1501 to 1516, to Sir William Boleyn (d 1505) and his son, Sir Thomas Boleyn, at Blickling, Norfolk (see Grattan Flood); Emden suggested that this man is identifiable with the Richard Davys formerly of Merton College.

Only Browne and Lambe have more pieces in the Eton Choirbook than Davy; the greater floridity but more underlying simplicity of his music suggests that he could belong to a later generation. Further copies of his music in GB-Kjc K 31 (James 234), Cu Dd.13.27, Lbl Add.34191 and Lbl Harl.1719 attest to his popularity. Historically his most interesting achievement is his four-voice setting of the Passion according to St Matthew (ex.1). This follows 15th-century precedent in setting the entire Synagoga part, and not merely the voces turbarum as in later compositions. The first 11 of its 42 choruses are now entirely missing (they have been supplied in Harrison's edition from the music of later sections), while of nos.12–23 only two parts are extant.

WORKS

Editions: The Eton Choirbook, ed. F.Ll. Harrison, MB, x–xii (1956–61, 2/1967–73) [H x-xii]
Early Tudor Songs and Carols, ed. J. Stevens, MB, xxxvi (1975) [S]

In honore summae matris, 5vv H xi, 105
O Domine caeli terraeque, 5vv, H xi, 62
Salve Jesu mater vera, 5vv, H xi, 73
Salve regina, 5vv, H x, 108
Stabat mater, 5vv, H xi, 83
Virgo templum Trinitas, 5vv, H xi, 94

A blessid Jhesu, 3vv, GB-Lbl Add.5465, US-NYp Drexel 4180; S 113
A myn hart remembir the well, 3vv, GB-Lbl Add.5465, S 118
Jhoone is sike, 3vv, Lbl Add.5465, US-NYp Drexel 4180, S 124 (for a lost source see E.F. Rimbault: A Little Book of Songs and Ballads, London, 1851, p.40)

LOST OR INCOMPLETE

Magnificat, 5vv, lost
Magnificat, inc., 4vv, H xii, 162 (incipit only printed)
Passio Domini in ramis palmarum, inc., 4vv, H xii, 112
Gaude flore virginali, 6vv, H xii, 136
Nowe the lawe is led, 2vv (T only), GB-Lbl Add.5465; S 37

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HarrisonMMB
W.H. Grattan Flood: Early Tudor Composers (London, 1925/R), 60–63
A.B. Emden: A Biographical Register of the University of Oxford to A.D. 1500 (Oxford,1957–9)
H. Benham: Latin Church Music in England c.1460–1575 (London, 1977), 89–93
N. Orme: 'The Early Musicians of Exeter Cathedral', ML, lix (1978), 395–410
D. Fallows: 'The Drexel Fragments of Early Tudor Song', RMARC, no.26 (1993), 5–18

DAVID SKINNER

Davys [Davies], Mary [Moll]. See DAVIS, MARY.

Dawīdha. A term for the Psalter in the Assyrian Church; see SYRIAN CHURCH MUSIC, §3(iii).

Dawson, Lynne (b York, 3 June 1956). English soprano. She studied at the GSM, made her début as Countess Almaviva with Kent Opera in 1986 and sang Music in Monteverdi's Orfeo (a role she later recorded) at Florence the following year. Her other roles have included Zdenka in Arabella (1988) and Xiphares in Mitridate (1991), both at the Châtelet, Paris; Pamina for Scottish Opera (1988); Konstanze at La Monnaie (1990), a role she subsequently recorded with Hogwood; and Teresa (Benvenuto Cellini) at Amsterdam in 1991. She is a good linguist and has brought particular conviction and charm to the roles of Angelica in Handel's Orlando, Pamina, and Sandrina in Mozart's La finta giardiniera. Her warmly coloured, clear-textured voice, with its sensitively controlled vibrato, is admirably suited to the Baroque and Classical repertory. Dawson's unaffected personality and interpretative freshness communicate themselves strongly in English Baroque operas, her recordings of which include Venus and Adonis, Dido and Aeneas, The Fairy Queen and Timon of Athens. Her other operatic recordings include Gluck's Orfeo and Iphigénie en Aulide and Mozart's Zaide and Don Giovanni. Dawson is also a stylish and sympathetic concert singer, and has recorded music ranging from Handel oratorios and Bach cantatas, through Schumann lieder, to works by Herbert Howells and Arvo Pärt.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON

Dawson, Peter (b Adelaide, 31 Jan 1882; d Sydney, 26 Sept 1961). Australian bass-baritone. He studied at home with J.C. Stevens, then in England with Charles Santley, singing to him at an audition Handel's 'O ruddier than the cherry', which became one of his calling cards over the next 50 years. Santley arranged Dawson's first concert tour of Britain, with Emma Albani, in 1902, the event that was to launch his career. Apart from appearances as the Nightwatchman in Die Meistersinger during the Covent Garden season of English opera in 1909 under Richter, he favoured oratorio and concerts over opera, declaring the latter to be 'too much work for too little pay'. However, he did not exclude opera from his recitals and practically always mixed aria with classical song and ballads in his programmes. Dawson described himself as a 'singer of the people' and believed it essential to communicate directly with his public; to this end he sang all his repertory in English, employing impeccable diction. His bluff, outgoing personality, strong, well-produced voice and faultless technique are reflected in his many recordings (spanning half a century), all of which arrest the listener with their immediacy of interpretation. He published an autobiography, Fifty Years of Song (London, 1951/R).

ALAN BLYTH

Dawson, William Levi (b Anniston, AL, 23 Sept 1899; d Montgomery, AL, 2 May 1990). American composer and choral conductor. He first heard black American folksongs as a child in rural Alabama. At the age of 15 he left home to attend the Tuskegee Institute, where he studied the piano and composition, and participated in the band and choir. After his graduation he moved to Kansas City, Missouri, where he played the trombone in local jazz ensembles and on the Redpath Chautaugua circuit (1921). During this period he taught music at Kansas Vocational College (Topeka, 1921–2) and Lincoln High School (Kansas City, 1922–7), and obtained the BMus degree from the Horner Institute of Fine Arts, Kansas City (1925).

After moving to Chicago, where he played the bass with jazz performers such as Louis and Lillian Armstrong, Johnny Dodds and Earl Hines, Dawson continued his studies at the Chicago Musical College (where his teachers included Borowski) and the American Conservatory of Music. He also played first trombone in the Chicago Civic Orchestra. Serving as the music director of Ebenezer Baptist Church renewed his interest in black American folksong, and prompted him to begin publishing arrangements of black American spirituals.

In 1931 Dawson returned to the Tuskegee Institute where he taught until 1956. Under his direction, the Tuskegee Choir received international acclaim. He later toured internationally as a guest conductor, often performing his own arrangements of spirituals.

Dawson was one of the two or three most significant black American composers of the first half of the 20th century, and black American folksong formed the core of his aesthetic. His musical language, however, is equally indebted to jazz and contemporary concert music. His best-known composition, The Negro Folk Symphony (1934; rev. 1952), is one of a trio of symphonies based on black American folk idioms written by black American composers during the early 1930s. Along with the symphonies of William Grant Still and Florence Price, The Negro Folk Symphony epitomizes the musical aspirations of Harlem Renaissance intellectuals. The symphony's three movements, entitled 'The Bond of Africa', 'Hope in the Night' and 'O Lem-me Shine', clearly reflect Dawson's interest in black American culture. His vocal music, particularly his arrangements of spirituals (Talk about a Child that do Love Jesus and King Jesus) have become permanent fixtures in the choral repertory.

Principal publishers: Kjos, Shawnee, Warner

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans (New York, 1971, 3/1997)

J.G. Spady, ed.: William L. Dawson: a Umum Tribute and a Marvelous Journey (Philadelphia, 1981)

R.L. Brown: 'William Grant Still, Florence Price, and William Dawson: Echoes of the Harlem Renaissance', Black Music of the Harlem Renaissance, ed. S. Floyd jr and J. Wright (Westport, CT, 1990), 71–86

WILLIE STRONG

Day, Alfred (b London, Jan 1810; d London, 11 Feb 1849). English music theorist. His father discouraged his musical interests in favour of medicine, which according to early biographical accounts he studied in London and Paris, receiving a diploma in homeopathic medicine from Heidelberg. Only his death certificate, which lists his profession as 'surgeon', indicates that he actually practised medicine. His only music teacher was W.H. Kearns, but he associated with several talented musical contemporaries; the most important of them was Sir George Alexander Macfarren at whose insistence Day began the preparation of his controversial Treatise on Harmony. Work on the treatise was begun in 1840, the year in which Day became a critic of new music for the Musical World. The periodical's editor George Macfarren, his good friend's father, soon became dissatisfied with the 'laconical bitterness' of Day's unsigned reviews and appointed J.W. Davison as his replacement. The publication of Day's treatise (London, 1845, 2/1885 ed. G.A. Macfarren) was greeted with critical disdain, and for many years Macfarren was the only proponent of Day's theoretical views. When he was questioned about the efficacy of his teaching Day's hypotheses, Macfarren went so far as to resign his appointment at the RAM because he refused to 'succumb by teaching contrary to his convictions'.

Day believed that two styles of harmonic writing existed: the diatonic or strict style, in which all dissonances needed careful preparation, and the chromatic or free style, in which dissonances might be used freely and 'notes foreign to the diatonic scales [could be introduced] without the key being changed'. All chords in the key, in his view, were generated from one of three 'roots' or 'fundamentals': the tonic, dominant or supertonic. By superimposing as many as six 3rds on each of these notes, Day was able to explain the existence of other chords in a manner which, in many instances, differed markedly from conventionally accepted rationalizations. Only the simultaneities in ex.1 were indigenous to his theory of harmony. The resultant sonorities were virtually parallel, the notable exception being that an 11th chord could occur only on the dominant.

Many unnecessary intricacies resulted from the rather rigid and arbitrary construction of these fundamental combinations. For example, what is conventionally seen as a C major or minor subdominant chord (such as F–A(A♭)–C) was interpreted by Day as a dominant chord containing a 7th, a major or minor 9th and an 11th, with the root, 3rd and 5th omitted. The same construction with the 5th superimposed would be explained as an added 6th (such as F–A–C–D). The augmented 6th, however, was derived from two roots. The interval A♭–F♯ in Day's system contains the minor 9th of the fundamental G and the major 3rd of the root D. Day also perceived an augmented triad as the root, 3rd and minor 13th of a fundamental sonority (e.g. C–E–A♭–G♯); consequently, he believed that composers generally spelt augmented chords incorrectly. He described a minor key as the result of arbitrary, not natural, changes of the 3rd and 6th degrees of the major scale; for consistency, he then advocated the exclusive use of the harmonic form of the minor scale.

Although Day's theories, in many respects, cloud rather than clarify the essential principles of harmony, they exercised a profound influence on musical pedagogy in England through the subsequent writings of Macfarren, Ouseley and the early works of Ebenezer Prout.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.E. Stephens: 'On the Fallacies of Dr. Day's Theory of Harmony, with a Brief Outline of the Elements of a New System', PMA, i (1874–5), 51–73

E. Prout: 'Some Suggested Modifications of Day's Theory of Harmony', PMA, xiv (1887–8), 90–117

C.W. Pearce: 'Some Further Modifications of Day's System of Harmony, Suggested from an Educational Point of View', PMA, xiv (1887–8), 173–99

H.C. Banister: George Alexander Macfarren (London, 1891)

M. Shirlaw: The Theory of Harmony (London, 1917, 2/1955/R)

G. Haydon: 'Alfred Day and the Theory of Harmony', PAMS 1939, 233–40

E.R. Jacobi: Die Entwicklung der Musiktheorie in England nach der Zeit von Jean-Philippe Rameau (Strasbourg, 1957–60, 2/1971 with facs. from Day's treatise and further bibliography)

P.C. Jones: Alfred Day and Nineteenth-Century Theory of Harmony in England (diss., Rutgers U., 1977)

PATRICIA COLLINS JONES

Day [Kappelhoff], Doris (b Cincinnati, 3 April 1924). American singer and actress. She sang with the Bob Crosby band and Fred Waring before her recordings with Les Brown's Band of Renown, particularly Sentimental Journey (1944), brought her nationwide recognition. She made her first film, Romance on the High Seas, in which she introduced the song 'It's magic' (1948), and won Academy awards for her performances of 'Secret Love' in Calamity Jane (1954) and 'Que sera, sera' in The Man Who Knew Too Much (1955). Her greatest success, however, was her role in Love Me or Leave Me (1955). She appeared in 39 films including, in the 1960s, a series of sex comedies, in which she portrayed a naive, virginal heroine with freckles and a shy smile. Her singing, based on the style of Ella Fitzgerald, was mellifluous, ingratiating and even intimate.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CBY 1954

A.E. Hotchner: Doris Day: Her Own Story (New York, 1976)

D. Ewen: All the Years of American Popular Music (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1977)

C. Young: The Films of Doris Day (New York, 1977)

ARNOLD SHAW

Day, John (b Dunwich, Suffolk, 1522; d Walden, Essex, 23 July 1584). English printer, father of RICHARD DAY. He was one of the most successful general printers of his generation, but his music printing was almost entirely limited to two works: Certaine Notes set forth in Foure and Three Parts and The Whole Booke of Psalmes, Collected into English Metre by T. Sternhold, I. Hopkins & Others ... with Apt Notes to Synge them withal, known as the Sternhold-Hopkins psalter. Certaine Notes was probably compiled before 1553 and partially printed in 1560, but it was not until 1565 that the whole anthology was completely issued, under the amended title Mornyng and Evenyng Prayer. Day first published The Whole Booke of Psalmes in 1562, under the terms of a monopoly granted to him by the crown in 1559 that gave him sole right to print the work, which became extremely popular. He had the patent of monopoly renewed in 1567 and 1577, the latter renewal extending the terms to include his son, RICHARD DAY, who had joined him that year. Day acquired several other printing monopolies on which he built a virtual printing empire, becoming master of the Stationers' Company in 1580. In 1583 he is reported as owning four presses, from which he produced 36 separate editions of the Sternhold-Hopkins psalter. Whether or not he played any part in the choice of the psalm tunes is difficult to determine, but there is ample evidence that he regarded the book as a business asset. His only secular music printing was Thomas Whythorne's Songes for Three, Fower and Five Voyces (1571) which was a commercial failure. It is difficult to accept Whythorne's claim that the book failed because it had been 'very ill printed' as all the products of the Day press are of a high standard and he must have employed journeymen of great skill. His music books show a clean, crisp impression with spacious layout and accurate registration. He had two shops in London, one in Aldersgate and another in St Paul's Churchyard; his son succeeded him when he died.

For illustration see PRINTING AND PUBLISHING OF MUSIC, fig.21.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HumphriesSmithMP; KrummelEMP

E. Arber, ed.: A Transcript of the Registers of the Company of Stationers of London, 1554–1640, i–iv (London, 1875–7/R); v (Birmingham, 1894/R)

R. Steele: The Earliest English Music Printing (London, 1903/R)

E.G. Duff: A Century of the English Book Trade (London, 1905/R)

J.M. Osborn, ed.: Thomas Whythorne: Autobiography (Oxford, 1961)

C.L. Oastler: John Day, the Elizabethan Printer (Oxford, 1975)

J. Aplin: 'The Origins of John Day's "Certaine Notes"', ML, lxi (1981), 295–9

H. Nixon: 'Day's Service Book, 1560–1565', British Library Journal, x/1 (1984), 1–31

MIRIAM MILLER

Day, Richard (b London, 21 Dec 1552; d before 1607). English music publisher, son of JOHN DAY. He was trained as a scholar, becoming a Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, in 1574. Family pressures obliged him to return to his father's business in London, and he was admitted to the Stationers' Company in 1577. With his father he held several printing monopolies, including one that gave them sole right to print the Sternhold-Hopkins psalter, in which the metrical psalms were set to music. After his father's death in 1584, Day never printed this work himself but assigned his rights to other printers; he authorized 46 separate printings, bringing the total printed under the monopoly to 82. The work was continually pirated and Day was involved in several legal actions. When Thomas Morley acquired a general music-printing monopoly from the queen in 1598, the terms conflicted with Day's. Morley published Richard Allison's Psalmes of David in Metre (1599), in which Alison had reset the old church tunes and added an instrumental accompaniment. Day regarded this as an infringement of his long-standing monopoly, and a dispute ensued between them which the Bishop of London attempted to settle. He did not succeed, and whether any settlement was reached is not known. In 1604 James I sold all the printing monopolies to the Stationers' Company, the psalter monopoly among them. Day's fate is obscure: he had taken holy orders in 1583, becoming vicar of Reigate, but left the following year.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Arber, ed.: A Transcript of the Registers of the Company of Stationers of London, 1554–1640, i–iv (London, 1875–7/R); v (Birmingham, 1894/R)

Calendar of the Manuscripts of the Most Honourable the Marquis of Salisbury, Preserved at Hatfield House, Hertfordshire (London, 1883–1976)

R.B. McKerrow, ed.: A Dictionary of Printers and Booksellers ... 1557–1640 (London, 1910/R)

MIRIAM MILLER

Daye [Daue, Dauey] (*fl c*1430–60). English composer. A short Kyrie setting in score and an incomplete Gloria setting, both for three voices and dating from the early to mid-15th century, are attributed to him or her in a fragment of a choirbook, now GB-HFr 57533.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Wathey: Music in the Royal and Noble Households in Late Medieval England (New York, 1989), 34

G. Curtis and A.Wathey: 'Fifteenth-Century English Liturgical Music: a List of the Surviving Repertory', RMARC, no.26 (1994), 1–69

ANDREW WATHEY

Dayo y Lana, Miguel Matheo de. See DALLO Y LANA, MIGUEL MATHEO DE.

Daza [Daça], Esteban (b Valladolid, *c*1537; d Valladolid, 1591–6). Spanish vihuelist and composer. He was the eldest of fourteen children in a respected middle-class family, owners of a private chapel in the prestigious monastic church of S Benito. Six of his siblings entered religious orders, while Esteban and three of his brothers studied at the University of Valladolid. Having graduated by 1563, he chose – contrary to the wishes of his father – not to continue his studies in law. The family lived austerely, but income from rents was sufficient for Esteban not to need to practise a profession. He appears also to have shirked the customary responsibilities of an eldest son, leaving them to his brother Baltasar. For a short period following the death of his mother in 1585 he lived with his other unmarried siblings in a house bequeathed to them by an uncle, and from 1589 until at least December 1590 he resided in a house owned by his brother Baltasar outside the city wall. He died some time between 1591 and 1596, and was presumably buried in the family chapel in S Benito.

On 29 June 1575, Daza was granted a licence to publish his Libro de Musica en cifras para Vihuela, intitulado el Parnasso (Valladolid, 1576/*R*1978; ed. R. de Zayas, Esteban Daça: Parnasso, Los vihuelistas, Madrid, 1983) with copyright for ten years. On 13 January 1576 he contracted with Diego Fernández de Córdoba to produce an edition of 1500 copies at a cost of 1575 reales. Published on 12 April 1576 and sold for 136 maravedís per copy, El Parnasso is dedicated to a family friend, Hernando de Hábalos de Soto, a lawyer in the Royal Chancellory and a member of Philip II's Supreme Council. The book's introduction is paraphrased from Narváez's Delphín (1538), and further internal detail shows Daza also to have been familiar with Mudarra's Tres libros (1546).

El Parnasso is divided into three books of music, and demands a high level of instrumental competence. The first book (ed. in RRMR, liv, 1982) contains 14 fantasias in four parts and four in three parts, composed in a polished though conservative style following the example of the theorist Santa María. The fantasias are composed of points of imitation using brief subjects to achieve a concise yet complex polyphonic discourse. They are structured with attention to proportional balance as well as narrative continuity, and it is likely that they were composed first in score and subsequently translated into tablature. Indications of the mode of each work and the location on the instrument (course and fret) of the F or C clefs clarify for the player the variable relationship between mode and pitch. A further four fantasias 'in long passages to develop the hands' alternate sections of imitative polyphony with passages based on scales and figuration.

The second and third books constitute an anthology of intabulated motets and secular works closely faithful to their vocal models. Daza added cadential ornamentation and chromatic inflection, and divided semibreves into repeated minims. In each work, the part designated 'to be sung if desired' is indicated by the addition of dots placed next to the tablature numbers, and the text is printed beneath the tablature. No discernible preference is shown for any particular vocal range, but the manner of notation makes it clear that the author's intention was for them to be sung by the vihuelist. Book 2 comprises 13 motets by Spanish and foreign composers including Pedro and Francisco Guerrero, Basurto, Richafort, Maillard and Crecquillon, in addition to six works from the first books of motets (1544) by Simon Boyleau. One romance, 13 sonetos and villanescas by such composers as Ceballos, Francisco Guerrero, Navarro and Ordonez, 11 villancicos and two French chansons make up book 3. Vocal models survive for only nine of the Spanish works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI

J. Ward: The Vihuela de Mano and its Music (1536–76) (diss., New York U., 1953)

J. Griffiths: 'The Vihuela Book "El Parnaso" by Esteban Daza', SMA, x (1976), 37–51

J. Griffiths: The Vihuela Fantasia: a Comparative Study of Forms and Styles (diss., Monash U., 1983)

C. Jacobs: A Spanish Renaissance Songbook (University Park, PA, 1988) [incl. edn of 15 songs]

J. Griffiths and W.E. Hultberg: 'Santa Maria and the Printing of Instrumental Music in Sixteenth-Century Spain', Livro de homenagem a Macario Santiago Kastner, ed. M.F. Fernanda Cidrais Rodrigues and others (Lisbon, 1992), 345–60

J. Griffiths: 'Esteban Daza: un enigma desvelado de un vihuelista español', La enseñanza de la lengua y cultura españolas en Australia y Nueva Zelanda, ed. A. Monclús Estela (Madrid, 1993), 135–55
J. Griffiths: 'Esteban Daza: a Gentleman Musician in Renaissance Spain', EMc, xxiii (1995), 437–48

JOHN GRIFFITHS

D.C. See DA CAPO.

De. The sharpened form of DOH in TONIC SOL-FA.

Deagan. American firm of instrument makers. John C. Deagan (b England, 1852; d Hermosa Beach, CA, 1932) established in 1880 the J.C. Deagan Musical Bells Co. of St Louis, which moved to San Francisco in 1891 (becoming J.C. Deagan & Co. in 1895) and then to Chicago in 1897. His firm's instruments were manufactured to a high degree of precision; he was responsible for the recognition of a′ = 440 as standard pitch. The first instrument manufactured by his firm was an orchestral glockenspiel that had steel bars tuned according to Hermann von Helmholtz's principles. This was followed by cathedral chimes (1886), the first xylophone of orchestral quality (1886), and tuned sleigh bells (1893). By 1910 the Deagan catalogue consisted of 600 items, including 63 models of glockenspiel, 80 xylophones, and 60 sets of chimes; in 1916 the first large, electrically driven, tubular brass church bells were introduced. Two important innovations made by the firm were a vibraphone with aluminium alloy tone bars (1927) and the Celesta-Chime, an electric tower carillon (1937). In 1961 the firm introduced three new marimbas, a concert xylophone, 'symphonic' orchestral chimes, a deluxe bell-lyra, and a new glockenspiel. In 1978 Deagan became associated with the Slingerland Drum Co. (see SLINGERLAND) as a division of C.G. Conn. In 1984 both names and their product lines were purchased by the Sanlar Corporation and in 1986 the Deagan name was sold to Yamaha, which at the end of the 20th century manufactured only orchestral bells and tubular chimes under this brand. For further information see M. Wheeler: 'J.C. Deagan Percussion Instruments', Percussive Notes, xxxi/2 (1992), 60–64.

EDMUND A. BOWLES

Deak, Jon (b Hammond, IN, 27 April 1943). American composer and double bass player. He studied at the Oberlin College Conservatory, the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign and the Juilliard School of Music. In 1969 he joined the double bass section of the New York PO and in 1973 became its associate principal. His early compositional influences included Spike Jones, Jimi Hendrix, the standard orchestral repertory, surrealist art, the New York 'downtown' arts scene and Walt Disney, as well as Martirano, Cage and Druckman. These coalesced during the 1970s into a fascination with human speech as music, leading to cartoon-like works with dada-like texts, sometimes satirizing movies and televisions shows, in which instruments mimic the inflections of spoken dialogue. In 1980 he turned his attention to folk tales. His Concerto for Double Bass and Orchestra 'Jack and the Beanstalk' (1991) has been performed by over 30 ensembles. More tonal and more virtuosic than his earlier works, his later music requires instrumentalists (and even sometimes the conductor) to become overtly theatrical, assuming dramatic roles that may include spoken dialogue. From 1994 to 1997 Deak served as composer-in-residence with the Colorado SO, where, in addition to composing, he taught orchestral composition to children, a project to which he has been passionately committed.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dire Expectations (Gothic melodrama, 5), 2 fl, b cl, bn, dbn, str qnt, 1976; Lucy and the Count (Love Dreams from Transylvania), solo db, str qt, 1981; B.B. Wolf (An Apologia), db + spkr, 1982; Conc. 'The Headless Horseman of Sleepy Hollow', spkr, str qt, orch, 1991; Db Conc. 'Jack and the Beanstalk', db, orch, 1991; The Snow Queen, spkr + conductor, va obbl, db obbl, orch, 1991

GREGORY SANDOW

Deal and Walmer Handelian Society. See HANDEL SOCIETIES.

Deale, Edgar Martin (b Dublin, 1 Aug 1902). Irish composer and administrator. As a boy, he sang in the choir of Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, under Charles Kitson. Largely self-taught as a composer, apart from sporadic lessons with Turner Huggard and W.J. Watson, he wrote around 40 works between the early 1940s and the late 1970s while maintaining a career as a leading Dublin insurance manager. His compositional style is lyrical and his vocal and choral works, many of them settings of Irish poetry, show particular sympathy to the voice. He also completed numerous choral arrangements of traditional Irish songs. With Brian Boydell and Olive Smith, he founded the Music Association of Ireland and was actively involved in many of its projects. He edited the association's Catalogue of Contemporary Irish Composers (Dublin, 1968), the first publication of its kind. He also served as governor of the Royal Irish Academy of Music, president of the Culwick Choral Society and director of Concert and Assembly Hall Ltd. In the 1960s and 70s he campaigned vigorously to save Georgian Dublin from developers. Other projects included the founding of the Irish Association of Civil Liberty and the Safety First Association of Ireland (now the National Safety Council).

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: Ceol Mall Réidh [Slow Moving Music], orch, 1946; Bach: Genuflection Towards, orch, 1967; Carols Without Words, orch, 1967; Dublin Suite, ob d'amore, pf, 1969; Little Suite, eng hn, 1970; Sean-Scéalta [Legends], eng hn, 1970; 2 Sketches, Dublin, 1970; 3-Part Inventions, ens, 1973; Verse Forms, orch, 1973
Choral: 3 Christmas Songs (W. Yole), 1940; To all you Ladies now at Land (C. Sackville), 1942; Walter de la Mare Suite, 1945; Arranmore (T. Moore), 1953; A Virgin Unspotted, 1955; Hymnus ante somnum (Propertius), 1960; 5 Poets – 7 Songs (W. Shakespeare and others), Bar, SATB, cl, pf, 1961, arr. orch, 1965; Breathe a Gay Goodnight (G. Russell), 1963; A Pageaunt of Human Lyfe (T. More), SATB, orch, 1966; The Cloths of Heaven (W.B. Yeats), 1967; Everever Everever More (E.M. Deale), S, SATB, pf, 1967; 4 Facets (P. Colum), suite, SATB, pic, 1967; O Men from the Fields (Colum), 1967; Pangur Bán (trad. Irish), 1967; The Time I've Lost in Wooing (Moore), 1972; Weep Not, My Wanton (R. Greene), 1972
Solo vocal: A Pageaunt of Human Lyfe (T. More), song cycle, 1945; Shining Bright (R. Coghill), 1960; Poems by Bryan Guinness no.1, 1962; The Louthwoman's Ballad (E.M. Deale), 1967; O Men from the Fields (P. Colum), 1968; Pangur Bán (trad. Irish), 1968; For the Feast of Christmas (anon. 16th century), suite, 1972; The Time I've Lost in Wooing (T. Moore), 1973; Weep not, my Wanton (R. Greene), 1973; Poems by Bryan Guinness no.2, 1973

MSS in IRL-Dtc

Principal publishers: Elkin, OUP, Roberton

EVE O'KELLY

De Amicis [De Amicis-Buonsollazzi], Anna Lucia (b Naples, *c*1733; d Naples, 1816). Italian soprano. Taught by her father, she began performing in comic operas with her family in the 1750s in Italy, Paris and Brussels, then in 1762 made her London début at the King's Theatre. Following her début as a serious singer in J.C. Bach's Orione (1763), she left comic opera. As prima donna in Milan (1764–5), Venice (1764), Vienna and Innsbruck (1765), Naples (1766) and Florence (1767), she became involved in theatrical disputes and wished to retire. But after marriage (1768) to the Florentine physician Francesco Buonsollazzi she resumed her career, singing in Venice (1768–9, 1770–71) and Naples (1769–70, 1771–2, in Jommelli's Armida abbandonata and Ifigenia in Tauride). Mozart praised her highly, and in the role of Junia she ensured the success of his Lucio Silla in Milan (1772). Engagements in Naples (1773–6), Turin (1776–9) and the Italian première of Gluck's Alceste (1778, Bologna) concluded her brilliant career, though she sang for at least another ten years in private Neapolitan productions.

De Amicis amazed listeners with her vocal agility. Burney described her as the first to sing staccato divisions, and the first to 'go up to E flat in altissimo, with true, clear, and powerful real voice'. She was equally impressive as an actress: Metastasio wrote that 'among the dramatic heroines ... there was absolutely no one but the Signora De Amicis suited to portray the character ... with the fire, the boldness, the frankness, and the expression necessary'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; ES (U. Prota-Giurleo and E. Zanetti); LS; SartoriL
E. Anderson, ed.: The Letters of Mozart and his Family (London, 1938, 3/1985)
B. Brunelli, ed.: Tutte le opere di Pietro Metastasio, iv–v (Milan, 1954)

KATHLEEN KUZMICK HANSELL

Dean, Roger (b Manchester, 6 Sept 1948). English composer, active in Australia. He studied the double bass with Eugene Cruft after displaying precocious talent. Self-taught as a composer, Dean maintained an aesthetic opposition to precisely notated scores during the 1970s. In such works as Autonomy and Heteronomy (both 1980) he explored non-notated ways of controlling the musical process during improvisation and different modes of player interaction. Through this exploration he developed an intensification of rhythmic processes through repetition, metric modulation and multiple layering. The results of this work are found in a series of recordings with Lysis, an ensemble which he founded in 1975, and with Ken Wheeler, John Wallace, Graham Collier and others. During the 1980s many of these principles were applied to notated and part-improvised scores. Dean's harmonic language moves between diatonicism, atonality and microtonality; in his microtonal works he has used digitally synthesized, MIDI-coded and sampled elements. His process of transforming pre-existing material is evident in the brass quintet B-A and B.A. (1985), which uses B.A. Zimmermann's Die Soldaten as a source. Rhythm, texture and meaning interact in text-sound works such as Poet without Language (1991) and Caged John Uncaged (1992). An improviser and interpreter of notated scores on both double bass and keyboard, Dean is also a scientist, founding the ensemble austraLYSIS after moving to Sydney in 1989 to direct the Heart Research Institute.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Piece A, jazz orch, 1981; Studies 1–2, jazz orch, 1981; Artforming, jazz orch, 1983; Inventions and Rights, jazz orch, 1989; Sonopetal, 1995

Ens: A.S.: a tribute to Alan Skidmore, 1970; Autonomy 3–4, 1980; Heteronomy 1–4, 1980; Suite: Time, jazz ens, 1980; The Debris of All Certainties, vn, 2 ens, 1981; New Remembrances 1–2, 1982; Metropolitan After Images, 1985; You-Yangs: after Fred Williams, improvising ens, 1985; Alela, ens, sequencer, 1986; Round Midday, jazz ens, 1986; Djurdi-Djurdi, 1987; The Horses, 1987; Bass Metal, ens, tape, 1991; Not Defying Gravity, ens, dancers, 1991; TimeDances, ens, dancers, 1991; TimeDancesPeace, ens, dancers, 1991, Nuraghic Echoes, spkr, ens, 1993, collab. H. Smith

3–5 insts: Trio, cl, vc, vib, 1967; Qt, tpt, db, pf, perc, 1975; To Paul Bley, pf, db, perc, 1976, rev. 1990; Autonomy 1, pf, db, perc, 1980, rev. 1990; Breaking Worlds, cl, vn, db, 1980; A.A., jazz trio, 1982; B-A and B.A., brass qnt, 1985; Dye Pulse, sax, db, perc, 1989; Reins, sax, db, perc, elecs, 1989; Take Five Again, sax, db, perc, 1989; Tones and Times, sax, db, perc, 1989; Silent Waves, spkr, 2 insts, tape, 1992, collab. Smith; Elektra Pulses, str qt, tape, 1993

1–2 insts: Study, db, 1969; After Bill, pf, 1981; Certain Roads to Uncertain Lands, vn, db, 1981; Conversely, tpt, pf, tape, 1981; Blues Multiple, cl, pf, 1983; Motel Mobile, fl, gui, 1985; Heteroduplex, 2 pf, 1987; Seven is Even, perc, 1989, rev. 1991; Timestrain: Trane's Time Emit, cl, pf, elecs, 1989; Harry's Tune, pf, 1990; Sound Engines, 2 pf, 1990; Poet without Language, spkr, synth, 1991, collab. Smith; Caged John Uncaged, spkr, db, 1992, collab. Smith; ... it gets complicated ..., pf, 1992; Raising not Climbing, vc, 1993; The Riting of the Runda, spkr, tape, cptr, 1994, collab. Smith; Three Bagatelles, pf, 1994; Warshaweshadow, vc, tape, 1995

Principal recording companies: Mosaic, Soma, Tall Poppies

WRITINGS

Creative Improvisation: Jazz, Contemporary Music and Beyond (Milton Keynes, 1989)
New Structures in Jazz and Improvised Music since 1960 (Milton Keynes, 1992) with H. Smith: Improvisation, Hypermedia and the Arts since 1945 (London, 1997)

PETER McCALLUM

Dean, Thomas. See DEANE, THOMAS.

Dean, Winton (Basil) (b Birkenhead, 18 March 1916). English writer on music. A son of Basil Dean, the theatre producer, he was educated at Harrow and Cambridge, where he read classics and English (BA 1938, MA 1941); he studied music privately with Philip Radcliffe. At Cambridge he saw and participated in some of the Handel oratorio stagings of the 1930s, which implanted a deep feeling for Handel as a dramatic composer. After World War II Dean began to become known as a writer on music and especially on 19th-century opera. His first book was a study of Bizet (1948), notable for its balanced criticism and its penetrating discussion of the composer's development as a musical dramatist (it was later expanded to incorporate new documentary material). He became a regular contributor to various periodicals, notably the Musical Times and Opera; his criticism of opera performances in the Musical Times over a long period is notable for its vigour and elegance of expression and its clear view of the nature of musical drama.

Dean's most important single work is his substantial study Handel's Dramatic Oratorios and Masques (1959), which, with its thorough examination of source material and its breadth of intellectual approach, set new standards in English musical scholarship and in Handel criticism. In it he argued that Handel's dramatic gifts found their fullest expression in the oratorios of his mature years and that many of these works were apt for stage revival.

Dean's book did much to stimulate interest in the staging of Handel's works, his operas as well as his oratorios; and when he spent a year (1965–6) at the University of California, Berkeley, as Ernest Bloch Professor, his lectures were on the style and dramatic method of Handel's operas (published in 1969 as Handel and the Opera Seria). His extended historical, critical and source study of the operas up to 1726, in collaboration with J. Merrill Knapp, was published in 1987 and a second volume (alone) was begun soon after. Dean has prepared a number of editions, including (in collaboration with Sarah Fuller) Handel's Giulio Cesare in Egitto. While Handel has remained at the centre of his studies, Dean has written with equal distinction on other topics, notably French opera in the post-Revolution period and Italian opera in the decades preceding Verdi. He was made FBA in 1975 and a vice-president of the Halle Händel Gesellschaft in 1991, won a City of Halle Handel Prize in 1995 and was awarded the honorary MusD at Cambridge in 1996.

WRITINGS

'An Unfinished Opera by Bizet', ML, xxviii (1947), 347–63
Bizet (London, 1948, rev. 2/1965 as Georges Bizet: his Life and Work, 3/1975/R; It. trans., rev., 1980; Ger. trans., rev., 1988)
Carmen (London, 1949)
'Music – and Letters? An Impertinent Enquiry', ML, xxx (1949), 376–80
Introduction to the Music of Bizet (London, 1950)
Franck (London, 1951)
'Giacomo Puccini (1858–1924)', The Heritage of Music, ed. H. Foss, iii (London, 1951), 153–71
'The Dramatic Element in Handel's Oratorios', PRMA, lxxix (1952–3), 33–49
'Bizet's Ivan IV', Fanfare for Ernest Newman, ed. H. Van Thal (London, 1955), 58–85
Handel's Dramatic Oratorios and Masques (London, 1959/R)
'Bizet's Self-Borrowings', ML, xli (1960), 238–44
'Shakespeare and Opera', Shakespeare in Music, ed. P. Hartnoll (London, 1964), 89–175
'The True Carmen?', MT, cvi (1965), 846–55
'Opera under the French Revolution', PRMA, xciv (1967–8), 77–96
Handel and the Opera Seria (Berkeley, 1969)
'Vocal Embellishment in a Handel Aria', Studies in Eighteenth-Century Music: a Tribute to Karl Geiringer, ed. H.C.R. Landon and R.E. Chapman (New York and London, 1970), 151–9
'Beethoven and Opera', The Beethoven Companion, ed. D. Arnold and N. Fortune (London, 1971; New York, 1971, as The Beethoven Reader), 331–86
'Charles Jennens's Marginalia to Mainwaring's Life of Handel', ML, liii (1972), 160–64
'Some Echoes of Donizetti in Verdi's Operas', Studi verdiani III: Milan 1972, 122–47
'Donizetti's Serious Operas', PRMA, c (1973–4), 123–41
'A French Traveller's View of Handel's Operas', ML, lv (1974), 172–8
'Handel's "Sosarme", a Puzzle Opera', Essays on Opera and English Music in Honour of Sir Jack Westrup, ed. F.W. Sternfeld, N. Fortune and E. Olleson (Oxford, 1975), 115–47; repr. in The Garland Library of the History of Western Music, ed. E. Rosand, xi (New York, 1985), 279–312
'Edward J. Dent: a Centenary Tribute', ML, lvii (1976), 353–61
ed.: E.J. Dent: The Rise of Romantic Opera (Cambridge, 1976)
'The Performance of Recitative in Late Baroque Opera', ML, lviii (1977), 389–402
'Meyerbeer's Italian Operas', Music and Bibliography: Essays in Honour of Alec Hyatt King, ed. O. Neighbour (London, 1980), 170–83
'French Opera', 'Italian Opera', 'German Opera', NOHM, viii (1982), 26–119, 376–451, 452–522
'Händels kompositorische Entwicklung in den Opern der Jahre 1724/25', HJb 1982, 23–34
The New Grove Handel (London, 1982)
'Mattheson's Arrangement of Handel's Radamisto for the Hamburg Opera', New Mattheson Studies, ed. G.J. Buelow and H.J. Marx (Cambridge, 1983), 169–78
'Handel and Alessandro Scarlatti', Händel e gli Scarlatti a Roma: Rome 1985, 1–14
'Handel's Early London Copyists', Bach, Handel, Scarlatti: Tercentenary Essays, ed. P. Williams (Cambridge, 1985), 75–98
'Scholarship and the Handel Revival 1935–1985', Handel: Tercentenary Collection, ed. S. Sadie and A. Hicks (Basingstoke, 1987), 1–18
Essays on Opera (Oxford, 1990, 2/1993)
'A New Source for Handel's Amadigi', ML, lxxii (1991), 27–37
'Handel's Atalanta', Sundry Sorts of Music Books: Essays on the British Library Collection presented to O.W. Neighbour, ed. C. Banks, A. Searle and M. Turner (London, 1993), 215–30
'The Malmesbury Collection', Handel Collections and their History, ed. T. Best (Oxford, 1993), 29–38
'Handel's Relations with the Librettists of his Operas', Georg Friedrich Händel: ein Lebensinhalt: Gedenkschrift für Bernd Baselt (1934–1993), ed. K. Hortschansky and K. Musketa (Kassel, 1995), 99–111
'Handel's Serse', Opera and the Enlightenment, ed. T. Bauman and M.P. McClymonds (Cambridge, 1995), 135–67
'The Making of Alcina', Con che soavità: Studies in Italian Opera, Song, and Dance, 1580–1740, ed. I. Fenlon and T. Carter (Oxford, 1995), 312–20
'Production Style in Handel's Operas', The Cambridge Companion to Handel, ed. D. Burrows (Cambridge, 1997), 249–61

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Fortune, ed.: Music and Theatre: Essays in Honour of Winton Dean (Cambridge, 1987) [incl. further list of writings]

STANLEY SADIE

Deane, Basil (b Bangor, Co. Down, 27 May 1928). Northern Ireland musicologist. From 1946 to 1951 he studied at the Queen's University, Belfast (BA 1949, BMus 1951), and he was appointed assistant lecturer at Glasgow University in 1953. In 1956 he became a full lecturer, and in 1959 (the year in which he took the doctorate at Glasgow University) he was appointed senior lecturer at Melbourne University. He returned to England in 1968 and was appointed James Rossiter Hoyle Professor of Music at Sheffield University. He became professor of music at Manchester University in 1975 and director of music of the Arts Council, 1980–83. His interests have ranged from Roussel to German Baroque opera (he has prepared performing versions of works by Keiser) and the music of Alun Hoddinott; he has also particularly studied the period around 1800, notably Cherubini and Beethoven, on whose early development he has worked and whose symphonies he discussed in a perceptive essay in The Beethoven Companion.

WRITINGS

Albert Roussel and his Place in Musical Tradition (diss., U. of Glasgow, 1959)
Albert Roussel (London, 1961/R)
Cherubini (London, 1965)
'The Symphonies and Overtures', 'The Concertos', The Beethoven Companion, ed. D. Arnold and N. Fortune (London, 1971; New York, 1971, as The Beethoven Reader), 218–317, 318–30
'The French Operatic Overture from Grétry to Berlioz', PRMA, xcix (1972–3), 67–80
'Reinhard Keiser: an Interim Assessment', Soundings [Cardiff], iv (1974), 30–41
Alun Hoddinott (Cardiff, 1978)
'Alun Hoddinott: the Seventies and After', Soundings [Cardiff], ix [recte viii] (1979–80), 6–13

DAVID SCOTT/ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Deane, Raymond (b Tuam, Co. Galway, 27 Jan 1953). Irish composer. He lived on Achill Island until the age of ten, when his family moved to Dublin. He studied the piano at the Dublin College of Music and then took the BMus at University College, Dublin (1970–74). He attended the Darmstadt summer courses in 1969 and between 1974 and 1979 he was in two-year periods a student successively at the Basle Musik-Akademie, the Musikhochschule in Cologne and the Hochschule der Künste in Berlin. His teachers included Gerald Bennett (in Basle), Stockhausen (in Cologne) and Isang Yun (in Berlin). He has lived and worked as a composer in Dublin, London and Paris, and he has travelled widely in Europe and South America. Deane was elected to membership of Aosdána, the state-sponsored association of Irish artists, in 1986 and he acted as Irish delegate at the ISCM festivals in Mexico (1993), Stockholm (1994) and Essen (1995). He is a founding member of the Association of Young Irish Composers. He is also active as a pianist, particularly in the performance of contemporary music.

Deane has published a novel, Death of a Medium (London, 1991), and his occasional writings include the essay 'The Honour of Non-Existence: Classical Composers in Irish Society', Music and Irish Cultural History, ed. G. Gillen and H. White (Dublin, 1995), 199–211, which challenges many of the prevailing cultural assumptions about music in Ireland, in particular, as he views it, the 'cultural imperialism' of the Celtic in Irish music. He is among the most trenchant critics of contemporary music in Ireland especially regarding the eclipse of contemporary classical music by other, more popular, modes of writing. Deane's own output is small. Some of the early works, including Embers for string quartet, later revised for chamber orchestra, and Idols for organ, show a preoccupation with minimalist techniques that re-surface in later compositions, including Quaternion for piano and orchestra and Dekatriad for 13 solo strings. He has identified Avatars for piano as a central work in which a modified serial technique is used to generate an expanded tonal vocabulary. Dekatriad sustains this manipulation of tonality, in which 'an attempt to get back to B♭' controls the surface structure of the piece. Although many of his textures tend towards lyricism and introspection, some works, including Fügung for bass clarinet and harpsichord and the oboe concerto also exploit virtuoso techniques. Deane has occasionally set Irish texts, but he exhibits an eclectic and deliberately European cast of mind over a readily identifiable 'Irishness'. His best works achieve a singularity of voice which few other Irish composers have without recourse to the folk tradition.

WORKS

Dramatic: Mórchuid cloch agus ganchuid cré (film score), 1987; Berlin (film score), 1989; The Poet and his Double (chbr op, 1, Deane), 1991

Orch: Sphinxes, 1971; Compact, pf, orch, 1976; Enchaînement, 1982; de/montage, chbr orch, 1985; Chbr Concertino, 1985; Rhizome, hpd 4 hands, str, 1985; Thresholds, 1987, rev. 1991; Quaternion, pf, orch, 1988; Catenae, chbr orch, 1990–91; Krespel's Conc., vn, orch, 1990; Ob Conc., 1993–4; Epitomes, 1994; Dekatriad, 13 solo str, 1995

Vocal: Slàn le suiri, mixed chorus, 1974; Tristia (E. Dickinson, P. Celan, T. Hardy), S, fl, cl, perc, pf, vn, va, vc, 1980; Krespel, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1983; Dischants, mixed chorus, 1983–4; Achair (M.O Direain), S, fl, rec, ob, cl, perc, hp, str qt, 1987; . . . e mi sovvien l'eterno . . . (G. Leopardi), mixed chorus, 1987; November Songs (P. Kavanagh), T/Mez, ob, cl, pf, vn, vc, 1990; Una musica riposa, S, 3 insts, 1993; 2 Songs for Paris (Hart, Moses) Mez, va, pf, 1995

Chbr: Aliens, cl, trbn, va, org, hpd, 1972; Equivoke, fl, hn, org, pf, vc, 1972; Embers, str qt, 1973, arr. str orch, 1980; Epilogue, fl, pf, 1973, arr. ob, elec gui, 1994; Amalgam, vn, ens, 1975; Parallels, a sax, pf, 1975; Ein Blatt baumlos, vc, perc, 1977, rev. 1990; Aprèslude, fl, cl, perc, hp, va, vc, 1979; Mutatis mutandis, fl, 1978; Lichtzwang, vc, pf, 1979; Silhouettes, str qt, 1981; Rhizome, hpd 4 hands, str ens, 1985; Ecarts, str trio, 1986; Birds and Beasts, vn, pf, 1991–3; Alembic, wind band, perc, 1992; Seachanges, pic, fl, pf, perc, vn, vc, 1993; Catacombs, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1994; 2 Silhouettes, reed qt, 1994; Fügung, b cl, hpd, 1995; Silhouettes, wind qnt, 1995; Moresque, ob, perc, 1996

Kbd: Orphica I–IV, pf, 1969–73 rev. 1981; Idols, org, 1971; Linos I, pf, 1973; Linos II, pf, 1973; 4 Inscriptions, hpd, 1973; Pf Sonata no.1, 1974; Triarchia, pf, 1977; Agalma, org, 1978; Pf Sonata no.2, 1981; Avatars, pf, 1982; 2 Silhouettes, org, 1988; After-Pieces I–IV, pf, 1989–90; Contretemps, 2 pf, 1989; Giuco piano, pf, 1988; Nouvelles équivoques, hpd, 1990; Apostille, org, 1993; Chorale (After-Piece V), pf, 1995–6

HARRY WHITE

Deane [Dean], Thomas. There were at least four musicians of this name active in England in the first half of the 18th century. Two were based in London, where, on 18 April 1707, at a benefit concert held in York Buildings for Thomas Deane jr., his father played 'a Solo of the famous Archangelo Corelli', one of the first public performances by an English violinist of any of the op.5 sonatas. Thomas Deane sr, a member of the opera house orchestra in 1707–8, may well have been a son of (or otherwise related to) Richard Deane, who was appointed one of the royal trumpeters in 1660. Court records of the period also mention a Gervase Deane, who died as a Chapel Royal chorister under Blow in 1708. Thomas Deane jr, generally billed as an archlute player, also sang and composed, and the 'Allmand by Mr Dean' to be found in The Second Part of the Division Violin (London, 1705) is probably his. Which of the two it was who served as organist of St Sepulchre, Holborn, from March 1705 until June 1712 (when, having failed to appear for the last nine months, he was dismissed) is not clear.

Another Thomas Deane took the Oxford degree of DMus on 9 July 1731, and on his matriculation the day before described himself as aged 44, 'the son of William Deane of Notts, clericus'. According to Hawkins it was this man (apparently the only composer of that name known to him) who contributed to The Division Violin. He was organist of St Michael's, Coventry (now Coventry Cathedral), from 1733 to 1749, and of Warwick Parish Church from 1719 to 1744, when he was dismissed. A benefit concert for him to be held at St Mary's, Warwick, was advertised in the Worcester Postman (26 May 1721).

Yet another Thomas Deane, 'of Worcester', wrote an overture and seven incidental instrumental pieces for John Oldmixon's The Governor of Cyprus (1703). Whether or not any of the people mentioned here were related to the Thomas Deane who was organist of Bristol Cathedral from 1640 to 1668 is anyone's guess.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR, i, ii; HawkinsH

W. Bennett: 'Music in the Provinces, 1700–1750', MMR, lxiii (1933), 155–6

M. Tilmouth: 'A Calendar of References to Music in Newspapers Published in London and the Provinces (1660–1719)', RMARC, i (1961/R)

C. Price: Music in the Restoration Theatre (Ann Arbor, 1979)

J. Milhous and R. Hume, eds.: Vice Chamberlain Coke's Theatrical Papers 1706–1715 (Carbondale, IL, 1982)

D. Dawe: Organists of the City of London 1666–1850 (Padstow, 1983)

H. DIACK JOHNSTONE

DeAngelis, Angelo ['Rivotorto'] (b Este; d ?Padua, *c*1825). Italian organist and composer. Possibly a pupil of F.A. Vallotti, in 1764 he became second organist at the basilica of S Antonio, Padua. Vallotti died in January 1780 and was succeeded by A. Ricci on 26 April, at which time DeAngelis competed unsuccessfully for the position of maestro di cappella of Padua Cathedral, S Maria Assunta; although neither he nor his two competitors received enough votes (according to cathedral documents of 9 December 1780 and 20 January 1781), F.A. Marchetti was selected maestro on 12 May 1781. DeAngelis continued to serve as second organist of S Antonio until ill-health caused him to resign in 1807. A libretto of his sacred cantata Davide of 1787 (I-Pc) describes him as organist of S Antonio and maestro of the Nobile Collegio di Santa Croce.

In April 1828, a few years after his death, his brother Antonio gave manuscript copies of Angelo's sacred music to the cathedral library on condition that 30 masses be officiated for him. The surprisingly large collection of scores shows DeAngelis as a skilled craftsman who often wrote demanding parts for solo voices and accompanying orchestral instruments.

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Santa Barbara (sacred drama), Padua, Seminario, 1770
L'astratto per il lotto (dramma giocoso), Padua, Nuovo, May 1775
Davide (sacred cant.), Padua, Collegio di Santa Croce, 18 July 1787

SACRED VOCAL

in I-Pc, many in more than one source, unless otherwise indicated; most with orch

3 Masses (Ky–Gl–Cr groups), 3vv; 8 Ky, 6 for 4vv, 2 for 5vv; 10 Gl, 4vv (1 in I-Vnm); 1 Domine fili, 2vv; 2 Domine Deus, 1 for T solo, 1 for B solo; 3 Qui tollis, 1 for S solo, 2 for T solo; 2 Qui sedes, 1 for T solo, 1 for B solo; 2 Quoniam, 1 for T solo, 1 for 3vv; 9 Cr, 4vv
2 Requiems, 1 for 3–4vv, 1 for 5vv; Dies irae, 4vv
Ants of the BVM: Alma Redemptoris, 4vv; 3 Ave regina, 1 for A solo, 1 for B solo, 1 for 8vv; 2 Regina coeli, 4vv; 6 Salve regina, 2 for S solo, 2 for A solo, 1 for 4vv, 1 for 8vv
Canticles: 3 Mag, 4vv; 2 Nunc dimittis, 1 for 4vv, 1 for 8vv
Hymns: 4 Ave maris stella, 2 for S solo, 1 for A solo, 1 for 4vv; Iste confessor, 3vv; Iste quem laeti, 4vv; 8 Pange lingua, 5 for 3vv, 3 for 4vv; 15 Tantum ergo, 9 for S solo, 1 for A solo, 2 for T solo, 2 for B solo, 1 for 3vv; Te Deum, 4vv; 9 Te lucis, 2 for S solo, 2 for A solo, 2 for T solo, 2 for B solo, 1 for 8vv; Veni Creator Spiritus, 4vv; Vexilla regis, 4vv, bound with another Vexilla, 3vv, Arbor decora, T solo, and O Crux Ave, S solo
Lits of the BVM: 3 for 3vv (1 in I-Vnm), 6 for 4vv
Pss: Beatus vir, 4vv; Confitebor, 2vv; 4 Cum invocarem, 3 for 4vv, 1 for 8vv; De profundis, 4vv; 4 Dixit Dominus, 4vv; 6 Ecce nunc, 5 for 4vv, 1 for 8vv; In te Domine, 8vv; 2 Laudate pueri, 1 for 2vv, 1 for 3vv; Nisi Dominus, 2vv; Qui habitat, 8vv; Pss for Terce, 8vv, I-Pca; Pss for Vespers, 8vv, Pca; Pss for Compline with 4 ants, 8vv
Other sacred vocal: 3 resps, Si quaeris, 1 for 4vv, 2 for 8vv; resp, Domine Jesu Christe, 3vv; resp, Libera me Domine, 4vv; Motet sopra la Natività del Signore, A solo; motet, Suscipe me Domine, 4vv; 2 Gloria Patri, 1 for A solo, 1 for T solo

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.L. Bellina: 'Appunti sul repertorio padovano (1738–1797)', Mozart, Padova e la Betulia liberata: Padua 1989, 183–4
J. Dalla Vecchia: L'organizzazione della Cappella musicale antoniana di Padova nel Settecento (Padua, 1995), 15, 77, 145–80
A. Lovato: Catalogo del fondo musicale della Biblioteca capitolare di Padova (Venice, 1998), xxi–xxii, xxxviii–xli, 399–563

SVEN HANSELL/MARIA NEVILLA MASSARO

De Angelis, Nazzareno (b Rome, 17 Nov 1881; d Rome, 14 Dec 1962). Italian bass. After singing as a boy in the Cappella Sistina and Cappella Giulia choirs in Rome, he studied with Giuseppe Fabbri and others. He made his début in 1903 at L'Aquila in Linda di Chamounix, and during the 1906–7 season appeared at La Scala in works such as La Gioconda, Tristan und Isolde and Aida. He returned to La Scala nearly every year until 1914, and then occasionally between 1918 and 1933, taking part in revivals of Spontini's La vestale (1908), Les vêpres siciliennes (1909), Médée (1910) and Nabucco (1913); he scored great successes in Norma (1912), Montemezzi's L'amore dei tre re (the first performance, 1913), Mosè (1918), Mefistofele (1918) and Die Walküre (1924), which were all, with Il barbiere di Siviglia and Don Carlos, strong points of his repertory. Between 1909 and 1925 he appeared at the leading South American theatres; he sang with the Chicago Opera in 1910–11 and appeared regularly at the Rome Opera from 1911 until his retirement in 1938. De Angelis's voice was large in volume and range, with a rich timbre skilfully varied by inflection and shading. A vigorous actor and a master of broad and expressive phrasing, he was the finest Italian bass between 1910 and 1930.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (E. Gara); GV (E. Gara, R. Celletti; R. Vegeto)
G. Monaldi: Cantanti celebri (Rome, 1929), 296–8

RODOLFO CELLETTI/VALERIA PREGLIASCO GUALERZI

Dearie, Blossom (b East Durham, NY, 28 April 1926). American popular singer and pianist. She began her career as a member of the Blue Flames, a vocal group within Woody Herman's orchestra, and the Blue Reys, a similar group in Alvino Rey's band. In 1952 she went to Paris, where she performed with Annie Ross and also formed her own vocal group, the Blue Stars, whose jazz rendition of Lullaby of Birdland (sung in French) was a big hit in the USA. Two other vocal groups, the Double Six of Paris and the Swingle Singers, developed from the Blue Stars. Dearie returned to the USA in the late 1950s and subsequently appeared in night clubs in New York and Los Angeles, accompanying herself at the head of her own trios. From 1974 she made recordings for her own company, Daffodil Records, and in 1985 she became the first recipient of the Mabel Mercer Foundation Award.

Dearie has a small, light voice, sometimes employing a thin, tight vibrato, and sings with intelligence, clarity and originality. Her performance is enhanced by the way she strokes and caresses certain words and pounces upon and attacks others; she also makes use of blues effects. She is an elegant, refined and witty singer. Her repertory includes much original material, and she is a competent pianist in the bop style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.S. Wilson: The Collectors Jazz Modern (Philadelphia, 1959)
W. Balliett: 'Hanging out with Blossom Dearie', Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974), 159–76
W. Balliett: ' Absolutely Pure', American Singers (New York, 1979), 118
J.S. Wilson: ' Cabaret: Blossom Dearie', New York Times (28 April 1983)

ED BEMIS

Dearing, Richard. See DERING, RICHARD.

Death metal. See THRASH METAL.

Deathridge, John (William) (b Birmingham, 21 Oct 1944). English musicologist. He studied at Oxford University with Egon Wellesz and F.W. Sternfeld, taking the doctorate in 1973 with a dissertation on Wagner's sketches for Rienzi. From 1971 to 1980 he was full-time director of music at St Wolfgang, Munich; during this time he continued his research on Wagner and acted as a conductor and broadcaster, also working (from 1978) as an editor of the Wagner complete edition; he held a similar position, full-time, from 1980 to 1983. He was fellow and director of studies in music at King's College, Cambridge (1983–96), and university lecturer (1983–95) and reader in music (1995–6). In 1996 he became King Edward Professor of Music at King's College, London. He has also taught at Princeton University (1990–91) and the University of Chicago (1992).

Deathridge's main area of research is German music in the 19th and 20th centuries, especially the music of Wagner and its reception history. He is also interested in music and social theory, particularly the work of Adorno and the Frankfurt School. He has been active as a conductor, organ recitalist and piano accompanist, as a radio and television broadcaster and as a reviewer for scholarly music journals in Germany and Britain.

WRITINGS

'England, Music and Society', Music in the Modern Age, ed. F.W. Sternfeld (London, 1973), 193–216
Wagner's Rienzi: a Reappraisal Based on a Study of the Sketches and Drafts (diss., U. of Oxford, 1973; Oxford, 1977)
'The Nomenclature of Wagner's Sketches', PRMA, ci (1974–5), 75–83
'Wagner's Sketches for the Ring', MT, cxviii (1977), 383–9
'Eine verschollene Wagner-Arie?', Melos/NZM, iv (1978), 208–14 with E. Voss: 'Wagnerforschung – "Und weiter nichts?? Weiter nichts??": zur Einführung in das Wagner-Werk-Verzeichnis', Wagnerliteratur – Wagnerforschung: Munich 1983, 181–94
'Through the Looking Glass: some Remarks on the Composition Draft of Lohengrin', Analyzing Opera: Verdi and Wagner: Ithaca, NY, 1984, 56–91 with M. Geck and E. Voss: WWV: Verzeichnis der musikalischen Werke Richard Wagners und ihrer Quellen (Mainz, 1986)
'Reminiscences of Norma', Das musikalische Kunstwerk: Festschrift Carl Dahlhaus, ed. H. Danuser and others (Laaber, 1988), 223–7
ed.: The Family Letters of Richard Wagner (London, 1991)
'Germany 1848–1890: the Special Path', Man and Music: the Late Romantic Era, ed. J. Samson (London, 1991), 50–73
'Wagner and the Postmodern', COJ, iv (1992), 143–61
with U. Müller and P. Wapnewski: Wagner Handbook (Cambridge, MA, 1992)
'Fragments of a Single Hidden Music: Adorno's Lifelong Struggle to Write a Fully Fledged Interpretation of Beethoven', Times Literary Supplement (15 Sept 1995)
'Post-Mortem on Isolde', New German Critique, no.69 (1996), 99–126

EDITIONS

with K. Döge: R. Wagner: Lohengrin, Sämtliche Werke, vii (Mainz, 1996–)

ROSEMARY WILLIAMSON

Debain, Alexandre-François (b Paris, 1809; d Paris, 3 Dec 1877). French instrument maker. Trained as a cabinet-maker, he is said to have worked briefly for Charles-Joseph Sax in Brussels around 1825, later working as foreman in a Parisian piano factory. In 1830 he began making pianos and organs in Paris; in 1834 he established Debain & Cie and began making a small pressure-system free-reed instrument called Organino. In 1842 he patented a larger instrument with four sets of reeds and a divided keyboard, under the name of HARMONIUM, which established the basic style of that instrument for many years to come. Other inventions include a piano-harmonium called the Symphonium, patented in 1846, along with an automatic player for pianos and organs called the Antiphonel (see BARREL PIANO and MECHANICAL INSTRUMENT). An improved version of the Antiphonel, called the Piano-mécanique, was exhibited at the Crystal Palace in London in 1851. He also patented improvements to the accordion. Although the term 'harmonium' became a synonym for REED ORGAN in Europe, Debain's patents prevented others from using the name for many years. The factory closed after Debain's death, but Chaperon or possibly Rodolphe & Fils are said to have continued making instruments based on his patents.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.V.D. Pierre: Les facteurs d'instruments de musique (Paris, 1893/R)
L. Hartmann: Das Harmonium (Leipzig, 1913)
R.F. Gellerman: Reed Organ Atlas (Vestal, NY, 1985)
P. and A. Mactaggart, eds.: Musical Instruments in the 1851 Exhibition (Welwyn, Herts., 1986)
A.W.J.G. Ord-Hume: Harmonium: the History of the Reed Organ and its Makers (London, 1986)

BARBARA OWEN

Debali, Francisco José (b Kileen, Wallachia, 1791; d Montevideo, 13 Jan 1859). Hungarian composer. His family name, of Magyar origin, was originally Debaly. He played the oboe in Austrian and Hungarian military bands until he settled in Italy in 1820, where he held senior positions in military bands. In 1838 Debali arrived in Montevideo with his Italian wife and their children; their son José, who also became a musician, was born there in 1841. His positions in Montevideo included orchestra conductor at the Casa de Comedias theatre (1841–8) and senior musician in two military bands (1852–3, and 1855–7).

Debali's extant compositions include 143 works gathered in the Debali collection at the Museo Histórico Nacional in Montevideo. This collection also includes about 750 pieces copied by Debali, which are considered to constitute the repertory performed at the Casa de Comedias theatre from 1821 to 1858. His works include the music for the Uruguayan national anthem; band music including marches, divertimenti, polonaises and waltzes; religious music for voices and orchestra; orchestral overtures; variations for soloists and orchestra; and music for solo piano.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Ayestarán: La música en el Uruguay (Montevideo, 1953)
S. Salgado: Breve historia de la musica culta en el Uruguay (Montevideo, 1971)
N. Ferrer: 'Francisco José Debali', Músicos de aqui, iii (Montevideo, 1997), 9–32 [pubn of the Centro de estudios musicales argentino uruguayo]

LEONARDO MANZINO

De Bassini, Achille [Bassi] (b Milan, 5 May 1819; d Cava de' Tirreni, 3 Sept 1881). Italian baritone. He was the type of the 'noble' baritone for whom Verdi wrote parts exploiting a high tessitura, firm legato and dramatic power such as to make traditionalists complain that he shouted. He made his début in 1837 at Voghera in the title role of Donizetti's Belisario. At La Scala he succeeded in other Donizetti roles and as Carlo in Ernani. He created three Verdi roles: the Doge in I due Foscari (1844, Rome), Seid in Il corsaro (1848, Trieste) and Miller in Luisa Miller (1849, Naples); he also sang in Attila. Verdi wanted him for Rigoletto in 1851. Perhaps because of losses in the 1848–9 revolutions, he spent years in St Petersburg, where Verdi wrote for him the part of Melitone in La forza del destino (1862), commenting that he had a 'humorous' vein perfectly suited to the character. He was still singing in Italy in 1871. His wife, the soprano Rita Gabussi (b Bologna, *c*1815; d Naples, 26 Jan 1891), created Mercadante's Medea (1851) and was Verdi's original choice for Azucena. Their son, Alberto De Bassini (b Florence, 14 July 1847; d after *c*1906), sang as a tenor in Italy and Russia and later with touring companies in the USA; about 1906 he was teaching in New York. He made records in 1902–4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (R. Celletti)
C. Reddish: A Chronicle of Memories (Miami, 1950)
J. Budden: The Operas of Verdi (London, 1973–81)
R. Celletti: 'La vocalità romantica', Storia dell'opera, ed. G. Barblan and A. Basso, iii/1 (Turin, 1977), 105–262
J. Rosselli: Singers of Italian Opera (Cambridge, 1992)

JOHN ROSSELLI

De Bellis, Giovanni Battista (b ?Itri, nr Formia, *c*1585–90; d ?Gaeta, between 1623 and 1637). Italian composer and organist. From Itri he went to Naples, where he was favoured by the Carafa family: his first two books of five-part madrigals are dedicated to two of its members. In 1619, when he signed the dedication of his first book of madrigals for four voices, he was living at Gaeta. A note to the reader in this print mentioned a forthcoming second collection of his sacred works, but neither this nor the first is extant. Della Valle mentioned that when he visited Gaeta in 1637 he was disappointed to find that De Bellis was no longer living. He described him as a choirmaster: he probably held this position at the cathedral there. Della Valle praised his canzonettas, which are also lost, and singled out his Lamento di Orfeo as having well-made recitatives. The madrigal books, however, are old-fashioned in their infrequent chromaticism, decided emphasis on imitation, and stereotyped imitating motifs. These motifs use quick repeated notes or conjunct patterns within a narrow range. Entries are often crowded in strettos, which are thick with doubled 3rds or 10ths and are occasionally arranged in effects of piled 3rds. The third contains several works closer in style to contemporary Neapolitan madrigals, with more open textures and more clearly delineated, melodically cogent phrases.

WORKS

Il primo libro de [20] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1608) [incl. 1 canzonetta]
Il secondo libro de [21] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1614)
Il primo libro di [21] madrigali, 4vv (Naples, 1619)
L'armonia hydriana, libro secondo, 2–4vv (Naples, 1621), lost
Il terzo libro di [21] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1623)
Ps, 4vv, in Salmi delle compiete, ed. M. Magnetta (Naples, 1620)
Mottetti e frottole, 2–4vv, lost, mentioned in PitoniN
Canzonettas, Lamento di Orfeo, lost, mentioned in P. Della Valle: Della musica dell'età nostra (MS, 1640); pr. in G.B. Doni: Lyra Barberina amphichordos, ed. A.F. Gori and G.B. Passeri, ii (Florence, 1763/R); repr. in A. Solerti: Le origini del melodramma (Turin, 1903/R), 169

KEITH A. LARSON

De Blanck Martín, Olga (b Havana, 11 March 1916). Cuban music educationist and composer. She graduated in piano and music theory from the Hubert de Blanck Conservatory, Havana (founded by her father), took private lessons with Amadeo Roldán and Pedro San Juan, and also studied with Brazilian composer Burle Marx while living in New York (1935–8) and with Julián Carrillo and Jiménez Mabarak in Mexico (1943–4). She was appointed deputy director of the Hubert de Blanck Conservatory in 1945 and director in 1955. Together with Gisela Hernández she developed a new system of music education and brought about profound changes in music teaching in Cuba; she also set up the educational and academic publishing firm Ediciones de Blanck, produced many musical editions, including works by contemporary Cuban composers, and helped establish the Museo de la Música in Havana. Her musical comedy Vivimos hoy was first performed in 1943 and her song Mi guitarra guajira won first prize in the Cuban National Song Competition in 1948. Many of her compositions are inspired by folk music and skilful use is made of Cuban rhythms and of traditional popular Cuban instruments, in particular the guitar, whose characteristic sound resonates throughout the whole of her output.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Vivimos hoy (musical comedy, 3, M.J. Casanova), 1943; Hotel Tropical (musical comedy, 3, Casanova), 1944; Un cuento de Navidad (musical comedy, 3, Casanova), 1958; El encuentro (ballet), 1962; Bohio (ballet), 1964; El caballito enano (musical tale, D. Alonso), 1967; El mago de Oz (incid music, 1), 1967; Saltarín (musical tale, Alonso), 1967
Choral and sacred: Cantata guajira (E. Ballagas), solo v, mixed vv, orch, 1967; Misa cubana, mixed vv, org, 1987; Así dijo Santa Rosa Filipa, 1v, org, 1989
Inst: Pentasílabo, pf, güiro, quijada, tumbadora, 1972; Portocromía, pf, 1981
Numerous songs (1v, pf), some with addl Cuban insts, 1935–87; *c*110 children's songs; educational music, collab. G. Hernández; and arrs.

ALICIA VALDÉS CANTERO

De Blanck (Valef), Hubert (b Utrecht, 11 June 1856; d Havana, 28 Nov 1932). Cuban composer of Dutch birth. He studied at the Liège Conservatoire and subsequently in Germany, made several concert tours in Europe as a pianist and also worked as a conductor in Poland. In 1882 he visited Havana, settling there the following year. In 1884 he founded the Classical Music Society to promote chamber music, and in 1885 founded the first Cuban conservatory, where Eduardo Sánchez de Fuentes and Ernesto Lecuona were among the students. De Blanck was head of the music section of the National Academy of Arts and Letters, and was involved in the Cuban independence cause (1895–8) as treasurer of the revolutionary junta of Havana. He was expelled from Cuba in 1896 and lived in New York until the end of the war. He composed many pieces related to the freedom of Cuba, including Paráfrasis del himno nacional for piano (1897), Himno a Martí for two pianos (1905) and the opera Patria, first performed in 1899, an attempt to create a national and patriotic opera.

The style of De Blanck's works is decidedly Romantic. Among his many compositions are orchestral works such as the Suite sinfónica (1881), Poema sinfónico (1894) and La danza tropical for soprano and orchestra (1904), chamber music, piano pieces, songs including La fuga de la tórtola (1914) and sacred music. He wrote two further operas (Actea, composed *c*1892, and Hicaona, *c*1899) as well as zarzuelas (Dolores, 1916). His daughter Olga de Blanck Martín (b 1916; d 1998) was also a teacher and composer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Calero and L. Valdés Quesada: Cuba musical (Havana, 1929)
A. Carpentier: La música en Cuba (Mexico City, 1946, 2/1979)
O. Martinez: Hubert de Blanck: vida y obra (Havana, 1956)
E. Martín: Panorama histórica de la música en Cuba (Havana, 1971)

VICTORIA ELI RODRÍGUEZ

DeBlasio, Chris (b West Long Branch, NJ, 22 Feb 1959; d New York, 21 July 1993). American composer. He studied theatre arts at New York University and composition at the Manhattan School of Music, where his principal teachers included John Corigliano and Giampoalo Bracale. During his short life he pursued three musical interests: music theatre, art song and sacred music. Among his works are two complete musicals, Instant Lives (1984) and A Murder is Foretold (1990), scores for several plays, the song cycles All the Way Through Evening (1993) and In Endless Assent (1993), and commissions from Union Theological Seminary, Central Synagogue and Trinity Church (all in New York). His style combined idiomatic writing for the voice (whether in a popular idiom or in solemn Biblical settings) with a sure and haunting melodic gift; his few non-vocal works, such as God is our Righteousness (1992), are equally adept. On hearing of his death from AIDS-related illnesses, Corigliano described DeBlasio as 'a young composer who embodied that rarest of all things – a truly original lyric voice'.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Instant Lives (musical, after H. Moss), 1984; A Murder is Foretold (musical, S. Holland, after O. Wilde), 1990; incid music

Vocal: The Best-Beloved (Ps lxiii, J. Donne, W. Drummond, F. Quarles), SATB, str orch, 1990: Ps lxiii; Holy Sonnet; My thoughts hold mortal strife; My beloved is mine and I am his; All the Way Through Evening (P. Brass), song cycle, Bar, pf, 1993 [final song pt of The AIDS Quilt Songbook]; In Endless Assent (E. Bishop), song cycle, 1993

Inst: God is our Righteousness, 1992; other inst works

TIM PAGE

Dębołęcki [Dembołęcki], Wojciech (b Konojady [now Konojad], Pomerania, 1585–6; d between Sept 1645 and Feb 1647). Polish composer. He entered the Franciscan order at Kraków in 1598, and in 1611 or 1612 he was ordained in Opole, where he lived from 1605. Between 1615 and 1617 he lived successively at Kalisz, Lwów, where he directed the music at the monastery church, and Chełm. During a period spent at Olomouc from 1619 he helped to found a society for the ransom of soldiers captured by the Turks. He served as a military chaplain in 1621 and 1622 and studied theology in Rome for two years, gaining a doctorate in 1625. He then returned home as provincial of the Franciscan order in Poland but later resigned to become general commissar for the release of prisoners held by the Turks, and provincial at Kamieniec Podolski. He lived in Rome between 1630 and 1632 before returning again to Poland as priest at the monastery at Lwów. Two volumes of music by him survive: Benedictio mensae cum gratiarum actione for five voices (Toruń, 1616); and an incomplete copy of Completorium romanum for five voices and continuo, op.3 (Venice, 1618). The first of these is still in the Renaissance contrapuntal style, but the second affords one of the earliest appearances in Poland of the Baroque style based on the continuo.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP

H. Feicht: 'Wojciech Dębołęcki, kompozytor religijny z pierwszej połowy XVII wieku' [Dębołęcki, composer of sacred works from the first half of the 17th century], Przegląd teologiczny, vii (1926), 113–43; repr. in Studia nad muzyką polskiego renesansu i baroku (Kraków, 1980), 183–242

MIROSŁAW PERZ

De Boubers, Jean-Louis (b Lille, 8 June 1731; d Brussels, 30 July 1804). French bookseller, printer and type founder, active in the southern Netherlands. Born into a family of printers, he was the son of Henri de Boubers and Marie Catherine Gavroy. He married Marie-Thérèse Joseph Panckoucke, a sister of the French bookseller Charles-Joseph Panckoucke, and later married Marie-Thérèse Joseph d'Audenarde. A bookseller in Dunkirk by about 1747, then a printer-bookseller in Liège from 1761, he established himself in Brussels in 1768 after two years of apprenticeship with Jean-Joseph Boucherie. On 18 October 1769 he opened the first permanent bookshop in the Théâtre de la Monnaie selling librettos of lyric works, some with music. De Boubers was also a type founder, at first in partnership with Mathias Rosart, son of the printer Jacques-François Rosart. He produced new printing type in 1779 which he sold to numerous printers in the Netherlands as well as to individuals, including the Prince de Ligne. De Boubers edited some occasional pieces, two of which were published for the inauguration of Charles de Lorraine's statue in Brussels in 1775. De Boubers inserted several pages of music in the journal he edited, Annonces et avis divers des Pays-Bas autrichiens; he was also involved in the sale of various instrumental works by Nardini and G.C. Wagenseil.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Raspé and H. Vanhulst: 'L'édition musicale', La musique en Wallonie et à Bruxelles, ed. R. Wangermée and P. Mercier (Brussels, 1980), i, 301–5

M. Cornaz: 'Jean-Joseph Boucherie et Jean-Louis de Boubers: deux imprimeurs de musique à Bruxelles dans la deuxième moitié du XVIIIe siècle', RBM, xlvi (1992), 179–88

M. Cornaz: 'La Monnaie et le commerce des ouvrages lyriques à Bruxelles', La Monnaie néoclassique, ed. M. Couvreur (Brussels, 1996)

M. Cornaz: L'édition et la diffusion de la musique à Bruxelles au XVIIIe siècle (diss., U. Libre de Bruxelles, 1996)

MARIE CORNAZ

De Boyescu, Parepa. See PAREPA, EUPHROSYNE.

De Brassine. See BRASSIN family.

Debrnov, Josef. See SRB, JOSEF.

De Broda, Paulus. See PAULUS DE RODA.

De Bromhead, Jerome (b Waterford, 2 Dec 1945). Irish composer and radio producer. He received his early musical training as a boy soprano, and studied the piano and the guitar privately. In 1963 he entered Trinity College, Dublin, as a medical student, but changed his focus to the arts after three years (BA 1969, MA 1974). He studied harmony and counterpoint with A.J. Potter at the Royal Irish Academy of Music (1966–9) and composition with James Wilson (1970–74). He pursued composition further with Seóirse Bodley (1975) and Franco Donatoni (1978). In 1969 he joined RTÈ as a television presentation director and, in 1980, became music producer with RTÈ radio, a position he held until his retirement on health grounds, in 1996. He became a member of Aosdána in 1986.

De Bromhead's compositional style developed from a free use of dissonance, through the employment of serial procedures, to a harmonic language on the edge of tonality. Anno (1969) and Gemini (1970) were the first Irish works written for solo guitar. He continued to write for that instrument in Vespertine (duo with flute, 1981) and the Concerto for Guitar and Strings (1991). Other orchestral works include Venti eventi (1978) and two symphonies (1985, 1996).

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Man in Ireland (film score), str qt, 1978; New Lands (chbr op, J. Carroll), S, Mez, Bar, pf, 1993

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Frenetics, 1971; Agonistikos, 1974; Abstract Variations, 1976; Danzostinata, 1978; Venti eventi, 1978; Sym. no.1, 1985; Conc., gui, str, 1991, Sym. no.2, 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Anno, gui, 1969; Gemini, gui, 1970; Str Qt no.1, 1971; Str Trio, 1972; Door to Door to Door, perc, pf 4 hands, 1973; Benthos, pf, 1974; Brass Qt, 1974; Rotastasis, 2 fl, 2 cl, 2 vn, va, vc, gui, 1975; Xasolos, tpt, 1975; Frames, fl, db, elec gui, 1976; Parameters, fl, cl, bn/b cl, vn, vc, pf, 1976; Moto impetuo, org, 1977; Prelude, va, pf, 1977; Str Qt no.2, 1977; Grounds, sax,

VOCAL

Choral: Dirge from Donne's Devotions (J. Donne), 1975; Blath an Aitinn [Bloom of Gorse Bush] (M. Mac an tSaoi), 1976; Iomrahm [Rowing] (L. Prut), 1978; Hy Brasil (various), S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, 1980; Joy (various), 1982; Music for 'No Myth' (F.G. Perry), Mez, spkrs, fl, hn, 2 vn, va, vc, perc, 1992

Solo: The House of Pleasure (C. Swift), 1v, pf, 1976; The Assize of Sighs (B. Merriman), Mez, tape/pf, 1993; Clear Light and Thunder (B. Lynch), Mez, pf, 1996

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Klein: 'New Guitar Music from Ireland: a Survey', Classical Guitar, x (1992), no.4, pp.20–22; no.5, pp.39–42

A. Klein: Die Musik Irlands im 20. Jahrhundert (Hildesheim, 1996)

AXEL KLEIN

De Busne, Antoine. See BUSNOIS, ANTOINE.

De Busscher [de Buescher], Henri (b Brussels, 29 Oct 1880; d Los Angeles, 25 Aug 1975). Belgian oboist. He was the second, and most distinguished, of three brothers who began their musical lives as boy sopranos (the De Busscher Trio). All three studied the oboe under Guillaume Guidé at the Brussels Conservatory. Albert, the youngest, became oboist at the Monte Carlo Opéra, and then first oboe with the New York SO until 1913. Henri's first engagements were with the Ysaÿe Orchestra, the Brussels Opera, and then in Paris. In 1904, having decided against conducting or singing as a career, he joined Henry Wood's Queen's Hall Orchestra, remaining there until 1915. He was then first oboe with the New York SO, staying until 1920 when he moved to Los Angeles. There he remained until his retirement in 1948. During this period he taught both singing and oboe, and founded the De Busscher Chamber Music Society. His preference for an instrument with automatic octave mechanism was undoubtedly influential in the western USA. Between 1948 and 1956 De Busscher (nominally retired) played first oboe in the Columbia Studio Orchestra; he continued to teach his impeccable style until 1970.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Haris: 'Henri de Busscher: Oboist Extraordinary', Recorder and Music Magazine, iii (1971), 413–14; repr. with obituary as 'Henry de Busscher: 1880–1975', To the World's Oboists, iii/3 (1995), 1–3

C. Rosen: The Goossens: a Musical Century (London, 1993), 36, 48, 104

PHILIP BATE/GEOFFREY BURGESS

De Bussy (fl ?Paris, 1553–83). French composer. The names Bussy and De Bussy were common in 16th-century France and appear frequently in Parisian archives. Le Roy & Ballard attributed to De Bussy 26 chansons in anthologies printed between 1553 and 1583; but nearly half of these were ascribed to other composers in earlier or contemporary collections. The texts are mostly amorous épigrammes or rustic anecdotes in the style of Marot, although two (in RISM 1553[19] and 1554[27]) are spiritual poems, one by Marguerite of Navarre. The generally suave homophonic style of the courtly pieces is akin to that of Sandrin's; indeed two (Qui souhaittez, 1554[25], and De quoy me sert, 1559[13]) had already been ascribed to Sandrin and four others (Dieu te gard, Toutes les fois, 1559[13], Vous qui voulez, 1561[3], Si quelquefois, 1561) to Gentien. Although steady duple metre predominates, a few chansons have short opening sections in triple metre and two use the compound metre and syllabic homophony favoured by the new voix de ville (e.g. by Arcadelt, Certon and Mornable). Mastery of syllabic counterpoint is illustrated in the longer narrative pieces with recurrent refrains and popular melodies (e.g. Dieu te gard bergere, 1575[5]). Of the five three-voice chansons, three are strophic voix de ville, and were reprinted in a volume of songs by Arcadelt (1573[15]).

WORKS

26 chansons, 3, 4vv, 1553[19], 1553[22], 1553[23], 1554[25], 1554[26], 1554[27], 1559[13], 1561[2], 1561[3], 1561[4], 1561[7], 1567[12], 1573[15], 1575[5], 1578[14], 1578[15], 1583[7], 1583[8]; 20 ed. in SCC, x (1994), 23 ed. J.I. Sime, The Chansons of De Bussy and Millot: a Study in Originality, Plagiarism and Parody (thesis, U. of London, 1986)

FRANK DOBBINS

Debussy, (Achille-)Claude (b St Germain-en-Laye, 22 Aug 1862; d Paris, 25 March 1918). French composer. One of the most important musicians of his time, his harmonic innovations had a profound influence on generations of composers. He made a decisive move away from Wagnerism in his only complete opera Pelléas et Mélisande, and in his works for piano and for orchestra he created new genres and revealed a range of timbre and colour which indicated a highly original musical aesthetic.

1. Childhood and studies. 2. The 'bohemian' and symbolist years. 3. Pelléas et Mélisande. 4. 'Debussyism'. 5. The last years. 6. Debussy and currents of ideas. 7. Models and influences. 8. Sources and interpretation. 9. Theatre works and projects. 10. Musical language. 11. Orchestration and timbre. 12. Reception and influence.

1. CHILDHOOD AND STUDIES. Debussy's family was originally of modest peasant stock, settled in the Auxois district of Burgundy from at least the 17th century, and moving to the Paris region around 1800. The composer's grandfather was a wine seller and later a joiner. His father, Manuel-Achille, served in the marine infantry for seven years, then settled with his wife in St Germain-en-Laye to run a china shop. Their first son, Achille-Claude, was born there, although it was two years before he was baptized. His father dreamt of making a sailor of him. In 1870, during the Franco-Prussian War, the family took refuge in Cannes with Manuel's sister, Clementine, who arranged for Debussy to have his first piano lessons with an Italian musician, Jean Cerutti. Meanwhile in Paris, the war had robbed Manuel of his employment and he joined the forces of the Commune, with the rank of captain. He was arrested and condemned to four years imprisonment in 1871, but after a year in detention the sentence was commuted to suspension of his civil rights. On the advice of Charles de Sivry, Achille was entrusted to Antoinette Mauté, Verlaine's mother-in-law, who prepared him for entrance to the Paris Conservatoire, to which he was admitted in 1872 (he never attended an ordinary school). His first Conservatoire teachers were Antoine Marmontel for piano and Albert Lavignac for solfège. They quickly recognized that he had a good ear and was an able sight-reader, although they regarded him as 'a little backward in the rudiments'. In 1875–7, he won minor prizes for solfège and for piano, but having failed to win a premier prix for piano he was forced to give up the idea of a career as a virtuoso; he enrolled in Emile Durand's harmony class, then in August Bazille's accompaniment class, in which he won his only premier prix. He began to compose mélodies in 1879, on texts by Alfred de Musset (Madrid, Ballade à la lune). In the summer of 1880 he was engaged by Nadezhda von Meck, Tchaikovsky's patron, to teach her children and to play duets with her, first in Arcachon and then in Florence, where he wrote his first piece of piano music and the Piano Trio (fig.1). On his return to Paris he enrolled in Ernest Guiraud's composition class, supporting himself by working as accompanist in the singing classes of Victorine Moreau-Sainti. It was there he met his first love, Marie Vasnier, for whom he wrote mélodies on poems by Gautier, Leconte de Lisle and Banville. He joined Mme von Meck in Russia for two months in 1881, and again in Moscow in the following summer, followed by two months in Vienna. He was runner-up for the Prix de Rome in 1883, with his cantata Le gladiateur; by that time his works already included more than 30 mélodies, two scènes lyriques, choruses, a cello suite, and a symphony (scored only for piano four hands). He became accompanist for the Concordia choral society, where Gounod took him under his wing, and meanwhile composed yet more mélodies for Marie Vasnier, on texts by Bourget and Verlaine. In 1884, his cantata L'enfant prodigue won him the Prix de Rome. He spent two years in Rome at the Villa Medici, where the director, the painter Hébert, thought highly of him. He met the requirement to write a series of 'envois' for the Institut with Zuleima (lost), the symphonic suite Printemps and La damoiselle élue, completed after his return to Paris in 1887.

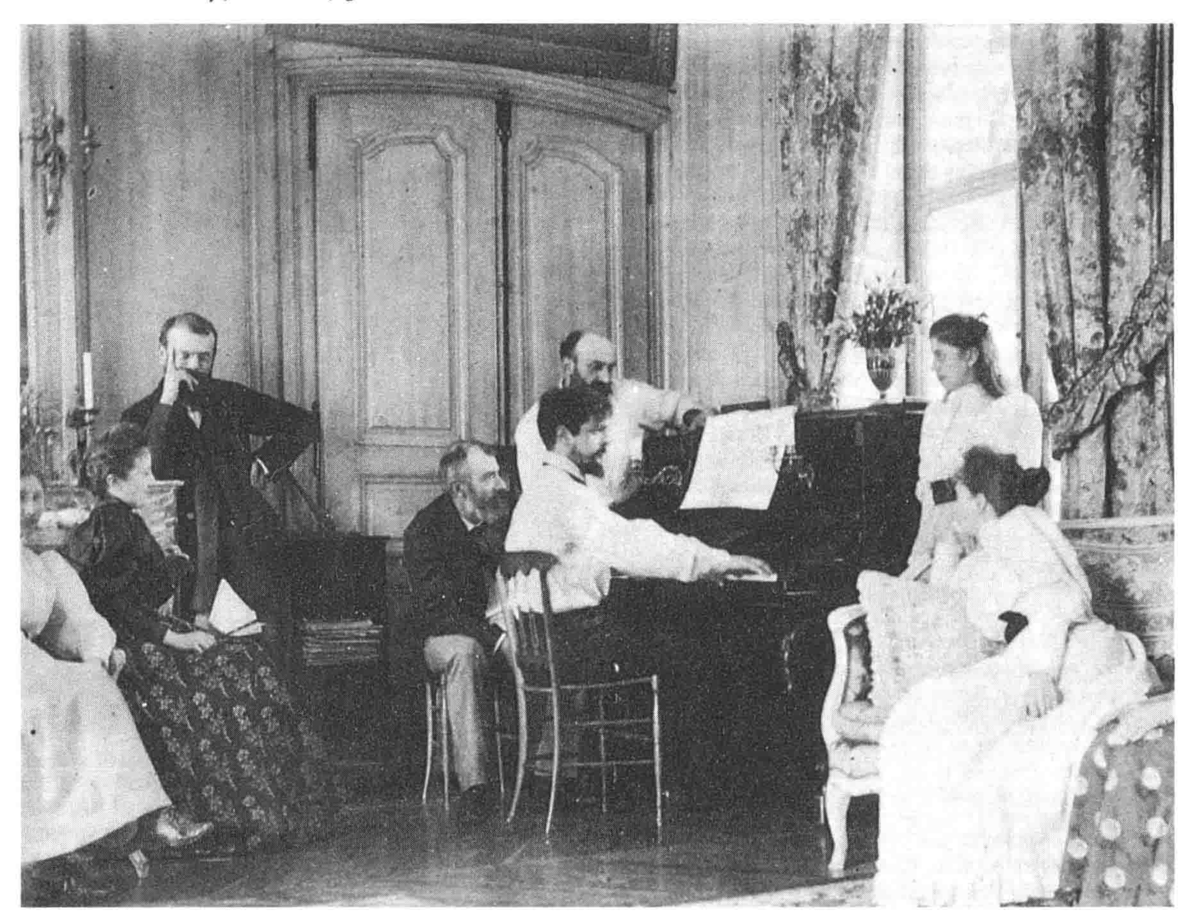
2. THE 'BOHEMIAN' AND SYMBOLIST YEARS. The next few years were a time of financial struggle for Debussy. He frequented the literary and artistic cafés where the symbolists gathered, and formed friendships with Paul Dukas, Robert Godet and Raymond Bonheur (fig.2). Two of his Ariettes oubliées were performed by the Société Nationale de Musique and he began to compose the Cinq poèmes de Baudelaire and the Fantaisie for piano and orchestra. It was the most Wagnerian period of his life: he went to Bayreuth in 1888 and 1889, but eventually recognized that he had to free himself from Wagner's influence. He became fascinated by the theatre of Annam and the Javanese gamelan at the Universal Exposition of 1889, a discovery which completed the formation of his aesthetic beliefs. He embarked on an opera, Rodrigue et Chimène, with a text by the Parnassian poet Catulle Mendès based on the story of El Cid, although Mendès's ardent Wagnerism was at the opposite extreme from his newly developed tastes. He worked on it for two years, while enjoying a relatively stable emotional life thanks to his long relationship with Gabrielle (Gaby) Dupont. Towards the end of 1890 he came into contact with Mallarmé, who asked him to write a musical contribution to a theatre project (never realized) centred on the poem L'après-midi d'un faune. He made the acquaintance of Satie, and published mélodies and piano pieces including a Marche écossaise for piano duet (later orchestrated), commissioned by an American diplomat of Scottish ancestry in honour of his clan. He discovered Poe and Maeterlinck, and for a while hoped to set the latter's La princesse Maleine. In 1892 he started to compose his Proses lyriques on texts written by himself under the influence of symbolist poets.



1. Madame von Meck's trio, 1880: (from left to right) Danil'chenko, Rakhul'sky and Debussy

Debussy made his first appearance on the larger stage of Parisian artistic society in 1893, with performances of La damoiselle élue at the Société Nationale and of the String Quartet by the Ysaÿe Quartet. He became a close friend of Ernest Chausson, who gave him both financial and moral support (fig.3). He discovered Musorgsky's Boris Godunov around the same time that he attended a performance of Maeterlinck's Pelléas et Mélisande at the Bouffes-Parisiens. He had been going to Mallarmé's Tuesday salon for two years, and returned to the L'après-midi d'un faune project, producing the Prélude. At the end of the year he met Pierre Louÿs, and travelled with him to Ghent to obtain Maeterlinck's permission to compose Pelléas. He began work on it during the summer, having abandoned Rodrigue et Chimène once and for all.

2. Claude Debussy (right) with Raymond Bonheur on the bank of the river Marne at Luzancy, 1893

3. Debussy (at the piano) at the home of Ernest Chausson, 1893, with (from left to right) Yvonne Lerolle, Mme Lerolle, Raymond Bonheur, Henry Lerolle, Chausson, Christine Lerolle and Mme Chausson

3. 'PELLÉAS ET MÉLISANDE'. Debussy finished a first version of the opera in 1895. He considered a number of projects with Pierre Louÿs, notably an opera based on his Cendrelune; a ballet on the novel Aphrodite came to nothing; La saulaie, on a poem by Rossetti, went no further than some sketches; the only collaboration with Louÿs to bear fruit was the Chansons de Bilitis (1897–8). But Debussy had at last found a publisher, Georges Hartmann (then covertly directing the firm of Fromont), who not only believed firmly in his talent but also paid him a monthly retainer. Several attempts were made to get Pelléas et Mélisande staged (complete or in part): at the Théâtre Libre, by Ysaÿe in Belgium, at Robert de Montesquiou's Pavillon des Muses and at Lugné-Poe's Théâtre de l'Oeuvre, but these foundered. Debussy's other chief preoccupation was an orchestral triptych, Nocturnes, which he intended at first for Ysaÿe, as a work for solo violin and orchestra; he decided to make the three pieces purely orchestral in 1897, but their long gestation went on until the end of 1899; the first two ('Nuages' and 'Fêtes') were performed a year later under Camille Chevillard and were coolly received by the critics.

In 1901 Debussy himself joined the critical fraternity. Writing for the Revue blanche, at first under the pseudonym 'Monsieur Croche', he used his column to develop some of his less orthodox ideas: favourable to Musorgsky, hostile to Saint-Saëns and the weighty conventions of traditional genres, indulgent towards Massenet and often ironic about the conditions of musical life. At last, on 3 May 1901, the director of the Opéra-Comique, Albert Carré, gave him a written undertaking to put on Pelléas. Preparations were held up by Maeterlinck, who wanted his mistress Georgette Leblanc to take the role of Mélisande. In spite of public demonstrations at the dress rehearsal and first performance (30 April 1902), and a chilly reception from several of the critics, the work caught on and made a powerful impression on the musical world at large (fig.4).

4. 'DEBUSSYISM'. Armed with new authority, Debussy returned to criticism in 1903 in the pages of Gil Blas: it was there that he first wrote in praise of Rameau and the French national tradition, which he felt had been diverted from its proper path by German influences. He undertook a new orchestral triptych, La mer ('three symphonic sketches'), and signed a contract with Durand for a major series of 'Images': six pieces for solo piano and six for two pianos or orchestra; these eventually became the two sets of Images for solo piano and one for orchestra.

Four years after his marriage to Lilly Texier (a model) in autumn 1899, Debussy met Emma Bardac, an amateur singer and the wife of a banker. When he went to live with Emma in 1904, Lilly attempted suicide: a drama which led to the rupture of several friendships. Shortly after this, in 1905, Debussy entrusted exclusive rights in his works to the publisher Durand. His compositions were now frequently played at concerts and the term 'debussysme' came into vogue, used both as a compliment and as a term of abuse. Debussy also published Masques and L'isle joyeuse for piano (originally intended as the first and last pieces of a triptych), and two collections of mélodies: Chansons de France and a second book of Fêtes galantes; he finished scoring La mer, the first performance of which, on 15 October 1905, under the indifferent direction of Camille Chevillard, once again drew a cool response from the critics. Debussy's daughter Claude-Emma (Chouchou) was born two weeks later. At this time Debussy's long-term project was Images for orchestra, but several other works preoccupied him more immediately: an opera based on Bédier's Le roman de Tristan, Siddhartha (a Buddhist drama by Victor Segalen) and two operas on works by Poe, Le diable dans le beffroi and La chute de la maison Usher. Both Poe projects were very important to him though he had difficulty finding the right musical character and colour for them.

4. Opening scene (the forest, design by Lucien Jusseaume) of Debussy's 'Pelléas et Mélisande', Opéra-Comique (Salle Favart), Paris, 30 April 1902, with themes from the orchestral prelude in Debussy's hand: from 'Le théâtre' (June 1902)

He made his conducting debut in 1908, directing La mer for the Concerts Colonne, with greater success than any previous performances of the work. Pelléas was given in Germany and New York, and his first biography, by Louise Liebich, was published in London (1908), a year before the one by Louis Laloy, published in Paris. After the first season of the Ballets Russes, Diaghilev asked him to write a ballet set in 18th-century Venice: Debussy drafted the scenario of Masques et bergamasques but quickly decided against composing it.

In 1909 Debussy accepted Fauré's invitation to become a member of the advisory board of the Conservatoire, and the young composer and conductor André Caplet became his collaborator and confidant. During a visit to Britain at the end of February 1909, the first signs of illness manifested themselves. He returned to composing for the piano and started the first book of Préludes at the end of the year. Ibéria and Rondes de Printemps received their first performances in 1910, directed by Pierné and the composer, but it was another three years before the complete Images for orchestra were performed together. On his return from a tour to Vienna and Budapest in 1910, Debussy agreed to compose Le martyre de Saint Sébastien, a 'mystery' in five acts by Gabriele D'Annunzio, for the dancer Ida Rubinstein. He wrote it in two months, with Caplet's help for the orchestration (1911), but critical opinion was divided about its success (fig.6). A commission from another dancer, the Canadian Maud Allan, led him to compose a ballet, Khamma, on a scenario set in ancient Egypt, but tiring of Allan's demands he left the orchestration to Charles Koechlin. A request from Diaghilev in 1912 produced Jeux, a 'poème dansé' on a scenario by Nizhinsky, who also did the choreography. The first performance (15 May 1913) was somewhat overshadowed by another première given two weeks later in the same Ballets Russes season: that of The Rite of Spring. A friendly relationship had existed between Debussy and Stravinsky since 1910, and Debussy admired both Firebird and Petrushka; in June 1912 he had played Part 1 of The Rite with Stravinsky in its piano four-hand version at Louis Laloy's house. He started to write reviews again in 1913, this time for the Revue musicale S.I.M., and conducted the first performance of the complete Images for orchestra (26 January 1913). He composed a second book of Préludes for piano, a 'ballet for children' La boîte à joujoux (piano solo version), and the Trois poèmes de Mallarmé. On the invitation of Serge Koussevitzky he spent a fortnight in Russia, giving concerts in St Petersburg and Moscow; early in 1914, he went to Rome, Amsterdam, The Hague, Brussels and London. The essential purpose of these travels was to support his family.

5. Claude Debussy with his second wife, Emma Bardac

5. THE LAST YEARS. At first the war depressed Debussy into a state of creative sterility from which he produced only the Berceuse héroïque for piano (later orchestrated), commissioned by the Daily Telegraph for King Albert's Book. The summer of 1915, spent in a villa on the channel coast at Pourville, was a productive one: in quick succession he composed the Cello Sonata, En blanc et noir, the Etudes, and the Sonata for flute, viola and harp, but at the end of the year he underwent a debilitating colostomy (for rectal cancer). Suffering both pain and financial difficulties, he took up one of his old projects again, La chute de la maison Usher. He wrote another version of the libretto but composed a complete sketch of only one scene. In March 1917 he finished the Violin Sonata but three other sonatas remained unrealized projects. His last concert appearance was to play the Violin Sonata with Gaston Poulet at St Jean-de-Luz in September 1917.

6. DEBUSSY AND CURRENTS OF IDEAS. The tenacity with which the label 'Impressionist' has clung to Debussy, and the consequences of this for the understanding of his

6. Set design by Léon Bakst for Act 5 (Paradise) of 'Le martyre de Saint Sébastien', for which Debussy composed the incidental music, Théâtre du Châtelet, Paris, 1911

7. Claude Debussy with his daughter Chouchou at Le Moulleau, 1916 work, calls for discussion of his allegiances to the literary and artistic movements of his time.

Never having been to school, and aware of the gaps in his intellectual training, Debussy was an autodidact (except in music) who was conscious early in life of the values that could enrich his personality. His late but most enduring education came between the ages of 25 and 30 from his contacts with the symbolists. The French symbolist movement lasted scarcely more than a dozen years, from 1885 onwards, and affected poetry, art and, to a lesser extent, the theatre. It was characterized by rejection of naturalism, of realism and of overly clearcut forms, hatred of emphasis, indifference to the public, and a taste for the indefinite, the mysterious, even the esoteric. Debussy felt as powerfully as the symbolists the impact of the 'decadent' novels of Joris Karl Huysmans, and shared their admiration of Baudelaire; he was personally acquainted with writers such as Paul Bourget, Henri de Régnier, Paul Valéry and André Gide, and became an intimate friend of Pierre Louÿs. He was an habitué of Stéphane Mallarmé's salon, the movement's temple, and he flirted with the occultists he encountered at Edmond Bailly's bookshop L'Art Indépendant (where Cinq poèmes de Baudelaire went on sale). Besides the tastes he shared in common with the symbolists, we can find more personal tendencies, such as his admiration for the poems of Jules Laforgue, which left traces when he wrote his own poetry for the Proses lyriques. Music was at the centre of much artistic activity at the time. Following Verlaine's lead, René Ghil and, above all, Mallarmé held the idea of a 'musicalization' of poetry, while Odilon Redon called himself a 'musiciste', and placed music, like his own paintings and drawings, 'in the ambiguous world of the indeterminate'. But the overriding meeting point was Wagner. Never had so many writers and painters attended the Concerts Lamoureux. The passion for the 'total art' depicted by the high priests of the Revue wagnérienne (edited by Edouard Dujardin, whom Debussy met) fascinated the symbolists. At first Debussy was swept up in the current, which leaves strong traces in La damoiselle élue and Cinq poèmes de Baudelaire, but after his second visit to Bayreuth (1889) he became increasingly detached to the point of being regarded as a heretic by his Wagnerite friends. In 1893 he announced an article to be entitled 'The Futility of Wagnerism' but it never appeared. In February 1897 he was the only musician present at the banquet given for Mallarmé to celebrate the publication of Divagations.

The links which Debussy maintained with the visual arts were just as significant. During his stay in Rome he wrote: 'I've had enough of music, of the same everlasting landscape; I want to see a Manet and hear some Offenbach'. Louis Laloy, his first French biographer, revealed in 1909 that 'He received his most profitable lessons from poets and painters, not from musicians', while he himself told Varèse in 1911 'I love pictures almost as much as music'. He met Toulouse-Lautrec, knew Maurice Denis, who designed the cover of La damoiselle élue (fig.8), Odilon Redon, who gave him a lithograph, and Whistler, from whom he borrowed the title of his Nocturnes; he may also have met Gauguin, who had a 'mania for relating painting to music' and likened colours to instrumental timbres. He subscribed to magazines such as Pan in which he found reproductions of work by Khnopff, Vallotton, Crane and Munch. He regarded Turner as 'the finest creator of mystery in art' and went to see his paintings in London in 1903, confiding a little later to Ricardo Viñes that Masques and L'isle joyeuse owed something to them. On the whole, the artists he knew personally (Henri Lerolle, Alfred Stevens, Henry de Groux) were not of the same stature as the poets. His friendship with the sculptress Camille Claudel (the poet Paul Claudel's sister) was particularly important; Robert Godet recounted that they established agreement instantly on a number of essential points: love of Degas, indifference or scepticism towards some of the Impressionists who had become ubiquitous, and admiration for Japanese artists, especially Hokusai (whose work adorns the cover of La mer; for illustration see DURAND). Debussy was impressed by the private world sculpted by this young pupil of Rodin: her piece La valse remained on Debussy's desk until his death. One of his rare piano pupils, Mademoiselle Worms de Romilly, went so far as to write that he 'always regretted not having worked at painting instead of music'. Ever since his years at the Conservatoire, Debussy had felt that he had more to learn from artists than from career-obsessed musicians: 'You are getting nowhere, M. Croche will tell them, because you know nothing but music and obey barbaric laws'. Three of his works were dedicated to artists: one of the Images for piano to Alexandre Charpentier, one of the Proses lyriques to Henri Lerolle, and Estampes to Jacques-Emile Blanche.

Although the nature of influences exerted at one remove is not easy to define, it must be acknowledged that the development of free verse in poetry and the disappearance of the subject or model in painting made Debussy think about issues of musical form. Furthermore, the virtues of

8. Cover of the vocal score of Debussy's 'La damoiselle élue' (Paris: Libraire de l'art indépendant, 1893): lithograph by Maurice Denis stylization (Japanese prints), the value of the quick sketch (Camille Claudel), the qualities associated with the 'arabesque' and the possibilities of a dreamlike world bordering on anguish (Munch, Poe) were all aesthetic notions that Debussy retained from his association with poets and artists of the symbolist era. He often discussed music with a vocabulary borrowed from the visual arts; in the guise of M. Croche, he 'talked about a score as if it were a picture'; he liked to use the word 'arabesque' to describe widely different kinds of music, from plainsong to Javanese music, by way of Bach. The very titles of his works are indicative of his closeness to the visual arts (Arabesques, Nocturnes, Images, Estampes) while critics compared him to Monet, Le Sidaner or even Klimt.

It was the members of the Institut de France who were the first to call his music 'Impressionist', in 1887, with reference to Printemps, his second 'envoi' from Rome. This was the first instance of a misunderstanding which has persisted to the present day. The term took hold in particular after La mer. Debussy himself was sometimes careless about its use, allowing the following to be written about La mer in the Concerts Colonne programme note: 'It is, in a word, musical impressionism, following an exotic and refined art, the formula for which is the exclusive property of its composer'. When he tried to counteract the usage, for example by placing the titles in small type at the end of each of the Préludes for piano, it was too late. He wrote to his publisher in 1908: 'I'm attempting "something different", realities in some sense – what imbeciles call impressionism, just about the least appropriate term possible'.

Pelléas can be considered as the masterpiece of French symbolism, though the movement which inspired the opera came to an end at the same time as its first performances. Debussy should not be confined only to the symbolism in which he steeped himself as a young man, and which helps us to understand the formation of his personal language. But it is even more important to refute the label of 'Impressionist', which is still applied to him even today. The stylistic features which are usually advanced to justify the label (veiled, iridescent lines, disintegration of sounds, predominance of colour in the orchestration) are based on misinterpretations both of the nature of painting and of the true originality of Debussy's musical style. However, the composer occasionally provided evidence to support the 'Impressionist' tag, notably when he wrote to Emile Vuillermoz in 1916; 'You do me a great honour by calling me a pupil of Claude Monet'.

Once he was famous, the composer was receptive to the ideas spread by writers in favour of a return to the classics, which led him to extol the values of a national tradition (Rameau) and to choose to set poems by Charles d'Orléans and Tristan Lhermite. The decisive turning-point in his aesthetic evolution came between Pelléas and La mer: he no longer referred to poets or visual artists in his correspondence as ideals on which to model himself or his music. He rejected the Fauves and made gentle fun of the production style of the Ballets Russes. Eventually he came close even to rejecting the stimulus of other music, writing early in 1914: 'There comes a moment in life when one wants to concentrate, and now I've made a resolution to listen to as little music as possible.'

7. MODELS AND INFLUENCES. The elements from which Debussy gradually built up his personal style were of course many. Though he spent a dozen years at the Conservatoire, he instinctively picked up there only what seemed to suit his natural bent; he explained to a journalist from the New York Times in 1910 that as a student he had striven to compose as he was expected to, adopting a more personal style for the works he wrote outside the Conservatoire. At the Conservatoire he acquired a knowledge of the traditional musical canon (Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Weber), and to this he added an acquaintance with the choral works (Handel, Liszt, Gounod) which he accompanied for the rehearsals of the Concordia choral society, and with the earlier repertory (Palestrina, Lassus, Victoria) which he heard in Rome and at St Gervais in Paris. The significance of some models was observable only in certain details of his technique: for example, the unconventional use of unresolved 7th and 9th chords, in the manner of Chabrier and Grieg, found in the Tarentelle styrienne, or the pedal effect borrowed from Ravel's Sites auriculaires for La soirée dans Grenade (which in fact can be traced back to his own Prélude à l'après-midi). The different levels of these influences, their nature and degree of importance require clarification. The first level is that of simple reminiscence, especially before Debussy forged his own personal style. If the manner of Massenet and Gounod is not absent from the first 30 mélodies (mostly written for the soprano voice of Marie Vasnier), no study of them has succeeded in uncovering actual borrowing; equally, Marguerite's monotone recitative in Faust ('Je voudrais bien savoir') cannot be considered a direct model for Pelléas. An orchestral coloration not far removed from that of Lalo can be found in some of the pieces written with a view to winning the Prix de Rome, and an orientalism reminiscent of Delibes is evident in the Piano Trio. Debussy's attitude towards Franck, whose classes he attended only sporadically, varied without ever being very positive. He evolved in the very influential ambience of the 'bande à Franck', of which d'Indy was later the leader. Though he criticized Franck's somewhat schematic use of modulation and four-square phrasing, he picked up his technique of cyclic form as a means of ensuring the unity of a work: it left its mark on the Quartet and the Fantaisie for piano and orchestra as well as La mer.

Debussy admired Chabrier from his youth, taking from him examples of formal and harmonic liberty analogous to those he found in poets and visual artists. The affinities between La sulamite and La damoiselle élue and between Pièces pittoresques and Suite bergamasque have often been mentioned; other affinities can be found with the Valses romantiques (especially the third one), which Debussy played to Liszt and even with Gwendoline, the overture of which Debussy conducted. In the case of Chopin, to whose memory Debussy dedicated his Etudes and whose works he edited for Durand, the lineage is a spiritual one in terms of formal and harmonic freedom; while exact audible allusions are rare, the tactile sense of Chopin's pianism can be felt throughout Debussy's mature piano writing. As M. Croche, he expressed gratitude that Chopin had written not true sonatas but 'very highly elaborated sketches', and Chopin's Barcarolle was one of his favourite pieces. It is not known what he thought of the concert his friend Godet conceived for the pianist Marie Panthès in Geneva during the last few months of his life, based on a series of comparisons between his own Etudes and pieces from Chopin's op.10 and op.25.

The Russian influence was the most obvious one to Debussy's contemporaries, and its significance was emphasized by Cocteau after the composer's death. On the eve of the first performance of Nocturnes, after sight-reading works by Borodin and Rimsky-Korsakov, André Gide found that they 'oddly diminished Debussy' for him. The influence is most explicit in the Balakirev-like 7/4 episode of the piano Nocturne of 1892. Debussy was between 18 and 20 when he spent one summer in Arcachon and Florence and one with Madame von Meck in Russia, where he discovered a number of works, and took the scores of some of them home to Paris. He was greatly struck by Madame von Meck's idol, Tchaikovsky (as can be heard in the Danse bohémienne, his first surviving piano piece), but even more by Balakirev, Rimsky-Korsakov and Borodin. Traces of their influence can be found in his youthful mélodies, and his memories were revived by the Russian concerts at the 1889 Exposition in Paris. He discovered Musorgsky later, in the 1890s. There has been much debate about precisely when Debussy first became acquainted with Boris Godunov: the only certainty is that he already knew the opera by the time he started Pelléas in 1893. Apart from the expressive correspondences between the deaths of Boris and Mélisande, its influence extends to the somewhat Musorgskian character of Golaud and above all of Yniold, whose vocal inflections are very close to those of the Russian composer's Nursery. The final F–E ostinato of Boris Godunov recurs in the grotto scene of Pelléas. In a more general way, it may have been from the Russians that Debussy acquired his taste for ancient and oriental modes and for vivid colorations, and a certain disdain for academic rules; he himself wrote that in Musorgsky form 'is built up by means of a succession of little touches mysteriously linked together'. 'Nuages' and 'Fêtes' undoubtedly owe something to the distinctive repetitive rhythms of Borodin's In the Steppes of Central Asia. And it was again to Musorgsky that he turned when he wanted to re-create the world of childhood: even in a late work such as La boîte à joujoux there are passages which draw on Pictures at an Exhibition.

Debussy knew nearly all Wagner's works long before he went to Bayreuth, but his Wagnerism reached its peak in 1887–8 when, according to Pierre Louÿs, he made and won a bet that he could play Tristan by heart. His apostasy after his second visit to Bayreuth was above all the result of his quest for a personal style somewhere beyond Wagner. Before beginning Pelléas, he confided to Louÿs that he did not see 'what anyone can do beyond Tristan', and as late as 1896 he still gave Wagnerian sessions at the home of a society hostess, Madame Godard-Decrais. The early works in which the Wagnerian influence is most evident are La damoiselle élue and the Cinq poèmes de Baudelaire; the latter pieces are exceptional among Debussy's output of songs in their length, their wide intervals and their chromatic harmonies, even more marked in Recueillement than in Le jet d'eau. Pelléas owes much to Wagner, except in respect of two essential points, denounced by Debussy, Wagner's 'homogenized orchestration' and 'the symphonic development responsible for the dramatic action', or 'making symphonic music in the theatre'. The first sketches for Pelléas show Wagner's fingerprints very clearly, as Debussy was only too aware, writing to Chausson that he was finding it very difficult to avoid 'the ghost of old Klingsor, alias Richard Wagner, appearing at the turning of a bar'. In the final version, the most Wagnerian passages are in Act 4 scene iv (Tristan) and the interludes in Act 2 (cf the third acts of Meistersinger and Tristan), where it is a matter as much of orchestration as of harmonic structures. Although the influence is less distinct in later work, Debussy continued to be fascinated by certain of Wagner's orchestral effects. The beginning of the second movement of La mer perhaps recalls the Act 2 prelude in Tristan. In the context of expressing his admiration for Petrushka, Debussy told Stravinsky that 'there is an orchestral infallibility that I have found only in Parsifal' (1912) and, at much the same time, concerning the orchestration of Jeux, he explained to Caplet that he had in mind 'that orchestral colour which seems to be lit from behind, of which there are such marvellous effects in Parsifal'.

It was at the precise moment when he first turned his back on Wagner that Debussy discovered the music of East Asia at the 1889 Exposition. For him the revelation was far removed from the attraction of the exotic or the picturesque that it meant for many French composers, and concerned essentially the use of musical scales obeying conventions other than those of the West. He listened spellbound to the 'infinite arabesque' of the Javanese gamelan with its percussion – the Western equivalent of which he likened to the 'barbaric din of a fairground' – and the counterpoint 'beside which Palestrina's is child's play', and he was equally fascinated by the Annamite theatre, which impressed him by its economy of means: 'an angry little clarinet' and a tam-tam. He himself never introduced any form of unmediated exoticism into his music, except arguably into Pagodes, but the gamelan has been suggested as one influence in the Fantaisie for piano and orchestra, and in the Toccata of the suite Pour le piano, composed shortly after the 1900 Exposition. Debussy was always consistent on the point that a folk or national music should not be used for its themes but rather in the manner of Albéniz: 'Without using actual popular tunes he is the kind of person who has them in his blood. They have become so natural a part of his music that one barely distinguishes a demarcation line'. To a Hungarian friend, he wrote: 'Your young musicians could usefully take inspiration from them, not by copying them but by trying to transpose their freedom, their gifts of evocation, colour, rhythm . . . One should only ever use the folk music of one's country as a basis, never as a technique'. All music relying on improvisation enthralled him and, although he was normally parsimonious with praise, he displayed boundless enthusiasm for the gypsies he heard in Russia, for a violinist (Radics) in Budapest, and even for the violinist of the Carlton Hotel in Paris (Leoni, for whom he is said to have composed La plus que lente). What he particularly liked in Albéniz were the 'brusque awakenings' and 'nervous starts', as if emanating from a guitar. A concert in 1913 revived his memories of the 1889 Exposition, leading him to describe Spanish folk music as 'one of the richest in the world'. In the same year he received a visit from four Sufi Indian musicians, led by Inayat Khan, who aroused his interest in their repertory and are said to have demonstrated to him the technique of one of their instruments, the vina.

8. Sources and interpretation. Debussy seldom regarded a work as finished once and for all, even after its publication. He subjected some of his works to major revisions over many years, such as the Fantaisie for piano and orchestra and the Nocturnes. Pelléas was the object of substantial corrections – well after first publication – intended to refine the flexibility of the vocal lines.

Complex editorial problems still exist in certain cases; that of 'Sirènes', for instance, the third of the Nocturnes, in which Debussy wanted to make the women's voices 'blend' with the orchestra, rather than to sound like an addition to it. Having heard several unsatisfactory performances after 1900, he made various emendations during the rest of his life without ever arriving at a definitive solution; this is demonstrated by two copies marked with different, and in places incompatible corrections. When Ernest Ansermet asked Debussy, in 1917, which corrections to retain, the composer, a sick man, is said to have replied: 'I don't really know any more . . . use what seems good to you'.

The chronology of Debussy's juvenilia has only recently been established; the manuscripts of these early works are often problematic, especially with regard to accidentals. Second versions of some of the mélodies on poems by Verlaine (Fantoches, Clair de lune, En sourdine) were composed in 1891. Finally, the existence of unpublished material for Rodrigue et Chimène and for one scene of La chute de la maison Usher helps to show his evolution as a dramatic composer.

Debussy called on the help of others in several of his works, essentially to orchestrate on occasions when he was pressed for time: André Caplet for Le martyre de Saint Sébastien (1911), Henri Busser for Printemps (1912) and Charles Koechlin for Khamma. In these three cases the orchestration was done under his strict control. There is an impressive list of projects which Debussy conceived, especially after Pelléas, but did not carry out, denoting a kind of constant striving for a form of imaginary theatre. Musical fragments are all that survive of La saulaie (Louÿs, after Rossetti, 1896–7), Le roi Lear after Shakespeare (1904), Psyché by Gabriel Mourey (Syrinx for flute, 1913), Le palais du silence, a ballet by Georges de Feure (1913–14), Crimen amoris after Verlaine (Charles Morice, Louis Laloy, 1914), and Ode à la France on a text by Laloy (1916–17). He was always hesitant about orchestrating his mélodies: he first promised to orchestrate two of the Proses lyriques, then changed his mind; only Le jet d'eau was performed in his own orchestration but it was criticized even by his friends. Finally, his promise to Bernardino Molinari, to orchestrate L'isle joyeuse, was an expression of intent eventually realized by Molinari following Debussy's indications.

The increasing care with which he notated his works reflects his stringent requirements in the matter of interpretation. There is ample evidence of his dissatisfaction with singers and pianists: though Mary Garden escaped any censure, and Ninon Vallin received exceptional praise, Maggie Teyte, Rose Féart and Marguerite Carré were the objects of pitiless reproach. Among pianists, Viñes gave the first performances of his works for a dozen years, but was criticized in 1908 for having failed to understand the architecture and thus 'falsified the expression' of the second series of Images. Debussy went so far as to generalize his opinion of performers: 'Pianists are bad musicians and chop the music into unequal portions, like a chicken'; or: 'It's impossible to imagine how my piano music has been distorted, so much that I often can hardly recognize it' (to Varèse, 1910). In Debussy's later years, Walter Rummel was a trusted interpreter who gave the first performances of several of the Préludes and Etudes. As for conductors, he was grateful to André Messager for having launched Pelléas but soon wanted to hear a less prosaic interpretation; Camille Chevillard, the first conductor of La mer, was his bête noire, and Gabriel Pierné, an old friend, was accused of failing to understand the structure of Jeux.

9. Theatre works and projects. Even if Debussy completed very few works for the theatre, he devoted much time to various projects and expressed opinions on the subject which give us a precise idea of the range of his tastes. The theatre fascinated him from childhood, and he even appointed himself teacher of dramatic art to his friend René Peter. He had a profound admiration for Shakespeare and cherished an intention to write incidental music for As you like it for 30 years. He admired the work of Ibsen among his contemporaries, because it was 'exceptional'.

M. Croche complained about the 'pathological need to write operas'; he reproached Gluck for harbouring 'the infancy of Wagnerian formulas' and for failing to understand French prosody, making of it 'a language of stresses when it is a language of nuances'; he claimed to like Rameau for being 'lyrical', but his campaign on Rameau's behalf was perhaps more one of national principle than of reverence for a possible model. He spoke out vigorously against Italian verismo composers and even more so against Charpentier and his claims to express the reality of life. As for Wagner, after the infatuation of his youth, Debussy remained faithful to Parsifal and Tristan all his life, in spite of the polemical character of his utterances on the subject.

Two non-traditional forms of theatre had an appeal for him as a young man. One was the little puppet theatre in the passage Vivienne where Maurice Bouchor practised the art of pantomime; the atmosphere was unreal, the puppets moving with hieratic slowness to incidental music composed by Bouchor's friends Chausson and Paul Vidal. The other was the shadow plays created by Henri Rivière at Le Chat Noir, which involved the projection of silhouettes against various scenic backgrounds, and was influenced by japonisme. But after André Antoine's Théâtre Libre, it was the Théâtre de l'Oeuvre, run first by Paul Fort then by Lugné-Poe, which most held his attention, and which alone represented symbolist tendencies in the theatre after 1891; the plays by Ibsen and Maeterlinck which were staged by the company embodied a drama of great suggestive power in which destiny and fate loomed large.

Apart from Le martyre de Saint Sébastien and his two ballets, most of the stage projects to which Debussy devoted himself were not commissioned, but belonged to his 'imaginary' theatre. Some were merely transient ideas (Salammbô, La grande bretèche, Dionysos, L'Orestie), others were indefinite promises that were not kept (Les noces de Sathan, Le pélerin d'amour), or sketches that were soon abandoned (L'histoire de Tristan, Le chevalier d'or).

Debussy himself explained that he had tried to write for the theatre before composing Pelléas, but the form in which he had wanted to do it was 'so unusual that after various attempts' he had given up. This was a reference to his attempt to write a scène lyrique on a text by Theodore de Banville, Diane au bois, on which he worked during his stay in Rome; he observed at the time that he had no precedents for it and that he needed to 'invent new forms' in order to ensure that 'the emphasis remained lyrical without being swamped by the orchestra' (fig.9). He is also reported to have set one scene of Villiers de l'Isle Adam's Axel, a play with very strong Wagnerian associations, but the manuscript is lost. The next and most surprising project was an opera on a libretto by Catulle Mendès, a member of the 'Parnassian' school, Rodrigue et Chimène, on which he spent more than two years in 1890–92. The libretto itself was over 12 years old and treated the story of El Cid in a very conventional format in the tradition of grand opera; nothing could have been further from Debussy's symbolist notions, but nevertheless he sketched three acts (out of what seems to have planned as a four-act work). Mendès's influence in theatrical circles, in addition to Debussy's own chronic lack of money, are the only plausible explanations for this curious diversion on the composer's aesthetic path. The score does not feature musical motives associated with individual characters; the vocal style is very lyrical and entails quite wide intervals. That the style is partly Wagnerian is not surprising but it also exhibits anticipations of Pelléas, notably in the second act. Later, Debussy must have blotted out his memories of the work when he told a journalist: 'I have never written duets and I never shall' (1909); in fact, duets are found not only in Rodrigue but also in Diane au bois. Only a few months passed between his abandonment of Rodrigue and the shock of Pelléas et Mélisande, Maeterlinck's play, performed at the Bouffes-Parisiens on 17 May 1893, and the answer to the dream that Debussy had revealed to Guiraud four years earlier: a text 'half saying things', with characters 'of no time, of no place', which did not impose on him an obligatory big scene (scène à faire). Maeterlinck gave him permission to make cuts and he undertook the composition of one of the scenes in August 1893.

Meanwhile, Debussy had discovered Boris Godunov, with its supple and finely shaded melodic recitative and its great harmonic freedom which helped him to distance himself from the Wagnerian model. He finished a first version of Pelléas during 1895 and many of his friends were struck by the modernity of the excerpts they heard in private. Various plans to get it staged came to nothing, while Debussy refused to allow excerpts to be given in concert performance despite Ysaÿe's encouragement. Before he had orchestrated it, he was certain that he wanted to see it performed not in one of the large national theatres but in a more modest venue, such as Lugné-Poe's Théâtre de l'Oeuvre. In the end he had to accept the offer of André Messager and Albert Carré to produce Pelléas at the Opéra-Comique, where it became necessary at the last moment to prolong four interludes to allow time to change the sets. Although the first performances were not a truly popular success, a large artistic and musical constituency recognized them as an event that overthrew all the traditions of operatic composition, as well as presenting the masterpiece of the symbolist movement late in its history.

In Pelléas singing remains on the threshold of speech, ideally adapted to the specificities of language, but it brings out the interior music of the text and succeeds in revealing the hidden nuances of a scenario which might otherwise appear, at first sight, to be a simple family drama. Commentators have counted varying numbers of identifying motives in the score, associated with the characters, or with certain symbols and ideas. There are essentially only three that truly play a role in the melodic fabric: Pelléas, Mélisande and Golaud; they do not always recur in exactly the same form but change shape and colour according to the changing situations. They are not leitmotifs but are woven into the orchestral texture in order to unify and energize the discourse. The tension and progression of the drama are ensured by the subtlety of the orchestra – seldom used at full strength – which constantly serves to change the work's mood. After the score was published, Debussy carried out a number of changes, notably in order to improve the balance of winds and strings and to refine the timbres and sonorities. But the permanent contrast between shadow and light, the atmosphere of dream and mystery, the expression of a view of the role of fate and destiny which is close to that of the ancient Greek theatre: all are obtained by the totality of the elements of the musical language, deployed in a profoundly personal manner.

9. Fifth surviving autograph page of Debussy's 'Diane au bois', composed c1884–6 (US-NYpm)

Debussy next turned to a different form of theatre with two works that he himself adapted from stories by Edgar Allan Poe. He told a journalist in 1908 about his new taste for short pieces, the 'condensed forms of opera'. After Pelléas he put all his hopes into the search for a theatre of fear and 'progressive anguish' inspired in him by Poe's The Devil in the Belfry and The Fall of the House of Usher. He envisaged the two works being performed as a double bill, and even signed a contract with the Metropolitan Opera in New York, before finally allowing the Opéra-Comique in 1911 to announce their performance in the following season. Only opening fragments have been found for Le diable dans le beffroi, in which Debussy said he wanted 'extremely simple but at the same time extremely flexible choral writing'. Three versions survive of the libretto for La chute de la maison Usher, written between 1908 and 1916, but only fragments remain of the music in short score, including an incomplete monologue for Roderick Usher, in which a parlando style is pushed to an extreme, along with some passages of great expressive intensity. But the reconstruction of the fragments first performed in 1977 does not allow a clear idea of it to emerge, mostly because of unidiomatic orchestration and misinterpretation of keys and clefs. These uncompleted projects constituted the principal disappointment in Debussy's artistic career, and were undoubtedly the reason for his statement that 'perhaps we have not yet found the lyric form answering to our present state of mind'.

Among the many proposals for stage works that were put to Debussy, it was almost by chance that he came to write incidental music for Le martyre de Saint Sébastien, written by Gabriele d'Annunzio in five long acts ('mansions') for Ida Rubinstein. Assisted by André Caplet, Debussy took only two months to write a score which uses very large forces (notably six horns, four trumpets and three harps) and displays an eclecticism perhaps more marked than that of other mature works, expressing the ambiguity of a text which oscillates between Christianity and paganism, eroticism and mysticism. Certain unifying motives run through the work: that of the Cross, that of the Passion (third and fourth 'mansions') and the invocation 'Sébastien'. It is characterized by the sharpness of dissonances (especially in the third 'mansion') and a harmonic language imprinted with modal clashes and ambiguities (in the 'Danse extatique'). At the end of his life Debussy wanted to revise the work, reducing the text and adding to the music; in 1916, with Jacques Rouché, director of the Opéra, he conceived the project of transforming Le martyre into a drame lyrique. As it is, it represents a somewhat hybrid genre incorporating elements of oratorio, sacred dramatic mime and ballet.

Ex.1 'Voiles'

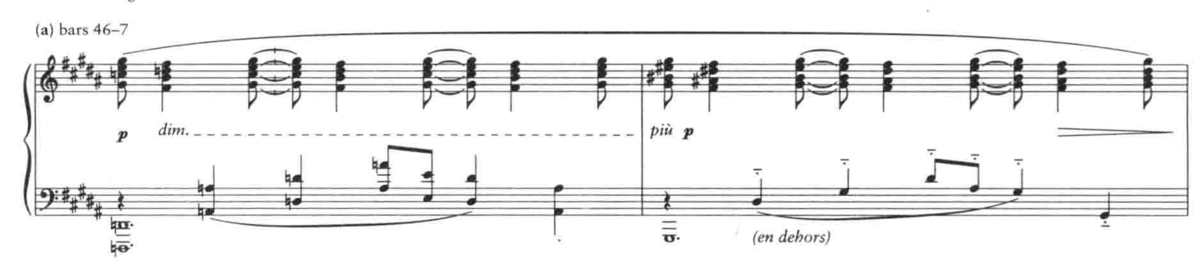
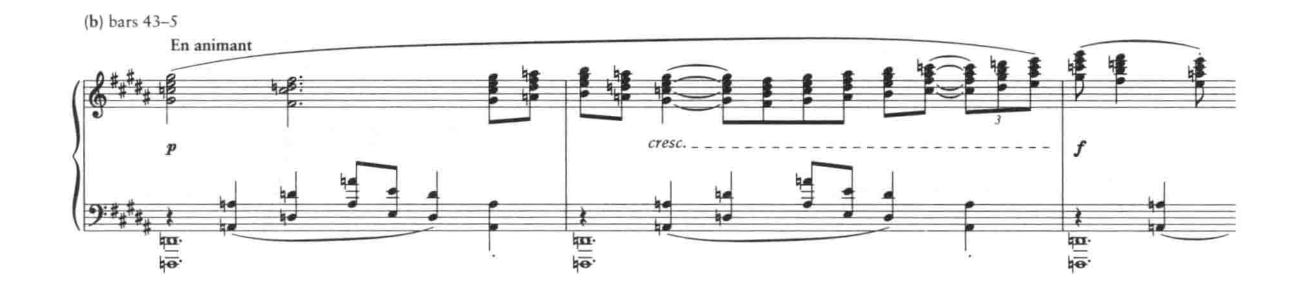
Debussy was rather reserved in his attitude to the aesthetic of the Ballets Russes, and seems to have preferred the idea of rejuvenating the old form of opera-ballet (Fêtes galantes after Verlaine, renamed Crimen amoris). He wrote the scenario – but not the music – of Masques et bergamasques, but he detested the choreography which Diaghilev commissioned from Nizhinsky for Jeux, a work which finally found a new life for itself in the concert hall. He fell out with Maud Allan who commissioned the ballet Khamma; the score, which has its Stravinskian moments, was not played in his lifetime.

Debussy did not like the atmosphere in big theatres, and distrusted producers. He generally avoided going to performances of his own works; when he made an exception for Pelléas, in Brussels and London, he escaped before the première; he never attended a performance of the opera in conditions that completely satisfied him.



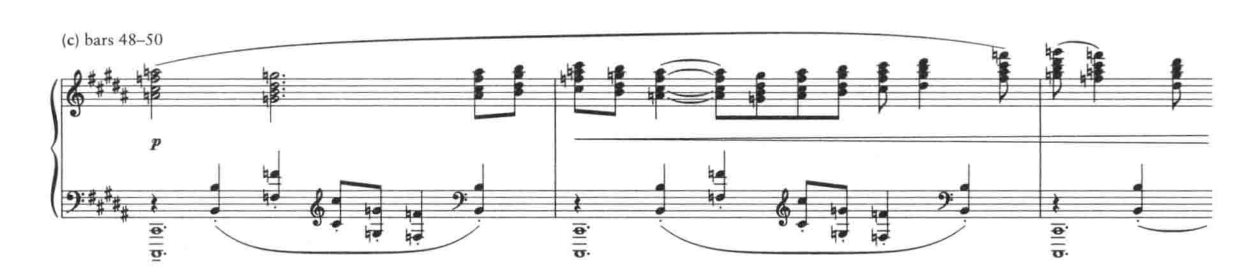
He showed a real interest in the cinema. Having been won over by the use of cinematic technique in a realization of Eugène Sue's Juif errant at the Théâtre de l'Ambigu, he suggested using cinematographic projections to enhance a non-staged performance of Das Rheingold in 1903. In another review, in 1913, he predicted a role for the new art form as 'a means of reviving the taste for symphonic music'. He responded with positive interest to a proposal for a film version of Le martyre de Saint Sébastien in 1914, but nothing came of it.

10. Musical language. Debussy's inventions bear equally on harmony, rhythm, texture and form, and might be summarized as a lifelong quest to banish blatancy of musical expression. His harmony inseparably binds modality and tonality: although French music never lost its variety of modes. Debussy extended and revitalized their range and tonal potential, developing the explorations of Chabrier and Russian composers and the different modal languages of Asian music. According to Maurice Emmanuel, Debussy was claiming in 1889–90 that 'music is neither major nor minor' and rebelling even against the rule of equal temperament; around the same time Edmond Bailly was reportedly educating him about Indian rāga, just as he was discovering Javanese gamelan.



Audible energy level accounts for much in Debussy's use of tonality: in Reflets dans l'eau the tonal structure involves not just key centres (a surprisingly classical sequence of D♭–D♭–E♭–A♭^{7}–D♭) but a polarity of diatonic stability versus chromatic instability; this equally goes for La mer. Contrasted modes perform a similar function: in Voiles the outer whole-tone sections surround a climactic pentatonic passage, which replaces the opening section's notes C, D and E by the semitones in between (D♭ and E♭) leaving the other notes of the opening scale unaffected (exx.1*a* and 1*b*). The indeterminacy of the whole-tone opening thus resolves to E♭ minor (still veiled by remaining

Ex.2 'Hommage à Rameau'



(a) bars 46–7

(b) bars 43–5

(c) bars 48–50

in second inversion), while the opening pages' emphasis of B♭, D and A♭/G♯ emerges in retrospect as a preparatory dominant 7th, avoiding cadential obviousness by means of the symmetrically balanced semitone shifts at the point of modal transition (ex.1*c*). This reflects a wider practice in the first book of piano Préludes, which opens by modally splitting the first chord's tonic B♭ to A and B. Another piece with no tonal modulation in the accepted sense is Pagodes, whose switches between B major and G♯ minor simply reflect bass pedals that shift a degree down or up the piece's basic pentatonic scale, while the progressive addition of E, D♯, A♯, G/F𝄪 and E♯ gradually intensifies the energy, not unlike the unfolding of an Indian rāga.

Like Fauré, Debussy often juxtaposes the same basic material in different modes or with a strategically shifted bass – arguably his most literal approach to true Impressionist technique, the equivalent of Monet's fixed object (be it cathedral or haystack) illuminated from different angles. In Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune the first three musical paragraphs open with the same flute arabesque at the same pitch, but to totally different effect each time by virtue of the opening C♯ first being unharmonized, then sounded over a D major chord and finally over an E major chord. The opening of La cathédrale engloutie compresses an analogous sequence into six bars, with a shifting bass to provide the varying source of illumination for the 'fixed object' above. In the central part of Hommage à Rameau Debussy plays this device on two simultaneous levels, letting a modal juxtaposition across two bars (ex.2*a*) form the bridge for a larger-scale juxtaposition across eight bars (exx.2*b* and 2*c*).

L'isle joyeuse relates to this by contrasting various scales on A: major, whole-tone, Lydian, and a combination of Lydian and Mixolydian with sharpened fourth and flattened seventh, somewhat like an overtone series. Sometimes known accordingly as the 'acoustic scale', this mode (already seen in ex.2*b*, and classed in Karnatic tradition as Vachaspati) is also prominent in the first movement of La mer, where it emerges from the D♭ major pentatonic by the addition of the tritonally opposed dyad G–C♭.

Debussy's avoidance or softening of obvious cadences – or his reservation of them for comic contexts – can be linked to Chabrier, who often foils a leading-note implication by pulling the major 7th down stepwise to the 5th (throughout España or in the central part of his piano Impromptu); this became a characteristic Debussy fingerprint, as at the end of Jardins sous la pluie, Les collines d'Anacapri and Hommage à S. Pickwick, as well as in the ostinato that launches the coda of L'isle joyeuse. Another characteristic fingerprint – a consonant 10th chord slipping down to a 9th, as first heard in the Petite suite of 1889 – can be traced to Chabrier's Trois valses romantiques (1883), which Debussy played to Liszt in 1886.

Whether Debussy's first teacher Mme Mauté was, as she claimed, a Chopin pupil is still debated, but Debussy apparently believed her, and Chopin's suppleness of language, gesture and rhythm, as well as his gracefully powerful aesthetic, underlies Debussy's mature works even more than his early ones. This is a subtle aspect to trace as it avoids mere imitation: it manifests itself especially in the piano music through physical patterns, like the opening of the first book of Préludes (published in the Chopin centenary year) relative to the close of Chopin's B♭ Prelude from op.28, or the opening chordal motions of the étude 'Pour les accords' relative to the Scherzo of Chopin's Second Sonata (second page onwards). A powerful correlation can be traced between the closing pages of L'isle joyeuse (bar 186 onwards) and Chopin's Third Ballade (bar 183 onwards), in terms of a crescendo sequence (a bass octave ostinato with added dissonant semitone), followed by a first tonic arrival, a tonal disruption, a second tonic arrival combined with an increase in tempo, and finally a rapid descent with added major 6th across most of the keyboard.

This emphasizes the spatial or visual element in Debussy's musical thinking, and on a smaller scale his musical shapes are often visually driven, as in the rising layers of arabesque in bar 4 of Pagodes (like the layers of a pagoda roof), or bars 2–4 of Feuilles mortes (which suggest a breath of wind followed by leaves fluttering to earth). Lockspeiser's discussion of geotropism in Debussy's melodic shapes relates to this, and if it does not immediately concern conventional key procedures, it reminds us that conventional tonal analysis alone is insufficient to map a way through Debussy's musical thinking. Yet in the most elementary sense his harmonic thinking is functional, in that each harmonic step sets up implications that he answers, even if not in the way or at the place we expect. His range of modality, especially in pieces like Cloches à travers les feuilles, often makes his procedures – logical enough to our ears – impervious to modally closed analytic systems like Schenker's. Pitchclass set analysis can show more abstract intervallic relationships lurking under the music's audible tonality, but the nature of this analytic system – essentially designed for atonal music – makes it an incomplete tool for music that always preserves some form of tonality.

Debussy's farthest tonal outreaches are probably found in the second books of piano Images and Préludes: in Et la lune descend the modal E minor tonality is masked and considerably compromised by added 4ths in all the chords of the piece's main motive (a technique that possibly influenced Ravel's 'Le gibet' a year later); in Brouillards the left hand's clear tonality is literally fogged by the right hand's chromatic overlay. Here the musical language is again sensuously driven, combining auditory, visual and tactile elements. In the second book of Préludes this forms a larger structural motive, for the opening pattern in Brouillards – left hand on white keys overlaid by right hand mostly on black keys – recurs at the start of Les fées sont d'exquises danseuses, but with the tonal sense reversed: the left-hand notes now form appoggiaturas to the right hand. The last prelude, Feux d'artifice, opens with the same hand layout but with the tonality ambiguous; only on the last page is it resolved, in a way that inversely mirrors the opening of Brouillards, with right-hand fragments of 'La marseillaise' in C major merely forming modal colour over the bass D♭. Tonally this pattern is established by La puerta del vino, whose main theme features sustained melodic notes decorated by rapid Moorish ornaments; in normal harmonic practice the former would be consonant and the latter dissonant, but Debussy does exactly the opposite.

Along with Khamma and Jeux, the second book of Préludes mostly abandons the whole-tone scale for exploration of the octatonic scale with its tonal ambiguities: for example, two of the three possible octatonic collections are juxtaposed in the first two beats of Brouillards, and the third collection follows a page later. In this regard Debussy follows Rimsky-Korsakov, Ravel and Stravinsky, or indeed Chopin (coda of the Fourth Ballade). This contrasts with the octatonic patterns in his earlier music, which are mostly audible as diminished 7th sequences with passing notes, as already used by Berlioz, Chopin and Liszt. His last works move on again, leaving octatonicism largely to the finale of En blanc et noir. Behind the apparent return to diatonicism of the sonatas and Etudes, however, lurk many surprises, not least the dramatic B♭ minor ending of 'Pour les tierces' whose inevitability can, in retrospect, be traced back to the piece's opening bars.

The major extra-musical structural formant in Debussy's musical language was poetry: this allowed his songs, until the 1890s, to be more fluid and tonally adventurous than his instrumental music, whose more static sectionality is more explicitly marked by fixed keys. His first instrumental masterpiece, Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune, essentially stretches its canvas over a poem (as Arthur Wenk observed, it comprises the same number of bars as Mallarmé's poem has lines). If Wagner's influence is most obvious in the Cinq poèmes de Baudelaire of 1887–9, it never vanishes entirely: like Chabrier, Debussy subsumed it to his own ends, retaining its harmonic riches while jettisoning (or transforming) its bombast – a topic explored with relish by Robin Holloway (D1979).

Major antidotes to Wagner, evident from Pelléas et Mélisande onwards, came from the colourful directness of Russian music, the discreet grace of Massenet and the vocal inflections of the French language – one of many qualities that link Debussy to the era of Rameau and Lully. Discretion can be seen in his precise focussing of dynamics: for example, of the 570 bars that make up the two series of piano Images, less than 30 reach the level of fortissimo and not many more reach forte. (Even this total reveals more robustness than Debussy is often credited with.) The revelation of Javanese gamelan arguably gave Debussy the confidence to embark (after the 1900 world exhibition) on his fully characteristic mature piano works, with their many bell- and gong-like sonorities and brilliant exploitation of the piano's natural resonance. The music's top line is increasingly given over to arabesque figurations, with slower-moving melodic lines lower in the texture; not only is this important for performers to recognize, but for Debussy it solved problems of piano texture and balance, moving the lines that most need sustaining away from the instrument's shortest strings, and letting the layers of musical texture support one another, often in rhythmic polyphony. Rondes de printemps reveals how thoroughly Debussy had worked this sophisticated

10. Autograph of part of the second movement of Debussy's 'En blanc et noir', composed 1915 (F-Pn MS.989) rhythmic and textural polyphony into his orchestral writing by 1908.

Although Debussy's Classical preoccupation is most explicit in his last works, he always considered himself essentially Classical, to the extent that clarity of form and expression are themselves an integral part of the music's expression (as a pianist he was noted for playing in time, without exaggeration or left-hand anticipations). Rhythmic augmentations of an almost archaic kind occur in the closing pages of works from the Suite bergamasque to En blanc et noir, and hemiola is a basic element of the piano pieces Danse and Masques. Dance is endemic to his idiom, and the enormous variety of rhythm on the music's surface includes rubato and flexibility written into the notation, for example through tied-over beats. (Any rhythmically sloppy performance therefore shreds his carefully designed architecture, both within phrases and on a larger scale.) His notation is more descriptive than Ravel's, and a passing indication like 'Lent' (as on the last page of Reflets dans l'eau) often indicates an effect written into the notation without requiring any change in underlying pulse. In Jeux and the piano Préludes especially, double bars are usually signposts of surface texture rather than larger structural transitions, requiring no tempo fluctuation except where indicated; his frequent indication // in later works (as in ex.1) merely signals the end of a nuance, not a hiatus.

In major scores from the late 1880s onwards, especially La mer, L'isle joyeuse and the piano Images, the many precisely focussed tonal, thematic and other turning points have been shown, in analyses by Roy Howat, to form sophisticated proportional structures based on symmetry and the golden section (often following the numbers of the Fibonacci series), as measured by notated bars or beats, usually focussing on the music's climactic points. How consciously this came about is unproven, and the subject can still be contentious; its main interest lies in linking different aspects of the structure into a naturally balanced dramatic flow. It occurs very precisely in the climactic Act 4 scene 4 of Pelléas et Mélisande; the dramatic shaping of this scene, and indeed of the whole opera, can be related to other symphonic movements including 'Jeux de vagues', Gigues, Rondes de printemps and Jeux, which focus their dramatic intensity in a sequence of two culminating crescendos. All that said, Debussy was ever suspicious of systems and formulas and, in his own words, 'would rather devote myself to cultivating pineapples' than lapse into repeating what he had already achieved.

11. ORCHESTRATION AND TIMBRE. Debussy confided to Robert Godet that his prime model of orchestration was Weber. He cited the 'sylvan charm' of a quartet of horns in the overture to Der Freischütz, the music for the appearance of the ghost in Euryanthe and the muted violins in the overture to Oberon. He was unstinting in his criticism of the 'orchestre-cocktail' of Wagner and Richard Strauss. From the Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune onwards, he treated the orchestra according to his own sound ideals, creating a very personal mixture from its traditional components: violins commonly in eight, ten or even twelve parts, generous use of harps, woodwind unmixed and seldom used to reinforce other parts, brass veiled and often muted, with very restrained use of trumpets and trombones. His percussion writing is usually discreet, except in La mer and, above all, in Ibéria. Textbooks of instrumentation frequently cite the polyphonic subtlety of the divided cellos in the first movement of La mer which create such an original sonority. When Debussy doubles parts it is in order to create a particular colouring: the mixture of horns and low violins at the end of the Prélude, english horn and two cellos in La mer, piccolo and harp in Jeux. He uses the low notes of the flute to express anguish or melancholy, and likes to give solos to harps and percussion; for Debussy the bassoon (which often accompanies Golaud in Pelléas) tends to become a vehicle for dramatic expression, and he creates a notably plaintive effect with his use of the oboe d'amore in Gigues. His pedal indications for the piano are notable for their infrequency and apparent imprecision, and his interest in resonances is reflected in his own salon piano, a Blüthner boudoir grand with the Aliquot system of a supplementary string to each note in the upper register which resonates sympathetically without being struck. From his youth, Debussy tended to treat the singing voice like an instrument, integrating it into the orchestra, as in Printemps where, he wrote, 'the choral part is wordless and treated, rather, as a section of the orchestra', and then in 'Sirènes', the third of the orchestral Nocturnes, in which 16 women's voices vocalize, while trying to blend into the orchestra. His experiments with sonorities were also directed towards individualization of timbres. Working in 1894 on an early version of the three Nocturnes for violin and orchestra (now lost), he conceived of one part consisting of strings, another of flutes, four horns, three trumpets and two harps, and a third 'which reunites these two combinations'; and he compared this kind of construction to 'various relationships which a single colour can produce' in painting.

He went so far as to imagine a complete revolution in the seating arrangement of the orchestra in order to realize his dream of an ideal sound, with the strings forming a circle round the other instruments, the woodwinds dispersed, the bassoons among the cellos, and the clarinets and oboes among the violins 'so that their intervention becomes something other than the dropping of a parcel' (from a conversation with Victor Segalen). Perhaps no other composer made such telling use of silence as a means of expression: 'the empty bars in Pelléas bear witness to my love for this type of emotion', he wrote, and he was lavish with directions to the interpreter on how to achieve it ('losing itself', 'scarcely', 'almost nothing').

For Debussy, timbre was not merely a coat to be added to the musical texture, but became an essential element of his musical language, and La mer and the orchestral Images show how he treated strings, wind and percussion sometimes almost interchangeably. In its purest state, his exploitation of timbre can be found in the Etudes for piano, one of his greatest late works. Sheltering behind a pedagogic exterior, these 12 pieces explore abstract intervals, or – in the last five – the sonorities and timbres peculiar to the piano. Debussy's satisfaction at having conceived something hitherto 'unheard of' also embraced the calligraphy of these complex pieces: 'the most meticulous of Japanese prints is child's play beside the penmanship of some of these pages'.

12. RECEPTION AND INFLUENCE. Between the Prix de Rome and the first performance of Pelléas, no work by Debussy had a success in Paris sufficient to attract critical attention. The performances at the Société Nationale of the String Quartet (in 1893) and the Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune (in 1894) passed almost unnoticed outside a small circle of friends, and the Nocturnes caused scarcely any more stir in 1900 and 1901. It was Pelléas which propelled the composer to the forefront, and drew his earlier works in its wake. By the end of 1902, the Prélude had been given in Marseilles, for example, and two Nocturnes ('Nuages' and 'Fêtes') in Pau; the following year the same two Nocturnes were played in Bordeaux (where they received a hostile reception from the audience); Lyons held a virtual Debussy festival, with two concerts of mélodies and piano pieces before a select audience, and this was also the first city outside Paris where Pelléas was presented (in 1908, to half-empty houses). The year 1905 saw an upsurge in the diffusion of his work – it even infiltrated the Paris Conservatoire. People began to speak of 'debussysme' and to denounce his followers (Florent Schmitt, Grovlez, Séverac); a deepening gulf formed between his adherents (Marnold, Laloy and soon Vuillermoz) and his detractors (including Pierre Lalo, who had championed Pelléas but rejected La mer).

Outside France, in the majority of countries where the Austro-German influence (not Wagner alone) was predominant, several of his works were heard before Pelléas: the Prélude was performed in Boston in 1902, in Berlin in 1903, and in London, Pavlovsk and Constantinople in 1904; the first two Nocturnes in Berlin and Boston in 1904, Oslo in 1906, Milan in 1907. Certain conductors played a crucial role in these initiatives, such as Busoni in Berlin and Toscanini in Italy. But, as in France, it was the stagings of Pelléas which first made the composer famous. They were by no means always triumphs: after an initial success in Brussels in 1907, the opera was received relatively favourably in Frankfurt, much less so in Munich and Berlin, where the public was uncomprehending; reception was muted in New York and Milan in 1908, a poor reward for Toscanini's efforts; in the following year, after a fiasco in Rome, Pelléas was received in London with something approaching enthusiasm.

It is quite surprising to see that in Germany the Prélude was performed some 40 times between 1903 and 1914, and that in 1904 one critic, incredibly, described Pfitzner as 'Germany's Debussy'. Strauss conducted the Nocturnes in Berlin in 1912, but remained hostile to the aesthetic of Pelléas. Many German musicians regarded the music of Bruneau and Charpentier as more typically French than Debussy's. Nevertheless, he influenced certain German and Austrian composers, such as Reger (op.125) and Schreker. Among Viennese composers, Schoenberg's knowledge of Debussy's music appears to date only from 1907 and coincides with his abandonment of tonality. Among Schoenberg's pupils, Berg was the one to rate the French composer most highly. More works by Debussy were featured in the programmes of the Verein für musikalische Privataufführungen between 1918 and 1921 than by any other composer except Reger.

The English public's access to Debussy was smoothed by his symbolist and pre-Raphaelite associations. His own anglophilia led him to visit England seven times up to 1914, more often than any other country. Although the Prélude was heard in 1904 and the Quartet in 1907, it was in 1908 that his reputation was established in London: the very first monographs about him were published there in that year (Daly and Liebich), and the critic Arthur Symons called him 'the Mallarmé of music'. A performance of La mer led many reviewers to attach the epithet 'atmospheric' to his music, while most continental Europeans preferred 'Impressionist'. Before long his influence could be discerned in the work of such composers as Bridge, Ireland, Goossens, Holst and Cyril Scott, who was sometimes called 'the English Debussy'. The enthusiasm seemed to be confirmed in 1916 when Debussy's Cello Sonata was given its world première in London on 4 March 1916.

11. Claude Debussy

Italy's reception of Debussy begins in Turin in 1906 with Toscanini's performances of the Prélude and 'Nuages', which he then took to Trieste and Venice; he gave the two Nocturnes in Milan in the following year. In general, the critics were struck by the harmonic language and judged Debussy to be an innovator of great refinement, but the public were alienated by a melodic sense they found disconcerting. From 1909 onwards it was in Rome that his works, notably La mer, were heard most often, thanks principally to the Augusteo orchestra conducted by Bernardino Molinari. As for Puccini, though he admired the French composer's harmonic language, it is perhaps not surprising that he thought Pelléas had as much relief as a Franciscan's habit. The overall verdict was that Debussy was a better painter than musician, that he sacrificed melody to harmonic experiment, and that his art was some sort of isolated exception. Casella added that Impressionism would not work in Italy.

In the United States, New York and above all Boston made Debussy's acquaintance quite early: the Prélude in 1902, Nocturnes in 1904, and La mer in 1907, while Mahler conducted Ibéria and Rondes de printemps in 1909. Several players (George Copeland, Harold Bauer, Heinrich Gebhard) introduced his piano works, mainly in Boston from 1904 onwards, and Walter Rummel gave the world première of Ce qu'a vu le vent d'ouest at Stockbridge in 1910. Some composers, such as Charles Griffes, the Alsace-born Charles Loeffler and Aaron Copland, reveal his influence.

Many of Debussy's works, including Nocturnes and La mer, had already been heard in Russia when the composer visited Moscow and St Petersburg in 1913, at the invitation of Koussevitzky. The critics as a whole were not very receptive and judged his works to be monotonous and lacking in form, an opinion shared by composers of the Cui and Rimsky-Korsakov generation. Almost alone, Myaskovsky deemed Debussy an 'incomparable poet', while two former students of Rimsky-Korsakov held almost diametrically opposite views of the French composer's music, Prokofiev finding it rather bloodless, and Stravinsky (associated with Diaghilev since 1909) affirming his total admiration. When Pelléas was performed in St Petersburg in 1915 (cut and in a bad translation) the critic Karatïgin praised its 'profound inner truth'.

On his visit to Hungary in 1910, Debussy was surprised to discover that his works were already well known in Budapest (notably La mer, performed there in 1909), 'better known than in Paris', he told a journalist. Bartók and Kodály had discovered his music at the latest by 1907, the year in which the latter wrote his Méditation sur un motif de Claude Debussy. Bartók was to dedicate the seventh of his Improvisations op.20 to Debussy, and described him as 'the greatest composer of our time'. As much as by his emancipation from the hegemony of German music, both were struck by his pentatonicism, in which they found analogies to Hungarian folk music.

Johan Halvorsen conducted the Prélude and two Nocturnes in Oslo in 1906 at a concert where Grieg was the first to applaud; in Tokyo in 1909, the concert's first item (the Sarabande from Pour le piano) was preceded by appreciations from two Japanese writers (A. Naïto and K. Nagaï) who had been to France and gave a very poetic description of their impressions, emphasizing the beauty of the colours, while a third (T. Shimazaki) found affinities in Debussy's music to the shamisen and Japanese music. In Rio de Janeiro, the Prélude was conducted by Nepomuceno at the National Exhibition in 1908.

The Prélude à l'après-midi was not heard in Tokyo until 1921, but Pelléas was performed, for example, in Zagreb in 1923 and in Copenhagen in 1925. In France itself, six weeks before Debussy's death, Jean Cocteau published Le coq et l'arlequin, airily accusing him of having fallen into 'the Russian trap' and proclaiming a new aesthetic. Three months later, the Groupe des Six gave their first concert at the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier. If Les Six did not wholeheartedly follow their ideologue in his critique of Impressionist 'woolliness' ('flou'), they broadly shared his devotion to Satie, who wanted to put it behind him. Somewhat in spite of themselves, they were implicated in the relative purgatory in which Debussy's music was confined after the Great War. However, hearing Pelléas was the experience that made composers such as Maurice Delage and Roland-Manuel recognize their vocations and led to the constitution of Les Apaches, the informal group which included Ravel. Certainly, Debussy did not disappear from concert programmes in France between the world wars, but the most advanced aspect of his musical language was clouded by the nodish avant-gardism of Les Six. To some extent, the French movement had been anticipated in Italy: from 1913 onwards, the futurists, led by Pratella, had manifested their hostility towards 'gracefulness' in music and the 'Impressionism' of Debussy.

At the Paris Conservatoire, Messiaen was responsible for introducing Debussy's music to a new generation of French postwar composers. In an article of 1958, his pupil Pierre Boulez rejected an increasingly pejorative notion of Impressionism, minimized the importance of Pelléas and insisted on the modernity of La mer and above all of Jeux, with its dispersal of timbre throughout the orchestra and its conception of 'irreversible time'. With Cézanne and Mallarmé, Debussy was one of the three great pillars of French modernism.

WORKS

Edition: Oeuvres completès, ed. F. Lesure (Paris, 1985–)
Catalogue: F. Lesure: Catalogue de l'oeuvre de Claude Debussy (Geneva, 1977); errata by Y. Lado-Bordowsky, Cahiers Debussy, no.14 (1990)

OPERAS

Title	Acts: libretto	Composed	Firs/performance	Publication	Remarks
Rodrigue et Chimène	3; C. Mendes, after G. de Castro	vocal score of Acts 1 (in part), 2 and 3, 1890–93	Lyons, Opéra, 14 May 1993 (reconstruction, R. Langham Smith, orchd E. Denisov)	short score, ed. R. Langham Smith (in preparation)
Pelléas et Melisande	5; M. Maeterlinck, abridged Debussy	1893–5, 1898, 1900–02	Paris, Opéra-Comique, 30 April 1902	vocal score (1902, rev. 1907), full score (1904, rev. 1907, 1964)	sketches facs. (Geneva, 1977)
Le diable dans le beffroi	2 tableaux; Debussy after E.A. Poe	1902–?12			inc.; sketches for scenario and music in Lockspeiser: Debussy et Edgar Poe (1962)
La chute de la maison Usher	2 scenes; Debussy after Poe	1908–17	New Haven, 25 Feb 1977	vocal score, ed. J. Allende-Blin (1979)	inc., orig. planned as 3 scenes; complete text and vocal score of scene i and part of scene ii (Usher's monologue) in Lockspeiser: Debussy and Edgar Poe (1962)
Fêtes galantes (orig title, Crimen amoris)	opéra-ballet, 3 tableaux: C. Morice and L. Laloy after P. Verlaine	1913–15			libretto and sketches for scene i in Orledge: Debussy and the Theatre (1982)

BALLETS

Title	Description; scenario	Composed	First performance	Publication	Remarks
Khamma	légende dansée; W.L. Courtney, M. Allan	1910–12	Paris, Opéra- Comique, 26 March 1947	pf score (1916)	beginning orchd Debussy, rest Koechlin under Debussy's supervision
Jeux	poème dansé; V. Nizhinsky	1912–13	Paris, Champs- Elysées, 15 May 1913	pf score (1912), full score (1914)
La boîte à joujoux	ballet pour enfants; A. Hellé	1913	Paris, Lyrique, 10 Dec 1919	pf score (1913), full score (1920)	beginning orchd Debussy, rest Caplet from Debussy sketches
No-ja-li (Le palais du silence)	ballet; G. de Feure	1913–14			sketches for prelude and scene i in Orledge: Debussy and the Theatre (1982)

INCIDENTAL MUSIC

Berceuse for La tragédie de la mort (R. Peter), 1v, 1899; unpubd
Le roi Lear (W. Shakespeare) 1904–5, inc., 7 sections sketched, 2 completed and orchd Roger-Ducasse (1926): Fanfare d'ouverture, Le sommeil de Lear
Le martyre de St Sébastien (mystère, 5, G. D'Annunzio), 1910–11, orchd Debussy and Caplet; Châtelet, 22 May 1911; vocal score (1911), full score (1911); La cour de lys, La chambre magique, Le concile des faux dieux, Le laurier blessé, Le paradis
Piece for Psyché (Flûte de Pan) (G. Mourey), fl, 1913; pubd as Syrinx (1927)

OTHER DRAMATIC WORKS

early choral works from dramatic sources

Hélène (Leconte de Lisle), S, chorus, orch, frag., 1881, unpubd
Hymnis (T. de Banville), scenes i, ii (in part) and vii, 1882; 'Il dort encore' (scene i) (1984)
Diane au bois (Banville), overture (pf duet), vocal score of end of Act 2 scene iii and scene iv, 1883–5; unpubd music to accompany readings of poems

Chansons de Bilitis (Louÿs), 2 fl, 2 hp, cel, 1900–01, lost cel part reconstructed Boulez (1954) and Hoérée (1971); recomposed as 6 épigraphes antiques, pf 4 hands, 1914 (1915)

projects

Salammbô (op, Debussy, after G. Flaubert), 1886
L'embarquement pour ailleurs (sym. commentary, G. Mourey), 1890–91
Les noces de Sathan (incid music, J. Bois), 1892
Oedipe à Colonne (op, P. Louÿs and A.F. Hérold), 1894
La grande bretèche (op, Debussy, after H. de Balzac), 1895
Cendrelune (conte lyrique, Louÿs), 1895–8; text extant
Daphnis et Chloé (ballet, Louÿs, after Longus), 1895–7
Les uns et les autres (op, P. Verlaine), 1896
Aphrodite (ballet, Louÿs), 1896–7
Le chevalier d'or (pantomime, Mme J.-L. Forain), 1897
Orphée (ballet, P. Valéry), *c*1900
Le voyage de Pausole (sym. suite, Louÿs), 1901
Comme il vous plaira (op, P.J. Toulet, after W. Shakespeare), 1902–4
Le pèlerin d'amour (incid music, V.-E. Michelet), 1902–3
Dionysos (tragédie lyrique, J. Gasquet), 1904
L'histoire de Tristan (op, Mourey, after J. Bédier), 1907–9
Orphée-roi (op, V. Segalen and Debussy), 1907–9
Siddartha (op, Segalen), 1907–10
L'Orestie (op, Laloy, after Aeschylus), 1909
Masques et bergamasques (ballet, Debussy), 1909–10, scenario (1910)
La dame à la faulx (incid music, Saint-Pol-Roux), 1911
Crimen amoris (poème chanté et dansé, L. Laloy and C. Morice, after Verlaine), 1914, later Fêtes galantes [see OPERAS]

ORCHESTRAL

Symphony, b, 1880–81; Allegro, pf 4 hands (1933), not orchd
Intermezzo, vc, orch, 1882 (1944) [after poem by H. Heine]; also arr. pf 4 hands
Le triomphe de Bacchus, suite after T. de Banville, 1882; Allegro arr. pf 4 hands (1928), orchd Gaillard (1928)
Première suite, 1883–4: Fête, Ballet, Rêve, Bacchanale; also arr. pf; unpubd
Printemps, sym. suite, female chorus, orch, 1887, orig. score lost; arr. pf 4 hands (1904); reorchd from pf version by Busser under Debussy's supervision, 1912 (1913)
Fantaisie, pf, orch, 1889–96; full score (1920, rev. edn, 1968)
Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune, 1891–4 [after poem by S. Mallarmé]; full score (1895), arr. 2 pf (1895)
Nocturnes, 1897–9: Nuages, Fêtes, Sirènes; full score (1900–01, rev. edn, 1930)
Rapsodie, a sax, orch, 1901–8, orch realized Roger-Ducasse, 1919; red. sax, pf by Roger-Ducasse, 1919
La mer, 3 sym. sketches, 1903–5: De l'aube à midi sur la mer, Jeux de vagues, Dialogue du vent et de la mer; full score (1905, rev. edn, 1910), arr. pf 4 hands (1905)
Deux danses, chromatic hp, str, 1904: Danse sacrée, Danse profane; full score (1904), arr. 2 pf (1904)
Images, 1905–12: Gigues, 1909–12, full score (1913); Ibéria, 1905–8, full score (1910); Rondes de printemps, 1905–9, full score (1910)

orchestrations

Marche écossaise sur un thème populaire, 1893–6, completed 1908 (1911) [after pf work]
Deux gymnopédies, 1896 (1898) [nos.1 and 3 of Satie: Trois gymnopédies]
Rapsodie, a sax, orch, 1901–11 [after chbr work]; short score orchd Roger-Ducasse (1919)
Première rapsodie, cl, orch, 1911 [after chbr work]; full score (1911)
La plus que lente [after pf work]; full score (1912)
Berceuse héroïque, 1914 [after pf work]; full score (1915)

projects

Symphony, after E.A. Poe, 1890
Trois scènes au crépuscule, after H. de Régnier, 1892–3
Marche triomphale des drapeaux, 1893 [for Chat noir]
Trois nocturnes, vn, orch, 1894–6

VOCAL ORCHESTRAL

Daniel (cant., E. Cécile), 3 solo vv, orch, scene i, part of scene ii, 1882; unpubd
Le printemps (Comte de Ségur), female chorus, orch, 1882; pubd as Salut printemps, chorus, pf, arr. Gaillard (1928); full score (1956)
Invocation (A. de Lamartine), male chorus, orch, 1883; vocal score with pf 4 hands (1928), full score (1957)
Le gladiateur (cant., E. Moreau), 3 solo vv, orch, 1883; unpubd
Le printemps (J. Barbier), chorus, orch, 1884; unpubd
L'enfant prodigue (scène lyrique, E. Guinand), 1884; vocal score (1884); rev. 1907–8, full score (1908); Prélude, Cortège et air de danse arr. pf 4 hands (1884)
Zuleima (ode sym., G. Boyer, after Heine), chorus and orch, 1885; lost
La damoiselle élue (poème lyrique, D.G. Rossetti, trans. G. Sarrazin), S, female chorus, orch, 1887–8, reorchd, 1902, vocal score (1892), full score (1902); Prélude arr. pf
La saulaie (Rossetti, trans. P. Louÿs), 1v, orch, 1896–1900, facs. in D. Herlin, Cahiers Debussy, no.20 (1996)
Ode à la France (L. Laloy), S, chorus, orch, sketched 1916–17; orchd Gaillard (1928)

orchestrations

Le jet d'eau, 1v, orch, 1907 [after song]; full score (1907)
Trois ballades de Villon, 1v, orch, 1910 [after songs]; full score (1911)

CHORAL

Chanson des brises, S, 3 female vv, sketch, 1882
Trois chansons de Charles d'Orléans: Dieu! qu'il la fait bon regarder!, 1898; Quand j'ai ouy le tabourin, 1908; Yver, vous n'estes qu'un villain, 1898 (1908)
Noël pour célébrer Pierre Louÿs, pour toutes les voix y compris celle du peuple (Debussy), 1903; unpubd

CHAMBER

Premier trio, G, pf trio, 1880 (1986)
Nocturne et scherzo, vc, pf, 1882
Premier quatuor, op.10, g, str qt, 1893 (1894)
Première rapsodie, cl, pf, 1909–10 (1910)
Morceau à déchiffrer pour le concours de clarinette de 1910; pubd as Petite pièce, cl, pf (1910)
Syrinx, fl, 1913 (1927) [see INCIDENTAL MUSIC]
Sonata, vc, pf, 1915 (1915)
Sonata, fl, va, hp, 1915 (1916)
Sonata, vn, pf, 1916–17 (1917)

projects

String Quartet no.2, 1894
Violin Sonata, 1894
Sonata, ob, hn, hpd, 1915
Sonata, cl, bn, tpt, pf, 1915
Sonata, pf, ens, 1915

SONGS

for solo voice and piano unless otherwise stated

Ballade à la lune (A. de Musset), 1879
Madrid, princesse des Espagnes (A. de Musset), end 1879
Nuit d'étoiles (T. de Banville), early 1880 (1882)
Rêverie (Banville), 1880 (1984)
Caprice (Banville), end 1880 (1966)
Aimons nous et dormons (Banville), end 1880 (1933)
Les baisers (Banville), early 1881
Les papillons (T. Gautier), 1881
Rondel chinois, 1881
Tragédie (L. Valade, after H. Heine), 1881
Jane (Leconte de Lisle), 1881 (1966)
La fille aux cheveux de lin (Leconte de Lisle), 1881
Fleur des blés (A. Girod), 1881 (1891)

Rondeau (Musset), 1881 (1932)
Triolet à Philis ['Zéphir'] (Banville), 1881 (1932)
Souhait (Banville), 1881 (1984)
L'archet (C. Cros), 1881 (1992)
Les elfes (Leconte de Lisle), 1881
Chanson triste (M. Bouchor), 1881
Les baisers d'amour (M. Bouchor), 1881
Eglogue (Leconte de Lisle), S, T, pf, 1881
Fantoches (P. Verlaine), 1st version, 1882
Les roses (Banville), 1882 (1984)
Sérénade (Banville), 1882 (1984)
Pierrot (Banville), 1882 (1926)
Fête galante (Banville), 1882 (1984)
Le lilas (Banville), 1882 (1984)
Flots, palmes et sables (A. Renaud), 1882
Seguidille (Gautier), 1882
Clair de lune (Verlaine), 1st version, 1882 (1926)
En sourdine (Verlaine), 1st version, 1882 (1944)
Mandoline (Verlaine), 1882 (1890)
Pantomime (Verlaine), 1883 (1926)
Coquetterie posthume (Gautier), 1883 (1983)
Chanson espagnole (Musset), 2 equal vv, pf, 1883 (1982)
Romance: Silence ineffable (P. Bourget), 1883 (1983)
Musique (Bourget), 1883 (1983)
Paysage sentimental (Bourget), 1883 (1891)
Apparition (S. Mallarmé), 1884 (1926)
La romance d'Ariel (Bourget), 1884 (1983)
Regret: Devant le ciel (Bourget), 1884 (1983)
Romance: Voici que le printemps (Bourget), 1884 (1903)
Deux romances (Bourget), 1885 (1891): L'âme évaporée, Les cloches
Barcarolle (Guinand), *c*1885
Ariettes, paysages belges et aquarelles (Verlaine) (1888), rev. and repubd as Ariettes oubliées (1903): C'est l'extase, 1887; Il pleure dans mon coeur, 1887; L'ombre des arbres, 1885; Chevaux de bois, 1885; Green, 1886; Spleen, between 1885 and 1887
Cinq poèmes de Baudelaire (1890): Le balcon, 1888; Harmonie du soir, 1889; Le jet d'eau, 1889; Recueillement, 1889; La mort des amants, 1887
La belle au bois dormant (E.-V. Hyspa), 1890 (1903)
Beau soir (Banville), 1891 (1891)
Trois mélodies (Verlaine), 1891 (1901): La mer est plus belle, Le son du cor, L'échelonnement des haies
Fêtes galantes (Verlaine), set 1, 1891 (1903): En sourdine [2nd version], Fantoches [2nd version], Clair de lune [2nd version]
Les angélus (G. Le Roy), 1892 (1893)
Proses lyriques (Debussy) (1895): De rêve, 1892; De grève, 1892; De fleurs, 1893; De soir, 1893
Chansons de Bilitis (Louÿs), 1897–8 (1899): La flûte de Pan, La chevelure [pubd separately, 1897], Le tombeau des naïades
Nuits blanches (Debussy), 1898 [Proses lyriques, set 2]: Nuit sans fin; Lorsqu'elle est entrée
Dans le jardin (P. Gravollet), 1903 (1905)
Trois chansons de France, 1904 (1904): Rondel I, Le temps a laissié son manteau (C. d'Orléans), La grotte (T. Lhermite), Rondel II, Pour ce que Plaisance est morte (d'Orléans)
Fêtes galantes (Verlaine), set 2, 1904 (1904): Les ingénus, Le faune, Colloque sentimental
Le promenoir des deux amants (Lhermite), 1904–10 (1910): La grotte, 1904 [no.2 of Trois chansons de France]; Crois mon conseil, chère Climène, 1910; Je tremble en voyant ton visage, 1910
Trois ballades de Villon, 1910 (1910): Ballade de Villon à s'amye, Ballade que Villon fait à la requeste de sa mère, Ballade des femmes de Paris
Trois poèmes de Mallarmé, 1913 (1913): Soupir, Placet futile, Eventail
Noël des enfants qui n'ont plus de maison (Debussy), 1915 (1916), arr. children's chorus 2vv, pf (1916)

PIANO

solo

Danse bohémienne, 1880 (1932)
Deux arabesques, *c*1890 (1891)
Mazurka, *c*1890 (1903)
Ballade slave, *c*1890 (1891), repubd as Ballade (1903)
Rêverie, *c*1890 (1891)
Suite bergamasque, *c*1890, rev. 1905 (1905): Prélude, Menuet, Clair de lune, Passepied
Tarentelle styrienne, *c*1890 (1891), repubd as Danse (1903)
Valse romantique, *c*1890 (1890)
Nocturne, 1892 (1892)
Images, 3 pieces, 1894 (1978) [no.2 (1896) differs only in detail from Sarabande of Pour le piano]
Valse, 1894, lost
Pour le piano, 1894–1901 (1901): Prélude, Sarabande, Toccata
Images, series 1, 1901–5 (1905): Reflets dans l'eau, Hommage à Rameau, Mouvement
Estampes, 1903 (1903): Pagodes, La soirée dans Grenade, Jardins sous la pluie
D'un cahier d'esquisses, 1904 (1904)
L'isle joyeuse, 1903–4 (1904)
Masques, 1903–4 (1904)
Pièce pour piano, 1904 (1905) [based on sketch from Le diable dans le beffroi]
Sérénade à la poupée, 1906 (1908), incorporated in Children's Corner
Children's Corner, 1906–8 (1908): Doctor Gradus ad Parnassum, Jimbo's [Jumbo's] Lullaby, Serenade for the Doll, The Snow is Dancing, The Little Shepherd, Golliwogg's Cake-Walk; orchd A. Caplet, 1910 (1911)
Images, series 2, 1907 (1908): Cloches à travers les feuilles, Et la lune descend sur le temple qui fut, Poissons d'or
Hommage à Haydn, 1909 (1910)
The Little Nigar, 1909 (1909)
Préludes, bk 1 (1910): Danseuses de Delphes, 1909; Voiles, 1909; Le vent dans la plaine, 1909; 'Les sons et les parfums tournent dans l'air du soir', 1910; Les collines d'Anacapri, 1909; Des pas sur la neige, 1909; Ce qu'a vu le vent d'ouest; La fille aux cheveux de lin, 1910; La sérénade interrompue; La cathédrale engloutie; La danse de Puck, 1910; Minstrels, 1910
La plus que lente, 1910 (1910)
Préludes, bk 2, 1911–13 (1913); Brouillards, Feuilles mortes, La puerta del vino, 'Les fées sont d'exquises danseuses', Bruyères, General Lavine – eccentric, La terrasse des audiences du clair de lune, Ondine, Hommage à S. Pickwick Esq. P.P.M.P.C., Canope, Les tierces alternées, Feux d'artifice
Berceuse héroïque, 1914 (1915)
Elégie, 1915 (1916)
Etudes, 1915 (1916): bk 1: Pour le cinq doigts, Pour les tierces, Pour les quartes, Pour les sixtes, Pour les octaves, Pour les huit doigts; bk 2: Pour les degrés chromatiques, Pour les agréments, Pour les notes répétées, Pour les sonorités opposées, Pour les arpèges composés, Pour les accords; facs. ed. R. Howat (1989); 1st version of Pour les arpèges composés (facs., realized R. Howat as Etude retrouvée, 1980) Pièce pour le Vêtement du blessé, 1915; pubd as Page d'album (1933)

four hands

Andante, 1881; unpubd
Ouverture 'Diane', 1881
Divertissement, 1884
Petite suite, 1886–9 (1889): En bateau, Cortège, Menuet, Ballet; orchd H. Busser, 1907 (1907)
Marche écossaise sur un thème populaire (Marche des anciens comtes de Ross), 1890 (1891)
Six épigraphes antiques [in part from Chansons de Bilitis, 1900–01], 1914 (1915): Pour invoquer Pan, Pour un tombeau sans nom, Pour que la nuit soit propice, Pour la danseuse aux crotales, Pour l'égyptienne, Pour remercier la pluie au matin, arr. solo pf, 1914 (1915)

two pianos

Lindaraja, 1901 (1926)
En blanc et noir, 3 pieces, 1915 (1915)

arrangements

P. Tchaikovsky: Three dances from Swan Lake, pf 4 hands, 1880 (1965)
C. Saint-Saëns: Caprice on airs from the ballet in Gluck's Alceste, pf 4 hands, 1889 (1891); Introduction et Rondo capriccioso, 2 pf, 1889 (1889); Airs de ballet d'Etienne Marcel, 2 pf, 1890; Symphony no.2, 2 pf, 1890
R. Wagner: Overture: The Flying Dutchman, 2 pf, 1890 (1890)
R. Schumann: Six studies in canon form, 2 pf, 1891; Am Springbrunnen (A la fontaine), pf, pubd in suppl. to L'illustration (1895), separately (1904)
J. Raff: Humoresque en forme de valse, pf, 1894 (1903)
For arrs. of own works see other sections of list

Principal publishers: Durand, Fromont, Jobert

MSS in CH-W; F-ASOlang, Pn, Po; GB-Lbl; US-AUS, Bc, NYpm, R, STu, Wc and numerous private collections

EDITIONS

J.-P. Rameau: Les fêtes de Polymnie, Oeuvres complètes, xiii (Paris, 1908)

F. Chopin: Oeuvres pour piano(Paris, 1915) with A. Lefort: J.S. Bach: Six sonates, violon et piano (Paris, 1917) with L. Fournier: J.S. Bach: Trois sonates pour piano et violoncelle (Paris, 1917)

WRITINGS

Monsieur Croche, antidilettante (Paris, 1921, 2/1926; Eng. trans., 1927/R) ed. F. Lesure: Monsieur Croche et autres écrits (Paris, 1971, 2/1987; Eng. trans., ed. R.L. Smith, 1977/R)

Plays written with R. Peter(unpubd unless otherwise stated): Les 'Frères en art' [F. E. A.], 1897–8, rev. Debussy, *c*1900, ed. F. Lesure, 1992; Le roman de Rosette, *c*1898–1901, in Cahiers Debussy, no.22 (1988); L'utile aventure, *c*1898; L'herbe tendre, *c*1899; Esther et la maison de fous, *c*1899, in Cahiers Debussy, no.20 (1996)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A Catalogues, bibliography, iconography. B Correspondence. C Monographs. D Other general literature. E Studies of individual works.

A: CATALOGUES, BIBLIOGRAPHY, ICONOGRAPHY

A. Martin: Catalogue de l'exposition Debussy (Paris, 1942)
A. Gauthier: Debussy: documents iconographiques (Geneva, 1952)
F. Lesure: Catalogue de l'exposition Claude Debussy (Paris, 1962)
C. Abravanel: Claude Debussy: a Bibliography (Detroit, 1974)
M.G. Cobb: Discographie de l'oeuvre de Claude Debussy (Geneva, 1975)
F. Lesure: Iconographie musicale: Debussy (Geneva, 1975)
F. Lesure: Catalogue de l'oeuvre de Claude Debussy (Geneva, 1977)
J.R. Briscoe: Claude Debussy: a Guide to Research (New York, 1990)

B: CORRESPONDENCE

'Correspondance inédite de Claude Debussy et Ernest Chausson', ReM, vii/1–2 (1925–6), 116–26
J. Durand, ed.: Lettres de Claude Debussy à son éditeur (Paris, 1927)
H. Martineau, ed.: Correspondance de Claude Debussy et P.-J. Toulet (Paris, 1929)
J. André-Messager, ed.: La jeunesse de Pelléas: lettres de Claude Debussy à André Messager (Paris, 1938)
G. Jean-Aubry, ed.: Claude Debussy: lettres à deux amis: 78 lettres inédites à Robert Godet et G. Jean-Aubry (Paris, 1942)
H. Borgeaud, ed.: Correspondance de Claude Debussy et Pierre Louÿs (Paris, 1945)
G. Tosi, ed.: Debussy et d'Annunzio (Paris, 1948)
E. Lockspeiser, ed.: Lettres inédites de Claude Debussy à André Caplet (Monaco, 1957)
P. Vallery-Radot, ed.: Lettres de Claude Debussy à sa femme Emma (Paris, 1957)
I. Stravinsky and others: Avec Stravinsky (Monaco, 1958) [incl. 7 letters]
P. Vallery-Radot: Tel était Claude Debussy (Paris, 1958) [incl. 17 letters]
A. Joly and A.Schaeffner: Ségalen et Debussy (Monaco, 1962) [incl. 21 letters]
F. Lesure, ed.: 'Claude Debussy: textes et documents inédits', RdM, xlviii (1962), 129–43 [letters to L. Laloy]
F. Lesure: '"L'affaire" Debussy–Ravel: lettres inédites', Festschrift Friedrich Blume, ed. A.A. Abert and W. Pfannkuch (Kassel, 1963), 231–4
F. Lesure: 'Lettres inédites de Claude Debussy à Pierre Louÿs', RdM, lvii (1971), 29–39
Mme G. de Tinan: 'Memories of Debussy and his Circle', Recorded Sound, no.50 (1973), 158–63
F. Lesure, ed.: Claude Debussy: lettres 1884–1918 (Paris, 1980; Eng. trans. with 56 additional letters, 1987; Fr. edn enlarged as Correspondance, 1993)
M.G. Cobb: 'Claude Debussy to Claudius and Gustave Popelin: Nine Unpublished Letters', 19CM, xiii (1989–90), 39–48

C: MONOGRAPHS

W.-H. Daly: Debussy: a Study in Modern Music (Edinburgh, 1908)
L. Liebich: Claude-Achille Debussy (London, 1908)
L. Laloy: Claude Debussy (Paris, 1909, 2/1944)
C.F. Caillard and J.de Bérys: Le cas Debussy (Paris, 1910)
G. Setaccioli: Debussy è un innovatore? (Rome, 1910)
D. Chennevière: Claude Debussy et son oeuvre (Paris, 1913)
E. Vuillermoz: Claude Debussy (Paris, 1920)
ReM, i (1920), 98–216 [Debussy issue]
R. Jardillier: Claude Debussy (Dijon, 1922)
L. Sabaneyev: Claude Debussy (Moscow, 1922); Eng. trans. in ML, x (1929), 1–34
A. Suarès: Debussy (Paris, 1922, enlarged 2/1936)
R. Paoli: Debussy (Florence, 1924, 2/1947)
'La jeunesse de Claude Debussy', ReM, vii (1926), 99–236
L. Vallas: Debussy(Paris, 1927)
L. Vallas: Les idées de Claude Debussy (Paris, 1927; Eng. trans. 2/1967)
C. Koechlin: Debussy(Paris, 1928, 2/1941)
M. Boucher: Claude Debussy (Paris, 1930)
J. Lépine: La vie de Claude Debussy (Paris, 1930)
R. Peter: Claude Debussy (Paris, 1931, enlarged 2/1944)
M. Dumesnil: How to Play and Teach Debussy (New York, 1932)
L. Vallas: Claude Debussy et son temps (Paris, 1932, 2/1958; Eng. trans., 1933/R, as Claude Debussy: his Life and Works)
E. Decsey: Claude Debussy (Graz, 1936)
A. Liess: Claude Debussy: das Werk im Zeitbild (Strasbourg, 1936)
E. Lockspeiser: Debussy (London, 1936, rev. 4/1963, 5/1980)
H. Kölsch: Der Impressionismus bei Debussy (Düsseldorf, 1937)
O. Thompson: Debussy, Man and Artist (New York, 1937, 2/1967)
H. Strobel: Claude Debussy (Zürich, 1940/R, rev. 3/1948)
L. Vallas: Achille-Claude Debussy (Paris, 1944, 2/1949)
R. Paoli: Debussy (Florence, 1947, 2/1951)
E. Decsey: Debussys Werke (Graz, 1948)
R. Malipiero: Debussy(Brescia, 1948)
R. Myers: Debussy(London, 1948)
J. van Ackere: Claude Debussy (Antwerp, 1949)
V. Jankélévitch: Debussy et le mystère (Neuchâtel, 1949)
J. d'Almendra: Les modes grégoriens dans l'oeuvre de Claude Debussy (Paris, 1950)
W. Danckert: Claude Debussy (Berlin, 1950)
G. and D.-E. Inghelbrecht: Claude Debussy (Paris, 1953)
V. Seroff: Debussy, Musician of France (New York, 1956; Fr. trans., 1957)
E. Vuillermoz: Claude Debussy (Geneva, 1957, 2/1962)
J. Barraqué: Debussy (Paris, 1962/R, 2/1994; Eng. trans., 1972)
M. Dietschy: La passion de Claude Debussy (Neuchâtel, 1962; Eng. trans., 1990)
Y. Tiénot and O.d'Estrade-Guerra: Debussy, l'homme, son oeuvre, son milieu (Paris, 1962)
Debussy et l'évolution de la musique au XXe siècle: Paris 1962
'Souvenir et présence de Debussy', RBM, xvi (1962), 43–149
E. Lockspeiser: Debussy, his Life and Mind (London, 1962–5; Fr. trans., with commentary on works by H. Halbreich, 1980)
'Claude Debussy 1862–1962: livre d'or', ReM, no.258 (1964) [whole issue]
S. Jarocinski: Debussy, a impresionizm i. synmbolizm (Kraków, 1966; Fr. trans., 1971; Eng. trans., 1975)
V. Jankélévitch: La vie et la mort dans la musique de Debussy (Neuchâtel, 1968)
S. Jarocinski: Debussy, kronika zycia, dziela, epoki (Kraków, 1972)
M. Schneider and others: Debussy, Génies et réalités (Paris, 1972)
R. Nichols: Debussy(London, 1973)
C.M. Zenck: Versuch über die wahre Art Debussy zu analysieren (Munich, 1974)
V. Jankélévitch: Debussy et le mystère de l'instant (Paris, 1976)
A.B. Wenk: Debussy and the Poets (Berkeley and Los Angeles, 1976)
T. Hirsbrunner: Debussy und seine Zeit (Berne, 1981)
M.G. Cobb: The Poetic Debussy: a Collection of his Song Texts and Selected Letters(Boston, 1982, 2/1994)
R. Orledge: Debussy and the Theatre (Cambridge, 1982)
R. Howat: Debussy in Proportion: a Musical Analysis (Cambridge, 1983)
A.B. Wenk: Claude Debussy and Twentieth-Century Music (Boston, 1983)
C. Goubault: Claude Debussy (Paris, 1986)
Silences, no.4 (1987) [Debussy issue]
R.S. Parks: The Music of Claude Debussy (New Haven, 1989)

P. Petazzi, ed.: 'I consigli del vento che passa': studi su Debussy (Milan, 1989)
F. Lesure: Claude Debussy avant Pelléas, ou les années symbolistes (Paris, 1992)
R. Nichols: Debussy Remembered (London, 1992)
F. Lesure: Claude Debussy: biographie critique (Paris, 1994)
R.L. Smith, ed.: Debussy Studies (Cambridge, 1997)
A. Boucourechliev: Debussy: la révolution subtile (Paris, 1998)
R. Nichols: The Life of Debussy (Cambridge, 1998)

D: OTHER GENERAL LITERATURE

M.-D. Calvocoressi: 'Les "Histoires naturelles" de M. Ravel et l'imitation debussyste', Grande revue (10 May 1907)
P. Lalo: 'M. Ravel et le debussysme', Le temps (19 March 1907)
F. Santoliquido: I dopo Wagner: Claude Debussy e Richard Strauss (Rome, 1909)
L. Laloy: 'Claude Debussy et le debussysme', BSIM, vi (1910), 421–9
G. Jean-Aubry: 'Claude Debussy', MQ, iv (1918), 542–53
R. Godet: 'Claude Debussy', Monde musical, xxx (1919)
G. Mourey: 'Memories of Claude Debussy', Musical News and Herald (11 June 1921)
J. Durand: Quelques souvenirs d'un éditeur de musique (Paris, 1924–5)
R. Godet: 'Weber and Debussy', The Chesterian, vii (1925–6), 220–26
M. Emmanuel: 'Debussy inconnu', Revue Pleyel, no.42 (1927)
L. Laloy: La musique retrouvée (Paris, 1928)
L. Vallas: 'Autour de Debussy', Musique, ii (1928–9), 675–80
M. Dumesnil: 'Conferences with Claude Debussy', Etude Music Magazine, li (1933), March
H. Prunières: 'Autour de Debussy', ReM, nos.142–6 (1934), 349–58; nos.147–50 (1934), 21–36, 189–94
O. Wartisch: Studien zur Harmonik des musikalischen Impressionismus (Erlangen, 1934)
C. Koechlin: 'Sur l'évolution de la musique française avant et après Debussy', ReM, nos.152–5 (1935), 264–80
R. Bardac: 'Dans l'intimité de Claude Debussy', Terres latines [Brussels], iv/3 (1936), 71–5
R. Godet: 'Claude Debussy: souvenirs (à propos des dernières oeuvres)', Information musicale (26 March 1943)
P. Landormy: La musique française de Franck à Debussy (Paris, 1943, 2/1948)
V. Gui: Battute d'aspetto (Florence, 1944)
C. Saint-Saëns: 'Correspondance entre Saint-Saëns et Maurice Emmanuel à propos de Debussy', ReM, nos.205–7 (1947), 30–34
M. de Falla: Escritos sobre música y musicos: Debussy, Wagner, el 'cante jondo' (Buenos Aires, 1950, 4/1988; Eng. trans. 1979)
L. Vallas: 'Achille Debussy jugé par ses professeurs du Conservatoire', RdM, xxxiv (1952), 46–9
A. Schaeffner: 'Debussy et ses rapports avec la musique russe', Musique russe, i (1953), 95–138
H. Mondor: 'Mallarmé et Debussy', Cahiers de marottes et violons d'Ingres (1954), Sept–Oct
P. Boulez: 'La corruption dans les encensoirs', Nouvelle Revue française, xlviii (1956), 1078–84; repr. in Relevés d'apprenti (Paris, 1966), 33–9; Eng. trans. in Stocktakings from an Apprenticeship (Oxford, 1991), 20–25
C. Brăiloiu: 'Pentatonismes chez Debussy', Studia memoriae Belae Bartók sacra (Budapest, 1956, 3/1959; Eng. trans., 1959), 385–426
A. Souris: 'Debussy et la nouvelle conception du timbre', Cahiers musicaux(March, 1956); repr. in Conditions de la musique et autres écrits(Brussels and Paris, 1976), 207–13
A. Jakobik: Zur Einheit der neuen Musik (Würzburg, 1957)
H. Pellerin: 'Claude Debussy et le Pays d'Auge', Pays d'Auge[Lisieux], vii/5–6 (1957)
F. Gervais: 'La notion d'arabesque chez Debussy', ReM, no.241 (1958), 3–23
M. Dietschy: 'The Family and Childhood of Debussy', MQ, xlvi (1960), 301–14
E. Souffrin-Le Breton: 'Debussy lecteur de Banville', RdM, xlvi (1960), 200–222
C. Cnattingius: 'Notes sur les oeuvres de jeunesse de Claude Debussy', STMf, xliii (1962), 31–53
F. Lesure: 'Debussy et le XVIe siècle', Hans Albrecht in memoriam, ed. W. Brennecke and H. Haase (Kassel, 1962), 242–5
N. Ruwet: 'Note sur les duplications dans l'oeuvre de Claude Debussy', RBM, xvii (1962), 57–70
E. Lockspeiser: 'Debussy's Concept of the Dream', PRMA, lxxxix (1962–3), 49–61
R. Myers: 'Debussy and French Music', MT, cviii (1967), 899–901
J. Noble: 'Debussy and Stravinsky', MT, cviii (1967), 22–5
E. Ansermet: Ecrits sur la musique (Paris, 1971)
F. Gervais: Etude comparée des langages harmoniques de Fauré et Debussy (Paris, 1971)
E. Brody: 'La famille Mendès: a Literary Link between Wagner and Debussy', MR, xxxiii (1972), 177–89
E. Lockspeiser: Music and Painting (London, 1973)
R.L. Smith: 'Debussy and the Art of the Cinema', ML, liv (1973), 61–70
R. Orledge: 'Debussy's Musical Gifts to Emma Bardac', MQ, lx (1974), 544–56
A. Liess: 'Claude Debussy und der Art Nouveau', Studi musicali, iv (1975), 245–76; v (1976), 143–234
D. de Tinan–Bardac: 'Souvenirs de Claude Debussy', SMz, cxv (1975), 293–300
A. Whittall: 'Tonality and the Whole-Tone Scale in the Music of Debussy', MR, xxxvi (1975), 261–71
Claude Debussy, Musik-Konzepte, nos.1–2 (1977, 2/1981)
R. Holloway: Debussy and Wagner (London, 1979)
J.-M. Nectoux: 'Debussy et Fauré', Cahiers Debussy, new ser., no.3 (1979), 13–30
A. Schaeffner: Essais de musicologie et autres fantaisies (Paris, 1980)
W. Spencer: 'The Relationship between André Caplet and Claude Debussy', MQ, lxvi (1980), 112–31
R.L. Smith: 'Debussy and the Pre-Raphaelites', 19CM, v (1981–2), 95–109
C. Koechlin: 'Souvenirs sur Debussy', Cahiers Debussy, no.7 (1983), 3–6
J. Trillig: Untersuchungen zur Rezeption Claude Debussy in der zeitgenössischen Musikkritik (Tutzing, 1983)
E. Lang-Becker: 'Aspekte der Debussy Rezeption in Deutschland', Cahiers Debussy, no.8 (1984), 18–41
F. Lesure: 'Debussy: le symbolisme et les arts plastiques', Cahiers Debussy, no.8 (1984), 3–12
F. Lesure and G.Cogeval: Debussy e il simbolismo (Rome, 1984)
J. Hepokoski: 'Formulaic Openings in Debussy', 19CM, viii (1984–5), 44–59
Y. Lado-Bordowsky: 'La chronologie des oeuvres de jeunesse de Claude Debussy', Cahiers Debussy, no.14 (1990), 3–22
A. Forte: 'Debussy and the Octatonic', MAn, x (1991), 125–69
D. Grayson: 'Claude Debussy Addresses the English-Speaking World: Two Interviews, an Article', Cahiers Debussy, no.16 (1992), 23–47
M. Christoforidis: 'Manuel de Falla, Debussy and La vida breve', Musicology Australia, xviii (1995), 3–12
J. Clevenger: 'Achille at the Conservatoire, 1872–1884', Cahiers Debussy, no.19 (1995), 3–35
D. Villa: 'La réception de Debussy en Italie', Cahiers Debussy, no.21–2 (1997–8), 25–61

E: STUDIES OF INDIVIDUAL WORKS

dramatic works

L. Gilman: Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande: a Guide to the Opera (New York, 1907)
M. Emmanuel: Pelléas et Mélisande: étude et analyse (Paris, 1926, 2/1950)
R. Jardillier: Pelléas(Paris, 1927)
G. Tosi: 'Gabriele d'Annunzio, Ida Rubinstein e Claude Debussy', Nuova antologia di lettere, scienze e arti (1948)
J. van Ackere: Pelléas et Mélisande (Brussels, 1952, 2/1983)
A. Goléa: Pelléas et Mélisande (Paris, 1952)
H. Busser: De Pelléas aux Indes galantes (Paris, 1955)
J. Kerman: Opera as Drama (New York, 1956/R, 2/1988)
O. d'Estrade-Guerra: 'Les manuscrits de Pelléas et Mélisande', ReM, no.235 (1957), 5–24
R. Leibowitz: 'Pelléas et Mélisande ou le "No-Man's Land" de l'art lyrique', Critique, xiii (1957), 22–32
'Le martyre de Saint-Sébastien', ReM, no.234, (1957) 5–22
H. Eimert: 'Debussys Jeux', Die Reihe, v (1959), 5–22; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, v (1961), 3–20
E. Lockspeiser: Debussy et Edgar Poe: manuscrits et documents inédits (Monaco, 1962)
F. Lesure: 'Retour à Khamma', RBM, xx (1966), 124–9
E. Lockspeiser: 'Frères en Art: pièce de théâtre inédite de Debussy', RdM, lvi (1970), 165–76

J.-J. Nattiez and L.Hirbour-Paquette: 'Analyse musicale et sémiologie: à propos du Prélude de Pelléas', Musique en jeu, no.10 (1973), 42–67
R.L. Smith: 'The Parentage of Pelléas', Music and Musicians, xxii/1 (1973–4), 38–41
R. Orledge: 'Debussy's Orchestral Collaborations', MT, cxv (1974), 1030–35; cxvi (1975), 30–35
R. Orledge: 'Another Look inside Debussy's "Toybox"', MT, cxvii (1976), 987–9
R. Orledge: 'Debussy's House of Usher Revisited', MQ, lxii (1976), 536–53
R. Orledge: 'Debussy's Second English Ballet: Le palais du silence or No-jali', CMc, no.22 (1976), 73–87
C.M. Zenck: 'Form-und Farbenspiele: Debussys "Jeux"', AMw, xxxiii (1976), 28–47
J. Allende-Blin: 'Eine Dokumentation: La chute de la maison Usher', Claude Debussy, Musik-Konzepte, nos.1–2 (1977, 2/1981), 3–9, 10–41 [lib.]
J. McKay: 'The Bréval Manuscript: New Interpretations', Cahiers Debussy, new ser., no.1 (1977), 5–15
A. Porter: 'Fragments of the House of Usher', New Yorker (14 March 1977)
Esquisses de Pelléas et Mélisande (1893–1895) (Paris, 1977) [facs. with introduction by F. Lesure]
L'avant-scène opéra, no.9 (1977) [Pelléas et Mélisande issue]
J. Allende-Blin: 'Àla découverte de Debussy (à propos de la Chute de la maison Usher)', Musique en jeu, no.31 (1978), 7–29
M. Chimènes: 'Les vicissitudes de Khamma', Cahiers Debussy, new ser., no.2 (1978), 11–29
T. Hirsbrunner: 'Debussys Ballett: 'Khamma'', AMw, xxxvi (1979), 105–21
L. Berman: 'Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun and Jeux: Debussy's Summer Rites', 19CM, iii (1979–80), 225–38
E. Kasaba: 'Le martyre de Saint Sébastien: étude sur sa genèse', Cahiers Debussy, nos.4–5 (1980–81), 19–37
C. Abbate: 'Tristan in the Composition of Pelléas', 19CM, v (1981–2), 117–41
R. Terrasson: Pelléas et Mélisande ou l'initiation (Paris, 1982)
D. Grayson: 'The Libretto of Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande', ML, lxvi (1985), 34–50
G. Tosi: 'D'Annunzio et Debussy: la genèse musicale du Martyre de Saint Sébastien', Il Verri [Milan], 7th ser., nos.7–8 (1985), 7–34
D. Grayson: The Genesis of Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande (Ann Arbor, 1986)
M. Chimènes: 'La chimie musicale de Khamma', Cahiers Debussy, nos.12–13 (1988–9), 123–40
R.L. Smith: 'Rodrigue et Chimène: genèse, histoire, problèmes d'édition', Cahiers Debussy, nos.12–13 (1988–9), 67–81
R. Nichols and R. Langham Smith: Claude Debussy: Pelléas et Mélisande(Cambridge, 1989)
J. Briscoe: 'To Invent New Forms: Debussy's Diane au bois', MQ, lxxiv (1990), 131–69
F. Lesure: 'La longue attente de Pelléas (1895–1899)', Cahiers Debussy, no.15 (1991), 3–12
J.E. Martins: 'La boîte à joujoux de Claude Debussy e a diversifiçao analitica', Revista música [São Paolo], iii/1 (1992), 32–52
C. Angelet: 'Pelléas et Mélisande: des brouillons de Maeterlinck au livret de Debussy', Pelléas et Mélisande: Ghent 1992 [Annales de la Fondation Maurice Maeterlinck, xxix (1994)], 50–58
M. Turnbull: Mary Garden (Aldershot, 1997)
S. Huebner: French Opera at the 'Fin de siècle': Wagnerism, Nationalism and Style (Oxford, 1999)
E. Kesaba: 'Retour sur Le Martyre de Saint Sébastien', Cahiers Debussy, no.24 (2000) orchestral and choral works

M. Ravel: 'L'art et les hommes: à propos des "Images" de Claude Debussy', Cahiers d'aujourd'hui, no.3 (1913), 135–8
W. Austin, ed.: Debussy: Prelude to 'The Afternoon of a Faun' (New York, 1970)
D. Cox: Debussy Orchestral Music (London, 1974)
R.L. Smith: 'La genèse de "La Damoiselle élue"', Cahiers Debussy, new ser., nos.4–5 (1980–81), 3–18
E. Lang-Becker: Claude Debussy: Nocturnes (Munich, 1982)
J. Pasler: 'Debussy, Jeux: Playing with Time and Form', 19CM, vi (1982–3), 60–75
R. Howat: 'Dramatic Shape in Jeux de vagues, and its Relationship to Pelléas, Jeux and Other Scores', Cahiers Debussy, no.7 (1983), 7–23
M. Rolf: 'Orchestral Manuscripts of Claude Debussy, 1892–1905', MQ, lxx (1984), 533–66
R. Mueller: 'Javanese Influence on Debussy's Fantaisie and beyond', 19CM, x (1986–7), 157–86
J. Barraqué: 'La mer de Debussy, ou la naissance des formes ouvertes', Analyse musicale, no.12 (1988), 15–62
M.G. Brown: 'Tonality and Form in Debussy's Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune', Music Theory Spectrum, xv (1993), 127–43
T. Davidian: 'Debussy's Fantaisie: Issues, Proofs and Revision', Cahiers Debussy, nos.17–18 (1993–4), 15–33
S. Tresize: Debussy: La mer (Cambridge, 1994)
S. Gelleny: 'Cyclic Form and Debussy's Nocturnes', Cahiers Debussy, no.20 (1996), 25–40
D. Herlin: 'Une oeuvre inachevée: La saulaie', Cahiers Debussy, no.20 (1996), 3–23
D. Puffett: Debussy's Ostinato Machine (Nottingham, 1996)
F. Lesure: 'Les Nocturnes de Claude Debussy, ou la rupture de la tradition symphonique', Revue de la Bibliothèque Nationale de France, new ser., no.1 (1999), 46–50 chamber music

I. Kecskemeti: 'Claude Debussy, musicien français: his Last Sonatas', RBM, xvi (1962), 117–49
H. Seraphin: Debussys Kammermusikwerke der mittleren Schaffenzeit (Erlangen-Nurnberg, 1962)
R. Moevs: 'Intervallic Procedures in Debussy: Serenade from the Sonata for Cello and Piano, 1915', PNM, viii/1 (1969–70), 82–101
D.F. Rauss: 'Ce terrible finale: les sources manuscrites de la sonate pour violon et piano de Claude Debussy', Cahiers Debussy, no.2 (1978), 30–62
J.S. Allen: 'Tonal Allusion and Illusion: Debussy's Sonata for Flute, Viola and Harp', Cahiers Debussy, no.7 (1983), 38–48
D. Nygren: 'Debussy's Works for Clarinet', The Clarinet, xi (1984)

songs

J. Bathori: Sur l'interprétation des mélodies de Claude Debussy (Paris, 1953)
C. Deliège: 'La relation forme-contenu dans l'oeuvre de Debussy', RBM, xvi (1962), 71–96 [on Le balcon]
P. Ruschenburg: Stilkritische Untersuchungen zu den Liedern Claude Debussys (diss., U. of Hamburg, 1966)
E. Hardeck: Unterschungen zu den Klavierliedern Claude Debussys (Regensburg, 1967)
R. Nichols: 'Debussy's Two Settings of Clair de lune', ML, xlviii (1967), 229–35
M. Rolf: 'Debussy's Settings of Verlaine's En sourdine', Perspectives on Music, ed. D. Oliphant and T. Zigal (Austin, TX, 1985), 205–33
S. Youens: 'A Gradual Diminuendo: Debussy and the Trois Ballades de F. Villon', ibid., 69–99
M. Rolf: 'Des Ariettes (1888) aux Ariettes oubliées (1903)', Cahiers Debussy, nos. 12–13 (1988–9), 29–47
M. Rolf: 'Semantic and Structural Issues in Debussy's Mallarmé Songs', Debussy Studies, ed. R.L. Smith (Cambridge, 1997), 179–200

piano works

N. Boulanger: 'Lectures on Modern Music', Rice University Pamphlet, xiii/2 (1926), 113–95 [on the Préludes]
A. Jakobik: Die assoziative Harmonik in den Klavier-Werken Claude Debussys (Würzburg, 1940)
R. Schmitz: The Piano Works of Claude Debussy (New York, 1950, 2/1966)
R. Réti: 'Claude Debussy: La cathédrale engloutie', The Thematic Process in Music (New York, 1951/R), 194–206
M. Long: Au piano avec Claude Debussy (Paris, 1960; Eng. trans., 1972)
F. Dawes: Debussy Piano Music (London, 1969)
R. Howat: 'A Thirteenth Etude of 1915: the Original Version pour les arpèges composés', Cahiers Debussy, new ser., no.1 (1977), 16–23
R. di Benedetto: 'Congetture su Voiles', RIM, xiii (1978), 312–44
Mme G. de Romilly: 'Debussy professeur, par une de ses élèves', Cahiers Debussy, no.2 (1978), 3–10
C. Rosen: 'Where Ravel Ends and Debussy Begins' Cahiers Debussy, no.3 (1979), 31–8
R.S. Parks: 'Pitch Organization in Debussy: Unordered Sets in Brouillards', Music Theory Spectrum, ii (1980), 119–34

R. Orledge: 'Debussy's Piano Music: Some Second Thoughts and Sources of Inspiration', MT, cxxii (1981), 21–7
W.J. Peterson: Debussy's Douze Etudes: a Critical Analysis (Ann Arbor, MI, 1981)
R. Howat, ed.: Claude Debussy, Préludes, Book I: the Autograph Score (New York, 1987)
R. Howat: 'Debussy and Welte', Pianola Journal, no.7 (1994), 3–18
R. Howat: 'En route for L'isle joyeuse: The Restoration of a Triptych', Cahiers Debussy, no.19 (1995), 37–52
P. Roberts: Images: The Piano Music of Claude Debussy (Portland, OR, 1996)
R. Howat: 'Debussy's Piano Music: Sources and Performance', Debussy Studies, ed. R.L. Smith (Cambridge, 1997), 78–107

FRANÇOIS LESURE (1–9, 11–12, work-list, bibliography), ROY HOWAT (10)

De Caix d'Hervelois, Louis. See CAIX D'HERVELOIS, LOUIS DE.

De Caro, Julio (b Buenos Aires, 11 Dec 1899; d Mar del Plata, 11 Mar 1980). Argentine tango violinist, bandleader and composer. The son of an Italian immigrant proprietor of a private conservatory in Buenos Aires, he served his apprenticeship in tango bands such as those of Eduardo Arolas (1918–19) and Osvaldo Fresedo (1919–20). In 1923 he formed his first sextet, which included his brothers Francisco (piano) and Emilio (second violin). The band remained a sextet until 1930, after which it enlarged to between 10 and 14 instrumentalists; and this remained its standard size until De Caro's retirement (1954). One of the best-loved dance bands of the tango's 'Golden Age' (1920–50), it made successful trips to Brazil (1927), Italy and France (1931) and Chile (1937). With its clarity, meticulous phrasing, careful instrumental balance and sophisticated arrangements, it pioneered the 'evolutionist' trend in tango music, contrasting with the 'traditionalist' tendency favoured by more conservative bandleaders. Like his brother Francisco, De Caro was an expert arranger and composer who made notable contributions to the tango repertory. His autobiography was published as El tango en mis recuerdos (Buenos Aires, 1964).

SIMON COLLIER

Decani and cantoris. The two halves of the choir in an English church: decani is the south side, cantoris the north. The names mean 'dean's [side]', 'cantor's [side]', and refer to the two highest officials of the chapter of a medieval cathedral. The CANTOR, or precentor, ranked immediately after the dean in secular cathedral establishments. The dean's stall was at the west end of the choir, facing east, just to the south of the central aisle; the cantor's was opposite, north of the aisle. For certain duties the choir was divided into two equal halves. The singers on the dean's side – decani – took the leading part one week, those on the cantor's side – cantoris – the next; during the seasons of the three great festivals the alternation was daily. Psalms, canticles and hymns were sung in alternation between the two halves. Together with much other Latin terminology, the names survived the Reformation, and have been used ever since in cathedral music to signify the two halves of the choir.

See also ANGLICAN AND EPISCOPALIAN CHURCH MUSIC.

NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Decapella (*fl c*1550). Composer. 11 chansons by him were printed by Attaingnant and Du Chemin in Paris in 1549 and 1550. Three – En Tour, Ung soir and Un vieil soudard – are in the contrapuntal, syllabic style introduced by Janequin, with simple rustic texts and melodic material which is probably of popular origin; some of the other works are in homophonic idiom. He may be identifiable with Hugo de La Chapelle, the composer of two motets, Tribularer si nescirem (RISM 1539[11]) and Ave regina coelorum (1542[5]; both ed. in SCMot, x–xi, 1998), published at Lyons. Less likely, he may have been Andreas Capellus (Andrea Capella), the composer of a five-voice Magnificat and four hymns, Cujus sacrata viscera, Nobis natus, nobis datus, O lux beata Trinitas and Quis pascis inter lilia, printed in Wittenberg by Rhau (1540[5] and 1542[12]).

WORKS

all for 4vv

Belle commère, Dieu vous gard, 1549[24]; En Tour la feste Sainct Martin, 1549[24]; Faictes si vous plaist vostre ausmosne, 1549[26]; Héllas Vénus, trop tu me fuz contraire, 1549[22]; Le temps vauldroit de soy, 1549[27]; Passant mélancolie un soir, 1549[27]
Si vous aviez, comme moy, faim, 1550[9]; Ung doulx baiser m'est bien permis, 1549[22]; Ung soir Guillot à sa Cathin a dict, 1549[22]; Un vieil soudard prioit une fille, 1549[22]; Veoir, deviser et converser, 1549[27]

FRANK DOBBINS

Decaux, Abel (b Auffay, 1869; d Paris, 19 March 1943). French composer, organist and teacher. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Massenet, Widor and Guilmant. A remarkable improviser, he was organist at the Sacré-Coeur in 1903. In 1926 he emigrated to Rochester, New York, where he worked as a teacher of the organ and composition until 1937, when he returned to Paris to teach the organ at the Ecole César Franck. He was known in the USA as 'the French Schoenberg', although the harmony of his best-known compositions, the four piano pieces of Clairs de lune (1900–07, published 1913), hardly reaches beyond late Liszt. The first three anticipate the deathly stark tone-painting of Ravel's 'Le gibet', while the last, 'La mer', is a thundering treatment of a typical Impressionist subject.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Hirsbrunner: 'Abel Decaux, der Entdecker der impressionistischen Atonalität', Melos/NZM, ii (1976), 372–4
J.L. Schenewerk: Abel Decaux's 'Clairs de lune' (thesis, Eastman School of Music, 1977)
E. Lejeune-Bonnier: 'Abel Decaux, 1868–1943', L'orgue, no.210 (1989), 4–10

ALAIN LOUVIER

Decca. British record company. The name dates from 1914, when it was used for the first portable gramophone to be manufactured, produced by Barnett Samuel & Sons of Finsbury, London. That firm had originally been founded in Westminster in 1832, by Henry Solomon, whose trade included the distribution of musical instruments; the music side of the business had been taken over by Barnett Samuel in 1860–61, who by the beginning of the 20th century traded in records and 'talking machines' as well as instruments and by 1912 was also manufacturing records on the Odeon, Fonotipia and Jumbo labels. After World War I the company concentrated on gramophones and instruments. In 1928, when the Samuel family retired from the business, the Decca Gramophone Company Ltd was founded; its shares were bought the next year by the Decca Record Company Ltd, which also bought the record factory at New Malden, south-west of London, of the Duophone company.

The stockbroker who had arranged the sale, Edward Lewis, joined the board in 1931 and became chairman. He soon signed an exclusive contract with Jack Hylton, the company's first substantial success in the popular field, the area in which it was principally active before World War II. In 1932 he bought rights to parts of the American Brunswick catalogue, whose artists included Duke Ellington, the Mills Brothers and Bing Crosby, and in 1937 Vocalion, which recorded Billie Holiday and Ellington's small groups, came into the catalogue when Decca acquired Crystalate, whose Swing Series they continued until 1940.

The first issue of Decca recordings, in 1929, had included a 12-inch 78 r.p.m. record of Delius's Sea Drift, sung by Roy Henderson with the New SO, and a recording of Handel concertos conducted by Ernest Ansermet followed later that year. Most of the classical releases of the 1930s came from the German Polydor catalogue, to which Decca acquired British rights, but the company also began to make its own classical recordings, with such artists as Henry Wood, Clifford Curzon, Hamilton Harty and Boyd Neel.

An American branch, Decca Records Inc., was established in 1934 in New York. It supplied American popular recordings to the parent firm and its subsidiaries in Europe (of which Dutch Decca was particularly active in jazz recording); its catalogue included recordings by Louis Armstrong, Count Basie, Woody Herman and Lionel Hampton. The American firm became independent during World War II, when British assets abroad had to be sold; it later had links with Coral and Brunswick, and was taken over by MCA in 1959. In 1947 the British firm set up a new subsidiary, London Gramophone Corporation, to distribute its records in the USA; it was among the earliest, in 1949, to issue LPs there. London also acted as British distributor of records made in the USA, serving during the 1950s for several labels including Essex and Imperial (it was thus at the forefront of rock and roll, with such artists as Fats Domino, and Bill Haley and the Comets) as well as Atlantic, Specialty and Sun, and later Hi Records.

A highly successful period for the British company began in the 1950s. In 1950 a company, Teldec, was set up in association with the German Telefunken company for technical research, an association that continued for nearly 40 years. Also in that year Decca, under the technical guidance of Arthur Haddy, launched 'the world's first and only ffrr microgroove long-playing pick-up' and issued the first LP records in Europe: 'ffrr' (full frequency range recording) on the new vinyl discs had a vividness and immediacy that placed Decca in a strong position among record companies. Decca was also early to issue stereo recordings, as 'ffss' (full frequency stereo sound).

During this period the catalogue and roster of artists was greatly enlarged, under the guidance of Maurice Rosengarten, to include, for example Karl Böhm, Erich Kleiber, Georg Solti and Ansermet among conductors, Wilhelm Backhaus, Julius Katchen and Curzon among pianists, and many singers. The company issued a series of Italian opera recordings with such artists as Renata Tebaldi, Giulietta Simionato, Mario del Monaco and Carlo Bergonzi, and several recordings in association with the Vienna Staatsoper, including works by Mozart and Strauss, some of them under Böhm, where the casts included Lisa della Casa, Hilde Gueden, Anton Dermota and Cesare Siepi, while Kirsten Flagstad and Wolfgang Windgassen sang in the company's Wagner recordings. The climax was the enormously successful first complete recording of the Ring, made in Vienna under Solti and issued in 1959–66 in the face of widespread scepticism about its economic viability.

The Ring was produced by John Culshaw, who also worked with Benjamin Britten on an authoritative series of recordings of his works, his operas in particular. Culshaw was one of a team of outstanding record producers that included Christopher Raeburn and later Peter Wadland, whose specialization in early music gave Decca, through L'Oiseau-Lyre, its associate company and later its subsidiary, a strong position in that area with their recordings by, for example, the Consort of Musicke under Anthony Rooley in Renaissance repertory, the Academy of Ancient Music under Christopher Hogwood in Baroque and Classical music (including the complete Mozart symphonies), and the Drottningholm Opera under Arnold Östman in Mozart operas, all using period instruments and techniques. Other important issues include the recording of Haydn's complete symphonies by the Philharmonia Hungarica under Antal Dorati, in the early 1970s, and several operas with Joan Sutherland in leading roles, chiefly conducted by Richard Bonynge. In the 1990s Decca issued the 'Entartete Musik' series, of supposedly 'decadent' music banned under the Nazis. The company's roster of artists during the last decades of the 20th century included Vladimir Ashkenazy, Riccardo Chailly, Luciano Pavarotti, Cecilia Bartoli and Renée Fleming; its issues included the popular recordings of the 'three tenors' (Carreras, Domingo, Pavarotti).

In the popular field Decca held a high position between the 1950s and the 1970s, with a notable roster of artists including Mantovani, Vera Lynn, the Rolling Stones and Tom Jones, and via licence deals with American companies it distributed the recordings of many leading American performers, among them Elvis Presley, the Everly Brothers, Roy Orbison and others. In the 1970s, however, Decca's share of the popular market declined.

In 1980, the year of Sir Edward Lewis's death, Decca formally became part of the Polygram group, with Philips and Deutsche Grammophon; popular releases were abandoned and Decca became exclusively a classical label. Polygram was taken over by Seagram in 1998; the Decca and Philips components were integrated as the Decca Music Group Ltd within the Universal Music Group (formerly MCA).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Culshaw: Ring Resounding (London, 1967)

J. Culshaw: '50 years of the Decca Record Label', Gramophone, lvii (1979–80), 171 only

P. Gammond: 'The Coming of Age: Recording in the LP Era', The Music Goes Round and Round: a Cool Look at the Record Industry, ed. P. Gammond and R. Horrocks (London, 1980), 24–47

R. and C. Dearling, with B. Rust: The Guinness Book of Recorded Sound (London, 1984)

A. Cimino: Great Record Labels: an Illustrated History of the Labels behind the Stars (London, 1992)

C. Larkin, ed.: The Guinness Encyclopedia of Popular Music (London, 1992, 2/1995)

G. Marco, ed.: Encyclopedia of Recorded Sound in the United States (New York and London, 1993)

MAUREEN FORTEY

Decem (It.). See under ORGAN STOP.

Deceptive cadence. See INTERRUPTED CADENCE.

Dechevrens, Antoine (b Chêne-Bourg, nr Geneva, 3 Nov 1840; d Geneva, 17 Jan 1912). Swiss musicologist. He entered the Jesuit order in 1861 and taught music in Paris, philosophy in Vannes and theology at the University of Angers. He was the leading figure among a group of Jesuit scholars including Gerhard Geitmann, Ludwig Bonvin and Alexander Fleury, who supported a modern restoration of Gregorian chant rhythm based on a mensural system of proportional long and short note values. This group strongly opposed the equalist principles of free non-measured rhythm advocated by the Solesmes school under André Mocquereau. Dechevrens' theories, like those of the Solesmes scholars, relied heavily on the neumatic notation with special signs and letters in the early St Gall manuscripts. He believed that the time value of a note is affected by adjacent notes, and is therefore variable. In Les vraies mélodies grégoriennes he presented both the manner in which he thought that the melodies were originally sung (using bar-lines as a device to mark divisions of the melody; see ex.1), and modern transcriptions (in which he imposed regular 2/4 or 4/4 metre by altering rhythms and ornamentation; see ex.2. About 1902 Dechevrens returned to Switzerland where he founded the music periodical Voix de St Gall (1906–7) to which he contributed many articles. He defended his theories at the Second Congress of the International Musical Society at Basle in 1906 and in an open letter to Peter Wagner.

WRITINGS

Du rythme dans l'hymnographie latine (Paris, 1895)
Hymnaire grégorien: chants poétiques de l'église latine (Paris, 1895)
Etudes de science musicale (Paris, 1898/R) [incl. edn of 30 selected masses from the Hartker Antiphoner]
'Etudes sur le système musical chinois', SIMG, ii (1900–01), 485–551
Les vraies mélodies grégoriennes: vespéral des dimanches et fêtes de l'année, extrait de l'antiphonaire du B. Hartker.(Xe siècle) (Paris, 1902/R)
Le rythme grégorien: réponse à M. Pierre Aubry (Annecy, 1904)
'Le rythme du chant grégorien: mémoire présenté au Congrès de la Société internationale de musique', Voix de St Gall, no.5 (1906), 170ff; no.6 (1906), 195ff
Composition musicale et composition littéraire à propos du chant grégorien (Paris, 1910/R)
'A Monsieur le Dr. P. Wagner', ZIMG, xiv (1912–13), 36–41 [on rhythm in Gregorian chant]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (P. Combe)
'Echos et mélanges: nécrologie', Revue du chant grégorien, xx (1911–12), 127

JOHN A. EMERSON

Dechler, David. See TECCHLER, DAVID.

Decibel [dB]. A logarithmic unit used for expressing the difference in level between sounds of different intensity or electrical signals of different power. It is related entirely to the ratio of the two quantities. If two signals have intensities I_1 and I_2 then their intensity ratio (in dB) is 10 $\log_{10}(I_2/I_1)$. Differences in level expressed in decibels may be added and subtracted. The intensity level (IL) is defined by comparing the intensity (I) of the sound with a reference intensity (I_0), in which case IL = 10 $\log_{10}(I/I_0)$. I_0 is normally taken as 10^{-12} Wm^{-2}, corresponding approximately to the lower limit of human hearing. Although the logarithmic intensity level corresponds more closely to the perceived loudness of a sound than would a linear scale, loudness is not directly proportional to intensity level. In fact, for a pure tone, an increase of 10 dB gives rise to a doubling of perceived loudness, corresponding roughly to one step in the musical dynamic (e.g. forte to fortissimo). See also SOUND, §4 and LOUDNESS.

CLIVE GREATED

Decima (i) (It.). See TENTH.

Decima (ii) (It.). See under ORGAN STOP (Decem).

Décima (Sp.). A verse form, commonly sung, comprising ten lines (rhyme scheme abbaaccddc), which develops a theme introduced by a quatrain (rhymed abab). Textual material may be set or improvised, religious or secular. In Venezuela décimas are sung in parallel 3rds and accompanied by the cuatro (small four-string guitar) in primary triad harmony to either merengue or joropo rhythms. The décima is common throughout Latin America and is particularly characteristic of Argentine and Chilean payas (payadas), tonos and estilos.

WILLIAM GRADANTE

Decius [Degius, Deeg, Tech a Curia], Nikolaus [Nickel von Hof] (b Hof an der Saale, *c*1485; d after 1546). German Kantor and composer. A member of a respected family of Hof, he matriculated on 16 October 1501 at Leipzig University where he took the Bachelor of Arts and later the Bachelor of Both Laws degrees. He then seems to have entered the church: having made an unsuccessful application to Zwickau, he was made provost of the Benedictine monastery at Steterburg, near Brunswick, in 1519. There he wrote a commentary on Matthew, Summula doctrinam Jhesu Christi ex Codice Matthei (Brunswick, 1521). Parts of it are written in Low German, betraying the influence of Luther (who preferred the use of the vernacular) and the Reformation movement. In January 1522 Decius was appointed rector of the Lyceum at Hanover, but within a few months he returned to Brunswick as a teacher at the schools attached to St Katherina and St Aegidien. It was probably during this year that he wrote three sacred hymns in Low German to replace parts of the Latin Ordinary of the Mass. In 1523 he went to Wittenberg to study the theology of the reformed church and, recommended by Luther, he became a preacher in Stettin in 1524. He left Stettin in the late 1520s; in 1530 he is mentioned as a deacon in Liebstadt, and in 1534 he went to Mühlhausen, near Elbing. From 1540 he was deputy Kantor to Hans Kugelmann and assistant court preacher to Duke Albrecht of Prussia in Königsberg for three years, before returning to Mühlhausen. He seems to have left Mühlhausen in 1546.

Decius's three hymns, Aleyne God yn der Höge sy eere (Gloria), Hyllich ys Godt de vader (Sanctus) and O Lam Gades unschüldig (Agnus Dei) are probably the oldest evangelical hymns, preceding Luther's first ones by almost a year. They have been published in Das deutsche Kirchenlied, iii/1–3, ed. J. Stalman and others (Kassel, 1993–8). The melodies are based on the corresponding Gregorian chants. Hyllich ys Godt de vader may have influenced Johannes Bugenhagen's Low German Sanctus which begins with the same words. The polyphonic music which Decius is said to have composed in Brunswick does not appear to have survived.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BlumeEK
F. Spitta: '"Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr"', Monatsschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchliche Kunst, vi (1901), 158–64
F. Bahlow: 'Wer ist Nicolaus Decius?', Archiv für Reformationsgeschichte, iv (1906–7), 351–69
H. Hoffman: 'Nikolaus Tech, der Dichter von "Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr"', Monatsschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchliche Kunst, xxiv (1919), 201–06
F. Spitta: 'Die Entstehungszeit des Liedes "Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr"', Monatsschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchliche Kunst, xxiv (1919), 242–3
M. Federmann: Musik und Musikpflege zur Zeit Herzog Albrechts (Kassel, 1932)
K. Ameln and C. Gerhardt: 'Die deutschen Gloria-Lieder', Monatsschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchliche Kunst, xliii (1938), 225–31
K. Ameln: 'Das Sanctus- und Agnus Dei-Lied und Nikolaus Decius', Monatsschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchliche Kunst, xlv (1940), 9–16
W. Lueken: 'Lebensbilder der Liederdichter und Melodisten', Hanbuch zum evangelischen Kirchengesangbuch, ed. C. Mahrenholz and O. Söhngen, ii/1 (Göttingen, 1957)
M. Ruhnke: Beiträge zu einer Geschichte der deutschen Hofmusikkollegien im 16. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1963)
H. Ulrich: 'Nikolaus Decius: Schöpfer der ältesten deutschen Messgesänge', Katholische Kirchenmusik, cxiii (1988), 224–33

HANS-CHRISTIAN MÜLLER/HANS-OTTO KORTH

Decke (Ger.). See BELLY.

Declamation. In music, the relation between verbal stress and melodic accent in the setting and delivery of a text. Clear and appropriate text setting, measured by quantity or quality, was extolled by humanist thinkers in the Renaissance on the basis of classical precedent, and it was central to the emergence of recitative and the 'new music' in Florence during the late 16th century. Throughout the Baroque period, the notion of the musician as orator, persuading and moving an audience, depended on proper declamation. The subject was often discussed by theorists, particularly as clear declamation became threatened by the more musical demands of the aria. J.G. Walther (WaltherML) applied to music the rationalistic concept of declamation, which originally dealt with speech, and focussed his attention on recitative. J.J. Rousseau (Dictionnaire, 1768) dealt with declamation as the relationship between musical and linguistic accent, which had been much discussed in French singing treatises, such as Bénigne de Bacilly's Remarques curieuses sur l'art de bien chanter (1668). Declamation as an aspect of artistic singing (particularly in the performance of recitative) remained in the forefront of French vocal pedagogy until the 20th century. A. de Martini ('Traité de chant', EMDC, II/ii (1926), p.928) listed the qualities of declamation as 'delivery, articulation, pronunciation, slurring, accent, phrasing, style, slancio etc'.

OWEN JANDER/TIM CARTER

Decler, David. See TECCHLER, DAVID.

Deconet, Michele (b Kehl, nr Strasbourg, *c*1712; d ?Venice, after 1780). Italian violin maker of Alsatian birth. He was a soldier in the French army and a violinist before he turned to instrument making some years after arriving in Venice. He was probably a pupil of Pietro Guarneri of Venice, though much of his work was equally influenced by that of Montagnana. He was active from 1745 to at least 1780, and was the most prolific Venetian maker after about 1750. Deconet's violins are usually fine-sounding instruments, though not equal to those of the Venetians of the first half of the 18th century. In general the earlier ones are the best, with wood and varnish of excellent quality. Deconet also made a number of violas and cellos.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Toffolo: Antichi strumenti veneziani 1500–1800: quattro secoli di liuteria e cembalaria(Venice, 1987)
Les violons: lutherie venitienne, peintures et dessins, Hôtel de Ville, Paris, 21 March – 7 May 1995 (Paris, 1995) [exhibition catalogue]

CHARLES BEARE

Deconstruction. A post-1970 movement of thought in philosophy, literary theory and (subsequently) other disciplines. Its main inspiration has been the work of Jacques Derrida (b 1931), who has insisted on principle that 'deconstruction' cannot be defined as a method, a theory, a programme or anything that lends itself to adequate statement in the form 'deconstruction is X'. Rather it is a process 'always already' at work within texts to complicate their overt or manifest sense by revealing a ubiquitous counter-logic sharply at odds with the mainstream interpretative view.

Derrida locates points of conflict or unresolved tension in a wide range of philosophical writings, from the Greeks to the 20th century. In each case he shows how an apparently clearcut binary distinction – nature/culture, speech/writing, reason/rhetoric, concept/metaphor, philosophy/literature etc. – in fact turns out to be strictly undecidable as regards its order of priority. Thus 'nature' is always culturally defined, while speech (supposedly more authentic than writing, since it gives a more intimate access to the utterer's thoughts and feelings) is itself a kind of writing in so far as it bears all the marks (of structure, convention, the arbitrary [non-natural] relation between signifier and signified) that thinkers since Aristotle have standardly attributed to written discourse. In the same way philosophy can be shown to depend at certain crucial points on a rhetoric or a range of 'literary' metaphors, such that there exists no clear demarcation between those various, hierarchically ordered terms. However, it is no use simply reversing these received orders of priority, since all our theories of metaphor, literature or rhetoric, from Plato and Aristotle down, have been precisely philosophical theories and can hence be understood (and criticized) only through a detailed critical engagement with philosophy's conceptual resources. Thus deconstruction is not simply an all-purpose licence for interpreting texts in whatever way one likes or for collapsing the outworn genre distinction between philosophy and literature.

The late 20th century witnessed a marked deconstructionist 'turn' among theoretically minded music critics and analysts. This mostly has to do with certain deep-rooted preconceptions in regard to matters of history, development, genre, form and style. A major source is Derrida's discussion of Rousseau's ideas about music. For Rousseau, the primacy of melody over harmony went along with a range of other such beliefs, among them the priority of nature over culture, speech over writing, and passion (or uncorrupted human instinct) over everything that belonged to an advanced and 'civilized' (i.e. an artificial and decadent) state of existence. In each case, contrary to enlightened opinion, Rousseau remarked the symptoms of a falling-away from that original (mythic) time when human beings lived in perfect accord with nature and with each other and thus had no need for such unnatural 'supplementary' devices as political structures, legal codes, written constitutions etc. With music there had occurred a similar decline, falsely regarded as 'progress', from pure melody to harmony and counterpoint, or from the direct expression of human feeling through an unadorned vocal line to the decadent state of a music now given over to artifice, complexity and the tyranny of written notation. Language and music both originated in that mode of passionate speech-song which, according to Rousseau, was the source of all genuine spontaneity and grace. This had been preserved to some extent in the 'southern' (i.e. Italian) music of his day, which (like the languages of southern Europe) had not gone so far along the path of 'civilized' corruption. Thus Rousseau, as composer, theorist and speculative music historian, sided with the Italian musicians of his day rather than with those eminent French contemporaries, among them Rameau, whose compositions and writings bore melancholy witness to the prevalence of harmony over melody.

Such a reading is guided by normal standards of interpretative truth, logic, consistency and respect for authorial intentions. Derrida accepts the necessity of those standards; but he argues that there may be elements in the text – sentences, passages, entire chains of reasoning – that are not fully under Rousseau's control and give rise to a pattern of repeated conflicts between manifest and latent sense. Thus Rousseau may self-evidently wish to say that melody is more 'natural' than harmony, that nature has been corrupted by culture, that communal values are threatened by the encroachment of 'civilized' artifice, and that language has suffered the decline from its original (authentic and spontaneous) role as a conveyor of human passions to its present (all too sophisticated) use for the purpose of concealing our true sentiments and desires. However, there are numerous passages (very often passed over, naturally enough, by mainstream commentators) where Rousseau is constrained by the logic of his own argument to state (or imply) just the opposite. Thus nothing could count as a language in the absence of those 'artificial' structures – lexis, syntax, speech-act conventions, devices for semantic cross-reference etc. – that enable speakers to communicate on a basis of mutual understanding. In the strictest sense these are the conditions of possibility for knowing, possessing or sharing a language, as indeed Rousseau has to acknowledge in those proto-deconstructive passages where his argument comes most visibly under strain.

By the same token, there is no possibility of appealing to a 'natural' (organic) state of society that would antedate all the various structures – political, social, civic-institutional, familial, gender-based etc. – that define the character of social existence and are hence presupposed in every attempt, like Rousseau's, to re-draw the line between 'nature' and 'culture'. In the case of music it is likewise a fallacy (a self-deconstructing argument) to propose that there must have been a phase of development when melody alone was sufficient for all expressive purposes and harmony would not yet have come to exert its artificial, corrupting influence. Thus there is no melody without harmony, in the sense that even the simplest melody (folksong, plainchant, monodic improvisation etc.) would not be perceived as such in the absence of implied harmonic or cadential structures; also there is the fact of the overtone series, which prevents any single note, or sequence of notes, from being heard in pristine isolation. Moreover, it is impossible for Rousseau coherently to advance his idea of a stage in musical history or development when music remained somehow untouched by the forces of time and change.

Such is the 'logic of supplementarity' that Derrida finds in Rousseau's texts. What, according to Rousseau, ought to be the case is that nature, speech and melody belong on one side of a clearcut binary distinction that sets them apart from such bad 'supplements' as culture, writing and harmony. But in fact he demonstrates the failure of his attempt to hold that distinction in place and the way that those 'supplements' turn out to inhabit the very point of origin. Thus there is no conceiving of nature in the absence of cultural predicates, of speech as apart from those attributes that it shares with writing, or of melody in the absence of harmony. Sometimes Rousseau contradicts himself through statements that cannot be reconciled with other (more typically 'Rousseauist') themes and ideas. Elsewhere it is a matter of complex, even tortuous, grammatical constructions and strange twists of tense logic combined with shifts from the indicative to the subjunctive. What thus stands revealed in Rousseau's texts, despite and against his avowed intent, is the impossibility that music can exhibit (or that it might, could or should once have exhibited) the character of purely spontaneous, passional utterance that Rousseau wishfully ascribes to it.

Derrida's reading has attracted the notice of music theorists, since it raises questions not only about textual criticism but also about musical language, form and history. What is chiefly of interest from a deconstructive standpoint is the way that these terms have figured in discourses of music scholarship and criticism over the past two centuries. Several writers (including Goehr, Kerman, Solie, Subotnik and Street) have discussed the powerful ideology of 'organic form', an important concept in Western aesthetics since Aristotle but a central idea for 19th-century composers, critics and music theorists. In this view great works of art are those that manifest a complex yet integrated structure, that is to say, a capacity for containing and reconciling such otherwise discordant values as unity and multiplicity, form and content, structure and development, 'background' and 'foreground', or thematic coherence and the kinds of inventive, unpredictable detail that break with established, period-specific convention.

Along with this goes the Hegelian belief, again deeply rooted in 19th-century idealist thought, that certain world-historical artworks or genres represent a consummate expression of the Zeitgeist, a species of 'concrete universal' which reveals the innermost spiritual truth of its epoch while transcending all mere particularities of time and place. Among the chief candidates for this privileged status was the great (pre-eminently German) line of musical descent from Bach to Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and beyond. What emerges most clearly is the close relationship that exists between aesthetic values – of complexity, unity, organic form – and the idea of art as an autonomous realm of expression where freedom can be reconciled with the knowledge of a higher necessity. On Hegel's account this knowledge is arrived at through an epochal process whose upshot (or final guarantee) is the selfconciousness of universal Spirit. Nevertheless it is a process that tends to manifest itself, from one epoch to the next, in decidedly culture-specific or nationalist terms.

Such, for instance, was Schoenberg's well-known claim to have secured the continued pre-eminence of German music through his discovery of the 12-note compositional method as a way forward from the impasse of late Romanticism. Implicit in that claim were the three main tenets of 'aesthetic ideology' that deconstruction sets out to challenge (see de Man; Norris, 1988, 1989; and Korsyn, 1993). First, there is the concept of musical history as governed by certain deep-laid laws of development – of formal evolution, thematic complexity, the progress beyond traditional (key-related) distinctions between consonance and dissonance etc. – analogous to those that define the nature of 'organic' musical form. Secondly, there is the idea that any such development must be 'natural' in the sense of somehow deriving (as Schoenberg thought) from the sound-material itself, that is to say, from a method that explored the farther reaches of the overtone series (thus bringing about a liberation from classical tonality) yet claimed to represent an inevitable, preordained stage of musical advance. Whence, thirdly, the notion of music as playing a privileged, even world-historical role by expressing the spirit of the age as defined, ironically enough, in terms of some particular (culture-specific or language-based) national tradition. All the more ironic that Schoenberg was himself driven into exile in consequence of just such a bid for world domination on the part of that culture whose musical hegemony he had sought so zealously to promote.

Deconstructive approaches in music criticism have mostly been concerned with these three kinds of 'aesthetic ideology'; more specifically, they have sought to show how certain deeply acculturated (hence quasi-natural) conceptions of musical language, form, style, history, development and value can better be viewed as artefacts of a certain 'discourse' whose seeming naturalness works to conceal its often unwitting ideological investments. This deconstructive enterprise takes various forms according to the critic's particular interest. In some cases it is chiefly focussed on the emergence of a canon of 'great works' and the extent to which the relevant selection criteria – unity, complexity, formal coherence etc. – reveal not so much a process of 'pure' aesthetic valuation as a socially influenced (even ideologically determined) procedure for imposing hegemonic values (see Bergeron and Bohlman, 1992; Goehr, 1992; Stradling and Hughes, 1993). Where this approach differs from other, e.g. Marxist or 'straight' sociological, accounts is in its greater attentiveness to the various stress-points – the contradictions, non-sequiturs, conflicts between avowed and implied meaning – that are held to characterize the discourse of mainstream musicology. Other theorists, among them Kerman, have questioned what they see as the mutually supportive, circular relationship between an aesthetics of organic form and a canonized version of musical history based on closely analogous ideas of cultural development and growth. Such thinking evokes the Hegelian conception of history as a process that unfolds through successive phases of dialectical conflict and synthesis which finally issue in a moment of achieved self-knowledge when consciousness becomes present to itself in all the forms of its development to date. To deconstruct this version of aesthetic ideology is to focus on those various discrepant details – anachronisms, structural anomalies, hybrid genres – that put up resistance to any such organicist view of the relation between history and art.

In similar fashion Subotnik and others have sought to deconstruct the discourse of received (high-cultural) music criticism by questioning both its canonical judgments and its reliance on concepts of structure, unity and integral thematic development which are taken to define what shall count as great music or an adequate understanding of it. Here again, it is argued, there is a self-confirming process of circular definition. If value in music is equated with structural complexity, then value in reception is defined by 'structural listening' at the expense of surface detail or personal response. Such listening concentrates rather on long-range (relatively abstract) matters of thematic transformation, motivic development, progressive tonality etc. What typifies the deconstructive approach is the lesson it has learnt from Derrida in locating value-laden polarities – structure/texture, form/content, analysis/appreciation – and showing how these encode hierarchical values and assumptions by which the second term in each case is systematically downgraded. Thus analysts in the broadly Schenkerian tradition take it for granted that complexity and unity are the chief (indeed defining) virtues of musical form, and that the measure of a truly adequate, successful or profound analysis is the extent to which every detail can be shown to relate to some underlying matrix of generative themes or germinal motifs (Narmour, 1977). This consorts with the quasi-evolutionist idea according to which the eminent line of descent is that which runs (with various disputed claims along the way) from the First to the Second Viennese Schools, and thence to those high modernist successor-movements which sought to extend serial techniques to every parameter of musical organization. It is no coincidence that 'analysis' happens to work so well when applied to music which lends itself ideally to just such formalist treatment.

Deconstruction may thus be viewed as a part of a wider post-modernist reaction against the values and priorities of a musical culture that has raised the pursuit of formal complexity and the perception of structure above the pleasures of straightforward musical experience. However, deconstruction would itself warn us against accepting any notion of 'experience' (let alone 'straightforward' experience) at face value. It is also the case that deconstructive writings about music tend to concentrate on works (and analyses of works) that belong to that same tradition of 'high' canonical art forms. Such writings are complex and demanding in a way that scarcely invites comparison with current styles of postmodern, minimalist or neo-Romantic music. (A similar complaint is voiced about deconstructionist literary critics who denounce the elitist values enshrined in the 'great tradition' of canonized texts while continuing to produce sophisticated readings of those same texts and the mainstream commentaries on them.) Where the emphasis does fall differently is in the kind of 'structural listening' that these theorists propose. Thus they tend to favour works such as song cycles, fantasies, miniatures and hybrids of various sorts whose generic affiliation is in doubt, or that challenge conventional (organicist) modes of analysis.

This difference is clear in the exchange between two analysts on the subject of Brahms's Fantasies op.116. Jonathan Dunsby interprets them not as a sequence of loosely related character-pieces but rather as a complex, integrated, 'organic' whole whose unity is established by numerous instances of allusive cross-reference, tonal development and subtle thematic linkage. For Alan Street, conversely, there is no ultimate principle of aesthetic value that could justify the quest for structural coherence despite and against the music's resistance to any such merely abstract formal imperative. To this latter way of thinking, espoused also by Kallberg, Korsyn and Scherzinger, many works often praised for their integral ('organic') qualities of style and form can in fact be shown, on a closer deconstructive analysis, to manifest those kinds of generic ambivalence or heterodox structure that find no place within the standard analytical conventions. They should rather be heard, these critics argue, as resistant to that dominant idea of musical tradition that assimilates work to history (and history to work) through a range of naturalized organicist metaphors connoting predestined development and growth.

Other theorists, such as Neubauer and Barry, have pursued a related enquiry into the notion of 'absolute' music that gained ground among critics and aesthetic philosophers from the mid-18th century. In particular they have pointed to the shift away from an earlier mimetic or representational philosophy of art where literature was thought of primarily in terms of its capacity for presenting vivid images (ut pictura poesis), and music valued chiefly in so far as it served to express or communicate the meanings contained in some sacred or secular text. These values underwent a sharp reversal with the rise of genres, such as the symphony or string quartet, whose formal structures were increasingly divorced from any reliance on textual or programmatic sources. This development coincided with a renewed interest in the 'sublime' as a category of aesthetic thought, that is to say, with the idea of art as somehow 'presenting the unpresentable', or giving access to a realm of transcendent experience beyond the furthest reach of prosaic or everyday knowledge. Music was thus elevated from an ancillary role, subservient to text, to the status of highest art form, one that seemed capable of breaking altogether with such commonplace referential or extra-musical constraints. At its most extreme this belief gave rise to the symbolist doctrine that poetry should 'aspire to the condition of music' by renouncing all interest in mere thematic content and striving to attain an absolute purity of diction and form.

From a deconstructive standpoint this is another symptom of the 'aesthetic ideology' that values works of art for their power to transcend the limiting conditions of quotidian (prosaic or timebound) human experience. Most influential here has been Paul de Man, a literary theorist whose texts were mainly devoted to unmasking and resisting this delusory belief. Thus the task of deconstruction is to exercise a rigorous, self-critical intelligence which prevents philosophy and criticism from falling into the typical post-Romantic error that would take such claims at face value. On this view, exemplified by mainstream interpreters of Romanticism and also (supposedly) by post-Kantian idealist philosophers such as Hegel and Schiller, aesthetic experience belongs to a realm beyond those of mere sensuous cognition or abstract conceptual thought. It is the idea of language as somehow consubstantial with processes or forms in the natural realm, thereby equating the highest achievements of art with a power to overcome the vexing antimonies of subject and object, mind and nature, word and world. This leads to the high valuation of tropes such as metaphor and symbol, conceived as giving access to imaginative truths of a visionary, transcendent or eternal order.

De Man both denies that this can be the case – since language is inherently a non-natural and a temporal medium – and considers such ideas the source of much confusion in criticism and philosophy. Moreover, he shows that the texts where such claims are most insistently raised are also very often texts whose rhetorical complexity manifests a kind of counter-logic, a self-deconstructive moment of resistance, at odds with their overt or professed intent. Thus a theorist may argue that the language of symbolism excels that of allegory, since the latter involves a merely conventional ('arbitrary') relationship between sign and meaning or form and content, as well as belonging to a temporal order where everything is mere prosaic succession – one episode after another – affording no access to the realm of transcendent truths. However it is de Man's claim, borne out by close readings of considerable subtlety and power, that these texts are themselves allegorical in so far as they reveal the strict and absolute impossibility that language should ever achieve that wished-for condition. Futhermore, he takes music, and Rousseau's writings on music in particular, as his instance of a 'language' that cannot be construed as pointing towards such a consummate union of the sensuous and the spiritual, content and form, or their various correlative terms. For in music we encounter the paradigm case of an 'empty' sign whose structure and meaning cannot be grasped other than allegorically since it resists all attempts to specify its content in naively referential (or high-toned symbolist) terms.

De Man thus differs from Derrida in regarding Rousseau as the least deluded, most critically self-aware of writers, one whose texts hold out against mystified (mainstream-romantic) conceptions of meaning and form. That is, Rousseau uncannily anticipates everything the canny deconstructor might wish to say concerning the nature of aesthetic ideology, its sources in the 19th-century discourse of philosophical reflection on art, and the fallacies involved in any premature leap to symbolist-inspired notions of musical or poetic language. More than that, such notions are deeply seductive and can easily acquire the kind of wider (historical and socio-political) resonance that de Man and others have linked to the rise of a 'national-aestheticist' mode of conceiving the relation between art, politics and culture (see also Lacoue-Labarthe). Hence the idea of the nation-state, unique and whole, as embodying those same sublime or transcendent values. Nor will such arguments appear far-fetched if one considers the role of music in Nietzsche's early philosophy or in Wagner's conception of opera as the ultimate Gesamtkunstwerk, the union of music, mythology and stage spectacle in a prophetic vision of German national destiny. At the very least these ideas may be said to have exerted a potent force in the emergence of totalitarian creeds that envisaged the nation-state as itself a kind of artwork or ideal projection of the great leader's will expressed through forms of mass political mobilization.

In short, there are some large, even violent, things behind this current attempt by critical theorists to deconstruct certain deep-laid assumptions about language, art and aesthetic value. De Man puts the case most forcefully in a passage concerning Schiller's idea of 'aesthetic education' and its appeal to a state of harmonious balance or reconciliation between the various human faculties. Thus 'the "state" that is here being advocated is not just a state of mind or of soul, but a principle of political value and authority that has its own claims on the shape and the limits of our freedom' (de Man, 1984). To grasp what is at stake, he suggests, we should look to those crucial passages, in Rousseau and Kant especially, which on the one hand have given rise to a history of 'aberrant' (naive or uncritical) readings but on the other can be seen to resist or deconstruct the interpretation placed upon them by less attentive readers. It will then become clear how close is the relation between aesthetic ideology and those forms of organicist thinking that can all too easily carry across from the literary or musical to the socio-political domain.

In this respect deconstruction makes common cause with that strain of 'negative dialectical' thinking developed by Adorno and his Frankfurt school associates. That is to say, it manifests a kindred suspicion of any philosophy, such as Hegel's, that holds out the prospect of a grand dialectical synthesis wherein all contradictions would at last be resolved and consciousness attain a viewpoint (that of Absolute Knowledge) beyond all the partial or limiting perspectives of its progress to date. For Adorno, such thinking was complicit with the drive toward a 'totally administered' society – that of late capitalism – which reduced every aspect of present-day life to the dead level of conformist popular 'taste' as dictated by a culture industry given over to the purposes of mass indoctrination. In so far as there remained any hope of resisting this process, it belonged to those stubbornly intransigent forms of artistic production – like the music of Schoenberg or the writings of Samuel Beckett – that held out against the blandishments of a falsely affirmative culture.

Thus deconstruction can be seen as continuing Adorno's critical project, albeit with greater emphasis on those moments of textual aporia (contradictions, paradoxes, ideological stress-points) that emerge in the discourse of mainstream musicology. At present it remains a somewhat specialized area of research and one whose appeal is mainly to the younger generation of music theorists. However, its influence is already apparent in the widespread questioning of analytic methods, Schenkerian procedures especially, which take for granted such values as structural unity, thematic coherence or organic form. Meanwhile there are others, 'old-style' analysts among them, who have risen to the deconstructive challenge by developing more refined and sophisticated versions of the formalist approach. What these debates make clear is the fact that all parties continue to practise some version of 'analysis', whether with a view to upholding traditional (work-based or organicist) norms, or in order to deconstruct those norms by revealing their covert ideological agenda. Where they chiefly differ is on this point of intrinsic versus extrinsic criteria, or structural features imputed to the work itself – in its presumed formal autonomy – as against those aspects of our thinking about music that may be subject to analysis in the deconstructive mode. Nevertheless it seems fair to conclude that analysis in some form continues to provide the best, indeed the only adequate, basis for addressing these complex issues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-J. Rousseau: Essai sur l'origine des langues (Geneva, 1781); ed. J. Starobinski (Paris, 1990)

J.-J. Rousseau: Ecrits sur la musique (Paris, 1788–93)

G.W.F. Hegel: Vorlesungen über die Ästhetik (Berlin, 1835, 2/1842; Eng. trans., 1975 as Aesthetics: Lectures on Fine Art)

T.W. Adorno: Philosophie der neuen Musik (Tübingen, 1949, 3/1967; Eng. trans.,1973/R)

J. Derrida: De la grammatologie (Paris, 1967)

T.W. Adorno: Ästhetische Theorie (Frankfurt, 1970; Eng. trans., 1981)

J. Derrida: Marges de la philosophie (Paris, 1972)

E. Narmour: Beyond Schenkerism: the Need for Alternatives in Music Analysis (Chicago, 1977)

P. de Man: Allegories of Reading: Figural Language in Rousseau, Nietzsche, Rilke, and Proust (New Haven, CT, 1979)

P. Lacoue-Labarthe: Typographies, i–ii (Paris, 1979–86; partial Eng. trans., 1989 as Typography: Mimesis, Philosophy, Politics, ed. C. Fynsk)

J. Kerman: 'How we got into Analysis, and How to get Out', Critical Inquiry, vii (1980–81), 311–31

R.A. Solie: 'The Living Work: Organicism and Musical Analysis', 19CM, iv (1980–81), 147–56

J. Dunsby: Structural Ambiguity in Brahms: Analytical Approaches to Four Works (Ann Arbor, 1981)

J. Culler: On Deconstruction (London, 1982)

C. Norris: Deconstruction: Theory and Practice (London, 1982, 2/1991)

R. Rorty: 'Philosophy as a Kind of Writing: an Essay on Derrida', Consequences of Pragmatism (Minneapolis, 1982), 90–109

P. de Man: Blindness and Insight: Essays in the Rhetoric of Contemporary Criticism (London, 1983)

J. Dunsby: 'The Multi-Piece in Brahms: Fantasien, op.116', Brahms: Biographical, Documentary and Analytical Studies, ed. R. Pascall (Cambridge, 1983), 167–89

J. Kerman: 'A Few Canonic Variations', Critical Inquiry, x (1983–4), 107–26

P. de Man: The Rhetoric of Romanticism (New York, 1984)

J. Kerman: Musicology (London, 1985)

Disciplining Music: Musicology and its Canons: Ithaca, NY, 1986 and New Orleans 1987

P. de Man: The Resistance to Theory (Minneapolis, 1986)

J. Neubauer: The Emancipation of Music from Language: Departure from Mimesis in Eighteenth-Century Aesthetics (New Haven, CT, 1986)

K. Barry: Language, Music and the Sign (Cambridge, 1987)

J.-J. Nattiez: Musicologie générale et sémiologie (Paris, 1987; Eng. trans., 1990)

C. Norris: Derrida (London, 1987)

J. Kallberg: 'The Rhetoric of Genre: Chopin's Nocturne in G minor', 19CM, xi (1987–8), 238–61

Music and Text: Hanover, NH, 1988

C. Norris: Paul de Man: Deconstruction and the Critique of Aesthetic Ideology (London, 1988)

R.R. Subotnik: 'Toward a Deconstruction of Structural Listening: a Critique of Schoenberg, Adorno and Stravinsky', Explorations in Music, the Arts, and Ideas, ed. E. Narmour and R. Solie (New York, 1988), 87–122

J. Dunsby: 'Pierrot Lunaire and the Resistance to Theory', MT, cxxx (1989), 732–6

T. Eagleton: The Ideology of the Aesthetic (Oxford, 1989)

C. Norris: 'Utopian Deconstruction: Ernst Bloch, Paul de Man and the Politics of Music', Music and the Politics of Culture, ed. C. Norris (New York, 1989), 305–47

A. Street: 'Superior Myths, Dogmatic Allegories: the Resistance to Musical Unity', MAn, viii (1989), 77–123

P. Lacoue-Labarthe: Musica Ficta: figures de Wagner (Paris, 1991; Eng. trans., 1994)

S. McClary: Feminine Endings: Music, Gender, and Sexuality (Minneapolis, 1991)

E. Said: Musical Elaborations (London, 1991)

R.R. Subotnik: Developing Variations: Style and Ideology in Western Music (Minneapolis, 1991)

L. Goehr: The Imaginary Museum of Musical Works: an Essay in the Philosophy of Music (Oxford, 1992)

K. Korsyn: 'Brahms Research and Aesthetic Ideology', MAn, xii (1993), 89–103

R. Stradling and M. Hughes: The English Musical Renaissance 1860–1940: Construction and Deconstruction (London, 1993)

B. Hyer: '"Sighing Branches": Prosopopoeia in Rameau's Pigmalion', MAn, xiii (1994), 7–50
S. Sweeney-Turner: The Sonorous Body: Music, Enlightenment, and Deconstruction (diss., U. of Edinburgh, 1994)
M. Scherzinger: 'The Finale of Mahler's Seventh Symphony: a Deconstructive Reading', MAn, xiv (1995), 69–88
S. Sweeney-Turner: 'Speaking without Tongues', MT, cxxxvi (1995), 183–6
D.A. Thomas: Music and the Origins of Language: Theories from the French Enlightenment (Cambridge, 1995)
R.R. Subotnik: Deconstructive Variations: Music and Reason in Western Society (Minneapolis, 1996)

CHRISTOPHER NORRIS

Decorus, Volupius. See SCHONSLEDER, WOLFGANG.

Decoust, Michel (André) (b Paris, 19 Nov 1936). French composer and conductor. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire (1956–65), where his teachers included Rivier and Milhaud. He also studied at the Cologne Kurse für Neue Musik (1964–5) with Boulez and Stockhausen, and took courses in orchestral conducting with Boulez in Basle (1965). After teaching composition at the Dartington College summer courses (1967), he served as regional musical organizer for the Orchestre Philharmonique des Pays de la Loire (1967–70), and director of musical activities at the Maison de la Culture of Rennes and Nevers (1970–72). He went on to found and direct the Pantin Conservatoire Municipal de Musique (1972–6), to run the education department of IRCAM (1976–9), and to hold the post of inspector general of music education in the Ministry of Culture (1979–99). He has also served on the selection panel of ORTF (1972–4), as chair of the ISCM (1976–8) and as vice-chair of the symphonic music committee of SACEM, the French composer's union (1979–92). His honours include the Prix de Rome, the Ambron International Composition Prize (Almagia-Siena) and a conducting prize from the Besançon International Competition.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: Distorsion, 3 fl, 1965; Mobile, perc, 1965; Polymorphie, orch, 1967; Sun, va/vn, 12 str, 1971; Et/ou, 1–44 pf, 1972; Si et seulement si, orch, 1972; Iambe, 14 insts, 1976; Spectre, wind, perc, 2 db, 1978; Le cygne, s/a fl, 1982; Onde, brass qnt, 1982; T.H.T., orch, 1982; Sinfonietta, 10 insts, 1983; Les galeries de pierres, va, 1984; Sonnet, 12 insts, 1985; De la gravitation suspendue des mémoires, orch, 1986; Lierre, orch, 1986; Symétrie, wind, perc, 1986; Hommage à Maurice Ravel, orch, 1987; 1+1=4, pf, perc, 1988; Le temps d'écrite, pf, 1988–92; Travelling Ariane, fl, hp, 1989; Vn Conc., 1990; Lignes, cl, str qt, 1992

Vocal: Horizon remarquable (R. Char), S, orch, 1964; Relevé d'esquisse (C. Minière, J. Bousquet), 7 pieces, S, 4 insts, 1964–82; T'aï, 1v, hpd, elec gui, perc, db, 1972; Et ée ou é ée, mixed chorus, 1973; L'application des lectrices aux champs, S, orch, 1977; Traits (P. Eluard), S, 5 insts, 1982; Café-Théâtre (P. Soupault), 11 songs, S, pf, 1984; 5 mélodies (Bleus) (B. Cendrars), S, pf, 1986; 7 chansons érotiques (M. Butor, C. Nicoïdski, L. Labé and others), S, pf, 1986; Je qui d'autre (P. Bonzon), S, T, B, 14 insts, 1987; Dodici voci (Bonzon), mixed chorus, 1989; Duo pour trois (J. Tardieu), Mez, fl, pf, 1989; Ryôjin' hishô, S, pf, 1989; Mélodies en trio (A. Rimbaud, M. Deguy, R.M. Rilke and others), B, b cl, pf, 1991; A jamais d'ombre, 1v, str qt, 1996; Cent phrases pour éventail (P. Claudel), 6vv, inst ens, 1996

El-ac: 7.854.693.286, 8-track tape, 1972; Interphone, 2-track tape, 1977 [after C. Minière]; Olos, t sax, elecs, 1983; Marbres, 4-track tape, 1986

Principal publisher: Salabert

Principal recording companies: Harmonia mundi, VERG

PHILIPPE MICHEL

Decrescendo (It., from decrescere: 'to decrease', 'wane'). A performance instruction, sometimes abbreviated decresc., meaning almost the same as DIMINUENDO.

See also CRESCENDO; TEMPO AND EXPRESSION MARKS.

Decsényi, János (b Budapest, 24 March 1927). Hungarian composer. He was a pupil of Sugár at the Budapest Conservatory and of Szervánszky at the Budapest Academy of Music, from which he graduated in 1957. By that time his works had already met with success at the Warsaw World Youth Festival (1955) and at the Vercelli Composers' Competition (1956). From 1951 to 1994 Decsényi worked in the music section of Hungarian radio; he was head of the electronic music studio there from 1974. He received the Ekel Prize in 1975 and was awarded the title Artist of Merit in 1986.

At first strongly influenced by the music of Kodály, he later followed newer directions; his music often results from the stimulus of other art forms. The structures are clearly defined, sometimes representing novel versions of classical moulds. Although his output extends to choral works, film scores, electro-acoustic and incidental music, his most characteristic writing can be found in his chamber pieces. He prefers to handle even the orchestra as a chamber ensemble, its members often assuming soloistic roles. His attachment to chamber genres has helped in refining his fundamental compositional technique. His works often start from a small set of ideas and proceed through gradual intensification towards a more comprehensive musical statement. During the 1990s he realized a number of electro-acoustic works in the soundscape and Sonic Art vein.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: Sonatina pastorale, fl, pf, 1956; Divertimento, hpd, chbr orch, 1959; 5 Csontváry kép [5 Csontváry Paintings], orch, 1967; Melodiae hominis, chbr orch, 1969; Gondolatok – nappal, éjszaka [Thoughts – by Day and Night], orch, 1971; Kommentárok Marcus Aureliushjoz, 16 str, 1973; Conc. Boemo, 1976; Variations, pf, orch, 1976; Str Qt, 1978; Vc Conc., 1984; A harmadik [The Third One] (Roman text), str, 1985; Sym. no.1, 1986; Concert Sonata, vc, pf, 1991; Sym. no.2 'Vocis imago', 1993

Vocal: Barbár dalok [Barbaric Songs] (S. Weöres), Bar, pf, 1958; Metamorfosi, S, pf, 1964; Shakespeare monológok, B, pf, 1968; A gondolat játékai [The Play of Thought] (Decsényi), S, chbr orch, 1972; Utak [Roads], S, pf, 1978; Sírfelirat Aquincumból [Epitaph from Aquincum] (Roman text), S, elec org, str, 1979; Weöres Sándor tizenkettedik szinfoniája [The 12th Sym. of S. Weöres], S, perc, 1980; Régi magyar svövegek [Old Hungarian Texts], solo vv, chbr orch, 1991; Emlékkönyv [Keepsake Album] (audio-visual orat, E. Emlékkönyv), solo vv, chbr ens, live elecs, 1997; choral works

El-ac: Kövek [Stones], 1987; Prospero szigete [Prospero's Island], 1989; A katedrális madarai [Birds of the Cathedral], 1994; Verseskönyv [Book of Verses], nos.1 and 2, 1994; A tücsökszóra emlékszel-e még [Do you Remember the Voice of the Crickets?], pf, tape, 1994; 'Jobb lesz az dar vakkal' ['It is better to leave with cranes'], 1996; see Vocal [Keepsake Album]

Incid music, film scores

Principal publishers: Editio Musica, Hungaroton

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Fábián: 'Ungarische Musik nach Bartók', ÖMz, xxi (1966), 620–29
Contemporary Hungarian Composers (Budapest, 1971, 5/1989)
G. Kroó: A magyar zeneszerzés 30 éve [30 years of Hungarian composition] (Budapest, 1975)
B.A. Varga: Interview, Muzsika, xxxiii/7 (1990), 18–21
Z. Farkas: 'Himnusz az anyanyelvhez' [Hymn to the mother-tongue], Muzsika (1993), no.10, pp.39–42

MELINDA BERLÁSZ

Decsey, Ernst (Heinrich Franz) (b Hamburg, 13 April 1870; d Vienna, 12 March 1941). Austrian critic and author. Though born in Hamburg he lived for most of his life in Vienna where he studied law (JurD, 1894) and at the same time took lessons in harmony, counterpoint and composition at the conservatory with Bruckner and Robert Fuchs. He became music critic of the Grazer Tagespost in 1900 and in 1908 took over the editorship of this paper. In 1920 he joined the Neues Wiener Tagblatt as its first critic but had to resign in 1938 on account of the political events in Austria. Decsey was a prolific and brilliant writer who combined critical acumen with felicitous expression. In addition to his work as a critic he was very active as the author of musical novels, plays and librettos. In recognition of his literary achievement the Austrian government made him an honorary professor in 1924.

WRITINGS

Hugo Wolf (Leipzig, 1903–6, 12/1921)
Bruckner: Versuch eines Lebens (Berlin, 1919/R)
Johann Strauss (Stuttgart, 1922, 2/1948)
Franz Lehár (Vienna, 1924, 2/1930)
Franz Schubert (Vienna, 1924)
Claude Debussy (Graz, 1936)
Debussy's Werke (Graz, 1948)
Librettos: with G. Holm [R.Weil]: Dame im Traum (Franz Salmhofer; Vienna, 1935); Die Kathrin (E.W. Korngold; Vienna, 1937/R)

PLAYS WITH MUSIC

with V. Léon: Der Musikant Gottes [Bruckner] (Vienna, 1926) with J. Bittner: Der unsterbliche Franz [Schubert] (Vienna, 1926)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.R. Hampel, ed.: Musik war sein Leben: Lebenserinnerungen (Vienna, 1962)

MOSCO CARNER

De Cupis. See CUPIS DE CAMARGO family.

Dedekind. German family of musicians.

(1) Euricius Dedekind (b Neustadt am Rübenberge, Lower Saxony, Dec 1554; d Lüneburg, 30 Nov 1619). Composer. His first name has sometimes been incorrectly cited as Heinrich. He was the son of the pastor and poet Friedrich Dedekind, who worked at Neustadt from 1551 to 1576, when he moved to Lüneburg, and thus he must have grown up at Neustadt and may also have moved to Lüneburg in 1576. In 1578 he matriculated at the University of Wittenberg. On 26 April 1581 he was engaged to assist Christoph Praetorius, Kantor of the Johannisschule, Lüneburg, and at the beginning of 1582, when Praetorius had been pensioned off, he was appointed his successor. On 18 December 1594 he was appointed third pastor at St Lamberti, Lüneburg, and from 1617 until his death he was principal pastor. At St Lamberti he continued the tradition whereby the Lüneburg Kantors wrote polyphonic Christmas songs ('cantilenae scholasticae') every year to words supplied by the headmasters of the local schools. It is impossible to assess his achievement as a composer since of his three known published collections one is lost and the other two survive in incomplete form.

WORKS

Neue teutsche Liedlein, aus den zwölff ersten Psalmen Davidis und andern Sprüchen der Schrifft genommen, 3vv (Uelzen, 1585)
Antidota, adversus octo hominum passiones, 4vv (Uelzen, 1589)
Periochae breves evangeliorum dominicalium et festorum praecipuorum, 4, 5vv (Uelzen, 1592), lost, cited in WaltherML; pt.ii (Uelzen, n.d.), cited in EitnerQ
9 other motets (incl. 7 cantilenae scholasticae, dated 1604–6), D-Lr (see Welter)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ
J.G. Bertram: Das evangelische Lüneburg, oder Reformations- und Kirchen-Historie der altberühmten Stadt Lüneburg (Brunswick, 1719), 702–3
I. Starke: 'Ett unikt verk av Euricius Dedekind', STMf, xxxi (1949), 201–2 [on the Antidota]
F. Welter: Katalog der Musikalien der Ratsbücherei Lüneburg(Lippstadt, 1950), 165ff
Å. Davidsson: Musikbibliographische Beiträge (Uppsala, 1954), 28ff
H. Walter: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Lüneburg vom Ende des 16. bis zum Anfang des 18. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1967), 30ff

(2) Henning Dedekind (b Neustadt am Rübenberge, Lower Saxony, 30 Dec 1562; d Gebesee, nr Erfurt, 28 July 1626). Theologian, writer on music, music editor and composer, brother of (1) Euricius Dedekind. He grew up at Neustadt, where his father, Friedrich Dedekind, pastor and poet, was then working, and he attended schools at Hanover, Hildesheim and Lüneburg (to which his father moved in 1576). In the winter of 1582 he matriculated at the University of Erfurt. From 1586 he lived at Langensalza, first as Kantor in succession to Georg Otto, then, from 1592, as deacon, and later also as morning preacher, at St Bonifatius. In his Lamentabilis historia tristissima incendii Salissae Thuringorum (Erfurt, 1604) he described a fire that destroyed his home and possessions on 6 February 1602. He delivered his farewell sermon at Langensalza on 22 February 1615 and moved to Gebesee, where he was pastor until his death.

Henning's principal contributions to music date from his six-year period as Kantor. As a composer he is known only by 11 pieces that he contributed to his anthology of secular tricinia (RISM 1588[30]), the composers in which are identified only by their initials. One of them is Valentin Götting, to whose Compendium musicae modulativae (Erfurt, 1587) Dedekind supplied a preface. He himself wrote two theoretical works, both primers, the second of which, Praecursor metricus musicae artis, is the more advanced. Much later, in 1615, he republished as contrafacta Gregor Lange's two very popular sets of three-part Newer deudscher Lieder, first published in 1584 and 1586.

Dedekind had a son who was also called Henning but who was not a musician, and he must be distinguished both from him and from another Henning Dedekind, who was a pastor at Vorsfelde, near Wolfsburg, Lower Saxony, in the early 17th century.

WORKS

SACRED VOCAL

11 works, 3vv, 1588[30]; some ed. W. Hermann, Deutsche Madrigale (Cologne, n.d.)

THEORETICAL WORKS

Eine Kinder Music … in richtige Fragen und gründliche Antwort bracht (Erfurt, 1589)
Praecursor metricus musicae artis (Erfurt, 1590)
Preface to V. Götting: Compendium musicae (Erfurt, 1587)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Gutbier: Beiträge zur Häuserchronik der Stadt Langensalza, i (Langensalza, 1908), 42ff
A. Werner: Städtische und fürstliche Musikpflege in Weissenfels (Leipzig, 1911)

A. Werner: 'Die alte Musikbibliothek und die Instrumentensammlung an St. Wenzel in Naumburg an der Saale', AMw, viii (1926), 390–415, esp. 398
A. Adrio: Die Anfänge des geistlichen Konzerts (Berlin, 1935), 100
G. Pietzsch: 'Zur Pflege der Musik an den deutschen Universitäten bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts', AMf, vi (1941), 23–56, esp. 26, 34; vii (1942), 154–164; pubd separately (Hildesheim, 1971)
I. Gallwitz: Die Neuen deutschen Lieder von 1584 und 1586 des Gregorius Langius und deren Bearbeitungen durch Christoph Demantius und Henning Dedekind (diss., U. of Vienna, 1960)

(3) Constantin Christian Dedekind (b Reinsdorf, Anhalt-Cöthen, 2 April 1628; d Dresden, 2 Sept 1715). Poet and composer, a grandson of (2) Henning Dedekind. He received his early education at the famous abbey at Quedlinburg, where his teacher was the abbess, Anna Sophia, Landgravine of Hesse. At 13, influenced by the abbess, he had already begun to write poetry, and five years later he went to Dresden to study with Christoph Bernhard. In 1654 he became a bass singer in the Dresden Hofkantorei and was still in that position in 1663, by which time he had married Bernhard's wife's sister, Maria Dorothea Weber.

In 1666, two years after Bernhard left Dresden for Hamburg, Dedekind was appointed director of the Dresden Hofkapelle. He was one of the numerous distinguished violinists then resident in Dresden, and the prominence of string music at the court attested to Dedekind's influence. In 1675, however, he resigned in the face of mounting animosity towards him on the part of the other musicians: court music at Dresden was torn between Italian and German musicians each attempting to dominate, and despite the high level of performance the atmosphere was charged with unpleasant tensions. As a tax collector at Meissen and in the Erzgebirge, Dedekind had accrued enough wealth to survive now without a musical appointment.

Dedekind tried his hand at music publishing but was unsuccessful. He had not neglected his poetry during his years in Dresden, however, and under the pseudonym 'Con Cor D' he was elected to the prominent poetic academy known as the Elbschwanenorden. During the last 40 years of his life he composed very little and devoted his artistic energies to poetry.

Dedekind's most important work is his huge collection Aelbianische Musen-Lust (1657). It contains 146 sacred and secular solo songs with continuo. The texts, whose authorship is clearly indicated, are by the most important lieder poets of the time, including Dach, Finckelthaus, Fleming, Gläser, Rist, Schirmer and Dedekind himself. Nearly all the songs are strophic, with generally syllabic setting of the words. Most of his other music displays much more Italian influence. Following Adam Krieger he inserted instrumental ritornellos between strophes, and in a few cases the violins accompany the solo voice. His Musicalischer Jahrgang contains 120 'concertos' – sacred works for two voices and bass, with the optional addition of a bass voice and two violins, or substitution of them for the continuo and the two voices respectively. The forms used include recitatives, ariosos and da capo arias, and these and other pieces in similar collections by Dedekind are thus examples of German sacred cantatas. He also wrote dance music of various types. His literary works include song texts, scriptural translations, lyric and satiric poetry, plays sacred and secular, intermedi and oratorio texts.

WORKS

only those with music; literary works listed in Stege and Thomas

Selige Fortreis des … Melchior Albhartens (Dresden, 1651)
A. et O.: Jesus! Zehen andächtige Buss-Gesänge (1652, lost; 2/1655)
Aelbianische Musen-Lust (Dresden, 1657/R)
Doppelte Sangzälle (Dresden, 1662)
Geistliche Erstlinge (Dresden, 1662); several ed. in NM, xliii (1929)
Musikalische Spätlinge (Dresden, 1662)
Davidische geheime Musik-Kammer (Dresden, 1663)
Gottes stäte Liebe (Dresden, 1664)
Süsser Mandelkärnen (Dresden, 1664, enlarged 2/1665)
Davidisches Harfen-Spiel, das ist der ganze Psalter (Frankfurt, 1665)
K.R.P. belebte, oder ruchbare Myrrhen-Blätter (Dresden, 1666)
Davidischer Harfenschall (Frankfurt, 1670)
Geschwinder und seeliger Abschied der … Frauen Annen Margarethen … Metzner (Dresden, 1670)
… sonderbahrer Seelen-Freude, oder kleinerer Geistlichen Concerten, Erster Teil (Dresden, 1672)
Musicalischer Jahrgang und Vesper-Gesang … Deutsche Concerten …, 3vv (Dresden, 1673–4)
König Davids göldnes Kleinod, oder 119. Psalm (Dresden, 1674)
Chr. Findekellers Begräbnis-Chor (Dresden, 1675)
Singende Sonn- und Festtages unterl. Andachten (Dresden, 1683)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (W. Vetter)
F. Stege: 'Constantin Christian Dedekind', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 476–95
J.H. Baron: Foreign Influences on the German Secular Solo Continuo Lied in the Mid-Seventeenth Century (diss., Brandeis U., 1967)
D. Lohmeier, ed.: Weltliches und geistliches Lied des Barock: Studien zur Liedkultur in Deutschland und Skandinavien (Amsterdam, 1979)
W. Steude: 'Das wiedergefundene Opus ultimum von Heinrich Schütz: Bemerkungen zur Quelle und zum Werk', Schütz Jb 1982/3, 9–18
G.C. Thomas: Introduction to Constantin Christian Dedekind: Die Aelbianische Musen-Lust (Berne, 1991) [incl. list of musical and literary works]

HORST WALTER (1), ADAM ADRIO (2), JOHN H. BARON (3)

Deeg, Nikolaus. See DECIUS, NIKOLAUS.

Deep Purple. English rock band. Originally formed in 1968 as Roundabout, the classic line-up came together the following year when Ian Gillan (b 1945; vocals) and Roger Glover (b 1945; bass guitar) joined Jon Lord (b 1941; organ), Ritchie Blackmore (b 1945; guitar) and Ian Paice (b 1948; drums). Their style, influenced by the US band Vanilla Fudge, was rooted in Blackmore's technique and improvisatory invention, Gillan's vast range and power and Lord's gospel-derived organ style. Lord's Concerto for Group and Orchestra (Harvest, 1970) was an early, worthy attempt at rock/classical crossover, while Deep Purple in Rock (Harvest, 1970), Fireball (Harvest, 1971), Machine Head (Purple, 1972, containing Smoke on the Water) and the live recording Made in Japan (Purple, 1973) were a more typical mixture of desperate ballads (Child in Time) and riff-based rock tunes. Gillan and Glover departed in 1973, Gillan to form his eponymous band and the latter to go into production. They were replaced by David Coverdale and Glenn Hughes, while Blackmore left in 1975 to form Rainbow. Deep Purple officially split up in 1976, Coverdale recruiting Lord and Paice for Whitesnake. The original band reformed between 1984 and 1988, with little change of style, and again in 1992. Perfect Strangers (Polydor, 1984) was successful, but by The House of Blue Light (Polydor, 1987) they were simply reproducing tired clichés. During the 1990s they retained a sizeable following in the UK, USA and Japan. Between Lord's blues organ style and Blackmore's progressive guitar playing, Deep Purple represent an important stylistic bridge between the British blues movement of the 1960s and the rise of heavy metal in the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Charlesworth: Deep Purple: the Illustrated Biography (London, 1983)

M. Snow: 'Smoke on the Water', Q, no.38 (1989), 28–37

M. Snow: 'Musical Differences?', Q, no.53 (1991), 44–9

ALLAN F. MOORE

Deering, Richard. See DERING, RICHARD.

Def. See DAFF.

De Fabritiis, Oliviero (Carlo) (b Rome, 13 June 1902; d Rome, 12 Aug 1982). Italian conductor and composer. He studied at the Rome Conservatory with Refice and made his début in 1920 at the Teatro Nazionale, Rome. After engagements at Salerno and at the Teatro Adriano in Rome, from 1932 to 1943 he was artistic secretary at the Teatro dell'Opera in Rome. There he conducted frequently, and in 1938, with Toti dal Monte and Gigli in Lucia di Lammermoor, he inaugurated the summer performances at the Baths of Caracalla. De Fabritiis conducted many operas with Gigli in Europe and the Americas, and also Gigli's famous recordings of Andrea Chénier, Tosca and Madama Butterfly. He gave concerts in Europe, America and Japan, but was mainly concerned with opera, giving the premières of operas by Mascagni, Pizzetti, Rossellini, Zafred and others, as well as conducting most of the standard Italian repertory. He first appeared in Britain at the 1963 Edinburgh Festival in Adriana Lecouvreur with the S Carlo company from Naples, and made his Covent Garden début two years later with Simon Boccanegra. A conductor of characteristic italianate warmth of expression, he was skilled at balancing consideration for voices with instrumental detail. He was also the composer of a number of vocal works.

PIERO RATTALINO

Defauw, Désiré (b Ghent, 5 Sept 1885; d Gary, IN, 25 July 1960). American conductor and violinist of Belgian birth. A violin pupil of Johan Smit, he gave his first London performances in 1910. In 1914, as a refugee from Belgium, he founded in London the Allied Quartet with Charles Woodhouse (second violin), Lionel Tertis and Emile Doehaerd. Returning to Belgium, he became his country's leading conductor. The tradition that the concerts of the Brussels Conservatory should be conducted by the director was broken for him, and he conducted them from 1926 to 1940. Defauw was also a professor of conducting at the conservatory from 1926. He appeared in New York in 1938 as guest conductor with the NBC SO, and in 1940 went to Montreal as conductor of the Société des Concerts Symphoniques. In 1943 he was appointed to one of the most important conducting posts in the USA, that of the Chicago SO, but won little success and left in 1947 after four seasons. He later accepted the post of conductor of the Gary SO (1950–58), retiring through ill-health. Defauw made a number of recordings with the Brussels Conservatory Orchestra and the Chicago SO, mainly of the standard repertory but including what appears to have been the first recording of Prokofiev's Scythian Suite (with the Chicago SO).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Herzberg: Désiré Defauw (Brussels, 1937)

ARTHUR JACOBS

De Feghg, Willem. See DE FESCH, WILLEM.

De Ferrari, Serafino (Amedeo) (b Genoa, 6 May 1824; d Genoa, 27 March 1885). Italian composer, pianist, organist and conductor. He first studied in Genoa with Mario Bevilacqua, Giovanni Serra and M. Sciorati, continuing in Milan with Placido Mandanici; he then appeared in public as a pianist, organist and conductor. In 1852 he was invited to Amsterdam, where he conducted several opera seasons. On his return to Italy he became director of singing at the Teatro Carlo Felice in Genoa and later at the Teatro Carignano in Turin. In 1873 he was appointed director of the Civico Istituto di Musica in Genoa, a post he held until his death.

Except for Il matrimonio per concorso (1858), which was hindered by a poor libretto, all De Ferrari's operas were successful, particularly Pipelet (1855), usually considered his finest, and Il menestrello (1859), which were performed throughout Italy and sometimes abroad. However, these works, elegantly written, charming and melodious, but not highly original, did not maintain their popularity and eventually disappeared from the repertory.

WORKS

STAGE

Catilina (op, G.B. Casti), 1852, unperf.

Don Carlo (os, 3, G. Pannachi), Genoa, Carlo Felice, 12 Feb 1854, excerpts (Turin, n.d.); rev. as Filippo II (R. Berninzone), Carlo Felice, Dec 1856

Pipelet, o Il portinaio di Parigi (ob, 3, Berninzone, after E. Sue: Mystères de Paris), Venice, S Benedetto, 25 Nov 1855, vs (Milan, 1881)

Il matrimonio per concorso (ob, 3, D. Bancalari and D. Chiossone), Venice, Fenice, 7 Aug 1858, excerpts (Milan, n.d.)

Il menestrello (ob, 3, Berninzone), Genoa, Doria, 17 April 1859; rev. Genoa, Paganini, 23 July 1861, vs (Turin, 1862)

Il cadetto di Guascogna (commedia lirica, 3, Berninzone), Genoa, Carlo Felice, 9 Nov 1864; rev. Turin, Rossini, spr. 1873, vs (Turin, 1868)

Delia (ballet), collab. others

OTHER WORKS

Vocal: 3 cants.; sacred music, incl. masses, vespers settings, hymns; songs, incl. La croce della mamma, Fiori d'aprile (Milan, n.d.)

Inst: chbr music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DEUMM; ES (C. Sartori); FétisB; RicordiE; SchmidlD

G. Balestrieri: 'La prima scuola genovese di musica e l'Istituto musicale "N. Paganini"', Musica d'oggi, xxii (1940), 33–7

L. Frassati: Genova come era (Genoa, 1960)

FRANCESCO BUSSI

De Ferraris, Paolo Agostino. See FERRARIO, PAOLO AGOSTINO.

De Fesch [Defesch, de Veg, de Feghg, du Feche], Willem [William, Guillaume, Guglielmus] (b Alkmaar, bap. 26 Aug 1687; d London, 3 Jan 1761). Dutch composer and violinist. He was the son of Louis de Fesch and Johanna Maasbragt. Despite his parents' marriage in Amsterdam (1685) and his brother's birth in Alkmaar, the family orginated from the Pays de Liège and returned to Liège before 1690. De Fesch may have been a choirboy or even a singer in Liège during the 1690s. By about 1710 both he and his elder brother Pieter (b 28 Nov 1685) had settled in Amsterdam: Pieter had stayed some years in Leiden, where he was registered as a musician at the University on 6 June 1706. In Amsterdam De Fesch married Anna Maria Rosier, daughter of the composer Carl Rosier, who was active in Bonn, Amsterdam and Cologne. The names Willem, Pieter and Anna Maria de Fesch occur in the accounts of the City Theatre for dancing, singing and playing during the years 1708–21.

De Fesch remained in Amsterdam until 1725. During this period he made several appearances as a concert violinist, including three at Antwerp in 1718, 1719 and 1722. In 1725 he was appointed kapelmeester at Antwerp Cathedral in succession to Alphonse d'Eve, a post he held until 1731, when he resigned because of repeated quarrels with the chapter and the chapel – quarrels for which his temperamental, mean and slovenly character was apparently to blame. A few years later De Fesch was with his family in London, where he remained for the rest of his life.

In London, one of the most important musical centres of Europe, De Fesch was able to develop his activity as a concert violinist and virtuoso to the full. He seems to have been organist of the Venetian Chapel in London during the first years of his stay in England. He also appeared frequently as a concert violinist, often performing his own compositions. His oratorio Judith (text by W. Higgins) was performed in 1733 and revived in 1740; the work must have appealed to the taste of his contemporaries, as William Hogarth caricatured De Fesch in a performance of this oratorio, and used this caricature as a subscription ticket for 'A Midnight Modern Conversation'. In London De Fesch was listed as 'a respectable professor on the violin'. Apparently he was not involved in the current rivalries between Handel and the Nobility Opera: it is known that he was friendly with people who were not favourably inclined to Handel (that is, people in the Prince of Wales's circle), but later (1746) he was first violin in Handel's orchestra. In 1748 and 1749 De Fesch directed the orchestra at Marylebone Gardens. In 1744 and 1745 two large-scale vocal works by De Fesch were announced: the pastoral Love and Friendship, and the oratorio Joseph, both of which had several performances in later years. After 1750 he seems to have withdrawn from public life.

If De Fesch was a good and an accepted violin virtuoso of his time, he was also an accomplished and even a pioneering composer. In his compositions, which ranged from the grandly conceived oratorio, mass and concerto to duets, solo and trio sonatas and simple songs, a clear development can be seen which largely coincides with the different stages in his career. The Amsterdam period, comprising works up to and including op.4 (duets, sonatas and concertos), is typified, first, by its links with the stylistic principles of the late 17th and early 18th centuries, and second, by De Fesch's search for virtuosity and outward brilliance. During the Antwerp period (1725–31), his style underwent a noticeable change: virtuosity was replaced by simplicity and greater expressiveness as he followed the stylistic trends of the second quarter of the century, which slowly but surely made themselves felt. The outcome of this development is De Fesch's masterpiece, his op.8 sonatas, which show his new, simplified idiom and its relation to the Italian galant style. Finally, in the London period, apart from further sonatas and concertos, there are two oratorios and a pastoral serenade, all with English texts, as well as a large variety of songs, to Italian and English texts. The Italian songs were published in two sets, each consisting of 17 canzonets followed by three arias. Many of the texts are borrowed from Paolo Rolli's Di canzonette e di cantate libri due (London, 1727). The English songs seem to have been composed mostly during the years 1746–59. Occasionally they were related to theatrical productions, such as those for the Drury Lane production of The Tempest in 1746. A number of songs were published in small collections usually related to performances of them at well-known concert venues. Others were included in periodical productions such as The London Magazine (1748–54), The Universal Magazine (1749–56) and The Gentleman's Magazine (1749), or issued on separate sheets which could be included in collections of those sheets. A fair number of them were included in song anthologies of the 1750s.

Willem de Fesch: engraving by François Morellon de La Cave after Andrea Soldi, 1751

De Fesch's thematic and formal language can be described as strongly Italian, or more specifically as Vivaldian, in flavour. Vivaldi's strong, masculine allegro themes and his firm formal principles must have appealed strongly to a composer of De Fesch's temperament. Corellian and Handelian influences may also be noted, particularly in the oratorio Joseph. Nevertheless, his works, particularly those in the smaller genres, show a distinctive personal vein. For the basic worth of his own compositions and for the influence that he exercised on his contemporaries, De Fesch may be counted as one of the most important musicians of the Low Countries and England in the second quarter of the 18th century. His works were also more or less systematically distributed in France, either in their original Dutch or English editions or by local reprints.

WORKS

Edition: Collected Edition of the Compositions of Willem de Fesch, ed. R.L. Tusler (Amsterdam, 1995–) [T] all printed works published in London

VOCAL

Missa brevis, NL-At, ed. W. Dekker and D. van Heuvel (Utrecht, 1998); Missa paschalis, B-Ak, T xvii

Judith (orat, W. Higgins), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 16 Feb 1733, lib GB-Lbl, 1 song pubd singly

Love and Friendship (serenata), London, Crown and Anchor Tavern, March 1744, lib US-SM, Wc

Joseph (orat), London, Covent Garden, 20 March 1745, GB-Lam

Apis amata de flore (cant.), A, str, org, B-Bc

Canzonette ed arie, S/(vn/fl), bc (?1733, lost, 3/1736)

XX Canzonette, S/(vn/fl/mand), bc (?1735)
Lyric Poems (M. Prior) (1741), collab. C.R. Smith
The Songs in the Tempest or the Enchanted Isleland, London, Drury Lane, 31 Jan 1746 (London, 1746/R)
VI English Songs, 1v, vn, fl, hpd (*c*1748)
6 New English Songs, 1v, vn, fl, hpd (1749)
Mr Defesch's Songs Sung at Marybon-Gardens (1753)
Miscellaneous songs pubd separately and in The Muses Delight (1754), Apollo's Cabinet (1756), Clio and Euterpe (1748–59)

INSTRUMENTAL

op.
1	VI duetti, 2 vn (Amsterdam, 1716, lost; Paris, 1738), T i
2	VI concerti, 4 vn, va, vc, org (Amsterdam, 1718), T iii
3	VI concerts, 4 for 4 vn, va, bc, 2 for 2 ob, 2 vn, vc, bc (Amsterdam, 1719), T iv
4	XII sonate, libro 1[–2], 6 for vn, vle, hpd, 6 for 2 vc (Amsterdam, 1725), T v–vi
5	VI concerti, 4 for 2 fl, 2 vn, va, org, 2 for 4 vn, va, vc, org (Amsterdam, *c*1730), T vii
6	VI sonate, vn/fl, org (Brussels, *c*1730), ed. in Diletto musicale, nos.961–6 (Vienna, *c*1989)
7	X sonata a tre, 2 fl/vn, vc/bc (London, 1733), T ix
8	XII sonatas, 6 for vn, bc, 6 for 2 vc (London, 1733); nos.1–6 ed. in HM, cxxvii–cxxviii (1958), ed. in Diletto musicale, nos.957, 885, 958–60, 886 (Vienna, 1985–*c*1988); nos.7–12 ed. in Moecks Kammermusik, xix–xx (Celle, 1940), ed. W. Schulz (Leipzig, 1961)
9	VI sonatas, 2 fl (London, 1739), ed. G. Braun (Vienna, 1995/R)
10	VIII concerto's in 7 parts, 6 for 2 vn, va, vc, with 2 other vn, hpd, 1 for fl with all the other insts, 1 for 2 fl, 2 vn, va, vc, hpd (London, 1741), no.2 ed. J. Ehrlich (Mainz, 1956), no.7 ed. in Nagels Musik-Archiv, no.195 (Kassel, 1958), no.8 ed. H. Ruf (Mainz, 1990)
11	Musical Amuzements (London, 1744); pubd as 30 Duets, 2 fl, op.11 (London, 1747), ed. B. Päuler (Winterthur, 1983)
1	[six] Sonatas, 2 vc/bn/viols (Paris, *c*1745), T ii
12	Twelve Sonatas, 2 fl/vn, vc/hpd (London, 1748/R)
13	VI sonatas, vc, hpd (London, ?1757), ed. W. Kolneder (Heidelberg, 1982)
—	Concerto, 3 vn, bc, NL-Au, performed Amsterdam, City Theatre, 7 Jan 1738

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Vander StraetenMPB
F. van den Bremt: Willem de Fesch (1687–1757?), Nederlands componist en virtuoos: leven en werk (Brussels, 1949)
H. O'Douwes: 'De cellocomposities van Willem de Fesch', Mens en melodie, xiv (1959), 40–42
I. Bartlett: 'Boyce and Early English Oratorio', MT, cxx (1979), 293–7, 385–91
J.H. Giskes: 'Muziekonderwijs in Amsterdam in de periode 1600 tot en met 1720', Mens en melodie, xxxv (1980), 347–57
G. Spiessens: 'Willem de Fesch in Antwerpen (1725–1731)', Willem de Fesch: Alkmaar 1987, 31–60
I. Cholij: 'De Fesch and The Tempest', ibid., 61–76
R.L. Tusler: 'Willem de Fesch: International Eighteenth-Century Dutch Composer', The Great Emporium: the Low Countries as a Cultural Crossroads in the Renaissance and the Eighteenth Century, ed. C.C. Barfoot and R. Todd (Amsterdam, 1992), 195–206
S. Sadie: 'Italians and Italian Instrumental Music in Eighteenth-Century London', Chigiana, xliii, new ser. xxiii (1993), 297–309

FRANS VAN DEN BREMT/RUDOLF A. RASCH

Def Leppard. English heavy metal band. Formed in 1978, its original line-up featured Joe Elliot (b Sheffield, 1 Aug 1959; vocals), Rick Savage (b Sheffield, 2 Dec 1960; bass), Tony Kenning (drums), Steve Clark (b Sheffield, 23 April 1960; d Chelsea, 8 Jan 1991; guitar) and Pete Willis (b Sheffield, 16 Feb 1960; guitar). Rick Allen (b Sheffield, 1 Nov 1963) became the band's drummer in 1979 and continued in that position with a semi-electronic drum kit despite the loss of one arm in an accident (1984). Willis was replaced by Phil Collen (b Sheffield, 8 Dec 1957) in 1982; Clark was replaced by Vivian Campbell in 1992. Def Leppard was the most successful of the 'New Wave of British Heavy Metal' bands in the early 1980s. They combined the power of metal with a pop emphasis on melody, catchy hooks and vocal harmonies that contrasted sharply with harsher contemporary metal and punk bands. Their tremendously popular albums, such as Hysteria (Mer., 1987), appeared irregularly due to their painstaking perfectionism in the studio, but appealed to a broad range of music fans. They exploited effectively the new medium of music television in the 1980s with inventive videos and spectacular stage shows. (D. Dickson: Biographize: the Def Leppard Story, London, 1995)

ROBERT WALSER

Defossez, René (b Spa, 4 Oct 1905; d Etterbeek, Brussels, 20 May 1988). Belgian composer and conductor. After studies at the Liège Conservatory he was a composition pupil of Rasse; in 1935 he won the Belgian Prix de Rome with the cantata Le vieux soudard. He was professor of harmony at the Liège Conservatory and, from 1946 to 1973, of conducting at the Brussels Conservatory. From 1936 to 1959 he was conductor of the Théâtre Royal de la Monnaie and subsequently appeared as a guest conductor throughout Europe and the USA. He was elected to the Belgian Royal Academy in 1969 and was instrumental in establishing the Opéra de Chambre de Belgique in 1972. His earliest works, such as the Images sous-marines for orchestra (1930), have a distinctly Impressionist quality. Later he moved towards an eclectic neo-classical style, including novel touches within strictly conventional moulds. His orchestral works, brilliantly orchestrated, are the most successful.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Le subterfuge improvisé (comédie musicale, 1, R. Lebrun), 1938; Floriante (ballet, 1), 1942; Le sens du divin (incid music), 1947; Le rêve de l'astronome (ballet, 1), 1950; Les jeulx de France (divertissement lyrique et chorégraphique), 1959; Les surprises de l'amour (op, 1, Poise, after Marivaux), 1961; A chacun son mensonge (opéra-bouffe, after Labiche), 1964; Le pêcheur et son âme (orat.-ballet, after O. Wilde), 1965; Le regard (ballet), 1970; Thriller (chbr op, C. Fraikin), 1976
Orch: Images sous-marines, 1930; Pf Conc., 1951; Vn Conc., 1951; 2 Pf Conc., 1956; Le chasseur d'images, 1966; Mini-sym., chbr orch, 1967; Arioso e moto perpetuo, 1968; Sinfonietta de printemps, 1975
Other works: many chbr pieces, songs, choral music
Principal publishers: CeBeDeM, Andel, Metropolis, Schott (Brussels)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CeBeDeM directory
J. Leduc: 'Notice sur René Defossez', Annuaire de l'Académie royale de Belgique, clvi (1990), 293–321

HENRI VANHULST

De' Franceschi. See FRANCESCHI family.

Defronciaco (fl 14th century). French composer. He was doubtless from Fronsac in the diocese of Bordeaux. His only known composition is a four-voice troped Kyrie Jesus dulcissime in F-APT 16bis (ed. in CMM, xxix, 1962 and PMFC, xxiii, 1989). The more active upper voices and the liturgical tenor of the slower lower voices suggest a motet, but the placing of the text in the top voice alone gives the flavour of a discant song to the piece, especially since the initial phrase is very similar to the second phrase of Machaut's rondeau Puis qu'en oubli. (For further discussion, see H. Stäblein-Harder: Fourteenth-Century Mass Music in France, MSD, vii, 1962.)

GILBERT REANEY

DeGaetani, Jan (b Massillon, OH, 10 July 1933; d New York, 15 Sept 1989). American mezzo-soprano. She studied at the Juilliard School of Music, making her formal New York début in 1958. In November 1970 she gave the first performance of Crumb's Ancient Voices of Children at the Library of Congress in Washington, DC. Her first appearance with the New York PO was in January 1973, the year she became a professor at the Eastman School, Rochester. She performed regularly with the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble, with which she made her celebrated recording of Pierrot lunaire (which stresses its lyricism). In addition to the avant-garde repertory, in which she specialized, she performed and recorded medieval music (The Play of Herod with the New York Pro Musica), Baroque cantatas, Wolf lieder, and songs by Ives and Stephen Foster. A singer of remarkable intelligence and expressive power, with a voice clear and true throughout its wide range, she appeared with the Boston SO, the Scottish National Orchestra (with which she gave the première of Maxwell Davies's A Stone Litany in 1973), the BBC SO (with Boulez in Japan), the Berlin PO, Philadelphia Orchestra, Chicago SO, Concertgebouw Orchestra and the Waverly Consort. She was appointed artist-in-residence at the Aspen Festival, Colorado, in 1973, and frequently gave masterclasses and concerts at American universities. Her most celebrated students included Dawn Upshaw and Renée Fleming.

MARTIN BERNHEIMER

Degen, Helmut (b Aglasterhausen, Baden, 14 Jan 1911). German composer. He studied composition with Maler, Jarnach and Klussmann at the Rheinische Musikschule in Cologne (1930–33) and musicology at the University of Bonn with Schiedermair and Schrade (1933–6). Degen was active as an organist and private teacher in Altenkirchen, Westerwald, before teaching theory and composition at the Duisburg Conservatory (1937–42). In 1947 he accepted an appointment as lecturer in theory and composition at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musikerziehung in Trossingen. He was made professor in 1954. Degen has written mainly instrumental music including educational chamber pieces designed to encourage the wide acceptance of new music. Under his teacher Maler, Degen fashioned a polyphonic idiom sometimes reminiscent of Hindemith. Without embracing 12-note technique he has employed similar methods of organizing pitch content, particularly in the later works.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Der flandrische Narr, ballet, 1942; Suter, scenic orat, 1950; Genesis-Offenbarung, scenic orat, 1973

Orch: Variationen über ein Geusenlied, 1936; Symphonisches Konzert, 1937; Serenade, str, 1938; Capriccio, 1939; Pf Conc., 1940; Hymnische Feiermusik, 1940; Heitere Suite, 1941; Concertino, 2 pf, orch, 1942; Vc Conc., 1942; Conc., str, 1946; Conc. sinfonico, 1947; Kammersinfonie, 1947; Divertimento, str, 1949; Symphonisches Spiel I, II, III, 1956, 1957, n.d.; Intrada, 1966; educational music

Choral: Wenn der Bauer Hochzeit macht, spkr, solo vv, chorus, small orch, 1938–9; Befiehl du deine Wege, S, A, T, chorus, str, org, 1944–6; Volkslied-Kantate, chorus, small orch, 1962; Osteroratorium, chorus, n.d.; Johannes-Passion, S, T, chorus, n.d.

Chbr and inst: Str Qt no.1, 1941; Pf Trio, 1943; Sonata, fl, va, 1943; Konzertante Musik, fl, pf, 1951; Str Qt no.2, 1951; Wind Qnt, 1955; Fantasie, org, hpd, 1968; Fantasie, vc, org, 1968; Fantasie, vn, pf, 1968; Mobile capriccioso, fl, va, pf, 1970; pf pieces

Principal publisher: Schott

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (K. Laux)

K. Laux: Musik und Musiker der Gegenwart (Essen, 1949), 57–64

GEORGE W. LOOMIS

Degen, Johann (b Weismain, nr Bamberg, *c*1585; d Bamberg, 29 Aug 1637). German composer, organist and poet. In 1613 he became chaplain, and in 1615 organist, of St Martin, Bamberg, and held both positions until his death. In 1626 he issued a songsheet about Bamberg's two founders and patron saints: Das Leben dess H. Heinrichs ... und seines H. Jungkfräwlichen Ehegemals Cunegundis (Bamberg, 1626); he wrote both the text and its four-part setting himself. In the same year he published Hymni quinque ... notis musicalibus per diversos tonos ac melodiis quatuor vocum cum partitura illustrati (Ingolstadt, 1626). Two years later there appeared his hymnbook for the diocese of Bamberg, Catholisches Gesangbuch ... von allerley Tugentgesäng und Busspsalmen colligirt, welche in Processionibus, Creutzgängen Wallfarten bey der H. Mess, Predig und Kinderlehr zu gebrauchen (Bamberg, 1628/R; six in Bäumker, i, seven in Hofmann, 1960). It is one of the first German Catholic hymnbooks and contains 132 German and 26 Latin hymns with 96 tunes, which with one exception are harmonized in four parts: Degen was probably responsible for 22 new texts, eight new tunes and all the harmonizations. In later editions (which continued up to 5/1732) the harmonizations are replaced by a basso continuo. Degen also edited a collection of 53 Latin motets for four and five voices and continuo which are parodies of secular madrigals and concertos: Florilegium musicum motectorum (Bamberg, 1631). Two pieces are by Degen himself, and among the 24 other composers represented are Agazzari, Gastoldi, H.L. Hassler, Marenzio, Philippe de Monte, Palestrina, Jacob Regnart, Rore and Wert.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Bäumker: Das katholische deutsche Kirchenlied in seinen Singweisen (Freiburg, 1883–1911/R)

H. Weber: Der Kirchengesang im Fürstbisthum Bamberg (Cologne, 1893), 25–6, 46ff

J. Dünninger: 'Das Lied von S. Heinrich und S. Kunigunde des Johann Degen von 1626', Rheinisches Jb für Volkskunde, xi (1960), 152–94

M. Hofmann: 'Fränkisches Liedgut aus Degens Gesangbuch, 1628', Frankenland, xii (1960), 231

M. Hofmann: 'Johann Degens Heinrichs- und Kunigundenlied von 1626', Fränkische Blätter (1962), 25

K.G. Fellerer: Geschichte der katholischen Kirchenmusik, ii (Kassel, 1976), 110–13

WALTHER LIPPHARDT/DOROTHEA SCHRÖDER

Degens & Rippin. English firm of organ builders, from 1967 known as GRANT, DEGENS & BRADBEER.

Deggeller [Deggeler], Johann Caspar (b Schaffhausen, 7 Feb 1695; d Schaffhausen, 19 Jan 1776). Swiss church musician. He came from a family from Rottweil am Neckar which had moved to Schaffhausen because of the Reformation. For 55 years (1718–73) Deggeller was Präzeptor of the senior class at the Gymnasium in Schaffhausen and Kantor at St Johann. It speaks for the esteem he enjoyed that the city authorities summoned everyone to pray for him when he underwent an operation for the removal of two gallstones in 1748.

Deggeller is important in the history of Swiss music for his work as an arranger and editor of the most important Schaffhausen hymnbook which was used officially in churches and schools from 1729 to 1842. The first part, Die Psalmen Davids, durch Dr. Ambrosium Lobwassern in teutsche Reimen gebracht, appeared in 1728 and was reprinted at least 12 times before 1830; the second part, Hymni oder Lob-Gesänge, das ist: Ausserlesene alte und neue Fest-, Kirchen- und Hauss-Gesänge und geistliche Lieder, was first published in the same year and went through at least 15 further editions before 1830. The printer, J.A. Ziegler, was given the sole rights for this in 1729 on condition that the collection be moderately priced. The hymnbook, especially its second part, came into being as the private collection of a circle of friends which included besides Deggeller the theologian Konrad Ziegler (1695–1731) and the presiding priest Johann Wilhelm Meyer (1690–1767); hymn texts by both are contained in the book. Apart from the traditional Huguenot psalms in Lobwasser's German version, the second part of the hymnbook contains a selection of old and new four-part church songs, 52 catechisms by Meyer for which Deggeller arranged the music from the Lobwasser Psalter, and a section of communion hymns. Only four melodies are original; they may be Deggeller's own work. The hymnbook was expanded in 1742 by adding an account of the Passion. Apart from some old songs which were already in Conrad Ulmer's Schaffhausen hymnbook of 1595, new hymns of a Pietist stamp were included. One hymn, in adapted form, is to be found today in the evangelical hymnbook of the German-speaking area of Switzerland (no.176, Gott fahrt mit Jauchzen in die Höh).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (M. Jenny) [incl. portrait]
E. Bührer: 'Johann Caspar Deggeller, Kantor und Praeceptor', Schaffhauser Biographien, i: des 18. und 19. Jahrhunderts, Schaffhauser Beiträge zur vaterländischen Geschichte, xxxiii (Thayngen, 1956), 29–35
H.-A. Girard: Kleine Schaffhauser Kirchengesangsgeschichte [reproduced typescript, Beggingen, 1959; copy in the Musikwissenschaftliches Institut, U. of Fribourg]

JÜRG STENZL

Degiardino, Felice. See GIARDINI, FELICE.

De Giosa, Nicola (b Bari, 3 May 1819; d Bari, 7 July 1885). Italian composer and conductor. In 1834 he obtained a free place at the Naples Conservatory, where he studied the flute with Bongiorno, counterpoint with Ruggi, harmony with Zingarelli and composition with Donizetti. In 1841 he left the conservatory because of disagreements with the director Mercadante and composed the opera buffa La casa di tre artisti (Naples, 1842). As L'arrivo del signor zio it was repeated in 1846 at Genoa, where it had little success, and at Milan, where it caused a controversy between the supporters of the old Neapolitan school and the new style of Verdi, whose I due Foscari was also being given. This ended with the triumph of the Verdian party.

A series of works followed in the best tradition of Neapolitan opera buffa, culminating in Don Checco (Naples, 1850), his masterpiece and one of the greatest successes in the history of opera in Naples. His later comic operas declined in quality, but remained in demand by the principal Italian centres. The most successful of these was Napoli di carnevale (Naples, 1876). Several attempts at serious opera, in which De Giosa appeared a pale imitator of Donizetti, either had little success or were not performed.

In his middle years he reduced his activity as a composer in favour of conducting; he was particularly admired for the scrupulousness of his orchestral balance and ensemble. From 1860–61 he conducted for several seasons at S Carlo, in 1867–8 at La Fenice, in 1870 in Cairo, in 1873 at the Colón in Buenos Aires and finally, in 1876, at the Politeama in Naples. He composed church and orchestral music, but was better known for his songs which made him celebrated in Italy and abroad as a salon composer.

WORKS

OPERAS

La casa di tre artisti (ob, 3, A. Passaro), Naples, 1842, excerpts (Naples, n.d.); as L'arrivo del signor zio, Genoa, 1846, autograph I-Mr; Elvina (op semiseria, 3, A. Spadetta), Naples, 1845, Nc, excerpts (Naples and Milan, n.d.); Ascanio il gioielliere (op semiseria, 3, G.S. Giannini), Turin, 1847, autograph Mr, vs (Milan, n.d.); La chauve-souris, ?1847, not perf.; in It. as Il pipistrello (3, E. Golisciani), Naples, Jan 1875; Le due guide (melodramma, 4, M. d'Arienzo), Livorno, 1848, excerpts (Naples, n.d.); Don Checco (ob, 3, Spadetta), Naples, 1850, autograph Mr, vs (Milan and Naples, n.d.); Folco d'Arles (melodramma tragico, 3, S. Cammarano, after V. Hugo), Naples, 1851, Nc, vs (Naples, n.d.), rev. Florence, 1867; Guido Colmar, o Diego Garias (os, 3, D. Bolognese), Naples, 1852, Nc, vs (Naples, n.d.); as Silvia, Naples, 1864, vs (Milan, ?1866); Ida di Benevento [L'assedio di Bari], ?1854 or ?1858, not perf.; Ettore Fieramosca (os, 3, Bolognese), Naples, 1855, Nc; Un geloso e la sua vedova (op comica, 3, E. del Preite), Naples, 1857, autograph Mr, vs (Naples, 1857); Isella la modista (dg, 3, L. Tarantini), Naples, 1857, Nc; Elena, 1853; not perf.; rev. as Il bosco di Dafne (dg, 3, M.A. Bianchi), Naples, 1864, Nc; Il gitano, 1859, not perf, as Lo zingaro, vs (Naples, n.d.); Prologue to Gli speculatori, Naples, 1872; Napoli di carnevale (ob, 3, d'Arienzo), Naples, 1876, autograph Mr, vs (Milan, n.d.); Il conte di S Romano (os, 4, Golisciani), Naples, 1878, autograph Mr, vs (Milan, n.d.); Rabagas (op comica, 4, Golisciani), Rome, 1882; others, not perf.: La schiava polacca; Il capitano Mario; Giovanna di Navarra; Osmano II; Satana

OTHER WORKS

Inst: sym, 1839, I-Nc
Songs and duets: *c*403 pieces, incl. 10 collections pubd Milan, 16 collections pubd Naples
Sacred: Requiem, for Donizetti, ?1848; Mass, 4vv, orch, 1838, Nc; 3 messe di Gloria, 4vv, orch; 2 Mag: 1, B, vv, orch, 1839, Nc; 2 Litanies; 4 Tantum ergo, 1–3vv, orch; Dixit Dominus, 4vv, vv, orch, 1839; Nc; Stabat mater, 4vv, orch; 2 Salve regina; Ave Maria; 3 sinfonie, on themes from masses and Dixit, orch
Other vocal: Una lagrima sulla tomba del Conte Gallemberg, preghiera, S, vv, orch, 1839, Nc; Inno funebre, 4vv, vv, orch, 1839, Nc; Cant., for marriage of Duke of Calabria and Princess Maria Sofia of Bavaria, 1859; Cant., for the patron saint of Acquaviva [Bari], 1864

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FlorimoN
A. Acuto: 'Nicola De Giosa', GMM, xl (1885), 252, 331, 339, 345
M. Incagliati: Nicola De Giosa e il genio musicale di Puglia (Bari, 1923)
A. Procida: 'I direttori d'orchestra', Cento anni di vita del Teatro di San Carlo, 1848–1948, ed. F. de Filippis (Naples, 1948), 133–7
G. Pannain: Ottocento musicale italiano: saggi e note (Milan, 1952), 133, 137
A. Giovine: Nicola De Giosa (Bari, 1968)

ANDREA LANZA

De' Giunti Modesti. See GIUNTA family.

Degius, Nikolaus. See DECIUS, NIKOLAUS.

Degli Antoni [Antonii], Giovanni Battista (b Bologna, 24 June 1660; d Bologna, after 1696). Italian composer and organist, brother of PIETRO DEGLI ANTONI . He spent his life in Bologna, where he studied with Giacomo Predieri and in 1684 became a member of the Accademia Filarmonica. Later he was appointed organist of S Giacomo Maggiore, a post he held until his death. Highly esteemed as an organist, he published only organ and instrumental chamber music. His Ricercate op.1 is an important early instance of music for solo cello; in subsequent publications he contributed to the Bolognese repertory of solo and trio sonatas. The organ verset collections opp.2 and 7 are the largest publications of their kind from the second half of the Seicento. Because these cycles are labeled and ordered according to the tuoni ecclesiastici (and in the case of op.2 their most common transpositions as well), they shed light on Italian modal and liturgical conventions in the mid Baroque.

WORKS

all published in Bologna

Ricercate, vc/hpd, op.1 (1687)
Versetti per tutti li tuoni, tanto naturali, org, op.2 (1687)
Balletti, correnti, gighe e sarabande da camera, vn, vc/hpd, op.3 (1677 [?1687], 2/1688)
Balletti, correnti, gighe e sarabande, 2 vn, vc/hpd, op.4 (n.d.)
Ricercate, vn, vc/hpd, op.5 (1690)
Balletti, vn, vc/hpd, op.6 (1690)
Versetti da organo per tutti li tuoni, op.7 (1696), 2/1697

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NewmanSBE
W. Apel: 'Studien uber die frühe Violinmusik VII: die italienischen Hauptquellen von 1670 bis 1679', AMw, xxxvi (1979), 183–213
L. Malusi: 'Il violone e il suo impiego nei secoli passati', NRMI, xiii (1979), 603–08
W. Apel: 'Studien uber die frühe Violinmusik VIII: die italienischen Hauptquellen von 1680 bis 1689', AMw, xxxvii (1980), 206–35
G. Barnett: 'Modal Theory, Church Keys and the Sonata at the End of the Seventeenth Century', JAMS, li (1998), 245–81
M. Dodds: The Baroque Church Tones in Theory and Practice (diss., U. of Rochester, 1999)

NEAL W. LA MONACO/MICHAEL R. DODDS

Degli Antoni, Maria Maddalena. See MUSI, MARIA MADDALENA.

Degli Antoni [Antonii], Pietro (b Bologna, 16 May 1639; d Bologna, 1720). Italian composer and instrumentalist, brother of GIOVANNI BATTISTA DEGLI ANTONI. He spent his life in Bologna, first distinguishing himself as a cornett player with Cazzati's cappella musicale at S Petronio. Soon after joining the Accademia dei Filaschisi, he became in 1666 a charter member of the Accademia Filarmonica. He was principe of the latter in 1676, a distinction that he enjoyed in five subsequent years: 1684, 1696, 1700, 1705 and 1708. He was maestro di cappella of three churches: S Giovanni in Monte as early as 1666 and again from 1697 until at least 1712, S Maria Maggiore from 1680 and S Stefano from 1686 to 1696. In 1703 he married the famous singer Maria Maddalena Musi, known as La Mignatta.

Degli Antoni wrote a number of oratorios as well as music for two stage works, but, except for the oratorio L'innocenza depressa, which survives in a manuscript score, the printed librettos are all that remain of them. He also explored other vocal forms (concerted masses, motets and chamber cantatas), but he is most important for his contribution to the development of the sonata da camera and sonata da chiesa. The coupled dances of opp.1 and 3, with their frequent chromaticisms and cross-relations, are more stylized than earlier sonate da camera. His most innovatory compositions, the solo sonatas of opp.4 and 5, best reflect his experience as a composer of vocal music. Throughout both collections there are movements bearing quasi-dramatic markings such as 'Aria grave' and 'Aria posata'. Many of the adagio movements are instrumental recitatives or ariosos. For example, in the Adagio of op.4 no.11 the violin evokes a declamatory setting through short irregular motifs which end in appoggiaturas over a sustained pedal. Another characteristic of these sonatas is the importance of the basso continuo line, which assumes a separate structural identity and often develops thematic material equally with the violin part.

WORKS

all printed works published in Bologna

SACRED

Messa e salmi concertati, 3vv, op.2 (1670)
Cantate da camera, 1v, op.6 (1690)
Motetti sacri, 1v, vns, vas, vc obbl, op.7 (1696)
[3] Messe concertate, 3vv, op.8 (1697)
L'innocenza depressa (orat), 6vv, insts, I-MOe (score)

INSTRUMENTAL

Arie, gighe, balletti, correnti, allemande e sarabande, vn, vle/spinet with vn ad lib, op.1 (1670)
Balletti, correnti e arie diverse, vn, vle, or spinet with other insts, op.3 (1671)
Sonate, vn, bc (org), op.4 (1676)
Suonate, vn, bc (org), op.5 (1686)
Sonate e versetti per tutti li tuoni, op.9 (1712)

1 sonata, 2 vn, bc, 1680[7]

LOST WORKS

dates indicate publication of libretto

Il S Rocco (orat, G.L. Piccinardi) (1666)
Prologo ed intermedi ... L'inganno fortunato (B.G. Balbi) (1671)
Prigiona e morte di S Rocco (orat, F. Ottani) (1673)
Atide (op, T. Stanzani) (1679), collab. G.F. Tosi, G.A. Perti
Il Nabal overo L'ingratitudine punita (orat, A. Sacchi, G. Malisardi, A. Fanti), Bologna, 5 April 1682

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NewmanSBE
F. Vatielli: Arte e vita musicale a Bologna (Bologna, 1927/R)
H.G. Mishkin: 'The Solo Violin Sonata of the Bologna School', MQ, xxix (1943), 92–112, esp. 97
F. Testi: La musica italiana nel Seicento (Milan, 1970–72)
W. Apel: 'Studien uber die frühe Violinmusik VII: die italienischen Hauptquellen von 1670 bis 1679', AMw, xxxvi (1979), 183–213
W. Apel: 'Studien uber die frühe Violinmusik VIII: die italienischen Hauptquellen von 1680 bis 1689', AMw, xxxvii (1980), 206–35
L. Pancino and C. Vitali: 'Castelli di carte: Vivaldi, Pietro degli Antonii e l'Accademia Filarmonica di Bologna', Informazioni e studi vivaldiani, xiv (1993), 75–97
G. Barnett: Musical Issues of the Late Seicento: Style, Social Function, and Theory in Emilian Instrumental Music (diss., Princeton U., 1997)
G. Barnett: 'Modal Theory, Church Keys and the Sonata at the End of the Seventeenth Century', JAMS, li (1998), 245–81

NEAL W. LA MONACO

DEG Music Products. Firm founded in 1965 by Donald E. Getzen, who had previously worked with GETZEN CO.

Degrada, Francesco (b Milan, 23 May 1940). Italian musicologist. He studied the piano (diploma 1961), composition (diploma 1965) and conducting at Milan Conservatory. At the same time he took an arts degree at the University of Milan (1964). He taught at the conservatories of Bolzano (1965–6) and Brescia (1967–8), and in 1964 he became lecturer in music history at the University of Milan, and in 1980 full professor. He taught concurrently at Milan Conservatory (1966–74). From 1964 to 1975 he was director and harpsichordist of the ensemble Complesso Barocco di Milano. He provided numerous editions of 17th- and 18th-century music, including works by Domenico Scarlatti, Vivaldi, Pergolesi and Porpora, for this ensemble as well as for Italian and foreign record companies, theatres and musical establishments. He has written on the history of music from the Renaissance to the 20th century, taught and lectured in many universities in Europe and America, organized musicological conferences in Italy and abroad and worked with Swiss and Italian radio. He is a member of the editorial committees for the critical editions of the works of Pergolesi, Vivaldi and Verdi and has been on the editorial board of the Rivista italiana di musicologia (1977–85). He is also the director of several Italian anthologies and an adviser to the Ricordi publishing company and to the La Scala theatre. From 1966 to 1972 he was a member of the council of the Società Italiana di Musicologia.

WRITINGS

'Falsi pergolesiani: dagli apocrifi ai ritratti', Il convegno musicale, i (1964), 133–42
'Un'inedita testimonianza settecentesca sull'ospedale veneziano della Pietà', Il convegno musicale, i (1964), 237–55
'Dante e la musica del Cinquecento', Chigiana, xxii, new ser. ii (1965), 257–75
'Linee di una storia della critica pergolesiana', Il convegno musicale, ii (1965), 13–43
'Voltaire e la musica', Quaderni della RaM, no.3 (1965), 87–99
'Alcuni falsi autografi pergolesiani', RIM, i (1966), 32–48
'Le messe di Giovanni Battista Pergolesi: problemi di cronologia e d'attribuzione', AnMc, no.3 (1966), 65–79
'Uno sconosciuto intermezzo di Giovanni Battista Pergolesi', CHM, iv (1966), 79–91
'Le sonate per cembalo e organo di Giovanni Battista Pescetti', Chigiana, xxiii, new ser. iii (1966), 89–108
'Appunti critici sui concerti di Franesco Durante', Chigiana, xxiv, new ser. iv (1967),145–65
'Giuseppe Riva e il suo Avviso ai compositori e ai cantanti', AnMc, no.4 (1967), 112–23
'Gian Francesco Busenello e il libretto della Incoronazione di Poppea', Claudio Monteverdi e il suo tempo: Venice, Mantua and Cremona 1968, 81–102
'Aspetti gluckiani nell'ultimo Hasse', Chigiana, xxix–xxx, new ser. ix–x (1972–3), 309–29
'Gian Francesco Malipiero e la tradizione musicale italiana', Quadrivium, xiv (1973), 412–32
Macbeth: un'opera sperimentale (Milan, 1975)
Splendori e miserie della ragione (Milan, 1976)
ed.: Sylvano Bussotti e il suo teatro (Milan, 1976) ed.: Al gran sole carico d'amore: per un nuovo teatro musicale (Milan, 1977, 2/1978) [incl. 'Sulla musica di Al gran sole carico d'amore', 57–63]
'Due volti di Ifigenia', Chigiana, xxxiv, new ser. xiv (1977), 165–84
'Gian Francesco Malipieri e la tradizione musicale italiana', Omaggio a Malipiero, ed. M. Messinis (Florence, 1977), 131–52
'L'opera a Napoli nel Settecento', Storia dell'opera, ed. A. Basso and G. Barblan (Turin, 1977), 237–332
'Prolegomeni a una lettura della Sonnambula', Il melodramma italiano dell'Ottocento: studi e ricerche per Massimo Mila, ed. G. Pestelli (Turin, 1977), 319–50
ed., with M.T. Muraro: Antonio Vivaldi da Venezia all'Europa (Milan, 1978) [incl. 'Attualità di Vivaldi', 80–89]
'Note in margine a una lettura dell'Olimpiade', Vivaldi veneziano europeo: Venice 1978, 155–81
Il palazzo incantato: studi sulla tradizione del melodramma dal barocco al romanticismo (Fiesole, 1979)
'La "Generazione dell'Ottanta" e il mito della musica italiana', Musica italiana del primo Novecento: Florence 1980, 83–96
ed.: Antonio Planelli: Dell'opera in musica (Florence, 1981)
'Observations on the Genesis of Verdi's Macbeth', 'The Macbeth Scala Libretto: a Genetic Edition', Verdi's Macbeth: a Sourcebook, ed. D. Rosen and A. Porter (New York, 1981), 156–73, 306–38
'Strutture musicali del "Torneo notturno"', G.F. Malipiero e le nuove forme della musica europea: Reggio nell'Emilia 1982, 66–82
ed.: Andrea Gabrieli e il suo tempo: Venice 1985
'Aspetti in ombra dell'esperienza teatrale', Scarlatti: un musicista, un teatro, il territorio, Teatro Massimo, Quaderni, Anno Europeo della Musica (Palermo, 1985), 31–44
'Vocalita e strumentalismo nell'esperienza compositiva di Domenico Scarlatti', Europäisches Jahr der Musik '85: Internationales Musikfest Stuttgart (Stuttgart, 1985), 83–93 [Programme book]
'Pergolesi tra mito e storia', Pergolesi, ed. F. Degrada and others (Naples, 1986), 9–16
ed.: Studi Pergolesiani/Pergolesi Studies I (Florence, 1986)
'Pergolesi, il marchese Pianetti e il Conservatorio di S. Maria di Loreto su alcune relazioni tra Jesi e Napoli nel primo Settecento', 'Lo Stabat Mater di Pergolesi e la parafrasi Tilge Höchster meine Sünden di Johann Sebastian Bach', Studi Pergolesiani II: New York 1986, 20–48, 155–84
'La commedia per musica a Napoli nella prima metà del Settecento: una ricerca di base', IMSCR XIV: Bologna 1987, 263–74
'Note filologiche in margine all'edizione critica delle Cantate di Antonio Vivaldi', Nuovi studi vivaldiani: Venice 1987, 355–85
'"Scuola napoletana" e "Opera napoletana": nascita, sviluppo e prospettive di un concetto storiografico', Il Teatro di San Carlo 1737–1987, ii: L'opera e il ballo, ed. B. Cagli and A. Ziino (Naples, 1987), 9–20
'I molti volti di "Idomeneo"', Musica senza aggettivi: studi per Fedele d'Amico, ed. A. Ziino (Florence, 1991), 197–217
'Riflessioni sul Don Giovanni di Mozart', Intorno a Massimo Mila: Empoli 1991, 65–85
'Luigi Boccherini e la musica strumentale dei maestri italiani in Europa fra Sette e Ottocento', Chigiana, xliii, new ser. xxiii (1993), 363–75
'Lo frate 'nnamorato e l'estetica della commedia musicale napoletana', Napoli el il teatro musicale in Europa tra Sette e Ottocento: studi in onore di Friedrich Lippmann, ed. B.M. Antolini and W. Witzenmann (Florence, 1993), 21–35
'Don Giovanni a Napoli', Don Giovanni: Il convitato di pietra (Naples, 1995), 207–23
'"Die Strahlen der Sonne vertreiben die Nacht": sul Flauto magico di Mozart' (Milan, 1995)
'Les trois comédies goldoniennes de Gian Francesco Malipiero', Musiques Goldoniennes: hommage à Jacques Joly (Paris, 1995), 197–205
'Amor vuol sofferenza di Leonardo Leo', Amor sacro e amor profano: Leonardo Leo e la cultura musicale napoletana del '700, ed. P. Pellegrino (Lecce, 1996)
'Mozart, la maschera, la musica', Mozart Studien, vi (1996), 43–58
'Tre "lettere amorose" di Domenico Scarlatti', Saggiatore musicale, iv (1997), 271–316

EDITIONS

Francesco Durante: Concerto per clavicembalo e archi (Milan, 1969)
Nicola Porpora: Concerto per violoncello (Milan, 1970)
Antonio Vivaldi: Kyrie (Milan, 1971)
Antonio Vivaldi: Nisi Dominus (Milan, 1971)
Antonio Vivaldi: Lauda Jerusalem (Milan, 1973)
Giovanni Battista Pergolesi: Domine ad adjuvandum me festina (Milan, 1978)
Francesco Durante: Sonate per cembalo divise in studii e divertimenti (Milan, 1978)
Giovanni Battista Pergolesi: Confitebor tibi, Domine (Milan, 1979)
Giuseppe Sarti: Tre sonate per il cembalo (Milan, 1979)
Dominico Scarlatti: La Dirindina (Milan, 1985)
Antonio Vivaldi: Tutte le cantata (Milan, 1997) [3 vols.]

CAROLYN GIANTURCO/TERESA M. GIALDRONI

De Grandis, Renato (b Venice, 24 Oct 1927). Italian composer. He studied composition and musicology with Malipiero in his native city until 1951, and attended masterclasses in Siena. In 1945 he won the Italian radio prize, and in 1953 the national first prize for composition. He lived in Darmstadt from 1959 until 1981, when he moved to Brussels. During the 1980s he travelled widely, in southern India especially. He also became interested in theosophy, founding a centre for theosophical studies in Cervignano (1991) before returning to live in Darmstadt. He has also taught at the conservatories of Brescia and Trent.

De Grandis's works from 1956 onwards involved serial and aleatory procedures. His research into Italian and Dutch vocal polyphony of the 15th and 16th centuries (in particular the works of his ancestors, the two Vincenzos de Grandis) has also been an important influence on his own compositions. While his orchestral music, especially the three works of the 'Memory' cycle (Memory of the World, 1976; Memory of the Fire, 1985; Memory of the Pure Land, 1996), have attracted international attention, music drama is the focal point of his output. In his first performed opera, Il cieco di Hyuga (1959), complex polyphony, providing a kind of acoustic outline of the imaginary musical space, is combined with aleatory techniques in the handling of the four soloists and the small instrumental ensemble. More traditional are the operatic farces Gloria al re (1962) and Das wahrhaftige Ende des Don Giovanni (1972), in which De Grandis derives elements of plot and techniques from opera buffa and combines them skilfully, and sometimes ironically, with 20th-century theatrical and musical techniques.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Il cieco di Hyuga (chbr op, after Noh), 1959, as Der Blinde von Yuga, WDR, 1964, stage, Bonn, 1969; Gloria al re (farsa, 3, De Grandis, after Cervantes and H.C. Andersen), 1962, as Er lebe der König, Kiel, 1967; Das wahrhaftige Ende des Don Giovanni (farsa, 1, De Grandis), 1972, Bonn, 1973; Der Nachtwandler, scenic cant., 1974; Senda e l'unicorno (op, 1), 1996

Orch: Il canto del tempo, 1945; 3 Orchesterstücke, 1957–60; Cadore, 1961–2; Scotter Sud-Est, chbr orch, 1961; 3 canzoni da battello, ob, hn, hp, cel, prepared pf, str, 1966–7; La Rossiniana, 1968; Arlecchiana, 1969–71; Memory of the World, 1976; Melek nato, dal cuore luminoso I, fl, str, 1977 [from solo fl piece]; 3 sinfonische Präludien, 1981–2; Memory of the Fire, 1985; Conc., str, 1994; Serenade, str, 1994; Memory of the Pure Land, 1996; Sinfonische Variationen, 1996

Chbr: Studi, fl, pf, 1960; Canti sulle pause, vn, trbn, sax, cel, vib, 2 perc, 1961; Melek nato, dal cuore luminoso II, fl, vn, va, vc, gui, pf, 1977 [from solo fl piece]; Concerto di concerti, fl, cl, va, vc, db, gui, pf, perc, 1978–9; Rapsodie, bn, pf, 1984; Fantasia elegiaca, vc, pf, 1995; Il trillo dell'angelo, vn, pf, 1995

Pf Sonatas: no.1, 1950, no.2, *c*1952, no.3, 1953, no.4, 1954, no.5, *c*1956, no.6 'Hommage à J.S. Bach', 1958, no.7 (Rosenkreuzer Sonate no.1), 1972, no.8 (Rosenkreuzer Sonate no.2), 1975, no.9 (Rosenkreuzer Sonate no.3), 1976–8, no.10, 1980, no.11, 1981, no.12, 1985

Other solo inst: 4 espressioni, pf, 1957; 3 toccate, pf, 1968–70; Fantasien, pf, 1969; Serenata no.2, vc, 1969; Melek nato, dal cuore luminoso, fl, 1977; Toccate e fantasie I–V, pf, 1979–80; 3 elegie, pf, 1985; 2 preludi, cl, 1985; Tagebuch der Wandlungen, pf, 1985; 3 nocturnes, pf, 1986–94; Toccate e fantasie, pf: VI, 1995, VII, 1996

Choral: La prigionia di Prometheo (Aeschylus), male chorus, brass, str, 2 pf, perc, 1953; Storia marina (cant., It. folk texts), S, T, B, chorus, orch, 1966; 3 pezzi sacri, 32vv, 1968; Serenata no.3, B, chorus, mand, hp, hpd, 1969; In resurrectione Domini sequentia, T, mixed chorus, org, 1974; Le vocali madrigali (textless), 1985

Solo vocal (for 1v, pf unless otherwise stated): 5 elegie di Teognide, 1942; 7 liriche brevi (D. Valeri), 1951; 3 poesie di García Lorca, S, pf/orch, 1958; 2 poesie notturne (J.W. von Goethe, Plato), 1958; Salterio popolare I, 1966; Salterio popolare II, 1967–8; Cantata ciozata (K. Bitter), S, fl, mand, hp, 1968; Serenata no.1, S, elec org, db, perc, 1969; Kleines heidnisches Tagebuch, 1983

Principal publisher: Tonos

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DEUMM; GroveO (W. Konold)

W. Konold: 'Der Weg des Renato de Grandis zu einer neuen Kantabilität', Melos, xxxviii (1971), 1–6

W. Konold: Renato de Grandis: Outsider der Avantgarde (Darmstadt, 1977)

WULF KONOLD/R

De Grandis, Vincenzo (i) ['Il Romano'] (b Montalboddo [now Ostra], Marche, 1577; d probably Rome, 18 March 1646). Italian composer and singer. Ordained probably in 1599 or 1600, from August to 25 November 1605 he was maestro di cappella at Santo Spirito in Sassia, Rome. He joined the papal choir as an alto on 28 October 1605 and in 1624 and 1625 served as its maestro di cappella under Pope Urban VIII. His known output is confined to sacred music and consists of psalms and Marian antiphons, some for double choir, and concertato motets. His eight-voice Salve regina (RISM 1615[1]) shows an assured composer using a wide range of textures. The Eastertide motet De ore prudentis (1623[2]) also shows a good sense of textural variety in its four-part (SATB) scoring. Some of De Grandis's psalms and motets of 1624 were attacked by Filippo Kesperle (a pseudonym, perhaps for Romano Micheli) in 1625 for a quantity of errors, which rendered them 'repellent to the sound principles of music'; this was seen as particularly deplorable in a composer who, as maestro of the papal chapel, should have been upholding the laws of strict counterpoint.

WORKS

Sacri cantiones, 2–5vv, liber I (Rome, 1621[7])

Psalmi ad Vesperas et motecta, 8vv … cum Litaniis BVM, liber I (Rome, 1624) [1604 edn cited in RISM never existed]; some pieces pubd in score by F. Kersperle (Venice, 1625) as Alcuni salmi et motetti

9 motets in 1615[1], 1616[1], 1618[3], 1623[2]; ps in 1625[1]

Motet, 4 hymns, 2 pss, I-Rvat; Motet, D-Bsb

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Celani: 'I cantori della Cappella Pontificia nei secoli XVI–XVIII', RMI, xiv (1907), 752–90, esp. 768

A. Allegra: 'La cappella musicale di S. Spirito in Saxia di Roma', NA, xvii (1940), 26–38, esp. 30

H.-W. Frey: 'Die Gesänge der Sixtinischen Kapelle an den Sonntagen und hohen Kirchenfesten des Jahres 1616', Mélanges Eugène Tisserant (Vatican City, 1964), 395–437

K. Fischer: 'Einige satztechnische Aspekte der Römischen mehrchörigen Kirchenmusik nach 1600 im Lichte einer unbeachten Quelle des frühen siebzehnten Jahrhunderts', AnMc, no.17 (1976), 23–53

F. Hammond: Music and Spectacle in Baroque Rome (New Haven, CT, 1994), 140, 165–7

JEROME ROCHE/NOEL O'REGAN

De Grandis, Vincenzo (ii) (b Montalboddo [now Ostra], Marche, 6 April 1631; d Montalboddo, 4 Aug 1708). Italian composer. In 1667 he entered the service of Duke Johann Friedrich of Brunswick at Hanover, and from 1674 to 1680 he was maestro di cappella there. Before taking up the latter appointment and while employed at Hanover, he held positions as maestro di cappella in Rome: at the Seminario Romano and at Il Gesù, 1670–71, and to the Pamphili family at S Agnese in Agone from 1672 to 1674. From 1680 to 1682 he was probably in Venice. He was maestro di cappella of the ducal court at Modena under Francesco II d'Este, 1682–3. He then returned to Montalboddo. From 1685 to 1692 he was maestro di cappella of the Santa Casa, Loreto. In 1692 he returned once again to Montalboddo, where he lived until his death.

De Grandis's first two oratorios belonged to a series of eight on the life of Moses presented at the court at Modena between 1682 and 1691. His three surviving oratorios contain stylistic features unusual for their period: both Il nascimento di Mosè (1682) and La caduta d'Adamo (1689) contain an accompanied recitative, an early use of this form; all three works contain a high percentage of both accompanied and motto arias; and they include virtually no strophic arias, which are still much in evidence in the works of contemporaries such as G.P. Colonna and A.M. Pacchioni.

WORKS

ORATORIOS

Il nascimento di Mosè (G.B. Giardini), Modena, 1682, I-MOe
Il matrimonio di Mosè (Giardini), Modena, 1684, MOe [lib entitled Ritirata di Mosè]
La caduta d'Adamo (C. Nencini), ?Modena, 1689, MOe [?perf. first in Loreto]

OTHER WORKS

4 cant., 1v, bc, all in MOe: L'Armellino; Ganimede alla danza; Le lagrime d'Ero; Quando sperai goder
3 cant., Vqs
2 canzonettas, 1670[3]; 2 motets, 1672[1], 1675[2]
1 canzonetta; 2 motets: MOe
Masses, Rvat; Confitebor, Ad: according to MGG1
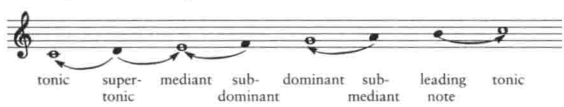
Antonino e Pompeiano (op), erroneously attrib. De Grandis, actually by A. Sartori



BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Tebaldini: L'archivio musicale della Cappella lauretana (Loreto, 1921)
T. Abbetmeyer: Zur Geschichte der Musik am Hofe in Hannover vor Agostino Steffani (1636–89) (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1931), 19, 60
E.J. Luin: Repertorio dei libri musicali di S.A.S. Francesco II d'Este nell'Archivio di stato di Modena (Florence, 1936)
H. Sievers: Die Musik in Hannover (Hanover, 1961), 50–51, 138
R. de Grandis: 'Musik in Hannover zur Leibniz-zeit', Leibniz: sein Leben, sein Wirken, seine Welt, ed. W. Totok and C. Haase (Hanover, 1966), 117–27, esp. 120–23

JULIA ANN GRIFFIN

Degree. The position of a note with reference to a scale, sometimes called a scale-step (see STUFE); the referential scale is usually assumed to be diatonic (i.e. a major or minor scale or one of the church modes). Degrees may be defined in terms of their melodic or harmonic function; that is, a melody can be described as movement from one degree to another, and harmony can be analysed by the succession of degrees in the lowest voice of a polyphonic texture or by the succession of degrees that constitute the roots of the chords which make up that texture. In harmonic analysis the degrees are most often identified by roman numerals, from I to VII. In melodic analysis no system of naming the degrees has been universally accepted, though Schenker's notation with capped arabic numerals ($\hat{1}$, $\hat{2}$, $\hat{3}$ etc.) has gained some currency.

Ex.1 Degrees of the C major scale

Notes that do not belong to the referential scale can nevertheless be described in terms of it. In C major, for instance, F♯ is the raised fourth degree, B♭ the lower (or flattened) seventh. This method of description can be applied to the notation for harmonic and melodic degrees given above (e.g. ♯IV, ♭$\hat{7}$).

The first degree of the scale is called the tonic; this is the note by which the referential scale is named. In tonal music, the next most important degree is the fifth or dominant, and the tonic and dominant may often be regarded as mutually complementary. The fourth degree is the subdominant – the inversion of the dominant, or the note to which the tonic acts as dominant. The other degrees are as follows: second, supertonic (this is the dominant of the dominant; see APPLIED DOMINANT); third, mediant; sixth, submediant; and seventh, leading note (ex.1).

WILLIAM DRABKIN

De Greef, Arthur (b Leuven, 10 Oct 1862; d Brussels, 29 Aug 1940). Belgian pianist and composer. He studied at the Brussels Conservatory with Brassin (piano), Dupont (harmony), Kufferath (fugue) and Gevaert (composition). In 1879 he won a first prize in piano at the same time as Albéniz. Following Gevaert's advice he continued his studies with Liszt in Weimar and with Saint-Saëns in Paris. In 1885 he was appointed to take charge of the piano course at the Brussels Conservatory, being named professor in 1887; from 1920 to 1930 he took a masterclass there. He was elected to the Belgian Royal Academy in 1925. De Greef was a virtuoso whose technique was graceful as well as brilliant. During the course of many tours throughout Europe he popularized the Piano Concerto of Grieg, who considered De Greef the best interpreter of his works. De Greef's repertory was extensive; in 1892 he gave recitals in Paris devoted to the history of piano music. His own thoroughly Romantic compositions are of somewhat uneven quality; they include a symphony, three symphonic poems, two piano concertos, other concertante piano music, short piano pieces and chamber works. Many are unpublished, but some have been issued by Chester, Heugel and Schott (Brussels).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Tinel: 'Arthur De Greef', Annuaire du Conservatoire royal de musique de Bruxelles, lxiii (1940)
F. Rasse: 'Notice sur Arthur De Greef', Annuaire de l'Académie royale de Belgique, cxv (1949), 3–19

HENRI VANHULST

Degtyaryov, Stepan Anikiyevich (b Borisovka, Kursk govt., 1766; d nr Kursk, 23 April/5 May 1813). Russian composer, conductor and singer. Born into a peasant family on the estate of Count Sheremet′yev, Degtyaryov was admitted at the age of seven into the count's choir school. At 15 he was taking principal roles in opera, and in 1789 he became Konzertmeister, with responsibility for vocal music. About 1790 he probably visited Italy with Giuseppe Sarti, from whom he had some musical training. There is also evidence to suggest that he undertook a period of musical study with Antonio Sapienze (1755–1829), a leading teacher at the St Petersburg theatre school and the Smolny Institute. On his return to Russia he was made Kapellmeister to Sheremet′yev's court. In 1803 he was liberated from his serfdom and moved to Moscow. Two years later he published in St Petersburg a translation of the second largest edition of Vincenzo Manfredini's Regole armoniche (Venice, 1797).

His patriotic oratorio, the first to be written by a Russian composer, appeared in 1811. Entitled Minin i Pozharsky, ili Osvobozhdeniye Moskvï ('Minin and Pozharsky, or The Liberation of Moscow'), this work traces the events leading up to 1612, when the Poles were expelled from Moscow by Russian national forces. Inspired by the war of 1812, Degtyaryov considered writing a second oratorio called Torzhestvo Rossii, ili Begstvo Napoleona ('The Triumph of Russia, or The Rout of Napoleon'), but the score was left unfinished. Because of the war he left Moscow and returned to Kursk, where he died of consumption the following year. Little is known of Degtyaryov's other creative work, since, when he moved from Borisovka to Moscow, he could not afford to transport his manuscripts and had to burn them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

IRMO

N.F. Findeyzen, ed.: Muzïkal'naya starina, iv (St Petersburg, 1907), 67–90

M.S. Druskin and Yu.V.Keldïsh, eds.: Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki 1790–1825 [Essays on the history of Russian music 1790–1825] (Leningrad, 1956), 143–67

C. Hughes: The Origin of the First Russian Patriotic Oratorio: S.A. Degtiarev's 'Minin i Pozharskii' (1811) (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1984)

GEOFFREY NORRIS

De Héman [Hémen, Le Héman]. French family of organ builders. Valéran De Héman (b Hesdin, Pas de Calais, 1584; d Paris, 1641) was a pupil and son-in-law of Crespin Carlier; he was acquainted with Mersenne, Titelouze and Charles Racquet, organist of Notre Dame. He built new organs at St Jean-le-Marché in Troyes (1610–11), at Ste Catherine, Honfleur (1612); Meaux Cathedral (1627); in Paris at St Martin-des-Champs (1618), St Jean-en-Grève (1625), St Honoré and St Thomas-du-Louvre; and at Bordeaux Cathedral (1631–3). He also carried out a large number of repairs, for example in Rouen at St Jean (1607), St Vivien (1608), St Maclou (1610–11) and the cathedral (1614); in Troyes at St Nicolas (1615–19) and St Jacques-aux-Nonnains (1623); in Bordeaux at St Seurin (1630–32); and in Paris at Notre Dame (1610, 1616), the church of the Cordeliers (1618), St Séverin (1626) and St Jacques-de-l'Hôpital (1610, 1613). Valéran was one of the greatest French organ builders of the first half of the 17th century. Pierre Thierry, Pierre Pescheur and François Ducastel were among his pupils.

Valéran's nephews François De Héman (b 1608; d Paris, 1652), Jean De Héman (b Hesdin, 1603; bur. Cherbourg, 29 Feb 1660) and Louis De Héman (1601–44) worked together. Jean restored the organs at St Germain at Châlons-sur-Marne (with Louis, 1630), at the cathedrals of Troyes (1644–5 and 1653), Le Mans (with François, 1647) and Chartres (1649), and at St Jean at Soissons (1652); he also repaired the organ at St Etienne-du-Mont, Paris (with Pierre Desenclos, 1656). He built new organs at Ivry-sur-Seine (with Louis, 1641); Mitry-Mory (with Louis, 1646–51); St Médard, Paris (with François, 1646–8); at the convents of the Cordeliers in Vire (with François and Jean de Villers, 1631) and the Augustinians in Paris (with Louis and François, 1643); at St Merri in Paris (with François, 1647–50); and at La Trinité in Cherbourg (1659, with Jacques Lefèvre, who completed it in 1661). Jean and François also worked on Valéran's organ at St Jean-le-Marché, Troyes (together in 1642, François in 1644–5 and Jean in 1654).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. de Fleury: Dictionnaire biographique des facteurs d'orgues nés ou ayant travaillé en France (Paris, 1926)

J. Martinod: Répertoire des travaux des facteurs d'orgues (Paris, 1970–76)

P. Hardouin: 'Facteurs d'orgues flamands en France sous Henri IV et Louis XIII, V: Valeran de Héman', Connaissance de l'orgue, no.9 (1974), 24–9; no.10 (1974), 18–28; nos.11–12 (1974), 27–40; no.13 (1975), 6–11; no.18 (1976), 4 [recte 24]–26

N. Dufourcq: Le livre de l'orgue français, 1589–1789, iii (Paris, 1975–8)

GUY BOURLIGUEUX

De Hen, Ferdinand Joseph (b Deurne, Antwerp, 16 Feb 1933). Belgian ethnomusicologist. After attending the Institut Universitaire des Territoires d'Outremer, Antwerp (1951–5), he studied musicology with Fellerer and Hüschen at Cologne University (1956–60), where he took the doctorate in 1960 with a dissertation on African instruments. Concurrently he did research on African and Indian music at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University (1961), and then a degree in African linguistics at the University of Leuven (1963). He has held posts as a research assistant at the museum of instruments in Brussels (1961–73), professor of the Chapelle Musicale Reine Elisabeth, Waterloo (from 1968), lecturer (1970–72) and professor (from 1972) in musicology at the State University, Ghent, and professor of the Hoger Institute of Drama, Antwerp (from 1971), and was appointed to the Peter Paul Rubens chair of the University of California, Berkeley, in 1987. He became a member of the Royal Academy of Overseas Sciences in Brussels in 1989. His main interests are the history and structure of classical European and Indian and African instruments; his publications include a book (with Roger Bragard) on the history of instruments that has been translated into several languages.

WRITINGS

Beitrag zur Kenntnis der Musikinstrumente aus Belgisch Kongo und Ruanda-Urundi (diss., U. of Cologne, 1960; Tervuren, 1960)

'Enkele Nota's over Makedonische muziekinstrumenten', Kultuurpatronen/Patterns of Culture, li (1960), 57–73

'Les tambours à fente congolais', Kultuurpatronen/Patterns of Culture, iii–iv (1961), 141–221

'Quelques notes ethnographiques sur les Ihansalen', Jb des Museums für Völkerkunde zu Leipzig, xx (Berlin, 1964), 282–318

'Statistisch onderzoek van enkele Macedonische volksliederen', RBM, xix (1965), 3–14 with R. Bragard: Les instruments de musique dans l'art et l'histoire (Brussels, 1967, 2/1971; Eng. trans., 1968)

'De Indische muziek', Indië – kunst en cultuur, ed. A. Abel (Hasselt, 1971), 189–209

'Folk Instruments of Belgium', GSJ, xxv (1972), 87–132; xxvi (1973), 86–129

'The Truchado Instrument: a Geigenwerk?', Keyboard Instruments: Studies in Keyboard Organology, ed. E.M. Ripin (Edinburgh, 1971, 2/1977), 19–28

Music in Belgium (Brussels, 1979)

'Changements techniques et coneptionnels dans la musique classique indienne actuelle: l'acculturation, gain or perte?', RBM, xxxiv–xxxv (1980–81), 234–47

'Ethnomusicology at the Crossroad', New Perspektives in Belgian Anthropology, or, The Postcolonial Awakening, ed. R. Pinxten (Göttingen, 1984), 101–11

'A Spanish Contribution to Early Baroque Organology: Fray Raymundo Truchado's Geigenwerk', España en la música de occidente: Salamanca 1985, 77–85

ed., with A.-M. Riessauw and H. Sabbe: Liber Amicorum J.L. Broeckx (Ghent, 1986) [incl. 'De Kunst van het kunstig Vervalsen', 101–11]

'La harpe de Samudragupta', Studia organologica: Festschrift für John Henry van der Meer, ed. F. Hellwig (Tutzing, 1987), 195–202

'Music in Belgium since World War II', Ars musica Denver, i (1988), 8–13

'Tohu Ubohu en Genesis van de Muziekinstrumenten tijdens de Middeleeuwen', Gentse Bijdragen tot de Kunstgeschiedenis, xxvii (1988), 21–30

'Music and Healers among the Swazi', Académie Royale des Sciences d'Outre-mer: Bulletin des seances, xxxvi (1990), 665–77

'De l'Origine des Espèces … organologiques', Gentse Bijdragen tot de Kunstgeschiedenis, xxix (1990–91), 181–99

'Trends in Ethnomusicologie', Mededelingen der Zittingen, xxxix/2 (1993), 187–95

SYLVIE JANSSENS

Dehesse, Jean-Baptiste François (b The Hague, 1705; d Paris, 22 May 1779). French choreographer. See BALLET, §1(iii).

Dehmel, Richard (b Wendisch-Hermsdorf, 18 Nov 1863; d Hamburg, 8 Feb 1920). German poet and dramatist.

He studied philosophy and science in Berlin and Leipzig, receiving his doctorate in 1887. He first achieved widespread popularity with the collection of poetry Aber die Liebe (1893), which served as a model for a generation of poets. In 1895 he helped found the journal Pan, with O.J. Bierbaum and others. A year later, he achieved even greater popularity when his collection Weib und Welt was condemned for propagating improper religious and moral views. He enjoyed great fame and prestige in Germany as an anti-naturalist and modern lyricist; he also edited the works of Detlev von Liliencron. His first success in the theatre was the première of Die Menschenfreunde in 1917, but after his death in 1920 he was quickly forgotten.

Dehmel had an astounding influence on German and Austrian composition in the first quarter of the twentieth century. Pfitzner, Schoenberg, Strauss, Webern and many others were repeatedly drawn to his richly symbolic poems, with their highly aestheticized lyrics, themes of eros, beauty, body culture, and art, and his expression of feeling. The link between Dehmel's literary Jugendstil and the Second Viennese School is so strong that one can almost speak of a Jugendstil in music in the works to Dehmel by these composers. His published Briefe (Berlin, 1922–3) include letters to Schoenberg, Mahler, Pfitzner, Reger and Strauss.

WORKS

Gesammelte Werke, 10 vols. (Berlin, 1916–)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Gerlach: 'Die Dehmel-Lieder von Anton Webern: Musik und Sprache in der Übergang zur Atonalität', Jb des Staatlichen Instituts für Musikforschung (1971), 45–100

W. Frisch: 'Schoenberg and the Poetry of Richard Dehmel', Journal of the Arnold Schoenberg Institute, xi/2 (1986), 137–79

W. Frisch: 'Music and Jugendstil', Critical Inquiry, no.xvii (1990), 138–61

M. Sichardt: 'Zur Bedeutung der Dichtung Richard Dehmels für die Liedkomposition um 1900', Neue Musik und Tradition: Festschrift Rudolf Stephan, eds. J. Kuckertz and others (Laaber, 1990), 365–88

P. Andraschke: 'Alexander Zemlinskys Dehmel-Kompositionen', Alexander Zemlinsky: Ästhetik, Stil und Umfeld, ed. H. Krones (Vienna, 1995), 145–61

TAMARA LEVITZ

Dehn, Siegfried (Wilhelm) (b Altona, 24 Feb 1799; d Berlin, 12 April 1858). German theorist, editor, teacher and librarian. The son of a banker, he learnt the cello as a boy and then studied law in Leipzig with the intention of entering the diplomatic service; he also took music lessons with J.A. Dröbs. Moving to Berlin in 1823, he was attached to the Swedish Embassy; during his service there he developed his interest in musical research. On the failure of the family bank in 1830, he was left without means of support and decided to devote himself to music: he had been studying with Bernhard Klein, and soon made himself a widely respected theorist and teacher. On Meyerbeer's recommendation he was in 1842 appointed custodian of the music section of the royal library, and immediately set about bringing it into order, cataloguing the collection and making copious additions to it from libraries all over Prussia. Among the collections he helped to bring into the library were those of Anton Schindler and Georg Pölchau; Dehn had long known the latter, which was notable for its manuscripts of Keiser and of J.S. and C.P.E. Bach. He was editor of Cäcilia in succession to Gottfried Weber from 1842 to 1848, and professor at the Royal Academy of the Arts from 1849. His papers are preserved in the Staatsbibliothek in Berlin.

As an editor, Dehn made a pioneering contribution to scholarship. On the death of Griepenkerl in 1849 he took part in the editing of Bach's instrumental music for the Peters Edition (volumes xv–xxiii), being responsible for, among other works, the first publication of the Brandenburg Concertos. He also edited a large number of Lassus motets, and published a 12-volume Sammlung älterer Musik aus dem 16. und 17. Jahrhundert. He re-edited Marpurg's Abhandlung von der Fuge (Leipzig, 1858), and translated Henry Delmotte's Notice biographique sur Roland Delattre in 1837: he was preparing a larger work on the subject at the time of his death. He provided much material for his friend Fétis for use in the Biographie universelle. Dehn carried over his scholarly and historical interests into his work as editor of Cäcilia. As a teacher, Dehn was widely respected and sought after, his pupils including Cornelius, Kiel, Kullak, Anton Rubinstein, Glinka and many more. 'There is no doubt that I am more indebted to Dehn than to all my other teachers', wrote Glinka in his autobiography. 'He ... not only put my knowledge in order, but also my ideas on art in general.' Glinka remained friendly with Dehn, and late in life resumed studies with him, in the hope of finding a way of reconciling Italian Renaissance contrapuntal techniques with the musical style of the Russian Orthodox Church.

WRITINGS

Biographische Notiz über Roland de Lattre, bekannt unter dem Namen: Orland de Lassus (Berlin, 1837) [trans. of H. Delmotte: Notice biographique sur Roland Delattre, Valenciennes, 1836]

Theoretisch-praktische Harmonielehre (Berlin, 1840, 2/1860)

Analysen dreier Fugen aus Joh. Seb. Bach's Wohltemperirtem Clavier und einer Vokal-Doppelfuge A.M. Bononcini's (Leipzig, 1858)

ed.: F.W. Marpurg: Abhandlung von der Fuge (Leipzig, 1858)

Lehre vom Contrapunkt, dem Canon und der Fuge (Berlin, 1859, rev. 2/1883 by B. Scholz)

EDITIONS

Sammlung älterer Musik aus dem 16ten und 17ten Jahrhundert, i–xii (Berlin, 1837)

J.S. Bach: Oeuvres complets, xv–xxiii (Leipzig, 1837–50) [inst works; for Peters edn]

R. de Lassus: Psalmos VII poenitentiales (Berlin, 1838)

Other edns of works by Buxtehude, Kreutzer, Lassus, Walther

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB

L. Rellstab: 'Siegfried Wilhelm Dehn', Neue Berliner Musikzeitung, xii (1858), 137–9

J. Wolf: Zur Geschichte der Musikabteilung zur Staatsbibliothek (Berlin, 1929)

K.-H. Köhler: 'Die Editionstätigkeit der Musikabteilung in Geschichte und Gegenwart', BMw, iv (1962), 3–16

D. Brown: Mikhail Glinka: a Biographical and Critical Study (London, 1974/R)

F.W. Riedel: 'Siegfried Wilhelm Dehns Besuche in Wien 1841 bis 1846', Beiträge zur Musikdokumentation: Franz Grasberger zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. G. Brosche (Tutzing, 1975), 391–404

C. Dahlhaus: 'Geschichte als Problem der Musiktheorie: über einige Berliner Musiktheoretiker des 19. Jahrhunderts', Studien zur Musikgeschichte Berlins im frühen 19. Jahrhundert (Regensburg, 1980), 405–13

K. Korableva: 'Michail Iwanowitsch Glinka und Siegfried Wilhelm Dehn: Glinkas Studien in Berlin', Studien zur Berliner Musikgeschichte: vom 18. Jahrhundert bis zur Gegenwart (Berlin, 1989), 127–32

P. Thüringer: 'Friedrich Kiel und seine Beziehungen zur Königlichen Bibliothek in Berlin', Friedrich-Kiel-Studien, i (Cologne, 1993), 25–35

C. Heyter-Rauland: 'Neues zur Cäcilia, eine Zeitschrift für die musikalische Welt', FAM, xli (1994), 349–57

JOHN WARRACK/JAMES DEAVILLE

Deiber. See TEYBER family.

Deichel. German family of musicians.

(1) Johann Dominicus Deichel (b Eggenfelden, 4 July 1658; d ? Altötting, 10 Jan 1713). Composer and organist. He was 'philosophiae studiosus' in Ingolstadt from 1680 to 1682 and organist at the church of St Moritz. While in Ingolstadt he composed the dramas Hostia piacularis a Davide (1680) and Sigismundus (1681) for the university theatre. He joined the Munich court orchestra about 1683 and became court organist in Munich on 1 April 1685. From 1682 to 1683 and possibly also from 1689 to 1691 he studied the organ and composition with Johann Caspar Kerll. For Jesuit grammar schools he composed the dramas Sagittae parvulorum (1686, Landshut), Ludovicus Grittus (1687) and Julianus (1694, Augsburg), all performed in September. For Munich he produced three sacred allegories, Vera felicitas (1688), Maria Magdalena oder Das verlorene und wiedergefundene Schäflein (1701) and Ein blutiges Seelen-Bad (1710); the music for all is lost. During the Austrian occupation of Bavaria, Deichel was appointed Kapellmeister and first organist at the Heilige Kapelle, Altötting, on 8 June 1701. Two of his compositions for the Jesuit college in Munich were published: Magis et minus, Consideratio IX in Franciscus Lang's Theatrum solitudinis asceticae (Munich, 1717) and Sacra Venatio, Consideratio XI in Lang's Theatrum affectuum humanorum (Munich, 1717). They are sacred cantatas in the tradition of Kerll, and show marked Venetian operatic influence.

(2) Anton Deichel (*b c*1662; d Eichstätt, 27 May 1712). Composer. He was a brother of (1) Johann Dominicus Deichel, with whom he matriculated at the university in Ingolstadt on 6 November 1680. In 1682 he applied unsuccessfully for a position as organist at St Moritz, Ingolstadt. In 1689 he was a 'Musicus' in Eichstätt, and in the following year he became court musician and gentleman of the chamber to the prince-bishop there. He was appointed vice-Kapellmeister in 1705; in 1711 he was pensioned. Between 1689 and 1711 he composed 29 comedies for the Jesuit grammar schools in Augsburg, Eichstätt, Ingolstadt, Landshut, Neuburg an der Donau and Regensburg, but none has survived (see Schlecht and Littger). His only extant works are Schola poenitentia, Consideratio XVIII in Franciscus Lang's Theatrum affectuum humanorum (Munich, 1717), written for the Munich Jesuits, and an aria (D-Eu and Mbs); they are similar in style to J.D. Deichel's extant works. 13 church compositions were at St Moritz, Ingolstadt in 1710 (see Hofmann).

(3) Joseph Christoph Deichel (b Eichstätt, 30 Dec 1695; d Eichstätt, 2 Aug 1753). Composer and violinist, son of (2) Anton Deichel. In 1725 he was court musician to the prince-bishop of Eichstätt; he was still a violinist at the court in 1747. None of his works has survived. Several of them were performed at Eichstätt: the comedy In funere vita seu Ulferus rex (1725), the operetta Antonio tre volte glorioso giubileo prete infulato (first performed 8 September 1729), written for Prince-Bishop Johann Anton II of Freiberg, Antonio (1749) and the three Jesuit dramas, Punita negligentia (1734), Sacra lectio (1735) and Heylsame Betrachtung (1745).

(4) Joseph Anton Deichel (b Eichstätt, 17 March 1699; d Eichstätt, 3 April 1778). Composer, younger son of (2) Anton Deichel. He devoted himself to the church, and was ordained on 22 May 1722. In 1736 he was chamber musician to the prince-bishop; he also held various ecclesiastical appointments at Eichstätt. None of his theatrical works, composed for the prince-bishop's court, has survived: Voto musico (4 Dec 1736), Il Santo Alessio (1741), Nova operetta poetica e musicale (September 1749), Le bellezze, che sono né tre pomi d'Antonio (December 1752), Celebratio Deo sacri Eustetensi Hiimenaei (1758), Ricordanza della passione de servatore Jesu (1762) and Il encelado ovvero Finta nuove mascerata di Carnovale (1768). He also wrote poems dedicated to the prince-bishops of Eichstätt (see Suttner).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ
F.M. Rudhart: Geschichte der Oper am Hofe zu München, i (Freising, 1865)
J.G. Suttner: Bibliotheca Eystettensis Dioecesana (Eichstätt, 1866), esp. 48–62
R. Schlecht: 'Lexikon der Musiker Eichstaetts', Musikgeschichte der Stadt Eichstaett (MS, D-Es, X 342, 1883), 19ff and suppl., 11 [with list of works]
A. Dürrwächter: 'Das Jesuitentheater in Eichstätt', Sammelblatt des historischen Vereins für Eichstätt, x (1895), 58; xi (1896), 116–17
J. Sax: 'Musik und Theater in der fürstbischöflichen Residenzstadt Eichstätt bis zum Jahre 1802', Jahresbericht des historischen Vereins für Mittelfranken, xlvi (1898), 15, 19
M. Moesmang: Geschichte der Altöttinger Stifts- und Kapellmusik (Altötting, 1910), 42–3
S. Hofmann: 'Organisten', Sammelblatt des Historischen Vereins Ingolstadt, xciii (1984), 83–96
K.W. Littger: Musik in Eichstätt (Tutzing, 1988)
C. Schweisthal: Die Eichstätter Hofkapelle bis zur ihrer Auflösung 1802: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Hofmusik an Süddeutschen Residenzen (Tutzing, 1997)

ROBERT MÜNSTER

Deilich, Philipp. See DULICHIUS, PHILIPP.

Deiss [Deus], Michael (*b c*1552; fl 1564–8). Austrian composer. He is first recorded in 1564 as a chorister in the imperial Hofkapelle at Vienna. After the death of the Emperor Ferdinand I in July that year, he joined the Kapelle of Archduke Ferdinand Karl at Graz, after which he is not heard of again. On Ferdinand's death he wrote a motet to the text Quis dabit oculis fontem lacrimarum (ed. in CMM, lxvi, 1974); that this was also set, on the same occasion, by Jean de Chaynée may suggest that Chaynée was his teacher. His only surviving works are 14 motets (including Quis dabit) in the Novi thesauri musici (RISM 1568[2-6]). Their inclusion by the editor, Pietro Giovanelli, indicates his regard for the young composer; they are of interest less for their inherent worth than for showing that a choirboy could be represented by so many pieces in an important anthology.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Smijers: 'Die kaiserliche Hofmusik-Kapelle von 1543–1619', SMw, vi (1919), 139–86; vii (1920), 102–42; viii (1921), 176–204; ix (1922), 43–81; also pubd separately (Vienna, 1922)
H. Federhofer: Musikpflege und Musiker am Grazer Habsburgerhof der Erzherzöge Karl und Ferdinand von Innerösterreich (1564–1619) (Mainz, 1967)
W. Pass: Musik und Musiker am Hof Maximilians II. (Tutzing, 1980)

ALBERT DUNNING

Deiss, Raymond (d 1944/5). French music publisher. By acquiring the catalogues of Hachette and especially Benoît, he became the publisher of operas by Auber and Meyerbeer. These, and exclusive rights to Plaisir d'amour, enabled Deiss to publish much modern music including works by Aubert, Harsányi, Koechlin, Schmitt and, in the 1930s and 40s, Rieti, Mihalovici and Milhaud. Though opera, song and piano works formed the bulk of his catalogue, Deiss also published some symphonic and instrumental music, dance music, and music for the cinema and the music hall. Information on his life is lacking, as are precise details of his publishing house, but it is known that he was arrested by the Vichy authorities in France on account of his Jewish ancestry and sent to a German concentration camp where he was executed in 1944 or 1945. His catalogue was bought by Francis Salabert in 1946.

JEREMY DRAKE

Deissner. See THAYSSNER, ZACHARIAS.

Deiters, Hermann (Clemens Otto) (b Bonn, 27 June 1833; d Koblenz, 11 May 1907). German writer on music. He received doctorates in law (1854) and philology (1858) and then taught at Bonn (1858), Düren (1869), Konitz (1874), Posen (1877), Bonn again (1883) and Koblenz (1885–1903). He contributed to Bagge's Deutsche Musikzeitung (1861–2), and especially to the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (1863–82) and Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft (1888–93); among his most important essays were those on Beethoven's dramatic compositions (1865), Schumann as writer (1865), Otto Jahn (1870), the Beethoven centenary celebration in Bonn (1871) and Max Bruch's Odysseus (1873). He also wrote many articles on Brahms, whom he knew personally and with whom he exchanged letters; he published the first authoritative Brahms biography (1880), which is useful as a record of contemporary opinions of the composer whom Deiters declared to be 'by far the greatest composer of our time'. This opinion was part of his firm stance against Wagner and the 'new German School'. He also edited the third (1889–91) and fourth (1905–7) editions of Jahn's W.A. Mozart. His most important work, however, was the revision and editing of Thayer's Life of Beethoven, which he translated into German for its first publication. According to Henry Krehbiel's introduction to the English edition, Thayer encouraged Deiters to take considerable latitude in his handling of documentary material through his own judgment. Another work of importance was a study of Aristides Quintilianus (1870).

WRITINGS

'L. van Beethoven's dramatische Compositionen: König Stephan, Die Ruinen von Athen', AMZ, new ser., iii (1865), 105–11, 121–8, 145–50, 161–5

'R. Schumann als Schriftsteller', AMZ, new ser., iii (1865), 761–8, 777–80, 793–801

Ludwig van Beethoven's Leben: nach dem Original-Manuscript deutsch bearbeitet, i (Berlin, 1866, rev. 3/1917 by H. Riemann); ii (Berlin, 1872, enlarged 2/1910 by Riemann from Deiters's material, 3/1922); iii (Berlin, 1879, rev., enlarged 3–5/1923 by Riemann from Deiters's material); iv, ed. Riemann (Leipzig, 1907, 2–4/1923); v, ed. Riemann (Leipzig, 1908, 2–4/1923) [edn and trans. of A.W. Thayer: Life of Beethoven]

De Aristidis Quintiliani doctrinae harmonicae fontibus(Bonn, 1870)

'Otto Jahn', AMZ, new ser., v (1870), 217–19, 225–8

'Die Säkularfeier des Geburtstages Ludwig van Beethoven in seiner Vaterstadt Bonn am 20, 21, 22, 23 Aug. 1871', AMZ, new ser., vi (1871), 581–6, 595–601

'Odysseus . . . von Max Bruch', AMZ, new ser., viii (1873), 309–12, 325–8, 340–43, 357–60, 374–7, 390–93, 440–43, 452–6

'Die Familie van Beethoven in Bonn und ihre Beziehungen', AMZ, new ser., xv (1880), 481–4

Studien zu den griechischen Musikern: über das Verhältnis des Martianus Capella zu Aristides Quintilianus (Posen, 1880–81)

Johannes Brahms, Sammlung musikalischer Vorträge, xxiii–xxiv, lxiii (Leipzig, 1880, 2/1898; Eng. trans., 1888)

'Die Briefe Beethovens an Bettina von Arnim', AMZ, new ser., xvii (1882), 769–75, 789–95, 809–16

Ludwig van Beethoven: biographische Skizze, Sammlung musikalischer Vorträge, xli–xliii (Leipzig, 1882)

'Briefe Beethoven's an Ferdinand Ries', VMw, iv (1888), 83–98

ed: O. Jahn: W.A. Mozart (Leipzig, 3/1889–91, 4/1905–7)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Asbach: 'Hermann Deiters (1833–1907)', Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Alterthumswissenschaft, cxli (1908), 127–49 [incl. list of writings]

W. Altmann, ed.: Johannes Brahms: Briefwechsel, iii (Berlin, 1908, 2/1913), 112–30

H.E. Krehbiel, ed.: A.W. Thayer: The Life of Ludwig van Beethoven (New York, 1921/R) [trans. of Deiters's edn; details of collab. with Deiters in preface]

W. Kahl: 'Hermann Deiters', ZMw, xv (1932–3), 394–403

W. Kahl: 'Deiters, Hermann', Rheinische Musiker, i, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1960), 72–81

I. Fellinger: 'Das Brahms-Bild der "Allgemeinen musikalischen Zeitung" (1863–1882)', Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musikkritik, ed. H. Becker (Regensburg, 1965), 27–54

N. Meurs: Neue Bahnen? Aspekte der Brahms-Rezeption 1853–1868 (Cologne, 1996)

J.A. FULLER MAITLAND/JOHN WARRACK

DeJohnette, Jack (b Chicago, 9 Aug 1942). American jazz drummer and pianist. He began playing the piano at the age of four, and when he was about 18 took up the drums. While in junior college he became involved with future members of the free-jazz Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians; he was also profoundly impressed by an opportunity to perform with fellow African American John Coltrane in the early 1960s. In April 1966 he moved to New York, where he again performed with Coltrane and often appeared with Jackie McLean (1966–9). After recording and touring worldwide with the popular Charles Lloyd Quartet (1966–8), in 1969 he joined Miles Davis's group, where he replaced Tony Williams and took part in the pathbreaking recording sessions of that year for the album Bitches Brew (Col.). DeJohnette left Davis in mid-1972 and continued to be active in jazz-rock groups, including several under his own leadership; he also worked with Dave Holland in John Abercrombie's trio Gateway (1975–7). From that time his own groups Directions and Special Edition (New Directions, 1978, ECM; Special Edition, 1979, ECM), which included such talents as David Murray and Arthur Blythe, received high critical acclaim. From 1983 he toured and recorded in Keith Jarrett's trio (with the double bass player Gary Peacock), playing standard jazz and pop tunes. During the 1990s he performed and recorded in groups along with Mike Brecker, Pat Metheny, Holland and Herbie Hancock (The New Standard, 1996, Verve).

DeJohnette is a powerful and widely admired drummer. In the 1980s, however, he resumed playing the piano, revealing a skill and creativity to rival his drumming. From 1975 he has been a director, with his wife, of the Creative Music Agency in Woodstock, New York, a non-profit-making enterprise for the management, performing and teaching of jazz, and has published a manual, The Art of Modern Jazz Drumming (New York, 1981).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. DeJohnette: 'Jack DeJohnette Introduces his New Group, Compost', Down Beat, xxxviii/16 (1971), 19

J. DeJohnette: 'DeJohnette on DeJohnette', Down Beat, xlii/4 (1975), 16

B. Bennett: ' Jack DeJohnette's "Directions": Experimental Inheritors', Down Beat, xliv/6 (1977), 12

C. Stern: 'Jack DeJohnette: South Side to Woodstock', Down Beat, xlv/18 (1978), 23
L. Jeske: 'Jack DeJohnette: Naturally Multi-Directional', Down Beat, xlviii/3 (1981), 17
P. Danson: 'Jack DeJohnette', Coda, no.182 (1982), 12–13
R. Mattingly: 'Jack DeJohnette', Modern Drummer, vii/4 (1983), 8
B. Doerschuk: 'Jack DeJohnette Trades Sticks for Keys in his Jazz Piano Debut', Keyboard, x/12 (1984), 10 only
H. Mandel: 'Drummer, Drummer: Jack DeJohnette', Down Beat, lii/2 (1985), 16–19 [incl. discography]
B. Beuttler: 'The Jack DeJohnette Interview', Down Beat, liv/9 (1987), 16–19 [incl. discography]
J. Levenson: 'Jack DeJohnette: Multidirectional Musician', Down Beat, lvi/12 (1989), 17
W. Tozzi: Jazz-drumming (Graz, 1994)

LEWIS PORTER

De Jong, Marinus (b Oosterhout, 14 Aug 1891; d Ekeren, 13 June 1984). Belgian pianist and composer of Dutch origin. After taking Belgian nationality he studied composition with Mortelmans and the piano with Emile Bosquet at the Antwerp Conservatory. He began his career as a piano virtuoso, touring Europe and the USA. In 1931 he was appointed professor of piano at the Antwerp Conservatory, where he became professor of counterpoint and fugue in 1948; he also taught at the Mechelen Archiepiscopal School of Church Music. Despite his many activities he became a prolific composer of a varied output. His music reveals his profound technical knowledge and often gives prominent place to Gregorian melodies harmonized with a 20th-century chordal repertory; conventional in form but new in sound, his work is characterized by its lyrical feeling and its sense of mystical reflection. In his later works he developed a neo-Impressionist style with polytonal counterpoint as its mainstay.

WORKS
(selective list)

Hiawatha's Lied (after Longfellow), 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, 1948; Proverbia Bruegeliana S, T, Bar, chorus, orch, 1961; Hymne aan de schoonheid, S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1966; Mitsanobae (op, after Chin.), 1966; De lelijke meisjes van Bagdad (op, F. Rosenfeld), 1967; Esmoreit (op, A. van de Velde, after medieval), 1969

3 syms.; songs; other choral music; 6 str qts, 1923–62; 3 pf concs., 1924–57; 3 wind qnts, 1952–71; Wind Qnt, 1968

Principal publisher: CeBeDeM

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CeBeDeM directory
Music in Belgium (Brussels, 1964), 55–6, 147
C. Mertens: Hedendaagse muziek in België (Brussels, 1967), 16, 18, 34–5

CORNEEL MERTENS/DIANA VON VOLBORTH-DANYS

De Judice, Caesar. See DEL GIUDICE, CESARE.

De Konink, Servaas. See KONINK, SERVAAS DE.

De Koven, (Henry Louis) Reginald (b Middletown, CT, 3 April 1859; d Chicago, 16 Jan 1920). American composer. In 1872 he went to England and in 1880 took the BA in modern history from Oxford University. He had studied the piano with Wilhelm Speidel at Stuttgart and after graduating returned there to study the piano and harmony with Siegmund Lebert and Dionys Pruckner. He pursued further theory studies with J.C. Hauff at Frankfurt, and learnt singing with Luigi Vannuccini at Florence and composition with Richard Genée at Vienna. In 1882 he returned to the USA, working in business before turning to composition full time. He was a music critic (1889–1912) for Harper's Weekly, the New York World, New York Herald, New York Journal and the Chicago Evening Post. He also founded and conducted the Washington SO (1902–4).

De Koven is best known for his operettas, particularly those with librettos by Harry-Bache Smith. Their three most successful works, Robin Hood (1891), Rob Roy (1894) and The Highwayman (1897), have British settings; most of the others are set in Europe or East Asia. Smith's librettos relied on literary formulas that catered to a mass market while de Koven crafted scores designed to cultivate a higher audience taste. Although their works were modelled on the Gilbert and Sullivan and continental operettas then prevalent on the American musical stage, de Koven also incorporated large-scale operatic structures into his medial finales. His most appealing melodies are in the manner of English folksongs, and although his harmonies are rarely adventurous, he used chromaticism tellingly in his oriental settings. Contemporary critics frequently branded his style as derivative, but audience reaction established Robin Hood as one of the most successful operettas of its day; the interpolated song 'Oh, promise me' has remained a popular wedding ballad. De Koven's works became the repertory mainstay of the Bostonians, a prominent operetta troupe, and heralded the American end of foreign theatrical domination with contributions from John Philip Sousa, Victor Herbert and Jerome Kern.

Above and beyond the songs from his operettas, de Koven's works include over 200 other published songs and choral pieces; Recessional, on a text by Rudyard Kipling, was among the most popular and appeared in numerous arrangements. He also composed several dozen instrumental works, primarily character pieces for piano.

De Koven explored a variety of musical theatre styles throughout his career. At the turn of the century he composed several extravaganzas for Florenz Ziegfeld jr. These later shows generally earned only moderate runs. The Beauty Spot, which incorporated some of the popular styles (like ragtime) that de Koven usually eschewed, did notably better. At the end of his career, when younger composers eclipsed his reputation, de Koven composed two operas on libretti by Percy MacKaye, The Canterbury Pilgrims and Rip Van Winkle. Having seldom accommodated what he perceived of as a deterioration of musical taste, this autumnal metamorphosis reflects the composer's search for an audience more closely attuned to his ideal.

WORKS
(selective list)

all stage works, most MSS in US-Wc and WM

The Canterbury Pilgrims (4, grand op, P. MacKaye, after G. Chaucer: The Canterbury Tales), Met, 8 March 1917, vs (Cincinnati, 1916)

Rip Van Winkle (3, folk op, MacKaye, after W. Irving: The Legend of Sleepy Hollow), Chicago, Opera, 2 Jan 1920, vs (New York, 1919)

operettas in three acts, to librettos by H.-B. Smith, unless otherwise stated; dates are of first New York performance and printed works published in vocal score in New York in the same year unless otherwise stated

The Begum (Hindoo co, 2), Fifth Avenue, 21 Nov 1887, excerpts (Philadelphia, 1887); Don Quixote (co), Boston, Boston Theatre, 18 Nov 1889 (1890); Robin Hood (co), Standard, 28 Sept 1891; The Fencing Master (co), Casino, 14 Nov 1892; The Knickerbockers (co), Garden, 29 May 1893 (1892); The Algerian (comedy op, G. MacDonough), Garden, 26 Oct 1893; Rob Roy (romantic co), Herald Square, 29 Oct 1894; The Tzigane (Russian co), Abbey's, 16 May 1895, excerpts; The Mandarin (Chinese co), Herald Square, 2 Nov 1896; The Paris Doll (musical comedy), Hartford,

CT, Parson's, 14 Sept 1897, unpubd; The Highwayman (romantic co), Broadway, 13 Dec 1897 (1898); The Three Dragoons (co), Broadway, 30 Jan 1899 (Cincinnati, 1899)

The Man in the Moon (spectacular fantasy, L. Harrison and S. Stange), New York Theatre, 24 April 1899, unpubd, collab. L. Englander and G. Kerker; Papa's Wife (comedy with music), Manhattan, 13 Nov 1899, unpubd; The Man in the Moon, Jr. (spectacular fantasy, Harrison and Stange), New York Theatre, 23 Dec 1899, unpubd, collab. Englander and F. Solomon; From Broadway to Tokio (spectacular fantasy, Harrison and G.V. Hobart), New York Theatre, 23 Jan 1900, unpubd, collab. A.B. Sloane; Foxy Quiller (co), Broadway, 5 Nov 1900; The Little Duchess (musical comedy), Casino, 14 Oct 1901, unpubd; Maid Marian (co), Garden, 27 Jan 1902 (1901); The Jersey Lily (musical comedy, Hobart), Victoria, 14 Sept 1903, unpubd

Red Feather (co, 2, C. Klein and C.E. Cook), Lyric, 9 Nov 1903; Happyland, or The King of Elysia (co, 2, F. Ranken), Lyric, 2 Oct 1905; The Student King (romantic light op, Ranken and Stange), Garden, 25 Dec 1906; The Girls of Holland (fantastic light op, Stange), Lyric, 18 Nov 1907, unpubd; The Golden Butterfly (co, Smith and J. Hayden-Clarendon), Broadway, 12 Oct 1908 (1909); The Beauty Spot (musical play, 2, J.W. Herbert), Herald Square, 10 April 1909; The Yankee Mandarin (summer show, 2, E. Paulton), Boston, Majestic, 14 June 1909, unpubd; The Wedding Trip (opéra bouffe, F. de Gresac and Smith), Broadway, 25 Dec 1911; Her Little Highness (musical play, C. Pollock and R. Wolf), Liberty, 13 Oct 1913; Yesterday (musical romance, prelude, 2, MacDonough), Washington DC, Belasco, 16 March 1919, unpubd

Inc., unpubd: Cupid, Hymen and Co., *c*1883; Fort Caramel, *c*1886; The Dey, 1891; Ollolla, 1907

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.F. De Koven: A Musician and his Wife (New York, 1926)

J. Stedman: '"Then Hey! For the Merry Greenwood": Smith and de Koven and Robin Hood', Journal of Popular Culture, xii (1978), 432–45

O.L. Krasner: Reginald de Koven (1859–1920) and American Comic Opera at the Turn of the Century (diss., CUNY, 1995)

ORLY LEAH KRASNER

De la Bassée, Adam. See ADAM DE LA BASSÉE.

Delaborde, Jean-Baptiste. See LA BORDE, JEAN-BAPTISTE DE.

Delacôte, Jacques (b Remiremont, 16 Aug 1942). French conductor. He attended the conservatoires at Nancy and Paris, and studied with Hans Swarowsky in Vienna, where he later made his home. After winning the gold medal in the 1971 Mitropoulos Competition in New York, he made his major début the following year with the New York PO, and at the Vienna Staatsoper with Madama Butterfly. He then became active in several European and North American centres and in Britain, where he first conducted the LSO in 1973 and the Royal Opera in 1976 (Faust). Delacôte favours the French Romantic repertory, notably Samson et Dalila, Faust and Carmen; he has also conducted Meyerbeer's Le Cid in concert at Chicago (1993) and Tosca at London's Earl's Court (1991). He has been praised for his sympathetic and vivacious interpretations, and his consideration towards singers.

NOËL GOODWIN

De la Court, Antoine. See LA COURT, ANTOINE DE.

De la Court, Henri. See LA COURT, HENRI DE.

Delacroix, François. See LA CROIX, FRANÇOIS DE.

De la Cruz, Ramón. See CRUZ, RAMÓN DE LA.

De la Cruz Mena, José (b León, 3 May 1874; d León, 22 Sept 1907). Nicaraguan composer. Born into a musical family, he studied at the Escuela Nacional de Música in Managua. He played the trumpet in the Managua municipal band, in the band directed by Adalid y Gamero in Tegulcigalpa, Honduras, and that of the Supremos Poderes in San Salvador. Diagnosed with leprosy in 1895, he returned to León. He avoided the nation's leper colony by dedicating three pieces to President Zelaya. He was able to remain on the outskirts of León where, blind by 1896, friends maintained him and took his musical dictation until his death. Though banished from public life for most of his adulthood, he was the pre-eminent Nicaraguan composer of his time. Most of his extensive output has been lost, but the historical record indicates that it included 30 popular songs, together with several types of dance forms popular among the nascent middle class at the turn of the century: 26 waltzes, several mazurkas and two pasodobles. His most famous waltzes are Ruinas and Amores de Abraham both of which are still performed. Stylistically they closely follow Strauss, and have a typical sectional format with contrasting tempo and related keys, often alternating major and minor tonality. He also composed much religious music, including three Te Deum settings, eight Ave Maria settings, two masses, four requiem masses, six funeral marches, and 20 sones de pascua, also called villancicos (Christmas songs). His works were scored both for piano, and the municipal and military bands that were the primary large ensemble that performed classical compositions at the time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Halftermeyer: José de la Cruz Mena (Managua, 1941/R)

L.H. Debayle: Al correr de mi vida: Toribio Jerez, Mena y Rubén Darió (Managua, [late 1960s])

G. Vega Miranda: Mena, su vida y su obra (Managua [late 1960s])

E. Buitrago: 'Vida y obra de José de la Cruz Mena', Boletín nicaragüense de bibliografía y documentación, xlviii [Managua, 1982], 103–18

T.M. SCRUGGS

De Laet, Jean [Hans] [Latius, Joannes; Latio, Giovanni] (b Stabroeck, *c*1525; d Antwerp, 1566). Flemish printer. He became a citizen of Antwerp in 1545 and began to print in the same year; he served as one of the Town Printers from 1549 to 1566, being regularly mentioned in the Antwerp accounts. He printed more than 100 books reflecting the cosmopolitan life of Antwerp, including Flemish Bibles, law books, histories, classical texts, Spanish books and a dozen books by English Catholic authors. From 1554 he published a number of music books, either with the Antwerp teacher and composer HUBERT WAELRANT, who acted as the music editor, or on his own. Together, in the years 1554–6, Waelrant and De Laet published eight books of motets and four books of chansons by various composers. Alone, De Laet brought out a number of music publications including Lassus's motets in 1556, the year of the composer's visit to Antwerp; thus he was one of Lassus's first publishers. De Laet also printed two editions of Souterliedekens, in 1559 and 1564.

He had business dealings with many other Antwerp printers, including the printer and type cutter Ameet Tavernier. He sold books printed by Tavernier and in 1566 bought some type from him. It is likely that the elegant music type used by De Laet was designed by Tavernier, for it also occurs in a book published by Tavernier's widow. Matrices from this music type are among those preserved in the Museum Plantin-Moretus, Antwerp.

After De Laet's death, his widow published several music books, including a reprint of Bakfark's first book for lute, printed using an Italian music tablature type, probably also designed by Tavernier. This is the only known instance of Italian lute tablature printing in the Low Countries.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BoetticherOL; BrownI; GoovaertsH

E. Roobaert and A. Moerman: 'Jean de Laet', Gulden passer, xxxix (1961), 188–210

H.D.L. Vervliet: Sixteenth Century Printing Types of the Low Countries (Amsterdam, 1968)

S. Bain: Music Printing in the Low Countries in the Sixteenth Century (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1974)

A. Rouzet: Dictionnaire des imprimeurs, libraires et éditeurs des XVe et XVIe siècles dans les limites géographiques de la Belgique actuelle (Niewkoop, 1975)

S. Bain: 'The Typography of the Firm of Hubert Waelrant and Jean De Laet', Yearbook of the Alamire Foundation, ii (1997), 253–68

SUSAN BAIN

De la Farge, P. See LA FARGE, P. DE.

Delafont [De la Font, De la Fons] (*fl c*1545–59). French composer of 15 four-voice chansons published in Paris between 1545 and 1549. Ung advocat dist à sa femme – a ribald anecdote about a lawyer and his wife – is his most famous work. It is based on a model by Henry Fresneau, and the reprinting of it in two subsequent collections as well as arrangements for guitar and cittern later in the century attest to its popularity. His Chasse de la perdrix is clearly indebted to Janequin. Most of Delafont's chansons are in the syllabic, narrative style, but a few follow the courtly manner of Sermisy and Sandrin. The composer might be identifiable with or related to Jehan Delafon, an instrumentalist who lived in the rue des Vieilles Etuves between 1576 and 1589. He may also be identifiable with the 'Villefond' or 'Villefont', to whom a motet and two chansons spirituelles were ascribed (RISM 1553[19] and 1554[7]).

WORKS

CHANSONS
all for 4 voices

Edition: Pierre Attaingnant: Vingt deuxiesme livre, ed. A. Seay (Colorado Springs, 1980) [S]

A ce matin trouvay une filette, 1547[10]; Amy héllas je pensoye bien, 1548[4]; As-tu point là quelque esparvier (Chasse de la perdrix), 1559[11], ed. in SCC, ix (1994); Ce n'est malheur amy, 1548[4]; Ces jours la femme de Guillaume, 1549[19]; Comme le vent impetueux, 1547[9], S; En te voyant ne fays que souspirer, 1547[9], S; Hault le boys, 1549[24]; Helas frappez tout bellement, 1549[20]

Il estoit ung jeune homme, 1545[10]; Si michault avoyt aveu au curé convenue, 1547[10]; Si loing travail méritte récompense, 1549[24]; Si ton amour viollant a souffert, 1548[4]; Si vous voullez mon grief mal soulager, 1547[9], S; Ung advocat dist à sa femme, 1545[10], ed. in SCC, ix (1994); Venus avoit son filz Amour perdu, 1545[12]

FRANK DOBBINS

Delage, Maurice (Charles) (b Paris 13 Nov 1879; d 21 Sept 1961). French composer. Delage was born into a non-musical family of private means. Discharged during military service for a slight problem with his eyesight, he turned his attention to music after he heard Debussy's opera Pelléas et Mélisande in 1902. To play excerpts, he learnt the piano by ear (as he had earlier the cello). According to the poet Léon-Paul Fargue, his performance of the still unpublished opera interludes so impressed Ravel in 1903 that the composer invited Delage to study composition with him. When Ravel's music-making friends, the Apaches, began to disturb neighbours in Montmartre, Delage purchased a garden pavilion in the suburb of Auteuil for their weekly gatherings. There they shared works-in-progress as well as premières (including Ravel's Miroirs, the last of which is dedicated to Delage). In this context, Stravinsky became a close friend.

Though he shared with Ravel an interest in the Orient and later the sound of factories, Delage's biggest musical influence was Debussy. His earliest piece, a piano Sonatine (1905) is reminiscent of the third interlude from Pelléas. His first orchestral work, Conté par la mer (1909), shows an adventurous spirit and an interest in new timbres he went on to share with Stravinsky. When the Société Nationale, then under d'Indy's leadership, refused to perform it because of a note for horn outside its usual range, his colleagues showed their esteem of Delage by forming a rival organization, the Société Musicale Indépendente (SMI), which included this work and Delage's first songs in its inaugural season of 1910.

In the spring of 1912, Delage accompanied his parents to India and Japan where they owned shoe polish factories. In the music he began there, Delage sought Western equivalents for what he heard, 'trying to find those Hindu sounds that send chills up my spine', as he put it to Stravinsky. While conventional orientalism may characterize the texts of the Quatre poèmes hindous (1912–13) and Ragamalika (1912–14), the music demonstrates how the recordings he collected on this trip served as models. In the second of the Poèmes hindous, for example, the cello's scordatura tuning, ornaments, and glissandi result in a timbre, a pitch continuum and microtonal shadings like those of a 1905 Imdad Khan recording from which Delage transcribed passages. Another innovation, the open- and closed-mouth singing he uses in this song, was inspired by the vocal techniques of Coimbatore Thayi. In Ragamalika, a transcription of a Thayi recording, Delage conceives of the piano in place of the tabla and droning instrument, and asks that one note inside be muted. This is perhaps the first example of 'prepared piano' in European music (ex.1). The publisher Durand was so 'enchanted' that he commissioned its orchestration. But not all the works of this period reached successful completion: Delage was forced to abandon his most ambitious work of this period, Les batisseurs de ponts, a pantomime for the Ballets Russes, after Rudyard Kipling refused to allow the story to be set to music.

Delage broke with Stravinsky after the latter's Mavra (1922): he embraced new friends including Auric, Ibert and Milhaud, and consulted Honegger for orchestration lessons. As he took on new subjects, he continued to write songs and explore vocal techniques. His Sept hai-kaïs (1923), short sound-images setting Japanese texts, are among his finest works for chamber ensemble and show some of his more adventurous writing and a predilection for chromatic juxtapositions. In his Trois chants de la jungle (first broadcast in 1935), one finds lilting chromatic clusters in the lullaby but otherwise simpler accompaniments. In the orientalist outer movements, Delage experiments with the range between rhythmic singing without fixed pitches and parlando with notated pitches. 'Themmangau' exhibits the Indian influence evident in earlier works: it calls for 'staccatos at the back of the throat' and a quasi-parlando with approximate pitches notated as in Schoenberg's Sprechstimme.

Ex.1 from Ragamalika (1912-1914)

(1) On peut amortir le son du [bass clef note] en plaçant un carton léger sous les cordes, à l'endroit où frappe le marteau.
[The sound of the [bass clef note] can be muffled by placing a thin piece of cardboard under the strings where the hammer strikes.]

The most unusual work from this period, an overture for the uncompleted Le ballet de l'avenir, was perhaps suggested by letters Ravel wrote to him while touring the factory-filled Rhine valley in 1905. In it, Delage contrasts his version of factory noises and what they represent – the world of science – with a woman's 'sweet and tender' plaint (played by the english horn) and its counterpart, nature (suggested by a pastoral calm). The structure and the tumultuous 'metallurgical prelude' were praised after the Opéra première conducted by Koussevitsky. However, Delage was criticized for not creating a convincing musical synthesis. In his next major work, Contrerimes (first performed in 1933), Delage turned to a more complex form and rich counterpoint.

After World War II, Delage changed. Whereas in his early career he was open to the newest musical ideas, including those of Schoenberg (in Pierrot lunaire and the Fünf Orchesterstücke), later he became nostalgic for the Apaches period, uninterested in serial discoveries, and somewhat bitter. In morte di un Samurai (1950) sets a Japanese poem about a general hanged after the war and written by an Italian inspired by vengeance. With its rhythmic variation and alternating duple and triple patterns, Le bateau ivre (1955) recalls Debussy's La mer and the simpler aspects of Stravinsky's early ballets. His last work, Trois poèmes désenchantés (1957), is equally nostalgic in its allusions to past happiness and resigned in the mood of its text and its tonal cadences.

Although Delage was made a Chevalier dans les arts et lettres in 1958 and received performances from the likes of Bathori, Koussevitzky, Desormière and Rosenthal, his reputation has been limited. Only the Poèmes hindous and Sept hai-kaïs continue to be played regularly. Delage hated facility and was rarely satisfied with his work. But although he released only a portion of his output, his artistic contribution remains far from insignificant. Vuillermoz called him the 'Henri Duparc of his generation' while Stravinsky dubbed him 'an artist of the first order'.

WORKS

Orch: Conté par la mer, sym. étude, perf. 1910; Les batisseurs de ponts (R. Kipling), ov., 1912; Le ballet de l'avenir (Ode à l'usine/Time Machine) (L. Laloy), ov., 1920–23; Mississippi, sym. poem, 1948; Le bateau ivre (after A. Rimbaud), sym. poem, broadcast 1955; 5 danses symphoniques, broadcast 1958

Vocal-orch: 3 poèmes (R. de Gourmont, G. du Bartas, F. Villon), 1v, orch, perf. 1923, red. 1v, pf (1923); Hommage à A. Roussel (R. Chalupt), 1v, orch (1925), red. 1v, fl, pf (1929); Contrerimes (P.-J. Toulet), sym. suite, 1v, orch, perf. 1933; 3 chants de la jungle (Kipling), 1v, chbr orch, broadcast 1935, red. 1v, pf (1935); In morte di un Samurai (Morès), 1v, orch, 1950, red. 1v, pf (1952)

Other vocal: 3 mélodies (H. Heine, T. de Banville, M. Schwob), 1v, pf, 1908–10; 4 poèmes hindous (Bhartrihari, Heine, Delage), S, pic, fl, ob, cl, b cl, hp, str qt (1914), red. 1v, pf (1914); Ragamalika (Tamil text), 1v, pf, perf. 1915, orchd 1915; 7 hai-kaïs, S, fl, ob, cl, pf, str qt (1923), arr. S, chbr orch (1924), arr. 1v, pf (1924); Ronsard à sa muse, 1v, pf (1924); Basho (Satsuma), 1v, pf, 1925, lost; La chanson de ma mie (de Banville), 1v, pf (1925); Les colombes (A. Samain), 1v, pf (1925); Les demoiselles d'Avignon (Chalupt), 1v, pf (1925); Sobre las olas (J. Cocteau), 1v, pf (1925); Toute allégresse (Toulet), 1v, pf (1925); Vocalise-Etude, 1v, pf (1925); 2 fables de Jean de La Fontaine, 1v, fl, ob, 2 cl, bn, hn, tpt, pf, str qt, 1931, red. 1v, pf (1948); Mitsougai, 1v, pf (1946); L'enfant (L.-P. Fargue), 1v, pf, broadcast 1947; Kousk Breiz Izel (Irish melody), 1v, pf, 1955; 3 poèmes désenchantés (J. Moulin), S, fl, ob, cl, bn, eng hn, str qt, 1955, red. 1v, pf (1957)

Chbr and solo inst: Sonatine, pf, 1905, lost; Schumann . . ., pf, 1921; Str Qt, d, perf. 1949

Transcrs./arrs.: C. Debussy: Chansons de Bilitis, orch, 1924; M. Ravel: Qt, pf 4 hands (1911); Ravel: Chanson hébraïque, 1v, orch (1957); Ravel: 2 épigrammes de Clément Marot, 1v, orch

MSS in F-Pn (incl. MS writings), F-Pse and Durand

Principal publishers: Durand, Jobert, Leduc, Salabert, Maurice Sénart

WRITINGS

'Lettre de l'Inde (Kandy, 4 March 1912)', BSIM (1912), 72–4
'La musique de jazz', Revue Pleyel, no.31 (1926), 18–20
'Les premiers amis de Ravel', in B. Bartók and others: Ravel par quelques uns de ses familiers (Paris, 1939), 97–113
'Une géographie musicale' [MS, F-Pn] (typescript of radio programme, broadcast 25 April1948)
'Maurice Ravel' [MS, F-Pn]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Vuillernoz, ed.: 'La symphonie', Cinquante ans de musique française de 1874 à 1925, ed. Rohozinski, i (Paris, 1925), 374–83, esp. 378–9
Roland-Manuel: 'Sur Maurice Ravel', Revue Pleyel, no.18 (1925), 20–21
R. Dumesnil: La musique contemporaine en France, ii (Paris, 1930), 27–8
J. Bruyr: 'Un entretien avec Maurice Delage', Guide du concert, xviii (1932)
M.-D. Calvocoressi: Musicians' Gallery: Music and Ballet in Paris and London (London, 1933)
Roland-Manuel: 'La musique et la danse', in P. Du Colombier: Les arts (Paris, 1933), 269–347, esp. 308
P. Landormy: La musique française après Debussy (Paris, 1943)
G. Bender: 'Entretien avec Maurice Delage', Guide du concert et du disque, xxxvi (1956), 1292–3, 1326
R. Bernard: Histoire de la musique, ii (Paris, 1961), 916–18
P. Debièvre: 'Hommage à Maurice Delage', Guide de concert et du disque (1961), 125

R. Craft, ed.: Stravinsky: Selected Correspondence, i (New York, 1982) [incl. correspondence with Delage]
J. Pasler: 'Stravinsky and the Apaches', MT, cxxiii (1982), 403–7
T. Funayama, ed.: 'Three Japanese Lyrics and Japonisme', Confronting Stravinsky: Man, Musician, and Modernist, ed. J. Pasler (Berkeley, 1986), 278–81
A. Orenstein, ed.: Maurice Ravel: lettres, écrits, entretiens (Paris, 1989) [incl. correspondence with Delage]
J. Pasler: 'Reinterpreting Indian Music: Albert Roussel and Maurice Delage', Music-Cultures in Contact: Convergences and Collisions, ed. M. Kartomi and S. Blum (Sydney, 1994), 122–57
M. Rosenthal: Ravel: souvenirs de Manuel Rosenthal, ed. M. Marnat (Paris, 1995)
C. Thomas: Three Representative Works of Maurice Delage: a Study of Style and Exotic Influence (DMA thesis, U. of Georgia, 1995)
J. Pasler: 'Race, Orientalism, and Distinction in the Wake of the "Yellow Peril"', Western Music and its Others, ed. G. Born (Berkeley, 1997)

JANN PASLER

De la Halle, Adam. See ADAM DE LA HALLE.

Delaharpe, Jean François. See LA HARPE, JEAN FRANÇOIS DE.

Delahaye, Jean [Johannes; ?Jehan Delahaie; Joannes Deshayes] (*fl c*1465). French composer. His name suggests origins in a small town in the Touraine, originally called La Haye (now Descartes). It is, however, possible that he came from La Haye near Lyons-la-Forêt, which was under the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Rouen. A letter of safe conduct survives with a 'Johannes Delahaye' listed among the chaplains of Louis of Luxembourg, Chancellor of France for the English crown in the 1420s and Archbishop of Rouen. Following Louis's death in 1443, almost all the clerks from Louis's household chapel were engaged by Gilles de Bretagne, brother of Jean IV, duke of Brittany. A 'Johannes Delahaye' appears sporadically in the archival registers for the town of Tours between 1445 and 1461. The documents indicate that he was married and apparently independent of any religious establishment. Contemporary records also list a 'Joannes Deshayes' among the canons at St Martin, Tours. The presence of Ockeghem and Busnoys in this church strengthens the possibility that the canon is indeed the composer.

His surviving works, seven rondeaux, are all copied and ascribed in the Nivelle Chansonnier (F-Pn Rés.Vmc.57), which has been linked to the royal palace of Bourges. Four pieces also appear in other chansonniers copied in the Loire valley region. The circulation of his works appears to have been limited to manuscripts copied in this area; Delahaye clearly did not have the international reputation of his contemporaries Ockeghem and Busnoys. In the Nivelle Chansonnier he is the second best represented composer, exceeded only by Busnoys. He is, furthermore, the only 15th-century composer known to have set a text by the poet François Villon. His setting of the rondeau Mort j'appelle de ta rigueur (from Villon's Grant testament) stands out as one of the most beautiful chansons of the period.

None of his works suggests a composition date much before 1465. On account of its contained ranges and a preference for double leading note cadences, Tout au long may be the earliest. It is a combinative chanson based on two (presumably) pre-existing chansons rustiques. The last line is quoted at the end of the anonymous Vous qui parlés du gentil Buciphal/Hé Molinet in the manuscript Pavia, Biblioteca Universitaria, Cod. Aldini 362. Delahaye's other four-voice work, O dieu d'amours, is altogether a different kind of piece. Its opening motif is imitated by all the voices, it is in the unusual mode of A, and there seems to be a greater concern for sonorities than in the other works.

WORKS

Comment suis je de vostre cuer, 3vv, ed. K. Jeppesen, Der Kopenhagener Chansonnier (Copenhagen, 1927, 2/1965)
Mort j'appelle de ta rigueur, 3vv, ed. E. Droz, Trois chansonniers français du XVe siècle (Paris, 1927/R)
O dieu d'amours et qu'as tu fait, 4vv, ed. C. Goldberg, Das Chansonnier Laborde (Frankfurt, 1997)
Pour les regretz que j'ay que ne vous voy, 3vv
Puis qu'aultrement ne puis avoir, 3vv
Puis qu'il convient que le depart se face, 3vv, ed. K. Jeppesen, Der Kopenhagener Chansonnier
Tout au long de la grant couchette/Il n'est Jacobin ne prestre/Jenette des coqueles, 4vv

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FasquelleE
G. Collon: 'Pierre Bérard, 139?–1465, et la réforme municipale de Tours en 1462', Mémoires de la Société archéologique de Touraine, liii (1928) [whole issue, esp. 217]
G. Thibault: 'La chanson française au XVe siècle', Histoire de la musique, ed. Roland-Manuel, i (Paris, 1960), 890–944, esp. 921
C.E. Barret: A Critical Edition of the Dijon Chansonnier (diss., George Peabody College, Vanderbilt U., 1981), 58
P. Higgins: Introduction to Chansonnier Nivelle de la Chaussée: Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, Rés.Vmc. ms.57, ca.1460 (Geneva, 1984)
A. Wathey: 'The Production of books of liturgical polyphony', Book Production and Publishing in Britain, 1375–1475 (Cambridge, 1989), 145–6
A. Magro: 'Basilique, Pouvoir et Devotion: Ockeghem à Saint-Martin de Tours', Johannes Ockeghem: Tours 1997, 70–100
D. Fallows: A Catalogue of Polyphonic Songs, 1415–1480 (Oxford, 1999)

JANE ALDEN

De la Hèle, George. See LA HÈLE, GEORGE DE.

Delair, Etienne Denis (d after 1727). French theorist. Nothing is known of his life beyond the two addresses in Paris given in the titles of the two editions of his treatise: rue St Honoré and rue des Poulies. He is said to have signed the action of 1750 taken by the 'harmonists' (organists and composers) against Guignon and the corporation of popular musicians known as the menestrandise, but if we assume that the first edition of his Traité d'accompagnement pour le théorbe et le clavessin (Paris, 1690/R; Eng. trans., 1991) was published after his 20th year, he would have been at least 80 at the time of signing. Perhaps there was a son of the same name. The title of Delair's treatise goes on to claim that it 'includes all the rules necessary for accompanying on the two instruments, with special observations on the different approaches they require. It teaches also how to accompany unfigured basses'. A second edition, Nouveau traité ..., was published in 1724 with a privilege promising several new works, none of which is known to have appeared. The second edition was printed mostly from the old plates with 18 or 20 new pages and a few omissions. It is in these additional pages that the règle de l'octave (see REGOLA DELL'OTTAVA) is discussed. Rousseau's attribution of this rule to Delair was evidently based on a confusion between the two editions; the règle de l'octave existed well before Delair's edition of 1724. Other topics taken up are the accord naturel, supposition and harmonie extraordinaire.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
M. Brenet: 'Règle de l'octave', Guide musical, xxiv (1888), 213–14
A. Cohen: 'La supposition and the Changing Concept of Dissonance in Baroque Theory', JAMS, xxiv (1971), 63–84

DAVID FULLER

Delaistier, Maurice (b Paris, 23 Nov 1951). French composer. Self-taught, he started composing during the 1970s, receiving his first commission in 1975 for Litanies. He asserted his independence from postwar schools of composition, later acknowledging Alain Kremski, Jean-Claude Wolff, Philippe Drogoz and Ivo Malec as formative influences. Among his first important works are Rite, Exile and Wie aus der Ferne . . ., which all date from the 1980s. After a year spent in London following the award of the Villa Médicis hors les murs prize in 1992, he was appointed composer-in-residence at the Conservatoire National of Oyonnax, where he composed several works for pedagogical use, including Liturgies, Choral et Danse and Taïna. On winning the Villa Kujoyama scholarship in 1995 he travelled to Japan to research gagaku and noh; D'un pays fertile . . ., and La mémoire de l'eau represent his immediate responses to Japan's music and environment. As composer-in-residence at the Poitiers Conservatoire (1996–7), he continued to experiment with a contemporary idiom in a pedagogical context in works such as Ombres gardiennes, Eramen and L'or du temps, whose instrumental ensemble incorporates modern and period instruments. Largely rejecting precompositional processes, his musical language is instinctive but incisive, with clear formal architecture, as in the intensely expressive String Quartet with its Tristanesque quotations. Delaistier describes his musical language as a 'theatre of sounds' with a 'memory of tonality'; his rhythmic energy and motivic character at times recall Bartók. (CC2, C. Rae)

WORKS

Vocal: Rite, Bar, SATB, 2 fl, ob, 2 cl, 2 hn / trbn, 2 perc, pf, vn, 2 vc, db, 1984; Litanie, female chorus children's chorus, pf, 1994; Liturgies, S/Bar, SATB, orch, 1994; La mémoire de l'eau, S, fl, va, pf, gui, perc, 1995; Antienne, SATB, brass qnt, pf, timp, 1996; L'or du temps, 2 solo vv, children's vv, viol consort, recs, positive org, 2 gui, chbr ens, 1996

Orch: Luna, eng hn, chbr orch, 1991; Camden song, big band, str orch, 1994; Chorale et danse, str orch, 1994; Conc, vc, orch, 1994; Mouvement, orch, 1994; Epure (ballet), fl, bn, orch, 1996

Chbr and solo inst: Le jardin intérieur, vn, zarb [Iranian perc inst], gui, zither, perc, 1971; Litanies, 14 gui, pf, perc, 1975; Nigoun, pf, 1983; Exile, cl/bcl, hn, pf, vn, va, vc, 1989; 'Wie aus der Ferne . . .', vn, vc, pf, 1991; Str Qt, 1992; Migrations, fl, cl, bn, hn, 2 perc, vn, va, vc, db, 1993; Taïna, vn, vc, pf, 1994; D'un pays fertile, gui, 1995; '. . . en ta gorge est mon coeur enclos', 4 gui, 1996; Eramen, 3 perc, 1996; Ombres gardiennes, 10 db, 1996; Sanctuaire, cl, hn, pf, vl, va, vc, 1997

Principal publisher: Salabert

CAROLINE RAE

Delalande, Michel (b La Flèche, 27 Aug 1739; d Chartres, 23 Dec 1812). French cathedral musician and composer. He was maître de musique of Soissons Cathedral until 1761, then of Chartres until his retirement in 1785, after which he continued to deputize, and to sing haute-contre in the choir, until 1792. Of his large output of sacred works, including 61 psalms and canticle settings, 16 masses, a Requiem and 58 miscellaneous compositions, only the MS Exaudiat te Dominus is extant (in F-Pn). This work, dating from Delalande's years at Chartres, was formerly attributed to Michel-Richard de Lalande, to whom he may have been related (see Clerval). It exhibits many of the usual features of the grands motets of the Versailles school while strongly reflecting the influence of the galant style, notably in its harmonic and formal structure and florid instrumental writing. An inventory of Delalande's music is in the Archives Départementales at Chartres (Q103, dated 13 January 1794 and 31 January 1794).

BIBLIOGRAPHY
J.A. Clerval: L'ancienne maîtrise de Notre-Dame de Chartres du Ve siècle à la Révolution (Paris, 1899/R), 102ff, 162, 257, 273–4, 349
N. Dufourcq, ed.: Notes et références pour servir à une histoire de Michel-Richard Delalande (Paris, 1957), 137ff

LIONEL SAWKINS

Delalande, Michel-Richard. See LALANDE, MICHEL-RICHARD DE.

Delamain [De La Main, Delamaine], Henry (d Cork, 19 Dec 1796). Irish composer and organist of French parentage. Both his father, Laurence, and his grandfather, Henry, were dancing-masters who settled in Cork in the middle of the 18th century, and took over the house on Hop Island, which had earned its name from the activities of the previous owner, Mr Boland, also a dancing-master. The Henry Delamaine who is noted in the Dublin Newsletter of 22 June 1742 as having lately arrived from the Opéra at Paris was probably the grandfather, though no relationship has been established with William Delamain, a dancing-master in Dublin from 1737 to 1743, or with the similarly named makers of the notable 18th-century Dublin delftware.

Laurence and his wife died within five days of each other in October 1762, by which time their son had been appointed organist of Christ Church in Cork. He continued at this church until 1781 when he was appointed to St Finbarr's Cathedral (to the acrimonious disgust of Lewis Gibson, the nominee of Smith, the previous organist). He held this post until his death. He published Six New Psalm Tunes (London, 1781) and a number of songs which attained great popularity and appeared in numerous editions from five Dublin publishing houses between 1785 and 1810. Most of these songs were provided with 'a part for flute or guitar'. Eight songs, dedicated by permission to 'Her Majesty', were published in London in 1785. With accompaniments for either keyboard, or horns, oboes and strings, both versions being issued together, they represent the best of his work. Written in an early Classical style and showing certain influences of both J.C. Bach and the later music of Thomas Arne, they offer opportunity for sensitive vocal agility. He also composed an Ode to the Duke and Duchess of Rutland, performed in Cork in 1785.

BRIAN BOYDELL

De la Marre. See LA MARRE, DE.

De Lancie, John. See LANCIE, JOHN DE.

Delaney, Robert (Mills) (b Baltimore, 24 July 1903; d Santa Barbara, CA., 21 Sept 1956). American composer. He studied at the University of Southern California (1921–2) and with Boulanger at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris (1922–7), where he was also a pupil of Capet and Honegger. In 1929 he was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship and in 1933 a Pulitzer Prize for John Brown's Song, a choral symphony based on John Brown's Body. He taught at the Santa Barbara School, the Concord School of Music and Northwestern University. Idiomatic, deftly orchestrated and accessible, his works, especially those for orchestra, were widely performed.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: The Constant Couple, suite, 1926; Don Quixote Sym., 1927; Pastoral Movt, 1930; Adagio, vn, str, 1935; Sym. Pieces nos.1–2, 1935, 1937; Work 22, ov., 1939; Going to Town, suite, 1941; Sym. no.1, 1942

Choral: John Brown's Song (S.V. Benét), choral sym., 1931; Blake Cycle, vv, orch; Night (W. Blake), vv, str orch, pf, 1934; Choralia nos.1–2, 1936, 1937; My soul, there is a country (H. Vaughan), vv, orch, 1937; Western Star, 5vv, orch, 1944

Chbr: Str Qts nos.2–3, 1930

MSS in US-NYcu and R

Principal publisher: E.C. Schirmer

PEGGY GLANVILLE-HICKS/MICHAEL MECKNA

Delange [De Lange], Herman-François (b Liège, 2 June 1715; d Liège, 27 Oct 1781). Flemish composer and violinist. From 1723 to 1730 he was a choirboy at the collegiate church of St Martin, Liège. It was probably Hubert Renotte, choirmaster at the collegiate church from 1730, who drew the chapter's attention to the young man's abilities. Delange was given permission to attend the Jesuit college, where he completed his classical education in 1738. There he studied the violin, probably with Joseph Clément, first violin of the choir school, and had harmony lessons with Jacques-Georges Lelarge, organist at the collegiate church from 1734. In exchange, and according to the custom, he continued to take part intoning psalms and playing in the orchestra. He seems to have left Liège in 1740 with a scholarship from the Darchis Foundation. His name only appears in the lists of the Collège liégeois de Rome for the year 1741, suggesting that he stayed in other Italian towns. On his return to Liège he was appointed first violin at St Martin. In about 1760 he moved to the collegiate church of St Paul, where he remained, under the direction of Henri Moreau, until his death.

Delange was most active as a composer between 1764 and 1769. During this time he wrote 24 symphonies, 12 trio sonatas and edited a monthly anthology of songs (1765–6). He also composed two stage works, eight masses and various motets. There is no documentation to explain why he stopped composing after 1769.

WORKS
most MSS in B-Lc Fonds Terry

Edition: Une soirée musicale à Liège en 1766: chez Herman-François Delange, sur le Pont d'Isle, aux Armes d'Angleterre, ed. J. Quitin (Liège, 1982)

Le riche malheureux et le réformateur des moeurs de ce siècle, Liège, Théâtre des Jesuites, 23 Aug 1763

Nicette, ou L'école de la vertu (oc, 3, Du Perron), Liège, Jan 1776

Sacred vocal: 6 messes brèves, 4vv, 2 vn, bc; [2] Messes brèves, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 fl, 2 hn, vc, org; Messe solennelle, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 hn, org; Messe solennelle, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 hn, org, partly reconstructed by L. Terry; Lauda Sion, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 ob, 2 hn, org; Missa sexta, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 hn, org, Bibliothèque des Chiroux, Fonds Capitaine, Liège; motets

Secular vocal: Le rossignol, ou Recueil de chansons (Liège, 1765–6) [pubd as monthly journal]; *c*30 unpubd qts, trios, duos, airs

Inst: 6 syms., op.7 (Liège, 1764), lost; 6 syms., op.9 (Liège, 1766), lost; 6 syms., op.10 (Liège, 1767), lost; 6 ovs., 2 vn, va, bc, 2 hn ad lib, op.6; 3 quatuors, str qt, unpubd; 6 sonate, vn/fl, vn, b; 6 sonate, 2 vn, b, op.8 (Paris, n.d.); 6 sonate, vn, b, op.1 (Liège, n.d.); A Collection of Favourite Minuets, hpd, vn/fl (London, n.d.); Le toton harmonique, ou Nouveau jeu de hasard (Liège, 1768) [a musical game]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AudaM

M. de Smet: Le Collège liégeois de Rome: sa fréquentation au XVIIIe siècle (Brussels, 1960)

J. Quitin: 'L'oeuvre de musique de chambre de Herman-François Delange (Liège, 1715–1781)', Bulletin de la société liégeoise de musicologie, no.14 (1976), 12–28

PHILIPPE VENDRIX

Delannoy, Marcel (b La Ferté-Alain, Essonnes, nr Paris, 9 July 1898; d Nantes, 14 Sept 1962). French composer. He first intended to become an architect, and enrolled at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in 1917, but then his interests turned to painting, and finally Honegger encouraged him to become a composer. He was mainly self-taught, although he took instruction in harmony from Jean Gallon, counterpoint from Gédalge and orchestration from Roland-Manuel. Delannoy's first important work, Le poirier de misère, attracted much attention when it was staged at the Opéra-Comique in 1927. In this work, based on a Flemish legend, he cultivated a direct and unpretentious style, echoing, although not quoting, folk-song. The 'Danse macabre' from the last act displays the characteristic features of his style: constancy of rhythmic pattern (here syncopated), polytonal polyphony of lines and chords, vivid instrumental colour and continually striking melodic spontaneity. Always attracted by the theatre, he sought to provide it with new forms: Le fou de la dame is a cantata-ballet based on a blues of winning charm, Ginevra evokes a theme of courtly love by drawing on the style of Renaissance chansons, and Puck uses a mobile declamation oscillating between speech and song. While slightly influenced by Honegger, he pursued an individual path and remained on the edge of contemporary currents. His writings include Arthur Honegger (Paris, 1953).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Le poirier de misère (oc, J. Limozin and A. de la Tourrasse), 1925; Le fou de la dame (chanson de geste, Tourrasse and Limozin), 1928; Cendrillon ou La pantoufle de vair (ballet), 1931; Philippine (operetta, 2, H. Lyon and Limozin), 1937; Ginevra (oc, 3, J. Luchaire, after G. Boccacio), 1942; Les noces fantastiques (ballet), 1945; Puck (opéra féerique, 3, A. Boll, after W. Shakespeare), 1945

Inst: 4 mouvements, pf, 1924; Str Qt, 1931; Sym. no.1, 1933; Sérénade concertante, vn, orch, 1937; Concerto de mai, pf, orch, 1949–50; Sym. no.2, str, 1954; Cahier de Sylvaine, pf, 1956

Vocal: Maria Goretti (orat), 1953; many songs incl. 5 quatrains (F. Jammes), 1936; Etat de veille (R. Desnos), 1945

Film scores, incid music

Principal publisher: Heugel

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Bruyr: 'Marcel Delannoy', L'écran des musiciens, i (Paris, 1930), 74–9

R. Dumesnil: 'Marcel Delannoy', ReM, nos.127–30 (1932), 31–44

A. Boll: 'Marcel Delannoy: musicien de théâtre', ReM, no.209 (1949), 22–9

A. Boll: Marcel Delannoy (Paris, 1957)

C. Chamfray: 'Delannoy Bibliography', Courrier musical de France, nos.1–2 (1963), 65–6

ARTHUR HOÉRÉE

Delano, Jack [Ovcharov, Jascha] (b nr Kiev, Ukraine, 1 Aug 1914; d San Juan, PR, 13 Aug 1997). American composer. He was brought to the USA as a child by his parents and studied at the Settlement Music School, Philadelphia (viola and composition, 1924–32), and at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts (1928–32). In 1946 he settled in Puerto Rico to assume various posts in governmental programmes in radio, television, and rural community education, having already established a reputation as a documentary photographer. His general responsibility for films produced by the Division of Community Education led him to experiment with the mechanical and electronic alteration of recorded sound as early as 1948 in the score for the film Desde las nubes. He later composed works for such organizations as the Puerto Rico SO, the Ballet Infantil de Gilda Navarra and the Ballets de San Juan. Except for early experiments directed towards solving specific problems connected with film music, Delano's style is conservative but pleasantly spiced with dissonance; his principal contribution to music in Puerto Rico has been his incorporation of native rhythmic and melodic patterns into the forms, styles, and instrumentation of standard concert music. His Burundanga (1988), a cantata based on native elements, successfully typifies this blending of cultivated and folk traditions.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ballets: Cucarachita Martina y Ratoncito Pérez (G. Navarra), 1951; La bruja de Loíza (A. García), 1956; Sanjuaneras (García), 1959; El sabio Doctor Mambrú (J. Anduze), 1962

Orch: Ofrenda musical, va, hn, str, 1959; Concertino clásico, tpt, small orch, 1965; La reina tembandumba, 1966

Chbr and solo inst: Va Sonata, 1954; Fl Sonatina, 1958; Vn Sonata, 1961; 7 dúos a canon, 2 vn, 1967; Conc. piccolo, 8 vn, 1977; Preludio, gui, 1977; Str Qt, 1984; Glosas sobre un tema de baquiné, ob, 1987; La machina, ww qnt, 1987; Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1991; Sonata, vn, pf, 1993

Vocal: La oración de Ximena (medieval Sp.), A, hpd/pf, 1955; Nocturno (L. Palés Matos), S, pf, 1959; Esta luna es mía (J.P.H. Hernández), S, female vv, 1962; 3 cancioncitas del mar (N. Vicéns), 1963; Me voy a Ponce (J. Balseiro), chorus, 1965; Canciones para Laura (E. Delgado), Mez, pf, 1977; Burundanga (L. Palés Matos), S, T, B, SATB, orch, 1988; La rosa y el colibrí, SATB, tpt, 1992; Un pétalo de rosa, children's chorus, 1993

Incid music; film scores, incl. Desde las nubes, 1948

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Hawes: 'Jack Delano', San Juan Star Magazine (11 Dec 1977), 2
Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, xix (Washington DC, 1979), 22–7
D. Thompson: 'La música contemporánea en Puerto Rico', RMC, xxxviii (1984), 110–17
K. Dégláns and L.E.Pabón Roca: Cátalogo de música clásica contemporánea de Puerto Rico (Río Piedras, PR, 1989), 69–74

DONALD THOMPSON

Delany, John Albert (b London, 6 July 1852; d Paddington, NSW, 11 May 1907). Australian conductor, organist and composer. Taken to Australia as a child, he studied music with William John Cordner, a minor composer and organist of St Mary's Cathedral, Sydney. He became choirmaster of St Mary's in 1872 and organist in 1874. In 1877 he joined the W.S. Lyster Royal Italian and English Opera Company in Melbourne as chorus master and répétiteur, but returned to Sydney as musical director of the three-day festival which opened the new St Mary's Cathedral (8 September 1882), for which he composed a Triduum March. In 1885 he succeeded Max Vogrich as conductor of the Liedertafel, a position he held until 1897. As musical director of St Mary's in 1886, he introduced unaccompanied plainchant and his own compositions, including three masses, numerous motets, sacred songs and organ works, and also composed a Captain Cook Cantata for the Australian centenary festivities (1888). In 1894 he was a founder-member of the Sydney College of Music and later became its chief examiner. He conducted the Australian première of Elgar's Dream of Gerontius in Sydney Town Hall (21 December 1903). A modest composer who was frustrated in his ambition to write grand opera, Delany and his mostly unpublished works have fallen into obscurity.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AusDB, iv (E.J. Lea-Scarlett)
Alfred Hill Papers (Mitchell Library, Sydney, 528/5)
J.A. Delany: 'Church Music in Australia', Australasian Catholic Record, i (1895), 465
D.J. Quinn: 'Musicians and Musical Taste in Australasia; 1: Sydney', Review of Reviews (20 April 1895), 393

ELIZABETH WOOD

De la Pierre, Paul. See LA PIERRE, PAUL DE.

De Lara [Tilbury], (Lottie) Adelina (b Carlisle, 23 Jan 1872; d Woking, 25 Nov 1961). English pianist. After numerous appearances as a child prodigy she attracted the attention of Fanny Davies in 1885, from whom she received her first formal training. Davies also introduced her to Clara Schumann, who taught her from 1886 to 1891. She made her adult début at St James's Hall, London, in 1891 and became an ambassador for the traditions of Clara Schumann through her playing and subsequently through her teaching, articles and broadcasts. She gave her last recital at the Wigmore Hall in 1954. De Lara's playing, even in old age, was characterized by great commitment, freshness and vitality, as can be heard in several important recordings of Robert Schumann's piano works made in the early 1950s. Her compositions include two piano concertos and many songs. She wrote, with Clare H. Abrahall, a volume of memoirs, Finale (London, 1955).

DONALD ELLMAN

De Lara [Cohen], Isidore (b London, 9 Aug 1858; d Paris, 2 Sept 1935). English composer and singer. In 1874 he entered the Milan Conservatory, where he studied composition with Alberto Mazzucato and singing with Francesco Lamperti. After further studies with Lalo in Paris, de Lara returned to London in 1877, where he was appointed professor of singing at the GSM. At first known as a singer and songwriter, he soon turned his attention to the stage, producing The Royal Word (in which he played the part of Charles II, 1883), Wrong Notes (1883) and Minna, or The Fall from the Cliff (1886). On the suggestion of Victor Maurel he transformed his cantata The Light of Asia, based on the life of Buddha, into an opera and secured its production (in Italian) at Covent Garden in 1892. The following year his Amy Robsart was given in French at the same theatre, and a year later at Monte Carlo. De Lara then settled at Monte Carlo, and it was there, under the patronage of the Princess of Monaco, that he enjoyed the most successful phase of his career. Moïna was produced there in 1897, as was Messaline, his most popular work, in 1899. During World War I de Lara again returned to London, where he established a fund for the relief of distressed musicians. In the 1920s he strove to establish an English national opera, but without success.

Although French influences (Massenet especially) predominate in de Lara's operas, he was a truly eclectic composer. His style may be said to have developed, but it never really settled down. Amy Robsart exhibits his main characteristics: the musical vocabulary bubbles along in a state of constant flux in order that it may strike any attitude required at a moment's notice. Massenet's diatonic succulence is present but not his Gallic sophistication or bittersweet tenderness, and de Lara is exposed as a latterday Meyerbeer in that he produces effects without causes. His orchestration, however, is excellent: tasteful, kaleidoscopic, and highly original. It is therefore all the more regrettable that a man with so fine a musical ear so frequently failed to engage his musical intellect; a work such as Messaline relies too heavily on cheap perfumes, and, at the moments when the music should attempt to rise to dramatic greatness, it degenerates into synthetic posturings.

WORKS

STAGE

printed works published in vocal score in Paris unless otherwise stated;

for complete list see GroveO

The Royal Word (comic op. 1, H. Hersee), London, Gaiety, 17 April 1883
Wrong Notes (comic op), private perf., 1883
Minna, or The Fall from the Cliff (comic op, H.S. Edwards), London, Crystal Palace, 1886
La luce dell'Asia (sacred legend, 3, W. Beatty-Kingston, after E. Arnold, It. trans. G. Mazzucato), London, CG, 11 June 1892 (London, 1891) [rev. of de Lara: The Light of Asia, 1891 (cant.)]; as Le réveil de Bouddha (trans. P. Milliet), Ghent, 2 Dec 1904
Amy Robsart (op, 3, A.H.G. Harris and F.E. Weatherly, after W. Scott: Kenilworth, Fr. trans. Milliet), London, CG, 20 July 1893 (1894); with orig. Eng. text, Croydon, Grand, 14 May 1920
Moïna (drame lyrique, 2, L. Gallet), Monte Carlo, Casino Municipal, 11 March 1897 (1896)
Messaline (tragédie lyrique, 4, P.A. Silvestre and E. Morand), Monte Carlo, Casino Municipal, 21 March 1899 (1899)
7 other ops, 1906–33

OTHER

Vocal: 67 songs, incl. The Garden of Sleep (C. Scott) (1877), After Silent Years (E.L. Bulwer Lytton) (1887)
Chbr: Danse d'une poupée ivre, vn, pf, 1924

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GänzlBMT; GroveO (N. Burton, S.T. Dean) [incl. complete list of operas and further bibliography]; PazdírekH; PEM (T. Hirsbrunner)
L. de Fourcaud: 'Messaline', Théâtre, xvi (1899), 18–22
I. de Lara: Many Tales of Many Cities (London, 1928)
Obituary, MT, lxxvi (1935), 944 only
H. Rosenthal: Two Centuries of Opera at Covent Garden (London, 1958)
E.W. White: A History of English Opera (London, 1983)

NIGEL BURTON, SUSAN THACH DEAN

De Larrocha, Alicia. See LARROCHA, ALICIA DE.

De la Rue, Pierre. See LA RUE, PIERRE DE.

Delás, José Luis (de) (b Barcelona, 28 March 1928). Spanish composer and conductor. After studying law and music in Barcelona from 1946 to 1949 he studied composition and conducting at the Munich Musikhochschule and at Waltershausen's seminar course from 1950 to 1954. In 1956 he was appointed conductor of the Bilbao SO, and he was invited to conduct at a series of concerts of contemporary music held in Barcelona between 1957 and 1958. Delás left Spain for Cologne in 1958 and has worked for various German radio organizations. From 1968 to 1970 he was a member of the electronic music studio at Utrecht University. In 1993 he was appointed professor of composition and analysis at Madrid University. Delás's interest in polytonal and established dodecaphonic techniques is evident in his early compositions from 1947 onwards; he was subsequently drawn to avant-garde serial developments. In 1964 he began to employ aleatory forms and quotation, and to explore timbre variation with greater insistence. Delás has found further stimulation in surrealist literature and in painting (particularly that of Wols, Tàpies and Rothko). In 1995 he was awarded the National Music Prize of Spain.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Vc Con., 1973; Concetti, chbr orch, 1974–5 [after C. Gesualdo]; Les paroles et l'air, 1986; Símbolos del sonar, chbr orch, 1990; Episodios en el recuerdo, 1993; Al sonoro cristal, al cristal mudo, 1994; Textos, 1995
Other works: Imago, ens, 1965; Obraz, hp, 1966; Noticia, pf, 1967; Eilanden, ens, tape, 1967; Outremer clair et foncé, pf, 1971; Cinco sellos, ens, tape, 1972; Denkbild-kurze Schatten, ens, 1977; Memoria, S, chorus, orch, 1977; Les profondeurs de la nuit, 2 S, chbr orch, 1996
Principal publisher: Gerig

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ed. T. Marco: Historia de la musica espanola, ed. P. López de Osaba, vi: Siglo XX (Madrid, 1983, 2/1989; Eng. trans. as Spanish Music in the Twentieth Century, 1993)
T. Marco: La música de la España contemporánea (Madrid, 1970), 36 only José Luis Delás, Musik-Konzepte, no.78 (1992)

RUDOLF LÜCK/ANTONI PIZÀ

De la Sable, Antoine. See ARENA, ANTONIUS DE.

Delasol. The pitch d'' in the HEXACHORD system.

Delasolre. The pitch d' in the HEXACHORD system.

De Latre [Delatre, De Lattre, Laetrius, De Latere], Petit Jean [Jehan, Jan; Johannes Petit] (*b c*1510; d Utrecht, 31 Aug 1569). Dutch composer. From 1538 to 1539 (the records from before and after are lost) he was maître de chant of the collegiate church of St Jean l'Evangéliste in Liège, and 'Petit Jan succentor' appears in the account books of the collegiate church of St Martin, Liège, for the first time in November 1544. His pupils there included Johannes Mangon and Gerard de Villers. He was appointed maître de chapelle by Georg of Austria, Prince-Bishop of Liège, about 1550. His obligations in this post probably caused him to neglect his duties at St Martin, whose chapter, on 23 November 1554, threatened to dismiss him, but he is still mentioned in the accounts from October 1555 until May 1562. Georg of Austria's early death in 1557 deprived De Latre of an excellent job and a sympathetic patron to whom he had dedicated his 1552 collection of chansons.

De Latre's Lamentations show that he had contacts outside Liège (such as Paulus Chimarrhaeus) many years before becoming archimusicus celebrissimi chori at Amersfoort in 1563. On returning to Liège, De Latre became succentor at St Martin, but was dismissed in 1564 because of debts he had incurred. From December 1565 'Magister Johannes de Latre Cantor' was a member of the chapter of the Janskerk, Utrecht. There, too, he contracted debts, and he was called before the tribunal on 12 December 1567. He probably became kapelmeester of the Buurkerk in Utrecht, where his tombstone described him as 'D.O.M. Johanni Petit de Latre, musici excellentissimi'.

De Latre had several children, including two sons who were duodenus at St Martin. A Petit Jean who, according to Vannes, was at the Church of Our Lady, 's-Hertogenbosch, in 1522 and left in 1530 to enter the service of Emperor Charles V is probably not the same man. The composer of a four-part chanson published at Paris in 1540 (RISM 1540^{14}) ascribed to 'De Lattre' may be Petit Jean de Latre, but another possible composer for it is François de Lattre, singer and chaplain at the French Chapelle Royale and a canon at Amiens Cathedral in 1553. The earlier confusion with Claude Petit Jehan (d 1589) has been conclusively removed by Lesure.

Although his printed works are identifiable, there is still confusion about De Latre's name in manuscript copies. The pieces that can be attributed to him with most certainty appeared in three personal collections and numerous anthologies printed in the Netherlands between 1547 and 1564 and in Germany between 1561 and 1564; a few pieces were reprinted as late as about 1660. His motets are remarkable for their supple melody and careful accentuation of the text. He favoured the strict imitative style prevalent in the Netherlands after Gombert and Clemens, but was more concerned with creating an atmosphere appropriate to the words than with showing off his technical skill. He excelled in the classical love-songs of the 16th century, treating them in a pleasingly restrained manner. Homophony dominates the texture, although imitation is often used at the beginning of his works. The syllabic settings in his chansons give them a rhythmic vigour reminiscent of the Parisian chanson, and his style is close to that of Crecquillon.

WORKS

SACRED

[9] Lamentationes aliquot Jeremiae Musicae noviter adaptae, adiectis aliquot [3] cantionibus, 3–6vv (Maastricht, 1554)

14 motets, 1547^{5}, 1553^{9}, 1554^{1}, 1554^{5}, 1555^{5}, 1555^{6}, 1555^{7}, 1556^{5}, 1556^{9}, 1564^{5}; 1 ed. in Collectio operum musicorum batavorum saeculi XVI, viii (Berlin, 1844–58); 1 ed. J. Quitin, Les musiciens de Saint-Jean l'Evangeliste à Liège de Johannes Ciconia à Monsieur Babou vers 1400–vers 1710 (Liège, 1982)

2 motets in A-Wn 18828, D-Kl Mus.4.91, Brieg 42 (now in PL-WRu)

SECULAR

[29] Chansons à quatre parties . . . premier livre (Leuven, 1552); ed. J. Quitin (Liège, 1988)

Cantionum musicarum (Düsseldorf, 1563) [13 Fr., 10 Flem., 1 macaronic chansons]

23 chansons, 1552^{8}, 1552^{9}, 1552^{12}, 1552^{13}, 1553^{24}, 1554^{22}, 1555^{22}, 1556^{17}, 1560^{6}, 1560^{7}, Novi prorsus et elegantissimi libri musici (Düsseldorf, 1561), Livre septiesme (Leuven, 1564); 1 ed. J. Quitin, Les musiciens de Saint-Jean l'Evangéliste à Liège (Liège, 1982); 1 ed. in Bulletin de la Société liégeoise de musicologie, no.38 (1982)

2 Flem. chansons, 1554^{31}, 1572^{11}; 1 ed. in Cw, xcii (1964)

3 chansons intabulated for lute, 1549^{38}, 1552^{29}

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AudaM; VannesD

R.B. Lenaerts: Het Nederlands polifonies lied in de zestiende eeuw (Mechelen and Amsterdam, 1933)

U. Meissner: Der Antwerpener Notendrucker Tylman Susato (Berlin, 1967)

J. Quitin: 'La musique à Liège sous le règne de Georges d'Autriche (1544–1557)', Fédération archéologique et historique de Belgique: annales du Congrès XL: Liège 1968, 293–322

F. Lesure: 'Petit Jehan de Lattre (†1569) et Claude Petit Jehan (†1589)', Renaissance-muziek 1400–1600: donum natalicium René Bernard Lenaerts, ed. J. Robijns and others (Leuven, 1969), 155–6

J. Quitin: 'A propos de trois musiciens liégeois du 16e siècle: Petit Jean de Latre, Johannes Mangon et Mathieu de Sayve', Musicae scientiae collectanea: Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer zum siebzigsten Geburtstag, ed. H. Hüschen (Cologne, 1973), 451–62

J. Quitin: 'Deux chansons de Petit Jean de Latre (c.1510–1569)', Bulletin de la Société liégeoise de musicologie, no.3 (1973), 12–13

P. Ilgen: 'Petit Jan de Latre (†1569): zu einem Notenfund in der Gaesdoncker Klosterbibliothek', Gaesdoncker Blätter, no.34 (1981), 50–73

B.J.P. Salemans: 'Jacob Bathen, Printer, Publisher and Bookseller in Louvain, Maastricht and Düsseldorf c.1545 to c.1557', Quaerendo, xix (1989), 3–47

H. Vanhulst: Catalogue des editions de musique publiées à Louvain par Pierre Phalèse et ses fils 1545–1578 (Brussels, 1990)

H. Vanhulst: 'Le manuscrit 41 des Archives communales de Bruges', Le concert des voix et des instruments à la Renaissance: Tours 1991, 231–42

H. Vanhulst: 'La fricassée de Jean de Latre (1564)', RBM, xlvii (1993), 81–90

R.L. Weaver: A Descriptive Bibliographical Catalog of the Music Printed by Hubert Waelrant and Jan de Laet (Warren, MI, 1994)

J.W. Bonda: De meerstemmige Nederlandse liederen van de vijftiende en zestiende eeuw (Hilversum, 1996)

JOSÉ QUITIN/HENRI VANHULST

Delaunay, Charles (b Paris, 18 Jan 1911; d Vineuil St Firmin, nr Paris, 16 Feb 1988). French writer on jazz, producer, and promoter. In 1933 he became a member of the Hot Club de France and in 1949 organized the Paris Jazz Fair. He established one of the earliest periodicals (Jazz-hot, 1935) and one of the first record labels in France (Swing, 1937) devoted exclusively to jazz. From 1939 he was the host of various radio programmes; he made weekly broadcasts (1945–55) and a series of live broadcasts of jazz performances ('Jazz Variétés') for French radio in the early 1950s. Delaunay was particularly active in the promotion of the Quintette du Hot Club de France and Django Reinhardt. He also organized concerts, produced recordings, gave lectures, and produced several short films (including Autour d'une trompette and Jam Session, both 1950). John Lewis dedicated to him the composition Delaunay's Dilemma (1954). Delaunay's writings are characterized by a constant attention to detail and an openness towards widely differing styles. He is best known as a pioneer of jazz discography, as well as for having established the name of the discipline.

WRITINGS

Hot Discography (Paris, 1936, rev. 4/1943 as Hot discographie, enlarged by W.E. Schaap and G. Avakian as New Hot Discography: the Standard Directory of Recorded Jazz, New York, 5/1948/R)

De la vie et du jazz (Lausanne, 1939, 2/1941)

Hot Iconography (Lausanne, 1945)

Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., 1961/R, 2/1981) [incl. discography] with K. Mohr: Hot discographie encyclopédique (Paris, 1951) [inc., A – Hefti, Neal only]

Souvenirs (Lausanne, 1954)

Sidney Bechet (Paris, 1963)

Django, mon frère (Paris, 1968)

Delaunay's Dilemma: de la peinture au jazz (Mâcon, 1985) with P. du Peuty: Noirs au blanc: images de jazzmen (Paris, 1986) [portraits] with M. Ruppli: Swing (Paris, 1989) [discography of the Swing label] with M. Ruppli: Vogue Productions (Paris, 1992–) [discography]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: 'Meet the Critics', The New Yearbook of Jazz (New York, 1958), 85–98

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Delaval, Mme (fl London, 1791–1802). French or English composer, harpist and pianist. She may have been a daughter of the French singer Henri Larrivée (either Adelaide or Agathe) and may have belonged to the Delaval family of Seaton Delaval, Northumberland. She studied the harp with J.B. Krumpholtz, who was in Paris from 1777 (d 1790). Her name appears on many London concert programmes of the 1790s, including those of the Salomon concerts at the Hanover Square Rooms. Her compositions for harp include three sonatas with violin ad lib, Prelude and Divertimento with two horns ad lib, a Grand Sonata with violin, tenor (instrument) and cello ad lib, and two sets of variations. She also wrote a cantata, Les adieux de l'infortune Louis XVI à son peuple.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL; SainsburyD; SchillingE

R. Fiske: 'The Harp in Jane Austen's Day', United Kingdom Harp Association Journal, no.58 (1981), spr., 8–11

T. Milligan: 'Harp Concertos in London in the Late 18th Century', American Harp Journal, viii/1 (1981), 28–40

BONNIE SHALJEAN

Delavergne, Antoine-Barthélemy. See LAVERGNE, ANTOINE-BARTHÉLEMY.

Delavigne, Germain (b Giverny, Eure, 1 Feb 1790; d Montmorency, 30 Nov 1868). French playwright and librettist. He was the elder brother of Casimir Delavigne, who under the Restoration made his name with patriotic verses and then became a successful dramatist, presenting liberal ideas in tragedies that combined classical tradition with nicely judged novelty in subject, theme and technique. On one occasion Germain worked with Casimir on a libretto, Charles VI, which was set to music by Halévy in 1843. His usual collaborator, however, was Eugène Scribe, whom he had met when both were schoolboys at the Collège Ste-Barbe in Paris. A large number of comédies-vaudevilles appeared under their joint names; these lighthearted little plays, often with some particular relevance to the topic of the hour, were interspersed with songs, which were frequently sung to popular tunes. They also collaborated on librettos for two of the most flagrantly Romantic, and most successful, operas of their time, La muette de Portici (Auber, 1828) and Robert le diable (Meyerbeer, 1831). A taste for the Gothic is further evident in such works as Les mystères d'Udolphe (Clapisson, 1852) and La nonne sanglante (Gounod, 1854).

CHRISTOPHER SMITH

De la Viola. See DALLA VIOLA family.

DeLay, Dorothy (b Medicine Lodge, KS, 31 March 1917). American violinist and teacher. She studied at Oberlin College, with Michael Press at Michigan State University and with Louis Persinger and Raphael Bronstein at the Juilliard School of Music. During this time she was active as a soloist and in chamber music and founded the Stuyvesant Trio with her sister Nellie (cellist) and Helen Brainard (pianist) in 1942. In 1946 she became interested in the Galamian method and was Galamian's chief assistant for 20 years, after which she formed her own classes, for which she became known internationally. She has been on the faculties of the Juilliard School, Sarah Lawrence College, New England Conservatory and Cincinatti College Conservatory, and teaches at the Meadowmount and Aspen Summer Schools. She has given masterclasses throughout the world and has received many honours. DeLay is a dedicated teacher, sensitive to both the musical and the psychological needs of her students, many of whom have been awarded first prizes in international competitions. Among her best-known pupils are Itzhak Perlman, Schlomo Mintz and Cho-Liang-Lin.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchwarzGM

E. Wen: 'Delaying Tactics', The Strad, xcv (1984), 516–18

H. Epstein: Music Talks (New York, 1987)

J. Duchen: 'Response and Responsibility', The Strad, ci (1990), 127–9

E. Chadwick: 'Delayed Learning', The Strad, cvi (1995), 249–51

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Del Bivi, Paolo Antonio. See ARETINO, PAOLO.

Delbos [Messiaen], Claire (b Paris, 2 Nov 1906; d Bourg La Reine, Hauts de Seine, 22 April 1959). French composer and violinist. The daughter of Victor Delbos (a professor at the Sorbonne), she studied the violin and composition at the Paris Conservatoire. Delbos composed several organ works, including Paraphrase sur le jugement dernier and L'offrande à Marie, for Messiaen, whom she married on 22 June 1932. Messiaen's pet-name for Delbos was 'Mi', which appears as a cryptic dedication in musical notation on his Thème et variations, and more explicitly in the titles of the Poèmes pour Mi, and 'Bail avec Mi (pour ma femme)', no.1 of the Chants de terre et de ciel. The couple's only child, Pascal, was born in 1937.

Delbos wrote three sets of songs for voice and piano, all of which received performances at the Société Nationale de Musique. The five aphoristic settings of poems by Cécile Sauvage, Messiaen's mother, which make up the set Primevère, are characteristic of Delbos' concise, somewhat astringent musical language.

L'âme en bourgeon, first performed by Marcelle Bunlet (accompanied by Messiaen) in 1937 and repeated at the Société Nationale in 1938, was described by Roger Vinteuil in Le Ménestrel (7 May 1937) as 'treating the voice without regard to easily recalled melodic graces, using instead a sort of unadorned, mystical chant. Around the voice, however, the piano accompaniment weaves a rich, finely-nuanced and varied commentary'. In 1947 Ginette Guillamat and Messiaen gave the first performance of Trois aspects de la mort, again at the Société Nationale.

Near the end of World War II, Delbos had an operation, following which her mental condition deteriorated. She remained in an institution until her death.

WORKS
(selective list)

Songs (all for 1v, pf): Primevère (C. Sauvage), 5 songs: Le long de mes genoux, J'ai peur d'être laide, Mais je suis belle d'être aimée, Je suis née à l'amour, Dans ma robe à bouquets bleus, 1935; L'âme en bourgeon (C. Sauvage), 8 songs: Dors, Mon coeur revient à son printemps, Je suis là, Te voilà hors de l'alvéole, Je savais que ce serait toi, Maintenant il est né, Te voilà mon petit amant, Ai-je pu t'appeler de l'ombre, 1937; 3 aspects de la mort: Sans espérance (C. Sauvage), Lamentation et terreur (Bible: Job), Vers elle, avec confiance (R. de Obaldia), first perf. 1947

Org: 2 pièces: L'homme né de la femme vit peu de jours, La Vierge berce l'enfant (1935); Paraphrase sur le jugement dernier, 1939; L'offrande à Marie, 6 pieces: Voici la servante du Seigneur, Vierge digne de louanges, Mère des pauvres, Mère toute-joyeuse, Debout, la Mère des douleurs, Secours des Chrétiens, reine de la paix, 1943; Parce, Domine 'Pardonnez, Seigneur, à votre peuple', pour le temps de Carême (1952)

Principal publishers: Leduc, Hérelle, Lemoine

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Goléa: Rencontres avec Olivier Messiaen (Paris, 1960), 151–2

A.I. Cohen: International Encyclopedia of Women Composers (New York, 2/1987)

B. Massin: Olivier Messiaen: une poétique du merveilleux (Aix-en-Provence, 1989), 172

M. Jaquet-Langlais: Jean Langlais (1907–1991): ombre et lumière (Paris, 1995), 70

N. Simeone: Olivier Messiaen: a Bibliographical Catalogue (Tutzing, 1998), 33–5; 219, 221

NIGEL SIMEONE

Del Buono, Gioanpietro [Giovanni Pietro] (b Naples; d Palermo, in or before 1657). Italian composer. Antonio La Greca, in the dedication to the Prince of Cassaro of his own Armonia sacra di vari mottetti (1657), described Del Buono as a 'swan of the Sebeto', the river that crosses Naples, and stated that 'he lived glorious for a long time' at the Prince of Cassaro's court in Palermo. Del Buono dedicated his Canoni, oblighi et sonate in varie maniere sopra l'Ave maris stella . . . a 3. 4. 5. 6. 7 et 8 voci, e le sonate a 4 (Palermo, 1641) to G.A. Scribani, a rich Genoese banker who had settled in Palermo. In his preface he referred to the similar collection on the same cantus firmus that Francesco Soriano published in Rome in 1610. There are 84 numbered items, 12 of which are obblighi for four to seven voices. The other 72 are canons 'in various manners' for three to eight voices on every degree of the scale from the unison to the 10th above and below, some with 'certain strangenesses'; one of the parts is always the cantus firmus in long notes.

Unlike Soriano's collection, Del Buono's includes 14 harpsichord sonatas, notated in four-stave score (ed. P.E. Carapezza, Kraków, 1989), which are the first to be named Sonate di cimbalo. They exploit the instrument's every technical device and sonority with extraordinary virtuosity, making use of both old (e.g. hocket in nos.2 and 9) and new (e.g. passaggi in parellel 6ths in no.6 and rebounding arpeggios in no.8) compositional techniques. Varying greatly from one another, the pieces can be regarded as enlarged and developed sections (partite) of a single capriccio, written in the style of Frescobaldi and Michelangelo Rossi. Like the verses of a single hymn, however, the cantus firmus (always in the lower of the two inner parts, except in the last sonata) is complete in long notes in every piece. The fifth sonata (Fuga cromatica) and the seventh (Stravagante, e per il cimbalo cromatico) are two of the more interesting ones.

Del Buono stands out from the other Neapolitan keyboard composers of his generation, such as Giovanni Salvatore, Bernardo Storace and Gregorio Strozzi.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; NewmanSBE; SchmidlD
W.S. Newman: 'The 14 Sonate di cimbalo by GIovanni Pietro Del Buono', CHM, ii (1956–7), 297–310
W. Apel: 'Die süditalienische Clavierschule des 17. Jahrhunderts', AcM, xxxiv (1962), 128–41
P.E. Carapezza: 'Le quattordici Sonata di Cimbalo di Gioan Pietro Del Buono (Palermo, 1641)', AnMc, xxii (1984), 131–47
D. Ficola: 'Stampe musicali siciliane a Malta', Musica sacra in Sicilia tra Rinascimento e Barocco: Caltagirone 1985, 69–86, esp. 77
P.E. Carapezza: 'Una margarita di quattordici carati': preface to G. Del Buono: Sonate di cimbalo, Constellatio Musica (Kraków, 1989)

PAOLO EMILIO CARAPEZZA, GIUSEPPE COLLISANI

Del Campo, Conrado. See CAMPO (Y ZABALETA), CONRADO DEL.

Del Chitarino, Pietrobono. See PIETROBONO DE BURZELLIS.

Del Cornetto, Ascanio. See TROMBETTI, ASCANIO.

Delden, Lex van [Zwaap, Alexander] (b Amsterdam, 10 Sept 1919; d Amsterdam, 1 July 1988). Dutch composer. He studied medicine at Amsterdam University, but as a Jew he was forced to interrupt his studies during World War II. Van Delden was self-taught as a composer. Between 1947 and 1982 he was music editor of the daily paper Het parool, and published many articles in Dutch and foreign periodicals. During his life he held several administrative posts in Dutch musical life, including chairmanships of the Society of Dutch Composers (GeNeCo) and the Office of Music Copyright (BUMA). The first of Delden's works to attract attention was the cantata Rubáiyát, awarded the music prize of the City of Amsterdam in 1948. His Harp Concerto and Impromptu for solo harp were awarded prizes by the Northern California Harpists' Association in 1953 and 1956. Many of his compositions were commissioned by the Dutch government, the City of Amsterdam and Dutch radio. Van Delden expresses his strong social concern in his works: In memoriam was written in response to the flood disaster of 1953, while Canto della guerra and Die vogel vrijheid are condemnations of war and slavery respectively. His compositional style is overtly tonal and based on conventional forms. He often builds a work from one fairly concise idea; the tenacity to this starting point generates a conflict which provides the impetus for the music. The resolution generally takes the initial idea through a mosaic of variations.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Hp Conc., 1952; In memoriam, op.38, 1953; Sym. no.3 'Facetten', op.45, 1955; Sym. no.4, op.56, 1957; Sym. no.5, op.65, 1959; Piccolo Conc., op.67, 12 wind, timp, perc, pf, 1960; Conc., op.71, 2 str orch, 1961; Sym. no.6, op.69/81, 1961/3; Sym. no.7 'Sinfonia concertante', op.83, 11 wind, 1964; Sym. no.8, op.84, str, 1964; Musica sinfonica, op.93, 1967; Conc., op.94, perc, cel, str, 1968; Conc., op.100, Hammond org, orch, 1973; concs. for vn, tpt, fl, pf, 2 ob, 2 s sax (vn, va, db); ballet music

Vocal: L'amour (M. Desbordes-Valmore, L. Labé), op.1, S, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, 1939; Rubáiyát (cant., Omar Khayyám, trans. E. FitzGerald), op.19, S, T, chorus, 2 pf, perc, 1948; Die vogel vrijheid (orat, J.W. Schulte Nordholt), op.46, S, Bar, chorus, childrens' chorus, orch, 1955; 3 Sonnetten van Shakespeare, op.72, A, pf, 1961; Canto della guerra (D. Erasmus), op.92, chorus, orch, 1967; Adonias' Dood [Adonijah's Death] (J. van den Vondel), op.113, male chorus, sym. band, 1986

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, op.43, 1954; Impromptu, op.48, hp, 1955; Str Qt no.2, op.86, 1965; Pf Trio no.1, op.95, 1969; Str Sextet, op.97, 1971; Nonet voor Amsterdam, op.101, cl, bn, hn, str qt, db, pf, 1975; Str Qt no.3, op.106, 1979; Sestetto per Gemelli, op.110, fl, ob, str trio, pf, 1983; Pf Trio no.2, op.114, 1988

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Paap: 'Lex van Delden', Mens en melodie, x (1955), 175–177
W. Paap: 'Lex van Delden', Music in Holland (Amsterdam, 1960), 45
M. Monnikendam: Nederlandse Componisten (Amsterdam, 1968), 213
L. Samama: Zeventig jaar Nederlandse muziek 1915–1985 (Amsterdam, 1986), 204–5
J. Koelewijn: 'Lex van Delden', Vrij Nederland, no.40 (1989), 20

JOS WOUTERS/LEO SAMAMA

Deldevez, Edmé(-Marie-Ernest) [Edme, Edouard, Emile] (b Paris, 31 May 1817; d Paris, 6 Nov 1897). French violinist, conductor, composer and teacher. At the age of six he began violin lessons with Sudre, who then took him and the young pianist Louis Lacombe on an 'artistic journey' of several months. On 1 March 1825 he entered the Conservatoire, where he studied for the next 16 years, winning several first and second prizes and, in 1838, second place in the Prix de Rome for his cantata La vendetta. His teachers included Habeneck, Reicha, Halévy and Berton; with the latter's help he gave a concert of his own compositions on 6 December 1840.

Deldevez began his professional career as a violinist, first at the Opéra from 1833, and then at the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire from 1839. However, conducting became more important, and he took up positions at both institutions from 1847 and 1872 respectively. He became principal conductor at the Opéra in 1873, and ensured the continuity of performances after the fire at the Salle Le Peletier, directing the inaugural performance at the new Garnier building on 5 January 1875. According to Saint-Saëns, Deldevez was the most important conductor at the Société des Concerts since Habeneck, whose tradition he continued; he was the first real champion of the works of Berlioz.

On 11 November 1871 he was appointed a member of the examining committee for string classes at the Conservatoire, and under Ambroise Thomas, then director of the Conservatoire, he became the first official teacher of orchestral conducting in France, in a post created for him on 15 October 1873 (in which he remained until 1885). He was influential as a teacher and theorist, and wrote a number of theoretical works on specific aspects of music, and also edited anthologies of other composers' works. His own compositional style reflected his love of tradition and the influence of his teachers, particularly Halévy and Berton. However, it was above all his talents as an orchestrator that were recognized by his contemporaries; Gounod and Berlioz in particular paid tribute to his skill.

WORKS

MSS at F-Pn, printed works published in Paris

SACRED

3 requiems: op.7, 1843 (n.d.); op.28 no.1, 1877; op.28 no.2, 1870
Choeurs religieux, hymnes, op.18 (1847)
O salutaris, op.14a, 1847 (n.d.)
Prière pour la paix, op.28 no.6 (1870)

DRAMATIC

Ops: Samson, 1837, lost; Lionel Foscari (1), 1841, *F-Pn; Le violon enchanté (2), op.20 (1848); L'éventail (oc, 1, M. Carré), op.25 (1854); La ronde des sorcières (2, H. Lucas)
Scènes lyriques: Agar, 1831, *Pn; Marie Stuart, 1837, lost; La vendetta (cant.), 1838, op.16 (n.d.); Fernand, 1839, *Pn; Loyse de Monfort (E. Deschamps), 6 Dec 1840, *Pn; Lionel Foscari (cant., Pastoret), 1841, *Pn; Cantate pour le mariage de l'Empereur, 15 Feb 1853, *Pn; Velléda (C. Dovalle), 1854 (n.d.); Monologue (1869)
Ballets: Lady Henriette (3, H. de Saint-Georges, Mazilier), op.5, 1844, *Po; Eucharis, op.11a, 1844, *Po; Paquita (2, P. Foucher), op.6, 1846, *Pn; Mazarina, ou La reine des abruzzes (5), op.11b, 24 Sept 1846, *Po (also perf. in Brussels as Catarina, ou La fille du bandit); Vert-vert (3), op.12, 1851, *Po; Yanko le bandit (2), op.21, 22 April 1858, *Po; Suite de ballets pour orchestre, op.27 (1–6), 1875 (n.d.); Aux casinos, divertissements, ou airs de ballets, *c*1855, *Pn; Pas de deux, *Pn

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Ov. de concert, op.1 (1838); Sym. no.1, op.2 (1839); Ov. de Robert Bruce, op.3 (1841); Sym. no.2, 'in stile maestoso', op.8 (1847); Ov. du violon enchanté, op.20 (1848); Sym. no.3, 'héroï-comique', op.15 (1856); Rêveries dinannaises, pf, vn, vc, orch, chorus, op.26 (1873); Suite de pièces caractéristiques, op.26bis, 1887 (n.d.)
Chbr: Trio, pf, vn, vc, op.9, 1849; Str qt, op.10 no.1, 1849; Str qt, op.10 no.2, 1850; Divertissements, ou airs de ballets, pf (1852); Trio no.2, pf, vn, vc, op.23, 1859; duos; pieces for vn, pf
*c*20 ballades, romances, morceaux de chants, duos

WRITINGS

all published in Paris

La notation de la musique classique comparée à la notation de la musique moderne (1867)
Principe de la formation des intervalles et des accords d'après le système de la tonalité moderne (1867)
Curiosités musicales (1872)
L'art du chef d'orchestre (1878)
La Société des concerts, 1860 à 1885 (1887)
De l'exécution d'ensemble (1888)
Mes mémoires (1890)
Du passé à propos du présent faisant suite à Mes mémoires (1892)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Dandelot: La Société des concerts du Conservatoire (1828–1923) (Paris, 1898, many later edns, enlarged 1923)
C. Pierre: Le Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1900)
G. Streletski: 'Les chefs d'orchestre-violinistes dans la France du XIXe siècle', Du Baroque à l'époque contemporaine: aspects des instruments à archet, ed. A. Penesco (Paris, 1993), 87–106
G. Streletski: Hector Berlioz et Edmé-Marie-Ernest Deldevez: étude comparée de leur formation et de leur insertion dans la société du XIXe siècle (1803–1897) (diss., U. of Paris, 1995)

GÉRARD STRELETSKI

De Lemene, Francesco (b Lodi, 19 Feb 1634; d Lodi, 24 July 1704). Italian librettist. He came from a noble family (although the title of count was given him by the Duke of Mantua), and received a law degree at Pavia in 1655, having also studied at some time in Bologna. A career in the Spanish administration led him first to Milan as Public Orator and then to Lodi with the post of Decurion. His first stay in Rome was in 1661; he later established close relations there with the circle of Queen Christina of Sweden, for which he wrote Il giudizio di Paride (1666, lost), followed by Il Narciso (favola boschereccia, 1676, music by Carlo Borzio) and La ninfa Apollo (Scherzo scenico per musica, 1692, music by C.A. Badia). These works have a tender, comic-erotic character in the best style of Giambattista Marino. Following a period of illness, and influenced by his friendship with the poet and playwright Carlo Maria Maggi, De Lemene adopted in 1680 a typically Arcadian style and also wrote sacred poetry (Il Dio, 1684; Il rosario, 1691). He was a member of various academies and joined Arcadia in 1691 as Arezio Gateatico. Beyond their melodramatic structure, the favole per musica display the stylistic features of Marino, whose influence is still evident; there are shepherds and gods, a mood of refined sentiment but also a vitality reminiscent of Anacreon's verse, as well as De Lemene's own somewhat learned experiments with metre. His last work was Endimione (favola per musica, 1692, music by Paolo Magni and Giacomo Griffini), an Arcadian pastoral full of symbolism and virtuous love. De Lemene's lyric output was large, and his oratorios were easy-mannered and gallant. The dialectical comedy La sposa Francesca, with its tender, everyday realism, became justly famous.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (M.G. Accorsi)
F. De Lemene: Poesie diverse (Milan and Parma, 1698–9)
T. Ceva: Memorie d'alcune virtù del signor conte Francesco de Lemene con alcune riflessioni sulle sue poesie (Milan, 1706)
L.A. Muratori: Vita di Francesco de Lemene (Rome, 1708)
C. Vignati: 'Francesco de Lemene e il suo epistolario inedito', Archivio storico lombardo, xix (1892), 345–76, 629–70
B. Maier: 'Lemene, Francesco de', Dizionario critico della letteratura italiana, ed. V. Branca (Turin, 1974)
M.G. Accorsi: Pastori e teatro: dal melodramma al dramma ebraico in La Colonia Renia, ii (Modena, 1988), 291–7
M.G. Accorsi, ed.: F. De Lemene: Scherzi e favole per musica (Modena, 1992)

MARIA GRAZIA ACCORSI

Delerue, Georges (b Roubaix, 12 March 1925; d Los Angeles, 20 March 1992). French composer. He attended the Paris Conservatoire on a scholarship, where he studied composition with Milhaud and Büsser. He graduated with a premier prix in composition, and in 1949 won the Prix de Rome. In the 1940s he conducted and composed for French radio and the stage, writing theatre music for Jean Vilar's Théâtre National Populaire, for the Comédie Française, and for Jean-Louis Barrault's company, where he became friends with Boulez and Maurice Jarre. During the late 1940s and early 50s, he wrote several orchestral works, operas (including Ariane, 1954) and ballets.

He turned to film music in the early 1950s, composing new scores for some of the French silent classics, including René Clair's Un chapeau de paille d'Italie (1927) and Les deux timides (1928). He went on to write over 350 film scores, enjoying long-lasting collaborations with several directors, including François Truffaut, with whom he made a dozen films, and Philippe de Broca, with whom he made 16, including the cult success Le roi de coeur (1966). In the 1960s he wrote scores for several important British films, including A Man for All Seasons (1966), Anne of the Thousand Days (1969) and Ken Russell's first feature film Women in Love (1969). Other landmark films on which he was involved during this period include Jean-Luc Godard's Le mépris (1963) and Bernardo Bertolucci's Il conformista (1970), one of his best scores. In the 1970s he moved to Los Angeles, where he had a number of commercial successes, including Mike Nichols's Silkwood (1983) and Oliver Stone's Platoon (1986), but he continued to work mostly on French productions. He died shortly after the première of his last film, Dien bien phu (1992), at the Berlin Film Festival. He was made a Commandeur des Arts et Lettres, and received Academy Award nominations for his work on Anne of the Thousand Days, The Day of the Dolphin (1973), Julia (1977) and Agnes of God (1985), in addition to his one Oscar for A Little Romance (1979).

Delerue composed with great speed and facility, and his heightened lyric sense produced some of the most original scores in French cinema. Richly orchestrated, his music shares with that of his contemporary Maurice Jarre an essentially Romantic style, with a pervasive undercurrent of melancholy. He aimed at a simple style, while successfully avoiding frivolity and triviality. He indulged in self-borrowing throughout his career, re-using and elaborating favourite themes associated with specific subjects and emotions. His films with Truffaut remain his most memorable work, Delerue finding himself attuned to Truffaut's lyrical evocations of youth and love. In Jules et Jim (1961), he succeeds in charting the film's complex contrasts of mood, whether in the fast-paced riotous passages, or in the haunting, melancholy theme which personifies Jeanne Moreau in love and ultimately death. His Baroque-style score for La nuit américaine (1973) brought a particular elegance to a film about the process of film-making itself, which shows the members of Truffaut's film crew, including Delerue himself, at work. The composer had a cameo appearance in Truffaut's Les deux anglaises et le continent (1971).

WORKS
(selective list)

FILM SCORES
directors' names in parentheses

Nuit et brouillard (A. Resnais), 1955; Un amour de poche (P. Kast), 1957; Hiroshima mon amour (Resnais), 1959; La française et l'amour (J.-P. Le Chanois), 1960; Tirez sur le pianiste (F. Truffaut), 1960; Une aussi longue absence (H. Colpi), 1961; Les guêpes (G. Dhuit), 1961; Jules et Jim (Truffaut), 1961; L'amour à vingt ans (Truffaut), 1962; L'immortelle (A. Robbe-Grillet), 1962; Le mépris (J.-L. Godard), 1963; La peau douce (Truffaut), 1964; Viva Maria! (L. Malle), 1965; A Man for All Seasons (F. Zinnemann), 1966; Le roi de coeur (P. de Broca), 1966; Le vieil homme et l'enfant (Berri), 1966; Interlude (K. Billington), 1968

Anne of the Thousand Days (C. Jarrott), 1969; Women in Love (K. Russell), 1969; Il conformista (B. Bertolucci), 1970; The Horsemen (J. Frankenheimer), 1970; Les deux anglaises et le continent (Truffaut), 1971; Une belle fille comme moi (Truffaut), 1972; The Day of the Dolphin (M. Nichols), 1973; La nuit américaine (Truffaut), 1973; The Day of the Jackal (Zinnemann), 1973; L'incorrigible (de Broca), 1975; Julia (Zinnemann), 1977; A Little Romance (G.R. Hill), 1979; L'amour en fuite (Truffaut), 1979; Le dernier métro (Truffaut), 1980; La femme d'à côté (Truffaut), 1981; L'africain (de Broca), 1983; L'été meurtrier (J. Becker), 1983

Silkwood (M. Nichols), 1983; The Black Stallion Returns (R. Dalva), 1983; Vivement dimanche (Truffaut), 1983; Agnes of God (M. Jewison), 1985; Conseil de famille (A. Costa-Gavras), 1986; Platoon (O. Stone), 1986; Salvador (Stone), 1986; The Lonely Passion of Judith Hearne (J. Clayton), 1987; Biloxi Blues (Nichols), 1988; Der Atem (Scilling), 1988; Steel Magnolias (H. Ross), 1989; Strapless (D. Hare), 1989; Mister Johnson (B. Beresford), 1991; Black Robe (Beresford), 1992; Dien bien phu (P. Schoendoerffer), 1992

OTHER WORKS

Stage: Les trois mousquetaires (ballet, F. Flindt, after A. Dumas); Ariane (chbr op, after M. Polac), 1954; Le chevalier de la neige (op, after B. Vian), 1956

Orch: Panique, 1949: Concertino, tpt, str, 1951; Concertino, pf, chbr orch, 1954; Dialogue concertant, tpt, trbn, str, timp, 1973; Conc., hn, str, 1980; Conc., t trbn, str, 1980; Prélude et danse, ob, str, 1980

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1948; Vitrail, brass qnt, 1979; Sonata, tpt, org, 1980; Diptyque, fl, 1981

Principal publisher: Billaudot

MARK BRILL

Delfert, Charles. See HELFER, CHARLES D'.

Delgadillo, Luis Abraham (b Managua, 25 Aug 1887; d Managua, 20 Dec 1961). Nicaraguan composer and pianist. As a result of the promise he showed in his early musical instruction in Managua, he was sent by the Nicaraguan government to study at the Milan Conservatory. He remained in Europe for five years and returned to Nicaragua to teach in various schools and direct the band of the Supremos Poderes (1915–21). He also held the post, created specifically for him, of director-general of musical culture. In 1937 he was appointed director of the first National School of Music in Managua, a post he held with a few absences until his death. He was also director of the small National Symphony Orchestra in Managua.

Delgadillo was the first Nicaraguan to write large orchestral works and remains the Nicaraguan classical composer with the greatest exposure on the American continent. He taught theory at the National Conservatory of Music in Mexico City (1921–5) and composition (1943–5) at the National School of Music in Panama, whose journal Armonía he edited. He toured Latin America extensively, lecturing and conducting programmes that usually featured his works. After a tour of several South American nations he wrote the Sinfonía incaica (1926), which he conducted in Caracas, Venezuela, on 20 May 1927. His orchestral suite Diciembre was given its première in Havana on 20 October 1929. In 1930 he conducted a concert of his works at the Carnegie Hall. His orchestral suite based on Mexican themes, Teotihuacán, was performed by the orchestra of Mexico's National University on 12 October 1941. His Intermezzo chino was performed by the National Symphony Orchestra of Formosa (Taiwan) in the 1950s.

Delgadillo's style was firmly grounded in compositional currents in Italy at the beginning of the century. He was the only composer in Nicaragua during his lifetime who attempted to utilize 20th-century classical techniques. However, his orchestral works whose titles incorporate names of composers that were his contemporaries, such as Obertura Debusyana (1908) and Obertura Schoenbergniana en los 12 tonos, capricho sinfónico (1954), do not in fact show a grasp of the more modern compositional trends. His Quartet no.4 'El moderno' was first performed in Mexico City in August 1957. Delgadillo described the second movement as atonal, but it actually uses whole-tone scales above functional harmony. He often claimed inspiration for his symphonic and shorter works from indigenous sources, both from Nicaragua as well as Guatemala and Mexico. Delgadillo was probably the first composer to undertake at least nominal research on the folk music of Nicaragua (on which virtually nothing had been published), though his output betrays a superficial familiarity with existing folk idioms. Most of his works labelled as Nicaraguan in character, such as Obertura indiana (1915), Sinfonía indígena (1921), and En el templo de Agat, danza indígena nicaragüense (1937) are based on speculative assertions of pre-Columbian musical practices typical of the era. Techniques commonly used to represent indigenous music include an extensive use of percussion, pentatonic melodies and open 4ths and 5ths in the otherwise functional harmonic support.

Between 1908 and 1952 he wrote nine major orchestral works, labelled obertura, sinfonía, and other titles. He wrote 12 sinfonías breves (1953–5), several other shorter works for chamber orchestra, two short concertos for piano (1943, 1945) and one for guitar (1954), the full opera Final de Norma (1914–30) and three operettas, three requiem masses, a total of string quartets and trios, two very short ballets and over 60 piano pieces, including 24 preludes dedicated to Chopin (1924).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, ii (Washington DC, 1956), 41–8

R. Sider: The Art Music of Central America: its Development and Present State (diss., Eastman School of Music, 1967)

T.M. SCRUGGS

Delgado (Chaves Rosa), Alexandre (b Lisbon, 8 June 1965). Portuguese composer and viola player. He was educated at the Fundação Musical dos Amigos das Crianças (FMAC) in Lisbon (1977–85). His first opus dates from as early as 1980, one year before he became a private pupil of Joly Braga Santos (1981–5). Unattracted by the avant garde, Delgado widened his horizons at the Nice Conservatoire (1986–9) with Jacques Charpentier, a former pupil of Messiaen. He also studied the viola privately with Barbara Friedhoff (1986–91).

Delgado's practical experience as a string player and also as conductor of FMAC's children's string orchestra (1981–6) came to fruition in his first major work, Turbilhão (1987), where idiomatic, textural writing is used in a quasi-Expressionist vein. Next came the Flute Concerto (1988), where sensitivity to contrasting atmospheres and a bent toward unceasing variation and polyphonic fluidity allow for neo-Impressionistic allusions. From 1990 Delgado's writing becomes more incisive and more concerned with clarity and detail. Its riches, which range from the dramatic to the burlesque, converge in the internationally acclaimed chamber opera O doido e a morte (1994, rev. in Eng., 1996), the last of a planned Trilogia da Loucura.

WORKS

(selective list)

Os nossos dias, fl, ob, hn, bn, 1987; Turbilhão, B, str qt, 1987; Fl Conc., 1988; Evoluções na Paisagem, orch, 1989; Antagonia, vc, 1990; Qt, 4 db, arr. vc, db, 1991, arr. str qt, as Burlesca, 1998; Str Qt, 1991; The Panic Flirt, fl, 1992; Langará, cl, 1992; O doido e a morte [Death and the Madman] (chbr op, 1, Delgado, after R. Brandão), 1994, rev. in Eng., 1996; Lisbon, S Carlos, 1994; Escaramuça, str, 1994; Pequena obsessão compulsiva, pf, 1995; Quien me libra …, gui, 1996; Tresvariacões, orch, 1999

Principal publisher: Musicoteca

WRITINGS

'Luis de Freitas Branco e o 1º modernismo português', Gazeta musical (Nov 1990)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Fernandes: Alexandre Delgado: aspectos da sua obra e personalidade (Lisbon, 1993)

I. Moody: 'Mensagens: Portuguese Music in the 20th Century', Tempo, no.198 (1996), 9–10

S. de Azevedo: A invencão dos sons, (Lisbon, 1998)

MANUEL PEDRO FERREIRA

Del Gaudio, Antonio. See GAUDIO, ANTONIO DAL.

Del Giudice, Cesare [Judice, Caesar de] (b Palermo, 28 Jan 1607; d Palermo, 13 Sept 1680). Italian composer. Of noble birth, he was descended through his father from the Usodimare family of Genoa and through his mother from the Opezinga family of Palermo. He graduated in jurisprudence on 28 January 1632. Mongitore, who included long, detailed articles on him and on almost every member of his family, stated that 'he excelled in music … and especially in the composition of pathetic songs, as can be seen in a large manuscript volume filled with his compositions which is preserved by his children'. This is lost, like all his other known music: a youthful Missa pro mortuis, which appears to have been chosen in 1666 for the first anniversary of the death of Philip IV of Spain and Sicily and was still performed in the churches of Palermo at the beginning of the 18th century, and two publications, Madrigali concertati a 2, 3 e 4 voci, da cantarsi col cembalo, e altre canzonette alla napolitana e alla romana per la chitarra spagnola (Messina, 1628) and Mottetti e madrigali (Palermo, 1635).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Mongitore: Bibliotheca Sicula, i, (Palermo, 1708/R), 119

PAOLO EMILIO CARAPEZZA, GIUSEPPE COLLISANI

D'Elia, Vincenzo (b Palermo, d ?Palermo, ?1655). Italian composer. In January 1636, in the dedication of his only work, he described himself as 'Lieutenant of the Royal Chapel and Organist of San Pietro in the Royal Palace' in Palermo; he succeeded Cornelio Drago as maestro di cappella on the latter's death in March 1636. In December 1653 he became a member of the Unione dei musici of Palermo. His Salmi ed inni di vesperi ariosi (Palermo, 1636), discovered in the archives of Mdina Cathedral, Malta, in 1979, contains 19 pieces, five for four voices, six for four soloists and four-part choir, and eight for two four-part choirs, all with organ continuo. They can be divided into two groups: the first includes invitatories and psalms marked 'in concerto', (i.e. based on the contrast between the solo voices and the tutti); the second ('Salmi della B[eata] V[ergine]') is a complete cycle of Vespers on the female cursus, with a Magnificat and four hymns. Here each of the pieces for double choir is explicitly described as 'corrente': the voices of the first and second choirs have equal importance and the style is dry and concise. The four-voice hymn 'Exsultet orbis gaudiis' contains two sinfonias for two violins accompanied by a basso continuo group of organ, harpsichord and viola.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Tiby: I polifonisti Siciliani del XVIe del XVII secolo (Palermo, 1969), 43, 100

D. Ficola: 'Stampe musicali siciliane a Malta', Musica sacra in Sicilia tra Rinascimento e Barocco: Caltagirone 1985, 69–86, esp. 74

U. D'Arpa: 'Notizie e documenti sull'Unione dei musici e sulla musica sacra a Palermo', I quaderni del conservatorio, i, ed. G. Collisani and D. Ficola (Palermo, 1988), 19–36, esp. 29ff

A. Tedesco: Il Teatro Santa Cecilia e il Seicento musicale palermitano (Palermo, 1992), 10, 243

PAOLO EMILIO CARAPEZZA, GIUSEPPE COLLISANI

Delibes, (Clément Philibert) Léo (b St Germain du Val, 21 Feb 1836; d Paris, 16 Jan 1891). French composer. His father was in the postal service, while his mother, an able musician, was the daughter of an opera singer and niece of the organist Edouard Batiste. Léo, the only child, learnt music from his mother and uncle; after his father's death in 1847 the family moved to Paris, where he entered Tariot's class at the Conservatoire. He obtained a premier prix in solfège in 1850 and later studied the organ with Benoist and composition with Adolphe Adam. His Conservatoire career was without distinction, and he never entered for the Prix de Rome. He was a chorister at Ste Marie-Madeleine and sang as a boy in the première of Meyerbeer's Le prophète at the Opéra in 1849. At the age of 17 he became organist of St Pierre-de-Chaillot and also accompanist at the Théâtre Lyrique. Although he remained a church organist until 1871, Delibes was clearly drawn more to the theatre. For a short time around 1858 he wrote criticism for the Gaulois hebdomadaire under the pseudonym Eloi Delbès, but he found his métier at Hervé's highly successful Folies-Nouvelles, where in 1856 his first stage work was played. Deux sous de charbon, an 'asphyxie lyrique' in one act, was the first of his many light operettas, appearing henceforth roughly one a year for 14 years. Many were written for the Bouffes-Parisiens, Offenbach's theatre, including his second piece, Deux vieilles gardes, which enjoyed enormous success, largely due to his gift for witty melody and lightness of touch.

In 1863 the Théâtre Lyrique mounted Delibes' Le jardinier et son seigneur, an opéra comique and an attempt at a less frivolous genre. As chorus master at the Théâtre Lyrique he worked on Gounod's Faust (the vocal score of which was Delibes' arrangement), Bizet's Les pêcheurs de perles and Berlioz's Les Troyens à Carthage. In 1864 he became chorus master at the Opéra, where new opportunities of far-reaching importance presented themselves. In 1866 he appeared for the first time as a ballet composer, sharing the composition of La source with Louis Minkus; the work was highly successful, especially Delibes' share of it. In 1869 he composed his last operetta, La cour du roi Pétaud, for the Variétés.

The decisive advance in Delibes' career came with the ballet Coppélia, ou La fille aux yeux d'émail, played at the Opéra on 2 May 1870. Based on E.T.A. Hoffmann, it has remained one of the best loved of all classical ballets and shows Delibes' musical gifts at their most appealing. In 1871 he gave up his duties at the Opéra and as an organist, married Léontine Estelle Denain and devoted himself wholly to composition. He now wrote fewer works, but they were larger in scale and conception. In 1873 the Opéra-Comique staged Le roi l'a dit, a comedy set in the time of Louis XIV, and in 1876 his second full-scale ballet Sylvia, on a mythological subject, was played at the Opéra. Jean de Nivelle, a more serious work, was an immediate success in 1880, although it was only once revived. In 1881 Delibes succeeded Reber as composition professor at the Conservatoire, despite his own admission that he knew nothing of fugue and counterpoint. In 1882 he wrote six pieces in elegant pastiche for Hugo's play Le roi s'amuse, and his opera Lakmé appeared at the Opéra-Comique on 14 April 1883 in a particularly splendid production (see illustration). Its success was lasting; the oriental colour, the superb part for the title role, a well-constructed libretto and the real charm of the music, all contributed to a work on which, with the ballets, Delibes' fame has rested. Delibes' last years were honoured and comfortable. In 1884 he was elected to the Institute. Another opera, Kassya, was completed but not orchestrated at his death in 1891. The scoring was undertaken by Massenet and the first performance given at the Opéra-Comique in 1893.

Henri Maréchal described Delibes as 'restless, fidgety, slightly befuddled, correcting and excusing himself, lavishing praise, careful not to hurt anyone's feelings, shrewd, adroit, very lively, a sharp critic'. A natural spontaneity and straightforwardness in his character was leavened by a certain lack of confidence, which increased as time went on. He admired Wagner and made the pilgrimage to Bayreuth in 1882, but like many French composers he found it impossible to let extreme modernisms enter his style. He regarded Franck's music with equal caution. His early music clearly belongs to the tradition of Boieldieu, Hérold and his teacher Adam, the last of whom provided the example of a sparkling operetta style; the more ambitious scale and elevated tone of his later works may be attributed to a determination to break out of Offenbach's milieu and prove himself as a composer of ballet and opera. His early admiration for Meyerbeer then became more evident, especially in Jean de Nivelle, and the contingency of Gounod, Bizet and Lalo may be observed. Delibes and Bizet had much in common and admired each other's work but were never close friends. They both contributed an act to Malbrough s'en va-t-en guerre in 1867, and Delibes was present at the première of Carmen in 1875. Lakmé is clearly indebted to both Les pêcheurs de perles and Carmen, and the similarities of the two composers' harmonic and orchestral nuances are often striking. Tchaikovsky's admiration for Delibes was unqualified, and even if Swan Lake was composed before he had heard either Coppélia or Sylvia, they were men of like minds and sympathies, and their works dominate the late 19th-century heritage of ballet.

In notices of Delibes' early music the same terms frequently recur: wit, charm, elegance, grace, colour, lightness. As an operetta composer he excelled at character numbers, such as the bolero in Six demoiselles à marier, the 'Romance on three notes' in Les eaux d'Ems or the serpent's song in Le serpent à plumes. Coppélia owes much of its success to the same gifts, with its mazurka, waltz, csárdás and bolero and its melodic abundance. Sylvia is a more sophisticated ballet score, though equally tuneful and danceable. The barcarolle is scored for alto saxophone; the 'Pizzicati', the ballet's most famous number, is traditionally played in a halting, hesitant style that appears to have been no part of Delibes' conception. Le roi l'a dit is a light opera in which elaborate vocal ensembles and witty pastiche play a major part. Jean de Nivelle combines a weightier tone after the manner of Meyerbeer and Lalo with a disconcertingly light style in such pieces as 'Moi! j'aime le bruit de bataille'. The chorus 'Nous sommes les reines d'un jour' is set to shifting time signatures and a modal melody of striking originality.

Scenes from the original production of Delibes' 'Lakmé', Opéra-Comique (Salle Favart), Paris, 14 April 1883: engraving by Fortuné-Louis Méaulle after Defendi Semeghini from 'L'illustration' (28 April 1883)

Delibes' masterpiece is Lakmé, which offers more than just a fine vehicle for a star soprano; the two principal male characters, Nilakantha and Gérald, are firmly drawn, and the music is melodic, picturesque and theatrically strong. Only in dramatic recitative did Delibes verge on the conventional. Kassya, his last work, has a Galician setting with oriental inflections in the music. The vocal writing is of the highest quality, and there is a fine close to the first scene of Act 3, with snow falling on the deserted stage.

Outside the theatre (for which Delibes wrote nearly all his music) his most notable work was as a composer of choruses, now undeservedly neglected. His output of songs was relatively small and that of instrumental and church music almost negligible. His cantata Alger (1865) attracted much attention at the time but has lain in obscurity since. Despite his poor record at the Conservatoire his workmanship was of the highest order; he had a natural gift for harmonic dexterity and a sure sense of orchestral colour, and nothing in his music is out of place. He was a disciplined composer, and it is tempting to see in the exquisite pastiche dances that he composed in 1882 for Hugo's Le roi s'amuse not just a sharp ear for style but a genuine feeling for the world of 17th-century French classicism, later to be espoused with such ardour by Saint-Saëns, d'Indy and Debussy.

WORKS

STAGE

first performed in Paris unless otherwise stated

all printed works published in Paris; vocal score unless otherwise stated

PBP – Paris, Bouffes-Parisiens

POC – Paris, Opéra-Comique

Deux sous de charbon, ou Le suicide de bigorneau (asphyxie lyrique, 1, J. Moineaux), Folies-Nouvelles, 9 Feb 1856

Deux vieilles gardes (opérette bouffe, 1, de Villeneuve and Lemonnier), PBP, 8 Aug 1856 (1856)

Six demoiselles à marier (opérette bouffe, 1, E. Jaime and A. Choler), PBP, 12 Nov 1856 (?1856)

Maître Griffard (oc, 1, Mestépès), Lyrique, 3 Oct 1857 (1857)

La fille du golfe (oc, 1, C.-.L.-E. Nuitter) (1859)

L'omelette à la Follembuche (opérette bouffe, 1, E. Labiche and M. Michel), PBP, 8 June 1859 (1859)

Monsieur de Bonne-Etoile (oc, 1, P. Gille), PBP, 4 Feb 1860 (1860)

Les musiciens de l'orchestre (opérette bouffe, 2, A. Bourdois), PBP, 25 Jan 1861, collab. J. Erlanger and J.-L.-A. Hignard

Les eaux d'Ems (comédie, 1, H. Crémieux and L. Halévy), Ems, Kursaal, sum. 1861 (1861/2)

Mon ami Pierrot (opérette, 1, Lockroy), Ems, Kursaal, July 1862
Le jardinier et son seigneur (oc, 1, M. Carré and T. Barrière), Lyrique, 1 May 1863 (1863)
La tradition (prol. en vers, H. Derville), PBP, 5 Jan 1864
Grande nouvelle (opérette, 1, A. Boisgontier) (1864)
Le serpent à plumes (farce, 1, Gille and N. Cham), PBP, 16 Dec 1864 (1864)
Le boeuf Apis (opéra bouffe, 2, Gille and G. Furpille), PBP, 25 April 1865
La source, ou Naila (ballet, 3, Nuitter and A. Saint-Léon), Opéra, 12 Nov 1866, collab. L. Minkus; arr. pf (1866)
Valse, ou Pas de fleurs (divertissement), Opéra, 12 Nov 1867 [added to Adam's Le corsaire]
Malbrough s'en va-t-en guerre, Act 4 (opérette, 4, Siraudin, Williams and Busnach), Athénée, 13 Dec 1867, collab. Bizet, E. Jonas and I. Legouix
L'écossais de Chatou (opérette, 1, Gille and A. Jaime), PBP, 16 Jan 1869 (1869)
La cour du roi Pétaud (opéra bouffe, 3, Gille and Jaime), Variétés, 24 April 1869 (1869)
Coppélia, ou La fille aux yeux d'émail (ballet, 2, Nuitter after Hoffmann), Opéra, 2 May 1870; arr. pf (1870), orch suite (?1883)
Le roi l'a dit (oc, 3, E. Gondinet), POC (Favart), 24 May 1873 (1873, 2/1885), fs (*c*1890)
Sylvia, ou La nymphe de Diane (ballet, 3, J. Barbier and Mérante), Opéra, 14 June 1876; arr. pf (Paris, 1876), orch suite (1880)
Jean de Nivelle (opéra, 3, Gondinet and Gille), POC (Favart), 8 March 1880 (1880)
Le roi s'amuse, six airs de danse dans le style ancien, Comédie-Française, 22 Nov 1882; arr. pf (1882), fs (*c*1885)
Lakmé (opéra, 3, Gondinet and Gille, after P. Lotti: Rarahu), POC (Favart), 14 April 1883, vs (1883)
Kassya (drame lyrique, 4, H. Meilhac and Gille), POC (Lyrique), 24 March 1893; vs (1893) [orchd Massenet]

Le Don Juan suisse (opéra bouffe, 4), lost; La princesse Ravigote (opéra bouffe, 3), lost; Le roi des montagnes (oc, 3), sketches

SECULAR CHORAL

La nuit de Noël (Gille), 4 male vv, 1859; Pastorale (C. du Locle), 4 male vv, 1865; Hymne de Noël, SATB, 1865; Alger (Méry), cant., S, vv, orch, 1865; Les lansquenets (Gille), 4 male vv, 1866; Les chants lorrains (Gille), 4 male vv, 1866; Marche de soldats (Nuitter), 4 male vv, 1866; Avril (R. Belleau), SATB, 1866; Chant de la paix (L. Girard) (4 male vv)/(6 mixed vv)/(3/4 equal vv), 1867; Au printemps (Gille), 3 equal vv, 1867; En avant (P. de France), 3 equal vv; C'est Dieu (Hinzelin), SATB; La cour des miracles (E. de Lyden), 4 male vv, 1868
Trianon (De Lyden), 4 male vv, 1868; Les nymphes de bois (Nuitter), 2 female vv, acc.; Les norvégiennes (Gille), 2 female vv, acc.; Le dimanche (Murger), 2/3vv; Noël (Bouéry), 3 equal vv; La Marseillaise (R. de Lisle), arr. male vv; Les prix (G. Chouquet), 2 equal vv, acc.; Les pifferari (Gille), 3 equal vv, 1874; Les abeilles (Murger), 3 equal vv, 1874; L'écheyeau de fil (Ratisbonne), 3 equal vv, 1874; La mort d'Orphée (A. Renaud), scène lyrique, T, vv, orch, 1877; Le pommier (Gille), 3 equal vv, 1877; Voyage enfantin (Gille), 3 equal vv, 1884

OTHER WORKS

Songs, duets, chansonnettes, incl. 15 mélodies et 2 choeurs (Paris, 1885/6), 16 melodies et 1 choeur (Paris, n.d.)
Sacred works, incl. Messe brève, 2 children's vv, org (Paris, n.d.)
Pf pieces, 2–4 hands

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1(H. Wirth)
E. Guiraud: Notice sur la vie et les oeuvres de Léo Delibes (Paris, 1892)
A. Jullien: Musiciens d'aujourd'hui, ii (Paris, 1894), 261–89
H. Maréchal: Souvenirs d'un musicien (Paris, 1907)
A. Pougin: Musiciens du XIXe siècle (Paris, 1911)
O. Séré [J. Poueigh]: Musiciens français d'aujourd'hui(Paris, 1911, 8/1921)
J. Tiersot: Un demi-siècle de musique française (Paris, 1918, 2/1924)
J. Loisel: Lakmé de Léo Delibes (Paris, 1924)
H. de Curzon: Léo Delibes (Paris, 1926)
A. Boschot: Portraits de musiciens, ii (Paris, 1947)
A. Coquis: Léo Delibes: sa vie et son oeuvre (1836–1891) (Paris, 1957)
M. Curtiss: Bizet and his World (New York, 1958/R)
G. Hughes: 'Delibes and Le roi l'a dit', Sidelights on a Century of Music, 1825–1924 (London, 1969), 116–24
W.E. Studwell: Adolphe Adam and Léo Delibes: a Guide to Research (New York, 1987)
B. Didier: 'Lakmé à l'Opéra-Comique', Europe: Revue littéraire mensuelle, no.792 (1995), 222–5

HUGH MACDONALD

Delicato (It.: 'delicate', 'weak'). An expression mark also used as a dynamic and performance direction. Two particularly famous uses of forms of this word appear in Beethoven. The opening adagio sostenuto of his 'Moonlight' Sonata is marked: 'Si deve suonare questo pezzo delicatissimamente' ('this piece must be played extremely delicately'). The fourth movement ('La malinconia') of his Quartet in B♭ op.18 no.6 has the annotation 'Questo pezzo si deve trattare colla più gran delicatezza' ('this piece must be treated with the greatest delicacy').

For bibliography see TEMPO AND EXPRESSION MARKS.

DAVID FALLOWS

Delin [Deligne], Albert (b Ath, 17 April 1712; d Tournai, 26 Nov 1771). Flemish harpsichord maker. 11 of his instruments survive signed and dated in Tournai between 1750 and 1770. These include three clavicytheria in which he improved the mechanism by making the various parts independent (see CLAVICYTHERIUM). Delin also made several wing-shaped spinets with compasses of four octaves and a 3rd. His refined and elegant workmanship was always restrained and revealed an innate sense of the great 17th-century Antwerp tradition combined with an evident influence of Ruckers, though expressed in original ways. Delin and the Dulckens illustrate the double orientation harpsichord manufacture in the Low Countries during the 18th century. Delin is a classicist compared with the Dulckens, whose complex harpsichords reflect a more modern notion of sound. With the passage of time these differences have both lessened and become clearer. Delin's aesthetic choices (for example the absence of the 4′ register and of a second keyboard, and the inversion of the direction of the plectra) have come to be seen as stable and practical solutions.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tournay: 'Albert Delin, 1712–71. Petite contribution a l'histoire du clavecin', La facteure de clavecin du XVe au XVIIIe siècle: Louvain-la-Neuve 1976
J. Tournay: 'The Double Orientation in Harpsichord Building in the Low Countries in the Eighteenth Century', The Harpsichord and its Repertoire: Utrecht 1990, 21–45

JEAN TOURNAY

DeLio, Thomas (b New York, 1 July 1951). American composer. He studied at the New England Conservatory (1968–72), where his teachers included Robert Cogan, and at Brown University (PhD 1979). In 1980 he joined the music department at the University of Maryland. His experimental, highly abstract music renders sonically his conviction that we perceive the constant flux of our existence as a succession of simultaneously connected and isolated moments. Works such as Against the silence … (1986) present what he describes as 'a few disjunct sound events separated – pushed apart – by large quantities of silence'. In between (1991) silence frames a series of precise, isolated gestures. anti-paysage (1990) begins with a series of disconnected yet relatively active events, but grows progressively more sparse as silence pushes the sounds further apart. Later works reveal an interest in language as sound. In think on parch (1997) four recorded readings of the poet Peter Inman are manipulated by various levels of electronic interference. Some readings undergo little alteration, while others are transformed beyond recognition.

WORKS
(selective list)

cgs – computer generated score

Inst ens: Gestures, s sax, pf (1973); Partial Conjunctions, cgs, wind (1981); Partial Derivatives, cgs, wind (1981); Partial Manifolds, cgs, wind (1988); between, fl, perc (1991); not, perc, pf (1992); as though/after, fl, ob, cl, str, perc (1995); as though, again, fl, cl, vn, perc (1995); as though, so again, fl, cl, tpt, vn, vc, pf, perc (1995)

Vocal: contrecoup … (S. Mallarmé), S, fl, perc, pf (1987); At Briggflatts meetinghouse (B. Bunting), S, pf (1988); Bright seaweed reaping (C. Corman), S, 3 cl, perc, pf (1990); granite, and (W. Bronk, Corman, Bunting), S, 3 cl, perc, pf, hp (1990); 2 Songs (Corman), S, 3 cl, perc, pf, hp (1990)

Solo inst: Marginal Developments, pf (1973); Serenade, cgs, pf (1974); Sequence, cgs, pf (1983); Text, cgs, pf (1983); Transparent Wave, perc (1987); Though, pf (1993); as though, perc (1994)

Tape: Against the silence …, perc ens, 4-track tape (1986); anti-paysage, fl, perc, pf, 2-track tape (1990); Of (1991); as again (1992); of again (1994); on again (1994); so again (1994); think on parch, 1997

Principal publishers: Smith/Sonic Art, Editore Semar

Principal recording companies: Wergo, Neuma, Capstone, 3D Classics, Spectrum

WRITINGS

Circumscribing the Open Universe (Lanham, MD, 1983)
'contrecoup … : Nonlinearity and Computer Aided Composition', Interface, xx (1991), 153–63
'The Complexity of Experience', PNM, xxxi/1 (1993), 64–77
ed. The Music of Morton Feldman (Westport, CT, 1996)

STEVEN JOHNSON

Delipari, Michele (b ?Gallipoli, Puglia; fl 1630). Italian composer. He was choirmaster of the collegiate church at Pieve di Sacco in the province of Padua in 1630 when he published at Venice his only known music, I baci: madrigali … libro primo, for two to four voices and continuo. The book, which includes one madrigal by his uncle, Donato Antonio Cuti, is dominated by duets for tenors or sopranos. In some of these pieces the upper voices exchange small, rapid motifs over a bass moving repetitiously around part of the circle of 5ths.

KEITH A. LARSON

Delius, Frederick [Fritz] (Theodore Albert) (b Bradford, 29 Jan 1862; d Grez-sur-Loing, 10 June 1934). English composer of German parentage. Though he spent the greater part of his life abroad, settling in France and enjoying his first professional successes in Germany and Norway, Delius is considered among the most significant and characteristic of English compositional voices. The seamless flow of Wagner, together with the airier chromaticism of Grieg and the rich colouring of Strauss matured into a recognizably individual idiom, in which melody of beguiling fluidity is complemented by a harmonic syntax often daring in its range and flexibility of rhythmic pacing. Though he contributed to the genres of opera, concerto and sonata, it is the nostalgic rhapsody of his orchestral tone poems, with their sensuous evocations of natural beauty, and the ecstatic though resolutely secular spirituality of his choral works that have proved especially enduring.

1. Life. Delius's parents came from Bielefeld in Germany, but had taken British nationality before their fourth child (of fourteen) was born into a household of considerable musical culture. He had piano and violin lessons, but there was no question of music as a career. His father had been notably successful in the Yorkshire wool industry and it was expected that his son would eventually join the business. Having achieved little at Bradford Grammar School (1874–8), Delius was moved to the International College at Isleworth, where proximity to London meant he could attend concerts and opera. Apprenticed to the wool trade, first in Gloucestershire, then at centres in France, Germany and Sweden, Delius suffered a frustration that caused much family friction. While abroad, he had made unwarranted excursions to the French riviera and then to Norway, which became more and more a spiritual home. He had also contrived some violin lessons with Hans Sitt in Chemnitz.

By March 1884 even Julius Delius was convinced the wool trade would not retain his son and allowed him to experiment with an orange plantation in Florida, Solana Grove on the St John's river. In Jacksonville he met by chance Thomas F. Ward, a devout if wayward Catholic of considerable musical gifts, who had heard black singers in Brooklyn performing slave music from the south and had moved to Florida for the sake of his health. Ward joined Delius at Solana Grove and gave him musical instruction. He proved a hard taskmaster and offered Delius precisely the framework of discipline he needed at the time and preserved throughout his life. Delius maintained that only Ward's teaching had ever been of value to him, and in Florida he absorbed with delight the musical idioms of the black American workers on the plantation. His confidence now allowed him to move to Virginia and start giving lessons himself, privately and in a Danville college (1885–6). His father reluctantly agreed to grant him a full musical education at Leipzig.

At Leipzig (1886–8) Reinecke could make nothing of him as a pianist, but Jadassohn praised his industry and command of counterpoint and fugue. Delius was scornful of the Leipzig regime, but residence in so vibrant a musical centre vastly increased his knowledge of the repertory. Hans Sitt remained an ally and in 1888 conducted for Delius a trial performance of his Florida suite. The main importance of Leipzig for Delius, though, was a developing friendship with Grieg. Sinding introduced them in 1887; Grieg and his music were 'as if a breath of mountain air had come' to Delius. A letter from Grieg did much to convince Julius that his son must now devote himself to music, and Delius was to become the closest English friend of Grieg, Sinding and the painter Edvard Munch. In London Grieg introduced Delius to Augener, who in 1890 published his Five Songs from the Norwegian. Delius dedicated these first-fruits of his lifelong devotion to Scandinavian literature to Nina Grieg.

A move to Paris in the summer of 1888 began almost a decade of expanding social life and increasing musical mastery. Among his associates were musicians such as Fauré, Ravel and Florent Schmitt; artists included Gauguin, Můcha and Munch, with the writer Strindberg providing bizarre peripheral drama. It was in Paris in 1895 that Delius contracted the syphilis that was to blight his later life. Grand opera was now his aim (the Palais Garnier had opened in 1875). Delius was temporarily attracted by Bulwer Lytton's Zanoni, Ibsen's Emperor and Galilean and The Feast at Solhaug; Sinding suggested a Tiberius or Cleopatra subject. For his first two operas (as for two more) Delius wrote his own librettos. The results were Irmelin (1890–92), a fairy tale in music, and The Magic Fountain (1893–5), with the name of the hero

1. Nina and Edvard Grieg, Johan Halvorsen, Frederick Delius and Christian Sinding at a card party in Leipzig, winter 1887–8

Solano (Solana in his first draft) recalling the Florida plantation, and its noble Indian princess as heroine enshrining Delius's distaste for the Spanish conquistadores. While at work on his third project, Koanga, which owes much to black slave song, Delius proposed a trilogy of operas, 'one on the Indians, one on the Gypsies and one on the Negroes'. The first and last were by that point in progress, while the 'gypsies' became an element in the finest of his operas, A Village Romeo and Juliet (1899–1901). Paris also produced his first meeting with Helene 'Jelka' Rosen, a German painter, whose house in Grez-sur-Loing near Fontainebleau he shared from 1897, and whom he married in 1903. Shortly before this he had anglicized his name to Frederick.

Delius heard little of his orchestral writing during this period. Norway provided notable occasions. The first Delius public performance was of his symphonic poem after Ibsen's Paa Vidderne in Christiania (Oslo) on 10 October 1891. It was repeated in 1894 in Monte Carlo. In 1897 Delius produced incidental music to Gunnar Heiberg's satiric drama, Folkeraadet; this caused considerable scandal in Christiania, mainly through its mocking use of the national anthem in a Norway not yet free of Sweden. Delius had eventually to withdraw his music; he was spared physical attacks, he said, only because Englishmen had the 'renommée de pouvoir boxer'. In Germany there was growing success. Hans Haym gave the première of Over the Hills and Far Away in Elberfeld in October 1897, and followed it with Paris in 1901 and Appalachia in 1904. He urged Julius Buths to perform Lebenstanz and Paris in Düsseldorf, and they joined forces for the first performance of the Piano Concerto (three-movement version) in Elberfeld in October 1904, with Buths as soloist and Haym on the rostrum. Meanwhile Fritz Cassirer had given Koanga at the Elberfeld Stadttheater in March 1904.

England experienced its first Delius concert in May 1899. It was mounted by the composer himself on the strength of an uncle's legacy. The leader was Halfdan Jebe, a Norwegian friend since Leipzig, the conductor Alfred Hertz of the Breslau opera (previously at Elberfeld). The programme included Over the Hills and Far Away, the violin Légende, La ronde se déroule (later revised as Lebenstanz) and excerpts from Koanga. Delius failed to follow up a successful occasion, and it was not until 1907 that Henry Wood, soon to be a loyal supporter, gave the revised Piano Concerto in London, where Cassirer conducted Appalachia. But it was Thomas Beecham who, through his instinctive understanding of Delius's individuality, was to play the most significant role in the establishment of Delius as a major English composer. Beecham's unique sensitivity to Delius's vitality (in 1909 they tramped mountain areas of Norway together), the heartbreak of his nostalgia and the subtlety of his rhythmic ebb and flow made him the composer's supreme interpreter and justified Delius in allowing Beecham considerable editorial licence with his scores. In June 1909 Beecham gave the first complete performance of A Mass of Life (1904–5), an achievement that was part of a remarkable series of Delius premières which Beecham began the year before. The Mass remained the composer's masterpiece, a powerful setting of words from Nietzsche's Also sprach Zarathustra that had special significance for Delius. (Walt Whitman had also become a favourite author, initially in Sea Drift, 1903–4.) Beecham, however, was not an uncritical admirer: he refused to perform Fennimore and Gerda, Delius's last opera, though it was dedicated to him, describing its characters as 'three dreary people who have nothing to sing'.

During World War I Delius and his wife had to leave Grez for a time, spending a year from November 1914 in England, Norway and Denmark. The rhapsodic Delius of earlier years now gave place to a composer exploring the implications of more traditional forms. A series of chamber works was launched with the Violin Sonata no.1, completed in 1914; his first, unnumbered, essay in this genre dates from 1892. A string quartet and a cello sonata followed two years later; this was also the period of the three string concertos, beginning with the Double Concerto (1915–16). At Grez after the war Delius's health steadily declined from his syphilitic infection. He was able to spend three last summers in Norway (1921–3), but from 1920 Jelka Delius was increasingly involved in his correspondence. The harder Delius found it to hold a pen, the more he relied on Jelka as musical copyist. Paradoxically, Delius's greatest commercial success was still to come, the music to James Elroy Flecker's Hassan, with its 281 performances at His Majesty's Theatre, London.

By September 1923, date of the first London performance of Hassan, Delius was so physically weakened that he had to be carried into rehearsals on the caliph's chair of state. Indeed brief additional music for the play was supplied by Percy Grainger on a theme given to him by Delius. Philip Heseltine (Peter Warlock) had given assistance in copying the score. Heseltine, a Delius admirer since his schooldays, had long exchanged letters with the composer, and had contemplated a biography at least as early as 1917. The book finally appeared in 1923, a first account of Delius's life in English. Delius now had resort to medical establishments and spas in the hope of impeding the progress of his disease. With ensuing blindness and virtual paralysis it seemed as if Delius's career as a composer was at an end. His mental faculties remained unimpaired. In his music room were unfinished works, music that had failed to satisfy him, and sketches that might have been worked up; but hope for future creativity seemed vain.

The catalyst was a young Yorkshire musician, Eric Fenby, who admired Delius's music and knew of his physical plight. Convinced he might help the stricken composer, Fenby offered his services as amanuensis. 'How much of a musician are you?', Delius asked in a letter written by his wife. Fenby arrived at Grez on 10 October 1928. A gruelling apprenticeship followed, during which Delius's attempts at dictation seemed incoherent and incomprehensible; but a working relationship was established, by means of which Fenby was able to grant Delius an Indian summer of composition. Tasks of 1929 were to complete Cynara (1907) and A Late Lark (1924), both of them works for voice and orchestra. Then came the salvaging of music from two earlier works that had hitherto proved unsatisfactory. A Song of Summer was extracted from A Poem of Life and Love which Delius had worked on since 1918. The one-act opera Margot la rouge (1902), an unsuccessful entry in the International Melodrama Competition organized by Sonzogno, had been a conscious assault on the Italian verismo market; it now yielded the Idyll to words by Walt Whitman. The most impressive work produced under these auspices was the Songs of Farewell for double chorus and orchestra, again to Whitman texts (1930).

2. Frederick Delius, with Jelka Delius and Percy Grainger, at Greuz-sur-Loing, 1925

In late 1929 Beecham organized a Delius festival of six concerts that set the seal on the composer's reputation. It included chamber music and songs, an excerpt from A Village Romeo and Juliet, the piano and violin concertos, and premières of Cynara and A Late Lark, concluding with A Mass of Life. The wraithlike composer attended all the concerts. The same year he became a Companion of Honour, and in 1932 was awarded the freedom of his native Bradford. Returning to France across the Channel, Delius insisted that his deckchair should face the cliffs of Dover as they gradually receded, a gesture of affection towards the country in which he had spent relatively little time since early disagreements with his father, and which he had never thought of as home.

Fenby remained at Grez and helped to produce such final small-scale works as the Fantastic Dance, Irmelin Prelude and Violin Sonata no.3. At heart Delius remained the man of spiritual independence who preferred Nietzsche to the Bible, though his wartime Requiem has echoes of both. His acid tongue would not spare even the Catholic Fenby, and he had shown at certain moments in the Songs of Farewell the wilful energy that had taken him to Norwegian mountain heights in younger days. The most distinguished of his visitors in 1933 was Edward Elgar, in Paris to conduct a Menuhin performance of his Violin Concerto. This late encounter between men who had seldom met and were not naturally compatible was a complete success, based on shared tastes in music and literature, and resulted in a warm correspondence until Elgar's death the following February. Delius displayed a stoical strength during his last years of increasing pain, when a main pleasure was listening to broadcasts and recordings of his music. He had desired burial in the garden of his house by the River Loing. The authorities disapproved, and his body was interred temporarily at Grez before being transferred to Limpsfield in Surrey the following year.

2. WORKS. Delius's musical style was a long time in development. His first masterpiece, Paris, was not completed until he was 37, and his individual genius did not become evident until A Village Romeo and Juliet and Sea Drift were composed. He grew intensely aware of the transience of things – an overriding preoccupation for the rest of his life – and this ephemerality being mitigated only by nature's 'eternal renewing'. Often the experience is ecstatically embraced, as in The Song of the High Hills; at other times, as in Sea Drift, it is poignantly accepted; but this feeling remains the burden of his total output, and it is a mark of Delius's imagination that in almost every mature work he viewed its restricted emotional area from a different perspective.

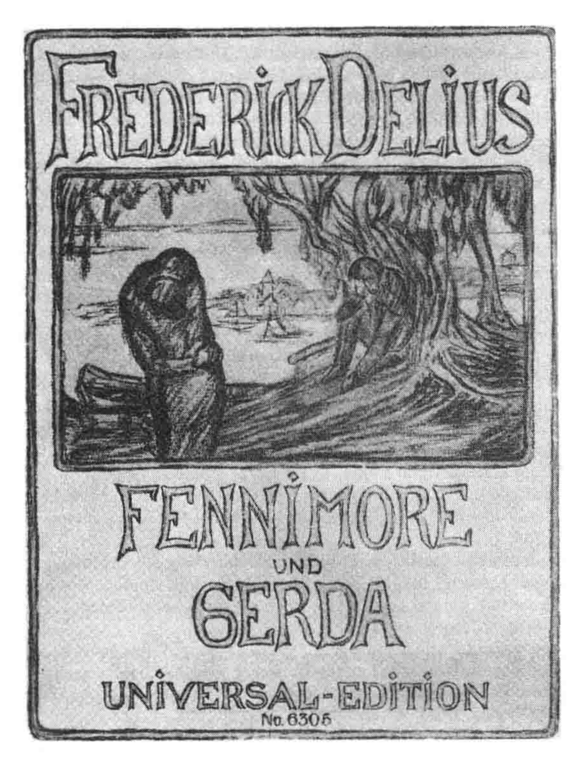
The technique which enabled Delius to articulate this highly personal vision slowly matured throughout the 1890s. It was based to a large extent on Wagner, whose endless flow and harmonic aura Delius attempted to emulate, and on Grieg, whose airy texture and non-developing use of chromaticism showed him how to lighten the Wagnerian load. During this period there was a steady increase in the number of passages where the fusion of these elements sounds characteristically Delian, reaching a peak in the opera Koanga (1895–7) which sets a text by C.F. Keary drawn from an episode in The Grandissimes, a novel by George Washington Cable. Its tragic story of the deep south, in which an African Vodou prince is sold into slavery, enabled Delius to draw comprehensively on his experiences in Florida and Virginia. Although the dramatic conception is at first stiff, the second act (which includes the well-known 'La Calinda') and the third move impressively to their climaxes. More importantly, the death of the prince Koanga drew from Delius the most personal music that he had yet written. By the time the opera was staged in 1904, Delius had completed Paris (1899), in which an almost Straussian orchestral virtuosity, never again to be found appropriate, clothes an already typical harmonic scheme.

With his next work, A Village Romeo and Juliet (1899–1901), Delius approached complete maturity: the harmonic manner is quite distinctive and the characteristic themes of transitoriness, sumptuous natural beauty and romantic purity reached a new intensity. Staged first in Berlin in 1907 and then in England three years later under Beecham, the opera is based on the novella Romeo und Julia auf dem Dorfe from Gottfried Keller's Die Leute von Seldwyla and tells of two young lovers who, unable to make a life together because of family feuds and local gossip, spend one day with each other and then end their lives. Abandoning the more conventional verismo manner of Koanga, Delius cast the work as a series of short scenes. Traditional dramatic features are not totally discarded, but each scene is more concerned with presenting a spiritual state. The close contains some of the most exquisite music written for the stage, and ends with Delius's own conception of a 'Liebestod' as the lovers float away on an old hay barge which they then scuttle. The impossibility of realizing youthful dreams of perfect emotion is expressed with a poignancy most typical of Delius.

During the following three years Delius completed three of his finest works for his favoured forces: soloists, chorus and orchestra. First he rewrote Appalachia (1902–3), a work originally composed in simpler form in 1896, which was another exploration of his experience of the American south. These variations on an old plantation song, cover a wider range of styles than Delius was later willing to admit. The harmony is always recognizably his own, but there is still a considerable reliance on conventional melodic developments and counterpoints; regular phrase patterns are as much in evidence as the subtle flights of harmony which point forward to his maturity.

The second of these works, Sea Drift (1903–4) for baritone, chorus and orchestra, is considered by many to be his greatest achievement; its success at its first performance in Essen firmly established Delius on the Continent. Whitman's treatment of a boy's sorrow at a seabird's loss of its mate is matched by Delius with profound insight. The work's formal structure partly follows that of the text, but its expressive power transcends the poem. There is a seamless flow between the choral commentaries and the baritone narrator's recitatives, from which he breaks away only in the drama's poignant aftermath at 'O past! O happy life! … We two together no more'. The range of choral expression encompasses the hedonistic joy of 'Shine! shine! shine! Pour down your warmth, great sun!' and the still, sad voice of 'O rising stars!', but the various shades of feeling are fused into one great formal arch. Traditional devices of development and recapitulation are largely missing: Delius presents a stream of spiritual experience with a flow of chromatic harmony whose intensity is never broken, and variety of colour and pace is achieved almost imperceptibly, yet with utmost directness.



Thirdly Delius embarked on what was to be his grandest project, A Mass of Life (1904–5), which sets texts from Nietzsche's Also sprach Zarathustra and embodies Delius's philosophy that each man should stand fearlessly alone in the face of ultimate death, should realize his potentialities, whatever the cost, and immerse himself wholeheartedly in life. A broad musical span relates man's spiritual development to the passing of a day, rising to the 'glorious noontide' of maturity and then progressing to the midnight bell of death's call. Delius responded to Nietzsche's rich poetry in some of his most virile and exultant music, as well as in passages of a profoundly hypnotic and static calm.

After this colossal undertaking Delius worked on smaller pieces for the next few years; in the Songs of Sunset (1906–7), Brigg Fair (1907) and In a Summer Garden (1908) his art reached a peak of sensuous sweetness and lyrical concentration. This phase was followed by a development towards more sharply defined orchestral sounds (often Nordic in atmosphere), greater formal concision and a more radical juxtaposition of unrelated chords: there is a suggestion of autumn after the summer of the previous works. An Arabesque (1911), a setting of a poem by J.P. Jacobsen for baritone, chorus and orchestra, exhibits the new manner, as does The Song of the High Hills (1911–12) for wordless chorus and orchestra. The comparative neglect of the music of this time – which includes two of his finest works in North Country Sketches (1913–14) and Eventyr (1917) – has led to an underestimation of Delius's range.

His final opera, Fennimore and Gerda (1908–10), initiated this later style. Based on two episodes from Jacobsen's novel Niels Lyhne, the work is – like A Village Romeo and Juliet – constructed as a series of tableaux, but Delius was here attempting something new: a contemporary conversation piece. Niels, a young poet, is in love with his best friend's wife, Fennimore, who at first returns his love, but then rejects him when she learns of her husband's death. In the final two scenes, Niels, now a farmer, finds happiness with the young Gerda. Just as Koanga was the product of Delius's Florida impressions, so this last opera draws on his love for Scandinavia, and the drama proceeds against the backdrop of the Danish seasons. The music is finely sustained and the atmosphere is evoked swiftly yet tellingly, particularly in the erotic outbursts of the central love scene. The period ushered in by this opera did not see a complete abandonment of Delius's more intimate sensuousness: his best-known orchestral tone poem, On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring (1912), epitomizes his sweet nostalgia, while its companion-piece, Summer Night on the River (1911), with its softly clashing lines, is one of his few Impressionist pieces.

A quite unpredictable phase opened in 1914 with the completion of the First Violin Sonata, which he had begun ten years previously (an earlier sonata has been published posthumously). This was followed by a succession of works which attempted, not always successfully, to come to terms with conventional forms. Their structural articulation is sometimes a little stiff, but in the finest work of the group, the Violin Concerto (1916), the beauty of individual sections offsets formal weaknesses. Delius was not the composer to organize the subtle interplay of forces essential to the concerto form, and this is even more obvious in the Double Concerto for violin, cello and orchestra. He was clearly unsure of what to do with his soloists at times, and invented some perfunctory passage-work. Cluttered solo writing also mars parts of the Cello Concerto (1920–21), even when Withers's alterations included in the published score are used. Linear melody was not one of Delius's strengths and the concertos emphasize this deficiency, but the Cello Sonata (1916) has long, expansive lines which are exceptionally resourceful and flexible, continuing throughout the work except for two short pauses. The String Quartet, also written in 1916, begins with three movements of a fluidity characteristic of Delius's finest music, but the work ends with a repetitive and short-winded finale.

3. Title-page, designed by Jelka Delius, of the first edition of the vocal score of Delius's 'Fennimore and Gerda' (1919)

While working in these conventional genres, Delius completed what for a considerable time remained the least known of his large choral works, the Requiem (1913–14) for soprano, baritone, chorus and orchestra. The original German text, by Heinrich Simon, expresses Delius's long-held pantheistic beliefs, preaching courage in the sight of death and finding consolation in nature's never ending cycles. A harmonic style which is sometimes starkly dissonant, together with thicker instrumental doubling, produce music which is unique in Delius's oeuvre for its lack of vibrancy, suggesting a certain self-denial. The Requiem marks Delius's attempt to extend his expressive compass, but the results are rather dry and only in the magnificent final section does the music spring to life as chorus and soloist hymn 'Springtime, Summer, Fall and Winter, and then new Springtime'. Discreet bitonal touches in the coda – fanfares in B against a tonality of D – also show a new departure.

Delius's next choral and orchestral work, the incidental music to Flecker's Hassan, was the last music that he was able to write in his own hand. Still his creative powers remained unaffected by his illness, and the atmospheric choruses and interludes contain some of his best work, including the Serenade, which quickly became a popular favourite. Delius's last choral work, the Songs of Farewell, was completed in collaboration with Fenby in 1930. These powerfully concentrated and exultant Whitman settings for eight-part chorus and orchestra exhibit a new freshness and clarity of style.

The strength of Delius's personality is most evident in a harmonic idiom which sounds quite unlike the work of any other. His chordal vocabulary never strays beyond late Romantic practice, relying on triads, secondary 7ths and dominant discords, with a comparatively narrow range of chromatic alterations and diatonic discords. But the syntax is entirely individual. The rate of harmonic change is extremely flexible, sometimes so fast as to border on atonality, at other times hypnotically slow. The more chromatic harmonies can wind sinuously downward, or they may be abruptly juxtaposed, as in his later music, without any traditional linking relationship. Forms are built from a stream of these harmonies: Fenby (1971) likened the method to a 'prose' (i.e. rhythmically pliable) melody of chords. Even when Delius employed varied harmonic supports for repetitions of a simply phrased melody, it is the irregular ebb and flow of the harmony that is the prime structural factor, belying the melodic simplicity. Indeed Delius's melodies are rarely complex and usually seem to be stitched into the texture merely to point the harmony.

Delius's structural thinking is most readily examined in those works which are based neither on texts nor on obvious variation forms, as is the case with Brigg Fair and the Dance Rhapsody no.1. In a Summer Garden may be taken as perhaps the most refined example of the way in which Delius seems to improvise a structure, generating a harmonic flight. Yet the word improvisation misrepresents the tautness of the form. The structural profile is etched in terms of harmonic tensions, set up by the extent to which positive key references or cadences are avoided, and the speed with which implied areas of tonality pass by. In a Summer Garden respects none of the traditional formal types, although there are vestiges of sonata and ternary structures. Precedents for its freely evolving processes can be found in the Siegfried Idyll and the Prélude à l'après-midi d'un faune; but the sonata form is much stronger in the Siegfried Idyll, and the Debussy, although closer in incidental phraseology, is a more orthodox ternary form. In any case, the Prélude was unknown to Delius at the time of composing In a Summer Garden, according to a letter the composer wrote to Bantock.

The opening section fluctuates capriciously between drowsy, static sequences and short bursts of activity, the changes of mood and texture achieved with extraordinary speed and concentration. The texture consists of a mosaic of tiny motifs and chordal sequences which continually evolve and regroup. The next section is more settled and exposes a broad melody which constitutes the only self-contained music in the work. The mosaic particles then return but with more determination develop into a climactic melodic passage of considerable grandeur. The lyrical intensity is then gradually dispersed with the emergence of further new textural offshoots, and this process is marvellously combined with hints of recapitulation and coda. The whole structure shows Delius's remarkable ability to prolong a sensuous moment by purely harmonic means without monotony and move elliptically into subtly contrasted areas.

A particularly fine example of Delius's large-scale form exists in The Song of the High Hills. Gone are the sensitive fluctuations, the continuous play of light and shade and the pointillist orchestration of In a Summer Garden. The flood of harmony is much steadier, and the areas of tension, which sometimes passed in a bar or two in the shorter work are now vastly stretched out sometimes with the aid of long pedal points. The form is simply ternary in outline, with an expansive interlude in the first section that foreshadows the intense contemplation of the central portion of the work. There is a strongly marked point of recapitulation and more obvious repetition of material. Delius's harmonic subtlety is here exclusively employed in sustaining unwavering levels of tension for long periods. The middle section, subtitled 'The wide far distance – the great solitude', breaks down into no more than three or four of these harmonic spans, which makes the moments of transition crucially important. Music which has become firmly entrenched in one area of contemplation has to be eased on to another static plane without disrupting the hypnotic mood. Unpredictably this is not done by imperceptible changes but by comparatively bald juxtaposition of texture. The timing, however, is judged to a nicety as is the harmonic character, and the whole episode, apparently sectional to the score-reading eye, becomes an unbroken flow in performance.

Finally the strength of Delius's character is also evident in a less purely musical way. His egotism enabled him to give an overriding value to his sensual responses, and it is perhaps this that is the secret of his vision. Delius's music deals with the pristine romance of his formative experiences – the sound of negro songs over the still air of Solana Grove, his first knowledge of total love (an affair that came to nothing according to Fenby (1936), though he also fathered a child in Florida). Such things are obsessively relived in his music; it may be that his style matured only when he recognized the impossibility of recapturing them in reality.

4. Frederick Delius: portrait by Jelka Delius, 1912 (University of Melbourne), with Paul Gauguin's painting 'Nevermore' (1897) in the background

WORKS

Edition: Frederick Delius: Complete Works, ed T. Beecham and R. Threlfall (London, 1951–93)

STAGE

Zanoni (incid music, E.G. Bulwer Lytton), 1888, draft pf score, inc.

Irmelin (op, 3, Delius), 1890–92; E. Graham, T. Round, RPO, cond. T. Beecham, Oxford, New Theatre, 4 May 1953, vs (London, 1953), fs (London, 1992)

The Magic Fountain (lyric drama, 3, Delius), 1893–5; studio broadcast, K. Pring, J. Mitchinson, BBC Concert Orch, cond. N. Del Mar, BBC, 20 Nov 1977; first staged perf., K. Russ, M. Teepe, cond. W. Gugerbauer, Kiel, Opernhaus, 22 June 1997, vs (London, 1979), fs (London, 1990)

Koanga (lyric drama, prol, 3, epilogue, C.F. Keary, after G.W. Cable: The Grandissimes), 1895–7; C. Whitehill, R. Kaiser, cond. F. Cassirer, Elberfeld, Stadttheater, 30 March 1904, vs (London, 1935), fs (London, 1980)

Folkeraadet (incid music, G. Heiberg), 1897; cond. P. Winge, Oslo, Christiania Theater, 18 Oct 1897, fs (London, 1990)

A Village Romeo and Juliet (Romeo und Julia auf dem Dorfe) (lyric drama, 6 pictures, Delius, after G. Keller), 1899–1901; W. Merkel, L. Artôt de Padilla, cond. Cassirer, Berlin, Komische Oper, 21 Feb 1907, vs, fs (Berlin, 1910)

Margot la rouge (lyric drama, 1, 'Rosenval' [Mme B. Gaston-Danville]), 1902; M. Sonnenberg, J. Anderson, cond. E. Fenby, St Louis, Opera Theatre, 8 June 1983, vs (Paris, 1905), fs (London, 1988)

Fennimore and Gerda (op, 11 pictures, Delius, after J.P. Jacobsen: Niels Lyhne), 1908–10; R. vom Scheidt, E. Holt, cond. G. Brecher, Frankfurt, Opernhaus, 21 Oct 1919, vs (Vienna and Leipzig, 1919), fs (Vienna and New York, 1926)

Hassan (incid music, J.E. Flecker), 1920–23; cond. J. Rosenstock, Darmstadt, Hessische Landes-Theater, 1 June 1923; full version, cond. E. Goossens, London, His Majesty's Theatre, 20 Sept 1923, vs (Vienna, 1923), fs (London, 1978)

ORCHESTRAL

Florida, suite, 1887, rev. 1889; cond. H. Sitt, Leipzig, Rosenthal, early 1888

Hiawatha, tone poem, 1888, inc.; excerpt NRK [Norwegian Broadcasting] Orch, cond. S. Bruland, Norwegian Television, 13 Jan 1984
Suite, vn, orch, 1888; R. Holmes, BBC Scottish SO, cond. V. Handley, BBC, 28 Feb 1984
Rhapsodic Variations, 1888, inc.
Idylle de Printemps, 1889; English Northern Philharmonia, cond. D. Lloyd-Jones, Great Hall, Leeds U., 23 Aug 1995
Suite d'orchestre, 1889, incl. Marche, rev. 1890 as Marche caprice, RPO, cond. Beecham, Westminster, Central Hall, 21 Nov 1946
La Quadroone, 1889; English Northern Philharmonia, cond. D. Lloyd-Jones, Great Hall, Leeds U., 23 Aug 1995
Scherzo, 1890; English Northern Philharmonia, cond. D. Lloyd-Jones, Great Hall, Leeds U., 23 Aug 1995
Three Small Tone Poems: Summer Evening, Winter Night [Sleigh Ride], Spring Morning, 1889–90; RPO, cond. R. Austin, Westminster, Central Hall, 18 Nov 1946
Légendes (Sagen), pf, orch, 1890, inc.
Petite suite d'orchestre, small orch, 1890; Beauchamp Sinfonietta, cond. D. Tall, Stratford-on-Avon, 13 May 1978
Paa Vidderne (On the Heights), sym. poem after H. Ibsen, 1890–92; Christiania Music Society, cond. I. Holter, Oslo, 10 Oct 1891
Légende, vn, orch, ?1895; J. Dunn, cond. A. Hertz, London, St James's Hall, 30 May 1899
Over the Hills and Far Away, fantasy ov., 1895–7; Elberfeld Concert Society, cond. H. Haym, Elberfeld, Stadthalle, 13 Nov 1897
Appalachia: American Rhapsody, orch, 1896; LPO, cond. E. Downes, London, Royal Festival Hall, 10 Dec 1986
Piano Concerto, c, 3 movts, 1897; J. Buths, Elberfeld Concert Society, cond. Haym, Elberfeld, Stadthalle, 24 Oct 1904; rev. 1 movt, 1906; Theodor Szántó, Queen's Hall Orch, cond. H. Wood, London, Queen's Hall, 22 Oct 1907
La ronde se déroule, sym. poem after H. Rode, 1899; cond. Hertz, St James's Hall, 30 May 1899; rev. 1901 as Lebenstanz [Life's Dance], cond. Buths, Düsseldorf, 21 Jan 1904; rev. 1912, Berlin PO, cond. O. Fried, Berlin, 15 Nov 1912
Paris: a Nocturne (The Song of a Great City), 1899; Elberfeld Concert Society, cond. Haym, Elberfeld, 14 Dec 1901
Brigg Fair: An English Rhapsody, 1907; Liverpool Orch Society, cond. G. Bantock, Liverpool, 18 Jan 1908
In a Summer Garden, rhapsody, 1908; Philharmonic Society of London, cond. Delius, Queen's Hall, 11 Dec 1908; rev. version, New York PO, cond. J. Stransky, New York, 25 Jan 1912
A Dance Rhapsody, no.1, 1908; LSO, cond. Delius, Hereford, Shire Hall, 8 Sept 1909
Two Pieces for Small Orchestra: On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring, 1912, Summer Night on the River, 1911; cond. A. Nikisch, Leipzig, Gewandhaus, 23 Oct 1913
North Country Sketches, 1913–14; LSO, cond. Beecham, Queen's Hall, 10 May 1915
Air and Dance, str, 1915; cond. Beecham, London, 1915 (private perf.)
Double Concerto, vn, vc, orch, 1915–16; M. and B. Harrison, New Queen's Hall Orch, cond. Wood, Queen's Hall, 21 Feb 1920
Violin Concerto, 1916; A. Sammons, Royal Philharmonic Society, cond. A. Boult, Queen's Hall, 30 Jan 1919
A Dance Rhapsody, no.2, 1916; New Queen's Hall Orch, cond. Wood, Queen's Hall, 20 Oct 1923
Eventyr (Once upon a time), ballad after Asbjørnsen, 1917; Queen's Hall Orch, cond. Wood, Queen's Hall, 11 Jan 1919
A Song before Sunrise, small orch, 1918; New Queen's Hall Orch, cond. Wood, Queen's Hall, 19 Sept 1923
Poem of Life and Love, 1918; BBC Concert Orchestra, cond. V. Handley, BBC, 9 March 1999
Cello Concerto, 1920–21; A. Barjansky, cond. F. Löwe, Vienna, 31 Jan 1923
A Song of Summer [partly from Poem of Life and Love], 1929–30; BBC Orch, cond. Wood, Queen's Hall, 17 Sept 1931
Caprice and Elegy, vc, chamber orch, 1930; B. Harrison, USA, 1931
Irmelin Prelude, 1931; LPO, cond. Beecham, Covent Garden, 23 Sept 1935
Fantastic Dance, 1931; BBC SO, cond. Boult, Queen's Hall, 12 Jan 1934
Two Aquarelles, str [arr. 1932 from choruses To be sung of a Summer Night on the Water]

CHORAL AND VOCAL

Six Partsongs: Oh! Sonnenschein (R. Reinick), Durch den Wald (R. Reinick), Ave Maria (E. Geibel), Sonnenscheinlied (B. Bjørnson), Frühlingsanbruch (C. Andersen), Her ute skal gildet staa (H. Ibsen), SATB, 1885–91; nos. 2, 4, Linden Singers, cond. I. Humphris, London, St John's, Smith Square, 11 Jan 1974; complete, BBC singers, cond. S. Joly, BBC, 10 June 1992
Paa Vidderne (H. Ibsen), reciter, orch, 1888; S.S. Hungnes, Oslo PO, cond. C. Farncombe, Norwegian Television broadcast, 17 May 1983
Sakuntala (H. Drachmann), T, orch, 1889; I. Partridge, York University Orch, cond. P. Seymour, University of York, 19 June 1987
Twilight Fancies (Bjørnson), 1v, pf, 1889, orchd 1908; O. Wood, Queen's Hall Orch, cond. H. Wood, Liverpool, 21 March 1908
The Bird's Story (Ibsen), 1v, pf, 1889, orchd 1908; O. Wood, Queen's Hall Orch, cond. H. Wood, Liverpool, 21 March 1908
Maud (A. Tennyson), 5 songs, T, orch, 1891
Seven Danish Songs (Jacobsen, H. Drachmann), 1v, orch/pf, 1897; 5 songs, C. Andray, cond. Hertz, St James's Hall, 30 March 1899; 2 songs, Andray, cond. V. d'Indy, Paris, Société Nationale de Musique, 16 March 1901
Mitternachtslied Zarathustras (F. Nietzsche), Bar, male chorus, orch, 1898; D. Powell, cond. Hertz, St James's Hall, 30 May 1899
The Violet (L. Holstein), 1v, pf, 1900, orchd 1908; O. Wood, Queen's Hall Orch, cond. H. Wood, Liverpool, 21 March 1908
Summer Landscape (Drachmann), 1v, pf, 1902, orchd 1903
Appalachia: Variations on an Old Slave Song (trad.), Bar, chorus, orch, 1902–3 [rev. of Appalachia: American Rhapsody]; Elberfeld Choral and Orchestral societies, cond. Haym, Elberfeld, Stadthalle, 15 Oct 1904
Sea Drift (W. Whitman), Bar, chorus, orch, 1903–4; J. Loritz, cond. G. Witte, Essen, 24 May 1906
A Mass of Life (F. Nietzsche), S, A, T, Bar, chorus, orch, 1904–5; Part I, 2, and Part II inc.: M. van Lammen, O. von Welden, B. Hebert, R. Gmür, Munich Choral Society, Munich Hofkapelle, cond. L. Hess, Munich, 4 June 1908; complete, C. Gleeson White, M.G. Grainger-Kerr, W. Millar, C. Clark, North Staffordshire District Choral Society, Beecham Orch, cond. Beecham, Queen's Hall, 7 June 1909
Songs of Sunset (E. Dowson), Mez, Bar, chorus, orch, 1906–7; J. Culp, T. Bates, Edward Mason Choir, Beecham Orch, cond. Beecham, Queen's Hall, 16 June 1911
On Craig Ddu (A. Symons), SATTBB, 1907; Blackpool, 1910
Wanderer's Song (Symons), TTBB, 1908
Midsummer Song (?Delius), SSAATTBB, 1908; Whitley Bay and District Choral Society, cond. W.G. Whittaker, 1910
An Arabesque (J.P. Jacobsen), Bar, chorus, orch, 1911; P. Heming, Welsh Musical Festival Choral Society, LSO, cond. A.E. Sims, Newport, Monmouthshire, 28 May 1920
The Song of the High Hills (textless), chorus, orch, 1911–12; Philharmonic Choir, Royal Philharmonic Society, cond. A. Coates, Queen's Hall, 26 Feb 1920
Two Songs for Children: Little Birdie (Tennyson), unison, pf, The Streamlet's Slumber Song, 2-part, pf, 1913
Requiem (H. Simon), S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1913–14, A. Evans, N. Williams, Philharmonic Choir, Royal Philharmonic Society, cond. Coates, Queen's Hall, 23 March 1922
To be sung of a Summer Night on the Water (textless), 2 songs, SATTBB (T solo in no.2), 1917; Oriana Madrigal Society, cond. C.K. Scott, London, Aeolian Hall, 28 June 1921
The splendour falls on castle walls (Tennyson), chorus, 1923; Oriana Madrigal Society, cond. Scott, Aeolian Hall, 17 June 1924
A Late Lark (W.E. Henley), T, orch, 1924/29; H. Nash, Orchestra of the Columbia Graphophone Company, cond. Beecham, Queen's Hall, 12 Oct 1929
Cynara (E. Dowson), Bar, orch, 1907/29; J. Goss, BBC SO, cond. Beecham, Queen's Hall, 18 Oct 1929
Songs of Farewell (Whitman), chorus, orch, 1920/1930; Philharmonic Choir, LSO, cond. M. Sargent, 21 March 1932
Idyll: Once I passed through a populous city (Whitman) [from Margot la rouge], S, Bar, orch, 1932; D. Labbette, R. Henderson, BBC SO, cond. Wood, Queen's Hall, 3 Oct 1933

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Zum Carnival Polka, pf, 1885
Pensées mélodieuses, pf, 1885
String Quartet, 1888, inc.
Romance, vn, pf, 1889
2 pieces, pf, Valse, Rêverie (inc.), 1889–90
Violin Sonata, B, 1892; Paris, 1893 (private perf.)
Badinage, pf, ?*c*1895

Romance, vc, pf, 1896; J. Lloyd Webber, T. Mikkila, Helsinki, 22 June 1976
Violin Sonata no.1, 1905/14; A. Catterall, R.J. Forbes, Manchester, Houldsworth Hall, 24 Feb 1915
Cello Sonata, 1916; B. Harrison, H. Harty, London, Wigmore Hall, 31 Oct 1918
String Quartet, 1916; orig. version, 3 movts, London Qt, Aeolian Hall, 17 Nov 1916; rev. version, 4 movts, London Qt, Aeolian Hall, 1 Feb 1919
Dance, hpd, 1919
Five Pieces, pf, 1922–3
Three Preludes, pf, 1923; E. Howard-Jones, London, 4 Sept 1924
Violin Sonata no.2, 1923; A. Sammons, Howard-Jones, London, 7 Oct 1924
Violin Sonata no.3, 1930; M. Harrison, A. Bax, Wigmore Hall, 6 Nov 1930

SONGS

Over the Mountains High (B. Bjørnson), 1885
Zwei braune Augen (H.C. Andersen), 1885
Der Fichtenbaum (Heine), 1886
Five Songs from the Norwegian: Slumber Song (Bjørnson), The Nightingale (T. Kjerulf), Summer Eve (J. Paulsen), Longing (Kjerulf), Sunset (A. Munch), 1888
Hochgebirgsleben (Ibsen), 1888
O schneller, mein Ross (E. Geibel), 1888
Chanson de Fortunio (A. de Musset), 1889
Seven Songs from the Norwegian: Cradle Song (Ibsen), The Homeward Journey (Å.O. Vinje), Evening Voices (Twilight Fancies) (Bjørnson), Sweet Venevil (Bjørnson), Minstrel (Ibsen), Love concealed (Bjørnson), The Bird's Story (Ibsen), 1889–90; nos.3, 7, also orchd
Skogen gir susende, langsom besked (Bjørnson), 1890/91
Four Songs (Heine): Mit deinen blauen Augen, Ein schöner Stern, Hör' ich das Liedchen klingen, Aus deinen Augen, 1890–91
Three Songs (P.B. Shelley): Indian Love Song, Love's Philosophy, To the Queen of my Heart, 1891
Lyse Naetter (H. Drachmann), 1891
Jeg havde en nyskaaren Seljefløjte (V. Krag), 1892/3
Nuages (J. Richepin), 1893
Im Glück wir lachend gingen (Drachmann), 1895
Two Songs (P. Verlaine): Il pleure dans mon coeur, Le ciel est, par-dessus le toit, 1895
The page sat in the lofty tower (J.P. Jacobsen), ?1895
Seven Danish Songs: Summer Nights (Drachmann), Through long, long years (Jacobsen), Wine Roses (Jacobsen), Let Springtime Come (Jacobsen), Irmelin Rose (Jacobsen), In the Seraglio Garden (Jacobsen), Silken Shoes (Jacobsen), 1896–7; also orchd
Traum Rosen (M. Heinitz), *c*1898
Four Songs (Nietzsche): Nach neuen Meeren, Der Wanderer, Der Einsame, Der Wanderer und sein Schatten, 1898
The Violet (Holstein), 1900, also orchd
Autumn (Holstein), 1900
Black Roses (E. Josephson), 1901
Jeg hører i Natten (Drachmann), 1901
Summer Landscape (Drachmann), 1902, also orchd
The nightingale has a lyre of gold (Henley), 1910
La lune blanche (Verlaine), 1910
Chanson d'automne (Verlaine), 1911
I-Brasîl (F. Macleod [W. Sharp]), 1913
Four Old English Lyrics: It was a lover and his lass (W. Shakespeare), So white, so soft, so sweet is she (B. Jonson), Spring, the sweet spring (T. Nashe), To Daffodils (R. Herrick), 1915–16
Avant que tu ne t'en ailles (Verlaine), 1919/32

MSS in GB-Lbl

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Leuckart, Oxford University Press, Stainer & Bell, Universal

WRITINGS

with Papus [G. Encausse]: Anatomie et physiologie de l'orchestre (Paris, 1894)
'Musik in England im Kriege', Musikblätter des Anbruch, i (1919), 18–19; Eng. trans. in Carley, 1983
'At the Cross-Roads', The Sackbut, i (1920), 205–8; repr. in Carley, 1988
'Recollections of Strindberg', The Sackbut, i (1920), 353–4; repr. in Carley, 1983

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BOOKS ON DELIUS

M. Chop: Frederick Delius (Berlin, 1907)
H. Haym: Delius, A Mass of Life: Introduction to the Words and Music (Leipzig and Vienna, 1913; Eng. trans., 1925)
P. Heseltine: Frederick Delius (London, 1923, 2/1952/R)
R.H. Hull: Delius (London, 1928)
C. Delius: Frederick Delius: Memories of my Brother (London, 1935)
E. Fenby: Delius as I Knew him (London, 1936, 2/1948/R, 3/1966, 4/1981)
N.T. Hunt: Frederick Delius: a Concert-Goer's Introduction to the Life and Music of a Great Composer (Brighton, *c*1945)
A. Hutchings: Delius (London, 1948)
A.K. Holland: The Songs of Delius (London, 1951) [articles repr. from MO, lx (1936–7)]
T. Beecham: Frederick Delius (London, 1959, 2/1975)
A. Bottomley, ed.: Frederick Delius 1862–1962 (Bradford, 1962) [programme book for the Delius Centenary Festival]
Frederick Delius: Centenary Festival Exhibition (Bradford and London, 1962)
G. Jahoda: The Road to Samarkand: Frederick Delius and his Music (New York, 1969)
M. Walker and S. Upton: Frederick Delius: a Discography (London, 1969) [Delius Society Newsletter, no.24]
E. Fenby: Delius (London, 1971)
L. Carley and R. Threlfall: Delius and America (London, 1972) [exhibition catalogue]
A. Jefferson: Delius (London, 1972)
R. Lowe: Frederick Delius 1862–1934: a Catalogue of the Music Archive of the Delius Trust, London (London, 1974, 2/1986)
L. Carley: Delius: the Paris Years (London, 1975)
C. Palmer: Delius: Portrait of a Cosmopolitan (London, 1976)
C. Redwood, ed.: A Delius Companion (London, 1976, 2/1980)
F. Tomlinson: Warlock and Delius (London, 1976)
L. Carley and R. Threlfall: Delius: a Life in Pictures (London, 1977, 2/1984)
R. Threlfall: Frederick Delius (1862–1934): a Catalogue of the Compositions (London, 1977)
D. Redwood: Flecker and Delius: the Making of 'Hassan' (London, 1978)
A. Eggum and S. Biørnstad, eds.: Frederick Delius og Edvard Munch (Oslo, 1979) [exhibition catalogue; Eng. and Nor. text]
R. Lowe: A Descriptive Catalogue of the Letters in the Delius Collection of the Grainger Museum (London, 1981)
S. Banfield, ed.: The Fourth Delius Festival: 8–14 March 1982 (Keele, 1982) [programme book]
L. Carley: Delius: a Life in Letters, i: 1862–1908 (London, 1983; Cambridge, MA, 1984), ii: 1909–1934 (London and Brookfield, VT, 1988)
J.B. Smith: Frederick Delius and Edvard Munch: their Friendship and their Correspondence (Rickmansworth, 1983)
Delius 1862–1934, compiled by The Delius Trust (London, 1984, 2/1992, 3/1998) [50th anniversary brochure]
M. Cahill: Delius in Danville (Danville, VA, 1986)
R. Threlfall: Frederick Delius: a Supplementary Catalogue (London, 1986)
R. Threlfall: Frederick Delius, Complete Works: Editorial Report (London, 1990)
L. Carley: Grieg and Delius: a Chronicle of their Friendship in Letters (London, 1993)
R. Threlfall: Delius: a Musical Notebook (London, 1993)
R. Threlfall: Delius' Musical Apprenticeship (London, 1994)
D.C. Gillespie: The Search for Thomas F. Ward, Teacher of Frederick Delius (Gainesville, FL, 1996)
S. Lloyd, ed.: Fenby on Delius (London, 1996)
L. Carley, ed.: Frederick Delius: Music, Art and Literature (Aldershot, 1998)
B. Smith: Delius and Warlock: a Friendship Revealed (Oxford, 1999)

OTHER LITERATURE

B. Bartók: 'Delius-bemutató Bécsben' [A Delius première in Vienna], Zeneközlöny, ix (1911), 340–42; repr. in B. Suchoff, ed.: Béla Bartók Essays (London, 1976), 449–50
R.A. Streatfeild: Musiciens anglais contemporains (Paris, 1913)
H. Brian: 'The Art of Delius', MO, xlvii (1923–4), 598, 700–01, 799–800, 906–7, 1002–3, 1098, 1194–5; xlviii (1924–5), 49–50
J. Holbrooke: Contemporary British Composers (London, 1925)
G. Abraham: 'Delius and his Literary Sources', ML, x (1929), 182–8; repr. in Slavonic and Romantic Music (London, 1968), 332–8

C. Gray: Peter Warlock: a Memoir of Philip Heseltine (London, 1934)
T. Beecham: A Mingled Chime (New York, 1943; London, 1944)
R. Nettel: Music in the Five Towns 1840–1914 (London, 1944)
D. Hudson: Norman O'Neill: a Life of Music (London, 1945)
C. Barjansky: Portraits with Backgrounds (New York, 1947)
Tempo, no.26 (1952–3) [Delius issue]
R. Nichols: 'Delius as I Knew Him', in Music Magazine, ed. A. Instone and J. Herbage (London, 1953), 5–9
N. Cardus: A Composers' Eleven (London, 1958)
The Delius Festival, Jacksonville, FL, 1961– [programme books]
A. Payne: 'Delius's Stylistic Development', Tempo, no.60 (1961–2), 6–16
D. Cooke: 'Delius and Form: a Vindication', MT, ciii (1962), 392–3, 460–65
Delius Society Newsletter (1962–) [renamed Delius Society Journal, July 1974; quarterly]
R. Hove: 'Frederick Delius, 1862–1962: et hundredeårsminde', Nordisk Tidskrift (1964), 93–104
R. Lowe: 'Delius's First Performance', MT, cvi (1965), 190–92
J.B. Smith: 'Portrait of a Friendship: Edvard Munch and Frederick Delius', Apollo (1966), 38–47
G. Jahoda: The Other Florida (New York, 1967)
J. van Ackere: 'Un musicien méconnu: Frederick Delius, coloriste', Revue générale belge, v (1968), 75–86
I.A. Copley: 'Warlock and Delius: a Catalogue', ML, xlix (1968), 213–18
L. Carley: 'Jelka Rosen Delius: Artist, Admirer and Friend of Rodin: the Correspondence 1900–1914', Nottingham French Studies, ix (1970), 16–30, 81–102
C. Palmer: 'Delius and Poetic Realism', ML, li (1970), 404–14
P.J. Pirie: 'Delius the Unknown', Music and Musicians, xix/11 (1970–71), 34–40
W. Randel: 'Frederick Delius in America', Virginia Magazine of History and Biography, lxxix (1971), 349–66
W. Randel: '"Koanga" and its Libretto', ML, lii (1971), 141–56
J.G. Brennan: 'Delius and Whitman', Walt Whitman Review, xviii/3 (1972), 90–96
R. Lowe-Dugmore: 'Frederick Delius and Norway', SMA, vi (1972), 27–40; see also vii (1973), 98
L. Carley: 'Hans Haym: Delius's Prophet and Pioneer', ML, liv (1973), 1–24
R. Lowe: 'The Music Archive of the Delius Trust', MR, xxxiv (1973), 294–306
R. Threlfall: 'Delius Music Manuscripts in Australia', SMA, vii (1973), 69–76
R. Lowe-Dugmore: 'Delius and Elgar: a Postscript', SMA, viii (1974), 92–100
C. Redwood: 'Delius and Strindberg', ML, lvi (1975), 364–70
J. Bird: Percy Grainger (London, 1976, rev. 2/1999)
R. Threlfall: 'Delius in Eric Fenby's MSS', Composer, no.57 (1976), 33–5
C. Redwood: 'Delius's "Magic Fountain"', MT, cxviii (1977), 909
R. Threlfall: 'Delius's Unknown Opera: The Magic Fountain', SMA, xi (1977), 60–73
R. Lowe-Dugmore: 'Documenting Delius', SMA, xii (1978), 114–29; xiii (1979), 44–62; xiv (1980), 127
P. Jones: 'The Delius Birthplace', MT, cxx (1979), 990–92
L. Foreman, ed.: The Percy Grainger Companion (London, 1981)
A.J. Boyle: 'A Mass of Life and its "Bell-motif"', MR, xliii (1982), 44–50
J. van Ackere: 'Frederick Delius of de Wellust van de Klank', Academiae analecta, xliv (1983), 59–122
C. Redwood, ed.: An Elgar Companion (Ashbourne, Derbys., 1983)
S. Lloyd: H. Balfour Gardiner (Cambridge, 1984)
R. Threlfall: 'Delius: a Fresh Glance at Two Famous Scores', MT, cxxv (1984), 315–19
J. Bergsagel: 'J.P. Jacobsen and Music', J.P. Jacobsen's Spor, ed. F.J. Billeskov Jansen (Copenhagen, 1985), 285–313
M. MacDonald, ed.: Havergal Brian on Music (London, 1986)
R.U. Ringger: Von Debussy bis Henze (Munich, 1986), 157–65
P. Jones: The American Source of Delius Style (New York and London, 1989)
J. Wilson: C.W. Orr: the Unknown Song-Writer (London, 1989)
M. Pilkington: English Solo Song, iii: Delius, Bridge and Somervell (London, 1993)
A. Rittmann: Briefe: Ida Gerhardi (1862–1927) (Münster, 1993)
L. Carley: 'Delius's Song of the Earth', Fanfare from the Royal Philharmonic Society (1994), no.3, pp.3–4
L. Carley: 'Walt Whitman, Frederick Delius and English Music', The Delian [Philadelphia] (June 1995), 3–9
L. Carley: 'Landscapes: Grieg and Delius', The Grieg Companion: Journal of the Grieg Society of Great Britain, i (1996), 12–24
A.K.W. Meyer: 'Beginn einer Renaissance? Frederick Delius' Opern in Deutschland aus Ende des 20. Jahrhunderts', Opernwelt: Jb 1997, 110–18
L. Carley: 'An English Composer at the Heart of Nordic Culture: Frederick Delius and his Friends', Nordic Letters, 1870–1910, ed. M. Robinson and J. Garton (Norwich, 1998), 376–97
T. Hold: 'Grieg, Delius, Grainger and a Norwegian Cuckoo', Tempo, no.203 (1998), 11–19

ROBERT ANDERSON (1), ANTHONY PAYNE (2), LIONEL CARLEY (work-list, bibliography)

Delius Society. English organization. It was founded in 1962 to promote a wider knowledge and appreciation of the music of Frederick Delius and to encourage the performance and recording of his works. Delius's amanuensis Eric Fenby (1906–97) was the society's first president, succeeded in 1997 by Felix Aprahamian. It has affiliated associations in the USA and France, and its members include leading Delius scholars and performers. The society organizes lectures and concerts in London and elsewhere, sponsors recordings and three times a year publishes the authoritative Delius Society Journal, which combines the latest international research with more informal essays, correspondence and worldwide news of concerts, exhibitions, books and recordings.

□

Della Bella, Domenico (fl Treviso, *c*1700–15). Italian composer and cellist, maestro di cappella of Treviso Cathedral. His music, even that written for instruments, appears rather austere and archaic and is often based on fugal or imitative techniques. His writing for the cello calls for a well-developed technique with particular ability in bowing.

WORKS

12 suonate da chiesa, a 3, 2 vn, vc obbl, org, op.1 (Venice, 1704)
Sonata, vc, bc, D-Bsb
7 masses, 4vv; Gl, 4vv; Te Deum, 6vv; psalms and other sacred works: Bsb, A-Wn

GUIDO SALVETTI

Della Casa, Lisa (b Burgdorf, nr Berne, 2 Feb 1919). Swiss soprano. She studied with Margarete Haeser in Zürich and made her début at Solothurn-Biel as Butterfly in 1941. At the Stadttheater, Zürich (1943–50), she sang such diverse roles as Serena (Porgy and Bess), Pamina and Gilda, and created the Young Woman in Burkhard's Die schwarze Spinne (1949). She first appeared at Salzburg in 1947 as Zdenka (Arabella) and the following summer returned to sing the Countess (Capriccio). In 1951 she made her British début as Countess Almaviva at Glyndebourne; later that year in Munich she sang Arabella, the role with which she was most closely associated and which she sang at her Covent Garden début in 1953 with the Bayerische Staatsoper, and repeated in 1965. She became a member of the Vienna Staatsoper in 1947 and in 1952 sang Eva at Bayreuth. In 1953 she created the three female roles in Der Prozess at Salzburg. She sang at the Metropolitan (1953–68), making her début there as Countess Almaviva, and at San Francisco (1958). Best known in the Strauss repertory, Della Casa graduated from Sophie through Octavian to the Marschallin; she also sang Ariadne, Chrysothemis and Salome. She could spin out Strauss's soaring line with a smooth legato, and the limpid silvery quality of her voice made her an admirable Mozart singer. Her beauty and natural charm enhanced her vocal gifts. Her many recordings, including Arabella, Ariadne, the Marschallin and a seminal account of Strauss's Vier letzte Lieder, enshrine her finest qualities.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV [with discography by R. Vegeto]

A. Natan: 'Della Casa, Lisa', Primadonna: Lob der Stimmen (Basle, 1962) [with discography]

G. Fitzgerald: 'Lisa Della Casa', Opera, xix (1968), 185–91

D. Debeljevič: Ein Leben mit Lisa Della Casa, oder 'In dem Schatten ihrer Locken' (Zürich, 1975)

E. Forbes: 'Lisa Della Casa: the Search for Perfection', Opera, xlvi (1995), 527–32

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Della Ciaia [Ciaja], Azzolino Bernardino (b Siena, 21 May 1671; d Pisa, 15 Jan 1755). Italian composer. Born into a wealthy family, on 20 April 1674 he became a page (probably only honorary) of the Gran Maestro of the Pisan Cavalieri di S Stefano, the Grand Duke of Tuscany. On 1 October 1678 he joined the order of the knights and was a pupil at their school, probably studying music with G.L. Cattani. During a tour of sea duty with them (1688–1704), he began to compose 'in the midst of the noise and confusion of a galley'. His ship stopped often in Marseilles, where he heard and examined the organs by Flemish builders residing in the city. He was then called to Pisa to take part in their governing council. Next he was sent to Rome (1713–30) as secretary to the Colonna-Barbaglia family, where he designed and had constructed a two-manual, 20-register organ; his extant keyboard music was probably written for this instrument. Returning permanently to Pisa in 1730, again as a councillor, he participated as a performer in sacred music, sometimes under the direction of Macchetti, maestro di cappella of the cathedral.

In 1733 Della Ciaia proposed to the knights his project for an organ, which was basically Italian but with French, Flemish and German aspects, 'containing more than 60 registers, and having four manuals, and comprising five organs, three of which can be played, when so desired, on a single manual; because of this, and owing to the number [3500] and the size of the pipes, there is an extraordinary and majestic full sound, there being also an unusual number of reeds'. A fifth pull-out keyboard controlled a harpsichord. In the execution of this design he directed many of the principal Italian organ makers of the time (Felice and Fabrizio Cimino of Naples, Lorenzo Nelli, probably of Florence, Filippo Testa of Rome, Filippo Basile, probably of Naples, Giovan Francesco detto Domenico Cacioli of Lucca, the Ravani brothers of Lucca, Filippo and Antonio Tronci of Pistoia) and collaborated himself, especially on the reeds. Their work (modified at the beginning of 1839) resulted in what was the best organ in Tuscany and one of the most beautiful in Italy. It was first played on 28 November 1737 at the funeral of Giovangastone de' Medici (for which the above description was printed). Della Ciaia became a priest in 1734 and, without leaving Pisa, was made prior of Urbino in 1752. It was not he but a Sienese cousin who was a Cavaliere di Malta and who became balì of Lucca.

Although Della Ciaia composed both sacred and secular vocal music, he is known today only for his instrumental music. His collection of keyboard music (undated, but '1727' is written on the Bologna copy) is divided into three sections: six sonatas for harpsichord, several saggi in counterpoint for organ, and six ricercares for organ. That for harpsichord is the more important owing to the rarity of sonatas expressly for the instrument from that period. Each is a hybrid form comprising a toccata, a three-part canzona and two binary pieces: the first two movements show the application to the harpsichord of what had been primarily organ music. The toccatas, especially, exhibit a well-developed keyboard style: the entire range of the instrument is employed as chordal-rhythmic sections alternate with free-rhythm scalic passages reminiscent of Buxtehude.

A distant relative, Alessandro Della Ciaja (contemporary with Azzolino's grandfather), a Sienese nobleman and accademico intronato who studied with Desiderio Pecci, was a composer, singer and performer on the monochord, lute and theorbo. He published a set of five-voice madrigals with continuo as his op.1 (Venice, 1636), a set of Lamentationi sagre e motetti for solo voice and continuo as op.2 (Venice, 1650), and Sacri modulatus for two to nine voices as op.3 (Bologna, 1666). His duets are firmly monodic, but the works of more parts reveal training in the contrapuntal church style.

WORKS

Salmi concertati, SSATB, 2 vn obbl., va ad lib, vle/theorbo/org, op.1 (Bologna, 1700)

Cantate da camera, S, bc, op.2 (Lucca, 1701)

Cantate da camera, 1v, bc, op.3 (Bologna, 1702), lost

Cantatas for S, bc: De suoi tormenti in seno (Pisa, 1704); Chi non sa morire; Bella imago; Lungi dal caro bene (Pisa, 1709)

Sonate per cembalo con alcuni saggi ed altri contrapunti di largo e grave stile ecclesiastico per grandi organi, kbd, op.4 (Rome, n.d.) [?1727]

Mass (Ky, Gl, Cr), 4vv, 2 SATB choirs, concertata, org, 2 vn ad lib, 1696; Mass, 4–5vv, org, tpt and vn ad lib, 1739; Mass (Ky, Gl, Cr), 4vv, n.d.: all in D-Bsb

I trionfi di Giosuè (pasticcio orat, G.P. Berzini), Florence, Compagnia di S Marco, 1703, Florence, Congregazione di Gesù Salvatore, 1708, as Giosuè in Cabaon, Florence, Compagnia di S Sebastiano, 20 Jan 1710/11, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.F. Casamorata: 'Studi bibliografico-biografici su musicisti toscani', GMM, vi (1847), 243–4

E. Micheli: Organo della Conventuale di San Stefano (Pisa, 1871)

F. Torrefranca: 'L'impressionismo ritmico e le sonate del Cavalier Della Ciaja', Vita musicale, ii (1913), 101–12

A. Sandberger: 'Zur älteren italienischen Klaviermusik', JbMP 1918, 17–25; repr. in A. Sandberger: Ausgewählte Aufsätze zur Musikgeschichte (Munich, 1921/R), 169–80

F. Vatielli: 'Una lettera biografica di A. Della Ciaja', Critica musicale, iv (1921), 136–9

G. Chigi-Saracini: 'Un organista del secolo XVIII: A. Della Ciaja', La Diana, iii (1928); repr. in Bollettino dell'Accademia chigiana, iii (1950), 1–11

A. Puccianti: 'Di un opuscolo contenente la descrizione dell'organo di Azzolino Della Ciaja nella chiesa de' Cavalieri in Pisa', RMI, lii (1950), 148–51

A. Damerini: 'Di alcuni maestri toscani', Musicisti toscani, ii, Chigiana, xii (1955), 27–38

F. Baggiani: L'organo di Azzolino B. Della Ciaia (Pisa, 1974)

G. Battelli: Catalogo ragionato delle opere del Cav. Azzolino Bernardino della Ciaja (thesis, U. of Pisa, 1978–9)

A. Schnoebelen: Padre Martini's Collection of Letters in the Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale in Bologna (New York, 1979)

P. Radicchi: Giovanni Lorenzo Cattani, musicista carrarese al servizio dei Medici (Pisa, 1980)

F.W. Riedel: 'Johann Sebastian Bachs Kunst der Fuge und die Fugenbücher der italienischen und österreichischen Organisten des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts', Von Isaac bis Bach: Festschrift Martin Just, ed. F. Heidlberger, W. Osthoff and R. Wiesend (Kassel, 1991)), 327–33

C. Johnson: 'Early Italian Keyboard Fingering', Early Keyboard Journal, x (1992), 7–88

CAROLYN GIANTURCO

Della Corte, Andrea (b Naples, 5 April 1883; d Turin, 12 March 1968). Italian musicologist and critic. Self-taught in music, he was professor of music history at the Turin Conservatory (1926–53) and at Turin University (1939–53). His main occupation, however, was journalism. He contributed to various Neapolitan papers from 1906 and was music critic of the Turin paper La stampa (1919–1967), a post to which he brought a professionalism hitherto unknown in Italy.

As a musicologist his chief interest was opera history, and he made valuable contributions to the knowledge of Neapolitan opera, Gluck and above all Verdi: his essays on Aida, Otello and Falstaff (1923–5) enlarged the awareness of the organic unity of Verdi's dramas to which Toscanini's reform of interpretation was greatly contributing. In his Toscanini visto da un critico (1958) Della Corte made a study of the concept of interpretation. An advocate of idealism, he produced studies in aesthetics and theory which are collected in L'interpretazione musicale e gli interpreti (1951) and La critica musicale e i critici (1961). He amassed a vast library of manuscripts, ancient and modern books, and valuable collections of reviews; these are now in the music department of the Civic Library, Turin, which bears his name.

WRITINGS

Paisiello (Turin, 1922) [incl. appx 'L'estetica musicale di Metastasio']
L'opera comica italiana del '700 (Bari, 1923)
Nicolò Piccinni (Bari, 1928)
with G.M. Gatti: Dizionario di musica (Turin, 1925, 6/1959)
Canto e bel canto (Turin, 1933)
Ritratto di Franco Alfano (Turin, 1935)
Un italiano all'estero: Antonio Salieri (Turin, 1936)
Pergolesi (Turin, 1936)
with G. Pannain: Storia della musica (Turin, 1936, 4/1964) with G. Pannain: Vincenzo Bellini: il carattere morale, i caratteri artistici (Turin, 1936)
Tre secoli di opera italiana (Turin, 1938)
Verdi (Turin, 1939)
Satire e grotteschi di musiche e di musicisti d'ogni tempo (Turin, 1946)
Gluck (Florence, 1948)
Le sei più belle opere di Giuseppe Verdi (Milan, 1946, 3/1958; pubd separately 1923–43)
Toscanini (Vicenza, 1946, 2/1981/R)
L'interpretazione musicale e gli interpreti (Turin, 1951) with G. Barblan: Mozart in Italia (Milan, 1956)
Drammi per musica dal Rinuccini allo Zeno (Turin, 1958)
Toscanini visto da un critico (Turin, 1958)
La critica musicale e i critici (Turin, 1961)
'La vigilia del melodramma', L'opera italiana in musica: scritti e saggi in onore di Eugenio Gara (Milan, 1965), 13–21
'Cori monodici di 10 musicisti per le "Tragedie christiane" di A. Marchese', RIM, i (1966), 190–202
'Un' opera di Paisiello per Caterina II di Pietroburgo: Gli astrologi immaginari (1779)', Chigiana, xxiii, new ser. iii (1966), 135–47

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Barblan: 'Andrea Della Corte', RIM, iii (1968), 207–10
M. Mila: 'L'opera di Andrea Della Corte per la cultura musicale italiana', NRMI, ii (1968), 203–6

GIORGIO PESTELLI

Della Faya [La Faya], Aurelio (d Lanciano, nr Pescara, *c*1579). Italian composer. Although he spent all of his known career in Italy, his surname suggests non-Italian origins, possibly French, but probably Castilian (from the Castilian Latin fagea, 'beech tree'). The title-page of his Primo libro de madrigali a cinque (Venice, 1564) indicates that he was a member of the clergy and maestro di cappella at Lanciano, an appointment that he held until his death. His Secondo libro de madrigali a cinque (Venice, 1579, inc.) was assembled by his pupils Giovanni Battista Bossi and Aurelio Pittore and was published posthumously. He contributed three five-part madrigals to a collection of madrigali ariosi (RISM 1570[25]). His music is conservative and rather dull; it relies heavily on imitative techniques and uses chromaticism and representational devices sparingly. (The anonymous manuscript piece copied into the GB-Lbl partbooks of the Primo libro by a 17th-century English hand is a version of Tallis's O salutaris hostia.)

IAIN FENLON

Del Lago, Giovanni [Pre Zanetto] (*b c*1490; d Venice, 8 March 1544). Italian theorist. All that is known of his early life is that he was a student of the frottolist Giovanni Battista Zesso of Padua. In 1520 he was a cleric attached to the small parish church of S Sofia, Venice, in the sestiere of Cannaregio, where he remained throughout his life; he became deacon in 1527 and was promoted to titular priest in 1542. Towards the end of his life he published a small and largely insignificant treatise on the fundamentals of music, Breve introduttione (reviewed unfavourably by Pietro Aaron; see Blackburn, Lowinsky and Miller, no.66), but his chief claim to fame lies in the correspondence he conducted with the foremost theorists of his time, Giovanni Spataro and Aaron, and a host of lesser musicians. Although his plan to publish his letters failed, his correspondence survives, together with many of the letters written to him (I-Rvat Vat.lat.5318, ed. Blackburn, Lowinsky and Miller). These show that he revised his original letters to correct errors, sometimes incorporating unacknowledged portions of Spataro's replies. Several letters are fictitious.

Although he viewed himself as a great authority on music theory, frequently quoting from older theorists, Del Lago was often shown up by Spataro's sharper mind. The interests reflected in his letters lay in ancient Greek theory (despite his ignorance of Greek), text–music relations, enigmatic canons and problems of notation; they drew forth highly interesting responses from his correspondents. His Epistole and several theoretical manuscripts that belonged to him were acquired by Paolo Manuzio; they were inherited by his son Aldo Manuzio the younger and passed to the Vatican Library in 1598.

Del Lago is the author of a motet, Multi sunt vocati, an exercise in imperfection and alteration, partially preserved in one of his letters and mentioned in Aaron's Trattato della natura et cognitione di tutti gli tuoni di canto figurato (1525).

WRITINGS

Breve introduttione di musica misurata (Venice, 1540/R)
Epistole composte in lingua volgare (MS, I-Rvat Vat.lat.5318; late copies in I-Bc B.106, B.107. 1–3; A-Wn S.m.4830)
Letters to Spataro in F-Pn Ital.1110, I-Bc Lettere di Spataro, D-Bsb Mus.autogr.theor.1

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SpataroC
K. Jeppesen: 'Eine musiktheoretische Korrespondenz des früheren Cinquecento', AcM, xiii (1941), 3–39
E.P. Bergquist: The Theoretical Writings of Pietro Aaron (diss., Columbia U., 1964) [includes Del Lago's letters to and from Aaron]
F.A. Gallo: 'Citazioni di teorici medievali nelle lettere di Giovanni del Lago', Quadrivium, xiv (1973), 171–80
D. Harrán: 'The Theorist Giovanni del Lago: a New View of the Man and his Writings', MD, xxvii (1973), 107–51
M. Feldman: City Culture and the Madrigal at Venice (Berkeley, 1995), esp. 156–70

BONNIE J. BLACKBURN

Della Gostena, Giovanni Battista. See DALLA GOSTENA, GIOVANNI BATTISTA.

Della-Maria, (Pierre-Antoine-)Dominique (b Marseilles, 14 June 1769; d Paris, 9 March 1800). French composer. The son of an Italian artist who had settled in Marseilles in 1758, he received an early musical education, studying the cello and his father's instrument the mandolin. When he was 11 Le Grand, director of the Académie de Concerts, engaged him as a cellist. In the spring of 1787 his first opera, Idoménée, was performed at the Théâtre de Marseille, and had an encouraging success. Della-Maria consequently decided to go to Italy to improve his composition skills, and left Marseilles on 25 April 1789. On arriving in Naples he first studied counterpoint with Nicola Sala, and then took composition lessons from Paisiello. In February 1790 he went to Rome, accompanying Amaury Duval, French ambassador to Naples and then Rome, the brother of Della-Maria's future collaborator Alexandre Duval. Between 1790 and 1797 Della-Maria stayed, successively, in Florence, Trieste and Venice. In February 1792 his first opera in Italian was successfully staged in Trieste. We know nothing about the time he spent in Italy between 1793 and 1795 except that he was planning to write operas on French librettos; he wrote to his parents asking them to send him the texts of opéras comiques by Martini, Dalayrac and Champein, very fashionable in Paris during the 1780s, so that he could get them translated into Italian. At the same time he was having comedies by Goldoni translated for him. In November 1796 he listed the achievements of his Italian years in a letter to his parents: five operas composed for Italian theatres, two of which, Il maestro di capella and Chi vuol no puole, had apparently been successfully performed in Bologna, Treviso, Padua, Bergamo, Ferrara, Vicenza and Verona.

In 1797 he settled in Paris, and became friendly with Alexandre Duval, an actor at the Théâtre Français who had just entered upon a brilliant career as a dramatist. Duval gave Della-Maria a comedy entitled Le prisonnier, and after some revision it became his first and greatest success in the opéra-comique genre. Mme Dugazon and the tenor Elleviou sang in the première of this one-act work, which was issued by several publishing firms within a few years. Le prisonnier was performed at the Opéra-Comique over 150 times between 1798 and 1814, and several of its airs were published separately. L'opéra-comique was almost equally successful, staged 132 times between 1801 and 1814. Della-Maria's contemporaries praised the natural simplicity and felicity of his essentially melodic style, which contrasted with the current taste for rich harmonies, massive orchestration and grand effects. His light, witty style was similar to that of Dalayrac, who recognized him as a successor.

Della-Maria died prematurely at the age of 30, on the verge of what promised to be a fruitful career, leaving several projects at the draft stage. They included Maison à vendre, which was eventually entrusted to Dalayrac. The Marseilles Academy had admitted him to its ranks, and his sociable character made him welcome in the houses and salons of George d'Epinay, Mme Hanguerlot and Sébastien Erard.

WORKS

STAGE

opéras comiques, first performed in Paris, unless otherwise stated; all printed works published in Paris

Idoménée (Ponteuil [M. Triboulet]), Marseilles, 1787
La partenope (scène lyrique, 1), Italy, *c*1790
Il maestro di cappella (dg), Naples, 1792
Chi vuol non puole (dg, 2), Vicenza, Nuovo, sum. 1795, F-Pn
Il matrimonio per scommessa, ossia La guerra aperta (dg, 2, F. Casari), Venice, S Samuele, aut. 1795
L'ennuco finto (ob, 1) Italy, 1796
Le prisonnier, ou La ressemblance (op, 1, A. Duval), OC (Favart), 29 Jan 1798 (1798)
Le vieux château, ou La rencontre (op, 3, Duval), Feydeau, 15 March 1798 (1798)
Jacquot, ou L'école des mères (2, J. Després and C.-J. Rouget de Lisle), OC (Favart), 28 May 1798
L'opéra comique (oc, 1, J. Ségur and E. Dupaty), OC (Favart), 9 July 1798 (1798)
L'oncle valet (op, 1, Duval), OC (Favart), 8 Dec 1798 (1798)
Le général suédois (2, J.M. Boutet de Monvel, after F.-G. Ducray-Duminil: Les soirées de la chaumière), OC (Favart), 23 May 1799
La maison du Marais (3, Duval), OC (Favart), 8 Nov 1799
La fausse duègne [Rosalba, ou La fausse duègne] (3, G. Montcloux d'Epinay), OC (Feydeau), 24 June 1802 [completed by Blangini]
Maria Seski (3, E. Aignan), unperf. [composed for Feydeau, Feb 1799]

Many excerpts, arrs. etc., many pubd, some in contemporary collections

OTHER WORKS

Romances, incl. L'ennemi de l'amour (E. Salverte) (n.d.)
Care Donzelle, duo, 1799, F-Pn
Polonaise delle Prova d'un opera seria, Pn
Sonata, pf, *Pn
Lost (mentioned in correspondence): 6 psalms; Misera dove sono, scena tragitta; 2 concs., vc; 1 conc., pf; 7 str qts; Al caro bene in braccio, trio; Amabile Lucilla, duo; Oh che bestia, duo; Confusi miei, air; Mon abeille, chanson; cavatine

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FetisB; MGG1 (M. Briquet); StiegerO
E. Dupaty: Obituary, Courrier des spectacles (25 March 1800)
N.E. Framery: Notice sur le musicien Della-Maria mort depuis peu (Paris, 1800)
A. Duval: Preface to Le prisonnier, Oeuvres complètes d'Alexandre Duval (Paris, 1822–3), ii
A. Pougin: 'Della Maria', RGMP, xxvi (1859), 245–8
G. Reynaud: 'Dominique Della Maria (1769–1800), sa vie, ses oeuvres à travers sa correspondance inédite', Marseille, nos.128–9 (1982), 38–58
G. Reynaud: 'La source de Della Maria', Marseille, no.136 (1984), 64–5
R. Legrand and P. Taïeb: 'L'opéra-comique sous le Consulat et l'Empire', Le théâtre lyrique en France au XIXe siècle (Metz, 1996), 1–61
P. Taïeb: 'Le prisonnier, ou La ressemblance d'Alexandre Duval et Dominique Della Maria, un thermidor pour l'opéra-comique', L'Opéra-Comique de 1801 à 1918: Paris 1998 (forthcoming)

PATRICK TAÏEB

Della Porta, Francesco (b Monza, ?*c*1600; d Milan, Jan 1667). Italian composer and organist. According to Picinelli he studied at Monza with the organist G.D. Rivolta [Ripalta], whose instrumental canzonas (two of which survive) may have influenced Della Porta's compositions in this genre. He competed unsuccessfully for the post of maestro di cappella of Milan Cathedral on three occasions, in 1638, 1641 and 1650, when the winners were G.B. Crivelli, A.M. Turati and M.A. Grancini respectively. The 1641 competition was judged by, among others, Carissimi, and while Della Porta's work was considered superior to that of Antonio Leoni, it was thought inferior to that of Turati. From 1638 at the latest he was organist of S Ambrogio, where he was also maestro di cappella at least from 1641. He served at S Ambrogio until January 1642, and from 2 February of that year (when Turati became maestro of the cathedral) until his death, he was organist and maestro of the chapel of S Maria presso S Celso, where his salary increased from 50 to 660 lire per month. He was also organist and maestro di cappella of S Antonio from 1651 to at least 1657 according to Picinelli, until his death. Della Porta's fame as a composer is suggested by the fact that four of his five printed collections appeared in Venice, the three books of motets then appearing in Antwerp in pirate editions.

Porta's five ricercares (in I-Tn), which may have been copied from the now lost Ricercari collection printed in Milan, are characterized, as those by G.P. Cima, by strictly imitative openings; four of them present two or three themes appearing first in succession, then superimposed in the concluding passage; the fifth is based on the theme Ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la and has a section in triple time. The canzonas, in accordance with the style of the period, proceed as a sequence of sections based on different techniques and themes. The openings are always imitative; subsequent sections are either imitative or chordal; and three of the canzonas have a central section in triple time, while in one canzona the triple time appears in the first section.

Della Porta is not to be confused with the poet of the same name, a member of the Accademia romana degli Imperfetti, who assembled the third book of villanellas by Kapsberger and printed it in Rome in 1619. He is probably also not the same person as the Franciscus a Porta Patavinus who composed a sacred work for six voices (Dilectus meus) between 1619 and 1625 (in S-L, V), or the Francesco Porta Venetiano who composed the aria 'Mi Deus ah quid feci' and the cantata Ad te o Jesu both in CH-E.

WORKS

Ricercari a 4, ?op.1 (Milan, n.d.), lost, cited in Picinelli and PitoniN
Motetti, 2–5vv, con le Letanie della Beata Vergine, 4vv, libro primo, op.2 (Venice, 1645/R)
Motetti, 2–5vv, con un Magnificat, Litanie della Beata Vergine, 4–5vv, libro secondo, op.3 (Venice, 1648/R)
Motetti, 2–5vv, con una messa e salmi, 4–5vv, libro terzo, op.4 (Venice, 1651/R)
Salmi da cappella, 4vv, con altri salmi, 3–5vv, concertati, op.5 (Venice, 1657)

Mass, 5vv, bc, insts ad lib added by Brossard, F-Pn [probably copied from repr. of op.4 (Antwerp, 1654)]
Motet, *D-Bsb [probably copied from op.3]; 8 motets F-Pn [probably copied from repr. of op.2 (Antwerp, 1650) and of op.3 (Antwerp, 1650)]; motets, S-Uu [copied from repr. of op.4 (Antwerp, 1654)]; motet, RUS-KA [probably copied from op.2]
5 canzoni, org, 1639, I-Tn, ed. in CEKM, xli (1977) [incorrectly attrib. Costanzo Porta]
5 ricercari, org tablature, 1639–40, Tn, ed. in CEKM, xli (1977), 50–62 [incorrectly attrib. Costanzo Porta]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; MGG1 (P. Kast); PitoniN
F. Picinelli: Ateneo dei letterati milanesi (Milan, 1670), 219
O. Mischiati: 'L'intavolatura d'organo tedesca della Biblioteca Nazionale di Torino', L'organo, iv (1963), 1–151
L. Ghielmi: 'Contributo per una storia degli organi del santuario di Santa Maria dei Miracoli presso San Celso in Milano', L'organo, xxii (1984), 3–13
D. Borroni: L'archivio musicale della chiesa di S. Maria presso S. Celso in Milano (1984–5), 89
G. De Florentiis: 'Storia della cappella musicale del Duomo dalle origini al 1714', Sei secoli di musica nel Duomo di Milano, ed. G. De Florentiis and G.N. Vessia (Milan, 1986), 41–125
M. Toffetti: '"Et per che il mondo non entri in sospetto di adulatione": titoli e dediche delle canzoni strumentali sullo sfondo dell'ambiente musicale milanese fra Cinque e Seicento', Ruggero Giovannelli: Palestrina and Velletri 1992, 509–60
M. Toffetti: 'Per una bibliografia della canzone strumentale milanese', ibid., 601–36

SERGIO LATTES/MARINA TOFFETTI

Della Porta, Gasparo (fl Naples, 1613). Italian composer. His only known publication is Il primo libro delle canzonette (Naples, 1613) for three voices. Most of the pieces are in two sections, both of which usually cadence at the same pitch. Triple metre and chromaticism are almost completely absent. The outer voices often progress in triadic patterns or in melodic sequences of ascending 4ths, separated by parallel 10ths and, sometimes, by inadvertent parallel 5ths and octaves. Despite the claim by the bookseller G.B. Cimmino in the dedication that Della Porta was a person of some renown in music, he seems to have had only a limited number of musical ideas, which he used again and again.

KEITH A. LARSON

Della Porta, Gioseppe (fl 1692–1701). Italian composer. When he wrote his serenata of 1701 he was a 'virtuoso' in the service of the Viennese ambassador in Rome, Georg Adam, Count of Martinitz, and his wife Maria Josepha. His laudatory cantata of 1698 was also written for them, and his celebratory cantata of 1692 for their predecessor Antonio Florian, Prince of Liechtenstein. He thus served Viennese ambassadors in Rome for at least a decade. His only opera, Eurillo, was sponsored by Count Centini. At least one of its three female characters was portrayed by a woman; an extant broadside praises Anna Vittoria Donelli of Bologna in the role of Lidia (see Franchi, 717).

WORKS

music lost unless otherwise stated

L'Eurillo, overo La costanza negl'amori fra' pastori (dramma pastorale, 'Pintace de Trosis' [?= P. de Sanctis], after F.B. Nencini: Le reciproche gelosie), Rome, Count Centini's residence, carn. 1697, 8 arias F-Pn
La gioventù romana alle glorie di Cesare (cant., G. Gentile), 3vv, Rome, 1692
Roma in feste (cant., F. Posterla), 2vv, Rome, 1698
Serenata, Rome, Viennese ambassador's residence, 14 Sept 1701
Del Tebro amico in su la verde (serenata), S, 2 vn, va, bc, D-MÜs
Cants.: Correa Tirsi, S, bc, MÜs; Vaghe luci adorate, S, 2vn, bc, GB-Mp; Verso il Tuscolo ameno, S, bc, Lbl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SartoriL
T. Griffin: The Late Baroque Serenata in Rome and Naples: a Documentary Study with Emphasis on Alessandro Scarlatti (diss., UCLA, 1983), 286–7, 353
S. Franchi: Drammaturgia romana: repertorio bibliografico cronologico dei testi drammatici pubblicati a Roma e nel Lazio, secolo XVII (Rome, 1988)
P.J. Everett: The Manchester Concerto Partbooks (New York, 1989)

LOWELL LINDGREN

Della Rota, Adriano (b Low Countries, second half of the 16th century; d ?Ortona [now Abruzzo], ?1622). Italian composer of Flemish origin. He was elected maestro di cappella of Ortona Cathedral in 1584 and remained there until 1593; he held the same position from 1606 until 1622, presumably the year of his death. One of his madrigals, Al sacro et divin nome (published in his Primo libro de Madrigali a cinque voci, Venice, 1600, inc., 1 repr. in RISM 1616[10]), was written as early as 1583, for the entry into Ortona of Margaret of Austria on 10 November of that year. In 1593 Della Rota became maestro di cappella of Atri Cathedral; he held the same position in Lanciano in 1600 and, some time before his return to Ortona in 1606, in Sulmona. Six of the madrigals in Della Rota's Primo libro set texts which had been set by other composers in an earlier anthology, De floridi virtuosi (RISM 1583[11]). A clear motivic connection is discernible between his Ch'ami la vita mia and that of Lelio Bertani in the earlier book. The correspondence between Della Rota's setting of Donna leggiadra e bella and that of Giovanni Gabrieli, from which Della Rota derived the rhythmic and melodic outline of his themes, is even more evident. The concision of Gabrieli's madrigal is lost in Della Rota's, which is twice the length of its model, and while Della Rota displayed a sure touch in polyphonic writing, he employed a style which was decidedly old-fashioned for the period.

VINCENZO BORGHETTI

Dell'Arpa [Dall'Arpa, Mollica], Giovanni Leonardo [Giovan, Gian, Gianleonardo] (b Naples, *c*1530; d Naples, Jan 1602). Italian harpist, singer, composer and actor. He was generally known as 'dell'Arpa' because of his outstanding playing of the double harp. His improvisatory skills were praised by several Neapolitan writers, among them Giovan Battista del Tufo (Ritratto ... della nobilissima città di Napoli, 1588) and Giulio Cesare Cortese (Viaggio di Parnaso, *c*1610), Scipione Cerreto (Della prattica musica vocale, et strumentale, 1601) and Giambattista Basile (Le muse napoletane, 1635). In the dedication to his Tempio Armonico (RISM 1599[6]), Giovenale Ancina revealed that Arpa sang laude to harp accompaniment, probably in the oratories of Naples and Rome. A favourite entertainer in aristocratic circles, he attracted the patronage of Giovanna d'Aragona (see Luigi Dentice, Duo Dialoghi della musica, 1552) and her children. As musician-actor he played the role of servant in comedies staged in Neapolitan palaces of the Prince of Salerno (Gli Ingannati, 1545) and Maria d'Aragona (intermedio for Piccolomini's Alessandro, 1558). Arpa's reputation spread quickly beyond Naples: Cardinal Truchsess recommended him to Wilhelm of Bavaria in 1563, and he was invited to the Ferrarese court in 1584 but declined to go. In 1594 Count Alfonso Fontanelli heard him play at the home of Ettore Gesualdo in Naples and found 'his technique marvellous but his manner of improvisation old-fashioned'.

Arpa published many napolitane in anthologies between 1565 and 1570 (two undatable books bearing his name only are lost). His settings are among the most compact in the repertory, resembling those of Giovanni Leonardo Primavera, with whom he has sometimes been confused. Both men's styles are characterized by repeated-note recitation, parallel 5ths and chordal textures. Two napolitane, Villanella crudel (RISM 1566[5]) and S'io avissi tantillo (RISM 1570[31]) were attributed to Arpa in Giovan Battista Cini's comedy La vedova (1569) They were published anonymously, however, and a variant version of the latter was elsewhere attributed to Burno (RISM 1565[17]).

WORKS

6 napolitane in 1565[17]; 1 in 1566[5]; 6 in 1566[9]
3 villanelle in 1567[22], 1 of these also in 1565[17], another attrib. S. Lando in 1566[10]
7 napolitane in 1570[18], 1, Voria crudel, reworked in Bottegari lutebook
2 napolitane in 1570[31]
5 napolitane intabulated for voice and lute in 1570[33]; another for solo lute in 1571[8]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EinsteinIM
G.M. Monti: Le villanelle alla napoletana e l'antica lirica dialettale Napoli (Città di Castello, 1925)
B.M. Galanti: Le villanelle alla napoletana (Florence, 1954)
U. Prota-Giurleo: Gian Leonardo dell'Arpa nella storia della musica (Naples, 1964)
E. Ferrari Barassi: 'La villanella napoletana nella testimonianza di un letterato', NRMI, ii (1968), 1064–87
A. Newcomb: 'Carlo Gesualdo and a Musical Correspondence of 1594', MQ, liv (1968), 409–36
D.G. Cardamone: The 'Canzone villanesca alla napolitana' and Related Forms, 1537 to 1570 (Ann Arbor, 1981)
D. Fabris: 'L'arpa a Napoli nell'epoca del Viceregno spagnolo', De musica hispana et aliis: Miscelánea en honor al Prof. Dr. José López-Calo, ed. E. Casares and C. Villanueva (Santiago de Compostela, 1990), 241–62

DONNA G. CARDAMONE

Dell'Arpa, Orazio. See MICHI, ORAZIO.

Della Valle, Pietro ['Il Pellegrino'] (b Rome, 11 April 1586; d Rome, 21 April 1652). Italian librettist, writer on music, composer and ethnographer. Born to a noble family, he studied the harpsichord with a succession of leading teachers, among them Stefano Tavolaccio, Quinzio Solini (with whom he also had lessons in continuo and counterpoint) and Paolo Quagliati, and the viola da gamba with Marco Fraticelli; he also studied dance with Fabritio Caroso. His libretto Il carro di fedeltà d'Amore was set by Quagliati and published in Rome in 1611; it is a short allegorical azione for five characters. Della Valle later claimed that it was first performed during Carnival 1606, and that it was among the first such works to be heard in Rome.

It was as an ethnographer that Della Valle was best known to his contemporaries. From 1614 to 1626 he travelled to Turkey, Persia and India. His letters from that time, which include remarks on the music of these cultures, are rich in detail. Their publication (Viaggi, Rome, 1650–58) was a sensation: numerous editions as well as translations into Dutch, English, French and German soon appeared. A century later his standing was still such that Edward Gibbon cited him approvingly in The History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire (1776–88).

Upon his return from the East, Della Valle resumed his musical activities. He arranged elaborate funeral services for his first wife, a Syrian woman who had died in 1621 and whose embalmed body he brought back to Rome. She was interred in the family vault in S Maria d'Aracoeli in July 1626, and a memorial ceremony was held there on 27 March 1627. The later included 'flebili concerti di musica' and a solemn mass (G. Rocchi, ed.: Funerale della Signora Sitti Maani Gioerida della Valle, Rome, 1627, p.16). Happier family events also brought forth music. To celebrate the birth of his first child in 1629 (he had married a Georgian named Maria Tinatin di Ziba the year before) Della Valle wrote another libretto, La valle rinverdita. The music, of unknown authorship, is lost, but the text survives in manuscript (I-MOe) and was published in Venice in 1633 (repr. in Solerti, 1905). In this veglia drammatica in three acts (performed in Rome, 1629), allegorical and mythical characters recall the death of Della Valle's first wife before rejoicing at the crib of his baby girl, Romibera. In this period he also produced a treatise on his innovations in Italian prosody (Di tre nuove maniere di verso sdrucciolo, Rome, 1634).

During the 1630s and 40s Della Valle celebrated carnival by producing theatrical works in his home. Surviving documents (Ziino, 1967) show that at least some included music. Marc'Antonio Pasqualini may have performed in one in 1634, while another the following year featured music by P.P. Sabbatini and was led by Stefano Landi. In 1644 Della Valle sponsored a revival of Angelo Cecchini's opera La baccante, overo Il trionfo dell'autunno.

After wounding a servant of the Barberini on 6 April 1636, Della Valle was forced to leave Rome; he spent the next two years in Paliano, Gaeta and Naples. It was at this time that his friendship with Giovanni Battista Doni, probably begun in 1635, deepened. Letters to the Florentine scholar from 1637 until his death in 1647 survive (Solerti, 1905); they show that Doni's researches into the music of the ancient Greeks inspired Della Valle in various ways. After his return to Rome in March 1638, for example, he composed works employing ancient modes and genera. One, now lost, was a Latin dialogue (oratorio), based on the book of Esther, that was performed at the Oratorio del Crocifisso, Rome, on 2 April 1640 (during Carnival 1647 Della Valle produced a staged version of it in his home). It was followed later that year by an Italian oratorio (Della Valle was among the first to refer to the genre by this name) written for the feast of Purification 1641. Although conceived for performance in Francesco Borromini's new Oratorio della Vallicella in Rome, it was never produced there, but it, too, was heard in the composer's home (a score survives in I-Rn). Della Valle also made use of such 'musica erudita' in secular works: on 11 April 1649 he sent King João IV of Portugal a setting of a dialogue by Luís de Camões, presumably from his epic masterpiece Os Lusiadas ('The Lusiads').

In his surviving oratorio Della Valle employed a conventional mix of recitative, aria and choral styles. However, he set each section in one of five modes (Dorian, Phrygian, Aeolian, Lydian and Hypolydian) fashioned according to what he believed to be authentic Greek practice. To help realize this work and others, Della Valle also had special continuo instruments constructed. His 'violone panarmonico' and 'cembalo triarmonico', with their multiple stringings and keyboards, permitted easy shifts from one mode to another (in 1649 he even sent one of the harpsichords to João IV), and they were celebrated by theorists such as Doni (Annotazioni sopra il Compendio de' generi e de' modi, 1640) and Kircher (Musurgia universalis, 1650).

Della Valle's commitment to Doni also led him to polemics. One was directed at Nicolò Farfaro, who in Discorso sopra la musica antica'e moderna (see Ziino, 1969) had declared it impossible to reconstruct ancient music and had criticized the decadence of modern music. Della Valle defended the validity of such investigation, while at the same time standing up for his contemporaries (he specifically mentioned Landi, whom Farfaro had attacked). Nor was this the first time that Della Valle had championed the moderns. After the classicist Lelio Guidiccioni had pronounced music of the present inferior to that of the previous generation, Della Valle responded with Della musica dell'età nostra che non è punto inferiore, anzi è migliore di quella dell'età passata. As the subtitle implies, and as the text makes clear, music by the likes of Frescobaldi, Luigi Rossi and Orazio Michi was to be preferred to the work of earlier composers. Even Palestrina was not spared: pieces such as the Missa Papae Marcelli were 'to be preserved and kept out of the way in a museum as beautiful curiosities'. Della Valle's position, part of a larger set of Italian polemics about the validity of the present day (Holzer), show that for all his involvement with the distant past, he was alive to the world around him. His treatise, which sketches an invaluable portrait of the Roman musical scene, betrays an optimism capable of including public taste among the arbiters of artistic worth.

WORKS

Dialogo di Sofonisba e Massinissa, lost, mentioned in G.B. Doni: Annotazioni (1640)

Dialogo di Ester, 5vv, 1640, lost, mentioned in letter to Doni

Per la festa della santissima purificatione: dialogo in musica, 5vv, vle 'panarmonico', hpd 'triarmonico', 1640 (facs. in IO, i, 3–36)

Dialogo di Luys Camoes, in or before 1649, lost, mentioned in letter to King João IV

WRITINGS

Della musica dell'età nostra che non è punto inferiore, anzi è migliore di quella dell'età passata, 16 Jan 1640; ed. A.F. Gori and G.B. Passeri in Lyra Barberina amphichordos, ii: De'trattati di musica di Gio. Batista Doni (Florence, 1763/R), 249–63; repr. in A. Solerti: Le origini del melodramma (Turin, 1903/R), 148–79; Eng. trans. in StrunkSR, 545–54

Note . . . sopra la musica antica e moderna, indirizzato al Sig.r Nicolò Farfaro (MS, 1640/41, I-Vnm); excerpts in Ziino (1969)

Viaggi . . . con minuto ragguaglio di tutte le cose notabili osservate in essi, descritti da lui medesimo in 54 lettere familiari (Rome, 1650–58)

Correspondence: Della Valle to G.B. Doni (Fc); some ed. in Solerti (1905), 278–9, 282–313

Correspondence and other materials, Rvat

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBI (C. Micocci and S. la Via); ES (N. Pirrotta); GroveO (M. Murata); SartoriL; SmitherHO, i

A. Berardi: Miscellanea musicale (Rome, 1689), 195

F. Chrysander: 'Pietro de la Valle: Stimme eines Modernen aus dem siebzehnten Jahrhundert', AMZ, new ser., iii (1868), 385–6, 393–5, 401–4, 409–11

I. Ciampi: 'Pietro della Valle il Pellegrino', Nuova antologia, xvii (1879), 221–41, 442–62; xviii (1879), 91–126, 463–91; pubd separately as Della vita e delle opere di Pietro della Valle il Pellegrino (Rome, 1880)

A. Solerti: 'Lettere inedite sulla musica di Pietro della Valle a G.B. Doni ed una veglia drammatica-musicale del medesimo', RMI, xii (1905), 271–338

V. Losito: Pietro della Valle (Varese, 1928)

U. Rolandi: 'Il primo "librettista" romano ed il suo primo libretto per musica', Rassegna dorica, ii (1930–31), 6–14

D. Alaleona: Storia dell'oratorio musicale in Italia (Milan, 2/1945), 134–9

R. Almagià: 'Per una conoscenza più completa della figura e dell'opera di Pietro della Valle', Atti dell'Accademia nazionale dei Lincei, 8th ser., vi (1951), 375–81

V. Gotwals and O. Keppler, eds.: La sfera armoniosa and Il carro di fedeltà d'Amore (Northampton, MA, 1957)

P.G. Bietenholz: Pietro della Valle (1586–1652): Studien zur Geschichte der Orientkenntnis und des Orientbildes im Abendlande (Basle and Stuttgart, 1962)

A. Della Corte: 'Il valore artistico del "Carro di fedeltà d'Amore"', SPFFBU, F9 [Festschrift for Jan Racek] (Brno, 1965), 55–8

A. Ziino: 'Pietro della Valle e la "musica erudita": nuovi documenti', AnMc, iv (1967), 97–111

R. Giazotto: 'Il testamento di Pietro della Valle', NRMI, iii (1969), 96–100

R. Giazotto: 'Pietro della Valle alla Festa fatta in Roma il 25 febbraio 1634', NRMI, iii (1969), 121 only

A. Ziino: '"Contese letterarie" tra Pietro della Valle e Nicolò Farfaro sulla musica antica e moderna', NRMI, iii (1969), 101–120

S. Parodi: Cose e parole nei 'Viaggi' di Pietro Della Valle (Florence, 1987)

G. Bull, ed.: The Pilgrim: the Travels of Pietro Della Valle (London, 1990)

A. Morelli: 'Il tempio armonico': musica nell'Oratorio dei Filippini in Roma (1575–1705), AnMc, no.27 (1991), 18–19, 33–4, 74–5

R.R. Holzer: '"Sono d'altro garbo . . . le canzonette che si cantano oggi": Pietro della Valle on Music and Modernity in the Seventeenth Century', SM, xxi (1992), 253–306

F. Hammond: Music and Spectacle in Baroque Rome: Barberini Patronage under Urban VIII (New Haven, CT, 1994), 102, 261, 307
C.V. Palisca: 'G.B. Doni, Musicological Activist, and his Lyra Barberina', Studies in the History of Italian Music and Music Theory (Oxford, 1994), 467–90
J.W. Hill: Roman Monody, Cantata and Opera from the Circles around Cardinal Montalto (Oxford, 1997), i, 112–13
R. Salvante: Il 'Pellegrino' in oriente: la Turchia di Pietro della Valle (1614–1617) (Florence, 1997)

ROBERT R. HOLZER

Della Viola. See DALLA VIOLA family.

Della Viola, Alessandro [Alexander]. See MERLO, ALESSANDRO.

Della [Dalla] Volpe, Lelio (d 6 Oct 1749). Italian music publisher and bookseller. His firm was active in Bologna for most of the 18th century and was famous in the art of typography and for the accuracy and elegance of its editions. In 1720, as head of a society of Bolognese printers, Della Volpe acquired the printing establishment of the widow of Giulio Borsaghi. His first musical publication was an enlarged edition (1720) of Angelo Bertalotti's Regole utilissime per … il canto fermo. He issued a further enlarged edition in 1744 (reprinted 1756, 1764 and 1778). He ordered musical type characters from the Netherlands and in 1734 began his music printing activities in earnest, starting with Giovanni Battista Martini's op.1, Litaniae atque antiphonae finales B. Virginis Mariae. Della Volpe was also active as a bookseller, handling the musical publications of the Bolognese printers P.M. Monti and G.A. Silvani. In 1735 he published two indexes of the musical editions of these two publishers which were sold by his firm; such a list also exists from 1747. In 1748 and 1749 he published lists of works printed by his own firm. The firm's publications include instrumental and sacred music by G.A. Perti (1737), G.B. Martini (1747, 1763), G.M. Rutini (1765), P. Pericoli (1769, 1796), A.A. Caroli (1766) and P.A. Pavona (1770). He also published treatises by A.G. Minelli (Ristretto delle regole più essenziali della musica, 1748) and G.B. Martini (Esemplare ossia Saggio fondamentale pratico di contrappunto sopra il canto fermo, 1774–5), as well as Martini's Storia della musica (1757–81). After 1744 Della Volpe's editions were no longer printed but engraved. He died on 6 October 1749, and the firm was taken over by his son Petronio, who continued to publish under the name Lelio della Volpe. The firm's usual typographical mark is the figure of a wolf ('volpe' in Italian).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MischiatiI; SartoriD
F. Vatielli: 'Editori musicali dei secoli XVII e XVIII', Arte e vita musicale a Bologna (Bologna, 1927/R), 239–56
A. Sorbelli: Storia della stampa in Bologna (Bologna, 1929)

ANNE SCHNOEBELEN

Delle Palle [Dalle Palle, Del Palla, Vecchi detto Delle Palle], Scipione (b Siena; d Florence, 20 Oct 1569). Italian singer and composer. According to Morrocchi, Scipione Vecchi Delle Palle was a Sienese nobleman and knight; he was presumably also a member of the Accademia degli Intronati of Siena, whose performance of the comedy Gli ingannati in Naples in 1545 marked an early appearance by him as an actor (he played a servant). He performed in other plays in Naples as well: in March 1558 he took the role of Proteus in one of Luigi Tansillo's intermedi for Alessandro Piccolomini's Alessandro. On 1 November 1560, Delle Palle joined the musicians of the court of Cosimo de' Medici, Duke of Tuscany, at the high salary of 20 scudi per month. In addition to performing, his duties included teaching: his most famous pupil was Giulio Caccini, who later called him 'my famous master' and said he had learnt 'the noble manner of singing' from him. Luigi Dentice, who placed Delle Palle in a performance at the house of Giovanna d'Aragona (mother of Vittoria Colonna) in Naples, included him among a group of 'perfect musicians' who 'sing wondrously', and his fame as a singer lasted long after his death: Antonio Brunelli, in the dedication to Caccini of his Canoni varii musicali sopra un soggetto solo (Venice, 1612), called him 'the foremost singer' of the 16th century.

Delle Palle was a composer as well; the Florentine theorist Vincenzo Galilei cited him as worthy of imitation (see Palisca, 227). Unfortunately only one piece attributed to him survives: a setting of Petrarch's Dura legge d'amor, ma ben ch'obliqua (in RISM 1577[8], a reprint of an earlier edition; the attribution is a manuscript addition in the sole surviving copy). He may also have been the composer of music for the 1558 intermedio (also in 1577[8]). These three-voice works (ed. in PirrottaDO, 199–200) are in a simple, declamatory style that perhaps provides one link between the Neapolitan villanella and early Florentine solo song. Delle Palle also seems to have been an amateur poet: he wrote the canzona Per questi duo guerrier famosi for a carnival celebration organized by the young Cardinal Ferdinando de' Medici on 15 February 1568.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PirrottaDO
L. Dentice: Duo dialoghi sulla musica (Naples, 1552/R)
G. Caccini: preface to Le nuove musiche (Florence, 1601/2/R; Eng. trans. in RRMBE, ix, 1970)
R. Morrocchi: La musica in Siena (Siena, 1886/R)
B. Croce: I teatri di Napoli (Naples, 1891/R, 4/1947), 22, 41 [pp. refer to 1891]
C.V. Palisca: The Beginnings of Baroque Music: its Roots in Sixteenth-Century Theory and Polemics (diss., Harvard U., 1953)
H.M. Brown: 'The Geography of Florentine Monody: Caccini at Home and Abroad', EMc, ix (1981), 147–68
W. Kirkendale: The Court Musicians in Florence during the Principate of the Medici (Florence, 1993)

TIM CARTER

Deller, Alfred (George) (b Margate, 31 May 1912; d Bologna, 16 July 1979). English countertenor. He sang as a treble and then, when no 'break' had occurred in the singing voice, as an alto in the choir of St John the Baptist, Margate. From Christ Church, Hastings, he was appointed to the choir of Canterbury Cathedral in 1938. Here, the exceptional quality of his powerful voice and dedicated musicianship were brought to the notice of Michael Tippett, who found in him the ideal countertenor soloist for the Purcell revival in which he was active. In 1946 he sang in Come, ye sons of art, away in the inaugural concert of the BBC's Third Programme; he also became particularly associated with Purcell's song Music for a while, of which he made a notable first recording. In 1947 he left Canterbury for the choir of St Paul's Cathedral in London, which was also a base for the freelance work that was soon to bring him international fame. Deller became, as no other countertenor had done before him, a leading recitalist, giving prominence in his programmes to Elizabethan songs and English folksongs, often accompanied by the lutenist Desmond Dupré. In 1950 he founded the Deller Consort, which gave recitals, predominantly of Elizabethan and Italian madrigals, throughout Europe, the Americas, Australasia and East Asia. Britten wrote Oberon in A Midsummer Night's Dream with his voice in mind, the première at Aldeburgh in 1960 bringing Deller praise for his singing, less for his acting (he later recorded the role with the composer). He also sang the role of Death, written for him by Alan Ridout in his one-act opera The Pardoner's Tale in 1971. He continued to sing, albeit with diminishing range and power, until his death, after which his work with the Deller Consort was continued by his son Mark. His unique achievement had been to restore the countertenor voice to a place it had not held in musical life for more than two centuries. He was a major force in the revival of interest in Elizabethan music, especially the lute-songs. Deller's voice, well preserved on recordings, had unusual beauty and richness, and his style, although often imitated, was entirely his own. He was always intensely devoted to the music he sang but very personal in his way of bringing it to life in performance.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. and M. Hardwick: Alfred Deller: a Singularity of Voice (London, 1968, 2/1980) [with discography]

P. Giles: The History and Technique of the Counter-Tenor (Aldershot, VT, 1994)

J.B. STEANE

Deller [Teller, Döller, Töller], Florian Johann (b Drosendorf, bap. 2 May 1729; d Munich, 19 April 1773). Austrian violinist and composer. He probably studied in Vienna, where he met Jommelli (*c*1749) and may have met and even written some ballet music for the ballet-master Franz Hilverding. In 1751 he accepted a position as a ripieno violinist in the Stuttgart Hofkapelle of Duke Carl Eugen of Württemberg. In 1756 Deller asked the duke's permission to take lessons in counterpoint and composition from Jommelli, who was engaged as principal conductor at Stuttgart from 1753. Meanwhile, he also played the violin for the dancing classes of the ballet-masters Michel dell'Agatha and François Sauveterre, which gave him an insight into dance technique and its musical requirements. With the arrival of J.-G. Noverre early in 1760 the ballet company, which had been founded two years earlier, was greatly enlarged. The next years saw ballet productions on a lavish scale featuring famous dancers. Noverre soon recognized Deller's talent for composing ballet music, and is said to have considered him his most able collaborator (Schubart, 1806). Deller provided Noverre with the music for at least seven of his Stuttgart ballets, the first of which, Admète et Alceste, was performed during Jommelli's L'olimpiade on 11 February 1761. Perhaps the greatest of their collaborations was Orfeo ed Euridice, which was first performed at Stuttgart between Acts 2 and 3 of Jommelli's Didone in 1763; that same performance also saw the première of their ballet Der Sieg des Neptun (in the opera's last act), which became known for its depiction of the battle between the elements Fire and Water.

After Noverre left Stuttgart in 1767, Deller turned his hand to writing several comic operas, including La contese per amore and Il maestro di cappella. After 20 years of service in Stuttgart and many years of complaining of his low position there, Deller was finally released in the summer of 1771 and made his way to Vienna, where Il maestro di cappella was performed at the Burgtheater on 31 December 1771. He soon left and went to Munich, where he is reputed to have received a commission from Maria Antonia Walpurgis to write a mass for Dresden.

Although Deller wrote several instrumental works, as well as comic operas, he is best remembered as a composer of ballet music. His ballets were of the genre danse en action, rather than danse simple (i.e. the goal was a dramatic idea that could be realized by the cooperation of music with dance and pantomime). One of Deller's greatest admirers was C.F.D. Schubart, who credited him with a large part of Noverre's success at Stuttgart, and quoted Noverre's praise that Deller had no equal in writing music which gave deeper meaning to pantomime (Schubart, 1812). His music was generally in the Viennese Classical style with the addition of Italian orchestral recitative for the large pantomime scenes and folklike melodies. His fame as a ballet composer quickly spread, for a volume of scenarios by the Kassel ballet-master Etienne Lauchery (Kassel, 1768) contains seven works with music wholly or partly by Deller. In addition to Stuttgart and Kassel, Deller's ballets were performed in Mannheim, Linz, Pressburg and Vienna (see Schlossar, Olivier). The music to Noverre's ballet La mort d'Hercule (performed with Jommelli's Semiramide in 1762) was attributed to Rodolphe by Abert (1913), but is now thought to be by Deller, who is named alone on a manuscript score (dated 1762, in CZ-K) and with C.G. Toeschi on a printed scenario for Lauchery's version (1767).

WORKS

BALLETS

music lost unless otherwise stated; extant published scenarios are in Lauchery [L], or Recueil de programmes … Noverre [N]; extant librettos and costume designs in PL-Wu; original choreographers given in parentheses

Admète et Alceste (Noverre), Stuttgart, 11 Feb 1761, music D-Sl, PL-Wu, rev. as La mort de Licomède, Stuttgart, 11 Feb 1764, lib in Jommelli: Demofoonte, N; La mort d'Hercule (Noverre), Stuttgart, 11 Feb 1762, also choreographed by Lauchery, Kassel, 1767, with addl music by C.G. Toeschi, L, music in CZ-K, D-Sl, PL-Wu, ed. H. Abert, DDT, xlii–xliv (1913) [wrongly attrib. Rodolphe]; Orfée et Euridice (Noverre), Stuttgart, 11 Feb 1763, choreographed by Lauchery, Kassel, 1766, L, music CZ-K, D-Rtt, formerly DS, PL-Wu, ed. H. Abert, DDT; Der Sieg des Neptun (Noverre), Stuttgart, 11 Feb 1763; Apollon et Daphne (Lauchery), Kassel, *c*1764, with Rodolphe, L; Ballo di Alessandro (Noverre), Stuttgart, 1765, PL-Wu; Pan et Syrinx (Lauchery), Kassel, 1766, with Gilbert, L; Le feste d'Imeneo (Noverre), Stuttgart, 1766; Enée et Lavinie (Noverre), Stuttgart between 1761 and 1766, music PL-Wu, also choreographed by F.G. Regnaud, Kassel, 1773, with addl music by J. Toeschi; Pigmalion ou La statuë animée (Lauchery), Kassel, 1767, L; Titon et l'Aurore (Lauchery), Kassel, 1767, with Rodolphe, L

La pauvre, after 1767, formerly in D-DS; La schiava liberata, Ludwigsburg, 1768, formerly DS, ed. H. Abert, DDT; Telephe et Isménie ou La mort d'Eurite (Lauchery), Kassel, 1768, with Rodolphe, L; Hylas et Eglée, ou La fête d'amour (Lauchery), Kassel, 1769; Ballo polonois, Stuttgart, 1770, formerly DS, ed. H. Abert, DDT; La constance, Stuttgart, 1770, formerly DS, ed. H. Abert, DDT; L'embarquement pour Cythère, ou Le triomphe de Venus (Lauchery), Kassel, 1770; Le rival imaginaire (Lauchery), Mannheim, 1774; Die Leiden des jungen Werther (Der junge Werther) (J. Schmalögger), Pressburg, 1777, pubd scenario in A-Wst [?perf. Vienna, *c*1775]; La mariée de village (Lauchery), Kassel, 1784; 2 ballets to op Calliroe, D-Sl; 1 without title, CZ-K

Doubtful: Les caprices de Galathée (Noverre), Stuttgart, 1760; Amore vincitore dell'indifferenza (Noverre), Stuttgart, 1761, pubd scenario in US-Wc; Il riconoscimento inaspettato (Noverre), Stuttgart, 1761, pubd scenario in US-Wc [possibly by Rodolphe]

OTHER WORKS

Il tamburo notturno (ob), Grafeneck, 1765 [possibly by Rodolphe]

Il maestro di cappella (dg, A. Palomba), Vienna, Burg, 31 Dec 1771; 5 arias, duet, A-Wn; pubd lib

La contese per amore (dg, 3), D-Dl, ?unperf.; Ger. trans. as Eigensinn und lauen der Liebe, Bonn, 1782, lib (Frankfurt and Leipzig, 1783)
La contadina nelle corte (comic op), doubtful (see Abert, 1913)
Other vocal: 5 comic ops, perf. Württemberg, 1770, doubtful; aria, S, inst acc., I-Bc; duetto notturno, 2 S, b, lost; scattered references to sacred music
Inst: 6 Sonatas, 2 vn, vc, hpd (London, ?1780); A Favourite Chaconn, pf (London, 1773); 4 syms., D-SWl, 1 sym., A-Wgm; 2 fl concs., lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL
J. Uriot: Description des fêtes données … à l'occasion du jour de naissance de … Monseigneur le duc regnant de Wurtemberge et Teck (Stuttgart, 1763) [also pubd in Ger.]
E. Lauchery: Recueil des ballets exécuté sur les théâtres de Cassel depuis l'année 1764 jusqu'à la fin de l'année 1768 (Kassel, 1768)
Receuil de programmes de ballets de M. Noverre (Vienna, 1776)
C.F.D. Schubart: Ideen zu einer Ästhetik der Tonkunst (Vienna, 1806/R), 151ff
L. Schubart, ed.: C.F.D. Schubart's Vermischte Schriften (Zürich, 1812), 387ff
A. Schlossar: Innerösterreichisches Stadtleben vor hundert Jahren (Vienna, 1877), 40
J. Sittard: Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am württembergischen Hofe (Stuttgart, 1890–91/R)
J.-J. Olivier: Les comédiens français dans les cours d'Allemagne au XVIIIe siècle, i (Paris, 1901/R), iv (Paris, 1905/R)
K. Schiffmann: Drama und Theater in Oesterreich ob der Enns bis zum Jahre 1803 (Linz, 1905), 126ff
H. Abert: 'Die dramatische Musik', Herzog Karl Eugen von Württemberg und seine Zeit, i (Stuttgart, 1907), 557–611
R. Krauss: Das Stuttgarter Hoftheater von den ältesten Zeiten bis zur Gegenwart (Stuttgart, 1908)
H. Abert: Notes in DDT, xliii–xliv (1913/R)
G. Winkler: Das Wiener Ballett von Noverre bis Fanny Elssler (diss., U. of Vienna, 1967)

FRIDERICA DERRA DE MORODA/SIBYLLE DAHMS

Delle Sedie, Enrico (b Livorno, 17 June 1822; d La Garenne-Colombes, nr Paris, 28 Nov 1907). Italian baritone, teacher and writer on music. After giving up a military career he studied with Galeffi and made his début in 1851 at Pistoia as Nabucco, repeating the role shortly afterwards at the Teatro San Cassiano, Venice. The following year he sang Rigoletto in Florence and, in 1855, Riccardo in I puritani and the title role of Federico Ricci's Corrado d'Altamura at the Teatro della Cannobiana, Milan. He appeared at La Scala in 1859 as Henry Ashton, and made his London début in 1861 at the Lyceum Theatre as Luna, then sang Renato in the first London performance of Un ballo in maschera. He repeated Renato at the Théâtre Italien, Paris, that autumn and at Covent Garden in 1862. His roles included Rossini's and Mozart's Figaro, Don Giovanni, Malatesta (Don Pasquale), Germont père and Plunkett (Martha). He taught singing at the Paris Conservatoire (1867–71), and wrote several treatises on singing. Although his voice was small, his style and musicianship were regarded as outstanding.

WRITINGS

Arte e fisiologia del canto (Milan, 1876)
Riflessioni sulle cause della decadenza della scuola di canto in Italia (Paris, 1881)
L'estetica del canto e dell'arte melodrammatica (Paris, 1886)
A Complete Method of Singing (New York, 1894) [1876 and 1886 treatises abridged]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bonaventura: Musicisti livornesi (Livorno, 1930)
E. Gara: L'impresario in angustie (Milan, 1940)

ELIZABETH FORBES

Dellinger, Rudolf (b Graslitz [now Kraslice], Bohemia, 8 July 1857; d Dresden, 24 Sept 1910). German composer and conductor. The son of a woodwind instrument maker, he attended the music school in Graslitz for three years and then (1874 to 1879) studied the clarinet with Julius Pisařowitz at the Prague Conservatory. In 1880 he became theatre conductor in Brno and was subsequently at various other German theatres before he went to the Carl Schultze-Theater in Hamburg in 1883. There he met the singer Anna Maria Eppich (1864–1919), whom he married in 1886 after the wide success of his first operetta Don Cesar; this work, which used the same story as Wallace's Maritana, was performed throughout Germany and Austria and as far afield as the USA. In 1893 Dellinger became chief conductor at the Residenz-Theater in Dresden, where further operettas by him were produced with limited success. In later years he suffered from financial worries and consequent overwork, and in December 1909 he had a mental breakdown which led to his death. Besides his operettas, he composed marches and songs.

WORKS

HCS – Hamburg, Carl Schultze-Theater
DRT – Dresden, Residenz-Theater

7 operettas, each in 3 acts, pubd in vs: Don Cesar (O. Walther, after P. Dumanoir and A.-P. d'Ennery: Don César de Bazan), HCS, 28 March 1885 (Hamburg, 1885); Lorraine (Walther), HCS, 2 Oct 1886 (Hamburg, 1886); Kapitän Fracassa (F. Zell, R. Genée, after T. Gautier), HCS, 2 March 1889 (Hamburg, 1889); Saint Cyr (Walther, after Dumas père, A. de Leuven and Brunswick: Les demoiselles de Saint-Cyr), HCS, 10 Jan 1891 (Hamburg, 1891); Die Chansonette (V. Léon and H. von Waldberg), DRT, 16 Sept 1894 (Leipzig, 1894); Jadwiga (R. Pohl and P. Hirschberger, after Scribe: Les diamants de la couronne), DRT, 5 Oct 1901 (Leipzig, 1901); Der letzte Jonas (Pohl, L. Ascher), DRT, 2 April 1910, not pubd
Marches, songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GänzlEMT
A. John: 'Rudolf Dellinger: der Komponist des Don Cesar', Literarisches Jb, ii (1892)
R. Dellinger: 'Autobiographie', Bildende Geister, ed. F. Abshoff, ii (Berlin, 1906)
E. Gierach: 'R. Dellinger', Sudetendeutsche Lebensbilder, ii (Reichenberg, 1930)
R.C. Dellinger: 'Rudolf Dellinger, der letzte klassische Operetten-Komponist', Sudetendeutsche Monatsheft, i/4 (1936), 49–50
K.M. Pisarowitz: 'R. Dellinger', Deutsche Korrespondenz, vii/27 (Bonn, 1957)

ANDREW LAMB

Dello Joio, Norman (b New York, 24 Jan 1913). American composer and educator. It was as an organist at the Star of the Sea Church, New York, that he entered professional music at the age of 14. His father, Casimir, who emigrated from Italy early in the century, was also an organist. Dello Joio's godfather, the composer and organist Pietro Yon, was his principal teacher. He attended All Hallows Institute (1926–30) and the College of the City of New York (1932–4) before pursuing full-time musical training at the Institute of Musical Art (1936) and the Juilliard Graduate School (1939–41), where he studied composition with Wagenaar. In 1941 he studied with Hindemith at the Berkshire Music Center and at the Yale School of Music.

From the beginning of his career he received a number of grants and awards, and his works had regular performances. He won an Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Award for his Piano Trio (1937), a Town Hall Composition Award for the orchestral work Magnificat (1942), and Guggenheim Fellowships (1943 and 1944). In 1945 he received a grant from the American Academy of Arts and Letters. His Variations, Chaconne and Finale, first performed by the New York PO under Bruno Walter, won the New York Music Critics' Circle Award for the best new orchestral piece (1948); he won a second Critics' Circle Award (1962) for the opera The Triumph of St. Joan. The Pulitzer Prize for music was awarded to him in 1957 for Meditations on Ecclesiastes for string orchestra. In 1961 he was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Among several scores composed for television, his music for the NBC programme The Louvre won the 1965 Emmy award.

After working as music director in 1941–3 of Eugene Loring's Dance Players, Dello Joio began his teaching career at Sarah Lawrence College (1945–50). Later he was a professor of composition at Mannes College (1956–72), and in 1959 he began a 14-year association with the Contemporary Music Project for Creativity in Music Education (supported by the Ford Foundation), through which young composers were placed in high schools throughout the USA to write new music for the school ensembles. Dello Joio conceived the project and was made chairman of the policy committee. In 1972 he became a professor of music at Boston University and from 1972 to 1978 served as the dean of the university's School of Fine and Applied Arts.

The relatively brief training with Hindemith was influential in shaping Dello Joio's musical thinking, though it was Hindemith's advice, rather than any technical instruction, that had most effect. He urged Dello Joio to speak naturally as a composer, without concern for models that had little relevance to his experience and temperament. The musical influences of Dello Joio's earlier life were 19th-century Italian opera, Catholic church music, and the popular music and jazz of New York in the 1920s and 30s. Dello Joio fused elements of these to form the vocabulary for his subsequent creative work; the most prominent elements are Gregorian chant and a preoccupation with religious subjects. Such works as Magnificat, Meditations on Ecclesiastes and New York Profiles use either literal quotations of chants or chant-like melodies. Dello Joio's treatment of the Joan of Arc story went through several revisions and transformations in operatic and symphonic form. The first was the opera The Triumph of Joan, which he withdrew after its première. A second opera was written for television as The Trial at Rouen, with a completely new text and score; this work was revised as The Triumph of St. Joan for the New York City Opera. A further version was The Triumph of St. Joan Symphony, a three-movement work based on material from the first opera; it was first performed with choreography by Graham. All of the St Joan works contain much effective music in a pseudo-liturgical style.

His affinity with and enjoyment of popular music are apparent in numerous works. The flamboyant Fantasy and Variations for piano and orchestra, in its bursts of hammered-out repeated notes and jazz syncopation, suggests the same big-city stimulants that affected Gershwin. A flair for the theatrical is also evident: there is a fondness for big contrasts in dynamics, romantic tunes, grand gestures. This flair serves particularly well in his stage and television scores (Air Power is a prominent example). In general Dello Joio's music is extroverted, colourful and well crafted.

WORKS

works before 1941 withdrawn

for full list see GroveA

DRAMATIC

Prairie, 1942 [see ORCHESTRAL: Sinfonietta]

The Duke of Sacramento (ballet, choreog. E. Loring), 2 pf, 1942, withdrawn; New Hope, PA, 1942

On Stage (ballet, choreog. M. Kidd), orch, 1945, Boston, 1945; arr. orch suite, arr. pf suite

Diversion of Angels (Wilderness Stair) (ballet, choreog. M. Graham), orch, 1948; New London, CT, 1948

The Triumph of Joan (op, J. Machlis), 1949, withdrawn; Bronxville, NY, 1950

The Triumph of St. Joan Symphony, based on the op The Triumph of Joan, introduced as a ballet (Graham), 1951, Louisville, KY, 1951; rechoreographed as Seraphic Dialogue (Graham), New York, 1955

The Ruby (op, W. Mass, after E. Dunsany: A Night at an Inn), 1953; Bloomington, IN, 13 May 1955

The Tall Kentuckian (incid music, B. Anderson), 1953, Louisville, KY, 15 June 1953; Somebody's Coming and Sweet Sonny arr. SATB, pf, 1953

There is a Time: see ORCHESTRAL [Meditations on Ecclesiastes, 1956]

Antony and Cleopatra (incid music, W. Shakespeare), 1960; Stratford, ON, 1960

Blood Moon (op, G. Hoffman), 1961; San Francisco, 1961

A Time of Snow (ballet, Graham), 1968, New York, 1968; arr. band as Heloise and Abelard

All is Still (theatre piece), T, fl, ob, cl, hp, vas, vcs, db

From Every Horizon: a Tone Poem to New York (film score)

Nativity: A Canticle for the Child (op-orat, Gibson), 1987; Midland Music Center, 4 Dec 1987

TELEVISION SCORES

The Trial at Rouen (op, Dello Joio) 1955, NBC, 8 April 1956, rev. stage as The Triumph of St. Joan, 1959, New York, 1959; Air Power, music for 22 TV programmes, 1956–7, CBS, begun 11 Nov 1956, arr. sym. suite, 1957; Profile of a Composer, 1958, CBS, 1958 [incl. A Ballad of the Seven Lively Arts]; Here is New York, 1959, CBS, 1959 [incl. parts of New York Profiles], arr. orch suite; The Saintmaker's Christmas Eve, 1959, ABC, 1963; Vanity Fair (W. Thackeray), 1959, CBS, 1961; Time of Decision, 1962; The Louvre, 1965, NBC, 1965, arr. band, 1965; America and Americans

ORCHESTRAL

Sinfonietta, 1941, choreog. Loring as Prairie, 1942; Harmonica Concertino, 1942, withdrawn; Mag, 1942; To a Lone Sentry, 1943; Concert Music, 1944; Hp Conc., 1945, choreog. Tamaris as Women's Song, 1960

3 Ricercari, pf, orch, 1946; Serenade, 1947–8, choreog. Graham as Diversion of Angels, 1948; Variations, Chaconne, and Finale (3 Sym. Dances), 1947, choreog. Walker, 1963; Concertante, cl, orch, 1949, arr. cl, pf; New York Profiles, 1949; Epigraph, 1951; The Triumph of St. Joan Sym., 1951: see DRAMATIC

Meditations on Ecclesiastes, str, 1956, choreog. J. Limón as There is a Time, New York, 1956, choreog. Wilde as The Glass Heart, 1968; A Ballad of the 7 Lively Arts, pf, orch, 1957; Fantasy and Variations, pf, orch, 1961, arr. 2 pf; Variants on a Mediaeval Tune (In dulce jubilo), band, 1963; Antiphonal Fantasy on a Theme of Vincenzo Albrici, org, brass, str, 1965

Air, str, 1967; Fantasies on a Theme by Haydn, band/orch, 1968; Homage to Haydn, 1968–9; Songs of Abelard, band, opt. 1v, 1969; Choreography, 3 dances, str, 1972; Concertante, band, 1973; Lyric Fantasies, va, str, 1973, arr. va, pf; Satiric Dances, band, 1975 [from incid music]; Colonial Ballads, band, 1976; Colonial Variants: 13 Profiles of the Original Colonies, 1976; Arietta, str, 1978; Caccia, band, 1978; Ballabili, 1981; Aria and Roulade, band, 1983; East Hampton Sketches, str, 1983

Man from Independence; Southern Echoes

CHORAL

Vigil Strange (W. Whitman), SATB, pf 4 hands, 1941; The Mystic Trumpeter (Whitman), SATB, hn, 1943; A Jubilant Song (Whitman), SATB/women's vv, pf, 1945; Sym. for Voices and Orch (after S. Benét: Western Star), 1945, withdrawn, rev. as Song of Affirmation, a Fable (V. Lindsay), T, SATB, pf, 1946; Madrigal (Rossetti), SATB, pf, 1947

The Bluebird (J. Machlis), SATB, pf, 1950; A Psalm of David, SATB, str, brass, perc, 1950; Song of the Open Road (Whitman), SATB, tpt, pf, 1952; Song of Affirmation (Benét), cant, S, SATB, nar, orch, 1953; Adieu, Mignonne, when you are Gone (O. Meredith), women's vv, pf, 1954; O Sing unto the Lord (Ps xcviii), men's vv, org, 1958; To St Cecilia (J. Dryden), SATB, pf/brass, 1958

Christmas Carol (G.K. Chesterton), SATB, pf 4 hands, 1960, arr. SSA, pf, arr. medium v, pf; Prayers of Cardinal Newman (J.H. Newman), SATB, org, 1960; The Holy Infant's Lullaby (A.E. Bennett), (unison vv, org)/(SATB, opt. org), 1961, arr. 1v, pf; Song's End (J. Payne), SSA, pf, 1963; 3 Songs of Chopin: The Lovers [from Dwojaki Koniec], The Ring [from Pierśchień], The Wish [from Życzenic], (SATB, orch)/(SA, orch/pf), 1964, arr. orch, arr. 1v, pf

Songs of Walt Whitman (Dello Joio, after Whitman), SATB, orch, 1966: [1] I sit and look out upon the world, [2] The Dalliance of Eagles, [3] Tears, [4] Take our Hand, Walt Whitman; Proud Music of the Storm (Whitman), SATB, brass, org, 1967; Christmas Music (trad.), SATB, orch, 1968, arr. pf 4 hands: Bright Star, God rest ye merry, gentlemen, Hark, the herald angels sing, Holy Infant's Lullaby, O come, all ye faithful, Silent Night [also pubd separately in various arrs.]

Years of the Modern (Whitman), SATB, brass, perc, 1968; Mass (liturgy), SATB, brass, org/pf, 1969; Evocations: Visitations at Night (R. Hillyer), Promise of Spring (R. Hovey), SATB, opt. young vv, orch/pf, 1970; Come to me, my Love (Rossetti), SATB, pf, 1972; Psalm of Peace (Psalms), SATB, tpt, hn, org/pf, 1972; The Poet's Song (A. Tennyson), SATB, pf, 1973

Mass in Honor of the Eucharist (liturgy), SATB, cantor, congregation, brass, org, 1975; Notes from Tom Paine, SATB, pf, 1975; As of a Dream, modern masque (Whitman), solo vv, SATB, nar, dancers, orch, 1978; The Psalmist's Meditation (Bible), SATB, org/pf, 1979; Hymns without Words, SATB, pf/ orch, 1980; Love Songs at Parting (Dello Joio), SATB, pf, 1981; I dreamed of an invincible city (Dello Joio), SATB, pf/org, 1984

Days of the Modern, withdrawn; Leisure, SATB, pf; Mass in Honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary, cantor, congregation, SATB, org, opt. brass; Of Crows and Clusters (V. Lindsay), SATB, opt. pf

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Suite, pf, 1940; Fantasia on a Gregorian Theme, vn, pf, 1942; Pf Sonata no.1, 1943; Pf Sonata no.2, 1944; Prelude to a Young Dancer, pf, 1943; Prelude to a Young Musician, pf, 1943; Sextet, 3 rec, str trio, 1943

Trio, fl, vc, pf, 1944; Duo concertato, (vc, pf)/(2 pf), 1945; 2 Nocturnes, E, F♯, pf, 1946; Pf Sonata no.3, 1948; Variations and Capriccio, vn, pf, 1948; Aria and Toccata, 2 pf, 1952; Family Album, pf 4 hands, 1962; Colloquies, vn, pf, 1963; Night Song, pf, 1963; Suite for the Young, pf, 1964; Laudation, org, 1965; 5 Images, pf 4 hands, 1967, arr. orch: Cortege, Promenade, Day Dreams, The Ballerina, The Dancing Sargeant

Capriccio on the Interval of a Second, pf, 1968; Bagatelles, hp, 1969; Lyric Pieces for the Young, pf, 1971; The Developing Flutist, fl, pf, 1972; 3 Essays, cl, pf, 1974; Stage Parodies, pf suite, young players, pf 4 hands, 1974; Str Qt, 1974; Diversions, pf, 1975; 5 Lyric Pieces for the Young Organist, 1975; Salute to Scarlatti, pf/hpd, 1979; Tpt Sonata, 1979; Concert Variations, pf, 1980; Reflections on a Xmas Tune, ww qnt, 1981; Song at Springtide, pf 4 hands, 1983; Short Intervallic Studies, pf, 1988

SOLO VOCAL

1 voice, piano unless otherwise stated

Ballad of Thomas Jefferson (Jefferson), 1937; Mill Doors (C. Sandburg), 1939; New Born (L.G. Marshall), 1946; There is a lady sweet and kind (anon. Elizabethan), 1946; The Assassination: 2 Fates Discuss a Human Problem (Hillyer), 1947; Lament (C. Tichborne), 1947; 6 Love Songs: Eyebright (J.A. Symonds), Why so pale and wan fond lover? (J. Suckling), Meeting at Night (R. Browning), The Dying Nightingale (S. Young), All things leave me (Symonds), How do I love thee? (E.B. Browning), 1948

The Lamentation of Saul (after D.H. Lawrence: David), Bar, orch/6 insts, 1954; The Listeners (W. De la Mare), 1955; Un sonetto di Petrarca (Songs of Adieu) (Petrarch), cycle, 1959; A Christmas Carol (G.K. Chesterton), 1960; Bright Star (Hoffman), 1962; 3 Songs of Adieu, 1962: After Love (Symonds), Fade, Vision Bright (anon.), Farewell (Symonds); Songs of Remembrance (J.H. Wheelock), Bar, orch, 1977; Note Left on a Doorstep (L. Peter), medium v, pf

Principal publishers: Associated, C. Fisher, Marks, G. Schirmer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

CBY 1957; EwenD

R. Sabin: 'Norman Dello Joio', Musical America, lxx/14 (1950), 9, 30

M. Powell: 'Current Chronicle', MQ, xlii (1956), 383–6 [review and analysis of The Trial at Rouen]

E. Downes: 'The Music of Norman Dello Joio', MQ, xlviii (1962), 149–67

Compositores de America/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, ix (Washington DC, 1963)

D.L. Arlton: American Piano Sonatas of the Twentieth Century (diss., Columbia U., 1968) [incl. analysis of Pf Sonata no.3]

C.F. Del Rosso: A Study of Selected Solo Clarinet Literature of Four American Composers as a Basis for Performance and Teaching (diss., Columbia U., 1969) [incl. analysis of Concertante]

J.R. Whalen: A Comparative Study of the Sonata Number Three for Piano and the Variations, Chaconne, and Finale for Orchestra by Norman Dello Joio (diss., Indiana U.,1969)

M. Hinson: 'The Solo Piano Music of Norman Dello Joio', American Music Teacher, xix/3 (1970), 34, 38

T.A. Bumgardner: The Solo Vocal Works of Norman Dello Joio (diss., U. of Texas, Austin, 1973)

J.S. Wannamaker: The Musical Settings of Walt Whitman (diss., U. of Minnesota, 1975)

K. Matheson: Interview, US-NYp, 1978 [oral archive]

N.J. Boston: The Piano Sonatas and Suites of Norman Dello Joio (diss., Peabody Conservatory, 1984)

T.A. Bumgardner: Norman Dello Joio (Boston, 1986)

D. Studebaker: 'The Sacred Choral Music of Norman Dello Joio', Journal of Church Music, xxviii (1986), 10–12

A. Meier: 'An Interview with Norman Dello Joio', Music Educators Journal, lxxiv/2 (1987), 53–6

J. McCray: 'Norman Dello Joio's Mass Settings: a Comparative Introduction', Diapason, lxxx/9 (1989), 14–16

RICHARD JACKSON

Del Mar, Norman (René) (b London, 31 July 1919; d London, 6 Feb 1994). English conductor, composer and writer. He studied the horn and composition at the RCM, London, and took private lessons with Mátyás Seiber. After war service with the RAF Central Band, he played in Beecham's newly formed RPO, then worked with him as assistant conductor, making his professional début during the Strauss Festival in 1947. Meanwhile, as conductor of the amateur Chelsea SO he had given world or British premières of works by Dohnányi, Strauss, Hindemith and Poulenc. From 1948 to 1956 Del Mar was principal conductor of the English Opera Group and from 1954 to 1955 co-conductor, with Nikolay Malko, of the Yorkshire SO. As chief conductor of the BBC Scottish SO from 1960 to 1965 he raised the orchestra to a high level of accomplishment and significantly broadened its repertory. His other appointments included chief guest conductor of the Göteborg SO, 1971–7, principal conductor of the Academy of the BBC, 1974–7, principal guest conductor of the Bournemouth Sinfonietta, 1982–5, and artistic director of the Århus SO, 1985–8. He was a popular conductor of the Proms and three times presided over the Last Night. Although his repertory was enormous, his closest sympathies were for music of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, most notably Mahler and Delius. His recordings, mainly of British music, include works by Delius (operas and the Mass of Life) and orchestral works by Rubbra.

Unusually for a busy conductor, Del Mar was a devoted teacher and writer. He taught at the GSM from 1951 to 1960 and at the RCM from 1972 to 1990. His writings include a scholarly three-volume study of the music of Richard Strauss and other books that reflect his wide knowledge of the orchestra. Among his compositions are a flute concerto, two symphonies, a string quartet and several horn pieces written for Dennis Brain. He was made a CBE in 1975.

WRITINGS

Richard Strauss (London, 1962–72)
Mahler's Sixth Symphony: a Study (London, 1980)
Anatomy of the Orchestra (London, 1981)
Confusion and Error in the Orchestral Repertoire (London, 1981)
A Companion to the Orchestra (London, 1987)
Conducting Beethoven (Oxford, 1992–3)
Conducting Brahms (Oxford, 1993)

BERNARD KEEFFE

Del Matta, Mauro [Domenico]. See MATTI, MAURO.

Delmedigo, Joseph Solomon ['Yashar'] (b Candia [now Iraklion], 1591; d Prague, 1655). Cretan physician, mathematician, astronomer and music theorist. He treated music in his Sefer Êlim (Amsterdam, 1628–9). Elim, in the Sinai peninsula, is mentioned in Numbers xxxiii.9 as a place with 12 fountains and 70 palm trees, and Delmedigo's book is made up of 12 major and 70 minor problems which deal, for the most part, with physics, medicine, mathematics and astronomy (Delmedigo studied the last two under Galileo at the University of Padua). Music forms minor problem no.44, beginning with the query: 'How can an object be moved without being touched?'. To answer it the author says he must begin with the rudiments of 'musical science' (ḥokhmat ha-nigun). He treats the acoustical and mathematical properties of music, as they relate to intervals (and their proportions), perfect and imperfect consonances and musical resonance. Contrary to Aristotelian physics, he shows that the larger the interval the more vibrational power it had, and from this results its capacity to move objects; for example, when a straw is placed on the semitone of a string and the semitone is sounded the straw will not move, but it will if placed on an octave. Delmedigo's sources, as is clear from his quotations, were Aristotle, pseudo-Aristotle, Euclid, Boethius and, indirectly, Galileo.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Adler, ed.: Hebrew Writings Concerning Music in Manuscripts and Printed Books from Geonic Times up to 1800, RISM, B/IX/2 (1975), 117–26
Encyclopaedia judaica (Jerusalem, 1972), v, 1477–8
M. Ben-David Sheer: Delmedigo's 'Sefer Elim' as a Hebrew Source on Music Theory (thesis, U. of Chicago, 1972)

DON HARRÁN

Del Mónaco, Alfredo (b Caracas, 29 April 1938). Venezuelan composer. He studied the piano with Moisés Moleiro and composition with Primo Casale in Caracas; and then in the United States at Columbia University, where he received a DMA (1974). He also obtained a degree in law from the Andrés Bello Catholic University in Caracas (1961). In 1966 he co-founded the Estudio de Fonología Musical in Caracas, and the following year he composed Cromofonías I and Estudio electrónico I, the first Venezuelan compositions of electronic music. In 1968 he helped found the Venezuelan branch of the ISCM. The same year he was awarded a national prize for his vocal work La noche de las alegorías. This work, del Mónaco's only serial piece, reflects constructivist influences through the use of integral serialism and proportional relations. In 2000 del Mónaco received the Premio Nacional de Música, the highest honour given to a Venezuelan musician for lifetime achievement.

In 1969 del Mónaco was invited by Mario Davidovsky and Vladimir Ussachevsky to work at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center in New York, where he remained until 1975. From this period came several of his instrumental, electro-acoustic and mixed-media compositions, influenced by a wide variety of artistic movements such as phonetic music, agitprop and conceptual music. Metagrama (1970), an example of phonetic music, is based on the manipulation of the human voice through electronic means. Trópicos (1972), based on concrete sounds collected on Venezuelan streets, belongs to the category of agitprop, documentary music used to transport Venezuelan social reality into the concert hall. In Cuarteto para voces (1978) the vocalists are instructed to describe the score, without singing. According to del Mónaco the element of sound in a piece of music works as an intermediary between the musical conception and its perception. If this element is removed, an imaginative process takes place in which the spectators are confronted with the concept behind the piece.

In 1977 del Mónaco returned to Venezuela, where he continued to compose mainly acoustic music and to develop an aesthetic background for his musical creation, something which distinguishes him from his Venezuelan contemporaries. In relation to the long-standing discussion on the identity, authenticity and ethnicity of Latin American contemporary music, del Mónaco considers that in a musical work indigenous elements may emerge on two different levels, objective and subjective. The objective elements are manifest in the musical foreground, for example rhythmic, melodic or harmonic figurations based on a given source or style. The subjective elements, with which del Mónaco strongly identifies, have a more implicit identity, not related to the sonic manifestation of the piece but to its character. The subjective approach is prominent in all of del Mónaco's work, especially in Tupac-Amaru (1977). This orchestral piece, his most widely performed and internationally acclaimed work, contains no indigenous or folk-music elements in spite of its suggestive title. Commissioned by the Maracaibo SO for the first Latin American Festival of Contemporary Music, it draws on material taken from most of his previous compositions, constituting a retrospective look at del Mónaco's own output.

Del Mónaco's work with electronic music has been a determinant of his musical style. He has consciously used typical electronic music procedures such as exploitation of textures, clusters, musical colours and montage in all his musical compositions, including his non-electronic ones.

WORKS

Orch: 2 fugas académicas, str, 1964; Cromofonías II, 1968; Tupac-Amaru, 1977; Tientos de la noche imaginada, gui, orch, 1990–91; Memorial, 2000

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, str qt, 1965; Solentiname, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 3 perc, 1972–3; Encuentros del eco, 2 pf, 2 perc, 1976; Chants, fl, 1988; Tientos del véspero, gui, 1991; Tlaloc, pf, 1991; Lyrika, ob/(ob, elecs), 1992; Visiones del caminante, 2 gui, 1995; Aforismo, fl, gui, 1998

Vocal: La noche de las alegorías, 8vv, 1968 (J.M. Eguren); Cuarteto para voces, 4 spkrs, 1978; Cantos de la noche alta, female v, orch, 1992 (A. Palacios)

El-ac: Cromofonías I, 1966–7; Estudio electrónico I, 1968; Estudio electrónico II, 1970; 3 ambientes coreográficos para Sonia Sanoja (dance score), 1970: Ambiente sonoro I, Ambiente sonoro II, Metagrama; Alternancias, vn, va, vc, pf, elecs, 1971; Dualismos, fl, cl, trbn, pf, elecs, 1971; Syntagma A, trbn, elecs, 1971–2; Synus 17/251271, 1972

Other works: Trópicos, tape, 1972; Estudio electrónico III, tape, 1974; Cronoformantes, conceptual work, 1978

ERICK CARBALLO

Del Monaco, Mario (b Florence, 27 July 1915; d Mestre, nr Venice, 16 Oct 1982). Italian tenor. He studied at Pesaro and the Rome Opera School. In 1939 while still a student he sang Turiddu at Pesaro, making his official début in 1941 at the Teatro Puccini, Milan, as Pinkerton. His international career began in 1946 when he sang Radames at the Verona Arena and Cavaradossi, Canio and Pinkerton at Covent Garden with the S Carlo company. He made his American début in 1950 at San Francisco as Radames and Chénier, and his New York début in the same year as Puccini's Des Grieux at the Metropolitan, where he sang until 1959. His most famous role was Otello, which he sang throughout Europe (including Covent Garden in 1962) and North America. His repertory also included Aeneas (Les Troyens), which he sang at La Scala in 1960, and Siegmund, while Loris (Fedora) was a favourite role in the later years of his career. He possessed a thrilling natural voice of enormous power, though his reluctance to sing below mezzo-forte was sometimes criticized. His many recordings of complete operas, notably Otello, catch the visceral excitement of his voice and his dramatic presence. A volume of autobiography, La mia vita e i miei successi, including a list of his roles, was published in Milan in 1982.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV (E. Gara; R. Vegeto)
F. Nuzzo: 'Mario Del Monaco', Opera, xiii (1962), 372–6

Mario Del Monaco as Verdi's Otello

A. Chedorge, R. Manciniand J.-L. Caussou: 'Mario Del Monaco', Opéra (Paris, 1965)

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Del Negro, Giulio Santo Pietro. See NEGRI, GIULIO SANTO PIETRO DE'.

Delogu, Gaetano (b Messina, Sicily, 14 April 1934). Italian conductor. He began to learn the violin as a child and continued his musical education at the University of Catania, while studying for a law degree (1958). He then studied conducting with Franco Ferrara in Rome and Venice, and won a prize at the Young Conductor's Competition in Florence in 1964. After conducting for RAI in Rome, Milan, Turin and Naples, he won the Dimitri Mitropoulos Competition in New York in 1968. During the following season he worked with both the New York PO (under Bernstein) and with the National SO, Washington, DC. After a period as conductor at the Teatro Massimo in Palermo (1975–8), he served as music director of the Denver SO from 1979 to 1987, then becoming the orchestra's conductor emeritus. In 1995 he became principal conductor of the Prague SO. Delogu has also appeared as guest conductor with many leading orchestras, including the Vienna SO, the LPO and the Czech PO, and with the last two has recorded music by Haydn, Mendelssohn, Sibelius, Mahler, Stravinsky and Hindemith. He has also been active in opera, specializing particularly in the works of Puccini.

GENE BIRINGER/R

Del Palla [Del Palle], Scipione. See DELLE PALLE, SCIPIONE.

Del Pane, Domenico. See DAL PANE, DOMENICO.

Del Pomo [Pomius], Francesco (b Palermo, 1594; fl Palermo, 1604–5). Italian composer, singer and lutenist. He was a child prodigy as singer and lutenist and was a pupil of Antonio Il Verso. At the age of ten he published his Primo libro di ricercari a due voci (Palermo, 1604, lost). On 1 April 1605 the Venetian printer Amadino dedicated Il Verso's second book of three-part madrigals to Del Pomo: 'your name is already known throughout Italy, your praises spread by all those who have seen and heard you play and sing from the age of five with such grace and security'. Two poems, one in Latin and one in Italian, celebrate his marvellous singing (Paruta). Mongitore latinized his name to 'Pomius' (which is wrongly printed as 'Podius') and confused him with the composer Francesco Tumèo (Tomeus-Pomeus) whose works appeared in the Sicilian anthologies Infidi lumi (lost) and Le risa a vicenda. Del Pomo was not represented in these books and no more is known of him.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Paruta: Carmina manu propria conscripta (MS, I-PLcom 2QqC21), ff.77, 285; ed. in Intermedi e rime, ed. A.M. Razzoli Roio (Parma, 1985), 189, 280
A. Mongitore: Bibliotheca Sicula, i (Palermo, 1708/R), 234 [Del Pomo incorrectly referred to as 'Podius']
O. Tiby: 'The Polyphonic School in Sicily of the 16th–17th Century', MD, v (1951), 203–11 [Del Pomo incorrectly referred to as 'Podio']
O. Tiby: I polifonisti siciliani del XVI e XVII secolo (Palermo, 1969), 53, 55, 99 [Del Pomo incorrectly referred to as 'Podio']
P.E. Carapezza: 'I duo della scuola siciliana': introduction to Scuola polifonica siciliana: musiche strumentali didattiche, MRS, ii (1971), xi, xxvi [with Eng. trans.]
L. Bianconi: 'Sussidi bibliografici per i musicisti siciliani del Cinque e Seicento', RIM, vii (1972), 3–38, esp. 31

PAOLO EMILIO CARAPEZZA, GIUSEPPE COLLISANI

Del Puente, Giuseppe (b Naples, 30 Jan 1841; d Philadelphia, 25 May 1900). Italian baritone. After making his début at Iaşi, Romania, he sang in Spain (1870) and Rome (1873). He was first heard in London at Drury Lane in 1873 and sang one performance of Rigoletto at La Scala in 1875. During 1878 he took the role of Escamillo in the first performances of Carmen in London (Her Majesty's Theatre) and New York (Academy of Music). He sang Valentine in Faust at the opening night of the Metropolitan (22 October 1883), also appearing as Barnaba in the first New York performance of La gioconda and in several other roles during the inaugural season. He sang Lescaut in 1885 in the first New York performance of Massenet's Manon at the Academy of Music. In 1891 he sang Alfio in the US première of Cavalleria rusticana at Philadelphia. He continued to perform in London until 1888 and in America until 1895. A stylish singer, he did not have a remarkable voice, but was admired for his forthright interpretations, especially of Mozart's Figaro and Don Giovanni and of the French repertory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.H. Mapleson: The Mapleson Memoirs (London, 1888); ed. H. Rosenthal (London, 1966)
W.H. Seltsam: Metropolitan Opera Annals (New York, 1947)
H. Rosenthal: Two Centuries of Opera at Covent Garden (London, 1958)

ELIZABETH FORBES

Del Puerto, Diego. See PUERTO, DIEGO DEL.

Del Rosso, Giovanni Maria. See ROSSI, GIOVANNI MARIA DE.

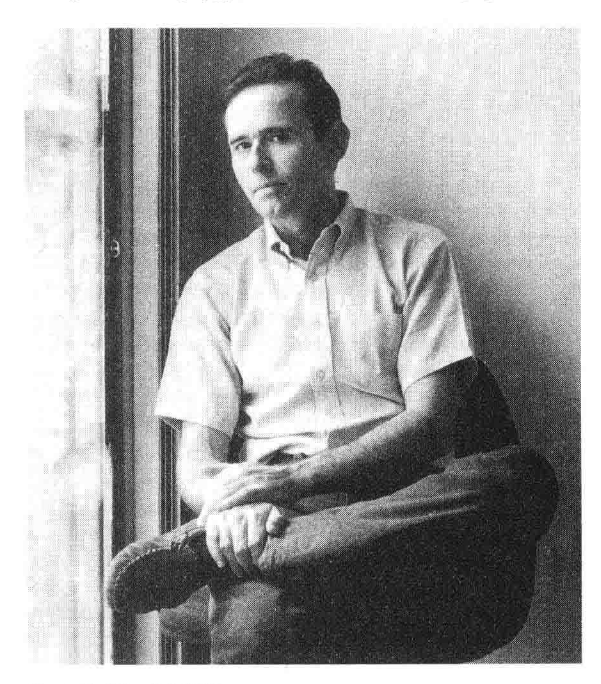
Delsart [Delsaert], Jules (b Valenciennes, 1844; d Paris, 3 July 1900). French cellist and viol player. He studied the cello at the Valenciennes Conservatoire, and then with Franchomme at the Paris Conservatoire, graduating with the premier prix in 1866. He made many successful tours; several appearances in London included the first performance of Popper's Requiem for three cellos and orchestra, with Howell and the composer, at St James's Hall on 25 November 1891. After Franchomme's death in 1884, Delsart replaced him at the Conservatoire, continuing there until he died. His many distinguished pupils included Paul Bazelaire, Marcel Casadesus, Louis Feuillard, Louis Fournier and Georges Papin.



About 1887–8, Delsart started to study the bass viol. In 1889 he appeared with Louis Diémer (harpsichord), Van Waefelghem (viola d'amore) and Grillet (vielle) as the Société des Instruments Anciens. The group performed throughout Europe for a decade with great success, though Delsart was succeeded in the Société by Papin and Casadesus. Delsart was said to be one of the foremost French cellists of the period, with faultless technique, a precise bow and a sweet, though not large, tone. He owned the handsome 1689 'Archinto' Stradivari.

LYNDA MACGREGOR

Del Tredici, David (Walter) (b Cloverdale, CA, 16 March 1937). American composer. He made his solo début as a pianist with the San Francisco SO in 1954 and entered the University of California, Berkeley, in 1955 to study with Bernhard Abramowitsch. His first piece, Soliloquy (1958), written at the Aspen Festival, prompted Milhaud to encourage him to become a composer. Upon his return to Berkeley, Del Tredici enrolled in composition classes with Shifrin, Imbrie and Elston (BA 1959). A Woodrow Wilson fellowship enabled him to continue his studies at Princeton University, where his teachers included Roger Sessions and Earl Kim. He left Princeton in 1960 to study the piano with Helps in New York City, but returned in 1963 to complete the MFA (1965). During these years, Copland invited him to Tanglewood, where he composed I Hear an Army (1964) and Night Conjure-Verse (1965). In 1966 he was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship and spent the first of two summers as composer-in-residence at the Marlboro Festival.

Del Tredici joined the faculty at Harvard University in 1968. He later taught at SUNY, Buffalo (1972–3), Boston University (1973–84), City College, CUNY (1984–), the Manhattan School (1991–3) and the Juilliard School (1993–6). He has received a Naumburg Award (1972), the Pulitzer Prize (In Memory of a Summer Day, 1980), the Friedheim Award (1982) and several NEA grants. In 1984 he was elected to the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. Among his commissions are works for American and European orchestras, the Koussevitzky and Fromm foundations, and Meet the Composer. His compositions fall into two stylistic categories: atonal works (1958–67), many based on texts by James Joyce, and increasingly tonal works (from 1968), mostly inspired by the writings of Lewis Carroll.

Del Tredici's earliest compositions were influenced by his study of the piano music of Schoenberg and Berg at Berkeley. These expressionistic tendencies were solidified at Princeton, the academic bastion of serialism at that time. His solo piano works, song settings and the string trio employ 12-note techniques and canonic and palindromic contrapuntal devices, but also contain pedal points and pitch repetition. While I Hear an Army features hexachordally derived note rows and pervasive dissonance, an incipient tonal centre quietly emerges during the course of the work. The orchestral compositions, Night Conjure-Verse and Syzygy (1966), both settings of Joyce texts, employ palindromic relationships. At the mid-point of Syzygy, the wind and string parts are exchanged and the entire first half of the piece is rendered in retrograde. The Last Gospel (1967, rev. 1984), a setting of the opening passage of the Gospel of John, serves as a coda to Del Tredici's atonal period. For the first time he juxtaposes a small ensemble of guitars and saxophones with the combined forces of orchestra, chorus and solo soprano. Similar textural juxtapositions appear in later tonal compositions.

David Del Tredici, 1981

In 1968 Del Tredici encountered the writings of Carroll, particularly Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass. These texts, which would inspire him for the next three decades, prompted a shift in his compositional style. Although the 12-note system was not abandoned completely until 1980, tonal relationships began to assume greater structural significance. His first work on Carroll's texts, Pop-Pourri (1968, rev. 1973), employs a pre-existing tonal source, Bach's chorale 'Es ist genug' from Cantata no.60 (also used in Berg's Violin Concerto). Del Tredici derives the work's primary 12-note row from the first four pitches of the chorale melody, pitches identical to the first four notes of the whole-tone scale. An exploration of whole-tone relationships continued in The Lobster Quadrille (1969), dedicated to Copland, who conducted the première. While the work's 12-note row is derived from the whole-tone scale, much of the musical tension arises from the juxtaposition of tritones and perfect 5ths. This intervallic conflict is ultimately resolved in favour of the 5th in An Alice Symphony (1969, rev. 1976), which incorporates The Lobster Quadrille as its second movement. The Symphony's prologue and conclusion consists of a mock tuning of the orchestra, the oboe's 'A' becoming the work's tonal centre. The same tuning technique is employed in Final Alice (1975), commissioned by the NEA in honour of the US Bicentennial. First performed by George Solti and the Chicago SO, Final Alice is among Del Tredici's most popular works. Operatic in scope, with sweeping arias and Straussian orchestration, it is undeniably tonal, although a 12-note row is still used colouristically in passages (such as when Alice grows and shrinks).

With In Memory of a Summer Day (1980), commissioned by the St Louis SO, Del Tredici abandoned the note row completely. He incorporated that composition into a massive, concert-length work, Child Alice (1981), which brings together three other commissions: Quaint Events (SUNY, Buffalo); Happy Voice (San Francisco SO); and All in the Golden Afternoon (Philadelphia SO). A commission from the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center prompted him to set an additional Carroll text in Haddocks' Eyes (1985). After the completion of that work, he temporarily abandoned Carroll and the solo soprano that had become a fixture in his orchestral writing. He embarked on a series of three large-scale compositions that are among his most grandiose and cacophonous works: March to Tonality (1985), Tattoo (1986) and Steps (1990). In 1995 he returned to Carroll for his first opera, Dum Dee Tweedle. His works from 1996 suggest a new compositional phase, one in which his music becomes more personal and introspective. In Gay Life (1996–2000), texts by Allen Ginsberg, Federico García Lorca, Paul Monette and others inspire uncharacteristically spare, emotionally direct settings which contain little chromaticism.

WORKS

VOCAL

On texts by J. Joyce: 4 Songs, 1v, pf, 1958–60; 2 Songs, 1v, pf, 1959, rev. 1978; I Hear an Army, S, str qt, 1964; Night Conjure-Verse, amp S, A, chbr ens, 1965; Syzygy, S, hn, chbr orch, 1966

On texts by L. Carroll: Pop-Pourri, amp S, chorus, 2 s sax, 2 elec gui, perc, orch, 1968, rev. 1973; An Alice Symphony (Carroll, D. Bates): 1 Speak Gently/Speak Roughly, 2 The Lobster Quadrille, 3 'Tis the Voice of the Sluggard, 4 Who Stole the Tarts?, 5 Dream-Conclusion, amp S, 2 sax, banjo, mand, accdn, orch, 1969, rev. 1976; Adventures Underground (Carroll, I. Watts), amp S, 2 sax, banjo, mand, accdn, orch, 1971, rev. 1977; Vintage Alice (Carroll, J. Taylor), amp S, 2 sax, banjo, mand, accdn, chbr orch, 1972; Final Alice (Carroll, W. Mee), amp S, 2 sax, banjo, mand, accdn, orch, 1975; Child Alice: 1 In Memory of a Summer Day, amp S, orch, 1980, 2 Quaint Events, amp S, orch, 1981, 3 Happy Voice, orch, 1980, rev. 1984, 4 All in the Golden Afternoon, amp S, orch, 1981; Acrostic Song, (S, chorus, pf)/(chorus, hp)/(1v, pf), 1982, arr. S, 10 insts, 1987 [from Final Alice]; Haddocks' Eyes (Carroll, T. Moore), amp S, chbr ens, 1985; Dum Dee Tweedle (op), 1995, unperf.; Cabbages and Kings, S, chorus, vn, chbr ens, 1996 [from Dum Dee Tweedle]

On other texts: The Last Gospel (Bible: John i.1–18), S, chorus, 2 s sax, 2 elec gui, orch, 1967, rev. 1984; A Tale of Possession (A. Corn), 1v, pf, 1996; Chana's Story (C. Bloch), song cycle, S, pf, 1996; Gay Life (A. Ginsberg, P. Monette, F. García Lorca, P. Davison, M. Calhoun, W.H. Kiddie, Bible: Song of Solomon), song cyle, 1v, pf, 1996–2000; 4 Inez Poems (C. Inez), song cycle, S, pf, 1996; Love Addiction (J. Kelly), 1v, pf, 1997; The Spider and the Fly (M. Howitt), S, B-Bar, orch (1997); Dracula (Corn), S, 11 insts, perf. 1999

INSTRUMENTAL

Ens: Str Trio, 1959; Acrostic Song, fl, pf/hp, 1982 [from Final Alice]; March to Tonality, orch, 1985; Tattoo, orch, 1986; Steps, orch, 1990; Brass Sym., brass qnt, 1992; Heavy Metal Alice, brass qnt, 1995

Solo: Soliloquy, pf, 1958; Fantasy Pieces, pf, 1959–60; Scherzo, pf 4 hands, 1960; Acrostic Song, gui, 1982 [from Final Alice, arr. S. Mercurio]; Acrostic Paraphrase, hp, 1983 [from Final Alice]; Virtuoso Alice, pf, 1984; Opposites Attract, pf, 1996; Ballad in Yellow, pf, 1997

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

Principal publisher: Boosey & Hawkes

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Cole: 'Del Tredici's The Lobster Quadrille', Tempo, no.91 (1969–70), 20–22

P. Earls: 'David Del Tredici: Syzygy', PNM, ix/2–x/1 (1971), 304–13

D. Del Tredici and others: 'Contemporary Music: Observations from those who Create it', Music & Artists, v/3 (1972), 11–23

J. Rockwell: 'David Del Tredici: the Return of Tonality, the Orchestral Audience & the Danger of Success', All American Music: Composition in the Late Twentieth Century (New York, 1983), 71–83

J. McGuire: '"All in the Golden Afternoon": the New Romanticism of David Del Tredici', MusikTexte, no.18 (1987), 20–22

J. Conarroe: 'A Conversation (with David Del Tredici)', CMR, v (1989), 239

J. Chute: The Reemergence of Tonality in Contemporary Music as Shown in the Work of David Del Tredici, Joseph Schwantner and John Adams (DMA diss., U. of Cincinnati, 1991)

E. Duncan: 'A Composer Who Finds Lasting Inspiration in "Alice in Wonderland"', New York Times (3 March 1996)

JAMES CHUTE

Del Turco, Giovanni (b Florence, 21 June 1577; d Florence, 20 Sept 1647). Italian composer and court administrator. He was a nobleman and belonged to the Knights of St Stephen, a religious order based in Pisa. He was probably an associate of the circle of Florentine poets and musicians that had Jacopo Corsi as its patron from about 1592 to 1604. He received musical tuition from Marco da Gagliano, who, dedicating his second book of madrigals (1604) to him, praised his talents and compositions. Del Turco published his own first book of madrigals in 1602, and Gagliano included single pieces by him in his first four madrigal books between then and 1606; that in the second book is a lament on Corsi's death. Del Turco became secretary of Gagliano's Accademia degli Elevati, which was founded in 1607. In the same year he is mentioned in Monteverdi's Scherzi musicali, by the latter's brother Giulio Cesare, as one of the 'gentlemen of that heroic school' whose practice Monteverdi followed. He came to some prominence in 1614, when he published his second book of madrigals, dedicated to Grand Duke Cosimo II, and was appointed the grand duke's director of court music. As such he organized the music for Carnival 1616 and wrote the music for the mascherata in the equestrian entertainment Guerra d'Amore. He is described (in RISM 1617[20]) as still occupying this post in 1617, but Ferdinando Saracinelli seems to have succeeded him by 1625. There are just over 40 pieces by him, nearly all of them five-part madrigals. Six madrigals from his first book, now incomplete, reappear in the second, which of all his music warrants the most attention. The typically epigrammatic texts, a few of which are by Guarini, are amatory or pathetic in character. The settings use an idiom of parlando declamation, made unstable by compressed and fast-moving imitation. In general they resemble Gagliano's later style, though they show an occasional awkwardness of melodic outline and harmonic movement unlike anything in Gagliano. False relations, sometimes simultaneous, are prominent, but Del Turco's chromaticism, like most Florentine composers', remains fairly innocuous.

The Lorenzo del Turco of whom three five-part madrigals are known (in RISM 1602[9], 1605[13] and 1606[11], volumes by Giovanni del Turco or Gagliano) was probably Giovanni del Turco's younger brother; he too was taught music by Gagliano.

WORKS

Il primo [libro] de madrigali, 5vv (Florence, 1602[9]) [incl. 1 by L. del Turco]

Il secondo libro de madrigali, 5vv (Florence, 1614[16]) [incl. 6 repr. from 1602 edn]

6 madrigals, 5vv, 2 arias, 1v, bc, 1 other work, 3vv, bc, 1602[6] (attrib. M. da Gagliano in 1604[12]), 1604[17], 1605[13], 1606[11], 1615[21], 1616[21], 1617[12], 1617[20]

Music for the mascherata in Guerra d'Amore (festa a cavallo), Florence, Carnival, 11 or 12 Feb 1616, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EinsteinIM; MGG1 (F. Degrada); SolertiMBD

E. Vogel: 'Marco da Gagliano: zur Geschichte des Florentiner Musiklebens von 1570–1650', VMw, v (1889), 396–442, 509–68

F. Ghisi: 'Ballet Entertainments in Pitti Palace, Florence, 1608–1625', MQ, xxxv (1949), 421–36

E. Strainchamps: 'New Light on the Accademia degli Elevati of Florence', MQ, lxii (1976), 507–35

E. Strainchamps: 'Music in a Florentine Confraternity: the Memorial Madrigals for Jacopo Corsi in the Company of the Archangel Raphael' Crossing the Boundaries: Christian Piety and the Arts in Italian Medieval and Renaissance Confraternities, ed. K. Eisenbichler (Kalamazoo, MI, 1991), 161–78

DAVID S. BUTCHART

Del Turco, Lorenzo. Italian composer DEL TURCO, GIOVANNI.

De Luca, Giuseppe (b Rome, 25 Dec 1876; d New York, 26 Aug 1950). Italian baritone. After five years' vocal study with Venceslao Persichini, he made his operatic début at Piacenza on 6 November 1897 as Valentin in Faust. In 1902 he sang the leading baritone role in the first performance of Cilea's Adriana Lecouvreur at the Teatro Lirico, Milan, and in the two following years took part in the premières at La Scala of Giordano's Siberia and Puccini's Madama Butterfly.He remained at La Scala for eight seasons, but the greater part of his career lay in the USA. He first appeared at the Metropolitan in Rossini's Il barbiere di Siviglia in 1915, and for 20 consecutive seasons remained an invaluable member of the company, gradually assuming all the leading roles of the Italian repertory. Although his well-schooled baritone was less powerful than those of his close contemporaries Pasquale Amato and Titta Ruffo, his complete mastery of the art of singing enabled him to retain his powers almost unimpaired to an advanced age – as was observed when, after an absence of 25 years, he made an unheralded appearance at Covent Garden in 1935 as Rossini's Figaro. This, together with Rigoletto (in which he made his Metropolitan farewell in 1940), ranked among his favourite roles. On 7 November 1947, at the age of 70, just 50 years after his début, he gave his farewell New York recital.

Giuseppe de Luca as Malatesta with Rosina Storchio (Norina) in Donizetti's 'Don Pasquale', Act 1 scene ii, La Scala, Milan, 1904

De Luca's many records, made over 45 years, are of fine quality, the early Fonotipias exhibiting the brilliance of the young singer (and his delightful sense of humour as shown in the buffo duet from Don Pasquale with Corradetti), while the Victors made between 1917 and 1930 are models of classical style and the bel canto tradition. They have been reissued as a complete collection on CD, a worthy memorial to a noble artist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Favia-Artsay: 'Giuseppe De Luca', Record Collector, v (1950), 56–69 [with discography]

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR/R

De Luca [Di Luca], Severo [Saverio] (b Naples; fl 1684–1734). Italian composer. He wrote his earliest known work (an opera) for Naples, and in 1701 Valesio referred to him as Neapolitan. By 1688 he had moved to Rome, where he served Spanish ambassadors. His name is not found on any extant list of musicians employed by other patrons in Rome. (Some lists include a singer and copyist named Gioseppe De Luca, who might have been related to Severo.) On 31 October 1704 the Congregazione di S Giacomo degli Spagnuoli acceded to the request of a Spanish ambassador, the Duke of Uzeda, by appointing Severo as its maestro di cappella. In 1708 he was listed among the maestri di cappella who belonged to the musicians' Congregazione di S Cecilia (Pastura Ruggiero). In January 1720 he was accused of neglecting his duties, and Giuseppe Valentini was named his assistant. A controversy ensued, so Valentini's name disappeared after 1727, when De Luca was reportedly expelled from his post (Careri), which he nevertheless held until 1734 (Lionnet).

WORKS

music lost unless otherwise stated

OPERAS

L'Epaminonda (melodramma, 3, A. Perrucci), Naples, Palazzo Reale, 21 Dec 1684; Palermo, Teatro della Città, 1687
La costanza nell'amor divino, overo La Santa Rosalia [Act 1] (dramma sacro per musica, 3, P. Ottoboni), Rome, ? Palazzo della Cancelleria, ?Jan 1696, arias F-Pn, GB-Ob, I-PAVu; rev. as L'amante del cielo, Rome, Collegio del Nazareno, 7 Feb 1699, Rps [Act 2 by F.C. Lanciani, Act 3 by F. Gasparini]
La clemenza d'Augusto [Act 1] (dramma per musica, 3, C.S. Capece), Rome, Tordinona, 4 Feb 1697, E-Mn, arias GB-Lbl, Lgc, Ob, I-Bc, CCc, Rc, Rvat [Act 2 by C.F. Pollarolo, Act 3 by G. Bononcini]

Arias in D. Gabrielli: Il Maurizio, Rome, Tordinona, 1 Feb 1692, arias D-MÜs, I-Rc, Rsc, Rvat; comic scenes in C.F. Pollarolo: Creonte tiranno di Tebe, Naples, S Bartolomeo, 1699, comic scenes D-Dl

SERENATAS

all first performed in Rome

Cantata per musica, 3vv (La Notte, il Giorno, il Merito) (F.M. Paglia), Palazzo Colonna, 10 Aug 1688
Per il giorno natalizio dell'illustriss. et eccellentiss. sig. D. Maria de Giron e Sandoval, ambasciatrice di Spagna (Paglia), 4vv, insts, Piazza di Spagna, 2 Aug 1689
La nova gara delle dee (Giunone, Pallade, Venere) (S. Stampiglia), Piazza di Spagna, *c*25 Aug 1694
Serenata, 2vv (Arsindo, Matilde), 1696
Venere, Cupido, Marte, 1700, E-Mn
Applausi delle virtù, 5vv, on the accession of Felipe V as King of Spain (F. Noceti), Spanish Embassy, 30 April 1701, F-Pn
Serenata for the Spanish ambassador [? Applausi del Sole e della Senna (C.S. Capece)], Casa di Severo de Luca, 23 July 1704

Aglauro, Corebo, I-Mc
Lidia, Fileno, D-Bsb, I-MOe

CANTATAS

extant works are for soprano and continuo

Ah che tante sventure, I-Fl; Amo Clori, GB-Mp; Arse gran tempo è vero, I-Fl; Care labbra del mio bene, GB-Cfm; Costanza in bella donna è vanità, Och (doubtful); Desiri partite pensiere volate, Och; È incostante la bellezza, D-MÜs; E ti par poco che ch'io dato il cor, MÜs; Era la notte e già sorgea dal mare, MÜs, I-Fl; Già fugavan le stelle (A b[ella] d[onna] crudele) (Paglia), D-MÜs; In Amor se non si crede (Stravaganza d'Amore accade in noi Fileno), I-Bc; Io che per colpa sol del fato rio, Fl; Io sfido Cupido al suono di tromba, B-Bc; La mia Lilla, D-MÜs; Lumi ch'in fronte al mio bel sole, GB-Cfm
O che legge crudel d'Amor tiranno (Paglia), I-MOe; O di luci da notte, D-MÜs; Parti l'idolo mio, GB-Cfm; Pensiere tacere non più, Cfm; Pria che d'eto initri, D-MÜs, I-Rvat; Quando Cesare invitto (Cleopatra) (Paglia), D-MÜs; Rusignuol che tempri il canto, I-Nc; Senti pur l'alma seancarmi fiero, GB-Och; Sopra il margine ombroso, I-Fl; Stravaganza d'amore accade in noi Fileno (B[ella] d[onna] all'amante incredulo) (Paglia), Bc; Su la spiaggia deserta, GB-Och; Tacque gran tempo il core tacito, F-Pn; Trasse lunga stagione hore serene (Amante di b[ella] d[onna] che canta) (Paglia), I-MOe

Text only: Allor che il cieco nume, Clori mia se t'amo è poco ed è troppo, Da gelosia nasce il dolore, Dopo che l'ombra oscura, Già di Minoe la figlia (Arianna), Mio tiranno adorato allor ch'io mi querelo, Nella parte più bella (Per il Sant.mo Natale), Perché l'orrido mostro (Dafne), Perdona Amor perdona ai deliri (Amante corrisposto), Pur troppo annese piante, Se l'arciero di grido il dominio ti diè, Stanco omai di tacere, Voi volete ch'io canti? (Capelli neri), all by Paglia, I-Rvat Vat.lat.10204; In questo della terra ermo confine (S Francesco Xaverio moribondo vicino a Goà), by B. Pamphili

SACRED

Hierusalem excidium (orat, G.F. Rubini), Rome, SS Crocifisso, 12 March 1688
Il martirio di S Erasmo (orat, Silbo Tropei, ? = Pietro Bolis), Rome, S Giovanni dei Fiorentini, 14 March 1700; Foligno, 1710

Funeral music for Louis I, Rome, S Giacomo degli Spagnuoli, 1724
Messa di Gloria, for the birth of Infanta Maria Antonia Fernanda di Borbone Farnese, Rome, S Giacomo degli Spagnuoli, 1729
Mass, 4vv, D-MÜs
De lamentatione Jeremie, GB-Lbl
Dia sono amabile, Ob; Vieni o mia cara, Ob

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SartoriL
F. Valesio: Diario di Roma, ed. G. Scano and G. Graglia (Milan, 1977–9), i, 366–9; iii, 130–32
C. Troy: The Comic Intermezzo: a Study in the History of Eighteenth-Century Italian Opera (Ann Arbor, 1979), 21–4
T. Griffin: The Late Baroque Serenata in Rome and Naples: a Documentary Study with Emphasis on Alessandro Scarlatti (diss., UCLA, 1983)
H.J. Marx: 'Die "Giustificazioni della Casa Pamphilij" als musikgeschichtliche Quelle', Studi musicali, xii (1983), 121–87
E. Careri: 'Giuseppe Valentini (1681–1753): documenti inediti', NA, new ser., v (1987), 69–125
S. Franchi: Drammaturgia romana: repertorio bibliografico cronologico dei testi drammatici pubblicati a Roma e nel Lazio, secolo XVII (Rome, 1988)
M. Moli Frigola: 'Fuochi, teatri e macchine spagnole a Roma nel Settecento', Il teatro a Roma nel Settecento, ed. Istituto della Enciclopedia italiana (Rome, 1989), 215–58
M.G. Pastura Ruggiero: 'Fonti per la storia del teatro romano nel Settecento conservate nell'Archivio di Stato di Roma', ibid., ed. Istituto della Enciclopedia italiana (Rome, 1989), 505–87
J. Lionnet: 'La musique à San Giacomo degli Spagnoli au XVIIème siècle et les archives de la Congrégation des Espagnols de Rome', La musica a Roma attraverso le fonti d'archivio: Rome 1992, 479–505

LOWELL LINDGREN

De Lucia, Fernando (b Naples, 11 Oct 1860; d Naples, 21 Feb 1925). Italian tenor. He studied in Naples, and made his début at the Teatro S Carlo in Faust on 9 March 1885. At first he was best known in the tenore di grazia repertory, notably as Almaviva, which remained a favourite role. But in the 1890s and the early 1900s his fame was increasingly linked with the impassioned tenor heroes of the new verismo school, especially Turiddu, Canio and Loris in Giordano's Fedora, in all of which he excelled alike as actor and singer. The title role in Mascagni's L'amico Fritz, in which he sang with Calvé in the Rome première of 1891 and in its first Covent Garden and Metropolitan Opera performances shortly thereafter, formed a bridge between the two parts of his repertory; and Mascagni gratefully chose him also for the premières of his I Rantzau (1892, Florence), Silvano (1895, Milan) and Iris (1898, Rome).

At the Metropolitan he sang only for a single season (1893–4), but his Covent Garden appearances were frequent and successful between 1892 and 1900, although there were recurrent complaints of his excessive vibrato. He was particularly popular in his native Naples, where he made his last stage appearance in 1917 in L'amico Fritz; he came out of retirement to give a memorable account of 'Pietà, Signore' (then attributed to Stradella) on the occasion of Caruso's funeral in 1921.

Fernando de Lucia as Turiddu in Mascagni's 'Cavalleria rusticana'

Between 1902 and 1922 he made some 400 records. This extensive legacy (much of it reissued on CD) is valuable because it represents an otherwise vanished style. De Lucia's technique and vocal control are astonishing, as are also his free, spontaneous and vivid treatment of musical text and ornament and his variety of nuance and tone-colour.

Perhaps the best of his records are his various excerpts from Il barbiere di Siviglia, La sonnambula and L'elisir d'amore; his account of Alfredo's aria in La traviata (a role he sang at Covent Garden at Patti's farewell) is so tender and caressing as to efface the memory of other versions. The vocal tone in his records has often suffered from the use of excessive speeds in reproduction and a resulting unnatural raising of the pitch; his upper range was never extensive, and even at the height of his career he often resorted to transposition. Recent CD transfers have been in the correct pitch.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV (R. Celletti; R. Vegeto)

M. Henstock: 'Fernando de Lucia', Record Collector, xxx (1985), 101–39, 149–212 [annotated discography]

M. Henstock: Fernando de Lucia (London, 1990) [with discography]

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR/R

De Lussan, Zélie (b Brooklyn, NY, 21 Dec 1861; d London, 18 Dec 1949). American mezzo-soprano of French descent. She was taught by her mother, herself a singer, and first appeared on stage at the age of nine. She gave public concerts when 16 and made her official stage début at Boston in 1884, as Arline in Balfe's The Bohemian Girl. In 1888 she sang in London as Carmen, a role she is said to have sung more than 1000 times, and in which many considered her the equal of Calvé. She also became famous for her Zerlina in Don Giovanni, and in 1897 was London's first Musetta in La bohème. Her Metropolitan début in 1894 as Carmen was no less successful, and she appeared there for a further three seasons in roles including Nannetta, Zerlina and Nedda. In 1910 she sang Cherubino in Beecham's Mozart season at His Majesty's and Gertrude in Hamlet at Covent Garden; she also worked with smaller companies such as the Carl Rosa and Moody-Manners, with which she sang until 1913. She taught for many years in England, retaining the vitality and charm of her personality well into old age. Her recordings are few but show something of her rich voice and lively temperament.

J.B. STEANE

Delusse, Christophe (b Paris, 1729; d Paris, 8 Nov 1794). French woodwind instrument maker. Son of Jean Baptiste Delusse and Simone Forget, he married Madelaine Turcan on 10 November 1759 at la Cité; she died on 8 May 1808, aged 78. He probably learned instrument making from his uncle Jacques. At his death, Christophe became master of Jacques' workshop at quai Pelletier no.27 where he worked until his own death. The woodwind maker Dominique Porthaux was a witness to Christophe's death, indicating a friendship between them. Although the inventory and other documents relating to the sale of Christophe's business were destroyed, a summary of them is found in his wife's inventory which establishes the value of his tools and merchandize at 17,000 francs. This large sum shows that he had a very profitable business and a large stock of instruments. His brother, Jacques Martin Delusse, 'maître de musique' (b 1728), married Marguerite de Vendôme on 3 May 1756 at St Benoit. Attending the marriage were Christophe and his uncle Jacques, who is described as an 'ingénieur en instrument de musique de la société des arts', suggesting that he was the M. de Lusse who contributed to the musical instrument article of the Encyclopédie of Diderot and d'Alembert. The Almanach musical of 1781 mentions a M. Luce as the maker of a 'contrebasse d'hautbois' priced at 1000 livres which was used at the Opéra for six months instead of the bassoon (see OBOE, §III, 5(ii)) and of the 'flûte harmonique' (or flûte d'accord; for illustration, see PITCHPIPE). These instruments are now in the Musée de la musique, Paris as well as a transverse bass flute with u-shaped head joint of his invention. Delusse was renowned for the perfection of his oboes. This is reflected in F.J. Garnier's Méthode raisonnée pour le hautbois (Paris, *c*1800) which contains an illustration of the 'modèle du Haut-Bois d'après Delusse, dans ses proportions éxactes'. Instruments by Christophe Delusse are marked 'crown/C/DELUSSE'; about 40 survive including 22 oboes, a contrabass oboe, ten flutes, a bass flute, a galoubet and a bird flageolet.

Christophe's uncle Jacques Delusse (*b c*1700; d Paris, *c*1769) is identified by a document of 1752 as one of the five master woodwind makers of the Paris 'communauté des maîtres luthiers'. Few instruments of his mark (fleur-de-lis/DELUSSE/A/PARIS) survive. Young lists only a bass flute and a pitch pipe by this maker. No family connection has been made to Charles de Lusse, author of the first method for the four-piece flute, *c*1760.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI; YoungHI

T. Giannini: The Baroque Flute in France (forthcoming)

TULA GIANNINI

De Lusse [De-Lusse; Delusse]. See LUSSE, (CHARLES) DE.

Delvaux, Albert (b Leuven, 31 May 1913). Belgian composer, teacher and conductor. He studied initially at the Leuven Conservatory and then at the Royal Conservatoire in Liège, where he obtained the higher diploma for chamber music and the cello prize. He continued his studies with François Rasse and Joseph Leroy and obtained diplomas for harmony, counterpoint and fugue. He also attended courses in conducting given by Markevich and Wangenheim at the Salzburg Mozarteum. He pursued a successful triple career as a teacher, composer and conductor. Until his retirement in 1978 he was director of the Sint Niklaas Music Academy in Brussels and was also professor of counterpoint and fugue at the Brussels Conservatory. He won the Queen Elisabeth prize in 1961 for his Sinfonia burlesca.

His musical style combines Classical structure, contrapuntal mastery and an orchestration which brings out the rhythmic elements fundamental to his thematic work. His admiration for Debussy and Ravel is evident in the Symphonic Suite (1947) and Symphonic Variations (1948), and sometimes he applies the modes of Messiaen or uses 12-note elements, as in his Concerto da camera (1957). With increasing age he has become more prolific, especially in the field of chamber music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Choral: Héro et Léandre, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1941; La lumière endormie, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1941; works for unacc. chorus

Syms.: no.1, 1960; no.2, 1969; no.3, 1986; no.4, 1990

Other orch: Scherzo, 1942; Poème symphonique, 1943; Sym. Suite, 1947; Prelude, fl, str, 1948; Sym. Variations, 1948; Symfoniette, 1952; Vc Conc. no.1, 1955; Conc. da camera, 1957; Esquisses, chbr orch, 1957; 5 bagatelles, 1960; Sinfonia burlesca, Miniatures, 1960;/ Vn Conc. no.1, 1961; Sinfonia concertante, vn, va, str, 1963; Symfonische beweging, 1966; Conc., fl, ob, cl, bn, chbr orch, 1967; Conc., vn, vc, str, 1970; Conc., Introduttione e allegro, str, 1971; Vn Conc. no.2, 1974; Prelude-Allegro, wind band, 1975; Vc Conc. no.2, 1984

Chbr and solo inst: 4 str qts: 1943, 1945, 1955, 1961; Str Qnt, 1993; cl qts, sax qts, wind qts, wind qnts, duos, trios, solo pf pieces

Several songs, 1v, pf

Principal publishers: CeBeDeM (Brussels)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CeBeDeM directory
Music in Belgium: Contemporary Belgian Composers, ed. CeBeDeM (Brussels, 1964)

DIANA VON VOLBORTH-DANYS

Delvincourt, Claude (b Paris, 12 Jan 1888; d Orbetello, Tuscany, 5 April 1954). French administrator and composer. In addition to studying law, he was a pupil at the Paris Conservatoire of Leon Boëllmann, Büsser and Caussade, and later of Widor. He was sent as a recruit to the front at Argonne in 1914, working with a group of sound therapists. On 31 December 1915 he was severely wounded by shell shot, and his convalescence lasted until 1920. He was appointed director of the Versailles Conservatory in 1931, and in 1941, during the German occupation, he took over the direction of the Paris Conservatoire. He proved well-suited to this position, running the institution with great efficiency, and establishing a close rapport with his students. His most important decisions were the founding of the Orchestre des Cadets and of a chorus (so avoiding the evacuation of his pupils to Germany), and his invitation to Messiaen, despite much comment, to teach the philosophy of music, the origin of the analysis class that was to attract young composers from all over the world.

Delvincourt's music is marked by a Cartesian control which does not preclude the depth of feeling of his L'offrande à Çiva, the humour of his Croquembouches or the love of youth displayed in his Heures juvéniles. After Debussy and Ravel, he was one of the most ardent of French composers in trying to recapture the spirit of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, as in the Danceries. He died in a car accident while on his way to Rome to hear the première of his String Quartet.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: La femme à barbe (op bouffe, 2, A. de la Tourrasse), Versailles, 1938; Oedipe-roi (incid music, Sophocles), Orange, 1939; Lucifer (mystery, 1, R. Dumesnil, after Byron: Cain), Paris, Opéra, 1948; Le bourgeois gentilhomme (incid music, J.-B.P. Molière), Paris, 1948

Orch: Typhaon, sym. poem, 1914; L'offrande à Çiva, choreographic poem, 1921; Pamir, suite, 1935; Radio-Sérénade (1938)

Choral and vocal: Faust et Hélène (cant.), 1913; La source, chorus (1925); Nuit tombante, chorus (1929); Aurore, chorus (1931); Salut solennel, chorus, orch (1953); 3 choruses (R. Chalupt) (1953); Pater noster, chorus, org (1955)

Chbr: Le bal vénitien, 6 insts, 1931; Danceries, vn, pf (1935); Str Qt, 1953

Songs for 1v, pf: 6 poèmes (1919); Ce monde de rosée (Jap., trans. Couchoud), 1925, orchd; Chansons de la ville et des champs, 1934; 4 chansons (C. Marot) (1936); Un éventail, un sourire (1942)

Pf: Boccacerie (1926); 5 pièces (1926); Croquembouches, 1926, orchd (1954); Heures juvéniles (1931); Images pour les contes du temps passés, 4 hands (1935)

Principal publishers: Durand, Leduc, Lemoine

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W.-L. Landowski: L'oeuvre de Claude Delvincourt (Paris, 1947)
Le conservatoire (1954), May [Delvincourt number]
M. Sablonnière: 'Claude Delvincourt et les cadets du Conservatoire: une politique d'orchestre (1943–1954)', Le Conservatoire de Paris: des menus-plaisirs à la cité de la musique (1795–1995), ed. A. Bongrain and Y. Gerard (Paris, 1996), 261–81

ALAIN LOUVIER

Del Violino, Carlo. See CAPROLI, CARLO.

Del Violino, Giovanni Battista. See JACOMELLI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA.

Delz, Christoph (b Basle, 3 Jan 1950; d Riehen, Basle, 13 Sept 1993). Swiss composer and pianist. He studied at the Cologne Musikhochschule where his teachers included Karlheinz Stockhausen, Aloys Kontarsky, Volker Wangenheim and Hans Ulrich Humpert. He also studied with Pousseur in Liège. As a freelance composer in Cologne, Delz established his own publishing house and worked in the electronic studio at the Musikhochschule (1977–81). He performed as a pianist with Kagel and made several recordings for German radio. A performance of his orchestral work Im Dschungel at Donaueschingen in 1983 captured international attention. His honours include the Förderpreis of Cologne (1983) and commissions from WDR, the Venice Biennale, the BBC and the Lucerne International Festival among others. In 1982 and 1991 his music was selected to represent Switzerland ISCM World Music Days.

Two principles dominate Delz's work: those of stylistic pluralism and what he calls 'transcomposition'. The former involves setting up abrupt confrontations between quotations from, or stylistic imitations of, past music and the clichés of contemporary styles. In his 'transcompositions', on the other hand, Delz analyses real sounds and noises and transcribes them into music, with often surreal results. While the Kölner Messe (1977–81) uses taped sounds, such as those of human breathing, laughing and coughing, later 'transcompositions' employ purely instrumental means. In the Piano Concerto (1984–5), for instance, protest choruses, excerpts from Radio Teheran broadcasts and the sounds of aircraft taking off are all meticulously transcribed for the huge orchestral forces, creating a bewildering montage of sonic realities. The tension between anecdotal and purely musical ideas is equally a feature of Jahreszeiten (1988–9); notwithstanding the use of characteristic alienation effects, such as the retuning of the orchestral piano by a quarter tone, the resulting polystylistic conglomerate is one of great aural beauty.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Die Atmer der Lydia, op.5, 1979–80; Im Dschungel, op.6, 1981–2; Pf Conc., op.9, 1984–5; 2 Nocturnes, op.11, pf, orch; Jahreszeiten, op.12, pf, orch, 1988–9

Choral: Kölner Messe, op.4, chorus, tape, 1977–81; Arbeitslieder, op.8, solo vv, chorus, ww qnt; Solde (Lautréamont), op.10a, solo vv, chorus, perc, 1985–6; Ausverkauf (Lautréamont), op.10b, solo vv, chorus, perc, 1986; Joyce-Fantasie (J. Joyce), op.13, S, chorus, 2 pf, hmn, 1990–91; Istanbul, S, B, chorus, pf, orch

Chbr and solo inst: Sils, op.1, pf, 1975; Pf Qt, op.2, 1975–6; Siegel, op.3, 8 wind, perc, pf, 1976; Str Qt, op.7, 1982

MSS in CH-Bps

Principal publisher: Gravis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Erni: 'Komponist Christoph Delz', Basler Zeitung (5 Feb 1982)
U. Dibelius: 'Fasziniert vom Umweltklang: ein Porträt des Komponisten Christoph Delz', MusikTexte, no.6 (1984), 5–10
R. Brotbeck: 'Zwischen Transkomposition und Zitat: zum Komponieren von Christoph Delz', Dissonanz, xlviii (1996), 4–9
H. Rauchfleisch: Christoph Delz (1950–1993) (Bad Schwalbach, 1998)

THOMAS GARTMANN

Demachi, Giuseppe (b Alessandria, 7 June 1732; d ?London, after 1791). Italian composer and violinist. In 1763 he was first violinist in the town orchestra of Alessandria, and not a member of the Turin court orchestra, as many dictionaries state. He was in the service of Count Sannazzaro of Casale Monferrato from 1765 to 1769 (though in 1768 he is known to have been active in Saluzzo) and again from 1773 to 1776. By 1771 he had settled in Geneva, where in 1774 he was first violinist of the Concerto di Ginevra at the newly founded Société de Musique. In Geneva on 15 February 1775 he performed with the Czech clarinettist Joseph Beer. There too, he had his first works published by the editor Suzanna-Pernette Scherrer and worked with the violinists Gaspard Fritz and Friedrich Schwindl. He is listed in Casale until 1777. In 1791 he gave concerts in London, using the title maître de concert of the Princess Nassau-Weilburg. His works follow the galant style of Boccherini, but also employ a dramatic colouring in the manner of Tartini; his symphonies reflect the growing taste for programme music.

WORKS
principal MSS sources: D-SWs, I-Gl, Mc, Nc and Casale Monferrato, Archivio Sannazzaro

Sym., E♭; Le campane di Roma, sym.; 3 sinfonie concertanti, op.9 (Lyons, n.d.), op.10 (Lyons, *c*1778; Paris, n.d.), op.11 (Lyons, *c*1778; Paris, n.d.); Il corso del giorno alla campagna, sinfonia concertante; Vn Conc., op.12 (Lyons, *c*1779); Vn Conc., op.16 (Lyons, n.d.; Paris, n.d.); 8 vn concs.; 2 ovs., 1 dated 1767; 9 minuetti, orch, for Casale theatre, 1765; 6 qts, str qt/orch, op.3 (Paris, *c*1771; London, ?1775); 6 concertini, solo vn, 2 vn, vc, op.9 (Lyons, ?1775; Paris, n.d.); 27 trios: 3 for 3 fl, op.1 (Amsterdam, *c*1785; Berlin, n.d.), 6 for 3 vn, op.5 (Geneva, n.d.), 6 for 2 vn, b, op.8 (Paris, *c*1775; Geneva, *c*1773), 6 for 3 vn, op.15 (Lyons, n.d.; Paris, n.d.), 3 for 3 vn/fl, op.14 (Lyons, *c*1779; Paris, n.d.), 3 for 3 vn/fl, op.17 (Lyons, n.d.; Paris, n.d.); 12 duos: 6 for (vn, va)/2 vn, op.1 (The Hague, n.d.), 6 for 2 vn, op.3 (Paris, ?1774), 6 sonatas, vn, b, op.1 (Paris, 1769), 6 sonatas, vn, b, op.4 (Paris, n.d.; Geneva, n.d.); Sonata, C, Florence, 1772; other works, unpubd

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.A. Mooser: Deux violonistes genevois: Gaspard Fritz (1716–1783), Christian Haensel (1766–1850) (Geneva, 1968), 113–16
S. Martinotti: 'Alcune notizie sulla vita e le opere di G. Demachi', Quadrivium, xii/2 (1971), 175–195

SERGIO MARTINOTTI

Demachy, Sieur de. See MACHY, SIEUR DE.

DeMain, John (b Youngstown, OH, 11 Jan 1944). American conductor. After studying at the Juilliard School of Music, he joined the NET opera project as assistant conductor to Peter Herman Adler in 1969, and in 1972 won the Julius Rudel Award to be an apprentice at New York City Opera. Three years later he was named music director of the Texas Opera Theater, the touring arm of Houston Grand Opera. In 1976 he conducted the Houston production of Porgy and Bess, which he also took to Broadway and recorded, winning a Grammy in 1977 for the best opera recording. The following year he became principal conductor of the Houston company; he was promoted to music director in 1980, a position he held until 1994. With that organization he has been involved in many world premières, including Floyd's Willie Stark (1981), Bernstein's A Quiet Place (1983), John Adams's Nixon in China (1987), Glass's The Making of the Representative for Planet 8 (1988), Tippett's New Year (1989) and Moran's Desert of Roses (1992). He became artistic director of the company's New World programme in 1990, opening the European opera tradition to multicultural influences; his first project was a reworking of Astor Piazzolla's tango opera Maria de Buenos Aires which received its North American première in 1991. He was music director of Opera Omaha (1983–91), where he co-founded the Fall Festival, presenting new and rarely staged works. He was also principal conductor of the Chautauqua Opera (1982–7), and has appeared widely as a guest conductor in Europe (including the Wexford Festival) and the USA. DeMain has also worked with a number of symphony orchestras and in 1992 was the conductor of Domingo's Concert for Planet Earth, broadcast worldwide. In 1994 he became music director of the Madison SO in Wisconsin and artistic director of Madison Opera. In both capacities he has led a remakable revitalization of the area's musical life. In 1998 DeMain was appointed artistic director of Opera Pacific in Costa Mesa, California.

NANCY MALITZ/CHARLES BARBER

Démancher (Fr.: 'to shift'). In string playing, the shift of the left hand from one position to another. The term first appears in Michel Corrette's L'école d'Orphée, Paris, 1738.

See also SHIFT.

DAVID D. BOYDEN

Demantius [Demant], (Johannes) Christoph (b Reichenberg [now Liberec], Bohemia, 15 Dec 1567; d Freiberg, Saxony, 20 April 1643). German composer, writer on music and poet. A prolific composer, one of the most versatile in the Germany of his day, he was also the author of the first German alphabetical musical dictionary.

1. Life. Demantius probably attended the Lateinschule in his native town. In the early 1590s he may have been teaching at the St Lorenz school at Bautzen, where his school textbook Forma musices was published in 1592. In 1593 he matriculated at the University of Wittenberg, but he had moved to Leipzig by 1594 or 1595. There he published his first collection of music in mid-1595 and may have known Sethus Calvisius. In 1597 he became Kantor at Zittau, Saxony. In 1604 he was appointed in a similar capacity to the cathedral and municipal school of Freiberg. He held this position for the 39 years until his death and produced by far the greater part of his work during this period. In 1610 he bought his own house and in 1611 was granted citizenship, both clear indications that he quickly achieved success and prosperity at Freiberg. He knew much unhappiness in his family life, particularly as a result of the Thirty Years War. He was married four times and lost most of his children during his lifetime. He published little music during the last 20 years of his life, either because conditions prevented his composing much or because they militated against publication of most of what he did write.

2. Works. Demantius cultivated sacred and secular music in almost equal measure. He was an important composer of Lutheran motets during the period of transition from the Latin to the German motet. Whereas Trias precum vespertinarum (1602) and Triades Sioniae (1619) – possibly also the lost Laudes Sioniae (1642) – consist of polyphonic settings of the Hours and of the Proper and Ordinary of the Mass, Corona harmonica (1610) comprises Gospel motets, whose texts are central passages from the appointed Sunday pericopes. At the time, such 'musical readings' – a sort of musical preaching – came increasingly to be seen as the crown of liturgical music, a point Demantius undoubtedly wished to express by his use of the word 'corona'. In scoring these works for six voices he differed from the many other composers of Gospel motets, particularly Melchior Franck and Melchior Vulpius, who were mindful of the limited resources of most choirs. He was obviously fortunate in the forces available to him at Freiberg. These were not only singers, for the possibility of performance by instruments as well as voices is mentioned in most of his collections of church music. Nevertheless his motets are notable above all for their illumination of the texts, not just through word-painting but at a deeper emotional level. He is indeed one of Lassus's worthiest successors.

The influence of Lassus on Demantius can be seen at probably its most expressive in the St John Passion (1631). This fine six-part work, extended by a setting of Isaiah liii, is the last German motet Passion and the only one in which there is no trace of the traditional Passion tone. It is distinguished above all by cogent and dramatic treatment of the text. Demantius's sometimes bold and never merely conventional writing here and in his motets is enough to prevent his being regarded simply as a conservative composer. Yet he was an exact contemporary of Monteverdi, compared with whom some important modern forms and techniques are absent from his output. For instance he employed the basso continuo in only one extant publication, Triades Sioniae (1619) (and also apparently in the lost Laudes nuptiales, 1641); in the 1619 volume he described it as 'nova bassi et cantus generalis sive continui conjunctio'. Nor are any sacred concertos by him known. On the other hand, Protestant hymns and thus cantus firmus technique were of relatively minor importance for him, as they were for Lechner and Schütz, doubtless because he devoted himself to the formulation of a personal musical language. Only the funeral songs of the Threnodiae (1620), despite being scored for up to six voices, belong to the tradition of the homophonic hymn, with descant cantus firmus, established by Lucas Osiander in 1586.

The use of the words 'convivium' and 'convivalis' in the titles of two of Demantius's collections of secular songs (1608 and 1609) indicates that he intended all such pieces (though not those in the Neue teutsche weltliche Lieder, 1595) for choral societies and probably for his own at Freiberg in particular. (A convivium was a grand annual festival, lasting several days, which was attended by choirs from central Germany to which both adults and schoolboys belonged.) Some of these pieces too were performed by instruments as well as voices, and some are purely instrumental. In general, Demantius's secular collections show the great extent to which Italian dance-song forms of one kind or another had penetrated to Germany by the beginning of the 17th century. Even in these relatively unpretentious pieces he showed a preference for larger ensembles, for the 1608 and 1609 books are mainly for six voices and those of 1614 and 1615 consist of his five-part adaptations of three-part pieces by Gregor Lange (originally published in 1584), akin to Leonhard Lechner's versions (1579) of pieces by Regnart. As well as cultivating Italian dance-song forms, Demantius was, together with Valentin Haussmann, one of the first to introduce Polish folk elements into German secular music. Tympanum militare (1600) for six voices, which he partly expanded to ten voices in 1615, is a notably singular volume, consisting of martial songs that he was prompted to write by the recapture of the fortress of Raab (now Györ, Hungary) from the Turks. It has recently been shown that the texts of many of his secular works are probably by Demantius himself; he also published volumes of poetry.

In both of his theoretical publications Demantius worked along traditional lines. He won particular renown, however, for the supplement included in his widely disseminated and often reprinted Isagoge artis musicae from its eighth edition (1632) onwards. This supplement was the first alphabetical and also the most important German musical dictionary of the 17th century. Consciously drawing on Michael Praetorius's Syntagma musicum, Demantius increased the number of definitions given there by more than a third. He showed marked pedagogical leanings not only in his two works of music theory but also in his references to current teaching methods in several of his other writings that are concerned with religious and philosophical questions.

WORKS

Edition: C. Demantius: Neue teutsche weltliche Lieder, 1595. Convivalium concentuum farrago, 1609, ed. G. Becking, EDM, 2nd ser., Sudetenland, Böhmen und Mähren, i (1939) [B]

SACRED VOCAL

published in Freiberg unless otherwise stated

Der Spruch Joel ... sampt angehengtem christlichen Gebet ... in der ... gefahr, wegen der Türcken, nutzlich zu beten, und zu singen, 5vv (Nuremberg, 1596)

Trias precum vespertinarum, qua continentur canticum Beatae Mariae Virginis, intonationes cum psalmis, et clausulae in precibus vespertinis consuetae quas Benedicamus vocant, et ad octo usitatos tonos & ad duodecim modos musicos … expressa et decantata, 4–6vv (Nuremberg, 1602)
Corona harmonica, ausserlesene Sprüch aus den Evangelien, auff alle Sontage und fürnembste Fest durch das gantze Jahr, 6vv (Leipzig, 1610); 1 ed. in Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik, ii/1 (Göttingen, 1935); 4 ed. in Cw, xxxix (1936/R); 10 ed. P. Schmidt (Berlin, 1958–62)
Triades Sioniae introitum, missarum et prosarum, in festis praecipuis decantandarum, 5–8vv, bc (1619)
Threnodiae, das ist Ausserlesene trostreiche Begräbnüss Gesänge … beneben andern christlichen meditationibus und Todesgedancken, 4–6vv (1620); 18 ed. L. Schoeberlein, Schatz des liturgischen Chor- und Gemeindegesangs, i–iii (Göttingen, 1865–72)
Deutsche Passion, nach dem Evangelisten S. Iohanne, 6vv (1631); ed. in Cw, xxvii (1934/R)
Laudes nuptiales, 8vv, bc (1641), lost
Laudes Sioniae, 6–8, 10, 16vv (1642), lost
5 motets, 6, 8vv, ps, 5vv, 1618[1], 1621[2], 1623[14]; ps ed. in Cw, xxxvi (1935/R)

For MS works incl. 3 masses, *c*130 Mag, Lat. and Ger. sacred works, see EitnerQ

OCCASIONAL

published in Freiberg, unless otherwise stated

Epithalamium honori nuptiarum … Dn. Andreae Goldbeckii … cum … foemina Anna …Christophori Reichij, 6vv (Leipzig, 1594)
Epithalamion, auff den hochzeitlichen Ehrentag … Herrn Johann Beyers … und der … Jungfrauen Sabinae … zu Kempnitz, 5vv (Leipzig, 1595)
Melos eyphemetikon … iuvenis Nicolai Fritschii … decantatum, 6vv (Görlitz, 1595)
Nuptiis … Dn. Iohannis Salvelderi … cum … matrona Anna Hornia, 6vv (Dresden, 1604, repr. in Corona harmonica, 1610)
Threnodiae (Quis dabit oculis nostris fontem), das ist Sehnliche Klaglieder, über den … seligen Abschied des … Fürsten … Herrn Christiani II, 6vv (Leipzig, 1611)
Glückseliger Ehe Schatz (Jauchzet dem Herren alle Welt) dem … Herrn Johannes Reger … und der … Jungfrau Susannen … Reisiger, 8vv (1618)
Hochzeitlicher Davidischer Ehe-Segen (Wol dem, der den Herren fürchtet) … des … Herrn Heinrich Schönleben … und der … Jungfrauen Magdalenen … Tannebergks, 8vv (1618)
Euredikos armonikos (Gaudete filiae Jerusalem) super … nuptiarum solennitate … Domini Georgii Schölleri, foeminae Mariae … Casparis Dachsellii viduae, 8vv (1618)
Das ausserlesene und trostreiche Canticum, oder Symbolum, der heiligen Altväter und Kirchenlehrer Ambrosii und Augustini, Te Deum laudamus … zu Ehrengedächtnis Herrn Michael Rothen, 6vv (1618)
Der Weiber Ehrenschmuck, das ist Christliches Brautlied … auf die hochzeitliche Ehrenfreude Michael Prager, 8vv (1618), lost
Epithalamion, zu hochzeitlichen Ehren und Wolgefallan … Herrn Augusto Pragern … und der … Jungfrauen Marthen … Lincken, 6vv (1619)
Der herrlichste Brautschmuck … zu … Ehrenfreude und Glückwündschung, des … Herrn Tobias Damen … und der … Jungfrauen Even, 8vv (1619)
Manet immunitabile fatum … Braut-Lied … des … Herrn Johann Pragern … und … Frauen Dorotheen … Jöpneri, 8vv (1619)
Saccharatum conjugiale, Christliches EheLabsal … zu sonderbaren Ehren und Wolgefallen dem … Christophoro Heydenreiche … und der Jungfrauen Mariae … Holtzmüller, 8vv (1619)
Frommer Eheleut Hochzeit Geschenck, auff den hochzeitlichen … Tag des … Herrn Johann Hassen … und … der … Jungfrauen Susannen … Horn, 8vv (1620)
Hochzeitliche Concert-Motet, oder … Glückwünschung, auff das adeliche Beylager, des … Augusti von Schönberg … und … der … Jungfrauen Ursulae … Haubold, 8vv (1620)
Der CXXVII. Psalm des Königlichen Propheten Davids, auff das adeliche Beylager, des … Herrn Georgij von Walwitz … und … Catharinae-Sophiae … von Löwen, 8vv (1621)
Ehrenpreyss eines tugendsamen Weibes, auff den hochzeitlichen … Freudentag, des … Herrn Caspar Engels … und der … Jungfrauen Mariae … Schneider, 8vv (1621)
Encomium amoris, Ehrenpreyss der Liebe, das ist Christliches Concert oder Brautlied, auff die hochzeitliche Ehren Freude, welche … Herrn David Fritzsche … mit der … Jungfrauen Sabina … Lincken … gehalten, 8vv (1621)
Hochzeit Gesang, dem Herrn Joachimo Ludovico von Penzelin … und der … Frauen Mariae … Schmieden, 6vv (1621)
Deliciae & divitiae conjugales, Ehestandes Lust und Reichtumb (Wer eine Haussfrau hat, der bringt sein Gut) … auff die hochzeitliche Ehrenfreude, welche … Matthaeus Heinrich … mit Justitia … gehalten, 6vv (1622)
Dialogus sponsi & sponsae, cum voto nuptiali (Mein höchste Freud und Wonne) auff die hochzeitliche Ehrenfreude des … Herrn Johannis Caspari Nefens … und der … Jungfrauen Victoriae … Prager, 8vv (1622)
Morgenröthe, aller Seligen und Ausserwehlten … auff dero … Frauen Hedwig … Frauen zum Ravenstein … Leichbegräbnisse … gehalten worden … (Ach Gott wie kläglich und beschwert), 5vv (1642)
Ich bin die Auferstehung und das Leben, motet on the death of Johann Holewein, 6vv, 1607 (pr. in Corona harmonica, 1610), D-Bsb, LEm, NA; GB-Lbl; PL-GD, WRu, Wu: all inc.
Omen, in nativitatem … prolis masculae Domino Joanni Georgio Saxoniae Dresdae, 6vv, 1612 (inc. autograph), ?lost
Herr, nicht schicke deine Rache (M. Opitz), hymn on the death of Anna Horn, 1642, ?lost

SECULAR

published in Nuremberg, unless otherwise stated

Neue teutsche weltliche Lieder, 5vv (Breslau and Nuremberg, 1595); B
Tympanum militare, Ungerische Heerdrummel und Feldgeschrey, 6vv (1600; rev. and enlarged, 1615, see below)
77 neue ausserlesene, liebliche, zierliche, polnischer und teutscher Art, Täntze mit und ohne Texten, 4, 5vv (1601); 22 ed. in HM, cxlviii (1953)
Conviviorum deliciae, das ist Neue liebliche Intraden und Aufzüge, neben künstlichen Galliarden, und frölichen polnischen Täntzen, 6vv (1608)
Convivalium concentuum, farrago, in welcher deutsche Madrigalia, Canzonette und Villanellen, 6vv, zusampt einem Echo und 2 Dialogis, 8vv (Jena, 1609); B
Fasciculus chorodiarum: Neue liebliche und zierliche, polnischer und teutscher Art, Täntze und Galliarden, mit und ohne Texten, 4, 5vv (1613)
Erster Theil neuer deutscher Lieder, welche zuvor durch den kunstreichen und geübten Musicum Gregorium Langium … mit dreyen Stimmen componiret, jetzund … auffs neu gesetzet, 5vv (Leipzig, 1614)
Ander Theil neuer deutscher Lieder, 5vv (Leipzig, 1615)
Tympanum militare: allerley Streit und Triumph Lieder … jetzund auffs neue … gebracht … verbessert, augiret, und anderweit publiciret, 5, 6, 8, 10vv (1615; rev. and enlarged version of 1600 vol.)

THEORETICAL

only those on music

Forma musices: gründlicher und kurtzer Bericht der Singekunst für die allererst anfahende Knaben (Bautzen, 1592)
Isagoge artis musicae … kurtze Anleitung, recht und leicht singen zu lernen (Nuremberg, 1607/R)
Isagoge artis musicae … neben kurtzer, doch gründlicher Erklärung der … Wörtlein, so bey den … jetzigen newen musicis … in Gebrauch seyn (Freiberg, 1632; 8th edn of 1607 pubn); 'Gründliche Erklärung der Wörtlein' repr. in Eggebrecht; 10 fugues ed. H. Mönkemeyer (Wilhelmshaven, 1963)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BlumeEK; WinterfeldEK
R. Kade: 'Christoph Demant', VMw, vi (1890), 469–552
K. Stangl: Christoph Demants Lieder 1595 und Farrago 1609 (diss., Charles U., Prague, 1940)
I. Hasak: Christoph Demantius als Dichter (diss., U. of Jena, 1951)
H.H. Eggebrecht: 'Ein Musiklexikon von Christoph Demantius', Mf, x (1957), 48–60
B. Smallman: The Background of Passion Music (London, 1957, enlarged 2/1970)
I. Gallwitz: Die Neuen deutsche Lieder von 1584 und 1586 des Gregorius Langius und deren Bearbeitung durch Christoph Demantius und Henning Dedekind (diss., U. of Vienna, 1960)
D. Krickeberg: Das protestantische Kantorat im 17. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1965)

C.R. Messerli: The 'Corona harmonica' (1610) of Christoph Demantius and the Gospel Motet Tradition (diss., U. of Iowa, 1974)
D. Stevens: 'Choral Dialogues of the Renaissance', MT, cxxii (1981), 667–70
M. Brzoska: 'Die "Schrulle eines alten Mannes": zur Notationspraxis in der Jesajas-Weissagung von Christoph Demantius', Musica, xl/3 (1986), 229–33
B. Smallman: 'Pastoralism, Parody and Pathos: the Madrigal in Germany, 1570–1630', MMA, xv (1988), 6–20

WALTER BLANKENBURG/DOROTHEA SCHRÖDER

De Marchi, Emilio (b Voghera, nr Pavia, 6 Jan 1861; d Milan, 20 March 1917). Italian tenor. His voice was discovered during military service. He made his début at the Teatro Dal Verme, Milan, in 1886 as Alfredo, and sang in leading houses throughout Italy and Spain. In 1890 he was a member of the distinguished Italian company that visited Buenos Aires, and the following year made his début at La Scala. He was Puccini's choice for the coveted role of Cavaradossi in the première of Tosca (1900, Rome), which he also sang at Covent Garden (1901, 1905) and the Metropolitan. In New York he was an admired Radames, and in 1902 sang the title role in the house première of Ernani. In his last seasons at La Scala his roles included Max in Der Freischütz (1905) and Licinius in Spontini's La Vestale (1909). He made no commercial recordings, but a few fragments from Tosca recorded on cylinder at the Metropolitan carry dramatic conviction and ring out well on the high notes.

J.B. STEANE

Demars [De Mars], Charles (Paul) [le cadet] (b Sézanne, bap. 28 May 1702; d ?Paris, 4 March 1774). French organist and composer. His father and grandfather were organists in Sézanne. From 1728 until his death he was organist at the cathedral at Vannes in Brittany. His only known music, which has long been misattributed to his older brother, JEAN ODÉO DEMARS, is a set of four suites for harpsichord (Paris, 1735/R). In both style and organization they are more reminiscent of the harpsichord music of Handel than of other French composers. Three open with large measured preludes, only one includes a sarabande, and three close with gigues. The complete absence of character titles in the manner of François Couperin further sets the collection apart.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Bourligueux: 'Recherches sur les organistes de la Cathédrale Saint-Pierre de Vannes, de 1475 à 1790', Bulletin mensuel de la Société polymathique du Morbihan (1969), 149–72
B. Gustafson and D. Fuller: A Catalogue of French Harpsichord Music, 1699–1780(Oxford, 1990)

BRUCE GUSTAFSON

Demars, Hélène-Louise (*b c*1736). French composer. She wrote three cantatilles, Hercule et Omphale (dedicated to the Marquis Villeroy), Les avantages du buveur (dedicated to the Marquis La Salle) and L'oroscope (performed for the dedicatee, Mlle de Soubise, on 21 November 1748; the text was printed in the Mercure de France the following March). She appears to have been the daughter of Jean Odéo Demars; at the time of the publication of her cantatilles, she lived in the rue St Thomas du Louvre 'vis à vis La Galerie'.

For bibliography see JEAN ODÉO DEMARS.

JULIE ANNE SADIE

Demars [de Mars], Jean Odéo [Odo] (b Sézanne, 2 Feb 1695; d Paris, 7 Nov 1756). French organist and harpsichordist, older brother of CHARLES DEMARS. He married Geneviève Françoise Legris on 18 February 1734 and they had seven children. In 1726 he obtained the post of organist of St Jacques-de-la-Boucherie in Paris, and later he became organist of St Nicolas-du-Chardonnet. Several cantiques spirituels composed for the young ladies of St Cyr are attributed to him. Fétis ascribed to Jean Odéo a book of organ pieces engraved in Paris in 1747. The book is now lost, if it ever existed; it could in any case have been the work of Charles. At his death Jean Odéo lived in the rue St Thomas du Louvre.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; LabordeMP
P. Hardouin: 'Inventaire après décès de Jean Odo Demars, organiste', RMFC, vi (1966), 251 only

DAVID FULLER (with BRUCE GUSTAFSON)

Demawnde, William. See DAMAN, WILLIAM.

Dembiński, Bolesław (Gregor) (b Poznań, 9 May 1833; d Poznań, 7 Aug 1914). Polish organist, conductor, teacher and composer. His first piano and organ lessons were from his father Maciej (b Sarnowo, 24 Feb 1804; d Poznań, 1878). Between 1854 and 1866 he was, in succession to his father, organist of Poznań Cathedral; later, he held the same position from 1887 until his death. In 1866 he became conductor of the orchestra and choir there, directing the orchestra until its dissolution in 1875 and then the choir until 1881; he resumed in 1894, remaining until the year of his death. In 1860 he founded the first amateur male-voice choir in Poznań, and in 1869 the 'Harmonia' choral society. In 1870 he became conductor of the newly formed Polish Theatre in Poznań which he directed, with interruptions, until 1895; on 9 November 1876 he staged Moniuszko's Halka. In the face of great difficulties, Dembiński organized the first Polish symphony orchestra there.

Dembiński was an indefatigable propagator of Polish songs and a pioneer of the song movement in Wielkopolska (Poznań district). He founded many singing societies, including the Polish Association of Singing (1885), of which he was chairman and conductor; from 1892 he was the head of the Wielkopolska Association of Singing. He taught music at schools in Poznań, directed courses for the training of organists (from 1877) and was an expert in the craft of organ building; he also published articles on aesthetics, prosody and harmony in Polish and German periodicals.

As a composer Dembiński was largely self-taught, absorbing stylistic influences from Moniuszko and from Italian music. His cantata Pieśń o ziemi naszej ('Song of our Land') and the songs Pamiętne, dawne Lechity ('Memorable, Ancient Tales of Poland') and Wiwat wszystkie stany ('Hurrah for all the People') have remained in the choral repertory in Poland.

WORKS
(selective list)

all first performed in Poznań

Stage: music for 14 stage works, incl. Wariatka [The Mad Woman] (melodrama), 16 June 1870; Cyganka [The Gypsy Girl] (op), 1875
Sacred: 12 masses, incl. Missa solemnis, d, 4vv, chorus, orch, 1865; Stabat mater, 4vv, chorus, orch, 17 March 1910
Choral: 9 cantatas, incl. Pieśń o ziemi naszej [Song of our Land], 4 male vv, chorus, orch, 3 Feb 1875; Pamięci Chopina [To the Memory of Chopin], Dec 1899; numerous choral songs, incl. Pod Twoją obronę [Under your Protection] (Poznań, 1867); Pamiętne, dawne Lechity [Memorable, Ancient Tales of Poland], male chorus (*c*1880)

Inst: Album jubileuszowe [Anniversary Album] (Poznań, 1909); Dwie łzy [Two Tears], pf, op.50 (Poznań, c1850); works for orch, pf and org miniatures

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (Z. Grot); SMP [incl. list of works]
M. Noskowicz: 'Bolesław Rawicz-Dembiński', Życie muzyczne, v–vi (1947), 1–4
C. Sikorski: 'Bolesław Dembiński, 1833–1914', Wielkopolanie XIX wieku, ed. W. Jakóbczyka, ii (Poznań, 1969), 303–16

BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Dembolecki [Dembołęcki], Wojciech. See DĘBOŁĘCKI, WOJCIECH.

Dembski, Stephen (Michael) (b Boston, 13 Dec 1949). American composer, theorist and teacher. The son of a pianist, he first studied the piano and flute and later worked as a jazz and rock musician. He began composing while a student of John Ronsheim at Antioch College. After further study in composition at the Ecole Normale de Musique, and with the Schoenbergian Max Deutch, in Paris, and with the avant-garde jazz pianist Cecil Taylor, he moved to New York, where he worked with Bulent Arel at SUNY-Stony Brook. He was awarded the doctorate (1980) at Princeton, where his principal teacher was Babbitt. He has taught at Princeton, Bates and Dartmouth, and became professor of music at the University of Wisconsin.

Dembski's music, founded upon both tonal polyphonic models and twelve-note pitch structures, but reducible to neither, yields a broad range of musical surfaces, colours and sensibilities. Spectra (1985) reveals his characteristically deft and innovative orchestral writing, and a dramatic continuity at once vivid and subtle. The monodrama The Show (1986), for soprano and chamber ensemble, exemplifies an idiom that perfectly inflects the acerbic and elegant ironies of its text by Donald Barthelme, while Out of My System (1995) explores nuances of accent structure and polymetric polyphony in ways allusive to the modernist contrapuntal tradition and to tango music. Structural inventiveness is matched by a potential for drama, coherence and wit.

WORKS

Stage: The Show (monodrama, D. Barthelme), S, cl, vn, pf, perc, 1986; Three Scenes from Elsaveta (op), S, S, T, B, pf, 1992
Orch: Of Mere Being (W. Stevens), S, orch, 1982, rev. 1991 [version of song, S, pf]; Spectra, 1985; Refraction/Refracja, 1986
Vocal: They Flee From Me (T. Wyatt), Mez, a fl, 1973; Of Mere Being, S, pf, 1975; Adult Epigram (Stevens), S, gui, 1977; Caritas (Bible: Corinthians), SATB, 1980; Simples (J. Joyce), S, pf, 1980; At Baia (H.D.), S, pf/(S, vn, pf)/(S, cl, hn, hp, vn, va, vc), 1983
Chbr: Sound Beach, tape, 1975 [2-track version], rev. 1977 [4-track version], Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1977; Qt, fl, ob, vc, hpd, 1978; Stacked Deck, fl, ob, cl, bn, tpt, trbn, timp, kbd, perc, pf, vn, vc, 1979; Alba, fl, cl, vn, vc, bongos, congas, vib, 1980; Str Qt, 1984; Sonata, vn, pf, 1987; Needles and Pins, mime (opt.), vc, hpd, 1994; Out of My System, vn, cl, vc, bongos, congas, vib, 1995
Pf: Pterodactyl, 1974; Hard Times, 1978; Tender Buttons, 1978; Air for Ariel, 1979; Alta, 1981; Guerigny, 1983; Another Time, 1989; Migration, 1990; On Ondine, 1991; For Five, 1995
Other solo instr: Sunwood, gui, 1976; Matrimony Music, fl, 1977; Allemande, vc, 1978; Digit, cl, tape, 1978; Prelude, vc, 1978; Altamira, mechanical music box, 1983; Courante, vc, 1986; Fantasy, fl, 1988; Hornbill, hn, 1994; Memory's Minefield, vn, 1994

Principal publishers: Cambium Music, Theodore Presser with others: Lexique musical international (Paris, 1979, 2/1984 as International Musical Lexicon)

WRITINGS

ed., with J.N. Straus: Milton Babbitt: Words about Music (Madison, WI, 1987)
'The Context of Composition: the Reception of Robert Morris's Theory of Compositional Design', Theory and Practice, xiv–xv (1989–90), 187–202
'Misreading Martino', PNM, xxix/2 (1992), 312–17
'The Structure of Construction', In Theory Only, xiii/sum. (1996), 5–8

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.D. Wagoner: 'Composing and the Democratic Experiment', PNM, xxvi/2 (1988), 226–37 passim

MARTIN BRODY

De Meester, Louis. See MEESTER, LOUIS DE.

Demelius, Christian (b Schlettau, Erzgebirge, Saxony, 1 April 1643; d Nordhausen, Thuringia, 1 Nov 1711). German composer. He received his first musical education from the organist Christoph Knorr at Schlettau, after which he was for five years a chorister at the Gymnasium at Zwickau. In 1663 he became tutor in the household of J.C. Ernst, the mayor of Nordhausen. Ernst enabled him to go in 1666 to Jena University, where he became a member of the important collegium musicum and studied music with Adam Drese. In 1669 he became Kantor and schoolmaster at Nordhausen, where he remained until his death. In the intellectually stimulating environment of this Free Imperial Town he was able to develop his musical talent, especially as a teacher. The poem that J.J. Meier wrote on his death gives an idea of the esteem in which he was held. In 1686 he published the so-called Nordhäusisches Gesangbuch, the first Nordhausen songbook, entitled Schrifftmässiges Gesangbuch zu nützlichem Gebrauch … der Kirchen-Gemeinden in Northausen, which went into several editions. With his three-volume Deo et juventuti sacrum tirocinium musicum, he joined, like Demantius before him and J.R. Ahle some years later, the movement for reform in the teaching of music. The collection Vortrab der von Christiano Demelio gesetzten Motetten und Arien was apparently intended as the first of a series. Gerber saw in Demelius 'a talent for the expression of sad feeling', which may well have been prompted by the Pietism of Drese.

WORKS

Ruh sanfft, canon, 4vv (Nordhausen, 1679) [on the death of J.C. Ernst]
Die auff den Herren hoffen, funeral motet, 5vv (Nordhausen, 1680)
Schrifftmässiges Gesangbuch zu nützlichem Gebrauch … der Kirchen-Gemeinden in Northausen (Nordhausen, 1686)
Vortrab der von Christiano Demelio gesetzten Motetten und Arien, 4vv (Sondershausen, 1700); 4 motets ed. E. Anger (Berlin, 1963)
7 motets, D-Gs [1 dated 1710]
1 motet, Bsb

THEORECTICAL WORKS

Deo et juventuti sacrum tirocinium musicum, exhibeus musicae artis praecepta (Nordhausen, 1669)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; WaltherML
Katalog der fürstlich Stolberg-Stolberg'schen Leichenpredigten-Sammlung (Leipzig, 1927–35)
G. Schünemann: Geschichte der deutschen Schulmusik, i (Leipzig, 1928, 2/1931/R)
W. Reich: Threnodiae sacrae: Katalog der gedruckten Kompositionen des 16.–18. Jahrhunderts in Leichenpredigtensammlungen innerhalb der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik (Dresden, 1966)
A. Dürr: 'Eine Handschriftensammlung des 18. Jahrhunderts in Göttingen', AMw, xxv (1968), 308–16

G. KRAFT

Demenga, Thomas (b Berne, 12 June 1954). Swiss cellist and composer. Born into a family of musicians, he studied with Walter Grimmer at the Berne Conservatory, then with Antonio Janigro, Leonard Rose – at the Juilliard School in New York – and Rostropovich. As a composer he is self-taught. In 1991 he won first prize in the Tribune International de Compositeur in Paris with his work Solo per due. He has been a member of the Swiss Chamber Players, the Arts Ensemble Basel and the Camerata Berne. Demenga is an outstanding virtuoso with a lithe, athletic tone who devotes much of his energy to promoting contemporary music. Elliott Carter wrote Figment for solo cello for him. He works regularly with such musicians as Heinz Holliger, Gidon Kremer and Tabea Zimmermann and with his younger brother Patrick he makes up a formidable cello duo. Among his recordings are four Bach solo suites, Carter's Enchanted Preludes, Holliger's Trema, Sándor Veress's Sonata and B.A. Zimmermann's Sonata, a work he has championed in the concert hall. Recordings with his brother include Popper's Suite op.16 and the 12 Hommages à Paul Sacher by various composers. He has also recorded improvisations for cello and organ. He has taught at the Basle Conservatory since 1982 and has given masterclasses all over the world.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Talbot: 'Contemporary Explorer', The Strad, cvii (1996), 996–1001

TULLY POTTER

Demény, János (b Budapest, 23 Sept 1915; d Budapest, 31 March 1993). Hungarian musicologist. He took the doctorate of laws at Budapest University (1939) and studied music at the piano faculty of the Fodor School of Music, Budapest. In 1967 he took the CSc with a dissertation on Bartók's early development. His research is centred on Bartók: he has published some small-scale biographies (the first in 1946), and in 1947 became responsible for the collection and publication of Bartók's letters; his documentary biography was published in Zenetudományi tanulmányok between 1954 and 1962. Among his many other musicological works are studies of Endre Székely, János Seprődi, Sándor Veress and Antal Molnár. Much of his writing deals with the question of the synthesis of music and other arts. He was awarded the Erkel Prize in 1974.

WRITINGS

Bartók (Budapest, 1946)
ed.: Bartók Béla: levelek, fényképek, kéziratok, kották [Bartók: letters, photographs, manuscripts, music], i (Budapest, 1948); Bartók Béla levelei, ii (Budapest, 1951); iii (Budapest, 1955, with V. Cosma and L. Burlas); iv (Budapest, 1971)
'Bartók Béla tanulóévei és romantikus korszaka' [Bartók's years of study and his romantic period], ZT, ii (1954), 323–487
'Seprődi János születésének nyolcvanadik évfordulójára' [On the 80th anniversary of Seprődi's birth], Új zenei szemle, v/7–8 (1954), 35–8
'Bartók Béla művészi kibontakozásának évei (1906–1914)' [The years of Bartók's artistic development], ZT, iii (1955), 286–459
'Bartók Béla megjelenése az európai zeneéletben (1914–1926)' [Bartók's appearance in European musical life], ZT, vii (1959), 5–425
ed.: Béla Bartók: ausgewählte Briefe (Budapest, 1960)
'The Results and Problems of Bartók Research in Hungary', New Hungarian Quarterly, ii/1 (1961), 9–31; repr. in Bartók Studies, ed. T. Crow (Detroit, 1976), 221–48
'Bartók Béla pályája delelőjén (1927–1940)' [Bartók at the peak of his career], ZT, x (1962), 189–727
'Zenei köztudat: magyar valóság' [General musical knowledge: the reality in Hungary], Jelenkor, vi (1963), 263–7
'Bartók Béla szülőföldje' [Bartók's motherland], Kortárs, ix (1965), 1420–32
'A szecesszió a zenében' [Secession in music], Filológiai közlöny, xiii (1967), 221–6 [on Bartók in relation to Busoni, Reger and Delius]
Fejezetek Bartók Béla művészi kibontakozásának első éveiből [Chapters from the early years of Bartók's artistic development] (diss., Hungarian Academy of Sciences, 1967)
Bartók Béla, a zongoraművész [Bartók, the pianist] (Budapest, 1968)
ed.: Béla Bartók: lettere scelte (Milan, 1969)
'Székely Imre életműve a lemezszám-kutatás tükrében' [Imre Székely's life-work reflected in plate number research], Szabolcsi Bence 70. születésnapjára, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1969), 201–14
'Two Hungarians Abroad, i: Sándor Veress', Tempo, no.88 (1969), 19–22
'Bartók találkozása Adyval: Bartók könyvtárának Ady-kötetei' [Bartók's meeting with Ady: the Ady volumes in Bartók's library], Magyar zene, xii (1971), 11–18; Ger. trans. in Conference in Commemoration of Béla Bartók: Budapest 1971, 111–20
ed.: Béla Bartók: Letters (Budapest and London, 1971)
Csáth Géza: éjszakai esztetizálás [Géza Csáth: on aesthetics at night] (Budapest, 1971)
'A propos du Kalevala en Hongrie', Mélanges offerts à Aurélien Sauvageot pour son soixante-quinzième anniversaire (Budapest, 1972), 57–60
'Adatok Bartók szülővárosának művelődéstörténetéhez' [Data on the cultural history of Bartók's birthplace], Mosonyi Mihály és Bartók Béla emlékére, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1973), 213–24
ed.: Béla Bartók: Briefe, i–ii (Budapest, 1973)
ed.: Bartók Béla levelei (Budapest, 1976)
'Bartók Béla és a Zeneakadémia' [Bartók and the Music Academy], A Liszt Ferenc Zeneművészeti Főiskola 100 éve, ed. J. Ujfalussy (Budapest, 1977), 130–43
'Kodály Zoltán kilenc levele' [9 letters of Kodály], 'Adatok Balázs Béla és Bartók Béla kapcsolatához' [Facts regarding the relationship between Balázs and Bartók], Kodály Zoltán emlékére, ed. F. Bónis (Budapest, 1977), 210–16, 361–76 with M. Berlász and E. Terényi: Veress Sándor (Budapest, 1982)
Rézkarcok hidegtűvel: esszék, tanulmányok [Brass etchings with a dry point: essays, studies] (Budapest, 1985)
'Liszt-problémák 1986', Szekszárd és a nagyvilág, ed. L. Csányi (Szekszárd, 1987), 24–34
'The Pianist', The Bartók Companion, ed. M. Gillies (London, 1993), 64–78

MÁRTA SZEKERES-FARKAS/R

Demessieux, Jeanne (b Montpellier, 14 Feb 1921; d Paris, 11 Nov 1968). French organist and composer. She became organist of the church of the St Esprit, Paris, in 1933, moving to Ste Marie-Madeleine in 1962. A pupil of Magda Tagliafero, Jean and Noël Gallon, and Dupré at the Paris Conservatoire, she won premiers prix in harmony (1937), piano (1938), fugue and counterpoint (1940) and organ (1941). She continued her studies in organ playing, improvisation and composition with Dupré before giving her first public recital in Paris at the Salle Pleyel in 1946. She then travelled extensively as a recitalist, often visiting England where her first London recital (1947) ended with the improvisation of a four-movement organ symphony on themes submitted by four London music critics. She toured North America in 1953, 1955 and 1958. In 1952 she became organ professor at the Liège Conservatory, and in 1962 organist of the Madeleine. The first woman invited to play in Westminster Cathedral and Westminster Abbey, she also took part in the inaugural ceremony at the Metropolitan Cathedral in Liverpool (1967). Demessieux's prodigious technique was apparent at the outset of her career. In the years before her untimely death she revealed greater involvement with the music she played, suggesting that she had barely reached the zenith of her powers as an interpreter. Her published organ works are six Etudes (1946), Sept méditations sur le Saint Esprit (1947), Triptyque op.7 (1949), Poème for organ and orchestra op.9 (1949), 12 Chorale Preludes on Gregorian Themes op.8 (1954), Te Deum op.11 (1965), Prelude and Fugue in C op.12 (1965) and Répons pour le temps de Pâques (1968; published posthumously). Other works include La chanson de Roland for mezzo-soprano, choir and orchestra (unpublished) and Ballade for horn and piano op.10 (1958). Several of her recorded performances were reissued during the 1990s by the Dutch label Festivo.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Denis: 'Les organistes français d'aujourd'hui: Jeanne Demessieux', L'orgue, nos.74–7 (1955), 37–44

J. Piccand: 'Quelques organistes français (3e série)', SMz, cv (1965), 358–9

FELIX APRAHAMIAN/PAUL HALE

De Mey, Guy (b Hamme, 4 Aug 1955). Belgian tenor. He studied at the Brussels Conservatory, and at Amsterdam with Erna Spoorenberg and Stella Dalberg. Later teachers included Peter Pears and Eric Tappy. His operatic career has been varied and he has proved himself a fluent interpreter of styles ranging from the 17th century to the 20th, but it is in Baroque opera that he has gained widest recognition. He sang the title role in Lully's Atys in Paris (1987), Florence and New York. Other roles include Alidoro in Cesti's Orontea (1986, Innsbruck), Rameau's Hippolytus (1987, Reggio nell'Emilia), Aegeus in Cavalli's Giasone (1988, Innsbruck) and Eurymachus in Monteverdi's Il ritorno d'Ulisse in patria (1989, Mezières). He is also a noted singer of Bach, particularly of the Evangelist in the St Matthew Passion, which he has recorded to acclaim. His operatic recordings include Monteverdi's Orfeo and L'incoronazione di Poppea, Orontea, Cavalli's Xerse and Giasone, Atys, Handel's Alessandro, Telemann's Der geduldige Socrates and Rameau's Platée.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON

De Mey, Thierry (b Brussels, 28 Feb 1956). Belgian composer and film director. He studied cinema at the Brussels Institut des Arts et de Diffusion, and then became interested in rhythm and dance. He studied composition with Fernand Schirren at Mudra, the college of dance founded in Brussels by Maurice Béjart. His creative activities thus early became centred on the interdisciplinary conjunction of music, cinema and dance. He has composed and made films for, among others, the choreographers Anne-Teresa De Keersmaeker, Wim Vandekeybus, and his sister Michèle-Anne De Mey. In 1984 he founded the Maximalist! ensemble, consisting of other composer-interpreters and improvisers with an interest in dance. Later he was also involved in founding the Brussels-based Ictus Ensemble. With these groups, De Mey has steadily developed his musical style for the concert hall and enriched the rhythmic and timbral aspects of his compositions. He has also benefited from his contacts with specialist interpreters, such as the Arditti Quartet and the Hilliard Ensemble, and the courses he has followed at IRCAM, where he has developed a style of his own based on the analysis of sound spectra and their transformation into harmonic and rhythmic resources. It was also at IRCAM that he produced the music for a short film, Tippeke, choreographed and danced by Anne-Teresa De Keersmaeker, in which music, text, movement and the sounds recorded during filming are closely interwoven. His works both for the concert hall and the stage are frequently played all over the world. He has been awarded many prizes, in particular for his activities in the field of dance and for the films he has directed.

WORKS
(selective list)

Film scores: Love Sonnets, 1994; Rosas danst Rosas, 1997; Tippeke, 1997

Other works: Chaîne, 2 pf (1989); Frisking, 11 perc (1990); Amor constante mas alla de la muerte (1994); Polvo enamorado, Ct, wind, hp, 1996; Tippeke, vc, elecs, 1997; Kinok, ens; Mouvement, str qt; Musique de tables; Suite, vn

ERIC DE VISSCHER

DeMezzo, Pietro (b Venice, *c*1730; d ?Venice, after 1794). Italian singer, teacher and composer. Although described as both a baritone and a tenor in contemporary writings, he has previously often been classified as a tenor, perhaps because of his ability to execute florid coloratura passages and because he specialized in serious operatic roles and sang sacred music. Some of his roles were also notated in the tenor clef rather than the baritone or bass. This is not unusual at the time, however, as there were a number of male opera singers who sang both tenor and high baritone roles, as commonly required in comic operas during the second half of the 18th century. Other well-known buffo singers of the period, including Filippo Laschi and Stefano Mandini, were also variously referred to as tenor and baritone.

DeMezzo was often described as Venetian (except in the 1754 libretto of Galuppi's Antigona where he is called 'della Bragola') and frequently appeared at the Venice theatres during the spring and autumn seasons, singing in other Italian cities (including Naples, Rome, Parma, Turin, Milan, Mantua and Verona) during Carnival. He sang in Vienna in 1756 where he created the role of Alessandro in Gluck's Il re pastore. Excluding a few castratos, notably Pacchierotti, DeMezzo was the highest-paid singer in the choir of S Marco for several decades. Towards the end of his career he sang increasingly often in Venetian operas and occasional cantatas as well as in oratorios by local composers, including Bertoni and Furlanetto. During the 1770s he taught singing to the ladies of the Pietà and Incurabili, but many of his solfeggi, dated as late as 1794, were written for a Venetian priest, V. Bratti, who sang bass. Besides nearly 200 vocal exercises (for all vocal ranges with and without accompaniment) he composed a dozen texted Duetti da studio which gained considerable popularity during his lifetime.

WORKS

12 duetti da studio, 1764, GB-Lbl, I-Bc, Pca, Rc, Vnm

178 solfeggi, 1791–4, Vnm

Laudate Dominum, S, A, T, B, 2 ob, 2 hn, str, org, Vnm

Propter Dominum Domini, inc., Vnm

Verbum Christi (20 versets for Palm Sunday 1777), S, bc, Vnm

Lamentations for Good Friday, B/A, bc, F-Pn

3 psalms, 4vv, I-Vs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CaffiS

E.A. Cicogna: Delle inscrizioni veneziani, v (Venice, 1842), 330

T. Wiel: I teatri musicali veneziani del Settecento (Venice, 1897/R), 199

D. Arnold: 'Orphans and Ladies: the Venetian Conservatoires (1680–1790)', PRMA, lxxxix (1962–3), 31–47

S.H. Hansell: 'Sacred Music at the Incurabili in Venice at the Time of J.A. Hasse', JAMS, xxiii (1970), 282–301, 505–21, esp. 512

G. Zechmeister: Die Wiener Theater nächst der Burg und nächst dem Kärntnerthor von 1747 bis 1776 (Vienna, 1971), 233

D. and E. Arnold: The Oratorio in Venice (London, 1986), 39

SVEN HANSELL/KAY LIPTON

Demian, Wilhelm [Vilmos] (b Braşov, 9/22 June 1910). Romanian composer and conductor of Hungarian descent. After attending the Braşov Conservatory (1925–8)

he studied composition with Stöhr at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik (1929–33). Demian conducted the Karl Goldmark Orchestra in Cluj (1935–40) and the Transylvania PO (1948–9), then in 1949 became conductor of the Hungarian Opera in Cluj and a lecturer at the Cluj Academy; he also directed the Cluj PO (1955–6). Though Demian started to compose in 1927, his main period of compositional output began in 1947 with the Symphony no.1. His style has remained within the limits of post-Romanticism. The opera Capcana, his best work, displays his fascination for the musical theatre. His writings include Teoria instrumentelor (Bucharest, 1968).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Richard III (incid music, W. Shakespeare), 1949; Bánk bán (incid music, J. Katona), 1953; Capcana [The Trap] (op, 1, A. Szingerger), 1965; Uşa turnantă [The Revolving Door] (musical, 3, Ö. Sárossy and B. Horváth), 1967; Pereg a film [It was Filmed] (musical, 3), 1973

Inst: Preludiu şi Fugă, orch, 1927; Berceuse, pf, 1928; Sym. no.1, 1947; Pf Concertino, 1953; Vn Conc., 1956; Sym. Variations, 1961; Ob Conc., 1963

Pieces for children's chorus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Szabolcsi and A. Tóth, ed.: Zenei lexicon [Musical dictionary] (Budapest, 2/1965)

V. Cosma: Muzicieni români (Bucharest, 1970)

OCTAVIAN COSMA

De Michaele, Antoninus. See DI MICHELI, ANTONINO.

Demidenko, Nikolay (b Anisimovo, 1 July 1955). Russian pianist. He studied in Moscow with Anna Kantor and Dmitry Bashkirov, and was a finalist in both the 1976 Montreal International Piano Competition and the 1978 Tchaikovsky International Competition. He made his British début in 1985 and has subsequently toured throughout the world. In 1993 he gave a series of six 'Piano Masterworks' recitals at the Wigmore Hall, London, and in 1995 appeared in the International Piano Series at the Royal Festival Hall. The same year he collaborated with Anatoly Safyulin in a complete cycle of Musorgsky songs in London and Rouen.

A pianist of dramatic flair and virtuoso prowess, Demidenko has made numerous recordings, including a selection taken 'live' from his Wigmore Hall series, a disc of Medtner's solo piano works and his second and third piano concertos, the latter winning a 1992 Gramophone Award.

BRYCE MORRISON

Demierre, Jacques (b Geneva, 4 Nov 1954). Swiss composer and pianist. Essentially self-taught as a composer, he came to contemporary music from a 1970s rock-pop background. His compositions draw upon a wide range of influences, including improvisation, jazz, musical theatre and 20th-century art music. As a pianist he has performed with musicians and ensembles specializing in improvisation and has been active as a recitalist. He has also been associated with the Contrechamps ensemble of Geneva and has served as co-editor of the journal of the same name, a publication devoted to 20th-century music.

Demierre sees improvising and composing as complementary activities, and many of his pieces combine or explore the relationship between the two. In L'archer, l'arc, la flèche et le blanc an improvising pianist sets out both to stimulate and, in line with the work's subtitle, imitate an ensemble performing from a written score. Other works have a dramaturgical dimension, taking possible real-life actions or situations as their starting-point: in Bleu for instance the female singer is seized by a fit of laughter as she get up on stage, while Une table pour trois ou la troika s'ennuie involves three percussionists sitting around a table and striking it, the piece being based on the transformation of this commonplace gesture. Demierre has described his aim as being 'to confront, reunite and layer several worlds in such a way that they each pervert the other yet at the same time preserve their individuality'.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Désir d'azur (dance score, R. Juaroz), 8vv, 2 kbd, 1988; Jaune piano, actress, 20 children, fl + live elecs, pf, 2 perc, 1995

Inst: Sans issue, pf, 1982; The Case of Mr V., tuba, 1985; Musique festive, 7 brass, 4 elec org, 1987; Altus, org, 1988; Outward (Hommage à Eric Dolphy), fl, cl, 1988; Terminus, fl, pf, 1988, rev. as Terminus (Take Two), 1990; L'archer, l'arc, la flèche et le blanc (L'éloge de l'irritation), fl, cl, str trio, 2 mar, pf, 1990; Une table pour trois ou la troïka s'ennuie, 3 perc, 1990; Désalpe, mar, 1994

Vocal: Bleu (Demierre), 1v, 1986; Expinnocence (W. Blake), 1v, vc, 2 pf, 1986; Je deviendrai Médée (Euripides, H. Müller, P.P. Pasolini), 1v, 1986; Dinner-Time Blues (Demierre), 1v, b cl, perc, 1989; La morsure mélodique (F. Micieli), solo vv, chorus, jazz trio, orch, 1990; Portrait de ça en cale sèche (J. Roman), spkr, 3 female vv, chorus, tuba, accdn, 2 pf, 1991; Nous ici (Roman), 1v, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1993; La colonne brisée – Frida Kahlo (Sub-commander Marcos, F. Kahlo), 1v, 1996; The Languages Came First. The Country After (Demierre), 3 speaking vv, 1997

MSS in CH-BEl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Jacques Demierre', Musiques en création (Lausanne and Paris, 1989), 30–31 [pubd by Contrechamps for the Festival d'automne à Paris, 1989]

J.-P. Amann: Musique pour une fin de siècle: vingt entretiens avec des compositeurs suisses (Yverdon, 1994), 77–83

J. Demierre: 'Du geste à l'écrit', Passages, no.22 (1997), 31–3; Eng. trans. in Passages [Eng. edn], ibid.

JEAN-PIERRE AMANN

Demillac, Francis-Paul. See DJEMIL, ENYSS.

Dēmioergos (Gk.: 'maker'). A term used in a musical sense for a singer of epic. See HOMER, §1.

Demi-pause (Fr.). A minim REST.

Demiriş, Okan (b 9 Feb 1942). Turkish composer, conductor and violinist. He studied the violin at the Istanbul Municipal Conservatory, with Ekrem Zeki Ün, and at the Ankara State Conservatory. His early instrumental works draw on Turkish traditional music, while his later compositions display a more eclectic range of influences. With colourful orchestration, Demiriş combines a characteristically Turkish harmonic style with atonality, polymodality and the modal scales of Turkish traditional music in his three operas. Islamic mysticism and Turkish military music are major sources of inspiration. The librettos of his operas are from legendary subjects: Karyağdı Hatun, for example, is about a pregnant holy woman who craves snow in summer so makes it snow. His works are often performed by state institutions in Turkey with his wife, the soprano Leyla Demiriş, in the leading role. Demiriş has an honorary doctorate from Bosphorus University.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Murat IV, 1979; Karyağdı Hatun, 1983; Yusuf and Züleyha (Joseph and Potiphar's Wife), 1988

Orch: Handere, 1965; Pasinler, 1966; Doğu, 1969; Hançerli Düzü, 1969; Posof-Digor, 1969; Pf Conc., 1971; Petite suite, 1972; Girne, 1978
Vocal: Concert Arias, 1973; Folk Song Arrs., 1974; Dadaşıum, S, orch, 1985

MÜNİR NURETTİN BEKEN

Demisemiquaver (Fr. triple croche; Ger. Zweiunddreissigstel-Note; It. biscroma; Lat. fusella; Sp. fusa). In Western notation the note that is half the value of a semiquaver, hence its name, and twice that of a hemidemisemiquaver. In American usage it is called a 32nd-note.

It is first found in early 16th-century sources of instrumental music, in the form of either a minim with four flags or a coloured (i.e. black) minim with three flags. The demisemiquaver is still in regular use, although in common with other notes it now has a round note head. Its various forms and thedemisemiquaver rest are shown in ex.1a–d. The alternative term 'demiquaver' is occasionally found.

See also NOTE VALUES.

See also NOTE VALUES.

JOHN MOREHEN/RICHARD RASTALL

Demi-soupir (Fr.). (1) A quaver REST.
(2) See SUSPENSION, §2.

Demiton (Fr.). See SEMITONE.

Demmler [Demler, Dümmler], Johann Michael (b Hiltenfingen, Swabia, bap. 28 Sept 1748; d Augsburg, 6 May 1785). German composer. He was a choirboy and later a 'Marianer' (chorister) at Augsburg Cathedral and studied until 1769 at the Jesuit college of St Salvator. From 1770 to 1779 he was cathedral organist. After the death in 1772 of his teacher, the cathedral Kapellmeister J.A.J. Giulini, he also instructed the choirboys, including J.C. Drexel and Franz Bühler, both later Kapellmeisters of Augsburg Cathedral. Demmler appeared in Augsburg concerts as both a pianist and a violinist, frequently playing his own compositions; Schubart praised his talent for composition but criticized his lack of ambition. On 22 October 1777 Demmler partnered J.G.A. Stein and Mozart in the latter's Three-Piano Concerto (K242); in a letter to his father of 18 December 1778, Mozart recommended him for the post of cathedral organist in Salzburg.

Some of Demmler's compositions were known well beyond Augsburg, though they survive only in manuscript. They reveal a talented composer who wrote in a pleasant style influenced by the Italian manner but incorporating Baroque elements. Demmler also wrote a great deal of stage music, including works for carnival, for the theatre of the Jesuit college; Ganymed was first performed 12 years after his death. Many of the texts survive, but the music is lost.

Demmler's brother Caspar (bap. 5 Jan 1750) was a chorister at Augsburg Cathedral before serving at the parish church at Hall in Tirol (1774–89), and in 1803 was a bass singer at Passau Cathedral.

WORKS

STAGE

unless otherwise stated, performed at St Salvator, Augsburg; music lost; texts in D-As

Der heilige Alexius (Trauerspiel), 3 Sept 1771
Ulysses (Zwischenmusik), in Sesostris, König in Aegypten (Trauerspiel), 1 Sept 1772
Deucalion und Pyrrha (cant.), Augsburg, 'Auf der Herren Geschlechter Stuben', 1774
David und Jonathas (cant.), in Damon und Pythias, zween grossmüthige Freunde (Trauerspiel, 3), 2 Sept 1774
Dasius, ein junger Blutzeug Jesu Christi (Spl, 2), in Trebellius, König der Bulgarer (Trauerspiel), 2 Sept 1774
Daniel (Trauerspiel, 3), 1 Sept 1775
Zwischenmusik for Philotheus (Drama), April 1776
Triumph der christlichen Religion (Trauerspiel, 3), 3 Sept 1776
Joseph, der Landpfleger in Aegypten (Trauerspiel, 3), 2 Sept 1777, text in D-As, Ngm
Der betrogene Bauer (pantomime), in Der Theaterfeind (Lustspiel, 5), 25 Feb 1778
Judith, oder Der Entsatz Bethuliens (Spl, after P. Metastasio: Betulia liberata), in Die Niederlage der Hunnen vor Augsburg (Trauerspiel, 3), 4 Sept 1780
Titus, ein edler Japoneser, und eifriger Christ (Trauerspiel, 5), 3 Sept 1782
Der betrogene Bauer (pantomime, 2), in Die wunderliche Haushaltung (Schauspiel, 3), 26 Feb 1783
Die Zerstörung Jerusalems unter der Regierung des Sedecias, Königes in Juda (Trauerspiel, 5), 2 Sept 1783
Jakob und Benjamin (Spl, 2), in Die sieben heiligen Schläfer (Schauspiel, 3), May 1784
Nilus, der grossmuethige Veraechter der Welt (Spl, 1), in Martinez, oder Die besiegte Rachbegierde (Trauerspiel, 3), March 1785
Ganymed in Vulkans Schmiede (Spl, 2), in Myrtil, oder Der gedemütigte Stolz (Lustspiel, 3), 30 May 1797, text in D-Ngm
Abraham und Isaak (Operette, 1), music and text lost
Die siegende Seele (Zwischenmusik, 2), destroyed

OTHER WORKS

Sacred vocal: *c*15 arias and duets, acc. orch, D-Bsb, Ed, Po, Tl, WEY; 7 or more masses, CH-BM, E, SO, Zz, D-HR, KZa, Rp; Gl, HR; Pange lingua, 4vv, ERP, POL, also attrib. P. Winter
Inst: Sinfonia, D-FÜS; other syms., lost; Hpd Conc., D, *c*1783, listed in Breitkopf catalogue, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB
C.F.D. Schubart: Ideen zu einer Ästhetik der Tonkunst (Vienna, 1806/R), 216
E.F. Schmid: 'Mozart und das geistliche Augsburg', Augsburger Mozartbuch, ed. H.F. Deininger (Augsburg, 1942–3), 40–202, esp. 120ff
A. Layer: 'Johann Michael Demmler', Landkreis Schwabmünchen (Augsburg, 1974, 2/1975), 496
H. Ullrich: Johann Chrysostomus Drexel (1758–1801): Leben und Werk, zugleich ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Augsburger Dommusik (Augsburg, 1992), 62–8, 76–86

ADOLF LAYER/HERMANN ULLRICH

De Monte Regali, Eustachius. See EUSTACHIUS DE MONTE REGALI.

Dempster, Stuart (Ross) (b Berkeley, CA, 7 July 1936). American trombonist and composer. After his initial training at San Francisco State College, he was appointed, between 1960 and 1966, assistant professor at the California State College at Hayward, instructor at the San Francisco Conservatory, and member of the Performing Group at Mills College. He was first trombonist in the Oakland SO (1962–6), Creative Associate at the State University of New York at Buffalo under Lukas Foss (1967–8), Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study at the University of Illinois (1971–2) and senior Fulbright scholar to Australia (1973). In 1968 he became assistant professor and in 1985 full professor at the University of Washington, Seattle.

Dempster is especially interested in new sounds and techniques, including those obtained through the study of non-Western instruments such as the Australian didjeridu. He has helped to enlarge the contemporary trombone repertory by commissioning and performing new works, notably Berio's Sequenza V (1966), and works by composers including Neely Bruce, Barney Childs, Donald Erb, Robert Erickson, Ben Johnston, Andrew Imbrie, Ernst Krenek, Edward London, Robert Moran, Pauline Oliveros, William O. Smith, Robert Suderburg and Raymond Willing-White. Many composers have dedicated works to him.

His recordings include Erb's Trombone Concerto. In 1988 he became involved in the composer collective, the Deep Listening Band, for whom he has written many works. He is the author of The Modern Trombone: a Definition of its Idioms (Berkeley, 1979/R).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. McCarty: 'An Interview with Stuart Dempster', The Instrumentalist, xxvii/10 (1974), 36–8
V. Sampson: 'An Interview with Stuart Dempster', The Composer, ix/8 (1978), 28–38; ITA Newsletter, vi/3 (1979), 19–24
R. Erickson: 'Working with Stuart Dempster', Music of Many Means, ed. R. Erickson and J. MacKay (Lanham, MD, 1995), 70–77

EDWARD H. TARR

Dempster, Thomas (b Cliftbog, Aberdeenshire, ? 23 Aug 1579; d Bologna, 6 Sep 1625). Scottish antiquarian and historian. According to his colourful but highly unreliable autobiography (1627, pp.672ff), he was a child prodigy from a Catholic noble family, educated variously in Aberdeenshire and at Cambridge, Paris, Leuven, Rome and Douai, and later holding academic posts at Paris, Toulouse, Nîmes, Pisa and Bologna; he was very quarrelsome and was imprisoned several times. Towards the end of his life two of his books were placed on the Index prohibitorum librorum, although he was subsequently reconciled with the pope.

In his principal work on Scottish history, also unreliable, the Historia ecclesiastica gentis scotorum, Dempster listed more than 1200 'Scottish authors' (including, for example, Boadicea) from the earliest times to his own period. These include the music theorists Jacobus Bassantinus (*fl*1564; Musica secundum Platonicos), Gregorius Bridlingtonus (*fl*1217; De arte musices), King James I (De musica), 'Anonymus Kilwinninus' (fl 1475; Nova musica ex Platone), St Moengal (fl 912 'or 50 years earlier'; De musica, De cantus ecclesiastici reformatione and De septem liberalibus disciplinis), and SIMON TAILLER; for all these Dempster quoted secondary sources. He also included more than 25 hymnographers ranging from bards of the 7th century to monastic authors of the late Middle Ages. The original manuscript of this book (F-Pn) differs in a number of points from the published version.

Dempster was a patriotic controversialist anxious to recreate a glorious past for the Catholic Church in Scotland, and to represent the 'haeretici' of the reformed Church as responsible for the wholesale destruction of ancient learning. For this purpose he did not scruple in the Historia ecclesiastica gentis scotorum and elsewhere to invent names and careers quite freely, and to lump his fictitious biographies together indiscriminately with genuine material. Nevertheless, many of his 'facts' have passed into later reference works. No systematic investigation has been made of his material; but all of it should be treated with extreme caution.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (H. Bradley)
T. Dempster: Historia ecclesiastica gentis scotorum (Bologna, 1627, rev. 2/1829 by D. Irving), ii, 672ff, article 1210
A. Ross: 'Some Scottish Catholic Historians', Innes Review, i (1950), 5

GEOFFREY CHEW

De Murska, Ilma. See MURSKA, ILMA DE.

Demus, Jörg (b St Pölten, 2 Dec 1928). Austrian pianist. He studied the piano and conducting at the Vienna Music Academy from 1940 to 1945. He was subsequently a pupil at the masterclasses of Gieseking and Yves Nat. He also attended courses with Michelangeli and Kempff. He made his début in Vienna in 1953, and has subsequently played in recitals and orchestral concerts in many countries. Demus cultivates a soft, flexible touch and expressive line, and his performances of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Franck and Debussy have been highly praised. His adaptability has made him a much sought-after accompanist for singers (including Schwarzkopf, Fischer-Dieskau and Ameling), violinists (including Josef Suk) and cellists (including Antonio Janigro). He has also played and recorded piano duets with Paul Badura-Skoda. Demus takes great interest in historical keyboard instruments and owns a remarkable collection. Some of his numerous recordings are played on such historical instruments. His writings include Abenteuer der Interpretation (Wiesbaden, 1967) and, with Paul Badura-Skoda, Die Klaviersonaten Ludwig van Beethovens (Wiesbaden, 1970).

RUDOLF KLEIN/R

Demuth, Norman (Frank) (b South Croydon, 15 July 1898; d Chichester, 21 April 1968). English composer and writer on music. He studied at the RCM with Dunhill until 1915, when he joined the army. Invalided out in 1916, he earned his living from 1917 as a church organist. As a composer he was essentially self-taught, though he received a good deal of encouragement from Dan Godfrey. His first orchestral performance came in 1925, when the Selsey Rhapsody was given by the LSO under Boult. Then for a number of years his music was frequently played in the provinces, and he conducted performances of his own and other works at various south-coast towns (he was a regular conductor of several choral and orchestral societies in south-east England at this time); but almost all of the pieces written before 1937 were later destroyed. In 1930 he was appointed professor of composition at the RAM, where he stayed for the remainder of his career, except for army service in World War II. He was secretary of the RAM New Music Society from 1936 to 1939. He was also made an Officer of the Académie (1951) and a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur (1954).

Demuth's sympathies were with French music from Franck to Roussel, though his music avoids the more superficial gallicisms. Its somewhat austere melody, in which definable tunes have little part, and its complex but subtle harmony display a more general affinity with d'Indy or Roussel. Certain works, such as the Threnody for strings, are almost Franckian in their intense chromaticism; others, like the Overture for a Joyful Occasion, have a Stravinskian brightness. In later works the harmony is rather hard and severe. Demuth's form is often cyclic, and in many cases a large-scale work is evolved from one or two short motifs.

WORKS
(selective list)
MSS in GB-Lam

DRAMATIC

Ops: Conte vénitien (Weterings), 1947; Le flambeau (Weterings), 1948; Volpone (F. Hauser, after B. Jonson), 1949; The Oresteia (D. Clarke, after Aeschylus), 1950; Rogue Scapin (W. Grantham), 1954; Beauty Awakes (L. Surrage), 1959

Ballets: Undine, 1927; Portia Mortis, 1933; The Flame, 1936; The Temptation of St Anthony, choreographic sym., 1937; Planetomania, 1940; Complainte, 1946; Bal des fantômes, 1949; La débutante, 1949

Incid music, film scores

VOCAL AND ORCHESTRAL

Choral: Pan's Anniversary (B. Jonson, J. Keats, P.B. Shelley), chorus, orch, 1952; Sonnet (J. Donne), Bar, chorus, orch, 1953; Phantoms (W. Whitman), Bar, chorus, orch, 1953; Requiem, chorus, 1954; Humanity, double chorus; many other works for chorus and orch, partsongs, church music and songs

Vocal: 3 Poems (F. García Lorca), S, str, 1941; 3 Poems (S. Zweig), 1v, str, 1944; many songs with pf

9 syms: no.1, d, 1930; no.2, A, 1931; no.3 'A Mystical Sym.', Bar, choir, orch, 1932; no.4, 1932; no.5, 1934; no.6: 1949; no.7, 1950; no.8, Str, 1952; no.9, 1956–7

Other orch: Selsey Rhapsody, perf., 1925; Ov. for a comedy, 1928; Meditation, 1930; Cortège, 1931; Introduction and Allegro, 1936; Vn Conc., 1937; Partita, 1939; 2 War Poems, pf, orch, 1940; Valses graves et gaies, 1940; Concertino, no.1, str, 1941; Elegiac Rhapsody, vc, small orch, 1942; Threnody, str, 1942; Divertimento no.2, 1943; Ov. for a Victory, 1943; Pf Conc., 1943; Suite champêtre, 1945; Ov. for a Joyful Occasion, 1946; Concertino, pf, small orch, 1947; Pf Conc., left hand, 1947; Legend, pf left hand, orch, 1949; 2 sym. studies, 1949, 1950; Mouvement sym., ondes martenot, orch, 1952; Ouverture à la française, 1952; Ballade, va, orch, 1953; Variations sym., 1954; Contemplation after François Villon, 1956; Vc Conc., 1956; Concert Ov., 1958; Partita, 1958; Sinfonietta, orch, pf, 1958; Org Conc., 1959; Elegy, cl, orch, 1962; Sym. elegy, pf, orch, 1966; Va Conc.

Military band: Dance suite, sax, band, 1928; Tango, 1929; Conc., sax, band, 1935; The Sea, 1939; Regimental March of the Royal Pioneer Corps, 1943

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

3 sonatas, vn, pf, 1937, 1938, 1948; Sonata, fl, hp, 1937; Serenade, vn, pf, 1938; Sonata, fl, pf, 1938; Sonata, vc, pf, 1939; Sonatina, 2 vn, 1939; Suite, cl, vn, 1941; Sonatine, fl, ob, pf, 1946; Capriccio, vn, pf, 1948; Trio, fl, ob, bn, 1949; Str Trio, 1950; Str Qt, 1950; Lyric Trio, fl, ob, pf, 1953; Suite, fl, ob, hpd, 1954; Qt, fl, pf trio, 1955; Suite de printemps, vn, pf, 1955; Le souper du roi, wind, drums, hpd, 1956; Divertissement, fl, pf trio, 1957; Pastoral Fantasy, pf qt, 1957; Jardin tranquil ondes martenot, pf, 1958; Primavera, fl, pf trio, 1958; Sonata, t sax, pf, 1961; Sonata, va, pf, 1964

Pf: Ov., 2 pf, 1938; Sonata, 2 pf, 1946; Sonatina, pf 4 hands, 1954; many solo pieces

Org: Suite pour la Trinité, 1952; Livre d'orgue, 1953; Pastorale, 1956; 3 Chorals, 1957; 2 Preludes and Fugues, 1957; Sym., 1957; Cantiones sacrae nos.1–7, 1957–8; Processional Fanfare, org, 3 tpt, 1958

Principal publishers: Bosworth, Editions Françaises de Musique, Williams

WRITINGS

Albert Roussel (London, 1947/R)
Ravel (London, 1947/R)
An Anthology of Musical Criticism (London, 1947/R)
César Franck (London, 1949)
Introduction to the Music of Gounod (London, 1950)
A Course in Musical Composition (London, 1951–9)
Vincent d'Indy: Champion of Classicism (London, 1951)
Musical Trends in the 20th Century (London, 1952/R)
Musical Forms and Textures (London, 1953, 2/1964)
French Piano Music (London, 1959)
French Opera: its Development to the Revolution (West Horsham, 1963/R)

COLIN MASON/ROBERT BARNETT

Dench, Chris(topher) (b London, 10 June 1953). Australian composer of British birth. He forms part of a group of young British-born composers who emerged around 1980, and were associated with the category of 'new complexity'. Dench is essentially self-taught. A recital by the pianist Roger Woodward in 1974 was a major compositional stimulus, and further encouragement came from Finnissy and the pianist-musicologist Malcolm Troup. Early works such as time already contain many essential features of his style: complex, fluid rhythms, pervasive quarter-tones, avoidance of dramatic gestures, and long lines from which rests are almost totally absent.

Initially Dench's approach to instrumentation was rather austere, despite the exotic choice of instruments in a work like énoncé. From the mid-1980s, following collaboration with the Australian flautist Laura Chislett (whom he subsequently married, emigrating to Australia in 1988), his writing became more obviously idiomatic and virtuoso, integrating various 'extended techniques'. In addition to many works for flute (notably sulle scale della Fenice), the main pieces from this period include driftglass and heterotic strings. Though never programmatic, many works have literary influences, ranging from science fiction to, more significantly, the anthropologist Gregory Bateson. His most important recent composition is the Symphony no.4 (propriocepts).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym. no.1 (mentation), 1977–80 [formerly titled Kinkiji]; Sym. no.2, wind orch, 1982 [formerly titled Paravents]; énoncé, chbr orch, 1983–4; Sym.no.3 (afterimages), chbr orch, 1987; Sym. no.4 (propriocepts), 4 amp vv, large orch, 1994–7

Chbr and solo inst: Phase Portraits, pf, 1978–97; Topologies, pf, 1979–80; time, b cl/basset cl, 1981; strangeness, str qt, 1984–5; tilt, pf, 1985; recueillement, gui, fl, ob, cl + b cl, perc, vn, va, vc, db, 1985–6, rev. 1997; 4 Darmstädter Aphorismen, fl, 1986–8; sulle scale della Fenice, fl, 1986–9; funk, b cl, perc, 1988–9; severance, gui, 1988–94; driftglass, perc, fl, cl, trbn, gui, db, 1990–91; 'atsiluth, fl + b fl, b cl, pf, 1991; 4 frammenti from Disegni Casentinesi, fl, ob, b cl, hp, mar + vib, vn, va, db, 1992; ruins within, cl, 1992–4; heterotic strings, fl, eng hn, b cl, vn, db, 1993; beyond status geometry, 4 perc, 1994–5; the heart's algorithms pf, 1999

Vocal: shunga, Mez, fl/b fl, ob d'amore, pf, perc, 1982; ik(s)land[s], Mez, fl, cl, gui, perc, vn, vc, 1998

Principal publishers: United Music Publishers, Australian Music Centre

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Toop: 'Four Faces of "The New Complexity"', Contact, no.32 (1988), 4–50
C. Dench: 'The Heart's Algorithms', Kunst im Wissenschaftzentrum (Berlin, 1989), 15–39
C. Dench: 'The Pattern Which Connects', Ossia, no.2 (1990), 26–30
R. Toop: 'sulle scale della Fenice', PNM, xxix/2 (1991), 72–92
R. Toop: 'Beyond the "Crisis of Material": Chris Dench's "Funk"', CMR, xiii/1 (1995), 85–115

RICHARD TOOP

Dencke, Jeremiah (b 1725; d 1795). American Moravian composer. See MORAVIANS, MUSIC OF THE, §3.

Dendrino, Gherase (b Turnu Măgurele, 3 Sept 1901; d Bucharest, 4 Jan 1973). Romanian composer and conductor. He studied composition with Kiriac-Georgescu and Castaldi at Bucharest Conservatory (1920–27) and studied law and medicine at Bucharest University. In 1932 Dendrino became conductor at the Alhambra Theatre then in 1951 conductor and director at the Teatral de Operetă; he briefly held a senior post in the Ministry of Culture. Known mainly as a composer of light music, he wrote songs that achieved great popularity due to their melodic fluency and harmonic ingenuity. His generous lyricism and theatrical instinct found expression in operetta. Lăsaţi-mă să cânt (1954) is centred on the life of the composer Ciprian Porumbescu, whose works Dendrino incorporates in the operetta.

WORKS
(selective list)

Operettas: Lăsaţi-mă să cânt [Let me Play] (3, E. Sever, L. Delescu and V. Cosma), 1954, Bucharest, Operetă, 30 Oct 1954; Lysistrata (3, N. Constantinescu and G. Voinescu), 1960, Bucharest, Operetă, 16 Dec 1960

Songs (1v, pf): M-ai spune-mi că nu m-ai uitat [Tell me again you have not forgotten me] (P. Maximilian), 1936; Să nu ne despărţim [Let us not part] (N. Stroe, V. Vasilache, S. Cristodulo), 1941; Cale lungă, drum de fier [Long Journey, Iron Railway] (Maximilian), 1948; Cine mi-e drag m-aşteaptă [Whom I love will wait for me] (A. Felea), 1948

Film scores: Afacerea protar (dir. H. Boros), 1954; Pe răspunderea mea (dir. P. Calinescu), 1956

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O.L. Cosma: Opera românească (Bucharest, 1962)
V. Cosma: Muzicieni romani (Bucharest, 1970)

OCTAVIAN COSMA

Denefve, Jules (b Chimay, 1814; d Mons, 19 Aug 1877). Belgian cellist, conductor and composer. He studied the cello (with Platel and De Munck) and composition (with Fétis) at the Brussels Conservatory, winning second prix for the cello in 1836; he never completed his studies but left to teach the cello at the Mons Conservatory, where he later became the director. He played in the Société des Concerts in Mons and in the local theatre. In 1841 he founded the Roland de Lattre [Orlande de Lassus] Choral Society, in which he established a solid reputation as a conductor. He also conducted the choir L'Amitié des Pâturages and the Société des Concerts in Mons. He won numerous prizes for his compositions, most of which were vocal. He wrote many works for four-part male choir, songs, at least four operas (of which Séguille was the best known), many works for wind band and some orchestral works. He was a member of several Belgian scholarly societies.

WORKS

STAGE

Kettly, ou Le retour en Suisse (oc, 1), Mons, 1838
L'échevin Brassart (oc, 3), Mons, 1845
Marie de Brabant (scène lyrique, 1), Mons, 1850
Séguille (oc), Mons, 1854

OTHER WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise indicated

Choral (4 male vv unacc. unless otherwise indicated): Récréations chorales, 10 choeurs (1854); 6 choeurs (1855); Récréations chorales, 6 choeurs (1859); 6 choeurs (1864); Venise, 3–4vv (1864); Le chant des jeunes soldats (A. Mayer) (1864); Premiers soleils (A. Gruson) (1868); Babylone (Duchemin) (1869); Boléro (H. Morellet) (1869); 4 motets (*c*1870); Caprice et variations (?n.d.); Requiem mentioned in FétisB; other works incl. cantatas

Songs (1v, pf unless otherwise indicated): La rêve de l'enfant (A. Daufresne) (Brussels, *c*1856); Captive (H. Laroche), 1v, pf, vc (*c*1856); Fête de Noël (Daufresne), 2vv, pf (Brussels, 1856); La Reine Louise (P. Braquaval) (Brussels, 1858); La mère du soldat (n.d.); Les caisses de retraite (n.d.); other songs

Chbr: Regrets!, vn, pf, org (Brussels, ?n.d.)

Kbd: Off, élévations et communion, org/hmn (Brussels, ?n.d.); 2 prières, org (Brussels, ?n.d.), arr. hmn (?n.d.)

Syms., ovs. and ww pieces mentioned in FétisB

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
E.G.J. Gregoir: Les artistes-musiciens belges au XVIIIme et au XIXme siècle (Brussels, 1885–90)

PATRICK PEIRE/SYLVESTER BEELAERT

Deneufville, Johann Jacob. See NEUFVILLE, JOHANN JACOB DE.

De Neve. See NEPOTIS.

Deng Lijun [Teresa Teng] (b Tianyang village in Yunlin province, Taiwan, 29 Jan 1953; d Chiangmai, Thailand, 8 May 1995). Chinese popular singer. Deng came to prominence at the age of 11, as winner of the national radio's song contest. While in her teens she toured South-east Asia with song-and-dance troupes, singing shidaiqu (contemporary popular songs). In 1973 Deng signed a Polydor contract that led her to Japan. From that time until her death Deng was revered as the most popular Chinese singer, admired by millions of ardent fans in mainland China, Taiwan, Hong Kong and throughout South-east Asia. She died of an asthma attack while on holiday in Thailand. The Teresa Teng Foundation was established after her death to promote cultural activities in Taiwan.

Deng was rare among her peers in singing successfully in the different languages and dialects of Japanese and Taiwanese pop as well as CANTOPOP. She also recorded some songs in English. She possessed a clear and sweet voice, and was worshipped by fans as the embodiment of grace, poise and beauty. Her rise to fame coincided with the opening of China in the late 1970s. Although her recordings and music videos were banned there until the late 1980s, she was nicknamed 'little Deng', the one who mesmerized the Chinese population via pirated tapes, in a country that underwent reforms by Deng Xiaoping.

See also CHINA, §IV, 6(ii); TAIWAN, §5.

RECORDINGS

Teresa Teng: Greatest Hits Vol.3, Polygram 3199-321 (1982)
Teresa Teng 15th Anniversary Album, Polydor 817-132-4, 817-133-4 (1984)

JOANNA C. LEE

Den Haag (Dut.). See HAGUE, THE.

Denièle, Pierre de. See NIERT, PIERRE DE.

Denis (i), Dom. See DINIS.

Denis (ii). See BRUMEN, DENIS.

Denis (iii). French family of instrument makers. Robert Denis (i) (d Paris, 1588 or 1589) lived in Paris from 1544 as an organ and spinet builder and he associated with the greatest French organists of his time. From two marriages he had at least five children, of whom three became instrument builders. His son Claude Denis (b Paris, 27 May 1544; d Paris, 1587) almost always bore the title 'maistre epinettier', but he also made violins, kits, lutes, guitars, mandoras and citterns. His trade appears to have been considerable, for an inventory drawn up at his death shows that his workshop contained more than 200 completed instruments and over 400 unfinished ones. As an organ builder he was evidently less successful; he satisfied his customers by passing his orders to one of his Parisian colleagues, Jean d'Argillières. Another son, Jean Denis (i) (b Paris, 23 March 1549; d Paris, after 1634), was a pupil of Gabriel d'Argillières. About 1574 he demanded a fee from his teacher, but this was refused; a violent quarrel followed in which d'Argillières was wounded. As a result Jean was imprisoned, and released only through the mediation of his father. Robert Denis (ii) (d Paris, Oct 1589), the third son of Robert (i), was also a pupil of Gabriel d'Argillières; he engaged in trade with Padua, Lyons, Venice, Brescia and Flanders. At his death he owned about 200 instruments, chiefly lutes, violins, kits, mandoras, spinets and guitars. He seems to have been closely associated with two court instrumentalists, the lutenist Jacques de Rais and the violinist Julien Perrichon.

Three sons of Jean (i) were makers of keyboard instruments: Thomas (b 1585; d *c*1619), Pierre (i) (b *c*1600; d after 1664), and Jean (ii) (b *c*1600; d Jan 1672) – the most outstanding member of the family. A pupil of Florent Bienvenu, who was organist of the Ste Chapelle, Jean (ii) became organist of Ste Barthélémy in 1628. Mersenne praises him as one of the three best exponents of spinet making, and the Duchess of Lorraine summoned him to Nancy in 1653 to restore her harpsichord. N.-A. Lebègue owned an instrument made by him, and in 1644 he was doing business with J.C. Chambonnières. In 1643 he published a Traité de l'accord de l'épinette (2/1650 published by Ballard). In this work Denis discussed the ecclesiastical modes and included a treatise on fugues, as well as giving practical advice on playing the spinet. He also criticized the too 'mathematical' musicians and argued for a pitch 'qui approche le plus de la musique vocale'. The treatise is especially valuable for its remarks on the usual practices of contemporary instrumentalists, in particular the relationship between organists and singers, and the position of the hands on the keys. Two instruments made by Jean (ii) are still extant: a double-manual harpsichord in the Hospice St Roch, Issoudun, dated 1648, and a spinet in the Musée Municipal, Varzy, dated 1667.

Three sons of Jean (ii) were also instrument builders. Jean (iii) (b *c*1630; d Dec 1685) was organist of Ste Séverin for some time. Louis (b 16 Nov 1635; d after 1704), who succeeded his father as organist of St Barthélémy, was instrument maker to the king, and his daughter married the organist Louis Marchand. A spinet made by him and dated 1664 is now in the Musée de la Musique, Paris. Philippe Denis (b *c*1645; d 2 Jan 1705) did not have a successful career, but a polygonal spinet made by him, dated 1672, is in the Musée de la Musique. His son Pierre (ii) seems to have been the last of the dynasty.

For more detailed description of some of the instruments by the Denis family, see HARPSICHORD, §3(ii)(a).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MersenneHU

J. Denis: Traité de l'accord de l'épinette (Paris, 1643; 2/1650*R*1969 with intro. by A. Curtis; repr. 1987 with Eng. trans.)

G. Chouquet: 'Etudes sur les facteurs d'instruments virtuoses: Richard, Les frères Denis, M. Dumont', Revue et gazette musicale de Paris, xlvii (1880)

F. Lesure: 'La facture instrumentale à Paris au seizième siècle', GSJ, vii (1954), 11–52

N. Dufourcq: 'Une dynastie française: les Denis', RdM, xxxviii (1956), 151–6

Y. de Brossard: Musiciens de Paris 1535–1792 (Paris, 1965)

M. Jurgens: Documents du Minutier central concernant l'histoire de la musique (1600–1650) (Paris, 1967–74)

FRANÇOIS LESURE

Denis, Claude (b Lyons, late 17th century; d Paris, *c*1752). French singer, theorist, composer and actor. He was the head of a theatrical troupe that played in Lille between 1715 and 1722, at Brussels in 1716 and in Antwerp in 1717. The title-page of his Nouveau système calls him 'formerly of the Royal Academies of Music of Lyons, Rouen, Marseilles, Lille, Brussels and Antwerp, and maître de musique of the cathedrals of St Omer and Tournai'. In 1730 he was married in Paris to Marie-Marguerite Lecouvreur, younger sister of the playwright. The dedication of Denis' Nouvelle méthode to the ladies of St Cyr suggests that he may have been involved in the musico-theatrical training offered at that school. In the 1740s and early 1750s, and perhaps earlier, Denis ran a music school in Paris; the school continued after his death under his son-in-law Jouve.

Denis' treatises enjoyed considerable longevity, one of them remaining in publishers' catalogues until 1791, although (as the Journal des sçavants noted in 1747):

> Mr Denis, who considers his musical treatise a Nouveau système, claims that there is no [other] art whose rules have been given with so little care and so little clarity. In order to give the rules of an art which has some certain principles, one must deduce them from theory; however, we have noticed, in the summary of rules that Mr Denis draws up, only those [rules] that are in all works of this sort, with the exception of some small changes.

Denis' privilège général for the Nouveau système mentions vocal and instrumental music by him, but none is extant.

THEORETICAL WORKS

Nouveau système de musique pratique qui rend l'étude de cet art plus facile (Paris, 1747)

Nouvelle méthode pour apprendre en peu de tems la musique et l'art de chanter (Paris, 2/1757, 3/1759)

Dissertation de musique sur le système de Denis (Paris, *c*1767), lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

La LaurencieEF

L. Lefebvre: L'orchestre du Théâtre de Lille (Lille, 1898)

M. Fuchs: Lexique des troupes de comédiens au XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1944)

NEAL ZASLAW

Denis, Jean-Baptiste (b Lyons, *c*1720; d ?Paris, after 1764). French dancer and composer. He first appeared on the stage at the Académie Royale de Musique in Lyons in 1739, dancing in Montéclair's Jephté and Destouches' Omphale. He may have been the Denis who worked in Paris at the Foire St Laurent and in the Grand Troupe Etrangère, between about 1738 and about 1742. In 1749 Denis arrived in Berlin with his wife, the ballerina Giovanna Cortini, called 'La Pantaloncina', and was shortly appointed maître de ballet to the Prussian court. He provided choreography and music for the ballets in about 50 stage works in which he and his wife danced, including Graun's operas Coriolano (1749), Fetonte (1750), Armida (1751), Britannico (1751), Mithridate (1751), Orfeo (1752), Semiramide (1754), Ezio (1755), Montezuma (1755) and Merope (1756), and Agricola's Cleofide (1754). (The ballet music in the DDT edition of Montezuma is by Denis, not Graun.)

The quality of opera and ballet at the Prussian court declined after the Seven Years War, and Denis left Berlin in 1765. If the French dance publications of the 1770s listed below can be attributed to him rather than Pierre Denis, the dancing-master Nicolas Denis or the musician Nicolas Thomas Denis, he may have finished his days in Paris.

WORKS

BALLETS

Music for ballets in *c*50 stage works (see above), incl. C.H. Graun's Montezuma, ed. in DDT, xv (1904)

DANCE COLLECTIONS

all published in Paris in the 1770s; may not be by this Denis

Les délices français, contredanse
La gaîté, contredanse allemande, [les figures] par Mr Mendouze amateur Les plaisirs du Colisée, allemande
Pot-pourri de la Chamboran, contredanse française, les figures par Mr [Prosper-Didier] Deshayes
La réjouissance Dartois, contredanse française
Le rendés-vous de la jeunesse, contredanse française

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Schneider: Geschichte der Oper und des Königlichen Opernhauses in Berlin (Berlin, 1852)
J.-J. Olivier: Les comédiens français dans les cours d'Allemagne au XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1901–5/R)
A. Mayer-Reinach: Preface to Carl Heinrich Graun: Montezuma, DDT, xv (1904, rev. 1958 by H.J. Moser)
L. Vallas: Un siècle de musique et de théâtre à Lyon, 1688–1789 (Lyons, 1932/R)
W.R. Trask, ed. and trans.: Giacomo Casanova: History of my Life (London, 1967–72)
B. Gérard: 'Inventaire alphabétique des documents répertoriés relatifs aux musiciens parisiens conservés aux Archives de Paris', RMFC, xiii (1973), 181–213

NEAL ZASLAW

Denis, Martin (b ?Paris, late 17th century; d ?Paris, mid-18th century). French composer and violinist. About 1700 he joined the entourage of M. Angran, conseiller du roi et auditeur en sa chambre des comptes, who encouraged and financed his musical education as can be learnt from the dedication of Denis' op.2. He may have been a descendant of the family of instrument makers of that name active in 17th-century Paris. Denis described his sonatas as sonates allemandes but, far from exhibiting German influence, they are in the French-Italian idiom cultivated in the sonatas of Anet, Senaillé and Leclair. The influence of Corelli is frequently evident.

WORKS

[12] Sonates à violon seul avec la basse, bk1 (Paris, 1723)
[12] Sonates à violon seul avec la basse, op.2 (Paris, 1727)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

La LaurencieEF; NewmanSBE

NEAL ZASLAW

Denis, Pierre [Pietro] (b ?France, early 18th century; d ?Paris, after 1777). French mandolin player and composer. He was active in Paris in the 1760s and 70s; around 1774–5 he visited England. In 1776 and 1777 he was listed in Parisian directories as maître de mandoline, but after 1778 his name no longer appeared, suggesting that he had either moved elsewhere or died.

Denis is best known for his French translations of J.J. Fux's Gradus ad Parnassum (Paris, 1773–5, 2/1780, 3/1788) and of Tartini's Traité des agréments de la musique (Paris, 1771, 2/1775); the latter may have been carried out under the aegis of Tartini's student La Houssaye, although in the preface Denis claimed friendship with Tartini and La Houssaye's name does not appear in the volume. (For published dances which may be Pierre Denis' work, see DENIS, JEAN-BAPTISTE.)

WORKS

published in Paris in the 1760s unless otherwise stated

Recueil de 12 petits airs de chants connus
2e recueil de petits airs de chanter ... et les folies d'Espagne, avec des variations faciles, 1v, mand
3e recueil de petits airs, 1v, mand
4e recueil de petits airs (*c*1770), lost
Les 4 saisons européennes, 1v, harp/gui/mand/vn/fl (*c*1774)
Méthode pour apprendre à jouer de la mandoline sans maître, i (1768), ii (1769), iii (n.d.); i–iii (2/1788) [also incl. music]
3 bks, each of 6 sonatas and duos, mand, vn

BIBLIOGRAPHY

JohanssonFMP
E. Jacobi: Preface to Giuseppe Tartini: Traité des agréments de la musique (Celle, 1961)

NEAL ZASLAW

Denis, Valentin [Emile Julien Ernest] (b Leuven, 18 Sept 1916; d Leuven, 2 April 1980). Belgian art historian and musicologist. He studied music at Leuven Conservatory and in 1945 he took the doctorate in art history and archaeology at the University of Leuven with a dissertation on musical instruments in 15th-century Flemish and Italian art. He became successively lecturer (1945), reader (1948) and professor (1952) at the University of Leuven and held professorships at several other institutions. An honorary founder-member of the IAML (1950), he was an executive member of many associations and foundations in Belgium and elsewhere. He accomplished various official missions in Italy, Canada and the Belgian Congo (now the Democratic Republic of Congo) and assisted in editing encyclopedias such as Kunst aller tijden (Amsterdam, 1962–3; Eng. trans., 1968) and Winkler Prins van de kunst (Amsterdam, 1958–9). Essentially an art historian, he had an encyclopedic knowledge of his field and specialized in the age of the Flemish Primitives; he published books on Bruegel, Jan van Eyck, Hugo van der Goes and Dieric Bouts. His approach to the history of music usually had an art historian's bias, with particular attention to iconographical source material. His study of musical instruments in 15th-century art may be considered a standard work.

WRITINGS

'La représentation des instruments de musique dans les arts figurés du XVe siècle en Flandre et en Italie', Bulletin de l'Institut historique belge de Rome, xxi (1941), 327–45
Het volkslied in Vlaanderen tot omstreeks 1600 (Brussels, 1942)
De muziekinstrumenten in de Nederlanden en in Italië naar hun afbeelding in de 15e-eeuwsche kunst (diss., U. of Leuven, 1945; Antwerp, 1944) [partial Eng. trans. in GSJ, ii (1949), 32–46]
'Guillaume Lekeu (1870–94) et Henri Evenepoel (1872–91)', Hommage à Charles van den Borren, ed. S. Clercx and A. vander Linden (Antwerp, 1945), 163–74
'De muziek bij Vondel', Mélanges Ernest Closson (Brussels, 1948), 88–109
De muziek in de schilderkunst (Amsterdam, 1949)
'La musique et la musicologie dans les universités catholiques', Congresso internazionale di musica sacra [I] Rome 1950, 287–90
'La vie théâtrale', La musique en Belgique du Moyen Age à nos jours, ed. E. Closson and C. van den Borren (Brussels, 1950), 367–81
'Les buts et les moyens des bibliothèques des conservatoires', Weltkongress der Musikbibliotheken II: Lüneburg 1950, 4–7
'Echanges et prêts internationaux de musique', Congrès des bibliothèques musicales III: Paris 1951, 56–62
'Saint Job, patron des musiciens', Revue belge d'archéologie et d'histoire de l'art, xxi (1952), 253–98
'L'éducation musicale dans les universités d'Europe', La musique dans l'éducation: Brussels 1953 (Paris, 1955), 151

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Willaert: 'Denis, Valentin', Winkler Prins encyclopedie van Vlaanderen, ed. R.F. Lissens and others (Brussels, 1972–4)

GODELIEVE SPIESSENS/SYLVIE JANSSENS

Denis d'or [goldene Dionys]. A keyboard instrument developed by Prokop Diviš (b Senftenberg, 1 Aug 1696; d Prendnitz, 21 Dec 1765), a Bohemian priest, in Prendnitz, near Znaim (now Znojmo), between about 1730 and 1762. His researches into static electricity led to the invention of a lightning conductor in 1754 (contemporaneously with Benjamin Franklin). The Denis d'or, called after the French (and German) equivalents of its inventor's name, was described as an 'orchestrion' because of its ability to imitate the sounds of most wind and string instruments. Measuring about 150 by 90 cm, it had 790 strings and was capable of 130 gradations of timbre; conflicting descriptions attribute to it a single pedal and an organ-like pedal-board. It was the first musical instrument to involve electricity, though this was probably not an essential part of its action: the performer could be given an electric shock 'as often as the inventor wished'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; SchillingE

P. Diwisch [Diviš]: Theorie von der meteorologischen Electricité (Tübingen, 1765, 2/1768)

E. Larsen: Inventors' Cavalcade (London, 1943, 2/1944), 84–9; repr. in Ideas and Inventions (London, 1960), 239

HUGH DAVIES

Denis le Grant. See LE GRANT, DENIS.

Denisov, Edison (Vasil'yevich) (b Tomsk, 6 April 1929; d Paris, 24 Nov 1996). Russian composer. His father, an electrical engineer, died in 1940, forcing Edison Denisov to take on adult responsibilities at a young age. He later stated that this experience was good training for his future existence in Soviet Russia where he was mostly unable to express his feelings in an explicit manner. He was uninterested in music until, as a teenager, he heard a neighbour playing a mandolin; this chance occurrence changed the course of his life. After informal studies on the guitar and clarinet, he enrolled in evening classes in Tomsk in order to study the piano in 1946; soon thereafter he was accepted into the Tomsk Music School. His first compositional activity dates from these years. Meanwhile, he entered Tomsk University to study physics and mathematics, graduating in 1951 with a thesis on the analysis of functions. At this point he sent several of his scores to Shostakovich in order to resolve the dilemma between a career as engineer or musician. Shostakovich encouraged him in the musical direction and suggested he study with Shebalin at the Moscow Conservatory. Denisov followed his advice to the letter, finishing this second course of study in 1956. He then completed a period of postgraduate work, during which he studied with Peyko as a result of Shebalin's death. Denisov was subsequently appointed to teach analysis and counterpoint, before becoming professor of orchestration and, finally, of composition only after the fall of the Soviet regime that had previously denied him this title.

Together with Andrey Volkonsky, Denisov was one of the most important leaders of the post-Shostakovich generation in Russia. He was important not only as a composer, but as an avant-garde ideologue, a teacher (both within the Moscow Conservatory and privately), and as a link between western European composers such as like Nono, Boulez, Stockhausen, Maderna and others with whom he had begun to make contact in the late 1950s. These links meant that Russians could find out about foreign music (his home was a lending library and a meeting place for listening and discussion) and also that foreigners could make through him contact with other Russian composers. The music of almost every Soviet composer of interest active between the 1960s and 80s – including that of Schnittke and Gubaydulina – was first introduced to the West by Denisov. In the hothouse atmosphere of the Brezhnev era Moscow intelligentsia he was a leader and a beacon, one of the few quite unafraid of the fiercest official criticisms and censure and, as such, a model of single-minded principle. He was also one of the first people to provoke interest in the lost avant grade of the 1920s, encouraging people to find out about Roslavets, Mosolov and many others. He played a big part in the promotion of their music in such events as the Paris-Moscou exhibition. Denisov's compositional career began with the encouragement of Shostakovich, who encouraged him for many years and taught him privately; Shebalin influenced Denisov's clarity of thinking, artistic integrity and firm and even traditional sense of form and phrase structure. He also benefited from contacts with Filip Herschkowitz, a Webern pupil, who carried the authority of his teacher's and Schoenberg's traditions while concentrating like them on Bach and Beethoven as analytical models. His very earliest works were naturally in a traditional Soviet manner, with Prokofiev's influence more prominent than Shostakovich's. But his interest in Hindemith and Bartók (both banned composers in those days) soon manifested themselves. In the late 1950s, he discovered other forbidden fruits: through Volkonsky he learnt more of the French tradition, Glenn Gould's famous visit uncovered the techniques of the Second Viennese School, trips to the Warsaw Autumn and contacts with various foreign visitors opened up the Western avant garde. By the time of his first major work – The Sun of the Incas, dedicated to Boulez and the cause of a big scandal with the authorities when first performed – he was setting his sights on the European models of his own day.

Denisov's most striking work of the late 1960s is the String Trio (that it was written to a French commission was in itself something scandalous too); an elegant and already distinctive homage to the newly opened paths of 20th-century modernism, with its stylistic debts to Webern and Boulez and a quotation from Schoenberg's String Trio. But it was not until his orchestral work Peinture, inspired by the work of his painter friend Boris Birger, that he really felt that he had found his own language. The writing is notable for a densely chromatic heterophony owing something to the earlier Ligeti, a refined sense of static harmony looking towards Boulez and Messiaen (Denisov had a lifelong love for French culture), and a fondness for the sort of expressive melodic shapes and archetypes that have a long pedigree in Russian music and go right back to the songs of Glinka, whom Denisov always persisted in citing as his favourite composer along with Mozart. In his mind he was reconciling the traditions of his own culture with the freshness of post-World War II western European discoveries. Central to his middle period are the many pieces inspired by Boris Vian, including the chamber vocal cycle La vie en rouge (one of his finest pieces with its charming and sometimes sinister touches of cabaret), and the evoctaive and eclectic opera L'écume des jours, complete with onstage idealizations of the music of the Catholic church and Duke Ellington. Also very important are the series of concertos which he composed throughout the second half of his career; perhaps the strongest and most distinctive of these is the Flute Concerto written for Aurèle Nicolet. But his aesthetic horizons, despite the often stifled atmosphere of Soviet Russia, were always very wide: as well as being much involved with the writing of film scores and many memorable theatre scores for Yury Lyubimov at the Taganka Theatre, he also experimented with electronic music and graphic notation.

As he grew older Denisov attained ever greater fluency. In the space of a few weeks he wrote what many consider to be his most remarkable score, the Requiem (a non-religious piece and certainly one of the key works in any consideration of late Soviet music), and in the few days following his Pushkin Cycle, Your Sweet Face, in which he reinvented the early 19th-century drawing room romanticism of Glinka and his generation in the stylistic terms of the late 20th century. Many other large-scale works followed, including many for foreign commissions such as the grandiose First Symphony, written for Barenboim and the Orchestre de Paris. To the disappointment of his friends he accepted in the early 1990s high office in the Union of Composers, perhaps thinking that this position would enable him to change those aspects of Russian musical life that he had previously found so distasteful. In his last years, dogged by ill health (caused by a car accident then cancer) he somewhat unexpectedly turned to religion, producing the oratorio Histoire de la vie et de la mort de Notre Seigneur Jésus Christ and other pieces in that vein. But his work continued, as did the relentless travelling and active interest in helping young composers from all over the former Soviet Union. Although he spent much time in Paris and Germany in his later years, he always regarded Moscow as his home. Other late projects included the completion of Schubert's unfinished Lazarus and very successful completion of Debussy's unfinished Rodrigue et Chimène. The orchestration of the work of other composers (including Schubert, Musorgsky and Mosolov) had occupied him at various stages in his career. After his death his close associates unwisely published his private diaries; these contained a lot of disproportionate and unhappy musing on spiritual and philosphical matters and a great deal of unkind comment about those who had been his friends. These writings temporarily harmed his reputation in Russia, where he should rightly be seen as one of the great forces for good in the musical climate of his time.

WORKS

Stage: Ivan-soldat [Ivan the Soldier] (op, 1, Denisov, after Russ. traditional stories), 1956; L'écume des jours (lyric drama, 3, 14, Denisov, after B. Vian), 1977–81; Confession (ballet, after A. Musset), 1984; Les quatre filles (op, 1, Denisov, after P. Picasso), 1986

Vocal: 5 pesen [5 Songs] (R. Burns), 1v, pf, 1951; Vecher [Evening] (F. Tyutchev), 1v, pf, 1951; 2 khora [2 Choruses] (A. Isaakian), 1952; 3 pesni (Isaakian), 1v, pf, 1952; Winds Blow (A. Kol'tsov), S, pf, 1952; You, Like Spring (S. Petöfi), 1v, pf, 1952; Nocturnes (Bo-Tzui-i), song cycle, Mez, pf, 1953; Young Sufferings (H. Heine), song cycle, Bar, pf, 1958; Native Land (A. Prokof'yev), song cycle, 1v, pf, 1959; Siberian Earth (orat, A. Tvardovsky), narr, B, chorus, orch, 1960; Canti di Catullo, B, 3 trbn, 1962; Italyanskiye pesni [Italian Songs] (A. Blok), S, fl, hn, vn, hpd, 1964; The Sun of the Incas (G. Mistral), S, fl, ob, hn, tpt, 2 pf, perc, vn, vc, 1964; Five Stories of Mr Keuner (B. Brecht), T, s cl, a sax, tpt, trbn, pf, perc, db, 1966; Wails, Lamentations (after Russ. folksongs), S, pf, perc, 1966; Osen' [Autumn] (V. Khlebnikov), 13 solo vv, 1968; 2 pesni (I. Bunin), female v, pf, 1970; Chant d'automne (C. Baudelaire), female v, orch, 1971; La vie en rouge (B. Vian), solo v, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1973; List'ya [Leaves] (F. Tanzer), S, str trio, 1978; Douleur (Pain and Silence) after O. Mandelstam for mezzo-soprano, clarinet, viola and piano (1979); Sur le Tournant (O. Mandelstam), 1v, pf, 1979; 5 stikhotvoreniy (Ye. Baratïnsky), 1v, pf, 1979; Your Lovely Face (A.S. Pushkin), song cycle, 1v, pf, 1980; To Flore (A. Josef), 1v, pf, 1980; Requiem (liturgical texts, F. Tanzer), S, T, chorus, orch, 1980; Colin et Chloé, suite from the opera L'écume des jours, S, Mez, T, chorus, orch, 1981; On a Snowy Bonfire, 1v, pf, 1981; Lumière et ombres (V. Solov'yov), B, pf, 1982; Sur le bûcher du neige (A. Blok), 24 songs, 1v, pf, 1981; Your Sweet Face (A.S. Pushkin), song cycle, 1v, orch, 1982; Venue du printemps, chorus, 1984; Sinyaya kniga [The Blue Book] (A. Vedensky, D. Kharms), narr, S, vn, vc, 2 pf, 3 groups of bells, 1984; Wishing Well (F. Tanzer), Mez, cl, va, pf, 1985; Au plus haut des cieux (G. Bataille), 1v, chbr orch, 1986; Gladsome Light (Russ. liturgical texts), chorus, 1988; 4 Poems (G. de Nerval), 1v, fl, pf, 1989; Three Fragments from the New Testament, Ct, 2 T, Bar, fl, bells, 1989; Kyrie, chorus, orch, 1991; Histoire de la vie et de la mort de Notre Seigneur Jésus Christ, orat, T, B, chorus, orch, 1992; Morning Dream (R. Ausländer), S, chorus, orch, 1995; Choruses for Medea, chorus, ens, 1995; folksong arrs.

Orch: Sym. no.1, C, 1955; Simfoniyetta na tadzhikskiye temï [Sinfonietta on Tajik Themes], 1957; Malen'kaya syuita [Little Suite], 1958; Detskaya syuita [Children's Suite], 1958; Muzïkal'nïye kartinï [Musical Pictures], suite, 1958; Chbr Sym., cl, bn, pf, str, 1960; Sym. no.2, 2 str orch, perc, 1962; Conc., fl, ob, pf, perc, 1963; Peinture, 1970; Vc Conc., 1972; Pf Conc., 1974; Akvarellï, 24 str, 1975; Fl Conc., 1975; Vn Conc., 1977; Conc., fl, ob, orch, 1978; Partita, vn, chbr orch, 1981; Chbr Sym., 1982; Conc., bn, vc, orch, 1982; Kamernaya muzïka [Chbr Music], va, hpd, str, 1982; Variations on Haydn, vc, orch, 1982; Epitaph, chbr orch, 1983; Conc., va, hpd, str, 1984; 5 Caprices of Paganini, vn, str, 1985; Happy End, 2 vn, vc, db, str, 1985; Ob Conc., 1986; Va Conc., 1986; Sym., 1987; Bells in the Mist, 1987; Cl Conc., 1989; Gui Conc., 1991; Conc., fl, vib, hpd, str, 1993; Chbr Sym. no.2, 1994; Conc., fl, cl, orch, 1996

Chbr: Pf Trio, 1954 [dedicated to Shostakovich]; Trio, cl, bn, vn, 1957; Str Qt no.1, f, 1957 [lost]; Sonata, C, 2 vn, 1958; 3 p'yesï [3 Pieces], vn, pf, 1958–62; Sonata, fl, pf, 1960; Music for 11 Wind Instruments and Timpani, 1961; Str Qt no.2 'in memory of Bartók', 1961; Syuita, vc, pf, 1961; Sonata, vn, pf, 1963; Crescendo e diminuendo, hpd, 12 str, 1965; 3 p'yesï [3 Pieces], vc, pf, 1967; Oda, pamyati Khe Gevara [Ode in Memory of Che Guevara], cl, pf, perc, 1968; Romanticheskaya muzïka [Romantic Music], ob, hp, str, trio, 1968; Str Trio, 1969; DSCH, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1969; Ww Qnt, 1969; Siluettï [Silhouettes], fl, 2 pf, perc, 1969; Sonata, a sax, pf, 1970; Pf Trio, 1971; Sonata, vc, pf, 1971; Canon in Memory of Stravinsky, fl, cl, hp, 3 p'yesï, hpd, perc, 1972; Prelyudiya, 4 hp, 1972; Chorale Variations, trbn, pf, 1974; 2 p'yesï, a sax, pf, 1974; Concerto piccolo, 4 sax [one perf], 6 perc, 1977; 4 p'yesï, fl, pf, 1977; Sonata, fl, gui, 1977; 2 p'yesï, 3 insts, 1978; Trio, ob, vc, hpd, 1981; 2 Homages to Bach, vn, org, 1982; Sonata, vn, org, 1982; 2 p'yesï, 3 insts, 1983; Sonata, fl, hp, 1983; Diane dans le vent d'automne, va, pf, vib, db, 1984; In Deo speravit cor meum, vn, gui, org, 1984; Es ist genug, va, pf, 1984, arr. va, fl, ob, cel, str qnt, 1986 [variations on the theme of Bach's chorale]; Sextet, fl, ob, cl, vn, va, vc, 1984–5; Homage to Pierre, chbr ens, 1985; Three Pictures after Paul Klee, ob, hn, pf, vib, va, db, 1985; Duet, fl, va, 1985; Paysage au clair de lune, cl, pf, 1986; Apparitions and Disparitions, 2 perc, 1986; The Steamboat Passes the Harbour, 12 schoolchildren, percussion, 1987; Pf Qnt, 1987; Cl Qnt, 1987; Points and Lines, 2 pf 8 hands, 1988; Rayons des étoiles l'espace courbé, 3 perc, 1989; Qt, fl, vn, va, vc, 1989; Dedication, fl, cl str, qt, 1991; Qnt, 4 sax, pf, 1991; Variations on a Theme of Mozart, 8 fl, 1990; Ww Octet, 1991; 4 Pieces, str qt, 1991; Sur la nappe d'un étang glacé, 9 insts, tape, 1991; Sonata, cl, pf, 1993

Solo inst: Bagatelï, pf, 1960; Divertimento v klassicheskom stile, pf 4 hands, 1961; Variatsii ne temu Gendela [Variations on a Theme of Handel], pf, 1961; 3 p'yesï, pf 4 hands, 1967; Chant des oiseaux, prep pf/phd, tape, 1969; Solo, fl, 1971; Solo, ob, 1971; Solo, tpt, 1972; Sonata, cl, 1972; Znaki v belom/Signes en blanc, pf, 1974; Sonata, vn, 1978; Dead Leaves, hpd, 1980; Sonata, gui, 1981; Sonata, bn, 1982; Sonata, fl, 1982; 5 études, bn, 1983; Nuages noires, vib, 1984; 2 p'yesï, fl, 1984; Variations on a Theme of Schubert, pf, 1986; Variations on a Theme of Handel, 1986; Winter Landscape, hp, 1986; Otrazheniya [Reflections], pf, 1989; 3 Pieces, perc, 1989; Pour Daniel, pf, 1989

Other: orch of Musorgsky: Sunless, 1981, Songs and Dances of Death, 1983, The Nursery, 1984; Mosolov: Newspaper Advertisements, 1985, Children's Scenes, 1986; Schubert: Waltzes, 1987; completion of Debussy: Rodrigue et Chimène, 1993

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Kholopova, A. Schnittke: 'Nowe kompozycje E. Denisowa', Res facta, vi (1972), 109–32 [2 essays on works 1961–9]

D. Gojowy: 'Kunst als kategorischer Imperativ: Notizen zu Edison Denissow', Musica, xxix/1 (1975), 16–19

S. Bradshaw: 'The Music of Edison Denisov', Tempo, cli (December 1984), 2–9

G. Pantiyelev: 'Ne lyublyu formal'noye iskusstvo' [I don't like formal art], SovM (1989), no.12, 12–20 [interview with Denisov]

V. Zenova: 'Die Oper Der Schaum der Tage von Edison Denissow', Sowjetische Musik im Licht der Perestroika (Laaber, 1990), 193–200

M. Sokolova: 'Allyuzii v romane Borisa Viana i opera Edisona Denisova' [Allusions in Vian's novel and Denisov's opera], Iz proshlogo i nastoyashchego otochestvennoy muzïki (Moscow, 1991), 125–48

D. Wright: 'Peinture: Some Thoughts on Denisov', MT, cxxxii (1991), 242–3

J.-P. Armengaud: Entretiens avec Denisov (Paris, 1993)

Yu. Kholopov, V. Tsernova: Edison Denisov (Moscow, 1993; Engl. trans. Harwood, 1994) [incl. bibliography, worklist, essays by Denisov and the latter's correspondence with Shostakovich]

M. Raku: 'S togo berega' [From this Shore], MAk (1994), no.3, pp.77–83 [on L'écume des jours]

A. Vustin: 'Pamyati Edisona Denisova (1929–96)', MAk (1997), no.2 [special issue]

L. Raaben: 'E. Denisov', O dukhovnom renessanse v russkoy muzïke (St Petersburg, 1998), 224–48

GERARD McBURNEY (text), MICHAEL NORSWORTHY (work-list)

Denkmäler (Ger.). See EDITIONS, HISTORICAL.

Denmark (Dan. Danmark). Country in Scandinavia.

I. Art music. II. Traditional music.

I. Art music

1. To 1500. 2. 1500–1700. 3. 18th century. 4. 19th century. 5. 20th century.

1. TO 1500. Danish art music in the Middle Ages was largely restricted to the church, the court and the aristocracy. After the first, only partially successful, attempts to convert Denmark to Christianity (9th century), the power of Church and king increased from the 11th century. The bishoprics of Schleswig, Ribe and Århus were established before 948 and five others in the 11th century. Lund in particular seems to have played an important role in the development of church music (see MALMÖ). Links with the archbishopric of Hamburg-Bremen were strong until Lund became the archbishopric of Scandinavia in 1104, and cultural contacts with France and Italy developed during the 12th and 13th centuries; the liturgies for the first Danish saints, King Knud the Saint and Duke Knud Lavard, also indicate a link with English Benedictine monasteries.

Gregorian chant in the monasteries and churches was the responsibility of cantors. Little source material survives: three sequences in the Liber daticus lundensis (S-L, late 12th century); sequences and mass movements in the 14th-century Liber scolae virginis (S-L, leaves with music inserted later); and the complete office of St Knud Lavard in a late 13th-century copy (D-Klu S.H. 8 A 8°) of the Ordinale S. Kanutis ducis et martyris of 1170 (extracts in Medieval Musical Relics of Denmark (1912)), which includes the hymn Gaudet mater ecclesia, adaptable for singing as a two-part rondellus and thus the earliest evidence of polyphony in Denmark. Further evidence does not appear before a manuscript from the middle of the 15th century (DK-Ku AM 76 8°), containing ten pieces of music, seven to Latin and three to Danish texts; six of these are notated in two parts (facs. and transcr. in S. Kroon and others: A Danish Teacher's Manual of the Mid-Fifteenth Century, i (Lund, 1993)). Few sources of secular music survive; however, the large number of ballad texts contained in 16th- and 17th-century manuscripts, written down in aristocratic and courtly circles, may indicate a flowering of the ballad within the Danish aristocracy of the Middle Ages, influenced by French medieval lyrics and dance-songs; furthermore, we know that German Minnesingers visited the Danish court in the 13th and at the beginning of the 14th centuries (Reinmar von Zweter, Der Tannhäuser, Frauenlob). However, few fragments of texts and melodies survive from the Middle Ages and by the 19th century the original aristocratic songs had been handed down orally through centuries and had become folk ballads.

2. 1500–1700. With the Reformation, introduced during the reign of Christian III (1534–59), the Danish church was reorganized on Lutheran principles. In Ordinatio ecclesiastica regnorum Daniae et Norwegiae (1537; Dan. trans., 1539) the rules for the new church were set down, and with the publication of Hans Thomissøn's hymnbook Den danske psalmebog (1569/R) and Niels Jespersøn's Gradual (1573/R) containing music for the entire liturgical year, music became firmly established in the Danish Lutheran service. Only with the introduction of Danmarks og Norgis kirke-ritual (1685) were these collections superseded; subsequent collections were Thomas Kingo's Gradual (1699/R) and the new official hymnbook Den forordnede ny kirke-psalme-bog (1699), which completed the transition to a mass in which hymns replaced the chant. Important sources of melodies from the first two centuries of Protestant church music in Denmark are Anders Arrebo's K. Davids psalter, sangviiss udsat (2/1627; repr. in Arrebo's Samlede skrifter, iv, Copenhagen, 1981) and the devotional melodies with continuo in Kingo's Aandelige siunge-koor, i–ii (1674–81; in Kingo's Samlede skrifter, vii, Copenhagen, 1945), which show the influence of the secular aria, as does Johan Brunsmand's Aandelige siunge-lyst (1676).

Good Friday Passion performances are exemplified by the Roskilde passionen modelled on Johann Walter (i), in a manuscript of 1673; it was performed until Pietism forbade it in 1736. The main source of polyphonic church music is Mogens Pedersøn's Pratum spirituale (1620), which contains the most important choral music of the period preceding Buxtehude, who was born in Denmark around 1637 and worked there until leaving for Lübeck in 1668. Church music, as well as court and civic music, in the 17th century was characterized by the mobility that prevailed in cultural life throughout the Baltic region, and musicians frequently moved from one city to another. Many musicians in Copenhagen developed a style apparently closely allied to that of north Germany, especially in organ music: Truid Aagesen, Thomas Schattenberg, Johann Lorentz (ii), Lorentz Schröder, J.R. Radeck and Christian Geist. The weekly organ concerts given by Lorentz in St Nikolai in Copenhagen are the earliest evidence of public concert activity in Denmark.

After the Reformation higher education was also reorganized: a lector musices was appointed at the University of Copenhagen in 1539 and school plays with music bear witness to the growing musical activity in the humanistic spirit. Teachers at the university and the grammar schools produced treatises on music theory, such as Hans Kraft's Musicae practicae rudimenta (1607),

H.M. Ravn's Heptachordum danicum (1646) and M.H. Schacht's Musicus danicus.

After the unsettled years of the Civil War and the Reformation, court music flourished under Christian III and Frederik II (1559–88), and became a vital element in Danish musical life. The Kantori (royal choir), documented as early as 1519, at the time of Christian III consisted of between 15 and 20 singers, to whom were added a corps of about 12 trumpeters. Two sets of manuscript partbooks (DK-Kk GkS, 1872 and 1873) contain some of the repertory from the chapel of Christian III in the 1540s and 50s. During this period and the reign of Frederik II important musicians and composers were active at the Danish court (Matz Hak, Andrianus Petit Coclico, Josquin Baston, Jørgen Heyde, David Abell, Jørgen Presten, Franciscus Amfortius and Arnold de Fine); most were from the Netherlands, England and Germany, and the repertory of court music was on a par with the best European traditions. At the end of Frederik II's reign the royal chapel consisted of about 45 singers, trumpeters and instrumentalists.

The international standard of court music reached its culmination under Christian IV (1588–1648), continued under Frederik III (1648–70) but declined under Christian V (1670–99). Christian IV sent his Danish musicians to Venice to study with Giovanni Gabrieli, and they returned as skilled composers of madrigals. Most important among them was Mogens Pedersøn. Foreign composers who were attached to the Copenhagen court and during the 1630s and 40s to that of Prince Christian in Nykøbing (Falster) include John Dowland (1598–1606), William Brade (various times between 1594 and 1622), Johann Schop (1615–19, 1634), Melchior Schildt (1626–9, 1634), Heinrich Schütz (1633–5, 1642–4), Kaspar Förster (1652–5, 1661–7), Matthias Weckmann (1642–7) and Gabriel Voigtländer (1636–43). When the royal chapel of Christian IV was at its height from 1613 to 1625 it numbered up to 30 singers, 30 instrumentalists and 16 trumpeters (1618). During the 17th century instrumental music, song and ballet were joined in a series of court festivals, from intermedii in the Italian style under Christian IV to ballet and opera in Italian and French Baroque style under Frederik III and Christian V. Foreign instrumentalists occasionally augmented the royal chapel, including French violinists under Frederik III and Christian V. The musical life of the towns now also included stadsmusikanter (town musicians). The earliest permanently employed town musician is recorded in Århus in 1500, and town musicians are found in 12 Danish towns over the next 150 years. By about 1700 some 30 towns had town musicians, whose appointments had to be approved by the king. Town musicians and their apprentices were a feature of Danish urban and rural musical life until the mid-19th century, when the privileges of the town musician ceased.

3. 18th century. During the first half of the century hymn singing was mainly under Pietistic influence, exemplified by Erik Pontoppidan's Den nye psalme-bog (1740 and 1742) and F.C. Breitendich's Fuldstaendig choral-bog (1764/R), which includes melodies in galant style. With Niels Schørring's Kirke-melodierne for claveer (1781/R) and Choral-bog (1783/R) and O.H. Guldberg's Psalme-bog (1778) hymn-writing moved towards secularism and rationalism.

18th-century polyphonic church music seems to have been dominated by secular influences. Pietism gave rise to a variety of Passion cantatas and oratorios which, during the reign of Christian VI (1730–46), replaced the prohibited opera; subsequently sacred music was prominent at royal birthdays, weddings and funerals. The most important composer was the German J.A. Scheibe, director of the royal chapel from 1740 to 1748, whose mourning songs for the funeral of Frederik V (1766) and Passion cantata of 1768 are among the finest Danish compositions of the period. At the end of the 18th century typical works were Forløserens død, opstandelse og himmelfart by J.E. Hartmann, J.A.P. Schulz's Maria og Johannes and Christi død and F.L.Ae. Kunzen's Skabningens halleluia, in which the influence of C.H. Graun and C.P.E. Bach can be traced.

During the reigns of Frederik IV (1699–1730) and Christian VI the most important foreign musician at the Danish court was Bartolomeo Bernardi, director of the royal chapel in the period 1703–32. With the accession of Frederik V in 1746 and the end of Pietism interest in opera was reawakened. An opera house had opened in 1703 in Copenhagen, built by Frederik IV, and guest performances of German opera were given (including operas by Reinhard Keiser) in the 1720s; however, in 1748 a new theatre was built on Kongens Nytorv in Copenhagen (later named the Kongelige Teater (Royal Theatre)) and dramatic music became public, with the king's orchestra and the town musicians functioning as the theatre orchestra, which later acquired the official name of Kongelige Kapel (Royal Orchestra). Pietro Mingotti's Italian opera troupe visited Copenhagen from 1747, directed by Gluck, Paolo Scalabrini and Giuseppe Sarti; however, French opéra comique was more influential than Italian opera seria, and was introduced to the court at the beginning of Christian VII's reign (1766–1808). It continued at Kongens Nytorv from the early 1770s, when the Italians had to leave the country and a national Singspiel tradition was initiated by J.E. Hartmann with Balders død (1779) and Fiskerne (1780), subsequently developed in the works of Schulz, which became far more popular than Kunzen's two important operas: Holger Danske (1789) and Erik Ejegod (1798).

From the 1740s music societies became centres of concert activity. The first of these, the Musikalske Societet, was established in 1744. Now court and town musicians joined with amateurs in concerts in which the introduction of European orchestral works and improved opportunities for performance contributed to the establishment of a Danish symphonic tradition in the late 18th century; Classical Viennese influence is evident in the works of J.E. Hartmann, Kunzen, Claus Schall and the young C.E.F. Weyse. Danish music publishing and printing was established by the end of the 18th century. The first important Danish music publisher, Søren Sønnichsen (from 1783), printed works that indicate the increased cultivation of domestic music. Preserved collections of music in the manor-houses of the aristocracy bear witness to cultivation of music outside Copenhagen which was in no way inferior to the music being developed in the capital.

Alongside the emergence of bourgeois musical culture, Danish instrument-making also started to assert itself. While around 1770 there was, in the main, only work on commission for the court, aristocracy and upper bourgeoisie, carried out by a small number of instrument-makers in the capital, by 1850 the number of people in Copenhagen who had instrument-making as their main occupation had risen to 33.

By the end of the century social and economic changes had given rise to musical activities that were to become widespread in the following century: domestic music-making, recitals in the salons of the wealthy bourgeoisie and aristocracy, and public concerts.

4. 19TH CENTURY. During the first decades of the 19th century there was a decline in musical activity. Mozart's music seems to have been introduced in the programmes of music societies at the end of the 18th century, and the first concert to include a symphony by Beethoven took place in Copenhagen in 1803. However, the Napoleonic Wars and the state bankruptcy of 1813 dealt a blow to the progress of concert life, although church music gained popularity through performances of Weyse's church cantatas, and Singspiele at the Kongelige Teater benefited from the high standard of the Kongelige Kapel, which under the direction of Schall (1818–34) won European fame. A revival of instrumental music took place about 1850; as elsewhere, the symphony developed elements of nationalism, and chamber music won favour in the concert hall. In addition, secular cantatas and oratorios became a feature of Danish musical life and the fashionable romance took on a form of song composition comparable to the lied in other parts of Europe. Danish music education expanded during the 19th century; singing and music lessons became a compulsory subject in schools after 1814, the Copenhagen conservatory (later the Kongelige Danske Musikkonservatorium) opened in 1867, and with Angul Hammerich's lectures in music history at the University of Copenhagen at the end of the century musicology again became established as an academic discipline.

The hymnbooks of the first half of the 19th century, H.O.C. Zinck's Choral-Melodier (1801/R) and Weyse's Choral-Melodier (1839), continued the tradition of Schiørring's hymnbooks. Gradually, however, hymn singing was also influenced both by popular folksongs and the Danish Romantic art song, as can be seen in A.P. Berggreen's Melodier til ... psalmebog til kirke- og hùus-andagt (1853) and Christian Barnekow's hymnbook (1878) with tunes by A.P. Berggreen, J.P.E. Hartmann, Niels W. Gade and others. Romantic influences are also noticeable in the first hymnbook of the 20th century, V. Bielefeldt's Melodier til psalmebog for kirke og hjem (1900), although it also contains traces of the reform by Thomas Laub (Om kirkesangen, 1887), inspired by the reform movement in Germany (Winterfeld and Tucher) and Norway (J.O. Behrens). Religious polyphony and organ music were overshadowed by secular music, but Weyse's cantatas and works by J.P.E. Hartmann are outstanding. Romantic influence, however, was increased by Berggreen, Hartmann and Gade. Renowned composers of organ music at the end of the 19th century were Gottfred Matthison-Hansen and Otto Malling.

After the decline of public concerts in the early 19th century the Musikforening, founded in Copenhagen in 1836, became an important part of Danish concert life for nearly a century until its activities ended in the 1930s. With its choir and orchestra it remained the centre of large-scale concert-giving and under the conductorship of Gade (1850–90) became the arbiter of contemporary taste. As a prolific composer and director and teacher at the Copenhagen Conservatory from 1867 Gade had a considerable influence on Danish musical life.

Orchestral music made great progress at this time in the works of J.H. Fröhlich, J.P.E. Hartmann, Gade, Emil Hartmann and others, although not until the end of the century did a reaction set in against what had now become a conservative Classical-Romantic style in orchestral music. Further music societies were formed: Euterpe (1864–7), the Koncertforening (1874–93) and Symfonia (1889–95). Concerts in Tivoli, the Philharmonic concerts and those of the Kongelige Kapel, which embraced a broader European repertory and included works of the younger generations of Danish composers, among them Victor Bendix, P.E. Lange-Müller and the young Carl Nielsen.

Similar influences determined the development of chamber music from the compositions in the Viennese Classical style by Friedrich Kuhlau in the first decades of the 19th century through the Romantic Classicism of Gade, J.P.E. Hartmann, Heise and C.F.E. Horneman to the French- and Slav-influenced works of Lange-Müller and Bendix. With the formation of the Kammermusikforening in Copenhagen 1868 in a forum was created for concert music on a small scale comparable to that of the Musikforening for orchestral music.

Songs with piano accompaniment developed from the simple strophic compositions of Weyse, influenced by Schulz's Lieder im Volkston and Kunzen's Viennese Classical style, to the Romantic art songs of the two most important Danish song composers, Heise and Lange-Müller. The founding of the Caeciliaforening by Henrik Rung in 1851 stimulated the development of choral singing and composition; the society based its repertory on 16th- and 17th-century polyphony. Male choral singing was cultivated by the Studenter-Sangforening (founded 1839). A leading exponent of light music was H.C. Lumbye, the 'Scandinavian Strauss' and conductor of the orchestra in the Copenhagen Tivoli Gardens, who introduced the style of Lanner and the Strausses in an individual manner. This varied repertory became available to the public through the growing number of music publishers in Copenhagen, among them J. Cohen (1848–73), Wilhelm Hansen (founded 1853), C.E. Horneman (1861–75), Horneman & Erslev (1846–79) and C.C. Lose (1802–79, under various names).

At the beginning of the 19th century Danish opera was still strongly influenced by the opéra comique and the Singspiel traditions, of which Weyse was the most important representative. Kunzen introduced Mozart's operas to the Kongelige Teater, where Don Giovanni was performed to acclaim in 1807. Rossini's operas were staged from about 1820, and in the 1840s and 50s by Italian opera troupes at the Hofteater, where operas by Verdi were also performed. In the Danish repertory Romantic traits can be seen in Kuhlau's Lulu (1824) and J.P.E. Hartmann's Ravnen (1832).

At this period vocal, instrumental and operatic music in Denmark came under the spell of Romantic nationalism. In the 1830s and 40s music was brought into the public debate about the importance of culture for the realization of new political ideas. This debate contributed enormously to the search for national identity and was fostered by the strong tension between Denmark and the neighbouring German states, the aspiration to Nordic unity and the emergence of a liberal political movement which in 1849 created a free constitution and the abolition of the absolute monarchy without a bloody revolution. Nationalism as an ideology was combined with the Romantic aesthetic of music as the language of feelings capable of reflecting a poetic idea. Following the national festival play Elverhøj ('The Elf's Hill', 1828) by Kuhlau, who based his music upon old Danish ballad tunes, Gade took the next steps towards musical nationalism in some works of the 1840s and 50s that won European recognition, notably the concert overture Efterklange of Ossian ('Echoes of Ossian', 1840), the First Symphony (1842) and the choral ballad Elverskud ('Elf-king's Daughter', 1853). Gade's musical language was hailed as a national and specifically Nordic phenomenon, above all because of its highly individual transformation of the newly rediscovered Danish medieval ballad tunes into a personal style.

The national style developed by Gade is also encountered in the works of his contemporaries, above all J.P.E. Hartmann who met the wishes for a Danish national opera with his Liden Kirsten ('Little Christine') to a text by Hans Christian Andersen (1846) based on Danish ballad texts. Large-scale Danish operas were rare for most of the 19th century – fewer than ten were performed during the Kongelige Teater's first century of existence. It was Singspiele and incidental music that dominated Danish stage music until Peter Heise's Drot og marsk ('King and Marshal', 1878), in which a decisive step was taken towards a modern, through-composed type of opera owing something to both Meyerbeer and Verdi. The music of Wagner came late and sporadically to the Danish stage. His operas were introduced at the Kongelige Teater in the last decades of the century (Lohengrin, 1870, Die Meistersinger, 1872, Tannhäuser, 1875, Der fliegende Holländer, 1884, Die Walküre, 1891) and his influence is apparent in August Enna's Heksen ('The Witch', 1892) and Lange-Müller's Vikingeblod ('The Viking', 1900). The Kongelige Teater also founded a ballet tradition of enduring importance in the late 18th century with the ballets of Vincenzo Galeotti, some with music by Claus Schall. During the August Bournonville era (1830–77) the ballet reached its climax, exemplified in the Bournonville ballets Et Folkesagn ('A Folk Tale', 1854), with music by Gade and Hartmann, and the Nordic ballets Valkyrien (1861) and Thrymskviden (1868), with music by Hartmann. Romantic nationalism helped Danish music and musical life to gain an international reputation. The music of Gade and Hartmann was recognized as an original trend in European music by, among others, Schumann. Gade was welcomed in Leipzig as Mendelssohn's co-conductor at the Gewandhaus concerts (1844–8) and as a teacher at the newly founded conservatory. He maintained his international contacts until his death while remaining the dominant figure in Danish musical life.

5. 20TH CENTURY. 20th-century Danish music presents a much more varied picture than that of earlier periods. Musical activities became decentralized, democratic and more numerous, and new technology had a crucial impact on Danish musical culture, beginning with the introduction of radio in the 1920s. Increased state support and control are reflected in such institutions as the Musikråd (1935), Musikkommission (1957) and Statens Musikråd (1971) and in the Music Act of 1976; in 1980 the Danish government established the Danish Music Information Centre. Copenhagen ceased to be the dominant musical centre and regional orchestras were formed in Århus (1935), Ålborg (1943), Odense (1946) and South Jutland (1963), while the Tivoli SO has since 1965 functioned as a regional orchestra for Zealand during the winter season. The Danish RSO was founded in 1926. There is a permanent opera company outside Copenhagen in Århus (the Jutland Opera, founded in 1947) and opera performances and small alternative opera groups elsewhere in and outside Copenhagen. Provincial conservatories were established in Århus (1927), Odense (1929), Ålborg (1932) and Esbjerg (1946). A growing number of associations of composers and performers were formed, including Koda (1926) to protect copyright, Dansk Tonekunstner Forening (1903), Dansk Musiker Forbund (1911), Dansk Komponistforening (1913), Dansk Solist-forbund (1918), Solistforeningen af 1921 and Dansk Kapelmesterforening (1937).

From the beginning of the century liturgical music was influenced by Thomas Laub's reform work in theory and practice, laid down in the book Musik og kirke (1920) and his collection of hymn tunes Dansk kirkesang (1918). In 1922 the Samfund Dansk Kirkesang was established to propagate Laub's ideas of restoring hymn tunes on the basis of 16th- and 17th-century practice; among the supporters of the reforms were Mogens Wöldike, Jens Peter Larsen, Finn Viderø and Povl Hamburger. To accompany the authorized Danish hymnbook Den danske salmebog (1953), Larsen and Wöldike published Den danske koralbog (1954, 3/1992), containing more than 450 melodies, of which 74 are by Laub. A purist trend also characterized organ building and organ and choral music from the period between the wars, as can be seen in the few works of Nielsen in those genres, and continued after World War II in the organ and vocal church music of, among others, Leif Kayser, Leif Thybo and Bernhard Lewkovitch. However, many of the older and younger generations of Danish composers were attracted by the possibilities of the organ and contributed to a wide-ranging repertory of organ music in the second half of the 20th century; prominent among them have been Vagn Holmboe, Niels Viggo Bentzon, Per Nørgård, Jan Maegaard, Bent Lorentzen, Ib Nørholm and Niels la Cour.

Choral singing and choral music has a strong tradition in Denmark. On the professional level the concerts of the Palestrinakor, founded 1922 and conducted by Wöldike in the 1920s, and its successor, the Radiokor, with concerts from 1932, had a great impact on Danish choral singing, while many professional singers and musicians have had their first training in the Copenhagen Boys' Choir, formed by Wöldike in 1924. Amateur and semi-professional choirs on a high level are a vital part of contemporary Danish musical life. The Danske Folkekor was founded in 1902 and the Dansk Korforening in 1911. Choral singing has inspired several generations of 20th-century Danish composers, from Nielsen, Knud Jeppesen and Holmboe to Lewkovitch, La Cour and Bo Holten.

It is significant that the two societies most central to the established Danish musical world in the 19th century – the Musikforening and the Caeciliaforening – were both disbanded in the 1930s. On the other hand, at the beginning of the 20th century new institutions were formed to promote contemporary music: the Dansk Koncertforening (1901–30), under such conductors as Bendix and Peder Gram, the Tivoli Concerts under the direction of F. Schnedler-Petersen (1909–35) and the Dansk Filharmonisk Selskab (1920–34) founded by Paul von Klenau. Of far-reaching importance was the formation of the Unge Tonekunsteneres Selskab ('Young Musicians' Society, 1920) and Ny Musik ('New Music', 1921, the Danish section of ISCM from 1922); in 1930 the two societies amalgamated to form the Unge Tonekunstnerselskab which through its international approach to contemporary music, its concert performances and the publication of Dansk musiktidsskrift (1925–), became the main platform for new music.

Before World War II Danish music was strongly influenced by Nielsen, who composed in most genres; however, for a time after his death in 1931 his works had a stifling effect on composers, who felt unable to free themselves from his influence. An isolated figure in early 20th-century Danish music was Rued Langgaard, with his symbolist aesthetic and deep religious feeling. Nielsen's early compositions were related to the late Romantic style represented at the end of the 19th century by Horneman, Bendix and Johan Svendsen. After 1900 composers like Louis Glass and Ludolf Nielsen continued in this direction, but the music of Carl Nielsen soon became affected by the powerful anti-Romantic tendencies which later dominated music between the wars; he opened the way for the development of modern Danish music with his experimental works of the late 1920s (the Sixth Symphony, the Clarinet Concerto and the Three Piano Pieces op.59). Stravinsky, Bartók, Hindemith, Les Six and Roussel were also dominant influences on young Danish composers between the wars. Schoenberg and the Second Viennese School aroused interest for a short while in the early 1920s but did not play a significant role until after 1950. Composers who made their names in the years around 1920 included Poul Schierbeck, Jørgen Bentzon, Knudåge Riisager, Ebbe Hamerik, Flemming Weis and Finn Høffding. Prominent in the next generation were Franz Syberg, Svend Erik Tarp, Otto Mortensen, Svend S. Schultz, Herman D. Koppel and Holmboe. Most of these wrote a number of symphonic works – notably Hamerik, with his five cantus firmus symphonies, and Holmboe, who composed a total of 14 symphonies – although chamber music was the preferred genre. Vocal music also showed strong anti-Romantic tendencies at this time. Interest in music education, youth music and amateur singing, inspired by similar tendencies in Germany (Fritz Jöde and Hindemith), produced numerous popular choral works, community songs and school operas for pedagogical purposes (Høffding, Jørgen Bentzon and others). The influence of jazz is typified by Koppel's Musik for jazzorkester (1932).

At the end of World War II the most notable composers were Koppel, Holmboe and Niels Viggo Bentzon. The tradition of the 1930s was continued by the younger generation of composers at the beginning of the 1950s: Poul Rovsing Olsen, Leif Thybo, Svend Westergaard, Lewkovitch, Nørholm, Nørgård and Pelle Gudmundsen-Holmgreen. However, during the 1950s most of these composers began to turn away from the Nordic tradition epitomized by Nielsen and Sibelius; dodecaphony was introduced in the Unge Tonekunstnerselskab, notably by Jan Maegaard. The Darmstadt school and serial music, formerly represented in Danish music only sporadically, among others by Gunnar Berg, attracted attention. Among the first Scandinavian composers to attend the Darmstadt summer courses was Axel Borup-Jørgensen, who did not compose serial music but in his small-scale vocal and instrumental works developed a very personal modern style characterized by refined lyricism. Younger composers encountered the European avant garde at the ISCM Festivals in Rome in 1959 and Cologne in 1960, causing an avant-garde breakthrough in such works as Nørholm's Piano Trio (1959) and Fluctuations (1961–2), Nørgård's Fragment VI (1959–61) and Gudmundsen-Holmgreen's Chronos (1962). Most young composers adopted an independent attitude to serialism and during the 1960s individual styles and experiments appeared, such as Nørgård's 'infinite series', Nørholm's lyrical expressive style, the 'new simplicity' and experiments with open form, 'fluxus' events and 'happenings' in the works of Henning Christiansen and others.

Electronic music was introduced in Denmark during the 1950s and was first cultivated by Else Marie Pade and Jørgen Plaetner. Several composers, including Nørgård, have experimented with partly electronic compositions, while Bent Lorentzen and Gunnar Møller Pedersen have concentrated more wholeheartedly on this medium. Leading electronic composers of the younger generation include Ivar Frounberg and Wayne Siegel, director of the Danish Institute of Electro-Acoustic Music in Århus.

In opera Carl Nielsen again was the leading figure at the beginning of the 20th century, with Saul og David (1902) and Maskarade (1906). Hakon Børresen had success with the short 'conversation' opera Den kongelige gaest ('The Royal Guest', 1919), followed by Schierbeck in his charming Fête galante (1931). The most interesting exponent of large-scale opera in the inter-war years was Hamerik. After 1950 the writing of full-length operas became sporadic. Important contributions were made by Thomas Koppel, Herman D. Koppel, Rovsing Olsen, Nørholm and Nørgård, the most outstanding Danish opera composer in the second half of the century (Labyrinten, 1963, Gilgamesh, 1971–2, Siddharta, 1973–9, Det guddommelige Tivoli ('The Divine Circus', 1982), Nuit des hommes, 1995–6). Television opera as a new medium was cultivated by Christiansen and Nørholm (Invitation til skafottet ('Invitation to a beheading', 1967). Chamber operas were produced, both in a traditional and in a neo-classical vein (Knud Jeppesen's Rosaura (1950), and Schultz's Høst ('Harvest', 1950) and Bryllupsrejse ('Honeymoon', 1951); in the last decades of the century many chamber operas were produced both for the established opera houses in Copenhagen and Århus (by Lorentzen, Sven Erik Werner, Karl Aage Rasmussen, Andy Pape, Tage Nielsen and others) and for alternative performance venues devoted to Danish contemporary music. Worthy of mention are performances in the Unge Tonekunstnerselskab (Dejligt vejr i dag … ('Lovely Weather Today …')) by Christiansen and Sonate for fire operasangere by Mogens Winkel Holm, both 1968), in the Musikdramatisk Teater (The Bond by Holten, 1979), at Lerchenborg Musikdage, in Musikteatret Undergrunden and at the Anden Opera (Den sidste virtuos ('The Last Virtuoso') by Lars Klit, 1995). Many of the operas represent the pluralistic style of the 1960s, in order to express dramatic conflicts. Others were orientated towards more experimental forms, including music theatre, instrumental theatre and dance theatre.

The strongest exponent of ballet music of the 1940s and 50s was Riisager; however, since the 1960s works by Mogens Winkel Holm have become prominent at the Kongelige Teater; noteworthy, too, are ballets like Den unge mand skal giftes ('The Young Man must Marry', 1964–8) by Nørgård and Dødens triumf ('Triumph of Death', 1971) by Thomas Koppel.

Thanks to their own artistic achievements and their acceptance of the diversity and pluralism characteristic of the music of their younger Danish contemporaries, Nørholm, Nørgård and Gudmundsen-Holmgreen have had a crucial influence on the development of Danish music since the 1960s. Nørgård may be seen as the pre-eminent, although not the dominant, figure in contemporary Danish music, while all three, as teachers at the conservatories in Copenhagen and Århus, have had a great impact on the following generations of composers, among them Karl Aage Rasmussen, Ivar Frounberg, Hans Abrahamsen (all of whom became influential teachers themselves), Erik Højsgaard, Niels Rosing-Schow, Bent Sørensen, Anders Nordentoft, Svend Hvidtfelt Nielsen and Karsten Fundal. Abandoning dogmatic modernism and the techniques of distancing, irony and pastiche of the 1970s, the generation born after about 1950 (Poul Ruders, Rosing-Schow, John Frandsen, Hvidtfelt Nielsen, Sørensen, Nordentoft, Niels Marthinsen and Fundal) have created music that conveys feelings and an inner poetic content, sometimes with a narrative quality.

See also Århus; Copenhagen; and Odense.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A General. B To 1500. C 1500–1700. D 18th century. E 19th century. F 20th century.

A: GENERAL

V.C. Ravn: Koncerter og musikalske selskaber i aeldre tid [Concerts and concert societies in the past] (Copenhagen, 1886)
C. Thrane: Fra hofviolonernes tid [From the time of the court violins] (Copenhagen, 1908)
N. Friis: Det kongelige Kapel (Copenhagen, 1948)
N. Friis: Orgelbygning i Danmark: renaessance, barok og rokoko (Copenhagen, 1949, 2/1971)
S. Kragh-Jacobsen and T. Krogh: Den kongelige danske ballet(Copenhagen, 1952)
Musical Denmark (Copenhagen, 1952–)
Å. Davidsson: Danskt musiktryck intill 1700-talets mitt [Danish music printing until the middle of the 18th century] (Uppsala, 1962) [with Ger. summary]
J. Horton: Scandinavian Music (London, 1963)
K.Aa. Bruun: Dansk musiks historie, i–ii (Copenhagen, 1969)
J. Bergsagel: 'Anglo-Scandinavian Musical Relations before 1700', IMSCR, xi: Copenhagen 1972 (Copenhagen, 1974), 263–71
N. Schiørring: Musikkens historie i Danmark, i–iii (Copenhagen, 1977–8)
D. Fog: Dansk musikfortegnelse, i: 1750–1854 (Copenhagen, 1979) [chronological catalogue of published music]
D. Falcon Møller: Danske instrumentbyggere 1770–1850 [Danish instrument makers, 1770–1850] (Copenhagen, 1983)
S. Reventlow: Musik på Fyn blandt kendere og liebhavere [Music on Funen for connoisseurs and amateurs] (Copenhagen, 1983)
K. Ketting, ed.: Music in Denmark (Copenhagen, 1987)
S. Lindholm: 'Danish Choral Music before 1900', Nordic Sounds (1995), no.1, 20–22
G. Schepelern: Operaens historie i Danmark 1634–1975 (Copenhagen, 1995)
J.H. Koudal: For borgere og bønder: Stadmusikantvaesenet i Danmark ca. 1660–1800 [For townsmen and peasants: the Danish town musicians c1660–1800] (Copenhagen, 2000)

B: TO 1500

A. Hammerich, ed.: Medieval Musical Relics of Denmark (Leipzig, 1912/R)
E. Abrahamsen: Élements romans et allemands dans le chant grégorien et la chanson populaire en Danemark (Copenhagen, 1923)
P. King: 'English Influence on the Church at Odense in the Early Middle Ages', Journal of Ecclesiastical History, xii (1962), 145–55
J. Bergsagel: 'Liturgical Relations between England and Scandinavia as seen in Selected Musical Fragments from the 12th and 13th Centuries', Nordiskt Kollokvium III: i latinsk liturgiforskning (Helsinki, 1976), 11–26
J. Bergsagel and N.M.Jensen: 'A Reconsideration of the Manuscript Copenhagen A.M. 76, 8°: its Significance for the Danish Cultural History in the 15th Century', Festskrift Henrik Glahn, ed. M. Müller (Copenhagen, 1979), 19–33
J. Bergsagel: 'Songs for St. Knud the King', Musik & forskning, vi (1980), 152–66
D. Falcon Møller: Klang på kalk: musiksymbolik i dansk kalkmaleri [Music aloft: musical symbolism in the mural paintings of Danish medieval churches] (Copenhagen, 1996)
J. Bergsagel: 'The Offices and Masses of St. Knud Lavard (d. 1131)', Gregorian Chant and Medieval Music, ed. A. Dybdahl and others (Trondheim, 1998), 13–28

C: 1500–1700

A. Hammerich: Musiken ved Christian den Fjerdes Hof (Copenhagen, 1892)
C. Elling: 'Die Musik am Hofe Christians IV von Dänemark', VMw, ix (1893), 62–98
V.C. Ravn: 'English Instrumentalists at the Danish Court in the Time of Shakespeare', SIMG, vii (1905–6), 550–63
T. Schneider: 'Die Orgelbauerfamilie Compenius', AMf, ii (1937), 8–76
T. Krogh: Hofballetten under Christian den Fjerde og Frederik den Tredje [The court ballet at the time of Christian IV and Frederik III] (Copenhagen, 1939)
N. Schiørring: Det 16. og 17. århundredes verdslige danske visesang [Danish 16th- and 17th-century secular song] (Copenhagen, 1950)
H. Glahn: Melodistudier til den lutherske salmesangs historie fra 1524 til ca. 1600, i–ii (Copenhagen, 1954)
J. Bergsagel: 'Danish Musicians in England 1611–14: Newly-Discovered Instrumental Music', DAM, vii (1973–6), 9–21
A. Dickinson: 'A Closer Look at the Copenhagen Tablature in the Royal Library, Copenhagen', DAM, viii (1977), 5–49
P. Eller: 'Compenius-orglets historie', DAM, xvii (1986), 7–51
O. Kongsted: 'Den verdslige "rex splendens": musikken som repraesentativ kunst ved Christian IV's hof', Christian IV's verden, ed. S. Ellehøj (Copenhagen, 1988), 433–64
N. Krabbe: Traek af musiklivet i Danmark på Christian IV's tid (Copenhagen, 1988)
A. Ørbak and O.Kongsted, eds.: Heinrich Schütz und die Musik in Dänemark zur zeit Christians IV (Copenhagen, 1989)
I. Myrner: 'Scandinavian Late 16th-Century Keyboard Music at the Court of Christian IV', Livro de homenagem a Macario Santiago Kastner, ed. M.F. Cidrais Rodrigues, M. Morais and R.V. Nery (Lisbon, 1992), 205–27

D: 18TH CENTURY

T. Krogh: 'Det første forsøg paa at skabe en opera i det danske sprog' [The first attempt to create an opera in the Danish language], Aarbog for musik (1922), 123–58
T. Krogh: Zur Geschichte des dänischen Singspiels im 18. Jahrhundert (Copenhagen, 1924)
T. Krogh: 'Aeldre dansk Teatermusik' [Danish stage music from the past], Musikhistorisk arkiv, i (1931), 1–100
E. Winkel: 'Danske Symfonier i det 18. Aarhundrede', DMt, xv (1940), 172–6, 201–4; xvi (1941), 7–13

E: 19TH CENTURY

N.M. Jensen: Den danske romance 1800–1850 og dens musikalske forudsaetninger [The Danish romance, 1800–50, and its musical basis] (Copenhagen, 1964)
L.B. Fabricius: Traek af dansk musiklivs historie m.m. (Copenhagen, 1975)
D. Fog: Notendruck und Musikhandel im 19. Jahrhundert in Dänemark: ein Beitrag zur Musikaliendatierung und zur Geschichte der Musikvermittlung (Copenhagen, 1986)
H. Kuhn: Defining a Nation in Song: Danish Patriotic Songs in Songbooks of the Period 1832–1870 (Copenhagen, 1990)
N.M. Jensen: 'Niels W. Gade og den nationale tone: dansk nationalromantik i musikalsk belysning', Dansk identitetshistorie, ed. O. Feldbaek, iii (Copenhagen, 1992), 188–336
K.A. Jürgensen: The Bournonville Tradition: the First Fifty Years, 1829–1879, i–ii (London, 1997)

F: 20TH CENTURY

G. Lynge: Danske komponister i det 20. aarhundredes begyndelse [Danish composers at the beginning of the 20th century] (Århus, 1916, 2/1917)
I. Bengtsson, ed.: Modern nordisk musik (Stockholm, 1957)
B. Wallner: Vår tids musik i Norden (Stockholm, 1968)
J.P. Larsen: 'Koralbøger og koralbogsproblemer siden Laub's Dansk kirkesang', Dansk kirkesangs årsskrift (1971–2), 76–103
E. Kullberg: 'De stormfulde år i dansk musik: påvirkninger, holdninger og debat i det danske kunstmusikliv i 10-året 1955–65' [Stormy years in Danish music: influences, attitudes and polemics, 1955–65], Otte ekkoer af musikforskning i Århus, ed. K.S. Bak and others (Århus, 1988), 81–117
E. Kullberg: 'Det andet oprør: reaktionen mod modernismen 1965–70' [The other revolution: reaction against modernism, 1965–70], Caecilia, i (1991), 57–96
K.Aa. Rasmussen: Noteworthy Danes: Portraits of Eleven Danish Composers (Copenhagen, 1991)
S. Lindholm: 'Danish Choral Music since 1900', Nordic Sounds (1995), no.3, 15–19
C. Røllum-Larsen: Dansk instrumental musik ca. 1910–1935 (Copenhagen, 1995)
E. Aschengreen: Der går dans: den kongelige ballet 1948–1998 (Copenhagen, 1998)
L.D. McLoskey: Twentieth Century Danish Music: an Annotated Bibliography and Research Directory (London, 1998)
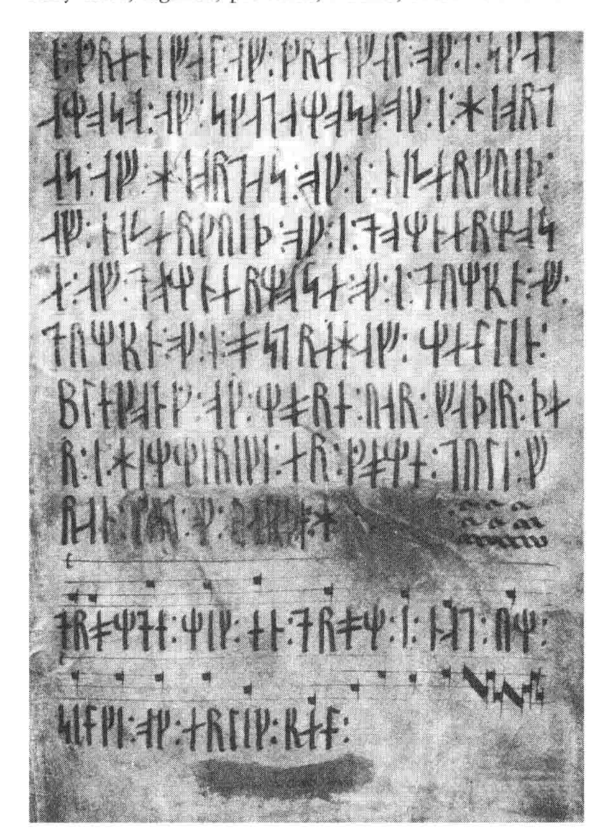
M. Fjeldsøe: Den fortraengte modernisme – den ny Musik i dansk musikliv 1920–1940 [The repressed modernism in Danish music, 1920–1940] (Copenhagen, 1999)

II. Traditional music

1. Early music history. 2. Collections. 3. Traditional classification of genres. 4. The 'new folk music'. 5. Research.

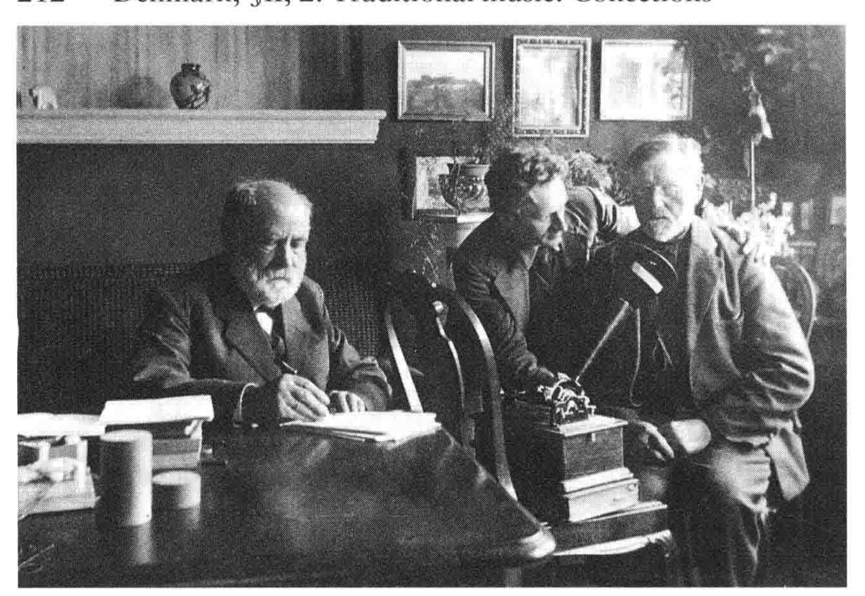
1. EARLY MUSIC HISTORY. Denmark is rich in archaeological finds, some of which bear witness to musical activity as early as the late Neolithic Age. They consist primarily of rattles, bull-roarers and flutes. The most notable archaeological instruments are the Bronze Age horns called lurs from about 1300–500 BCE, of which 37 are known on Danish territory, some of them in playable condition. The lurs are of exceptional craftsmanship and, in some cases, artistic beauty, and are thought to have played a role in religious rites.

A vital and multi-faceted oral tradition existed in the Old Norse areas from about 500 CE until the onset of Christianity in the 10th century, based both on the needs of a pre-literary society and on roots in the wider Germanic culture. The central force in this tradition was the skald, the Old Norse bard, who over successive generations gave voice to the lore and wisdom of the culture in performances ranging from the simplest village incantations to extended and finely wrought epic poetry at court. These singers of Norse lore may be considered Odin-skalds, named after the principal god, who was thought to be the first skald and whose words were formed in verses. The skalds projected the ideals of the Norse religion and upheld the heroic deeds of their ancestors, in some cases in long genealogies.



The vehicle for skaldic art was the song recitation (Danish: kvad), in which the words were cast in certain metrical forms based on a system of alliteration. In the ancient Danish cultural environment, and the Nordic in general, the most common locations for skaldic performance were the great halls of nobles and kings. Here, in an essentially theatrical performance, the skald assumed the roles of raconteur, singer and actor, among others.

When written down during the early Middle Ages, the prevailing style was prosimetrum, a mixture of prose and poetry in which the poem is the stable, repeated element, while the prose is an improvisatory set of variations on the central meaning of the poem.



The chief source of information on the Danish skalds is Saxo Grammaticus in his Gesta Danorum, written in Denmark between the end of the 12th century and the early years of the 13th century. In the prologue Saxo states his sources, emphasizing the song-poems of the ancestors and acknowledging his indebtedness to the eddas and sagas of the early medieval Icelandic authors. Ongoing ethnomusicological research in epic song-traditions will undoubtedly bring insights into the nature of skaldic performance and a better understanding of Denmark's earliest musicians.

2. COLLECTIONS. Notated examples of Danish traditional music from before 1800 are rare; only a handful of manuscripts with vocal music and a few music books with instrumental dance music are known to have survived: one from the Codex Runicus of about 1350 (fig.1), one from 1580 and four from the 16th and 17th centuries. A small number of pictorial representations are extant, but they are difficult to interpret, as are some of the findings of musical instruments. Literary sources provide a number of descriptions, and recently a few accounts from court cases have also come to light.

The first active collection of traditional music was directed by Abrahamsen, Nyerup and Rahbaek from 1809 to 1814. Another major collecting campaign started around 1840 and continued until 1877. This was part of a more comprehensive gathering of folklore, including fairy tales, legends, proverbs, riddles, customs and folk

1. 'Drømte mig en drøm i nat' ('I dreamt a dream last night'), the oldest preserved traditional Danish song, from the Codex Runicus, c1350 (DK-Kar AM 28 8vo, f.100r)

2. Evald Tang Kristensen (left) and Percy Grainger (centre) making a phonograph recording of the singer Jens Kristian Jensen beliefs, and was directed by the folklorist and philologist Svend Grundtvig, with the musical component managed by the organist Andreas Peder Berggreen (later Inspector of Music).

In these first two collections the organizers in Copenhagen involved regional collectors throughout the country. In 1867, in contrast, the Jutland teacher Evald Tang Kristensen began a collection himself, continuing until his death in 1929. He employed the help of a team of assistants for a brief period in the 1880s.

Dansk Folkemindesamling (Danish Folklore Archive) was founded in 1904 as the national archive and research centre for folk music. In the first half of the 20th century, the archivist Hakon Gruner Nielsen transcribed a large number of tunes, introducing the use of the phonograph cylinder for recording material in 1907.

Instrumental music from earlier periods is known almost exclusively from handwritten music books made by musicians for their own use. Whilst the earliest of these are from the second half of the 18th century, the majority originate from the second half of the 19th century and there are examples from as late as the middle of the 20th century. In all, there are more than 1000 books containing well over 50,000 tunes.

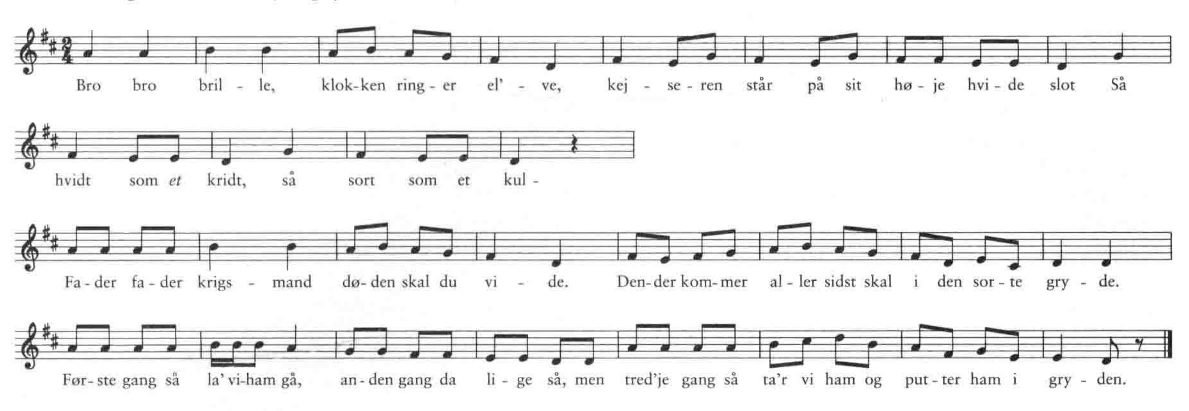
In 1958, the young composer and researcher Thorkild Knudsen and his circle inaugurated more ethnographically orientated collecting using tape recorders, and their work was later followed by Svend Nielsen and Henrik Koudal. In 1979, Svend Nielsen and his colleagues introduced the use of video technology for purposes such as the documentation of dance.

3. Traditional classification of genres. As research into the musical structures of melodic material was not conducted until recently, traditional music scholarship formerly adopted the vocal music classification system of textual scholarship, which is based on a combination of different criteria.

Folk ballads (texts with a strophic structure) constitute the dominant group. In this system they are divided into three chronological groups: medieval ballads (subdivided into heroic ballads and jesting songs according to content); songs from the period 1550–1700 (subdivided into religious and secular songs), and songs from after 1700 (subdivided according to subject into love songs, tragedy songs, broadside ballads, murder songs, etc.).

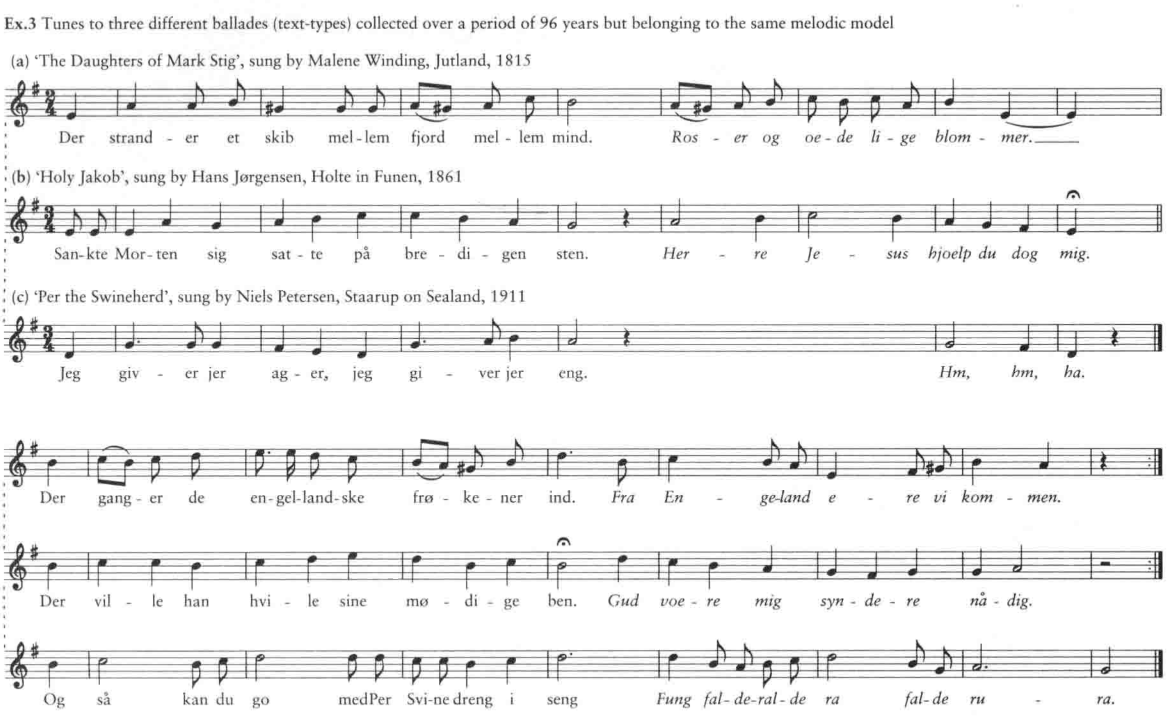
There are also the short forms: non-strophic rhymes, single-strophe lullabies and drinking songs, and calls. Singing games are regarded here as a special group because of their connection with dance. Instrumental music as a whole is essentially linked with dance, and is grouped according to the types of dance (polska, minuet, quadrille, waltz, etc.).

However, traditional Danish melodic material can also be divided into five main groups according to musical criteria: cries, rhyme melodies, hymn melodies, folksong melodies and instrumental tunes.



(i) Cries. These melodies are a transitional form between speech and music, using effects such as accentuation, rhythm and alteration of pitch to make the shout carry as far and as clearly as possible. It is encountered in signal calls and street cries (ex.1).

(ii) Rhyme melodies. These are made up of a small number of melodic formulae, usually within a major



Ex.1 Fish-dealer's street cry, performed by Claus Sørensen, recorded in 1959, in Vejle

Ex.2 Children's game: 'Bro bro brille,' sung by Bertha Schmidt, recorded in 1968 in Gentofte

Ex.3 Tunes to three different ballades (text-types) collected over a period of 96 years but belonging to the same melodic model hexachord; the formulae are freely combined and repeated in shorter or longer units, but specific short ending formulae can be differentiated. The rhyme is found in mocking songs, lullabies, children's rhymes and some singing games (ex.2).

(iii) Hymn melodies. These originated in the ecclesiastical tunes of the Reformation, which in the popular tradition were simplified in their structure and enriched with grace notes, embellishments and short melismas, and performed at a slower tempo.

(iv) Folksong melodies These strophic songs constitute the vast majority of traditional vocal music. They are chronologically divided into three styles: ballad style, transitional style and 'new' style.

(a) Ballad style. This is the oldest. A feature common to most melodies in this group is that they are within the range of a 9th with G as the most common final; but related tunes can end on different notes: E or A. Although a tentative link may be drawn between text type and melodic form, related tunes are often encountered in several different types of text (ex.3); and the same text type may make use of many unrelated tunes. The individual tune is often a combination of shorter or longer melodic or rhythmic figures, often the length of the line of text and with special final phrases. The individual figures usually utilise the interval of a 4th, 5th or 6th; the diatonic scale is dominant but the pentatonic also occurs. Many of the tunes seem to be based on one of a small number of characteristic melodic progressions of strophe length.

Courtly ballads and some jesting songs use the ballad style, as, to a limited extent, do more recent songs transcribed in the 19th century.

(b) Transitional style. This occurs primarily in connection with texts from the 16th and 17th centuries and can be regarded as a break with the melodic style of ballads. Substantial borrowings of German tunes and text are evident; the tunes are modal in nature, with clear cadences; the metre and the melodic structure are more fixed (perhaps influenced by the dance music of the time) with a clearer connection between lyrics and melody.

(c) 'New' style. This style generally extends over a wider range than ballad melodies. The later minor tonality of the older tonal forms was displaced by major tonality during the 18th and early 19th centuries, with the structure of the melodies becoming clearly triadic and chordal.

The link between lyrics and melody in the 'new' style of folksong is clear, and much of the melodic material appears to be highly heterogeneous. However, two commonly used groups of tunes can be distinguished on the basis of their form and structure. The first is an AABA form, in which the first two sections and the last are identical (or almost so) while the third is in a higher register. The other is an ABCD form where the melody rises section by section and peaks in the C section, then returning to where it started in the D section (ex.4). One-third of the new-style tunes are based on one of these two melody forms.

Ex.4 Sad song from about 1900, performed in 1963 by four girls in Copenhagen

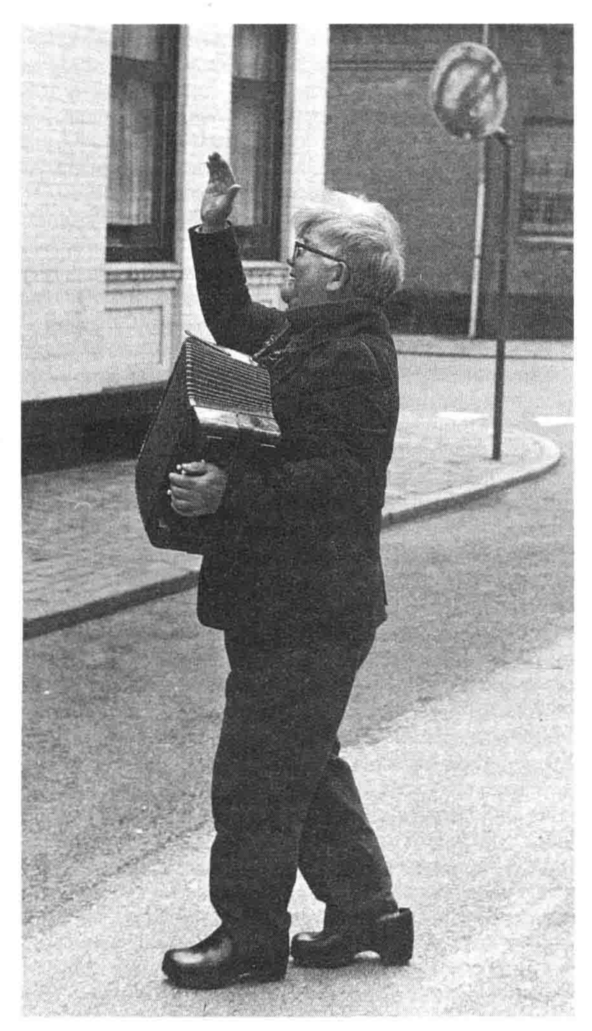
(v) Instrumental music. Around 1700, the fiddle and the drum were still the most important instruments in rural music. The bagpipe, hurdy-gurdy and jew's harp had been used also in the Middle Ages, but by the first decades of the 18th century the fiddle was replaced by the violin, which then became the dominant instrument while the drum disappeared. The early 19th century saw the introduction of the clarinet, followed by the flute, while the harmonica emerged around mid-century.

It is possible to distinguish between an early and a later style within instrumental melodics. In the early style the basic beat appears to dominate over measured time, the tonality may be modal (with a shifting sense of tonic) and the progression consists of a linking of short melodic and rhythmic motifs which are repeated or shifted to a different register. The melodies are divided into a number of units, whose length can vary from five to nine bars. This style is only found in certain tunes in music books before 1800 and among musicians in a few marginal localities (Fanø and Læsø).

The vast majority of instrumental tunes belong to the later style. Here melodic formulation is far more symmetrical and stereotypical. The melodies consist of a number of sections, each made up of eight bars which are repeated. Major tonality exists throughout the repertory and the tunes are based on broken triads with varying chordal functions (ex.5).

The demise of the older style was probably due to the introduction of the Town Musician (an official employed by the State) in the 17th century. For almost two centuries these officials and the professional musicians they employed enjoyed the exclusive right to play for the town's citizens and usually for the peasantry as well. Although peasant fiddlers tried to operate covertly, there is much to suggest that the musical influence of the Town Musicians, introducing new music from the south, prevailed in the long run.

Ex.5 An old dance tune, Foetter Mikkel, used for a couple-dance, played in 1983 by the fiddler Viggo Petersen, Bedsted



4. THE 'NEW FOLK MUSIC'. In the 20th century, as a result of changes in family, economic and social structures, and not least the development of the media, traditional music culture lost many of its original functions. It still exists (most actively among children), but goes largely unnoticed, and is invisible to most people.

In the middle 1960s the 'new folk music' emerged as a continuation of the 'revival wave'. Two key figures in this movement were the violinist Evald Thomsen and the singer Ingeborg Munch; the movement was also aided by the Folkmusikhuset i Hogager, which made available printed folktunes. The movement reached a peak around 1980 but many of the clubs have now closed or are much less popular. How far the 'new folk music' can be regarded as a continuation of older traditional music forms is debatable. Its use of traditional songs is extremely limited, but it has incorporated traditional instrumental tunes to a far greater extent. Some young performers investigate the past and use instruments from previous historical periods, but more often turn their attention to English, Scottish, Irish and Swedish musical material. 'New folk music' involves more conscious and overt means of presentation and includes amateur, professional and semi-professional practitioners in two major organizations: Folkemusikhusringen (Folk Music House Ring) for amateurs and Folkemusiksammenslutningen (Folk Music Association) for professionals.

5. RESEARCH. There are a few general accounts of the history of Danish folk music scholarship. The number of actual musical analyses is surprisingly small, and the research that has been carried out has concentrated largely on a very small selection of topics and problems. As in the area of textual research, interest is chiefly focussed on medieval ballads, and scholarly work has concentrated on their dating, origin and tonal structure.

In accordance with the prevailing cultural outlook at the end of the 19th century, the church music historian Thomas Laub attempted to show that folk song melodies were based on musical ideas originating in medieval and Reformation ecclesiastical song, while Erik Abrahamsen also suggested that they were strongly influenced by

3. Harry Gregersen, street singer, in Odense, 1981

Gregorian chant. Both of these theories have since been rejected.

In the period 1956 to 1975, Thorkild Knudsen published three articles setting forth an alternative view of the tonality and structure of the melodies, which he believed to be made up of particular melodic or rhythmic figures or phrases and subject to certain melodic models. In 1993 the music researcher Finn Mathiesen put forward a new view of the tonality of ballads based on the theories outlined by Curt Sachs in 1943.

Apart from the ballad genre, the teacher Søren Tvaermose Thyregod demonstrated a particular formulaic structure in a group of Danish singing-game tunes (1931), and the composer Vagn Holmboe conducted a major structural analysis of Danish street cries at the end of the 1930s, known only by a narrow circle of specialists until its publication in 1988.

In 1950 the music researcher Nils Schiørring undertook doctoral research on ballad tunes from the period 1550–1700, demonstrating their heavy German influence and dependence on hymn tunes of the time.

With the transition to a more ethnographically orientated attitude at the end of the 1950s, music began to be seen in its context, and beginning in 1970 there has been a distinct trend among researchers towards replacing the ideologically loaded term 'folk music' with 'traditional music'. Researchers such as Nils Schiørring, Thorkild Knudsen, Karl Clausen, Svend Nielsen and Henrik Koudal have studied individual singers and their repertories; the songs of specific social groups have been described by Anders Enevig (the destitute of Copenhagen) and Svend Nielsen; geographically defined studies have been carried out by Åge Skjelborg (Anholt), Kirsten Sass Bak and others (Southern Jutland) and Anders Christiansen (Laesø); and the functions of songs have been described by Svend Nielsen (satirical songs), who has also written about the singers' own assessment of the ballads they perform. Henrik Koudal has done extensive research on the historical aspect of traditional music, most notably on the institution of the Town Musician.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

STUDIES OF FOLKSONG TUNES

C. Sachs: 'The Road to Major', MQ, xxix (1943), 381–404

T. Knudsen: 'Praemodal og pseudogregoriansk struktur i dansk folkevise', DMt, xxxii (1957), 63–8; Fr. trans. in JIFMC, x (1958), 1–14

T. Knudsen: 'Model, type og variant', DMt, xxxvi (1961), 79–92; Ger. trans. in Wissenschaftliche Zeitschrift der Ernst-Moritz-Arndt Universität Greifswald, x (1960–61), 77–89

M.H. Petersen: 'Kingosangen i folkelig dansk tradition', Dansk kirkesangs årsskrift, xix (1965–6), 25–42

V. Holmboe: Danish Street Cries: a Study of their Musical Structure and a Complete Edition of Tunes with Words Collected Before 1960 (Copenhagen, 1988) [incl. cassette]

F. Mathiassen: 'Gammeldansk folketonalitet', Caecilia (1992–3), 89–162

INVESTIGATION AND COLLECTION

H. Grüner-Nielsen: Vore aeldste folkedanse, langdans og polskdans (Copenhagen, 1917)

H. Grüner-Nielsen: Folkelig vals (Copenhagen, 1920/R)

N. Schiørring: Det 16. og 17. århundredes verdslige danske visesang, i–ii (diss, U. of Copenhagen, 1950)

S. Nielsen: Glimt af dansk folkemusik: tekster, melodier og kommentarer (Copenhagen, 1977) [incl. recording]

S. Nielsen: 'Når visen får brod: om nidviser, smoedeviser, drilleviser og protestsange: et våben for de svage i samfundet' [When folksong has a sting: on satirical songs, mocking songs and protest songs: a weapon for the weak in society], Modspil, no.3 (1978)

J.H. Koudal: Sang og musik i Dansk Folkemindesamling: en indføring (Copenhagen, 1989)

J.H. Koudal: 'Town Waits and Country Fiddlers in Denmark', Historische Volksmusikforschung: Göttingen 1991, 285–94

J.H. Koudal: 'Ethnomusicology and Folk Music Research in Denmark', YTM, xxv (1993), 100–25

S. Nielsen: Dansk folkemusik: en indføring i den traditionelle musik i Danmark (Copenhagen, 1993)

COLLECTIONS

S. Grundtvig and others, eds.: Danmarks gamle folkeviser, i–xii (1853–1965, 2/1966–76)

A.P. Berggreen, ed: Danske folkesange og melodier (Copenhagen, 1869)

E.T. Kristensen, ed.: Jyske folkeminder [Jutland folklore], i–ii, xi (Copenhagen, 1871–6, 1891)

E.T. Kristensen, ed.: Et hundrede gamle danske skjoemteviser efter nutidssang [100 old Danish jesting songs after contemporary oral tradition] (Århus, 1901)

T. Knudsen and N.Schiørring, eds: Folkevisen i Danmark: efter optegnelser i Dansk Folkemindesamling, i–viii (1960–68)

A. Enevig: Prinser og vagabonder (Copenhagen, 1963)

358 + 358 danske folke dansemelodier, i–ii (Roslev, 1963–84) [pubn of the Danske Folkedanseres Spillemandskreds]

A. Enevig: Klunsere og kraemmere [Rag-and-bone men and hucksters] (Copenhagen, 1964)

S. Nielsen, ed: Flyv lille påfugl: tekster, melodier og kommentarer til traditionel sang blandt børn [Fly little peacock: words, tunes and comments on traditional songs among children] (Copenhagen, 1980) [incl. recording]

S. Nielsen, ed: Danske sanglege (Copenhagen, 1984)
S. Nielsen, ed: Go'morgen Karl Baj! Sang blandt prinser og klunsere på Nørrebro i København, optaget i 1958 af Anders Enevig (Copenhagen, 1985) [incl. recording]
J.H. Koudal, ed.: Rasmus Storms nodebog: en fynsk tjenestekarls dansemelodier o. 1760 [Rasmus Storm's music book: the dance tunes of a Funen servant *c*1760] (Copenhagen, 1987) [score]

RECORDINGS

Flyv lille påfugl: traditionel sang blandt børn, coll. S. Nielsen, Kragen DFS 2 (1980)
Her'er sild! Danske gaderåb optaget i perioden 1935–88 [Danish street cries recorded in the period 1935–88], coll. S. Nielsen, Kragen DFS 103 (1988)
Spillemandsmusik på Laesø [Fiddler music on Laesø], coll. C. Anders, Kragen DFS 5 (1995)
Danemark: chanteurs et menetriers, coll. L. Halskov, Ocora C 6000002 (1996)
Hej sing op!, i: Danske søfolk synger shanties og opsange [Danish sailors sing sea songs and shanties], coll. S. Nielsen, Kragen DFS 6 (1996)
Hej sing op!, ii: Danske søfolk synger frivagtviser [Danish sailors sing off-duty songs], coll. S. Nielsen, Kragen DFS 7 (1996)

NIELS MARTIN JENSEN (I), LOUIS K. CHRISTENSEN(II, 1), SVEND NIELSEN (II, 2–5)

Denner [Tenner]. German family of woodwind instrument makers. They were active in Nuremberg between about 1680 and 1764. The first in Germany to make the new French-style woodwind instruments, they dominated German woodwind instrument making in the first half of the 18th century.

The family business had its origins in the craft, exclusive to Nuremberg, of 'horn-turning', the making of decoys and other hunting equipment from animal horn; 13 masters of this craft bore the name Denner. The first of the family to concern himself exclusively with the making of woodwind instruments was Johann Christoph Denner (b Leipzig, bap. 13 Aug 1655; bur. Nuremberg, 26 April 1707), who had come to Nuremberg about 1666 with his father, a horn-turner originally from Nuremberg. He at first learned his father's trade, but then began to make woodwind instruments in the French style; such instruments were just then beginning to spread into Germany. In 1696 he petitioned for master's rights together with Johann Schell (1660–1732) and in 1697 the two were granted rights for the 'manufacture of French musical instruments consisting chiefly of oboes and recorders [flandadois]'. Denner's social and economic fortunes rose rapidly; he became street captain in 1702 and a member of the Greater Council in 1703, and documentary evidence shows that he owned several houses.

Johann Christoph's younger brother Johann Carl Denner (b Leipzig, bap. 26 June 1660; d after 1701) made 'nothing but recorders and flageolets'. He was never granted master's rights and was not allowed to sell instruments under his own name, but he at first prospered nevertheless. However, after serving a prison sentence for adultery and debt, he left Nuremberg in 1702 and disappeared.

Johann Christoph's two sons Jacob Denner (b 3 Aug 1681; d 16 Aug 1735) and Johann David Denner (bap. 31 May 1691; bur. 3 Feb 1764) learned the craft of instrument making from their father. Jacob was working for the Medici court in Florence in spring 1708 and deliveries of instruments made by him, including clarinets (the earliest references to this instrument), are recorded from 1710 onwards. He was granted master's rights before 1716. Jacob was also a professional performer: he was mentioned as a member of the Nuremberg Stadtpfeiferei in 1705 and attained its highest post in 1727. His funeral sermon (manuscript, 1735, D-Ngm 2° HS 108 571), provides many biographical details and praises his skill on the oboe, 'which he handled so finely . . . and played so admirably that his like was never heard in Nuremberg'. Johann David was a 'musician, also maker of oboes, bassoons and flutes', according to the address at his funeral. He succeeded to his father's workshop but acquired master's rights unusually late, in 1736, when he was 45 years of age. Jacob apparently set up on his own, with the result that there were two different workshops (Doppelmayr, 1730) producing instruments.

The outstanding importance of the Denners was recognized by their contemporaries. Of particular significance is Doppelmayr's appraisal (1730, pp.305–6), expressly ascribing the invention of the clarinet to Johann Christoph, together with improvements to the racket and the chalumeau. Although no clarinet by Johann Christoph has been preserved (the existing instruments bearing the mark 'I.C. DENNER' are by Johann David), much evidence indicates that the instrument originated with the Denner family in Nuremberg. The fame of the Denners, based on their invention of the clarinet and on Doppelmayr's Historische Nachricht, was passed down through the centuries; Johann Christoph even attained the status of operetta hero in Der Klarinettenmacher, by Friedrich Weigmann and G.R. Kruse (Berlin, 1912). More than 150 woodwind instruments from the Denner workshops have been preserved (see Young): recorders of all pitches, both traditional models and those described as 'French flutes'; transverse flutes in three sections with a C foot as well as the earliest flutes in four sections; shawms and oboes of various sizes; chalumeaux and clarinets; rackets, dulcians and bassoons; and cornetts. Some of the early instruments show clearly the influence of French models, but further developed through the experience born of musical practice. There are both luxuriously grand and plainer models, but all are of high quality. It is difficult to ascribe instruments to individual makers since masters' marks were inherited in Nuremberg. Three distinct marks were used by members of the Denner family: 'D' on its own; 'I.C. DENNER' in scroll , with a 'D' and sometimes also an 'I' underneath; and 'I. DENNER' in scroll with 'ID' beneath it, with a tree between the letters (used exclusively by Jacob Denner; see LangwillI7 for further information).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI (also 'Makers' Marks on Wind Instruments'; H. Heyde); YoungHI
J.G. Doppelmayr: Historische Nachricht von den Nürnbergischen Mathematicis und Künstlern (Nuremberg, 1730)
E. Nickel: Der Holzblasinstrumentenbau in der Freien Reichsstadt Nürnberg (Munich, 1971)
M. Kirnbauer: 'Der Klarinettenmacher: wiederentdeckte Oper von G.R. Kruse und F. Weigmann', Oboe, Klarinette, Fagott, v (1990), 212–20
M. Kirnbauer: 'Überlegungen zu den Meisterzeichen Nürnberger "Holzblasinstrumentenmacher" im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert', Tibia, xvii (1992), 9–20
P. Ferrari: 'Cercando strumenti musicali a Norimberga: Ferdinanda de'Medici, Cristoforo Carlo Grundherr, Johann Christoph Denner e Jacob Denner', Recercare, vi (1994), 203–18
M. Kirnbauer: Neue historische Nachrichten von Nürnberger Musikern und Instrumentenbauern, Der schöne Klan: Studien zum historischen Musikinstrumentenbau in Deutschland und Japan, ed. D. Krickeberg (Nuremberg, 1995), 198–216

MARTIN KIRNBAUER

Denny, Sandy [Alexandra] (b London, 6 Jan 1948; d London, 21 April 1978). English folk-rock singer and songwriter. She began singing at folkclubs while a student at Kingston Art College, then joined the Strawbs, a rock band with whom she recorded one album before joining Fairport Convention. Their 1969 album Unhalfbricking (Isl., 1969) included her best-known song, 'Who knows where the time goes' (later a hit for the American singer Judy Collins) and the following year she encouraged the band to add amplified backing to British traditional songs on the classic folk-rock album Leige and Lief (Isl., 1969). Her strong, flexible voice matched both the rousing electric guitar work of Richard Thompson and the fiddle playing of Dave Swarbrick. By the time it was released Denny had formed Fotheringay with the Australian guitarist Trevor Lucas, whom she later married. The band released one album before Denny started a solo career. Her sad and introspective songwriting was shown on the solo albums The North Star Grassman and the Ravens (Isl., 1971), Sandy (Isl., 1972) and Like an Old-Fashioned Waltz (Isl., 1973): her songs were obsessed with death and contained oblique lyrics that seemed at odds with her jovial personality. She moved into rock theatrics, playing the Nurse alongside the Who in Tommy, then rejoined Fairport Convention. She recorded the album Rendezvous (Isl., 1977), before dying from a brain haemorrage after a fall in April 1978. A recording of her final concert was released to mark the 20th anniversary of the death (Isl., 1998).

ROBIN DENSELOW

Denny, William D(ouglas) (b Seattle, 2 July 1910; d Berkeley, 2 Sept 1980). American composer. After attending the University of California, Berkeley (BA 1931, MA 1933), he studied composition in Paris with Dukas (1933–5) and at the American Academy in Rome (1939–41), where he was Horatio Parker Fellow. In June 1953 he won a Fromm Foundation award for his String Quartet no.2. He taught at Berkeley (1938–9), Harvard University (1941–2), and Vassar College (1942–4), before returning to Berkeley as professor (1945–78).

Denny's music is thoroughly personal and abstract, characterized by an intense lyricism, with rhythmic elements predominating. The structure and symmetry of his works are flawlessly balanced, often within a complex contrapuntal texture, and his idiomatic writing for instruments has been particularly admired. Denny's harmonic language is dissonant yet orientated around tonal centres; his style has a definite similarity to the mature works of Piston. During the 1940s and 50s he was one of the most respected composers active in the San Francisco Bay area, and his compositions were performed by the CBS and NBC symphony orchestras, the San Francisco SO, the Griller String Quartet, the Budapest String Quartet, the Juilliard String Quartet and the University Chorus at Berkeley.

WORKS

Orch: Bacchanale, 1935; Concertino, 1937; Sym. no.1, 1939; Sinfonietta, 1940; Suite, chbr orch, 1940; Ov., str, 1945; Praeludium, 1946; Sym. no.2, 1949; Sym. no.3, 1955–7; Introduction and Allegro, 1956

Chbr: Str Qts, 1937–8; Sonata, va, pf, 1943–4; Str Qt no.2, 1952; Str Qt no.3, 1955; Partita, org, 1958; Str Trio, 1965; Toccata, Aria, and Fugue, org, 1966

Choral: Most Glorious Lord of Life, cant., 1943; 3 Motets, 1946–7

MSS in US-BEm

JOHN A. EMERSON

De Nobel, Felix (b Haarlem, 27 May 1907; d Amsterdam, 25 March 1981). Dutch conductor and pianist. He studied with Hendrik Andriessen and Martha Autengruber at the Amsterdam Conservatory, and in 1930 began to appear regularly as a soloist, chamber player and accompanist for such artists as Schwarzkopf, Elisabeth Schumann, Patzak and Bernac. In 1937 he became conductor of a choir, formed originally to take part in a series of radio broadcasts of Bach's cantatas, which remained together and became the Nederlands Kamerkoor. Until he gave up the conductorship in 1972 De Nobel did much with the choir to promote composers such as Monteverdi and Schütz in the Netherlands; he also introduced many new works, often written especially for them, including those by Frank Martin and Poulenc, as well as Badings and other Dutch composers. European and American tours, appearances at leading festivals and numerous recordings, gave the conductor and choir an international reputation. De Nobel wrote many choral arrangements of folksongs, and taught accompaniment and song interpretation at a number of Dutch conservatories.

TRUUS DE LEUR

Denon. Japanese record label of Nippon Columbia Kabushiki Kaisha. The firm's forerunner, Nippon Chikuonki Shōkai (Japan Phonograph Company), was established in 1910 by the American entrepreneur Frederick Whitney Horne. The company immediately undertook a recording programme, becoming one of the first Japanese companies to do so, and produced records by the soprano Miura Tamaki among others. In 1927 it became affiliated to the British Columbia Company, and it changed its name to Nippon Columbia Chikuonki Kabushiki Kaisha the following year. In addition to marketing a large number of Columbia recordings, the company won popularity with recordings by the tenor Yoshie Fujiwara.

Foreign management of the company came to an end in 1935, after which it was administered with Japanese capital, and in 1946 its trading name was changed to Nippon Columbia Kabushiki Kaisha. From 1948 the company distributed recordings from American Columbia (the relationship with American CBS continued until 1968, and that with the British Columbia Company until 1962); it released LPs of performances by Bruno Walter, George Szell, Nathan Milstein and the Budapest Quartet. In 1958 Nippon Columbia began the sale of stereo records, and from about 1960 onwards it recorded works by Japanese composers. Through its contracts with Erato and Supraphon, it also contributed to the issued classical music.

By 1971, the company, now using the label name Denon, had developed a system of digital recording, pulse code modulation (PCM). The PCM recorder became commercially available in 1972, and the company began to make recordings in Europe using the system in 1974. These included the Smetana Quartet's complete Beethoven cycle, the complete Beethoven symphonies conducted by Otmar Suitner, the complete Mahler symphonies conducted by Inbal and recordings of Dvořák by the Czech PO under Neumann. Japanese musicians were represented by such artists as the flautist Masahiro Arita and the Baroque violinist Ryō Terakado as well as by works by Tōru Takemitsu.

SACHIO MOROISHI

Dens, Michel (Maurice Marcel) (b Roubaix, 22 June 1911). French baritone. After studies in his home town, he made his début at Lille in 1938, later singing in Bordeaux, Grenoble and Toulouse. In 1947 he made his début at the Opéra-Comique, Paris, as Albert in Werther, later singing Scarpia, Figaro, Escamillo and Ourrias in Gounod's Mireille, a role he recorded with great distinction. In 1951 he created the role of Rodolphe in Emmanuel Bondeville's Madame Bovary. During the 1950s Dens was the leading baritone at the Paris Opéra, particularly admired as Rigoletto and Iago. He had one of the most beautiful and characterful voices of his time. He was equally at home in lighter music and made many recordings of operettas, both French and Viennese. In Paris he often appeared in the operetta repertory at the Théâtre de la Gaîté. Dens had one of the longest careers of any singer in the 20th century, appearing as late as 1988 as Ménélas in La belle Hélène. He was for a time the director of Presence de l'Art Lyrique.

PATRICK O'CONNOR

Densmore, Frances (b Red Wing, MN, 21 May 1867; d Red Wing, 5 June 1957). American ethnomusicologist. She received her early musical education at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Ohio, where she studied the piano, organ and harmony; later she was a piano pupil of Carl Baermann in Boston and of Leopold Godowsky, and studied counterpoint with John K. Paine at Harvard University. A pioneer in the study of Amerindian music, she became interested in the subject in 1893 after reading reports of Alice C. Fletcher's work; she pursued this highly specialized field of study with unflagging energy until her death. In 1901 she wrote down for the first time songs from a Sioux woman near Red Wing. In 1904 she studied Filipino music at the St Louis Exposition, and notated the song of Geronimo, the famous Apache chief. In 1905 she visited the White Earth Reservation in Minnesota to observe the Chippewa, and made her first field trip at Grand Portage on the north shore of Lake Superior. In 1907 her work was recognized by the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution and she was made a Collaborator, a title which she held for the next 50 years. During this period the Bureau published 13 of her monographs on Amerindian music, five anthropological studies and one paper in the Annual Report series.

From her first book, Chippewa Music (1910–13/R), she displayed her ability as an observant ethnographer and a conscientious analyst of music. In addition to tribal monographs she contributed articles to many journals as a means of interpreting Amerindian culture to a larger public. The American Indians and their Music (1926) was written as an introduction for the lay reader. From her recordings kept in the Library of Congress seven LP records have been issued.

WRITINGS

Chippewa Music (Washington DC, 1910–13/R)
Teton Sioux Music (Washington DC, 1918/R, 2/1992)
Northern Ute Music (Washington DC, 1922/R)
Mandan and Hidatsa Music (Washington DC, 1923/R)
The American Indians and their Music (New York, 1926/R, 2/1937)
Papago Music (Washington DC, 1929/R)
Pawnee Music (Washington DC, 1929/R)
Menominee Music (Washington DC, 1932/R)
Yuman and Yaqui Music (Washington DC, 1932/R)
Cheyenne and Arapaho Music (Los Angeles, 1936)
Music of Santo Domingo Pueblo, New Mexico (Los Angeles, 1938)
Nootka and Quileute Music (Washington DC, 1939/R)
Music of the Indians of British Columbia (Washington DC, 1943/R)
Choctaw Music (Washington DC, 1943/R)
Seminole Music (Washington DC, 1956/R)
Music of Acoma, Isleta, Cochiti and Zuni Pueblos (Washington DC, 1957/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'The Bibliography, Frances Densmore', Eth-M Newsletter, no.7 (1956), 14; errata in EthM, ii (1958), 26
C. Hofmann, ed.: Frances Densmore and American Indian Music (New York, 1968) [incl. bibliography, discography, photographs and several representative articles]
C.J. Frisbie: 'Women and the Society for Ethnomusicology: Roles and Contributions from Formation through Incorporation (1952/53–1961)', Comparative Musicology and Anthropology of Music: Essays on the History of Ethnomusicology, ed. B. Nettl and P.V. Bohlman (Chicago, 1991), 244–65

WILLARD RHODES

Denson, Seaborn M. (b nr Arbacoochee, AL, 9 April 1854; d Helicon district, Winston County, AL, 18 April 1936). American composer and tune book compiler. He conducted singing-schools in the South for over 50 years, and with his brother Thomas Jackson Denson (b nr Arbacoochee, AL, 20 Jan 1863; d nr Jasper, AL, 14 Sept 1935) taught many thousands of rural singers in the South to read shape-note music. He was music editor for J.S. James's The Original Sacred Harp (Atlanta, 1911/R), a revision of B.F. White's The Sacred Harp (1844), which added alto parts to the original three-part harmonizations and included newly composed four-part pieces as well. A later edition, The Original Sacred Harp, Denson Revision (Haleyville, AL, 1936, 2/1960, 4/1971, 5/1991), is one of the two revisions of The Sacred Harp still widely used.

See SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.L. Ellington: The Sacred Harp Tradition of the South: its Origin and Evolution (diss., Florida State U., 1969)
B.E. Cobb: The Sacred Harp: a Tradition and its Music (Athens, GA, 1978, 2/1989)

HARRY ESKEW

Denss, Adrian (fl late 16th century). ?Flemish lutenist and composer. It is possible that he spent some time in Antwerp, going to Cologne shortly before his anthology of music for seven-course solo lute in French tablature, Florilegium, was published there in 1594 (selections ed. A. Nachtsheim and M. Esch, Bad Ems, *c*1989). There is little trace of his career there although he was undoubtedly involved in musical activity centring on the household of Arnold of Manderscheidt and Blankenheim, a Cologne church official, to whom his book is dedicated.

Klöckner argued that the 84 tabulations of vocal works in the Florilegium are to be regarded exclusively as instrumental pieces rather than as accompaniments. On this basis, he suggested that the music had been reduced to either two or three voices from the original vocal works and that the intabulations were not intended for simultaneous performance with voices, but rather for alternate performance of successive stanzas. He further suggested that Denss may have remained unknown to many of his contemporaries because of his manner of representing polyphony in a complex way by means of melodic and rhythmic intensification of the inner voices, and because of the serious tone of his own pieces, which look forward to those of the French 17th-century lute school.

His own pieces in the collection show Denss to have been a fine composer, his melodic and harmonic gifts perhaps being at their height in the ten eloquent and song-like galliards. He also included in Florilegium 11 fantasias, eight passamezzo-galliard suites, a 'Gagliarda di Ferrabosco' (which Ferrabosco is not known), 19 allemandes (three being present in two versions), five courantes, two voltas, four branles, one ronde and one 'Pauern Tantz'. Among the fantasias, nine of which are motet-like and apparently by Denss himself, two are monothematic ones by Gregorio Huet. Popular melodies served as a basis for a number of the dance pieces, and concordances indicate that Denss knew well the cittern literature and other sources published in the Netherlands and elsewhere.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.B. Lobaugh: Three German Lute Books (diss., U. of Rochester, NY, 1968)

D. Klöckner: Das Florilegium des Adrian Denss (Köln, 1594) (diss., U. of Cologne, 1970) [see also review by H.B. Lobaugh, JLSA, v (1972), 110–14]

H.B. Lobaugh: 'Adrian Denss's Florilegium (1594)', JLSA, iii (1970), 13–21

H.B. LOBAUGH

Dent, Edward J(oseph) (b Ribston, Yorks., 16 July 1876; d London, 22 Aug 1957). English musicologist, teacher, translator and critic. He was educated at Eton, where he studied music with C.H. Lloyd, and Cambridge, where his teachers were Charles Wood and Stanford. He was elected a Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, in 1902, began lecturing on the history of music that year and also taught harmony, counterpoint and composition. In 1918 he left for London, where he worked as a music critic. He returned to Cambridge as professor of music in 1926, when he was again elected to a fellowship at King's. He occupied the Cambridge chair for 15 years. From his retirement until his death he lived in London.

At Cambridge, Dent completely reorganized the teaching for the MusB degree. He realized that this degree would no longer be taken mainly by church organists but that a Cambridge education in music would produce members of other branches of the musical profession – school and university teachers, composers, critics, BBC staff and so on – and he consistently aimed at giving the curriculum greater breadth as a sound foundation, stressing particularly the study of music history and encouraging the performance of pre-19th-century, especially Baroque, music. He exercised a profound influence on several generations of young musicians, whose subsequent success as composers, teachers, performers or scholars owed much to his teaching and example. He himself composed a small amount of music, mainly of a conservative cast.

Dent opened up wide areas of the repertory that were then little known. An insistence on performance as the ultimate goal lay behind his approach to scholarship. He worked especially on Italian Baroque opera, and the fruits of his study appeared in a long series of articles and most notably in his books on Alessandro Scarlatti and Mozart's operas, both of which show that he possessed to a rare degree the power to form keen critical judgments based on close, accurate scholarship. He contributed an edition of Cupid and Death to Musica Britannica in the hope that it would stimulate stage productions. His broad, catholic outlook prevented him – and through him his research students – from becoming so absorbed in the detail of a particular project as to lose sight of its wider musical and social context.

Given his research interests, it is not surprising that operatic activity in Britain owes Dent a special debt. He was involved in the historic production of Mozart's Die Zauberflöte at Cambridge in 1911, when the work was still practically unknown to the British musical public. His translation of it initiated a long series of fine translations that did much to bring opera to a wider audience. He wanted opera – indeed all music – to be enjoyed, and he felt that the barrier of a foreign language prevented many people from enjoying it as much as they ought. He was very well equipped for his task, for he was an excellent linguist, had an easy literary style and was constantly preoccupied with the needs of the theatre and the voice. His success was great, and several generations of opera audiences have had the benefit, almost for the first time, of translations that are worthy of the originals and convey the course of the drama stylishly and idiomatically. Language, however, is in a constant state of flux, and Dent's translations are of necessity being modified or superseded with the passing years. Yet this does not diminish his achievement in bringing a new dimension into British operatic experience which, moreover, to the benefit of his successors, immeasurably raised the status of the translator. He was a director and later governor of Sadler's Wells Opera and a director of Covent Garden Opera Trust.

When Dent was a young man British musical life was in many respects insular, and one of his most important achievements was to broaden horizons and establish wider contacts. His linguistic ability and catholic tastes again helped him here; so too did his extensive knowledge of European culture, his international standing as a scholar and his relaxed and adaptable manner – witty and urbane in exposition, subtle and persuasive in diplomacy. After World War I he devoted much effort to the restoring of artistic links between the combatant countries. One outcome of this activity was the establishment in 1923 of the ISCM, of which he was elected the first president; he held the position until 1938. It is a measure of the breadth of his interests and of the esteem in which he was held that he was also, from 1931 to 1949, president of the IMS, a combination of the two offices in one person which has not been (and is unlikely to be) repeated. He was subsequently made honorary president of both bodies. Yet he had a strong mischievous and irreverent streak and delighted in uttering outrageous opinions about music that he felt had been accepted with unthinking reverence. His delight would increase if he knew that he thereby shocked the respectable – especially if they were clergymen or women. He rebelled against the conventions of the society of his day and was a radical dissenter and an enemy of smugness and snobbery. His attitudes were in many ways paradoxical: for instance, he was an agnostic who yet composed a group of moving and wholly sincere motets; and he could express left-wing sympathies but always maintained that many of the main achievements of music had been fostered by aristocratic societies.

In 1961, in recognition of his services to international scholarship, the Royal Musical Association, of which he was president from 1928 to 1935, instituted the Dent Medal, which is awarded annually to recipients selected for their outstanding contributions to musicology by the council of the association. In 1953 Dent was one of the first two musicians to be elected a Fellow of the British Academy. He was an honorary doctor of music at Oxford (1932), Harvard (1936) and Cambridge (1947) universities.

WRITINGS

'Alessandro Scarlatti', PMA, xxx (1903–4), 75–90

Alessandro Scarlatti (London, 1905, rev. 2/1960/R by F. Walker)

'Leonardo Leo', PMA, xxxii (1905–6), 59–71

'A Jesuit at the Opera in 1680', Riemann-Festschrift (Leipzig, 1909/R), 381–93
'Ensembles and Finales in Eighteenth-Century Italian Opera', SIMG, xi (1909–10), 543–78; xii (1910–11), 112–42
'Italian Chamber Cantatas', MA, ii (1910–11), 142–53, 185–99
'Notes on the "Amfiparnasso" of Orazio Vecchi', SIMG, xii (1910–11), 330–46
'Italian Opera in the Eighteenth Century, and its Influence on the Music of the Classical Period', SIMG, xiv (1912–13), 500–09
Mozart's Operas: a Critical Study (London, 1913, 2/1947/R; Fr. trans., 1958)
'The Laudi Spirituali in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries', PMA, xliii (1916–17), 63–95
'Music in University Education', MQ, iii (1917), 605–19
'Hans Pfitzner', ML, iv (1923), 119–32
Terpander, or Music and the Future (London, 1926/R1965 as The Future of Music)
Foundations of English Opera: a Study of Musical Drama in England during the Seventeenth Century (Cambridge, 1928/R)
'Englische Einflüsse bei Händel', HJb 1929, 1–12; Eng. orig. in MMR, lxi (1931), 225–8
'Social Aspects of Music in the Middle Ages', OHM, introductory vol., ed. P.C. Buck (2/1929/R), 184–218
'William Byrd and the Madrigal', Musikwissenschaftliche Beiträge: Festschrift für Johannes Wolf, ed. W. Lott, H. Osthoff and W. Wolffheim (Berlin, 1929/R), 24–30
'Engländer', Handbuch der Musikgeschichte, ed. G. Adler, ii (Frankfurt, 1924, 2/1930/R), 1044–57
'The Universal Aspect of Musical History', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: Festschrift für Guido Adler (Vienna, 1930/R), 7–11
'The Romantic Spirit in Music', PMA, lix (1932–3), 85–102
Ferruccio Busoni (London, 1933/R)
Handel (London, 1934/R)
'The Translation of Operas', PMA, lxi (1934–5), 81–104
'Bellini in Inghilterra', Vincenzo Bellini, ed. I. Pizzetti (Milan, 1936; Eng. version in Taylor, 1979), 164–90
'Otto Kinkeldey', MQ, xxiv (1938), 405–11
Opera (Harmondsworth, 1940, 2/1949/R)
Notes on Fugue for Beginners (Cambridge, 1941/R)
'Italian Opera in London', PRMA, lxxi (1944–5), 19–42
A Theatre for Everybody: the Story of the Old Vic and Sadler's Wells (London, 1945/R, 2/1946)
'Problems of Modern Opera', Music Today, i (1949), 97–109
'Gioacchino Antonio Rossini', The Heritage of Music, ed. H. Foss, iii (London, 1951), 70–89
'Madrigali italiani in Inghilterra: storia, critica, testi', Italian Studies, vi (1951), 94–100
'The Operas', Handel: a Symposium, ed. G. Abraham (London, 1954/R), 12–65
'Donizetti: an Italian Romantic', Fanfare for Ernest Newman, ed. H. Van Thal (London, 1955), 86–107
'The Sixteenth-Century Madrigal', NOHM, iv (1968), 33–95
ed. W. Dean: The Rise of Romantic Opera (Cambridge, 1976)
ed. H. Taylor: Selected Essays (Cambridge, 1979)

LIBRETTO TRANSLATIONS

Auber: Fra Diavolo (1944); Beethoven: Fidelio (1938); Berlioz: Les Troyens (1935), Benvenuto Cellini (1936); Busoni: Doktor Faust (1937), Turandot (1937), Arlecchino (1939); Donizetti: Don Pasquale (1946); Flotow: Martha (1941); Gluck: Orfeo ed Euridice (1941); Handel: Deidamia (1955); Kodály: Háry János (1950); Mozart: Die Zauberflöte (1911), Le nozze di Figaro (1937), Don Giovanni (1937), Die Entführung aus dem Serail (1952); Rossini: Il barbiere di Siviglia (1941); Tchaikovsky: Yevgeny Onegin (1946); Verdi: Il trovatore (1939), Rigoletto (1939), La traviata (1944), Un ballo in maschera (1952); Wagner: Das Liebesverbot (1922); Weber: Der Freischütz (1948); Wolf-Ferrari: I quatro rusteghi (1946)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Maine: Behold these Daniels (London, 1928), 25–30
L. Haward: 'Edward J. Dent: a Bibliography', MR, vii (1946), 242–62; pubd separately (Cambridge, 1956)
E. Wellesz: 'E.J. Dent and the International Society for Contemporary Music', MR, vii (1946), 205–8
J.A. Westrup: 'Dent as Translator', MR, vii (1946), 198–204
C. Bailey: Hugh Percy Allen (London, 1948), 16, 19–22, 24, 27–32, 128 [incl. extracts from Dent's diary]
E.J. Dent: 'Looking Backward', Music Today, i (1949), 6–25
Obituaries: MMR, lxxxvii (1957), 202–3; E. Blom, ML, xxxviii (1957), 368 only; A. Corbet, RBM, xi (1957), 79–81; G.M. Gatti, RaM, xxvii (1957), 316–18; J.P. Larsen and J. Bentzon, DMt, xxxii (1957), 104–5; H. Rutland, MT, xcviii (1957), 571 only; G. Sharp, MR, xviii (1957), 319 only; J.A. Westrup, AcM, xxix (1957), 109–10; S. Wilson, Opera, viii (1957), 690–92; H.F. Redlich, Mf, xi (1958), 49–51; J.B. Trend, The Score, no.22 (1958), 49–55
Alban Berg: Letters to his Wife, ed., trans. and annotated B. Grun (London and New York, 1971), 326, 361–2, 376–8, 423
W. Dean: 'Edward J. Dent: a Centenary Tribute', ML, lvii (1976), 353–61
P. Radcliffe: E.J. Dent: a Centenary Memoir (Rickmansworth, 1976)
P.N. Furbank: E.M. Forster: a Life (London, 1977–8/R)
H. Carey: Duet for Two Voices: an Informal Biography of Edward Dent Compiled from his Letters to Clive Carey (Cambridge, 1979)

ANTHONY LEWIS, NIGEL FORTUNE

Dentice. Italian family of composers and instrumentalists. They were active chiefly in Naples.

(1) Luigi Dentice (b Naples, ?1510–20; d Naples, before 28 June 1566). Composer and theorist. He was one of the group of Neapolitan nobles who performed in 1545 and 1547 the comedies Gl'ingannati and Philenia in the Neapolitan palace of Ferrante Sanseverino, Prince of Salerno, and who founded on 14 March 1546 the Accademia dei Sereni. In a letter to Lord Robert Dudley, Sir Thomas Chaloner reported that Henry VIII had wanted Luigi Dentice in his service, and he may have spent some time at the court of Henry's daughter Mary I in 1554. Dentice's Duo dialoghi (Naples, 1552), dedicated to Giulio Cesare Brancaccio, benefited from his long conversations with Angelo di Costanzo (a manuscript copy, possibly an autograph, with four anonymous textless, four-voice compositions appended, is in I-Fc). In the first dialogue he discussed Greek music theory and in the second the technique of counterpoint and a few aspects of performing practice. One four-part madrigal, I' piango ed ella il volto, is printed in RISM 1562[7]; another work was attributed to him in Gennaro Grossi's Le belle arti (Naples, 1820, p.15).

(2) Fabrizio Dentice (b ?Naples, ?1539; d Parma, 1581, before 25 Feb). Instrumentalist and composer, son of (1) Luigi Dentice. In 1545 he took part in the performance of the comedy Gl'ingannati in the Neapolitan palace of Ferrante Sanseverino, Prince of Salerno. He was in the service of Francesco Ferdinando d'Avalos, govenor of Milan, in the years 1562–7. But he was in Spain in March of 1564 when, in a letter to Lord Robert Dudley, Sir Thomas Chaloner reported that he had heard Fabrizio Dentice play the lute and sing in Barcelona and recommended him as worth an annual salary of 400 crowns. Vincenzo Galilei, in his Dialogo (1568), referred to him as an excellent lute player and improviser. In January 1569 Dentice entered the Duke of Parma's service, where he assumed teaching duties. He remained in Farnese service, travelling frequently to Rome, until his death. He died in the palace of Barbara Sanseverino, Countess of Sala.

WORKS

(selected list; for a complete list see Fabris, 1992)

Edition: Da Napoli a Parma: itinerari di un musicista artistocratico: opera vocali di Fabrizio Dentice (1530 ca.–1581), ed. D. Fabris (Milan, 1998).

SACRED

Motetti e madrigali spirituali, 5vv (Venice, 1581); lost, cited in FétisB
1 book antiphons (Venice, 1586); lost, cited in FétisB

Lamentationi . . . aggiuntovi li responsori, antiphone, Benedictus, & Miserere, 5vv (Milan, 1593); parts repr. with ornamentation in G.D. Viola: Responsorii a 4 (Naples, 1622) and in F. Severi: Salmi passaggiati (Rome, 1615)
4 motets, D-MÜp 745; 10 sacred works, a 8, E-V 11
1 psalm in Salmi della compieta (Naples, 1620)

SECULAR

1 madrigal, 5vv, 1591[10]
2 madrigals: Amor che deggio far, Empio cor cruda voglia, I-MOe; ed. C. MacClintock, The Bottegari Lutebook, WE, viii (1965)
Io conosco il mio errore; lost, mentioned in T. Costo: Il fuggilozio (Venice, 1600)
4 fantasias, lute, 1603[15]
Several lute pieces, NL-DHgm 28.B.39; 3 fantasias, 2 ricercars, PL-Kj

(3) Scipione Dentice (b Naples, 19 Jan 1560; d Naples, on or before 21 April 1635). Composer. He was not a nephew of (2) Fabrizio Dentice as claimed by Prota-Giurleo, but was of a different branch of the family from both (1) Luigi Dentice and (2) Fabrizio Dentice. He may have studied music with Stefano Felis, for a madrigal and a motet of his were printed in two of Felis's publications of 1591. In May 1593 Raval mentioned that Dentice, with Stella, Marenzio and others, performed Raval's madrigals in Cardinal Montalto's palace in Rome. He may have been in the service of Cardinal Montalto, for he dedicated his five-part motets to him on 25 March 1594. He is often supposed to have been a member of Gesualdo's Camerata di propaganda per l'affinamento del gusto musicale, but there is doubt as to whether this organization ever existed. The dedications of his second, third and fifth books of madrigals reveal his connection with the Peretti and Gesualdo families and with Cardinal Acquaviva, Archbishop of Naples. In 1609 Dentice was a canon of Naples Cathedral. Later, either in about 1610 or, more probably, in 1622, he entered the congregation of the Oratorio Filippino in Naples, where he died.

Dentice's madrigals, apart from an unimpressive first book, are melodically interesting and rather melismatic and chromatic, but rarely adopt the flexible rhythms and free dissonances characteristic of the Neapolitan seconda pratica madrigal. An important new feature of the spiritual madrigals of 1629 is the rhythmic liveliness of the contrapuntal lines. His motets, though written in a conservative imitative style, are highlighted by chromaticism and contrasting chordal sections; they show greater contrasts than Stella's motets but fewer than Gesualdo's. The antiphons combine the features of Dentice's madrigal style with the square, repetitive rhythms of chordal hymns, called frottolas in Naples.

WORKS

SACRED

[21] Motectorum liber primus, 5vv (Rome, 1594)
[21] Madrigali spirituali, 5vv (Naples, 1629)
Madrigali spirituali, libro secondo (Naples, 1640), lost
Laude, 1599[6], 1600[5]
7 Advent antiphons, 5vv, dated ?1636, I-Nf 472

SECULAR

Primo libro de [21] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1591)
Il secondo libro de [20] madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1596)
Il terzo libro de [20] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1598)
Il quarto libro de [21] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1602)
Il quinto libro de [20] madrigali, 5vv (Naples, 1607)
Works in 1587[12], 1591[2], 1591[18], 1604[15], 1609[16], 1611[17], 1615[14], 1616[11], 1616[13]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.C. Maffei: Delle lettere (Naples, 1562)
S. Cerreto: Della prattica musica (Naples, 1601/R), 155, 158
B. Croce: I teatri di Napoli (Naples, 1891, 5/1966), 22–3
Report on the Pepys Manuscripts Preserved at Magdalene College, Cambridge, Historical Manuscripts Commission (London, 1911), 30–31
U. Prota-Giurleo: 'La musica a Napoli nel Seicento (dal Gesualdo allo Scarlatti)', Samnium, i/4 (1928), 67–90, esp. 73
N. Pelicelli: 'Musicisti in Parma nei secoli XV–XVI', NA, ix (1932), 112–29, esp. 122
L. Dentice: Storia di casa Dentice (Rome, 1934), 77–8, 109
B. Croce: Aneddoti di varia letteratura, i (Bari, 1942, 2/1953), 302
C.B. Schmidt: Fabricio Dentice and his Polyphonic Lamentations of 1593 (diss., Harvard U., 1965)
A. Newcomb: 'Carlo Gesualdo and a Musical Correspondence of 1594', MQ, liv (1968), 409–36
L.W. Martin: 'Scipione Dentice: a Neapolitan Contemporary of Gesualdo', SMH, x (1981), 217–39
D. Fabris: 'Vita ed opere di Fabrizio Dentice, nobile napoletano, compositore del secondo cinquecento', Studi musicali, xxi (1992), 61–113
A. Brancati and S. Mariotti, eds.: 'Musica e musicisti attorno ai della Rovere', Storia di Pesaro, iii (Venice, forthcoming)

KEITH A. LARSON/R

Denver. American city, capital of Colorado. It was founded in 1858, and the immense wealth that soon flowed from the Rocky Mountain gold and silver mines made possible the creation of a musical oasis in the isolated American west. During its early development Denver's music was dependent on the military band of a nearby army post, touring ensembles and the organists and choirs of churches in the area. A local builder, Charles Anderson, placed a one-manual pipe organ in the H Street Presbyterian church in 1872. The Rev. H. Martyn Hart, dean of St John's Episcopal Cathedral, brought to Denver a series of English organists whose influence was lasting: the first was Arthur W. Marchant, who arrived in 1880 and installed a Hook & Hastings organ in the cathedral; he was followed by Walter E. Hall in 1882, John H. Gower in 1887 and Henry Houseley in 1892. Houseley, an organist, teacher, composer and choral and orchestral conductor, led and developed many areas of Denver music during the next 30 years. In 1888 the musician and philanthropist Isaac E. Blake gave an 82-rank Roosevelt organ to Trinity Methodist Church, where Wilberforce Whiteman produced oratorio performances at the turn of the century.

Travelling opera companies visited Denver frequently from 1864; but there was no purpose-built theatre in the city until 1881, when the Grand Opera House, financed by H.A.W. Tabor, opened with Emma Abbott heading her own company in Wallace's Maritana. Up to 1900 the Tabor Opera House and the Broadway Theatre were hosts to such opera personalities as Patti, Gerster, Nordica, Tamagno, Melba, Juch and Gadski. Touring companies also performed in the Denver Auditorium Theatre from its opening in 1908 until World War I. The Rev. Joseph J. Bosetti produced opera locally from 1915. Productions of his Denver Grand Opera Company continued until 1951. The Greater Denver Opera Company (1955–8) and the Denver Lyric Opera (1958–71) continued a sporadic opera programme. Summer musicals were sponsored by the Denver Post from 1933 to 1972. In 1983 a new opera company, Opera Colorado, was launched, with Nathaniel Merrill as director, using the new Boettcher Concert Hall, home of the Denver SO since 1978.

Mary Elitch Long's desire for good music in her summer gardens generated orchestral interest in the 1890s and in 1900 the Denver SO was founded by Houseley. Raffaelo Cavallo became conductor in 1903 and Horace Tureman in 1911. With his own orchestra, Cavallo offered competition, and the Denver SO faltered during World War I. Tureman reorganized it as the Denver Civic SO in 1921 and conducted it until 1944. In 1935 the Denver SO was revived under Tureman, using out-of-work theatre musicians and union members of the Civic SO. Later conductors of the Denver SO were Saul Caston (1945–64), Vladimir Golschmann (1964–70), Brian Priestman (1970–78), Gaetano Delogu (1979–87) and Philippe Entremont (1986–9). The orchestra officially declared bankruptcy in 1989, and was subsequently re-formed, under the musicians' own management, as the Colorado SO.

Denver's choral societies began with a Musical Union, formed in 1867, just nine years after the first crude cabins were built; a German 'Maennerchor' appeared in 1870. Frank Damrosch, Denver's first public school music supervisor, organized a highly successful choral society in 1882 but returned to New York three years later. I.E. Blake started the Denver Choral Society in 1890; in 1894 its directorship went to Houseley, who gained for the ensemble a national reputation, winning awards at the Salt Lake City Welsh Eisteddfod in 1895 and the St Louis World's Fair in 1905. David McK. Williams, later organist at St Bartholomew's, New York (1920–47), accompanied. Denver's strong choral heritage has continued with groups including the Colorado Children's Choir, founded in 1974 by Duain Wolfe, the Classic Chorale (1972), containing a mixture of amateur and professional singers, and the choir of the Civic SO, founded by Wolfe in 1984.

Through the efforts of Fritz Thies, chamber music interest developed in the 1880s. The Lehman Quartet with the viola player Paul Stoëving followed in 1892 and the Baker Quartet in 1901. Henry Ginsburg's Denver String Quartet (formed 1921) was the city's most popular and lasting chamber ensemble, playing for over 20 years. The Friends of Chamber Music was founded after World War II by Jean Chappell Cranmer, who also founded the Applied Arts Society in 1920. The Denver Early Music Consort was founded in 1976.

Important private music schools in Denver have included the Denver University School of Music (founded 1879), the Denver Conservatory (1887), the Liszt School (founded by James M. Tracey, 1906), Blanche Dingley Matthews School (1911), the Wolcott Conservatory (1920) and its offshoot under Edwin J. Stringham, the Denver College of Music (1925), and the Lamont School, now part of Denver University, founded in 1922 by Florence Lamont Hinman.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (G. Griffin)

F.H. Johnson: Denver's Old Theater Row: the Story of Curtis Street and its Glamorous Show Business (Denver, 1970)

S.A. Linscome: A History of Musical Development in Denver, Colorado, 1858–1908 (diss., U. of Texas, Austin, 1970)

G. Giffin: 'The Pride of Gregory Gulch', ON, xl (1975–6), 20–22

50 Years (Denver, 1983) [Anniversary pubn of the Denver SO]

C.B. Fowler: 'The Colorado Philharmonic', High Fidelity/Musical America, xxxvi/2 (1986), 9

J.M. Bailey: 'Notes of Turmoil: Sixty Years of Denver's Symphony Orchestras', Colorado Heritage (1992), aut., 33–47

M. Kroeger: 'The Federal Music Project in Denver: 1935–1941', American Music Research Center Journal, iii (1993), 50–64

A. Prendergast: 'The Brico Requiem', Westword (1–7 Nov 1995)

SANFORD A. LINSCOME/GLENN GIFFIN

Denza, Luigi (b Castellammare di Stabia, 24 Feb 1846; d London, 26 Jan 1922). Italian composer. From 1862 he studied composition under Mercadante and Serrao at the Naples Conservatory. In 1876 his opera seria Wallenstein (4 acts, with libretto by A. Bruner after Schiller's trilogy) was produced in Naples (Mercadante, 13 May). He later settled in London and became a director of the London Academy of Music and professor of singing at the RAM. He composed more than 500 songs, partsongs and cantatas to Italian, French and English texts; he is best remembered for the Neapolitan song Funiculì funiculà. His melodic style has much in common with that of Ciro Pinsuti; he wrote in an overtly populist vein which anticipated the sugary Hollywood idiom of the 1920s.

NIGEL BURTON, KEITH HORNER

De Packh, Maurice (b New York, 21 Nov 1896; d Beverly Hills, CA, 24 May 1960). American composer, arranger, orchestrator and conductor. He studied the piano with Maurice Gould and Jeanne Franco, and composition and orchestration with Frank Saddler. During the 1920s he worked as an arranger for Broadway musicals, including The Girlfriend, Manhattan Mary, and the Ziegfeld Follies of 1920 and 1921. He also wrote songs for the 1922 musical Glory. He established the De Packh ensemble which he conducted between 1928 and 1931, then in 1933 he went to Hollywood as an arranger and orchestrator. He worked first for MGM, and other smaller studios, on films such as The Dancing Lady (1933) and Rip Tide (1934). He was also one of the team of five principal orchestrators who assisted composer Max Steiner with Gone with the Wind (1939), a score that exemplifies the richness of orchestral timbre and complexity of arrangement that were hallmarks of film music of the time. In the early 1940s he moved to Twentieth Century-Fox where he worked on a number of Betty Grable musicals, including Four Jills in a Jeep (1944), The Dolly Sisters (1945), and Mother Wore Tights (1947), for which Alfred Newman's musical direction won an Academy Award.

WORKS
(selective list)

film scores, as orchestrator and arranger

The Dancing Lady, 1933; Rip Tide, 1934; The Dancing Masters, 1943; Four Jills in a Jeep, 1944; Irish Eyes are Smiling, 1944; The Bullfighters, 1945; The Dolly Sisters, 1945; I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now, 1947; Mother Wore Tights, 1947; When My Baby Smiles at Me, 1948; Letter to Three Wives, 1949; American Guerilla in the Philippines, 1950; Viva Zapata, 1952; Daddy Long Legs, 1955; Anastasia, 1956

KATE DAUBNEY

Depansis (fl second half of the 14th century). French composer. He is known only by a three-voice Gloria in F-APT 16 bis and Solsona, Archivio diocesano, MS109 (ed. in CMM, xxix, 1962, p.30, and PMFC, xxiii*a*, 1989, p.31). In the latter manuscript the piece is designated 'Sortes', but this may be an error since this Gloria follows the 'Sortes' Credo there. The piece divides into 11 short sections, mainly ending on D (the final) or E. The two upper voices move together for much of the time, introducing parallel 5ths and 4ths at cadences, with occasional 3rds. In the accompanying volume (MSD, vii, 1962) Stäblein-Harder pointed to a similarity between the upper voices of this and an anonymous Gloria with the trope 'Splendor patris' (ed. in CMM, xxix, 1962, p.32), and suggested that Depansis might be the composer of both or that one is modelled on the other.

As with Sortes, however, it is possible that 'Depansis' is not a composer identification but another form of designation to distinguish the work from other settings of the same text.

GILBERT REANEY/R

Departamento de Musicología. Spanish music publishing and research institute active in Madrid and Barcelona. Originally called the Instituto Español de Musicología, it was founded on the advice of Higini Anglès as a branch of the Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas by ministerial decree of the Spanish government (27 September 1943). In accordance with the founding decree and other constitutive rules the institute aimed to make an inventory and publish catalogues of Spanish music; to publish its source material and monographs on the history of music in Spain; to collect, edit and study popular songs of the different Spanish regions; to make a photographic archive of the most important Spanish manuscripts; and to organize musicological courses and conferences. Some of these objectives were scarcely attempted, but much important material was published, notably the series Monumentos de la Música Española, the periodical Anuario musical (from 1946), and a series of monographs and songbooks. The series of music catalogues began brilliantly in 1946 with the three-volume catalogue of the Biblioteca Nacional, Madrid, but then ceased. The series Música Hispana contained single works. Anglès was the institute's first director, followed successively by Miguel Querol (1970) and José María Llorens Cisteró (1983–8). Under José González Valle, who led the institute from 1989, its name was changed in 1994 to Departamento de Musicología; by the late 1990s only the Anuario musical continue to be issued.

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO

Depeche Mode [Depêche Mode]. English synth-pop group. It was formed in Basildon in 1980 by Vince Clarke (b Basildon, 3 July 1961; synthesizer), Dave Gahan (b Epping, Essex, 9 May 1962; vocals), Andy Fletcher (b Nottingham, 8 July 1960; synthesizer) and Martin Gore (b Basildon, 23 July 1961; synthesizer). Originally Depeche Mode played pop music influenced by such groups as Kraftwerk, but they progressed to more experimental work after Clarke, their sole songwriter, was replaced by Alan Wilder (b 1 June 1959). With Gore taking on the role of chief songwriter, the group developed a sombre, macabre lyricism. With Construction Time Again (Mute, 1983) and the single Master and Servant the band embraced industrial music. Their late 1980s work on albums such as Music for the Masses (Mute, 1987) was starker still, with Gahan's plaintive, almost monotone, vocal set against huge, crunching synthesizer patterns. By 1988 the band had achieved success in America, becoming perhaps the only synthesizer group to make the transition to stadium rock. Violator (Mute, 1990) included the sublime Enjoy the Silence, while on Songs of Faith and Devotion (Mute, 1993) the band, in parts, produced a more guitar-based, bluesy sound blended with its own distinctive brand of synthesizer music. Ultra (Mute, 1997) was a bleak exploration of personal psychosis in the wake of Gahan's well-publicized heroin addiction, and was recorded as a trio, Fletcher having left the group. Depeche Mode is one of the few groups which emerged during the early 1980s synth-pop boom to have endured into the 1990s. (S. Malins: Depeche Mode: a Biography, London, 1999)

DAVID BUCKLEY

De Peyer, Gervase (Alan) (b London, 11 April 1926). English clarinettist and conductor. He studied with Frederick Thurston at the RCM and with Louis Cahuzac in Paris. He was a founder-member of the Melos Ensemble, with which he played from 1950 to 1974, and was first clarinet of the LSO from 1955 to 1972. From 1969 to 1980 he played with the Chamber Music Society of the Lincoln Center in New York. De Peyer has directed the London Symphony Wind Ensemble, and has also conducted the ECO, the LSO and the Melos Sinfonia, and is associate conductor of the Haydn Orchestra. In 1959 he was appointed to teach at the RAM. De Peyer has given first performances of concertos by Arnold Cooke, Sebastian Forbes, Alun Hoddinott, Joseph Horovitz, Thea Musgrave, Elizabeth Maconchy, William Mathias and Edwin Roxburgh. He has made many notable recordings, including acclaimed performances of Brahms's Clarinet Quintet with the Melos Ensemble, and clarinet sonatas with Gwenneth Pryor. He has made a feature of playing solos from memory. His style is suave and confident, and incorporates a judicial use of vibrato, enhancing a warmth of tone inherited from the Draper/Thurston school of playing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Weston: Clarinet Virtuosi of Today (London, 1989), 89–95

PAMELA WESTON

De' Pietri, Antonio. See TONELLI, ANTONIO.

Déploration (Fr.). A poem lamenting someone's death, and by extension, any musical setting of it. However, the term is now normally confined to late medieval and early Renaissance compositions inspired by a composer's death. The earliest is the only surviving composition by F. Andrieu, a setting of Eustache Deschamps' double ballade Armes, amours/O flour de flours commemorating Machaut's death.

Many déplorations centre on Ockeghem and Josquin. Ockeghem lamented Binchois' death in Mort, tu as navré (with Miserere in the tenor) and in his turn inspired various laments, notably the long poem by Guillaume Crétin, Déploration sur le trépas de Jean Ockeghem, which names many musicians and reproaches the poet Jean Molinet for not yet having lamented Ockeghem, since (in Crétin's phrase, which sums up the emotional impetus behind all such works) 'the loss is great, and worthy of being recorded'. Erasmus's Latin verse Ergone conticuit (set by Johannes Lupi) laments Ockeghem's death, as do Molinet's two replies to Crétin's rebuke, Qui dulces modulando (apparently not set to music) and Nymphes des bois. Josquin's setting of the latter text (with Requiem aeternam in the tenor) appears both in the Medici Codex and in Susato's Le septiesme livre … avecq troix epitaphes dudict Josquin (RISM 1545[15]) without clefs and entirely in black notation in all voices. The unusual appearance of this funereal eye music justifies Burney's pride at scoring it for his General History. Two later texts were applied to the same music: one, in Latin, laments the death of Josquin himself; the other, in French, appears to be a humorous lament at Brumel's departure from the Savoy chapel in 1502.

Despite its late date, Susato's volume is a memorial to Josquin, closing with three laments for him: Jheronimus Vinders's O mors inevitabilis (with Requiem aeternam in the tenor) and Musae Jovis, set in full by Gombert and in part by Benedictus Appenzeller. Gombert's magnificent setting continues the tradition of an independent religious text in the tenor which incorporates the Sarum melody Circumdederunt me gemitus mortis dolores inferni and is isorhythmic. Regnart's Defunctorum charitates, commemorating Jacobus Vaet, is also noteworthy. Byrd's elegy for Tallis, the consort song Ye sacred muses, and Andrea Gabrieli's greghesca for Willaert, Sassi palae, Sabbion, del Adrian lio (RISM 1564[16]), are parallel products.

The texts of several déplorations refer to Parnassus, asking the Muses or Apollo to welcome the dead; this does not prevent the inclusion of traditional Christian prayers for the soul. The music is commonly in the Phrygian mode, traditionally associated with mourning. The word déploration was rarely used as a title; of the four laments in Susato's Le septiesme livre, the seven voice-parts are variously marked déploration, epitaphium, monodia, lamentatio or naenia.

See also Apothéose; Dump; Elegy; Tombeau.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. van den Borren: 'Esquisse d'une histoire des "tombeaux" musicaux', SMw, xxv (1962), 56–67

F.A. Rubin: 'Car Atropos': a Study of the Renaissance Déploration (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1976)

DAVITT MORONEY

Deppe, Ludwig (b Alverdissen, Lippe, 7 Nov 1828; d Bad Pyrmont, 5 Sept 1890). German pianist, teacher, conductor and composer. Having studied with Marxsen in Hamburg (1849) and Lobe in Leipzig, in 1857 he settled in Hamburg, where he founded a musical society and conducted it until 1868. He moved to Berlin in 1874, where he was Kapellmeister of the Royal Opera in Berlin (1886–8), and also conducted concerts. In 1876 he conducted the Silesian musical society founded in Breslau by Count Hochberg. A detailed description of his teaching methods is given by his pupils (see bibliography), especially by Amy Fay. These methods included avoiding lifting the fingers high, careful attention to muscular movement, special study of pedalling and the use of a low piano stool, all designed to cultivate a very soft, even, but penetrating tone. Among Deppe's most distinguished pupils was Emil Sauer, and he also gave help and advice to Tovey. Deppe's system was developed further by Adolf Mikeš, who became an influential exponent of it in Prague, and some of his principles were adopted by Leschetizky. His compositions include a symphony, overtures and songs; he also wrote an essay 'Armleiden der Klavierspieler' (in Der Klavierlehrer, vii, 1885), and an autobiography, Zwei Jahre Kapellmeister an der königlichen Oper in Berlin (Bielefeld, 1890).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Fay: Music-Study in Germany, ed. M. Fay Pierce (Chicago, 1880/R)

H. Klose: Die Deppe'sche Lehre des Klavierspiels (Hamburg, 1886)

E. Caland: Die Deppe'sche Lehre des Klavierspiels (Stuttgart, 1897, 5/1921; Eng. trans., 1903 as Artistic Piano Playing as Taught by Ludwig Deppe)

E. Söchting: Die Lehre vom freien Fall (Magdeburg, 1898)

JOHN WARRACK

Deppisch, Valentin (Joseph) (b ?1746; d Pécs, 14 March 1782). Composer, active in Hungary. He was employed at Pécs Cathedral from 1769 as a musician and from 1778 as first organist (he later received an annual fee for composing as well). More than 20 of his compositions survive (all in H-P), including four masses, a requiem and a magnificat, two vespers settings and minor church works; he also composed a symphony and two Italian arias. His works were highly valued by his contemporaries and continued to be performed after his death (as late as 1817), in spite of the appearance at Pécs of such talented composers as the Viennese Franz Krommer and Johann Georg Lickl.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Bárdos: Pécs zenéje a 18. században [Musical life in Pécs in the 18th century] (Budapest, 1976), 39–50, 118–21

Preface to V. Deppisch: Te Deum, Magnificat, Vesperae de confessore, Á. Sas and P. Szkladányi, Musicalia danubiana, xi (Budapest, 1990) [in Eng., Hung.; incl. thematic catalogue]

ÁGNES SAS

DePreist, James (Anderson) (b Philadelphia, 21 Nov 1936). American conductor, nephew of Marion Anderson. He studied at the University of Pennsylvania, and at the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music (1959–61) with Vincent Persichetti. In 1962 while on tour in East Asia he had poliomyelitis and became paralysed in both legs. While convalescing he studied scores assiduously, and by late 1963 he was conducting in Bangkok. He won a first prize in the 1964 Dimitri Mitropoulos International Competition in New York, and Bernstein selected him as assistant conductor of the New York PO for the following year. In 1967 DePreist settled in Europe, and the next season made his continental début conducting the Rotterdam PO. He has conducted the Cleveland Orchestra, the Los Angeles PO, the Boston SO, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago SO, the New York PO and the San Francisco SO. After serving under Dorati as associate conductor of the National SO of Washington (1971–4) and principal guest conductor (1975–6), he was music director of the Quebec SO (1976–83). In 1980 he became music director of the Oregon SO, raising the orchestra's national profile, and has concurrently held positions as principal conductor of the Malmö SO (1991–4) and music director of the Monte Carlo PO (1994–8). His recordings include works by d'Indy, Prokofiev, Shostakovich and several American composers. He has written several ballets and is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the Swedish Royal Academy of Music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SouthernB

J. Hiemenz: 'Musician of the Month: James DePreist', High Fidelity/Musical America, xxvii/3 (1977), 8

GEORGE GELLES/DAVID E. SCHNEIDER

Derbès, Jean (b Aix-les-Bains, 19 May 1937; d Geneva, 14 May 1982). French composer. His father was a violinist at the Lyons Opera. Derbès studied piano at the Lyons conservatory with Hélène Herrenschmidt (obtaining a prize at the age of 14), later at the Geneva Conservatoire with Madeleine Lipatti and Nikita Magaloff. After obtaining a first prize in 1955, he studied piano with Yves Nat and Walter Gieseking, and composition in Paris with Noël Gallon and Tony Aubin. His interest in electro-acoustic music developed in 1959 at the Studio de Musique Contemporaine and at the Centre de Recherches Sonores of Radio Suisse Romande in Geneva.

He worked in France playing contemporary music and jazz and won second piano prize at the Geneva competition in 1961. He was music critic on the Journal de Genève, displaying a keen interest in all kinds of music as well as respect for the performers. He later turned mainly to composition while working as a producer at Radio Suisse Romande. In his compositions, he introduced electro-acoustic elements into the traditional symphony orchestra and used poetry, as well as concepts derived from quantum physics and geometry.

In 1964 he married Arlette Chédel, a Swiss contralto who gave the premières of several of his works. His ballet Manu-Tara (1967, based on a story by Arlette Chédel-Derbès) won first prize at the 1968 Geneva Concours for opera and ballet. Genèse (1967) and Passion (1975) form the first two parts of an unfinished triptych (Apocalypse was to be the third). In his later works he derived inspiration from Ligeti and, for his last composition, Theôrêma, from Pasolini. Preoccupied with death and the after-life, Derbès's music displays a great consistency of style and an awareness of metaphysical problems.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Manu-Tara (ballet, A. Chédel-Derbès), 1967; Claves, 1971

Vocal: 4 mélodies, S, pf, 1961; Chant d'amour et de mort, A, orch, 1967; 7 mélodies, C, pf, 1967; Solitude devant la mort, C, insts, 1967; Martyrs II, solo vv, chorus, tape, 1971; Notturno, S, orch, 1972; Psalmodie, C, orch, 1972; 4 mélodies, S, orch, 1973; Kyrie, solo vv, chorus, 1974; Musique pour le chant de la nuit, solo vv, chorus, 1974

Orch: Genèse, 1967; Jazzband Conc., 1967; Praemonitio Passionis, 1968; Pf Conc., 1970; Passion, 1975; Adagio, 1979; 2 nocturnes, 1980; Theôrêma, 1982

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1953; Sonatine, pf, 1962; Incantation, fl, perc, hpd, 1967; 3 portraits, pf, 1968; L'inferno interno, tape, insts, 1969; Martyrs I, tape, 1970; Des yeux de cet archange, org, 1971; Litanies, 2 hpd, 1971; Sonata, 2 pf, 1974

WRITINGS

'Les musiques expérimentales et l'homme d'aujourd'hui', Le robot, la bête et l'homme: Geneva 1965, ed. J. Derbès (Neuchâtel, 1966), 157–64

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Jacquier: 'Jean Derbès nous parle de musique électro-acoustique', Echo illustré (22 May 1971)

A. Jacquier: Propos et hommages inopportuns (Geneva, 1990), 61–5

J.-L. Matthey: Jean Derbès, catalogue des oeuvres (Lausanne, 1990)

Schweizer Komponisten unserer Zeit (Zürich, 1975, 3/1993), 93–4 [with Eng. summary]

JEAN-RÉMY BERTHOUD

De Reszke. Polish family of singers.

(1) Jean de Reszke (b Warsaw, 14 Jan 1850; d Nice, 3 April 1925). Baritone, later tenor. He studied with Ciaffei and Cotogni as a baritone, making his début (under the name of Giovanni di Reschi) at La Fenice, Venice, in 1874 as Alphonse XI (La favorite), the role of his London début at Drury Lane the same year. He also sang Valentin and Don Giovanni. In 1876 (now as Jean de Reszke), he sang Melitone (Forza) and Rossini's Figaro in Paris, then retired to restudy as a tenor with Sbriglia. His first appearance as a tenor, in the title role of Robert le diable at Madrid in 1879, was not a success and he did not sing again until 1884, when he made a triumphant reappearance as John the Baptist in the first Paris performance of Massenet's Hérodiade, at the Théâtre Italien. The following year he created the title role in Le Cid at the Opéra, where he was engaged for five seasons, singing Radames, Vasco da Gama (L'Africaine) and the title roles of Le prophète and Faust.

In 1887 he made his tenor début in London at Drury Lane as Radames, later singing Lohengrin (his first Wagnerian role) in Italian. During the next four years he sang Vasco da Gama, Raoul (Les Huguenots), Faust, Lohengrin, Riccardo (Un ballo in maschera), Romeo, Walther, Don José and Otello at Covent Garden. He made his American début in 1891 at Chicago as Lohengrin, with his brother Edouard as King Henry, then made his Metropolitan début as Romeo, with Edouard as Friar Laurence. In 1893 Jean sang the title role in the first staged performance of Berlioz's La damnation de Faust at Monte Carlo. In 1894 he sang Werther in Chicago, New York and London. Taking on the heavier Wagner roles, he sang Tristan (1895), young Siegfried (1896) and Siegfried in Götterdämmerung (1898). His last new role was Canio, of which he gave a single performance at the Opéra (1902). His beautiful voice, fine musicianship and handsome appearance made him unsurpassed in the French repertory, as well as in the Wagner roles he sang with such distinction. His pupils included Carmen Melis, Arthur Endrèze, Miriam Licette and Maggie Teyte.

Jean de Reszke as Romeo in Gounod's 'Roméo et Juliette'

(2) Edouard de Reszke (b Warsaw, 22 Dec 1853; d Garnek, Poland, 25 May 1917). Bass, brother of (1) Jean de Reszke. He studied with Steller and Coletti, and made his début as the King in the first Paris performance of Aida at the Opéra in 1876. He was then engaged for two seasons at the Théâtre Italien. He sang Indra in Massenet's Le roi de Lahore at Milan (1879) and made his London début at Covent Garden in the same role (1880). He also sang Saint-Bris (Les Huguenots), Rodolfo (La sonnambula) and Don Basilio (Il barbiere di Siviglia). In 1881 he sang Fiesco in the first performance of the revised version of Simon Boccanegra at La Scala, Milan, where he also appeared as Silva (Ernani). He sang Alvise in the first London performance of La Gioconda (1883).

He sang in Hérodiade and Le Cid in Paris with Jean, and thereafter his career closely followed that of his brother, in London, Chicago and New York. His vast repertory included Méphistophélès, Friar Laurence, Don Pedro (L'Africaine), Rocco and Leporello, which he sang at a special centenary performance of Don Giovanni at the Opéra in 1887. His huge voice and giant stature made him a magnificent exponent of Wagner roles, and he sang Daland, King Henry (Lohengrin), Hans Sachs, King Mark, the Wanderer (Siegfried) and Hagen. He retired in 1903, soon after his brother.

(3) Josephine de Reszke (b Warsaw, 4 June 1855; d Warsaw, 22 Feb 1891). Soprano, sister of (1) Jean and (2) Edouard de Reszke. After studying at the St Petersburg Conservatory, she made her début in Venice in 1874 in Il Guarany by Carlos Gomez. She made her Paris début in 1875 at the Opéra as Ophelia (Thomas' Hamlet) and sang there for a decade in such roles as Marguerite, Mathilde (Guillaume Tell), Valentine (Les Huguenots), Rachel (La Juive), and both Isabelle and Alice in Robert le diable. She created the part of Sitâ in Le roi de Lahore (1877). In 1881 she sang Aida at Covent Garden, but was not a success and cancelled her contract. She sang Salome at some of the Paris performances of Hérodiade in 1884, when all three de Reszkes were on stage together.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Leiser: Jean de Reszke and the Great Days of Opera (London, 1933/R)
D. Shawe Taylor: 'Jean and Edouard de Reszke', Opera, vi (1955), 11–17
P.G. Hurst: The Age of Jean de Reszke: Forty Years of Opera, 1874–1914(London, 1958)

ELIZABETH FORBES

Dering [née Harvey], Lady Mary (bap. 3 Sept 1629; d 1704). English composer. She was the daughter of Daniel Harvey, of Folkestone, Kent (brother of William Harvey, discoverer of the circulation of the blood). She went to school at Hackney in the 1640s, where she began her friendship with Katherine Philips ('the Matchless Orinda'). At 19 she married Sir Edward Dering, of Surrenden Dering, Kent (after some matrimonial 'escapades'; Kerr), by whom she had 17 children (four died in infancy). She was a pupil of Henry Lawes, who included three of her songs in his Select Ayres and Dialogues (1655). In dedicating this book to her, he acknowledged that > some which I esteem the best of these Ayres, were of your own Composition. For (although your Ladiship resolv'd to keep it private) I beg leave to declare, for my own honour, that you are not only excellent for the time you spent in the practise of what I Set, but are yourself so good a Composer, that few of any sex have arriv'd to such perfection.

It is likely that she, along with Mrs Philips and others, were among the 'brightest Dames' who attended concerts at Lawes's house in the early 1650s. Her husband ('the Worthy Sylvander' in the Philips circle) wrote the words of her songs, one of which, In vain, fair Chloris, you design, is in MB, xxxiii (1971). The style is virtually indistinguishable from that of Lawes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB ('Dering, Edward')
W. McC. Evans: Henry Lawes: Musician and Friend of Poets (New York, 1941), 202–8
J.M. Kerr: 'Mary Harvey – the Lady Dering', ML, xxv (1944), 29–33
S. Glickman and M.Furman, eds.: Women Composers: Music through the Ages, ii (New York, 1996), 195–200

IAN SPINK

Dering [Deering, Dearing, Diringus etc.], Richard (*b c*1580; d London, bur. 22 March 1630). English composer and organist. He was the illegitimate son of Henry Dering of Liss, Hampshire. According to a pedigree (in GB-Lbl Add.5534), his mother was Elizabeth, sister of Henry, Lord Grey of Ruthin and 6th Earl of Kent, but she is mentioned in no other record of the Grey family (who were related to the Derings by marriage). The usual account of his career is that he was a Catholic brought up and trained in Italy, but the styles of his music and what is known of his family make it more likely that he was trained in England and was converted to Catholicism later. The first contemporary document about him is his supplication for the degree of BMus from Christ Church, Oxford, in 1610; in it he stated that he had been engaged in the study and practice of music for ten years. In 1612 Sir Dudley Carleton, the English envoy in Venice, reported in a letter (Lpro SP 99, x, 62) to Sir John Harrington (heir to John, first Lord Harrington of Exton) that a servant of Harrington's, a Mr Dearing, had recently spent some time in Venice, was now in Rome and was, he feared, about to become a Catholic. It seems likely that this Mr Dearing is the composer, who certainly seems to have lived at one time in Rome.

Like many English Catholic musicians of the period Dering decided to live abroad. By 1617 he was organist of the convent of English nuns in Brussels and was still there in 1620; at this time he must have been in touch with Bull and Peter Philips, but there are no records of this. In 1625 he was appointed organist to Queen Henrietta Maria soon after her marriage to Charles I, and in the same year he is recorded as a 'musician for the lutes and voices' to the king; he also appears in court accounts between 1626 and 1630.

Dering's music may be divided into two categories, English and italianate. The English music, none of which was published during his lifetime, comprises Anglican church music, music for viols, two madrigals and the City Cries and Country Cries, which are quodlibets for voices and viols. The italianate music was nearly all published and always includes a continuo part: it consists of Catholic church music and Italian canzonettas and madrigals. Dering was no doubt a minor composer, but he wrote in a wide variety of manners. The English works are comparable in style to those of his contemporaries Gibbons, Weelkes and – especially in the fantasias and the six-part madrigal If sorrow might – John Ward. The verse anthems are prolix and the full anthem restricted in modulation: these features suggest that they are early works. The dances are charming and tend to be elaborate. The fantasias are serene and melodious, and Hughes called attention to their consistency of structure; those in six parts are particularly impressive. The City Cries, like similar works by Weelkes and Gibbons, incorporates many London street cries; it also includes many tradesmen's songs. The Country Cries, which exists in several manuscripts, is a vivid succession of country scenes, including hunts for hare and pheasant, as well as a town crier and a sow gelder, harvest songs and much dialect. A reference within it to 'the king's cart taker' suggests that it was written after 1603, the date of James I's accession.

Dering's Latin church music and Italian canzonettas and continuo madrigals are strongly influenced by contemporary Italian practice (though he nowhere used solo instruments or recitative). The 1617 motets, which he said were written in the 'first city of the world' – presumably Rome – are passionate in expression, not unlike Schütz's Cantiones sacrae of 1625; the 1618 set (sub-titled 'ad melodiam madrigalium elaborata') are less intense and suggest more the style of Philips or Sweelinck.

The motets for two and three voices were specially popular in England after 1625: they were no doubt performed in Henrietta Maria's chapel, and Wood said they were Cromwell's favourite music. Both Henry Peacham (The Compleat Gentleman, 1622) and Thomas Mace (Musick's Monument, 1676) include Dering in their lists of excellent composers.

WORKS

Editions: Jacobean Consort Songs, ed. T. Dart and W. Coates, MB, ix (1955, 2/1962) [D]
Consort Songs, ed. P. Brett, MB, xxii (1967) [B]
Richard Dering: Secular Vocal Music, ed. P. Platt, MB, xxv (1969) [P]
Richard Dering: Sacred Music: Six-part Motets, ed. P. Platt, EECM, xv (1974) [E]

SACRED VOCAL

Cantiones sacrae, 5vv, bc (Antwerp, 1617):
Anima Christi; Ave Maria gratia plena; Ave verum corpus; Ave virgo gratiosa; Contristatus est Rex David; Dixit Agnes; Indica mihi; In lectulo mihi; Jesu decus angelicum; Jesu dulcedo cordium (2p. Desidero te); Jesu dulcis memoria; Jesu summa benignitas; O bone Jesu (2p. O nomen Jesu); Omnem super quem; Quae est ista quae ascendit de deserto; Quando cor nostrum; Vidi speciosam; Vox in Rama
Cantica sacra, 6vv, bc (Antwerp, 1618), E:
Adjuro vos filiae; Ardens est cor meum; Cantate Domino; Congratulamini mihi; Factum est silentium; Heu mihi Domine; Jesu decus angelicum; Jubilate Deo; O crux ave; O vos omnes; Panis angelicus; Paratum cor meum; Quae est ista quae ascendit quasi aurora; Quam pulchra es; Quem vidistis; Sancta et immaculata virginitas; Surge amica mea; Te laudamus; Veni Jesu; Virgo prudentissima; Vulnerasti cor meum
Cantica sacra, 2–3vv, bc (London, 1662):
Ardens est cor meum; Beatus vir; Canite Jehovae; Cantate Domino; Conceptio tua; Duo seraphin, ed. R. Charteris, Two Motets (London, 1990); Ego dormio; Gaudent in coelis; Gloria Patri; Gratias tibi Deus; Isti sunt sancti; Justus cor suum; Justus germinabit; Laetamini cum Maria; Miserere mei; O bone Jesu, ed. R. Charteris, Two Motets (London, 1990); O Domine Jesu Christe; O lux et decus Hispaniae; O quam suavis; Panis angelicus; Qualis est dilectus; Sancta et immaculata virginitas; Veni electa mea; Vulnerasti cor meum
1 full anthem, And the King was moved, 5vv, GB-Lbl
2 verse anthems, Cu, DRc, Lbl: Almighty God, who through thy only begotten son; Unto thee, O Lord
8 motets, 2–3vv, bc, Ob, Och, Lbl, Lcm

SECULAR VOCAL

Canzonette, 3vv, bc (Antwerp, 1620), P:
Ahi! che torn'il ben mio; Ahi! già mi discoloro; Arder il ghiaccio; Ardo misero amante; Chi prend'amore a gioco; Così bella voi sete; Dolce amoroso foco; Felice era il mio core; Filli, mentre ti miro; Filli mi rid'e fugge; Filli, se gl'occhi giro; Giunt'è pur; Io grid'ognor mercede; Io mi sento morir; O vagh'o care stelle; Per te l'alma si strugge; Se nel partir da voi; Soccorretemi ohimé; Voi che set'il cor mio; Voi volete ch'io mora
Canzonette, 4vv, bc (Antwerp, 1620), P:
Ardenti miei sospiri; Ardor felice e caro; Dolce spirto d'amore; Donna gentile; Donna se 'l cor; E se ben nott'e giorno (2p. Deh! luce del mio cor); Gli ardenti miei desiri; Il mio martir (2p. I miei sospiri; 3p. Donna crudel); It'amari sospiri; Lagrime dolci e care; La vag'e bell'Aurora; Lungi da voi; Mirando la mia dea; Occhi ladri d'amor; O com'è gran martire; Ohimé, partit'è il mio bel sol; Poiché mesto e dolente; Rosa d'amor; Tutta gentili'e bella; Vivrò io mai (2p. E se pur esser)
2 madrigals, P: If sorrow might, 6vv; Sleep quiet Lee, 3vv
18 madrigals, 1–3vv, P:
Al fonte, al prato; Alme d'amor rubelle; Che veggio, ohimé; Così dunque; Crudelissima doglia; Donna, mentre io vi miro; Felice chi vi mira; Ho visto al mio dolore; Lasso, ch'io moro; Legasti, anima mia; Lungi dal vostro lume; O dolce mio martire; O donna troppo cruda; O durezza di ferro; O miei giorni fugaci; Pargoletta è colei; T'amo mia vita; Vergine bella
City Cries, 1v, str, B no.69; Country Cries, 1v, str, B no.70

INSTRUMENTAL

8 fantasias, a 5, IRL-Dm, GB-Ckc, Lbl, Ob, Och, US-LAuc, NYp; 1 ed. in D, no.38; ed. V. Brookes (Albany, CA, 1992)
2 fantasias, a 6, IRL-Dm, GB-Lbl, Ob; ed. V. Brookes, Six Fantasias for Six Viols (Albany, CA, 1994); ed. R. Chateris (London, 1996)
8 pavans, 3 almaines, 1 galliard, a 5, Ckc, Lbl, Lcm, Och; 1 pavan ed. in D, no.61
1 pavan, a 3/4, Lbl (a 3), Och (a 4)
1 almaine, a 3, Ob

DOUBTFUL WORKS

8 motets, 2vv, 1674[2]
6 fantasias, a 5, GB-Lbl Eg.3665, attrib. Dering, by John Ward
3 fantasias, a 6, IRL-Dm, GB-Ob, anon., possibly by Dering; ed. V. Brookes, Six Fantasias for Six Viols (Albany, CA, 1994)
2 In Nomines, a 6, IRL-Dm, GB-Ob, anon., possibly by Dering; ed. V Brookes (Albany, CA, 1992)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR; BDECM; DoddI
A. Wood: Lives of the Musicians (MS, GB-Ob Wood D19 [4])
F. Bridge: The Old Cryes of London (London, 1921/R)
F. Bridge: 'Country Cryes', PMA, xlix (1922–3), 21
C. Hughes: 'Richard Deering's Fancies for Viols', MQ, xxvii (1941), 38–46
P. Platt: Dering's Life and Music (diss., U. of Oxford, 1952)
P. Platt: 'Dering's Life and Training', ML, xxxiii (1952), 41–9
P. Platt: 'Perspectives of Richard Dering's Vocal Music', SMA, i (1967), 56–66
G. Dodd: 'The Viola da Gamba Society Provisional Index of Viol Music', Chelys, ii (1970), 44–54, esp. 44–5, 48–9
T. Dart: 'An Early Seventeenth-Century Book of English Organ Music for the Roman Rite', ML, lii (1971), 27–38
R.T. Daniel and P. Le Huray: The Sources of English Church Music 1559–1600, EECM, suppl. i (London, 1972)
R. Charteris: 'Four Caroline Part-Books', ML, lix (1978), 49–51
P. Platt: 'Aspects of Tonality', Liber amicorum John Steele: a Musicological Tribute, ed. W. Drake (Stuyvesant, NY, 1997), 233–306
J.P. Wainright: Musical Patronage in Seventeenth-Century England: Christopher, First Baron Hatton (1605–1670) (Aldershot and Brookfield, VT, 1997), 178–85

PETER PLATT/JONATHAN WAINWRIGHT

Dermota, Anton (b Kropa, Slovenia, 4 June 1910; d Vienna, 22 June 1989). Slovenian tenor. He first appeared in Cluj in 1934, then was invited by Bruno Walter to Vienna, where in 1936 he made his début as the First Man in Armour (Die Zauberflöte) and went on to sing Alfredo; the same year he had sung Zorn (Die Meistersinger) at Salzburg, where in 1938 he sang Belmonte and Don Ottavio. In 1947 he appeared at Covent Garden with the Vienna Staatsoper as Don Ottavio, Ferrando and Narraboth. In 1955 he was accorded the honour of singing Florestan at the reopening of the Vienna Staatsoper, and in 1956 took part in the première there of Martin's Der Sturm. His large repertory included Ernesto, Rodolfo, Pinkerton, Jeník, Hoffman, Lensky, Massenet's Des Grieux (one of his most successful roles), Flamand, Eisenstein and the title role in Pfitzner's Palestrina. He was also a distinguished lieder singer and exponent of Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde. His plangent, slightly reedy tone and musicianly phrasing can be heard on a number of recordings, most notably as David in Die Meistersinger under Knappertsbusch and as Tamino in performances under Karajan and Furtwängler.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV (F. Serpa; R. Vegeto)

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Dernesch, Helga (b Vienna, 3/13 Feb 1939). Austrian soprano and mezzo-soprano. After studying at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik she was engaged by the Berne

Opera, making her début in 1961 as Marina (Boris Godunov). Engagements followed at Wiesbaden (1963–5) and Cologne (1965–8). At Bayreuth, where she first appeared in 1965, she sang Freia, Gutrune and Eva. With Scottish Opera she sang Gutrune (1968), her first Leonore (1970), Brünnhilde, Isolde, Ariadne, the Marschallin and Cassandra (Les Troyens). At the Salzburg Easter festivals under Karajan she sang Brünnhilde (Siegfried and Götterdämmerung), Leonore and Isolde on stage and in recordings. At Covent Garden, where she made her début in 1970 as Sieglinde, she sang Chrysothemis, the Dyer's Wife and, in 1987, the Nurse (Die Frau ohne Schatten). She made her Chicago (1971) and Vienna Staatsoper (1972) débuts as Leonore. She created the title role of Fortner's Elisabeth Tudor at Berlin in 1972 and Goneril in Reimann's Lear in 1978. She then began to sing mezzo roles, including Clytemnestra, Herodias, Adelaide (Arabella), Mistress Quickly, Erda and Fricka. In 1985 she sang Marfa (Khovanshchina) at the Metropolitan and in 1986 created Hecuba in Reimann's Troades in Munich. She sang the Electress in Der Prinz von Homburg at Cologne in 1992, Madame de Croissy in Dialogues des Carmélites at the Metropolitan in 1994 and the Princess in Suor Angelica at Hamburg in 1995. Her voice had great richness and power, and her strikingly handsome stage appearance and intense acting made her a compelling performer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Smillie: 'Helga Dernesch', Opera, xxiv (1973), 407–12

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

De Roda, Paulus. See PAULUS DE RODA.

De Rogatis, Pascual (b Teora, 17 May 1880; d Buenos Aires, 2 April 1980). Argentine composer of Italian birth. He studied the violin with Pietro Melani and Rafael Diaz Albertini and composition with Alberto Williams at the Buenos Aires Conservatory of Music, where he won the first prize and gold medal for violin (1899), the first prize for all-round achievement (1902) and the main composition prize (1906). Thereafter he held a number of teaching posts, among them the professorship of chamber music at the Buenos Aires Conservatory of Music and Art for the Stage; he was also a member of the National Commission for Fine Arts.

His earliest works, from around 1902, are songs for voice and piano. These were followed by orchestral suites and symphonic poems based on oriental themes and exotic legends; these works are written in a cosmopolitan style with a marked French flavour derived from Williams. Two symphonic poems, Marko y el hada and Belkiss en la selva de Saba, and the Elegía for cello and orchestra represent the culmination of his earlier period. Later on a strong attraction towards the myths of indigenous Americans impelled him to read several books by Ricardo Rojas. The result was the symphonic poem Zupay in 1910, based on a Quechua legend. De Rogatis continued to write in a nationalistic vein. The symphonic poem Atipac, first performed by Ansermet, and two other orchestral works, Suite americana and Estampas argentinas, all won prizes. However, his most famous works are for stage, especially his opera Huemac, based on a Toltec legend. It was first performed at the Teatro Colón in 1916 and a year later at the Teatro Costanzi, Rome. His second opera, La novia del hereje, inspired by Vicente Fidel López's novel and set in colonial El Callao during the viceroyalty of Lima, was considered by the composer to be his best work, but it never attained the success of Huemac.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Anfión y Zeto (incid music, T. Salvini), Buenos Aires, Colón, July 1915; Huemac (lyric drama, 1, E. Montagne), Colón, 22 July 1916; La novia del hereje (op, 4, T. Allende Iragorri, after V.F. López), Colón, 13 June 1935

Orch: Marko y el hada, 1905; Belkiss en la selva, 1906; Zupay, sym. poem, 1910; Suite americana, 1924; Atipac, 1931; La fiesta de Chiqui, 1935; Estampas argentinas, 1942; 16 other works

Choral music, songs, chbr works, pf pieces, school songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO ('Rogatis, Pascual de'; D. Schwartz)

Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, xii (Washington, DC, 1966)

M. Kuss: 'Huemac, by Pascual De Rogatis: Native Identity in the Argentine Lyric Theatre', Yearbook for Inter-American Musical Research, x (1974), 68–87

'Rogatis, Pascual de', Encyclopedia of Latin American History and Culture (New York, 1996)

M. Ficher, M. Furman Schleifer and J.M. Furman: Latin American Classical Composers: a Biographical Dictionary (Lanham, MD, and London, 1996)

SUSANA SALGADO

Derosiers [Desrosiers, Derosier], Nicolas [La Vigne, Nicolas Martin de] (b Chalon-sur-Saône, ?*c*1645; d after 1702). Dutch composer, guitarist and music publisher of French extraction. In 1667 he became a citizen of Amsterdam under the name Nicolas Martin de la Vigne, dit Des Rosiers. He must have remained in Amsterdam until about 1700. He married Anne Pointel, whose brother Antoine was also a musician and music publisher in Amsterdam. The two men cooperated, mainly, it seems, during the years 1687–91. Derosiers apparently took care of the printing (using a special fount with round note heads invented by Derosiers) and Pointel handled the selling; Pointel's shop was styled 'Au Rosier', a pun on Derosiers's name. They published mainly vocal and instrumental selections from Lully's operas and works by Derosiers himself, but many of their publications have not survived. In 1692 they sold their stock to Victor Amadée de Chevalier; later (possibly in 1698) it came into the hands of Estienne Roger.

Of Derosiers's ensemble music only La fuite du roi d'Angleterre has survived. It is a trio sonata with programmatic movements commenting on the defeat and flight of James II. Announcements of his lost Suittes of 1703 refer to Derosiers as a musician of the Elector Palatine in Düsseldorf, but no further information about this employment is known.

WORKS

published in Amsterdam unless otherwise stated

Psalm 150, 1v, bc in Essai de critique où l'on tâche de montrer en quoi consiste la poésie des Hebreux (1688)

Les principes de la guitarre (?1688)

La fuite du roi d'Angleterre, 2 fl, bc (1689)

VII [?VIII] Concerts ou ouvertures: allemandes, sarabandes, etc., ?1–4 insts, ?gui, bc (*c*1690), lost

Nouveaux principes pour la guitare (Paris, 1699)

Suittes en trio pour les flûtes, violons et hautbois (1703), lost

37 pieces in Recueil des pièces de guitare des meilleurs maîtres du XVII[e] siècle, ed. J.B.L. de Castillion, Ghent, 1730, B-Bc 5615

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Dart: 'Derosier's Guitar Tutor', GSJ, vi (1953), 107 only

R. Keith: '"La guitare royale": a Study of the Career and Compositions of Francesco Corbetta', RMFC, vi (1966), 73–94, esp. 86

S. Murphy: 'The Tuning of the Five-Course Guitar', GSJ, xxiii (1970), 49–63, esp. 56, 60
R. Strizich: 'Ornamentation in Spanish Baroque Guitar Music', JLSA, v (1972), 18–19, esp. 38

RUDOLF A. RASCH

De Rossi, Francesco. See ROSSI, FRANCESCO.

De Rossi, Giuseppe. See ROSSI, GIUSEPPE DE.

Derrick (fl ?1620). English composer. A Short Service (Te Deum, Benedictus), a Jubilate, two Kyries and a Creed are in MSS (GB-Cp and DRc).

Derungs, Martin (b Coire, 12 May 1943). Swiss composer, harpsichordist and pianist. He studied the piano, organ and music theory at the conservatories of Zürich and Basle, and composition from 1967 to 1971 with Günter Bialas in Munich. From 1971 to 1974 he worked as a music editor for the German radio world service in Cologne; he then returned to Zürich to work as a freelance harpsichordist and composer. From 1979 to 1984 he was visiting professor of harpsichord at the Karlsruhe Conservatory, and from 1993 to 1996 he was president of the Swiss Musicians' Association.

His musical language owed much to the avant garde of the 1960s, but an openness to innovation, a reluctance to align himself with the more dogmatic proponents of the avant garde and a commitment to the social aspects of his art have resulted in a broadening of both the technical and emotional range of his music. Since the late 1980s he has shown an increasing interest in music theatre. His Bündner Wirren, a mixture of opera, cantata and spoken drama, was performed with great success by a vast array of professional and amateur musicians in Davos in 1989, and was subsequently revised for concert performance under the title Anna Jenatsch. His operas Anna Göldi and Robert Walser Aschenbrodel have also been performed to critical acclaim.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Bündner Wirren (dramatic scenes, 12, M. Schmid), 1988 [rev. 1991 as Anna Jenatsch]; Anna Göldi (op, 12 scenes, M. Markun), 1991; Robert Walser Aschenbrödel (13 scenes, R. Walser), 1997

Orch: Interpolation, 11 str, 1969; '924', pf, cl, hn, 6 wind inst, 2 perc, 1985; 'notturno . . .', fl, chbr orch, 1973; Vn Conc., 1991–2; Conc., rec, chbr orch, 1993; Concertino, rec, chbr orch, 1993; Etude pointillistique, 1994

Choral: 3 Pieces (A. Marvell, L. de Gongora, G.B. Marino), male vv; Canto (P. Neruda), Bar, SATB, ob, trbn, children's vv, 8 insts, 1977–8; Der Diamant (G. Keller), TTBB, 1990; Anna Jenatsch (Schmid), A, T, 3 S, B, chorus, 17 insts, 1991 [version of Bündner Wirren]

Solo vocal: 4 Gedichte (Marino), T, chbr orch, 1967–8; Poems and Interludes (Sappho, A. Rimbaud, D. Thomas), S, 1 melody inst, org, 1976–90; Giarsun (L. Semadeni), 1v, 1 melody inst, gui, 1978, rev. 1990 for 1v, rec, hpd; Heimat (H. von Laufenberg, Leuthold, L. Bruggmann), v, pf, 1979–82; 4 Lieder (D. Koster), female v, pf, 1986

Chbr and solo inst: 'angreifen . . . ruhen . . . verflüchtigen', org, 1968; Trio, fl, b cl, pf, 1968; 'quasi . . .', vn, hpd, 1969; 3 soli, 1 ww, 1 str, 1 kbd, 1969; Orgelspiel, org, 2 assistants, 1970; Play Back, vn, pf, tape, 1970; Interdependenz, fl, eng hn, basset hn, hn, bn, 1971; Rahmen zu 3 Oboesolostücken, ob, 1972; Aus Märchenzeit, lute, gui, hp, hpd, 1974; Faits divers, 2 hp, 1982 [film music]; 3 Preludes, pf, 1983

Hornung, hn, 1986; Passion, 4 fl, 1987; Str Trio, 1987; Kaleidoscope, vn, 1988; Contrasti sospesi, wind qt, 1988; O alter Duft . . ., fl, cl, pf, perc, va, vc, 1989; Scene teatrali, wind octet, 1992; Trio, fl, va, hp, 1994; Wahnfried, pf, 1994; Nachstück, vn, 1995; Ars orationis, org, 1995; Colori, sopranino + a + t + b rec, 1989–97

Principal publisher: Hug

MSS in CH-Zz

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Balissat, ed.: Schweizer Komponisten unserer Zeit (Winterthur, 3/1993), 97–8
J.-P. Amann: 'Martin Derungs', Contemporary Swiss Composers (Zürich, 1994) [pubn of Pro Helvetia]

CHRIS WALTON

Dervaux, Pierre (b Juvisy-sur-Orge, Seine-et-Oise, 3 Jan 1917; d Marseilles, 20 Feb 1992). French conductor. At the Paris Conservatoire he studied the piano with Isidore Philipp and Yves Nat, and harmony and counterpoint with Jean and Noël Gallon and Marcel Samuel-Rousseau. He made his début as a conductor with the Orchestre Pasdeloup in 1947, and that year became principal conductor of the Paris Opéra, where he remained until 1970. From 1949 to 1955 he was also vice-president of the Concerts Pasdeloup. He was musical director of the Orchestre Symphonique de Québec from 1968 to 1971 and of the Orchestre Philharmonique des Pays de la Loire from 1971 to 1978. From 1978 to 1982 he was music director of the Nice Opéra. He conducted as a guest elsewhere in Europe, in the USA, and in the Middle East and East Asia. He was a notable champion of modern French music, and gave the premières of works by Milhaud, Françaix, Henry Barraud, Emanuel Bondeville, Pierre Capdevielle and others.

Dervaux directed courses in conducting at the conservatory in Montreal (1965–72) and the summer academy in Nice (1971–82), and in 1964 was appointed to teach conducting at the Ecole Normale in Paris. He composed orchestral and chamber music, including two symphonies, a piano concerto, a cello concerto, a divertissement for string orchestra, a string quartet and a trio.

CHRISTIANE SPIETH-WEISSENBACHER/R

Dervish music. See ISLAMIC RELIGIOUS MUSIC.

De Rycke, Antonius. See DIVITIS, ANTONIUS.

Derzhanovsky, Vladimir Vladimirovich (b Tbilisi, 2/14 April 1881; d Zagorsk [now Sergiyev-Posad], 19 Sept 1942). Russian music critic. He completed his studies at the Tbilisi Cadet Corps and Music College, serving as an orchestral player and military bandmaster (he studied the trombone at the Moscow Conservatory and took lessons in composition with Rebikov, 1902–3). From 1901 he was Moscow correspondent of the Russkaya muzïkal'naya gazeta, and critic for other newspapers (Russkiye vedomosti and Russkiy listok); he headed the music section of the newspaper Utro (1907–8) and Utro Rossii (1911–17). He took an active part in organizing symphony concerts in Moscow and was an initiator of the Moscow Evenings of Contemporary Music from 1909, and founder and editor of the Moscow weekly journal Muzïka (1910–16) to which Myaskovsky, Sabaneyev, Asaf'yev, Viktor Belyayev and others contributed. The journal, in its editor's words, was 'to fight against all manifestations of hostility towards the development of musical art' and to act as an advocate of contemporary Western European and Russian music. A man of irascible temperament, Derzhanovsky was able to work as a journalist only up to the late 1920s. He was an organizer of the Association of Contemporary Music and was involved in editing the journals K novïm beregam (1923), Muzïkal'naya kul'tura (1924) and Sovremennaya muzïka (1924–8). In the 1920s and 30s he headed the music section of the joint stock company Mezhdunarodnaya kniga and edited the publication Sovetskaya orkestroteka, issued by the Union of Composers. Myaskovsky's Symphony no.24 is dedicated to his memory.

WRITINGS

'O nashem germanofobstve i prakticheskikh rezul'tatakh onogo' [On our phobia of Germany and the practical results of it], Muzïka, no.243 (1916), 67–72

A.K. Glazunov: 1882–1922 (Moscow, 1922)

'Operno-kontsertnïy front' [The opera and concert front], Muzïkal'naya kul'tura, no.3 (1924), 229–39

'Assotsiatsiya Sovremennoy Muzïki' [The Association of Contemporary Music], Sovremennaya muzïka, no.23 (1927), 3–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.I. Volkov, ed.: 'Pis'ma S.S. Prokof'yeva k V.V. Dershanovskomu: publikatsiya' [Publication of Prokofiev's letters to Derzhanovsky], Iz arkhivov russkikh muzïkantov (Moscow, 1962), 93–118

'N.Ya. Myaskovskiy – V.V. Derzhanovskiy: iz perepiski' [Myaskovsky – Derzhanovsky: from their correspondence], N.Ya. Myaskovskiy: stat'i, pis'ma, vospominaniya, ed. S. Schlifstein, ii (Moscow, 1964), 327–416

A. Stupel' and I.Rayskin: 'Po stranitsam russkoy muzïkal'noy pressï kontsa XIX – nachala XX veka' [Through the pages of the Russian musical press at the end of the 19th and early 20th centuries], Kritika i muzïkoznaniye (Leningrad, 1975), 242–63

A. Stupel': Russkaya mïsl' o muzïke, 1895–1917: ocherki istorii russkoy muzïkal'noy kritiki [Russian thinking about music 1895–1917: essays on the history of Russian music criticism] (Leningrad, 1980)

M. Rïtsareva, ed.: 'Pis'ma B.V. Asaf'yeva k V.V. Derzhanovskomu' [The letters of Asaf'yev to Derzhanovsky], Muzïka Rossii, (Moscow, 1989), 234–76

IOSIF GENRIKHOVICH RAYSKIN

Derzhinskaya, Kseniya Georgiyevna (b Kiev, 25 Jan/6 Feb 1889; d Moscow, 9 June 1951). Russian soprano. She studied singing in Kiev, and from 1913 to 1915 sang at the Moscow opera house Narodnïy Dom. She was a soloist at the Bol'shoy from 1915 to 1948, and was greatly influenced by Stanislavsky and the conductor Václav Suk. Under the latter she sang Lisa (The Queen of Spades), Nastas'ya (Tchaikovsky's The Enchantress), Fevroniya (Rimsky-Korsakov's The Legend of the Invisible City of Kitezh) and Ortrud. Other roles included Mariya (Tchaikovsky's Mazepa), the Snow Maiden and Gounod's Marguerite. She was one of the outstanding Russian singers of her time, distinguished by the wide range and beautiful timbre of her strong voice, the completeness of her interpretations and her dramatic gift. Her portrayals of Russian women were particularly successful. In 1926 she sang in a concert performance of Kitezh at the Paris Opéra, with great success.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye. Groshyova: K.G. Derzhinskaya (Moscow, 1952)

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY

Des (Ger.). D♭. See PITCH NOMENCLATURE.

De Sabata, Victor (b Trieste, 10 April 1892; d Santa Margherita Ligure, 11 Dec 1967). Italian conductor and composer. The son of a chorus master, he studied at the Milan Conservatory, taking counterpoint and fugue with Michele Saladino and composition with Giacomo Orefice; he also played the piano and the violin. After obtaining his diploma in 1910 with a Suite for orchestra, he concentrated for several years on composition, winning considerable success with his opera Il macigno (La Scala, 1917) and his symphonic poem Juventus, regularly played by several of the great conductors including Strauss and Toscanini. In 1918 he began to conduct, giving symphony concerts in Italy and becoming conductor at the Monte Carlo Opera, where he conducted the première of Ravel's L'enfant et les sortilèges and the first French performance of Puccini's La rondine. In 1929 he spent a few months with the Cincinnati SO and then became permanently attached to La Scala, where he made his début in February 1930 conducting La fanciulla del West, and where in December that year he scored a great success with Tristan und Isolde, of which he came to be considered an outstanding interpreter. Until World War II he conducted mostly in Italy, but in 1937 he visited Berlin and Munich with a company from La Scala, and made guest appearances at other theatres including Bayreuth (1939). Immediately after the war he started to travel again, and in 1946 was the first conductor from an Axis nation to conduct in London; he conducted the Scala Company in London and Edinburgh in 1950 and other orchestras in Berlin, Vienna, London, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Boston. From 1953 to 1957 he was artistic director of La Scala. Because of poor health he rarely conducted after 1953; his last public engagement was in 1957, as conductor at Toscanini's funeral, after which he remained artistic consultant to La Scala.

Blessed with a fabulously exact and critical ear, De Sabata was a gifted, original and fascinating conductor whose often incandescent performances resembled Toscanini's. Karajan said of his conducting that 'there was a change in the music without him speaking one word'. His repertory ranged from Mozart to Stravinsky, with an emphasis on Wagner, Strauss, Debussy, Ravel, Sibelius, and Puccini and his Italian contemporaries (Giordano, Montemezzi, Respighi, Wolf-Ferrari and Tommasini). He preferred Verdi's later works and liked Boito's Mefistofele and, in Italian translation, Saint-Saëns's Samson et Dalila. He was a typical product of the Italian culture that, after Wagner, had absorbed Strauss and the French Impressionists and that had witnessed the rise of the Italian verismo school and, with Respighi, of an internationally acknowledged symphonic style. De Sabata's few recordings include a legendary Tosca (with Callas, Di Stefano and Gobbi) and the Prelude and Liebestod from Tristan und Isolde. Among his compositions the choreographic tale Mille e una notte (1931), performed at La Scala, and two symphonic poems, La notte di Platon (1923) and Gethsemani (1925), deserve notice.

Victor de Sabata

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.M. Gatti: 'Some Italian Composers of Today, iv: De Sabata', MT, lxii (1921), 244–6

G.M. Gatti: Victor de Sabata (Milan, 1958)

F. Aprahamian: 'Victor de Sabata', Gramophone Record Review, no.64 (1959), 269 [with discography by F.F. Clough and G.J. Cuming]

F. Aprahamian: 'Victor de Sabata: a Memoir', Opera, xix (1968), 155–7

G.M. Gatti: 'Ricordi di Victor de Sabata', NRMI, ii (1968), 5–9

T. Celli: L'arte di Victor de Sabata (Turin, 1978) [with discography by L. Bellingardi]

PIERO RATTALINO

Desaides, Nicolas. See DEZÈDE, NICOLAS.

De Santis. Italian firm of music publishers. Pietro Giovanni De Santis (b Isola Liri, 1822; d Rome, 1914) founded the firm in Rome on returning from exile in 1852, and began by alternating publishing (harp music) with the manufacture and sale of string instruments and pianos, activities in which he had specialized with the renowned Alessandroni at the Istituto Romano di S Michele. His son Alberto (b Rome, 1876; d Rome, 1968), associated with the firm from 1902, enlarged the publishing programme with works by contemporary composers, including Giacomo Setaccioli, P.A. Tirindelli, Alessandro Bustini and Giovanni Tebaldini.

Renato De Santis (b Rome, 1901; d Rome, 1974) began to take part in the business in 1916 and directed the firm until his death. Under him the firm expanded the educational and musicological sections with specialized and collected editions as well as numerous instrumental, orchestral and vocal compositions. His friendship with musicians such as Malipiero, Alfredo Casella, Poulenc, Respighi, Rieti, Toscanini, Mascagni, Puccini, Cilea, Giordano, Pizzetti and Alfano led him to an interest in the new avant garde; his catalogue, besides works by some of those composers, also includes works by Porrino, Allegra, Mannino, Liviabella, Lupi, Pizzini, Turchi and Savagnone. However, the firm's most important activity has been in publishing new editions of works by earlier composers. Under the artistic direction first of Bonaventura Somma and then of Lino Bianchi, De Santis published Capolavori Polifonici del Secolo XVI and Polifonia Vocale Sacra e Profana: Sec.XVI. The firm also published the 42-volume Musiche Vocali e Strumentali Sacre e Profane sec. XVII–XVIII–XIX secolo, the complete keyboard works of Bernardo Pasquini, Galuppi and G.M. Rutini, and a number of important series of early music, including Gli Oratori di Alessandro Scarlatti, Musiche rinascimentali siciliane, Polifonia Napoletana del Rinascimento, Musiche per Sonare con Ogni Sorte di Stromenti and Composizioni Vocali e Strumentali dal XIV al XVI secolo; De Santis also publishes Contributi di Musicologia.

STEFANO AJANI

De Saram, Rohan (b Sheffield, 9 March 1939). Sri Lankan cellist. He spent his childhood in Ceylon [now Sri Lanka], learning the piano and the cello. He subsequently studied in Florence with Gaspar Cassadó and was awarded the Suggia Scholarship, which enabled him to study further with Casals in Puerto Rico and also to work with Barbirolli. Meanwhile he gave recitals and concerts in Europe and made his American début in 1960 with the New York PO at Carnegie Hall. Since then he has toured widely. In 1972 he became resident in London, and began teaching at Trinity College of Music. De Saram has a wide repertory, ranging from Bach's unaccompanied suites, Beethoven's sonatas and concertos by Haydn, Schumann and Dvořák to works by 20th-century composers including Prokofiev, Kodály, Hindemith, Dallapiccola, Rubbra, Shostakovich and Britten, and he has given the first performances of works by Xenakis, Ligeti and Berio. He allies impressive technique with an acutely sensitive power of interpretation; the rich, colourful warmth of tone he uses in Romantic music is balanced by the keen intelligence of his playing in modern works. In recital he is frequently partnered by his pianist brother Druvi (b Ceylon, 24 Jan 1946). He also plays in the De Saram Trio with Angela Malsbury (clarinet) and David Pettit (piano), and with the Arditti Quartet.

ELIZABETH FORBES/R

Desargillières. See D'ARGILLIÈRES family.

Désargus, Xavier (b Amiens, *c*1768; d Paris, 1832). French harpist, tenor and composer. He was a chorister at Amiens Cathedral, but in 1789, when the cathedral was closed in the wake of the Revolution, he went to Paris, where he joined the chorus of the Opéra. Finding he had no taste for the stage, he taught himself the harp and rapidly developed as one of the most sought-after Parisian harp teachers. In 1816 he completely revised his Traité général sur l'art de jouer la harpe (Paris, 1809) as Cours complet de harpe, redigée sur le plan de la méthode de piano du Conservatoire, and included exercises with fingerings for both four- and five-finger technique. A third, further enlarged edition was published in 1820. Désargus composed about 70 works for the harp including sonatas, potpourris, transcriptions, duets with piano and 24 études . . . sur les Folies d'Espagne op.6.

Désargus' son, Xavier Désargus (b Paris, 1807; d ?Paris, after 1848), studied with his father and became solo harpist at the Opéra-Comique. In 1822 Spontini engaged him for the royal chapel in Berlin, but he returned to Paris in 1832 and in the same year moved to Brussels as solo harpist at the Monnaie and teacher at the newly founded Conservatory. In 1848 he left the music profession and returned to Paris.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; SchillingE

D.C. Mielke: 'Pioneer Harpists', Harp News, iii/10 (1964), 12

ALICE LAWSON ABER-COUNT

Desarzens, Victor (b Château-d'Oex, 27 Oct 1908; d Lausanne, 13 Feb 1986). Swiss conductor and violinist.

He studied the violin and theory in Lausanne with Denéréaz, Gagnebin and Fornerod, took further studies with Enescu, and then became a violinist in the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, which he left to give concerts with various chamber music ensembles, and as a soloist. In 1940 he founded the Lausanne Chamber Orchestra for Lausanne radio (it gave its first public performance on 10 November 1942), and became its conductor until 1953. In 1949 he was also given a post in Winterthur by W. Reinhart; in 1950 he took over from Scherchen as conductor of the Winterthur Musikkollegium. He also, often with the Lausanne Chamber Orchestra, appeared at festivals and made many recordings. On his 60th birthday in 1968 the University of Lausanne awarded him an honorary doctorate.

Like Paul Sacher, Desarzens combined contemporary with pre-Classical music in his programmes, and frequently performed unknown works. He also edited and performed numerous works from Machaut to Rameau. His interpretations were distinguished by transparency and clarity; he understood conducting to be 'describing a region beyond one's material existence'. He conducted first performances of numerous contemporary works, particularly by Swiss composers, among them many by Frank Martin.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L'orchestre de chambre de Lausanne à 20 ans 1943–1963 (Lausanne, 1963)

Cérémonie de collation du grade de docteur honoris causa à Monsieur Victor Desarzens, chef d'orchestre (Lausanne, 1969)

P. Hugli: 'Interprètes: Victor Desarzens', SMz, cix (1969), 287–9

JÜRG STENZL

Désaugiers, Marc-Antoine (b Fréjus, 1742; d Paris, 10 Sept 1793). French composer. After some indifferent musical studies he settled in Paris in 1774 and first attracted attention by his translation of G.B. Mancini's Pensieri e riflessioni pratiche sopra il canto figurato (1774) under the title L'art du chant figuré de J.B. Mancini (Paris, 1776) and by his Lettres sur la musique des grecs. The first of his works to be performed in Paris was a motet presented at the Concert Spirituel in 1777. He then wrote several stage works which were performed at the Comédie-Italienne and the Opéra; among these Les deux sylphes (1781) and, above all, Les deux jumeaux de Bergame (1782, to a text by Florian) became popular. On 1 December 1784 his Buffon cantata was performed at the unveiling of the bust of Buffon at the museum of Pilatre de Rozier.

Désaugiers was a friend of Gluck and Sacchini and in memory of the latter wrote a Requiem (1786) which was well received. He was quick to support the ideas of the Revolution and, at the request of the National Assembly, wrote a cantata for choir and orchestra, La prise de la Bastille, hiérodrame tiré des livres saints, in which he arranged fragments of verses from the Scriptures in a sequence depicting the events surrounding the fall of the Bastille. The work was enthusiastically received at Notre Dame on 13 July 1790; it was later performed several times and revised slightly in 1794. Désaugiers left many comic operas, a symphony, airs, romances and the opera Bélisaire, with a libretto by his elder son Auguste Félix Désaugiers, who also revised Salieri's Danaïdes (1817) and Tarare (1819), and wrote the libretto for Berton's Virginie (1823). Marc-Antoine suffered from the inadequacy of his musical technique but his charming style and sense of drama, as well as his generous nature, account for the reputation he enjoyed in his day. He wrote some 120 pieces, alone or in collaboration. Merle thought his songs 'wittier and more correct than those of Panard; more seemly than those of Collé and just as merry; as graceful as those of Favart and with better ideas'.

WORKS

all printed works published in Paris

STAGE

all first performed in Paris

PCI – Comédie-Italienne

Le petit Oedipe, ou Agenor et Zulma [parody of J.-F. Ducis: Oedipe chez Admète] (comédie pastorale mêlée d'ariettes et de vaudevilles, 1, Landrin), PCI (Bourgogne), 22 May 1779, excerpts (1779; n.d.)

Florine (cmda, 3, B. Imbert), PCI (Bourgogne), 15 June 1780, *F-Pc (in 2 acts, with many alternative items), excerpts (1780)

Erixène, ou L'amour enfant (pastorale, 1, N.F. Guillard, after C.H. Voisenon: Colin Maillard and B. Guarini: Il pastor fido), Opéra, 24 Sept 1780, Po, excerpts (1780)

Les deux sylphes (comédie semi-lyrique, 1, Imbert), PCI (Bourgogne), 18 Oct 1781 (1782), airs (n.d.)

Les deux jumeaux de Bergame (Les jumeaux) (comédie, 1, J.P. Florian), PCI (Bourgogne), 6 Aug 1782 [lib incl. 3 musical items]; full setting (cmda, 1), unperf., *Pc; excerpts (1782, 1783 and n.d.)

L'auteur satirique (comédie, 1, J.B.D. Desprès, after Voisenon: L'art de guérir l'esprit), PCI (Favart), 24 June 1783, Pc (MS 14010), air (n.d.) [lib incl. 2 musical items]; full setting (cmda, 1), unperf., *Pc (MS 13890)

Jeannette et Lucas, ou Le secrétaire de sa prétendue (comédie mêlée de chants, 2), Beaujolais, 18 Feb 1788

La jeune veuve curieuse (1), Beaujolais, 5 July 1788, 1 air (1788)

Le rendez-vous (comédie, 2, P.-D. de Villers), Français Comique et Lyrique, 31 July 1790 (n.d.), *Pc

L'amant travesti (opéra bouffon, 2, A.-D. Dubreuil, after J. de La Fontaine: Le muletier), Monsieur, 2 Nov 1790, Pc (partly autograph)

Le médecin malgré lui (opéra bouffon, 3, M.-A.-M. Désaugiers, after Molière), Feydeau, 26 Jan 1792, *Pc

Unperf. (autographs in Pc unless otherwise stated): L'absence de Nina, ou Les rigueurs de l'absence (scène lyrique); Le bal (comédie, 1, ? J.-F. Regnard); Bélisaire, 1787 (tragédie lyrique, 3, A.F. Désaugiers, after J.F. Marmontel), Po, frag. Pc; Cadmus et Hermione (tragi-comédie, 3, ? after P. Quinault); Coridon et Phylis; Doris et Phylamon, ou Les trompeurs trompés (comédie lyrique, 1, Legrand); Echo et Narcisse (pastorale-héroïque, 1, C. de Laurès); La fête cauchoise, ou Le mariage de Toinette (cmda, 1); Mirzelle (opéra-féerie, 1, Voisenon); Philémon et Baucis (1, after La Fontaine); Zadir et Zilla (comédie semi-lyrique, 1)

OTHER WORKS

Choral: Buffon (cant.), 2 vv, orch, 1784 (n.d.); Hercule (cant.), 1v, chorus, Pn; Requiem [for Sacchini], Pn; Miserere, motet, chorus, orch; La prise de la Bastille (cant.), chorus, orch, 1789, rev. 1794

Many ariettes, chansons, romances in contemporary collections

Inst: Sinfonia à più stromenti, Pn

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Choron-FayolleD; FétisB

M.M. Castillon, ed.: Journal des sciences et des beaux arts, ii (1776), April

F. Rozier, ed.: Observations sur la physique, sur l'histoire naturelle et sur les arts, vii (1776)

J.T. Merle: 'Notice sur la vie et les ouvrages de M.A. Désaugiers', Chansons et poésies diverses de M.A. Désaugiers, iv (Paris, 1827), pp.xxv–xxvii

A. Delvau: Introduction to Chansons de Désaugiers (Paris, 1859)

C. Pierre: Les hymnes et chansons de la Révolution (Paris, 1904)

PAULETTE LETAILLEUR

Désaugiers, Marc-Antoine-Madeleine (b Fréjus, 17 Nov 1772; d Paris, 9 Aug 1827). French songwriter and librettist, younger son of MARC-ANTOINE DÉSAUGIERS. He arrived in Paris with the family in 1774 and attended the Collège Mazarin, where he studied with Geoffroy. Shortly before the Revolution he was contemplating a career in the church. In 1792 he adapted the libretto of Le médecin malgré lui (after Molière), for which his father wrote the music. Later the same year he left France for Santo Domingo, whence events led him to America, first to New York and then to Philadelphia, where he gave harpsichord lessons. He returned to France in 1797 and soon made a name for himself with various pieces and a large number of songs. A member of the Garçons de Bonne Humeur, he collaborated with several authors and wrote for a number of Parisian theatres (the Jeunes Artistes, the Montansier, the Troubadours, the Variétés and the Vaudeville). As director of the Société du Caveau, he introduced P.-J. de Béranger into the society and helped him at the begining of his career. At the start of the Restoration he replaced P.-Y. Barré as director of the Théâtre du Vaudeville, which he ran by himself until 1822, with Cyprien Bérard between 1822 and 1825, and then by himself again until 1827. (N. Wild: Dictionnaire des théâtres parisiens au XIXe siècle, Paris, 1989)

HERVÉ AUDÉON

De Saxe, Chrétien-Charles. See HARTMANN, CHRISTIAN KARL.

Des Bordes (fl 1559). French composer. He wrote La guerre marine (ed. in SCC, ix, 1994), an onomatopoeic piece (depicting a naval battle) which in style follows the example of Janequin's Bataille [de Marignan]. It was first published in Le Roy & Ballard's 11th book (RISM 1559[11]) and went on to be reprinted four times between 1562 and 1578. Two contrafacta (O Seigneur Dieu and Cessez mes yeux de pleurer) are also ascribed to Des Bordes in the Premier livre des cantiques et chansons spirituelles (1578[3]).

FRANK DOBBINS

Des Buissons [Desbuissons], Michael-Charles (b Lille or Budweis [now Budějovice], fl 1560–70). Flemish or Bohemian composer and singer. A volume of his motets for four to six voices (Cantiones aliquot musicae) published at Munich in 1573 refers to him as 'Flandrus insularis', but a manuscript collection of his motets and hymns (in D-Rp) gives his birthplace as 'Budvitz'. Between 1559 and 1564 he served at the Viennese court of Emperor Ferdinand I; in 1564 he joined the chapel of the Emperor's younger son, Ferdinand, who inherited the Tyrol, and he remained at Innsbruck until his death sometime before 1570. His earliest surviving music is an epithalamium composed for the wedding of Johann Cropach, published at Nuremberg in 1561. He then figured as the major contributor to Pietro Giovanelli's five volumes of motets (Novi atque catholici thesauri musici; RISM 1568[2-6]) dedicated to the new Habsburg emperor, Maximilian II. In these works, of both cantus-firmus and parody types, the plainchant-derived melodies are developed in an imitative manner alternating with homophonic passages, reminiscent of the works of Lassus.

FRANK DOBBINS

Descant. See DISCANT.

Descant recorder. Standard British term, established in the early 20th century by Arnold Dolmetsch, for the RECORDER with lowest note c'' (also sometimes referred to as the soprano recorder).

Descartes, René (b La Haye, Indre-et-Loire, 31 March 1596; d Stockholm, 11 Feb 1650). French philosopher and mathematician. He studied at the Jesuit school at La Flèche from 1606 to 1612, and after a stay in Paris he completed work in law at Poitiers in 1616. Tired of formal training and seeking an opportunity for travel, he enlisted in the army of Prince Maurice of Nassau in 1617. It was while he was stationed near Breda during his military service that he met and befriended the mathematician Isaac Beeckman (1588–1637), to whom he dedicated his principal contribution to music theory, Compendium musicae, written in 1618 and published in 1650. During the following years he formed the bases for his new philosophical method, the development of which occupied him for the rest of his life. In 1622 he withdrew to Paris and after some years spent in travel made his home in Holland from 1629 to 1649. He then accepted an invitation to join the court of Queen Christina of Sweden in Stockholm, where he became ill and died shortly after his arrival.

The Compendium is both a treatise on music and a study in methodology. In it Descartes shows himself to be a link between the musical humanists of the 16th century – he was influenced particularly by Zarlino, whom he cited – and the scientists of the 17th. The work is noteworthy as an early experiment in the application of an empirical, deductive, scientific approach to the study of sensory perception and as being among the earliest attempts to define the dual relationship between the physical and psychological phenomena in music.

Descartes divided music into three basic component parts, each of which can be isolated for study: the mathematical-physical aspect of sound, the nature of sensory perception and the ultimate effect of such perception on the individual listener. He considered the first of these to lend itself to pure scientific investigation, since it is independent of personal interpretation. He characterized the process of sensory perception as being autonomous, self-regulating and measurable. This is the realm where practical aspects of music are dealt with (e.g. rules for counterpoint) and to which the great bulk of the Compendium is devoted. To Descartes the impact of sound on a listener's emotions or 'soul' is a subjective, irrational element and therefore incapable of being scientifically measured. He described it as a psychological-physiological phenomenon that clearly belongs to the areas of aesthetics and metaphysics, of which he was to develop the principles later in his philosophical writings. The distinction he made in the Compendium, between sound as a physical phenomenon and sound as understood by the human conscience, permitted him to pass from a rationalist concept of aesthetics to a sensualist one in his later work. This concept was influential in the development of a philosophy for the affections in music in late 17th-century Germany, especially through his treatise Les Passions de l'âme (Amsterdam, 1649/R).

Descartes was not to return to music as a topic for concentrated investigation after completion of his Compendium. That he continued to develop ideas on musical subjects throughout his life, however, is evident from his surviving correspondence, particularly that with his old friend in Paris, Marin Mersenne (where mutual influence is evident), and with the Dutch humanist Constantijn Huygens. Among his specific contributions to music theory the following are of note: an early concern with definition of period structure in musical form; an expression of the later theory of a conditioned reflex in animals; a hint at the theory of harmonic inversion; and a detailed review of the physical nature of sound.

WRITINGS

only those on music

Compendium musicae (Utrecht, 1650/R; 2/1656; Eng. trans., MSD, viii, 1961; Ger. trans., 1978; Fr. trans., 1987; 4/1695; Eng. edn, London, 1653; Dutch edn, Amsterdam, 1661; French edn, Paris, 1668/R) [MS dated 1618]

Lettres (Paris, 1657–67); Brieven (Amsterdam, 1661); Epistolae (Amsterdam, 1668)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Adam and P. Tannery, eds.: Oeuvres de Descartes (Paris, 1897–1913) [the authoritative edn of Descartes' works]
A. Pirro: Descartes et la musique (Paris, 1907/R)
A.W. Locke: 'Descartes and Seventeenth-Century Music', MQ, xxi (1935), 423–31
Catalogue of Exposition Descartes (Paris, 1937)
C. de Waard and B. Rochot, eds.: Correspondance du P. Marin Mersenne, i–xvi (Paris, 1945–86)
G. Massenkeil: 'Bemerkungen zum "Compendium musicae" (1618) des René Descartes', IMSCR VII: Cologne 1958, 188–91
B. Augst: 'Descartes's Compendium on Music', Journal of the History of Ideas, xxvi (1965), 119–32
W. Seidel: 'Descartes' Bemerkungen zur musikalischen Zeit', AMw, xxvii (1970), 287–303
H. Schneider: Die französische Kompositionslehre in der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1972), 170–75
J. Lohmann: 'Descartes' "Compendium musicae" und die Entstehung des neuzeitlichen Bewusstseins', AMw, xxxvi (1979), 81–104
F. de Buzon: 'Descartes, Beeckman et l'acoustique', Archives de Philosophie, Bulletin Cartésien, xliv/4 (1981), 1–8
H.F. Cohen: Quantifying Music (Dordrecht, 1984), 161–79
W. Seidel: 'Französische Musiktheorie im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert', Entstehung nationaler Traditionen: Frankreich, Geschichte der Musiktheorie, ix (Darmstadt, 1986), 46–56
C.W. Dill: 'Music, Beauty, and the Paradox of Rationalism', French Musical Thought, 1600–1800, ed. G. Cowart (Ann Arbor, 1989), 197–210
B. van Wymeersch: Essai sur l'esthétique musicale de Descartes (diss., U. of Leuven, 1990)

ALBERT COHEN

Descaunt [descaunte]. See DISCANT.

Deschamps, Emile (b Bourges, 20 Feb 1791; d Versailles, April 1871). French poet and dramatist. He was a prominent member of the Romantics who met weekly at Charles Nodier's cénacle at the Arsenal in the early 1820s, and later at Victor Hugo's salon. He produced singable texts for operas, opéras comiques, cantatas, romances and songs, tributes for festive occasions and translations from English, German and Italian. He also rewrote (with Henri Blaze de Bury) the libretto for Castil-Blaze's reworking of the music of Don Giovanni for the Opéra (10 March 1834), after several failures by others. It was partly a translation of Da Ponte, and partly new, restructured material. Literary models included E.T.A. Hoffmann and A. de Musset. Although the opera was not a success, the libretto was well received and enjoyed as an independent literary piece (see Ellis). Indeed, Girard has claimed that Deschamps was responsible in part for the introduction of Romanticism, in the form of dramatic and picturesque poetry, into French opera.

Deschamps turned into verse Berlioz's prose for the dramatic symphony Roméo et Juliette (1826, published Paris, 1844). He helped Meyerbeer with the librettos of his operas and provided the words of a special aria in Robert le diable for Mario's French début. When Scribe refused to rewrite the duet which concludes Act 4 of Les Huguenots, Meyerbeer begged Deschamps to collaborate with the tenor Nourrit in producing a more singable version. Ultimately this led to a retouching of practically the whole opera. At the première Scribe gleefully took credit for the opera's success, but as Alexandre Soumet wrote in a letter to Deschamps the next morning 'Scribe's glory was noisily proclaimed at the Opéra last night, dear friend, but yours was whispered knowingly from loge to loge like a lover's secret'. Deschamps prepared librettos for Niedermeyer's Stradella and de Beauplan's Le mari au bal, and wrote verses for innumerable songs and cantatas. He also translated about 50 of Schubert's lieder into French.

As a critic, Deschamps was totally dedicated to the preservation of the Italian bel canto style fostered by Rossini. He was acutely aware that the shortage of good singing voices in France was subtly transforming the Italian melody opera into the Romantic French grand opera, thus forcing Rossini into early retirement. His attempt with Gabriel-Gustave de Wailly to create the pastiche Ivanhoe out of fragments of four Rossini operas for the Odéon (1826) showed his regret at this change. Ironically, his creation was viewed in some quarters as the first attempt at a grand spectacle in the style of Meyerbeer. But he did not cease to contribute to its development with his librettos and poems, and he gave a most percipient definition of this new operatic style. However, he steadfastly objected to the profusion of ballets and elaborate stage sets which he felt were detracting from the real purpose of opera by turning it into a spectacle. His famous dictum 'Exclusiveness is the curse of the arts' serves to confirm his catholic taste in music, which paralleled his literary taste for the 18th-century encyclopedists as well as modern, foreign writers; he saw no reason not to appreciate the differing musical styles of Cimarosa, Schubert, Donizetti, Berlioz, Rossini and Meyerbeer. He was a regular visitor to Mme d'Agoult's salon where Liszt, Chopin, Hiller and Marie Pleyel provided keyboard entertainment, and at the soirées of Robert de La Sizeranne in which more modest performers, among them de Beauplan, Niedermeyer and Pacini, took part.

WRITINGS

with T. Masse: De M. Paer et de Rossini (Paris, 1820)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Girard: Un bourgeois dilettante à l'époque romantique: Emile Deschamps (Paris, 1921) [incl. full list of writings]
R. Bray: Chronologie du romantisme (1804–1830) (Paris, 1932)
G. Jean-Aubry: 'Emile Deschamps, Romantic Dilettante', ML, xx (1939), 250–65
A. Schaffer: 'Emile Deschamps and Some of his Musical Collaborators: Unpublished Letters', Romantic Review, xliv (1953), 197
K. Ellis: 'Rewriting Don Giovanni, or, "The Thieving Magpies"', JRMA, cxix (1994), 212–50

A. RICHARD OLIVER/SARAH HIBBERD

Deschant [deschaunt, deschaunte]. See DISCANT.

Deschênes, Marcelle (b Price, PQ, 2 March 1939). French-Canadian composer. After studying at the University of Montreal (BMus 1965, LMus 1967) with Garant, Papineau-Couture and others, she went to France to study at the Groupe de Recherches Musicales of ORTF, Paris (1968–9), with Guy Reibel, Henri Chiarucci and François Bayle. From 1968 to 1970 she attended a seminar with Pierre Schaeffer at the Paris Conservatoire and studied analysis and ethnomusicology with Olivier Alain at the Ecole César Franck. She went on to study aesthetics, analysis and ethnomusicology at the University of Paris, where her teachers included Daniel Charles, Claude Laloum and Jean-Etienne Marie, and ethnomusicology at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes du Musée des Arts et Traditions Populaires, Paris (1970–71).

After returning to Canada in 1971, Deschênes taught at the University Laval, Quebec City (1972–7), where she also conducted research into musical expression for the non-musician, and the University of Montreal (1980–96). She has also been active in organizations dedicated to contemporary and multimedia art. Her works, oriented towards new forms of expression, integrate technology, visual arts and multimedia. Among her awards are prizes from the International Electro-Acoustic Music Competition in Bourges (1978, 1992), the AMI Multi-Image International Competition, California (1986), and the International Multi-Image Competition in Munich (1989).

WORKS

Multimedia: Jour 'J', 1v, elecs, multi-images, 1981–4, collab. P. St-Jean and D. Latendresse; OPERAaaaAH I, mimes, 1v, live elecs, multi-images, tape, 1981; Ecran humain, 3 pfmrs, elecs, 1983, collab. St-Jean and Latendresse; OPERAaaaAH II, mimes, 2 tango dancers, 3vv, elecs, multi-images, 1983; DeUSirae, elecs, multi-images, 1985; Lux, 2 mimes, elecs, multi-images, lasers, 1985, collab. R. Bourassa; Big Bang II, installation, elecs, 1987, collab. G. Dyens; Noël réinventé, 11 installations, tape, 1988, collab. various visual artists; Ludi, 2vv, 6 pfmrs, elecs, multi-images, 1990, collab. Bourassa; Big Bang III, installation, elecs, 1992, collab. Dyens; La saga Viking, elecs, multi-images, 1993, collab. J. Collin; Les vagues (V. Woolf), nar, tape, 1994

El-ac: Encore et toujours ce si, ob, tape, 1969; Musiques éclatées, nar, str, pf, perc, tape, 1969, collab. Groupe de Recherches Musicales de l'ORTF; Talilalilalilalarequiem, wind qnt, tpt, vc, pf org, 4 perc, tape, 1970; Moll (opéra lilliput pour six roches molles), 2 cl, 3 trbn, 3 perc, toys, tape, 1976; Pot pourri, tape, 1984; D-503, radiophonic tape, 1987; Les arrivées sont des départs, sax, pf, perc + MIDI, 1988 [after E. Zamiatine]; Lux aeterna, tape, 1989; Le monde est une bulle d'air, tape, 1994

Other works: 1 1/2, pf, 1967; 7+7+7+7 ou aussi progression sur la circonférence, du jaune au rouge par l'orange, ou du rouge au bleu par le violet, ou même embrassant le pourtour total, wind qnt, tpt, trbn, tuba, 4 perc, elec b gui, org, pf, 1968; Voz (cant., C. Guevara, R. Duguay), 2 solo vv, SATB, fl, 2 gui, 2 pf, org, 4 perc, tape, 1968

Principal publisher: Canadian Music Centre

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EMC2 (P. Caunais and H. Plouffe)

D. Boulais: 'Un couple électroacoustique', Journal d'Outremont (1986), July

M.T. Lefebvre: La création musical des femmes au Québec (Montreal, 1991)

SOPHIE GALAISE

Desclée. Belgian firm of publishers. Active in Tournai (and not to be confused with Desclée de Brouwer & Cie of Bruges), the firm was established in 1876 by Jules Desclée (1828–1911), and four years later became Desclée, Lefebvre & Cie (Lefebvre died *c*1907) under the corporate name Société Saint-Jean-l'Evangéliste with branches in Paris and Rome. Now a division of S.A. Gedit, it specializes in scholarly and pastoral religious publications. In the period 1880 to 1960 Desclée contributed significantly to the publication of modern Gregorian chant books under the auspices of the Congregation of Sacred Rites at the Vatican and the Benedictine Congregation of Solesmes. According to imprint data issued during the 1950s, it published over 6100 numbered editions. With the decision of the Second Vatican Council (1962–5) to replace the ancient Latin liturgical texts and melodies with vernacular substitutes, Desclée, like other publishers, abandoned the publication of notated chant books.

Desclée's importance goes beyond the printing and marketing of modern chant books, for the company's special type fount for Gregorian melodies became the accepted standard for 20th-century publications. Its origins go back to 1877 when Dom Joseph Pothier (1835–1923), the distinguished Solesmes scholar, negotiated with Desclée, Lefebvre & Cie to publish his treatise Les mélodies grégoriennes (1880, 2/1890/R) and the Liber gradualis (1883, 2/1895; for illustration see PLAINCHANT, II, 10, fig.11). By the norms of Gregorian chant performance in France during the period 1830–70, these Pothier publications were revolutionary for two reasons: the mass melodies were transcribed directly from original manuscripts and bore little resemblance to the post-Tridentine melodies then in vogue, and they were printed in an entirely new, graceful notation designed by Pothier and Desclée, capable of representing the intricacies of liquescent neumes. When Pothier's books appeared, the complexity of the melodies and the novelty of the printing were much criticized; yet the authenticity of the Pothier-Desclée editions presented a major challenge to established publishers.

Desclée's more important publications include the Breviarium romanum (4 vols., 1877, 4/1912), Missale romanum (1879), Rituale romanum (1886), Rassegna gregoriana (13 vols., 1902–14), Ephemerides liturgicae (xvi–xxv, 1902–11), Revue grégorienne (i–xxxi, 1911–52), Paléographie musicale (vii–xv, 1901–37), Graduale sacrosanctae (1908), Antiphonale sacrosanctae (1912) and G.M. Suñol's Introduction à la paléographie musicale grégorienne, (Paris and Tournai, 1935).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Schmidt: 'La typographie et le plain-chant', Revue du chant grégorien, iv (1895–6), 36–9, 59–62

A. Vermeersch: 'Desclée', The Catholic Encyclopedia (New York, 1907–12)

L.H. Cottineau: 'Maredsous', Répertoire topo-bibliographique des abbayes et prieurés, ii (1939)

P. Combe: Histoire de la restauration du chant grégorien d'après des documents inédits (Solesmes, 1969), 104

R.F. Hayburn: Papal Legislation on Sacred Music, 95 A.D. to 1977 A.D. (Collegeville, MN, 1979)

H. Garceau: 'Notes sur la presse musicale religieuse en France de 1827 à 1861', Periodica musica, ii (1984), 6–13

K. Bergeron: Decadent Enchantments: Revival of Gregorian Chant at Solesmes (Berkeley, 1998)

JOHN A. EMERSON

Descordato. SCORDATURA.

Descort. The standard Provençal term for 'lai'. See LAI, §1(i).

Desderi, Claudio (b Alessandria, 9 April 1943). Italian bass-baritone and conductor. He studied in Florence, making his début in 1969 with the Maggio Musicale in Edinburgh as Gaudenzio (Il Signor Bruschino). He has sung at all the major Italian theatres, including La Scala, with whom he came to Covent Garden in 1976 as Alidoro and Dandini. In 1977 he sang Martio in a modern version of Landi's Sant'Alessio at Salzburg. At Glyndebourne (1981–8) he has sung Rossini's Bartolo, Don Magnifico, Mozart's Figaro and Don Alfonso (both of which he has recorded) and Falstaff. He made his début with the Royal Opera as Figaro (1987), returning as Don Magnifico and Leporello. His repertory includes Count Robinson (Il matrimonio segreto), Schicchi, Dulcamara, the Viceroy (La Périchole), Nick Shadow, Rossini's Macrobio (La pietra del paragone), Mustafà (L'italiana in Algeri), Signor Bruschino and Raimbaud (Le comte Ory), which he sang at La Scala in 1991. A fine comic actor with a flexible voice and superb diction, Desderi has also developed a secondary career as a conductor, and is artistic director of the Teatro Verdi in Pisa.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Desderi, Ettore (b Asti, 10 Dec 1892; d Florence, 23 Nov 1974). Italian composer. He studied the piano and composition under Perrachio, obtained his composition diploma under Alfano (1921) and undertook further study with Pizzetti (1921–2). In 1920 he took a degree in architecture at the Politecnico in Turin. He contributed criticism to Il pianoforte and Rassegna musicale, and in 1928 represented the Italian section of the International Association of Sacred Music. He taught composition at the conservatories of Bolzano (1941) and Milan (1941–51), and his pupils include Castiglioni and Donatoni. He was director of the Liceo Musicale in Alessandria (1933–41) and the Bologna Conservatory (1951–63).

Desderi moved easily from an Impressionistic style through a Reger-like chromaticism, a Pizzettian vocal manner and neo-classicism before achieving an individual voice with the cantata Job and the Sinfonia davidica. His leanings were towards sacred music, and he wrote many pieces for unaccompanied choir in a vocal style inspired by Gregorian chant and Renaissance polyphony. His instrumental works, on the other hand, reveal an interest in structural concerns, and occasional influences from jazz and folk music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Antigone (tragedia, 3), unpubd; Il mito di Edipo (tragedia lirica, 3, C. Meano), 1940; La barriera del sonno (ballet), 1949, unpubd

Orch: Intermezzi per l'Antigone, 1926; Fantasia, 1927; Architetture di cattedrali, 1936; Divertimento, 1947; 2 Elegie, 1953

Choral: Job (cant.), 1927; Adeste fideles (6 motets), chorus, 1928; Responsoria in nativitate Domini, chorus, 1928; Antiphone in festo septe dolorum B.M.V., chorus, 1929; Sinfonia davidica, 1929–37; 3 canthus eucharistici, chorus, 1930; Missa dona pacem, chorus, 1932; Missa sinite parvulos, chorus, 1936; Canzone alla Vergine, 1941; 2 Laudi di Jacopone, 1943; Proprium missae B.M.V. SS. Rosarii, chorus, 1943; Proprium missae B.M.V. responsoria in coena Domini, chorus, 1944; Requiem, chorus, 1945; Invocazione a Maria, 1953; Responsoria de sabbato sancto, chorus, 1963; other secular choral works

Solo vocal (all with org): 3 Psalmi, 1930; Parabolae D.N. Jesu Christi, 1931; 3 antiphonae de eucharistia, 1933; Cantus monodici ad varias festivitates, 1948; 2 motecta in nativitate, 1948; Missa monodica ad pueros, 1952; Proprium missae resurrectionis, 1957; Motetula paschalia, 1957; In nativitate Domini, 1957; other songs for v, pf

Chbr: Miti silvani, ob, cl, hn, bn, pf, 1922; Sonata, vn, pf, 1923; Sonata, E♭, vc, pf, 1924; Adagio e scherzo, str qt, 1927; Rapsodia, vc, pf, 1929; Sonata-fantasia, vn, org, 1931; Jazz-Suite, vn, pf, 1933; Str Qt, E, 1940; Trio, vn, vc, pf, 1942; Divertimento, 3 vn, 1947; Sonata, G, vn, 1948; Sonatina georgica, fl, 1955

Pf: Ballata, 1919; Toccata, intermezzo, studio, 1921; Sonata, G, 1926; Fantasia, 1927; 5 umoresche, 1930; 3 intermezzi, 1930; Sonatina in modo sincopato, 1934; Variazioni su un tema infantile, 1944; 7 mazurche, 1948

Revisions and transcrs. of music by G.M. Alberti, A. Ariosti, G. Gabrieli, F. Giardini, G.B. Martini, A. Vivaldi

WRITINGS

La musica contemporanea (Turin, 1930)

'M. Reger e la sua musica strumentale da camera', RMI, xxxiii (1926), 590–603

'L'opera sinfonica di Max Reger', RMI, xxxiv (1927), 111–28

'La musica per pianoforte e per organo di M. Reger', RMI, xxxiv (1927), 399–411

'Le tendenze attuali della musica', RMI, xxxv (1928), 244–62, 588–601

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBI (S. Martinotti); DEUMM (R. Cognazzo); MGG1 (A. Della Corte)

A. Bonaccorsi: 'Un compositore inedito: Ettore Desderi', Il pianoforte, vii (1926), 15–21

M. Bruschettini: 'Ettore Desderi', Bollettino bibliografico musicale, vi/2 (1931), 5–11

V. Di Donato: 'Ettore Desderi scrittore', Rassegna dorica, iv (1932), 21–4

V. Di Donato: 'Job', Rassegna dorica, v (1933–4), 8–12

E. Ferlini: Ettore Desderi (Alessandria, 1934)

F. Sartori: 'La nuova musica religiosa e l'opera di E. Desderi', Rivista nazionale di musica, xvii (1936), 4071–3

M. Panatero: 'Le liriche di Ettore Desderi', RMI, xlv (1941), 181–295

M. Rinaldi: 'Musicisti della generazione di mezzo: Ettore Desderi', Rassegna dorica, xiii (1942), 26–32

H.O. Boehm: 'Ettore Desderi', Zeitschrift für Kirchenmusik, xi–xii (1951), 460–65

A Ettore Desderi nel 70° compleanno (Bologna, 1963)

S. Martinotti: 'Desderi, un ponte fra Reger e l'"Ottanta"', Ghedini e l'attività musicale a Torino fra le due guerre (Turin, 1986), 165–79

VIRGILIO BERNARDONI

Desenne, Paul (b Caracas, 7 Dec 1959). Venezuelan composer and cellist. He studied composition in Caracas with Ioannidis. After completing his baccalaureate in Paris, he trained briefly in composition with Luc Ferrari and Solange Ancona, and earned first prizes in cello performance at the Conservatoire de Boulogne-Billancourt (1981, 1985). While in Paris between 1977 and 1985, Desenne studied Venezuelan music with the creole harpists Mario Guacarán and Gabriel Castillo, and with the singer and songwriter Guillermo Jiménez Leal, who suggested that he compose Venezuelan traditional genres in Classical or Baroque chamber forms. After returning to Venezuela, Desenne maintained a performing career while pursuing his concept of art composition with roots in the Venezuelan creole genres. His work has been represented in important forums such as the Caracas Latin American Music Festival and the Sonidos de las Américas Festival of the American Composers Orchestra in New York (1994).

Desenne's style explores the compositional potential of melodic and rhythmic elements of Venezuelan music, including the isolation and development of interlocking rhythmic patterns apparent in genres like the guasa; use of folk instruments like the four-string cuatro; and imitations of other traditional instruments, such as the quitiplás, within otherwise European chamber ensembles. His papers are in the Latin American Music Center, Indiana University.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Táchira y frontera, chbr orch, 1991; Gurrufío, fl orch, 1997

Chbr: Quinteto del pájaro, fl, ob, vn, vc, cuatro, 1981–93, rev. for fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, cuatro, 1996; Guasa no.l, 8 vc, 1983, rev. 1989; Botella al Guaire, fl, ob, vn, vc, cuatro, 1985–6; Pieces from an Open Book of Cello Trios: Pizziguasa, Los ricochelos, Pizziquitiplás, 3 vc, 1985–97, arr. (va, 2 vc)/8 vc; Pizziguasa galeónica, fl, vc, hp, 1988; Quinteto de la culebra, fl, ob, vn, vc, cuatro, 1988–; Visión galeónica y platillos voladores, ww, 1990; El monocordio de lata, fl, ob, vn, vc, cuatro, 1990–; Tocata galeónica cuarta, 2 vn, vc, hpd, 1991–4; Tríptico: Bossanovals, Recuerdos de Venosa, Kumbiología, fl, gui, 1994–5; 4 & 1/2 movts, vn, mar, tape; Suite Clarinight, cl qt, 1997; Sonata, cl, pf, 1997

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Tortolero: Sonido que es imagen . . . imagen que es historia (Caracas, 1996)

CARMEN HELENA TÉLLEZ

Deses (Ger.). D♭♭. See PITCH NOMENCLATURE.

Desgranges, Claude (fl 1663–91). French singer and composer. He arrived in England soon after the Restoration, and was admitted as one of 'the King's French musicians' by a warrant of 23 July 1663, together with Jean de la Volée and Nicolas Fleury. There survives a poem by him in French, in which he appealed to the king for a court appointment. He performed in Crowne's Calisto (1675) and probably also took part in Ballet et Musique (1673) and Ariane, ou Le marriage de Bacchus (1674). In May 1679 he left England with his wife Hester and niece Catherine de la Barre, a move perhaps influenced by the political consequences of the Popish Plot, but by March 1681 he was back in England with a new certificate of appointment. He served as a 'Gregorian' in the Catholic chapel of James II from 1685 to 1688 and made his will on 8 March 1691, giving his address as Leicester Fields. He wrote two petits motets for soprano and continuo: Domine quid multiplicati sunt (GB-Och) and Usquequo domine (Lbl, Och).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Boswell: The Restoration Court Stage 1660–1702 (London, 1960)
A. Walkling: 'Masque and politics at the Restoration court: John Crowne's Calisto', EMc, xxiv (1996), 27–62

PETER LEECH

Deshayes. The name of several French musicians and dancers of the 17th and 18th centuries, who may have been related to PROSPER-DIDIER DESHAYES.

Deshayes, André Jean-Jacques. French dancer and choreographer, son of PROSPER-DIDIER DESHAYES.

Deshayes, Pierre Louis [le fils]. French dancer, son of PROSPER-DIDIER DESHAYES.

Deshayes [Des Hayes, des Hayes, Deshays], Prosper-Didier (b mid-18th century; d Paris, 1815). French composer, dancer and teacher. He first acquired fame as a dancer. He danced at least once at the Comédie-Française in 1762 and was ballet-master there by 1764; he was an adjoint at the Opéra in 1774. In 1777 he made his début as a composer at the Concert Spirituel, and during the following ten years his compositions were performed there 25 times – the fourth-largest number of presentations of works by a native composer in that period. He was dismayed by the foreign domination of French musical life and, in response to an unfavourable review of his oratorio Les Macchabées (1780), wrote 'It is unfortunate for a French musician to have been born in his own country'. He was master of dance at the Ecole Royale de Chant from its establishment in 1784 and made his début as an opera composer the following year with Le faux serment, ou La matrone de Gonesse. After the Revolution he was employed by the National Treasury and, according to Duval, joined the National Guard; he was active again at the Opéra from 1801. His greatest work is Zélia (1791), on a libretto by Dubuisson based on Goethe's Stella; the Almanach des spectacles reported that 'In Zélia he has shown genius'. Duval said of him: 'Esteemed for his abilities and his character, he left few works and many friends'.

Deshayes' son, Pierre Louis Deshayes le fils (b Paris, April 1771; d Paris, 18 June 1791), was a student at the Ecole Royale de Danse et de Musique and a member of the Bataillon des Elèves de la Place de Louis XIV. Another son, André Jean-Jacques Deshayes (b Paris, 24 Jan 1777; d Batignolles, Paris, 19 Dec 1846) was a dancer and choreographer at the Opéra and a professor of maintien théâtral at the Paris Conservatoire from 1817. He wrote Idées générales sur l'Académie royale de musique, et plus spécialement sur la danse (Paris, 1822).

Several other musicians and dancers were named Deshayes, but no relationship has been established among them or with Prosper-Didier Deshayes. The first occurrence of the name in a musical context is a reference to Toussaint Deshayes, trompette du roi in the early 17th century. Campardon identified Jacques Deshayes with Joseph Dezais (fl 1710–22), a choreographer at the Opéra who taught dancing and published collections of dances, but his claim has never been proved. A singer, dancer and choreographer named Des Hayes associated with the Comédie-Italienne has been traced by Briquet from the early 18th century to 1768. Claude Des Hayes, possibly his brother, was one of the 24 Violons du Roi from 1720 to 1746 and published sonatas for two flutes. A Mlle Deshayes, possibly his sister, was an actress at the Théâtre-Italien; L'Affichard's verse portraits of her appeared in the Mercure de France in 1743. Thérèse Boutinon des Hayes became the first wife of La Pouplinière in 1737. Jean-François Deshayes (or De Hesse) was an actor and later a choreographer active at the Comédie-Italienne and the court. Jean-Baptiste Deshayes-Saloman made string instruments in Paris about 1740–80 and was probably the maître de harpe who became a freemason in 1788. Pierre-Edme Deshays, 'professeur de musique', is listed among the freemasons in 1789. Lyonnet listed several 19th-century actors named Deshayes.

WORKS

STAGE

all performed in Paris; all printed works published in Paris

Le faux serment, ou La matrone de Gonesse (cmda, 2, L.H. Dancourt), Beaujolais, 31 Dec 1785 (1786), excerpts (1786 and n.d.)
La défaite du serpent Python par Apollon (scène lyrique, 1, Renou), Société des Enfants d'Apollon, 1 June 1786
Le paysan à prétention (opéra bouffon, 1, Eyrand), Beaujolais, 12 June 1786, romance (n.d.)
L'auteur à la mode, ou Le mari complaisant (cmda, 2, Durival), Beaujolais, 23 Dec 1786, excerpts (1786, 1787, n.d.)
Berthe et Pépin (cmda, 3, Pleinchesne, after C.-J. Dorat: Les deux reines), Italien, 3 Nov 1787
Delie, ?1787 (ballet-héroïque, 1), unperf., *F-Pc
La chute de Phaëton (scène lyrique, 1, Renou), Société des Enfants d'Apollon, 12 June 1788
Adèle et Didier (oc, 1, Boutillier), Italien, 5 Nov 1790
Zélia, ou Le mari à deux femmes (drame, 3, P.-U. Dubuisson, after J.W. von Goethe: Stella), Louvois, 29 Oct 1791 (n.d.)
La suite de Zélia (3, Dubuisson), Louvois, 25 Feb 1792
Mélite, ou Le pouvoir de la nature (cmda, 3, Desfontaines, after M. de Cervantes: Leocadia), Italien, 19 March 1792
La fin du jour (opéra-vaudeville, 1, Rouhier-Deschamps), Palais-Variétés, 2 Aug 1793
Le mariage patriotique (cmda, 2, Rouhier-Deschamps), Cité-Variétés, 19 Dec 1793
Le petit Orphée (opéra-vaudeville, 4, Rouhier-Deschamps), Palais-Variétés, 1793 [parody of Gluck: Orfée et Euridice]
Le congrès des rois (cmda, 3 Desmaillot [A.F. Eve]), OC (Favart), 26 Feb 1794, collab. Dalayrac, Grétry, Méhul and 8 others
Arlequin imprimeur, ou Pourquoi écoutait-il? (comédie mêlée de vaudevilles, 1, Lepitre), Cité-Variétés, 16 June 1794
Bella, ou La femme à deux maris (3, A. Duval), Amis de la Patrie (Louvois), 15 June 1795
Don Carlos (fait historique, 2, F.P.A. Léger and A.P. Dutremblay), OC (Favart), 11 Jan 1800
Henri de Bavière (3, Léger and Dutremblay), Molière, 22 Aug 1804

OTHER WORKS

Vocal: Les Macchabées (orat), 1780; Le sacrifice de Jepthé (orat), 1786; airs; ariettes; vaudevilles; hymns, listed in Pierre (1904); motets; many works in contemporary anthologies

Inst: Bn Conc., 1779, lost; Cl Conc., 1783, lost; Première suite d'harmonie, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn (n.d); 3 contredanses; syms. in MS mentioned by Fétis; works in contemporary anthologies
Doubtful: 3 syms. (Paris, ?1788), also attrib. G.M. Cambini

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; GroveO (M. Fend, M. Noiray); MGG1 (M. Briquet); PierreH
A. Duval: 'Notice sur Bella', Oeuvres complètes, ii (Paris, 1822), 239ff
E. Campardon: L'Académie royale de musique au XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1884/R)
C. Pierre: Les hymnes et chansons de la Révolution (Paris, 1904/R)
H. Lyonnet: Dictionnaire des comédiens français (Paris, 1908–?1911)
M. Benoit and N. Dufourcq: 'Documents du Minutier central', RMFC, ix (1969), 216–38
D.H. Foster: 'The Oratorio in Paris in the 18th Century', AcM, xlvii (1975), 67–133, esp. 109

MICHAEL BARNARD, MARY HUNTER

Deshevov, Vladimir Mikhaylovich (b St Petersburg, 30 Jan/11 Feb 1889; d Leningrad, 27 Oct 1955). Russian composer. He studied the piano with Leonid Nikolayev and Winkler and composition with Kalafati, Lyadov, Steinberg and Vītols at the St Petersburg Conservatory (1908–14). After a period of active service during World War I, he became secretary of the Musical Committee for National Education in Yelizavetgrad (1917–19) and then headed the music section of the education department in Sevastopol' (1920–21), where he founded a conservatory which he directed (1921–2). He later taught in Leningrad music colleges (1923–33) before becoming one of the leading composers of music for the theatre, heading various music departments and conducting in several theatres in the city. This work continued throughout the blockade of Leningrad (1941–4) during which period this activity expanded to include radio work. His compositions range from linear, diatonic pieces in the manner of Honegger and Prokofiev to mechanistic chromatic constructions and machine-like music such as Rël'sï ('Rails'). Based on incidental music for a staging of Pierre Hamp's novel Le Rail, Rël'sï has remained one of the key works of the Russian avant garde of the 1920s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Krasnïy vikhr' [The Red Whirlwind] (ballet, F. Lopukhov), 1924, Leningrad, Mariinsky, 29 Oct 1924; Dzhebella (ballet, S. Radlov and A. Piotrovsky), 1925; Lyod i stal' [Ice and Steel] (op, 4, B.A. Lavrenyov), 1930, Leningrad, State Academic Theatre of Opera and Ballet, 17 May 1930; Bëla (ballet, B. Glovatsky, after M. Lermontov), 1941; Skazka o myortvoy tsarevnye i semi bogatïryakh [The Tale of the Dead Princess and the Seven Warriors] (ballet, G. Yagdfel'd), 1949 [based on music by A.K. Lyadov]
Orch: Dzhebella, 1925 [suite from the ballet]; Plyas shamana [The Shaman's Dance], 1931; Samarkandskaya syuita, 1931; Pamyatniki voyennoy slavï russkogo naroda [Monuments of the Military Glory of the Russian People], sym. ov., 1947; Russkaya skazka [A Russian Tale], sym. poem, 1947; Russkaya uvertyura, 1950; Leningrad, sym. poem, 1953
Chbr and solo inst: Ètyud, Marsh [Study, March], op.1, pf, 1913; Meditatsii, op.3, pf, 1921; Scherzo, Prelude, op.6, pf, 1922; Ballada, op.7, pf, 1923; Èkzoticheskaya syuita [An Exotic Suite], op.13, ob, pf trio, 1926; Kitayskaya syuita [A Chinese Suite], op.12, S, fl, pf trio, 1926; Rël'sï [Rails], op.16, pf, 1927; Yaponskaya syuita [A Japanese Suite], op.15, fl, hp, perc, 1927; Ètyud, op.45, pf, 1943
Songs: Chudaki [Eccentrics] (Ya. Vladimirov), op.28/2, B, pf, 1934; Glukhoy glukhogo zval [A Deaf Man Called Another Deaf Man] (A.S. Pushkin), op.28/1, B, pf, 1934; 4 pesni dlya detey [4 Songs for Children] (K. Chukovsky), op.27, S, pf, 1934; Litseyskiye godï A.S. Pushkina [Pushkin's Years at the Lycée], song cycle, op.35, Bar, pf, 1937; Russkiy derevenskiy pёyzazh [A Russian Village Landscape] (S. Yesenin), 4 songs, op.53, Mez, pf, 1948
Incid music, over 100 film scores, radio scores

Principal publishers: Soviet State Publishing House, Universal

WRITINGS

'Kak ya traktuyu muzïku k "Rel'sam": drame B.B. Paparigopulo' [How I interpret the music for 'Rails': the play by Paparigopulo], Rabochiy i teatr (1926), no. 21
'O balete "Dzhebella"' [On the ballet 'Dzhebella'], Leningrad Philharmonia, 1 April 1927 [programme notes]
'O sovremennoy muzïke' [On contemporary music], Zhizn' iskusstva (1927), no.13, pp.7–8
'Muzïka v dramteatre' [Music written for the theatre of drama], Zhizn' iskusstva (1929), no.50, p.3
'K obshchey tseli' [Towards a general aim], Itogi 1 godovshchinï postanovleniya TsK VKP(b) o perestroyke literaturno-khudozhestvennïkh organizatsiy: sbornik statey (Leningrad, 1933), 33

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Articles on the first perf. of 'Krasnïy vikhr'', Rabochiy i teatr (1924), no.8, pp.4–8 [incl.: B. Fel'dman: 'Krasnïy vikhr'?'; S. Voskresenky: 'Vïvod' [Conclusion]; S. Volovoy: '. . . I vetyorka ne bïlo . . .' [. . . There wasn't even a breeze . . .]; B. Andreyev: 'Ak-instsenirovka' [An adaptation for the stage]; Yu. Brodersen: 'Obnovleniye li?' [Renewal was it?]]
D. Shen: Vladimir Mikhaylovich Deshevov: ocherk zhizni i tvorchestva [An outline of his life and creative work] (Leningrad, 1961)
L. Nikitina: 'Vladimir Deshevov: 20-e godï, iz proshlogo sovetskoy muzïkal'noy kul'tur' [Deshevov: the 1920s, from the past of Soviet musical culture], SovM (1980), no.1, pp.85–90
A. Zhuravlyova: 'Vladimir Deshevov: desyatiletiye poiska' [Deshevov: a decade of searching], SovM (1991), no.2, pp.64–75
L. Sitsky: Music of the Repressed Russian Avant-Garde, 1900–1929 (Westport, CT, 1994)

IOSIF GENRIKHOVICH RAYSKIN

Desideri, Girolamo (b Bologna, *c*1635; fl 1671). Italian philosopher and mathematician. He was a Doctor of Laws and a member of several academies. Prose de' Signori Accademici Gelati di Bologna (Bologna, 1671) contains (pp.321–56) a discourse by him, Della musica, in which he discussed musical instruments and their inventors. Three letters from him to Perti are extant (in I-Bc).

□

De Silva [De Sylva], Andreas (b *c*1475–80). Singer and composer. His nationality is uncertain, but some aspects of his style suggest Spanish origin and early musical training in French court circles and later in northern Italy. He is not to be confused with Andreas Silvanus (also known as Andreas Waldner), the 'good friend' referred to by Virdung in Musica getutscht (1511). In 1513 de Silva wrote the motet Gaude felix Florentia on the occasion of the election of Pope Leo X. He joined the large circle of musicians retained by Leo in Rome: in 1519 and 1520 he was recorded as 'cantor et compositor' of the papal chapel and as 'cantor secretus' of the pope's private chapel. He probably stayed in Rome until shortly before the recorded payment from the Duke of Mantua in December 1522; extant sources suggest that he was still alive and in Italy at the end of the decade.

De Silva was held in extremely high regard, particularly while under the patronage of the pope and the Medici family. As late as 1567 Cosimo Bartoli, in his Ragionamenti accademici, described the composer as one of Josquin's successors 'who taught the world how music should be written'. Five of De Silva's motets were the basis for parody masses by Arcadelt, Francesco Cellavenia, Lupus Italus and Palestrina. His main creative period appears to lie between 1510 and 1530. With Carpentras, Verdelot, Divitis, Févin, Bruhier, Costanzo Festa and Stoltzer, he belongs to the generation that formed the historical link between the French development of the late 15th-century Netherlandish style typified by Josquin and Mouton, and the more modern school around Willaert, Morales and Gombert. Within this intervening group De Silva emerges as an original composer who adapted many local stylistic influences. His masses are distinctive to some extent for their undoctrinaire handling of both established and newer techniques. The masses on the antiphons Angelus ad pastores ait and Tu es pastor ovium (composed for Leo X or Clemens VII) are of the standard cantus firmus type; the Missa 'La mi sol fa mi', constructed on a solmization subject, is also representative of a traditional technical model. With the exception of the Missa 'Tu es pastor ovium', all De Silva's other masses use many chanson melodies and melodic fragments, often subjected to increasingly elaborate variation. In nearly all his compositions the technical aspect is overlaid by a notable feeling for sonority and sensitive treatment of the text. His compositional style is characterized by a fairly straightforward structure in which a simple, powerfully expressive melody tending towards the declamatory is combined with a strong sense of harmonic colour within an overall formal design that is always clear. With his decidedly individual, extrovert style, above all in his motets, De Silva was a musician who understood the signs of the new era; in pieces such as Omnis pulchritudo Domini his sense of new developments led towards an adventurous exploratory style. In a relatively small output, he left behind at least a few pieces (e.g. Omnis pulchritudo Domini, Illumina oculos meos and Ave regina caelorum, ave domina angelorum) that can be numbered among the best works in the corpus of early 16th-century sacred vocal music.

WORKS

Edition: Andreas de Silva: Opera omnia, ed. W. Kirsch, CMM, xlix/1–3 (1970–) [K i–iii]

MASSES AND MASS MOVEMENTS

Missa 'Adieu mes amors', 4vv, D-Bsb, Mbs, I-Rvat, K iii
Missa 'Angelus ad pastores ait', 4vv, CMac, K iii
Missa 'Joli maronier', 4vv, CMac, K iii
Missa 'La mi sol fa mi', 4vv, MOd, CMac, K iii
Missa 'Tu es pastor ovium', 7vv, Rvat, VEaf, K iii
Magnificat II. toni, 4vv, Bsp, K iii

MOTETS

Alma Redemptoris mater, 5vv, 1532[9], K ii; Ave ancilla Trinitatis, 4vv, 1520[1], K i; Ave regina caelorum, mater regis angelorum, 5vv, S Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, K ii; Ave regina caelorum, ave domina angelorum, 5vv, I-Rvat, K ii

Confitemini Domino, 4vv, GB-Lbl (frag.); Contristamur Domine, 4vv, 1549[12], K i; Crux clavis coronae spinarum, 6vv, I-Rvat (frag.); De ore prudentis, 4vv, 1521[4], Pc, K i; Gaude felix Florentia [= Gaude felix ecclesia], 6vv, Rv, Rvat, K ii; Illumina oculos meos, 6vv, Rvat, K ii

In illo tempore loquente Jesu, 4vv, 1520[1], K i; In te Domine speravi, 5vv, Pc, K ii; Intonuit de caelo Dominus, 4vv, 1520[1], K i; Inviolata integra et casta es Maria, 4vv, Bc, K iii; Inviolata integra et casta es Maria, ?5vv, Bc (frag.); Judica me Deus, 4vv, Bc, K i; Laetare nova Sion, 4vv, 1532[10], K i; Laetatus sum in his, 4vv, 1514[1], K i

Nesciens mater virgo virum, 4vv, Pc, K i; Nigra sum sed formosa, 5vv, 1539[8], K ii; O felix desidium, 4vv, MOd, K i; Omnis pulchritudo Domini, 5vv, Medici MS, K ii, also ed. M. Imrie (London, 1978); O Regem caeli, 4vv, 1532[10], K i; O virgo benedicta, 4vv, 1532[10], K i; Puer natus est nobis, 5vv, Medici MS, K ii; Recordata est Jerusalem, 4vv, MOd, K iii; Regina caeli, 4vv, 1549[15], K i; Regina caeli, 6vv, 1535[4], K ii; Si bona suscepimus, 3vv, 1541[2], K i; Surrexit Pastor Bonus, 5vv, 1538[3], K ii; Tota pulchra es Maria, 4vv, Medici MS, K iii; Virgo carens criminibus, 4vv, 1521[4], K i

SECULAR

Fors seulement, 4vv, Bc, K iii, also ed. in RRMMA, xiv (1981)

DOUBTFUL WORKS

Sacred: Missa [diversorum tenorum], 4vv, 1521[1], I-Rvat (attrib. C. Festa; also known as Missa carminum), ed. in CMM, xxv/1 (1962), K iii, and K. Jeppesen, Italia sacra musica, iii (Copenhagen, 1962), K iii; Attendite populi de longe, 4vv, Bc, K iii; In illo tempore dixit Jesus, 4vv, TVd, K iii; O quam gloriosum, 4vv, 1549[12], K i; Te Deum laudamus, 4vv, D-Ga (attrib. Mouton), ROu (attrib. Josquin), I-Bc, K i; Verba mea auribus, 4vv, 1549[12], K i Secular: Che sentisti madonna, 4vv, 1544[20] (attrib. Verdelot in 1537[11]); Madonn'io sol vorrei, 4vv, 1533[2] (attrib. Verdelot in 1537[9])

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.E. Lowinsky: 'A Newly Discovered Sixteenth-Century Motet-Manuscript', JAMS, iii (1950), 173–232, esp. 175, 177
H.-W. Frey: 'Regesten zur päpstlichen Kapelle unter Leo X und zu seiner Privatkapelle', Mf, viii (1955), 58–73, 412–37
E.E. Lowinsky: The Medici Codex of 1518, MRM, iii/1: Historical Introduction and Commentary (1968)
A. Dunning: Die Staatsmotette 1480–1555 (Utrecht, 1969), 32–5
D. Crawford: Sixteenth Century Choirbooks in the Archivio Capitolare at Casale Monferrato, RMS, ii (1975), 52, 57, 76–9, 109–10, 120, 122, 127–9, 145
W. Kirsch: Die Motetten des Andreas de Silva: Studien zur Geschichte der Motette im 16. Jahrhundert (Tutzing, 1977); see also reviews by A. Dunning, TVNM, xxviii/1 (1978), 42–6; D. Crawford, JAMS, xxxii (1979), 150–55; P.T. Jackson, ML, lxi (1980), 359–61
R. Sherr: 'The Medici Coat of Arms in a Motet for Leo X', EMc, xv (1987), 31–5
R. Heyink: Der Gonzaga-Kodex Bologna Q 19 (Paderborn, 1994), esp. 190–93
W. Kirsch: 'Die Messen des Andreas de Silva', IMSCR XV: Madrid 1992 [RdMc, xvi (1993)]

WINFRIED KIRSCH

De Simone, Roberto (b Naples, 25 Aug 1933). Italian composer, musicologist and artistic director. He studied at the Naples Conservatory with Tita Parisi (piano) and Renato Parodi (composition). After starting a career as a pianist, he turned to composition, writing music for films, ballet and TV serials. His research interests led him to tour his native region, Campania, collecting and editing popular and religious songs. An expert on 18th-century Neapolitan opera, De Simone made his début as a director in 1979 with the revival of Vinci's Li zite 'ngalera for the Maggio Musicale Fiorentino. He also edited and produced Jommelli's La schiava liberata (Naples, S Carlo, 1984), and, most significantly, Pergolesi's Flaminio (Venice, Fenice, 1982), Adriano in Siria with the intermezzo Livietta e Tracollo (Florence, Maggio Musicale, 1985) and Lo frate 'nnamorato (Milan, Scala, 1989–90). He was artistic director of the Teatro S Carlo in Naples from 1981 to 1987. In 1995 he was appointed director of the Naples Conservatory.

De Simone's competence in Neapolitan opera, his commitment to reviving the musical heritage of Campania and a truly vernacular inventiveness account for the individual blend of compositional techniques exhibited in his stage works, such as the music fable La gatta cenerentola (1976). Its text draws on the earliest version of the Cinderella story, recorded in Giambattista Basile's Lo cunto de li cunti (Naples, 1634–6), as well as on other Baroque and folklore sources. Songs, dances, operatic ensembles, spoken dialogue and unmistakably Neapolitan gesticulation effectively combine with the grotesque and the popular, the wonderful and the prosaic in this modern extravaganza.

WORKS

librettos for stage works by De Simone

La gatta cenerentola (favola in musica, 3, after G. Basile), Spoleto, Nuovo, 23 June 1976

L'opera buffa del Giovedì Santo (op, 3), Prato, Metastasio, 28 Oct 1980

Requiem in memoria di P.P. Pasolini, Naples, S Lorenzo Maggiore, 1984

Cantata per Masaniello, Naples, Mercadante, 1988

L'opera dei centosedici (op, 2, after R. Viviani), Taormina, Nuovo, 1 Aug 1995

Li turchi viaggiano (musical), Arezzo, Piazza S Francesco, 21 Aug 1995 with A. Rossi: Carnevale si chiamava Vincenzo (Rituali di carnevale in Campania) (Rome, 1977)

WRITINGS

Canti e tradizioni popolari in Campania (Rome, 1979)

Il segno di Virgilio (Naples, 1982)

Racconti e storie per i 12 giorni di Natale (Naples, 1987)

Fiabe campane (Turin, 1993)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Raffaele Monti, ed.: 'Roberto De Simone', Il Maggio Musicale Fiorentino, ii (Florence,1986), 64–8

M. Sansone: 'Cat Cinderella: the Stories Behind the Story', The Cat Cinderella (Edinburgh International Festival, King's Theatre, 1988) [programme notes]

MATTEO SANSONE

Deslins [Deslius], Joannes [Johann] (fl mid-16th century). Composer. According to Eitner (EitnerQ), he may have been active in Germany, possibly in Dresden; an offertory is to be found in D-Dkh. Deslins's published works, two four-voice motets, appear in Pietro Giovannelli's Novi thesauri musici, books 1 and 3 (RISM 1568[2], 1568[4]). Most of the composers in this collection were singers in the emperor's chapel, although a few were attached to the court of Duke Albert of Bavaria; many of their works, like those of Deslins, are unique to the collection. (One of the motets is also found in PL-WRu.) Mendel, who used the spelling Deslius (in MCL), suggested that the composer was known in France as Deslouges, and that he may have been confused with Philippe Deslouges (Verdelot). (See also FétisB.)

RUTH K. INGLEFIELD

Deslouges, Philippe. See VERDELOT, PHILIPPE.

Des Marais, Paul (Emile) (b Menominee, MI, 23 June 1920). American composer and teacher. He studied composition with Sowerby in Chicago before attending Harvard University (BA 1949, MA 1953), where he studied with Piston, Merritt, and Gombosi. He spent two years in Europe on a John Knowles Paine Traveling Fellowship (1949–51), and studied with Boulanger. In 1960 he joined the faculty at UCLA, becoming professor of music in 1971. He has received a Thorne Award (1970–73) and a grant from the University of California Institute for Creative Arts. He retired in 1988.

The neo-classical language of his early music later moved towards a quasi-diatonic serialism in which ostinatos play a major role in the delineation of pitch centres. In his opera Epiphanies, open textures and simple pitch contexts are cultivated to permit full play in text setting; similar means are used in his large-scale choral works and in the later music for solo voice. Since the late 1970s Des Marais has become increasingly interested in collaboration with other arts, especially theatre, film and dance; Triplum was written for the choreographer Linda Sohl-Donnell. His writings include a book, Harmony: a Workbook in Fundamentals (New York, 1962), and articles in Perspectives of New Music.

WORKS

Chbr opera: Epiphanies (H. Smith), 1964–8; Bamboo Moon (C. Sorgenfrei), 1992

Incid music: A Midsummer Night's Dream (W. Shakespeare), 1976; A Secular Masque (J. Dryden), 1976; Oedipus (Sophocles), 1978; St. Joan (G.B. Shaw), 1980; Marriage à la Mode (Dryden), 1981; As You Like It (Shakespeare), 1983; The Man of Mode (G. Etherege), 1984

Dance pieces: Triplum, org, perc, 1981; Touch, 2 pf, 1984

Vocal: Le cimetière marin (P. Valéry), 1v, kbds, perc, 1971, withdrawn; Reflections on Fauré (e.e. cummings), song cycle, 1v, pf, 1972; Brief Mass (Mass for the Seminarians), chorus, org, perc, 1973; Late Songs (P. Eluard, J. du Bellay, P. de Ronsard, A. de Lamartine), 4 songs, 1v, pf, 1978–9; Seasons of the Mind (G. Fletcher, R. Crashaw, E. Sitwell, T. Roethke), chbr chorus, pf 4 hands, cel, 1980–81; Paradise, SATB, 1995; The Light in the Eyes (M. O'Hara, Roethke, Des Marais), male vv, pf 4 hands, 1999; Angel (Des Marais), male vv, pf, 1998

Other: 2 Movts, 2 pf, perc, 1972, rev. and enlarged as 3 Movts, 1975; No Idea (film score), elec insts, 1993

Principal publishers: Yelton Rhodes

RICHARD SWIFT/STEVE METCALF

Desmarets [Desmarest, Desmaretz, Desmarais], Henry (b Paris, Feb 1661; d Lunéville, 7 Sept 1741). French composer. Little is known of his early musical life other than that he was one of the boy pages of Louis XIV's musical establishment. There, directly under the influence of Pierre Robert and Henry Du Mont at an important period in the development of the grand motet, he probably also encountered Lully, who used the chapel pages to augment his performances. In 1680 Desmarets was referred to as an 'ordinaire de la musique du Roy'. Titon du Tillet mentioned an idylle written by him for the birth of the Duke of Burgundy in 1682; this was a form to which he would regularly return.

Desmarets was unsuccessful in a contest in 1683 for a post as sous-maître at the royal chapel, but later got himself involved in writing motets for one of the successful competitors, Goupillet, to pass off as his own. The deception was not revealed until 1693 when Desmarets, complaining that he had not been paid sufficiently, exposed Goupillet. Desmarets gravitated increasingly towards secular forms of composition. It seems that he wanted to study in Italy but this plan was thwarted by Lully. Some measure of court favour can be inferred from the private performance of his first opera, Endymion, which took place over several days in the king's apartments, one or two acts at a time, in February 1686, and pleased the dauphine so much that she commanded another performance a few days later. Writing for the stage of the Académie was barred to Desmarets at the time since Lully enjoyed a complete monopoly; the gap left by his untimely death in March 1687 began to be filled only tentatively by the next generation. Du Tralage cynically declared that Didon (1693), one of Desmarets' earliest surviving tragédies en musique, succeeded with the public because it was copied from Lully, that Circé (1694), less closely modelled on Lully, was less successful, and that Théagène (1695), in which the composer went his own way, was not successful at all. The ballet Les amours de Momus (1695) was eclipsed by another important precursor of the opéra-ballet, Collasse's Ballet des saisons (1695), partly because its designation as a 'ballet' was criticized. When Desmarets began work on another opera, Vénus et Adonis, in 1695, he was apparently in dispute with Collasse over who should set Duché de Vancy's Iphigénie en Tauride; this was to be left unfinished by Desmarets and completed by André Campra in 1704.

Within months of the death of his first wife in August 1696, Desmarets had fallen in love with his pupil, the 18-year-old daughter of Jacques de Saint-Gobert, director of taxation for Senlis. The couple's lurid story, replete with all the ingredients of romantic fiction, is detailed by Antoine (1965). The upshot was a long legal battle, at the end of which in August 1699 the couple fled the country, Desmarets being condemned to death in his absence. The composer began his exile in Brussels. His friend and fellow chapel page, the composer Jean-Baptiste Matho, obtained a letter of recommendation for him from the Duke of Burgundy to the new King of Spain, Philip V, and Desmarets moved to the Spanish court in 1701 and married Mlle de Saint-Gobert. Six years later, again with support from connections in France, he secured an appointment as surintendant de la musique at the court of Lorraine, which was closely modelled on the court of Louis XIV, his duties encompassing both religious and secular music.

Although he mounted a production of his own, Vénus et Adonis for the court at Lunéville in 1707, Desmarets' operatic activities focussed chiefly on revivals of operas by Lully at both Lunéville and Nancy (the libretto of a new prologue for a production of Armide in 1710 is extant). During this time he continued to write occasional pieces and motets. However favourable the musical climate in Lorraine, Desmarets hoped to be allowed to return to France. A petition to Louis XIV on his behalf by Matho in 1712 was rejected, but Desmarets was finally pardoned by the regent in 1720. When Michel-Richard de Lalande died in 1726, Desmarets sought his post of sous-maître, but was unsuccessful. His wife died in the following year and he ended his days in Lorraine.

Like his contemporaries, Desmarets worked within the framework that Lully had established, while developing certain aspects of it. He made effective use of orchestrally accompanied recitative, with the strings taking over from the continuo at telling moments. Invocations of oracles and spirits and their pronouncements are a feature of nearly all Desmarets' tragédies en musique; characteristically they are treated with a low-lying accompaniment, often with an obsessive rhythmic pattern and, in what for its time was a remote key, F minor. His soliloquies use effective changes of style and texture (e.g. from continuo to string accompaniment or from air to recitative and back) to illustrate the uncertainties and changes of mood being expressed. His enthusiasm for bass voices and low sonorities is found in a type of chorus in which a single melody line is directed to be sung by the basses only, an idea which was subsequently taken up by other composers.

Desmarets would have been an ideal replacement for Lalande at the royal chapel. Of all Lalande's contemporaries, he was best able to fill the large dimensions of the grand motet with convincing music. The influence of Lalande may be clearly seen in such a work as the De profundis. The four psalm settings written about 1707 for the chapel of the Duke of Lorraine are massive works, each averaging over 100 pages. They contain elaborate solo arias and 'operatic' trios for two sopranos and counter-tenor, alongside weighty homophonic choruses in the style of Lully, and choruses (or ensembles) of finely wrought polyphony closer in spirit to the later motets of Lalande.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris, unless otherwise stated

STAGE

first performed in Paris, Académie Royale de Musique (the Opéra), unless otherwise stated

tm – tragédie en musique

Idylle sur la naissance du duc de Bourgogne, ? 1682, lost

Endymion (tm, prol, 5), Versailles, 16–23 Feb, 5 March 1686, lost

La Diane de Fontainebleau (divertissement, Maurel), Fontainebleau, 2 Nov 1686, F-Pa

Didon (tm, prol, 5, L.-G.G. de Saintonge), 5 June or 11 Sept 1693, Pn, vs and reduced inst score (1693)

Circé (tm, prol, 5, Saintonge), 11 Nov 1694 (1694)

Théagène et Cariclée (tm, prol, 5, J.-F. Duché de Vancy), 12 April 1695, reduced score, abridged (1695)

Les amours de Momus (ballet, prol, 3, Duché de Vancy), 12–14 June 1695, reduced score (1695)

Vénus et Adonis (tm, prol, 5, J.-B. Rousseau), March, April or July 1697, reduced score (1697)

Les festes galantes (ballet, prol, 3, Duché de Vancy), 10 May 1698, reduced score (1698)

Divertissement representé à Barcelone pour le mariage de leurs majestez catholiques en octobre 1701 (Saintonge), music lost, attrib. Desmarets

Iphigénie en Tauride (tm, prol, 5, Duché de Vancy and A. Danchet, after Euripides), 6 May 1704, extracts (1704), reduced score (1711), completed by A. Campra

Le temple d'Astrée (divertissement, 5 scenes, du Tremblay), Nancy, 9 Nov 1709, only lib extant

Diane et Endymion (tm, prol, 5, Saintonge), Nancy, Jan 1711, music lost, attrib. Desmarets

Divertissement for the Elector of Bavaria, Namur, 1712, lost

Divertissement for fête of the Duke of Lorraine (prol, 6 scenes, Cusson), Lunéville, 15 Nov 1717, only lib extant; rev. as Divertissement for marriage of the Prince of Lixheim, Nancy, 1721

Renaud, ou La suite d'Armide (tm, prol, 5, S.-J. Pellegrin, after T. Tasso), 5 March 1722, reduced score (1722)

Music in: Télémaque, ou Les fragmens des modernes (1704); Armide (revival 1710)

Doubtful: Plutus, ou Le triomphe des richesses (ballet), Paris, Collège Louis-le-Grand, 5 Aug 1682, Pn (attrib. 'Desmatins'); Idylle sur la naissance de Monseigneur le Dauphin (Paris and Lyons, 1730)

SACRED

Grands motets: Beati quorum, 1683, lost; Te Deum, 1st setting, *c*1678, Pc; Veni Creator, before 1704, GB-T; Cum invocarem, before 1704 (1714), T; Exaudiat te Dominus, before 1704, T; Domini est terra, before 1704, T; Quemadmodum desiderat, before 1704, T; Deus in adjutorium, before 1704, T; Confitebor tibi, before 1704, T; Dominus regnavit, before 1704, F-Pc, GB-T; Nisi Dominus, before 1704, T; Beati omnes, before 1704, T; De profundis, before 1704, T; Confitebor tibi, 1707, F-V; Usquequo Domine, 1st setting, 1708, Pc, 2nd setting, after 1708, LYm; Te Deum, 2nd setting, after 1707, LYm; Domine ne in furore, after 1707, Pc; Lauda Jerusalem, after 1707, Pc

Messe à deux choeurs, before 1704, GB-T

OTHER WORKS

Cants., music lost: Le lys heureux époux (Marchal), 1724; Clytie, 1724; Le couronnement de la reine par la déesse Flore (Marchal), 1724; La toilette de Vénus (Henault), text in Oeuvres inédites de M. le président Henault (1806)

Airs in Recueil d'airs sérieux et à boire (Feb 1702, March 1706, Aug–Nov 1706, April 1713, Jan 1721); Nouveau recueil de chansons (The Hague, 1729, 1732); 19 op extracts in Nouvelles parodies bachiques (1700–02); Airs et brunettes à 2 et 3 déssus pour les flutes traversières (n.d.); Meslanges de musique latine, françoise et italienne (1726); Nouvelles poésies spirituelles et morales (1703–33, 1737, 1752); Second recueil des nouvelles poésies spirituelles (1731); Nouvelles poésies morales sur les plus beaux airs (1737)

Inst: Recueil de dances … dancés à l'Opéra (1704); Marche de l'Orenne, 1707, and Trio, F-V, Pc; [6] Sonates, fl, bc, ?1725–30 (n.d.), authenticity doubtful; Sonates, 2 fl/vn (Paris and Lyons, 1731), authenticity doubtful

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AnthonyFB

E. Titon du Tillet: Le Parnasse françois, suppl. i (Paris, 1743/R)

A. Jacquot: La musique en Lorraine (Paris, 1882, 2/1882/R)

M. Brenet: 'Desmarets, un compositeur oublié du XVIIIe siècle', Le ménestrel, xlix (1882–3), 305–7, 313–15, 321–3, 329–31

M. Ténéo: 'Miettes historiques: correspondence théâtrale du XVIIe siècle', Mercure musical, i (1905), 577–83, 620–27; ii (1906), 21–8, 71–8

M. Antoine: Henry Desmarest (Paris, 1965)

J. de La Gorce: 'L'Académie royale de musique en 1704, d'après des documents inédits conservés dans les archives notariales', RdM, lxv (1979), 170–91

C. Wood: 'Orchestra and Spectacle in the tragédie en musique, 1673–1715: Oracle, sommeil and tempête', PRMA, cviii (1981–2), 25–46

R. Fajon: L'opéra à Paris du Roi-Soleil à Louis le Bien-aimé (Geneva, 1984)

CAROLINE WOOD

Desmazures [Desmasures], Laurent (b Marseilles, 20 Dec 1714; d Marseilles, 29 April 1778). French organist and composer. Possibly a pupil of Laurent Belissen, he was organist of Moissac Abbey in 1737 and organist of Autun Cathedral from 1750 to 1752 but not, as is generally thought, organist of Albi Cathedral. He may be identifiable with the Desmazures who was organist of St André Cathedral, Bordeaux, from 1752 to 1755. In 1758 he succeeded François Dagincourt as organist of Rouen Cathedral, and was in turn replaced by Charles Broche, his pupil. From 1777 he was organist of St Férréol in Marseilles. Desmazures was famous for his great memory and his virtuosity at the organ despite the loss of three fingers of his left hand in a hunting accident; he was able to use false fingers which served as well as his own. Desmazures' opéra-ballet in one act with a prologue, Les fêtes de Grenade, was performed at the Dijon Académie de Musique on 12 January 1752. He died of an apoplectic fit while playing the organ at St Férréol.

His father, Charles Desmazures (b La Fère-en-Tardenois, Aisne, 1669; d Marseilles, 14 Feb 1736), may have been a pupil of Lebègue between about 1685 and 1690. He was organist of Marseilles Cathedral when he published a collection of Pièces de simphonies à quatre parties pour les violons, fluttes et hautbois rangées en suites sur tous les tons (1702); these were composed on the occasion of a visit to Marseilles by Marie-Louise of Savoy, Queen of Spain, and are dedicated to her. Each of the seven suites opens with an overture followed by dances and character-pieces. He also published a Messe des morts, now lost.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB

A. Gouirand: La musique en Provence et le Conservatoire de Marseille (Paris and Marseilles, 1908)

J. Gardien: L'orgue et les organistes en Bourgogne et en Franche-Comté au dix-huitième siècle (Paris, 1943)

M. Benoit: Dictionnaire de la musique en France aux XVIIe et XVIIIe Siècles (Paris, 1992), 228

GUY BOURLIGUEUX

De Smet, Raoul (b Borgerhout, Antwerp, 27 Oct 1936). Belgian composer. He began his musical training at the music academy of Deurne, then studied at the Catholic University in Leuven and at the universities of Madrid and Salamanca. From 1966 he studied composition with De Meester and Goethals at the IPEM in Ghent, and also with Verbesselt in Antwerp and Ton de Leeuw in Amsterdam. From 1974 he organized the Antwerp concert series Orphische Avonden (Orphic Evenings) and the new music concerts at the Stadsschouwburg in Antwerp. From 1987 he also ran the biennial international Orpheus Contest, aimed to encourage young people to play contemporary chamber music, especially Flemish music. De Smet has written two operas: Ulrike, a consideration of the political impact of the Baader-Meinhof group, and Vincent, about the final stages in the life of van Gogh. De Smet is a committed artist, writing with critical and moralizing intent; his aesthetic remains linked to the 1960s. His music is playful and ornamental, with an occasional Spanish or Mediterranean character. He often uses a technique based on numbers, without however giving them a symbolic meaning.

WORKS
(selective list)

Chbr op: Ulrike, een antieke tragedie (L. Geerts), 1979, Ghent, 1989; Vincent, apologie van een schilder (Het laatste uur van Vincent van Gogh, M. Thys), 1988–9, Ghent, 1990

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1959–60; Rapsodia, 1966; Meditation, str, 1969; Exorcismes, 1971; Adagio, vn, str, 1985; Conc., a sax, str, accdn, perc, 1992; Vn Conc., 1993; Conc., vc, str, 1995; Sym. no.2, 1995

Unacc. choral: Gnomons 1 (G. Adé), 1985

Chbr: 4 Stages, str qt, 1963–6; Colloquium, fl, str trio, 1974; The Good Ol' Days, 6 sax, 1978; Black Label Suite, 5 sax, accdn, 2 perc, 1988; Houtsneden, double wind qnt, 1990; Khammsa 2, wind qnt, 1991; Tussen Kreeft en Steenbok, cl, str qt, 1991; Nocturne 2, vn, accdn, 1995

Works for pf and other solo insts, songs, el-ac music

Principal publishers: CeBeDeM, Eigentijdse Muziek

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Y. Senden: 'Een oorstrelend dissonant', Muziek en woord, xvii/12 (1991), 40 only

Y. Knockaert: 'Raoul De Smet: in cijfers gevatte vrijblijvendheid', Kunst en cultuur, xxv/9 (1992), 14–15

YVES KNOCKAERT

Desmond, Astra (b Torquay, 10 April 1893; d Faversham, 16 Aug 1973). English contralto. She studied singing in London (at the RAM, under Blanche Marchesi) and Berlin, and gave her first recital in London in 1915. Although she made some operatic appearances with the Carl Rosa Company, at Covent Garden and at Glastonbury, where she was the first to sing the title role in Rutland Boughton's Alkestis, she made her career mainly as a concert and oratorio singer. From 1920 she was closely associated with Elgar's choral works at the Three Choirs festivals and elsewhere; her rich and flexible voice, coupled with rare qualities of restraint and intelligence, made her an outstanding interpreter of the part of the Angel in The Dream of Gerontius. The same virtues distinguished her intelligently planned recitals and British music lovers owe her a debt of gratitude for her serious studies of Scandinavian song. She was the first to introduce the songs of Kilpinen to English audiences, and gave numerous recitals of Grieg's songs in the original Norwegian, besides recording several of them (and much Purcell). She was made a CBE in 1949.

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR

Desmond [Breitenfeld], Paul (Emil) (b San Francisco, 25 Nov 1924; d New York, 30 May 1977). American jazz alto saxophonist. He studied the clarinet at San Francisco State University and joined the Dave Brubeck Quartet in 1951. Because his career was almost solely with this group until its dissolution in 1967 he shared its success without receiving the recognition that was his due. Desmond continued to play occasionally with Brubeck in the 1970s, notably in 1975, when the two men recorded an album of duets. He also appeared at festivals and toured Europe, Australia and Japan for George Wein.

Later he worked in New York at the Half Note with his own group, which included the guitarist Jim Hall (1974), and in Toronto as a soloist with a Canadian rhythm section (1974–5).

Desmond was one of the most capable representatives of the 'cool' tendency in alto saxophone jazz, of which Lee Konitz was the chief exponent, and which Lester Young, Benny Carter and others had foreshadowed in the late 1930s. His tone had a luminous quality, consistent over the instrument's whole range, that was particularly reminiscent of Carter, but his most notable gift as an improviser was his power of sustained melodic invention, which depended in part on an unusually imaginative use of sequence. Desmond's independent recordings, with the sidemen Gerry Mulligan (Two of a Mind, 1962, RCA) and Hall (Paul Desmond and Friends, 1959, WB), for example, do him more justice than his numerous ones with Brubeck, for whom he composed the popular Take Five in 5/4 time (on the album Time Out, 1959, Col.).

See also BRUBECK, DAVE.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. McPartland: 'Perils of Paul: a Portrait of Desperate Desmond', Down Beat, xxvii/19 (1960), 15–17, 37 only; repr. in All in Good Time (New York, 1987), 53–68

L. Tomkins: 'Giant Jazzman, Gentle Wit: Paul Desmond', Crescendo International, xii/12 (1974), 14–16; xiii/1 (1974), 9–10

A.J. Smith: 'A Quarter of a Century Young: the Dave Brubeck Quartet', Down Beat, xliii/6 (1976), 18–20, 45–6

N. Hentoff: 'The Solitary Floating Jazzman', Village Voice (22 Aug 1977)

MAX HARRISON/R

Des Murs, Jehan. See MURIS, JOHANNES DE.

Desolre. The pitch d in the HEXACHORD system.

Desormery [Désormerie], Léopold-Bastien (b Bayon, Lorraine, *c*1740; d nr Beauvais, *c*1810). French composer, singer and actor. According to Fétis he studied music at the archiepiscopal school of Nancy. By 1762 he was a singer and composer in Lyons, where his pastoral La bergère des Alpes was performed in the following year. By 1764 he was a pensionnaire of the Lyons opera. He was on the staff of a small music school in Lyons (1765) and was also a musician at the cathedral. He sang comic parts in Mâcon and by 1770 had become a comédien in Strasbourg. That year he was co-winner of the Parisian Concert Spirituel annual prize for 'musique latine'. He then moved to Paris and was an actor at the Théâtre Italien from about 1774 to 1778. During these years he also sang in and wrote sacred works for the Concert Spirituel, and in quick succession composed several stage works, including Euthyme et Lyris (1776, 22 performances) and the highly successful Myrtil et Lycoris (1777, 63 performances) for the Opéra. Unable to repeat his former successes he abandoned his artistic career and devoted himself to teaching, retiring to the vicinity of Beauvais. Shortly before his death he attempted another theatrical work, but it was not performed.

Desormery's son Jean-Baptiste(-Léopold-Bastien) Desormery (b Nancy, 1772; d after 1813) was a successful pianist (a student of Hüllmandel) and also published virtuoso and didactic works for the piano, including several sonatas and a set of 24 studies op.19.

WORKS

STAGE

La bergère des Alpes (pastorale, P.J.B. Nougaret, after J.F. Marmontel), Lyons, Jan 1763 [cited by Léris]

Hylas et Egié (ballet-héroïque, 1, J.-J. Le Franc de Pompignan), Paris, Opéra, 16 Feb 1775, collab. Le Gros, rev. of Grenet's ballet Hylas

La fête du village (oc, 2, Dorvigny), Paris, Hôtel de Bourgogne, 28 June 1775, air in Mercure de France (July 1778)

Euthyme et Lyris (ballet-héroïque, 1, M.J. Boutellier), Paris, Opéra, 1 Oct 1776, F-Po, airs (Paris, n.d.)

Myrtil et Lycoris (pastorale, 1, Boutillier, Boquet de Liancourt), Fontainebleau, 14 Nov 1777, Po (Paris, *c*1777)

Les montagnards, *c*1808 [cited by Fétis]

Le mendiant (comédie, 3), ariettes (Paris, n.d.)

VOCAL WORKS

Les horreurs de la guerre (Nougaret), cantatille, low T, orch, perf. Lyons, 1762, F-Pn

La gloire du seigneur (J.B. Rousseau), chorus, orch, 1768, F-Pn

Recueil d'airs et duos, collab. Le Gros, incl. 18 airs, 8 duets with str qt, advertised in Mercure de France (Oct 1774)

Choeur d'Athalie, 3vv, orch (Paris, n.d.)

La fête provençale, 1v, bc (hpd) (Paris, n.d.)

Laudate pueri, chorus, insts, perf. Lyons, 12 June 1765, lost; Deus noster, motet, 1770, F-Pc; motet, 2 male vv, 1784, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB

Mercure de France (June 1770), 195 only; (Oct 1774), 173–4; (March 1775, Sept 1784, May 1790)

L. Vallas: Un siècle de musique et de théâtre à Lyon 1688–1789 (Lyons, 1932/R)

C. Pierre: Histoire du concert spirituel 1725–1790 (Paris, 1975)

B. Lespinard: 'Aspects du grand motet dans les années 1760 à 1770', Le grand motet français (1663–1792) (Paris, 1986), 259–76

ROGER COTTE

Désormière, Roger (b Vichy, 13 Sept 1898; d Paris, 25 Oct 1963). French conductor and composer. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire and with Koechlin, and made his conducting début at the Concerts Pleyel in 1921 while working as a flautist in Paris orchestras. An associate of Sauguet and others in the Ecole d'Arcueil, and of Les Six, he conducted the premières of Milhaud's Salade and Satie's Mercure for ballets by Massine given in 1924 at the Soirées de Paris, and composed incidental music for Cocteau's very abridged production of Romeo and Juliet. He was conductor for the Paris-based Ballets Suédois, 1924–5, and for Diaghilev's Ballets Russes, 1925–9, conducting a varied repertory including works by Auric, Poulenc, Prokofiev and Stravinsky. Désormière later toured as a guest conductor in Europe and the USSR, acquiring a wide reputation for his perceptive and persuasive performances of both contemporary and pre-Classical music. As director of the Société de Musique d'Autrefois from 1930 he edited and performed many lesser-known works by Campra, Lalande, Rameau and others, and collections of Renaissance music, some of which were later published and recorded. A resident conductor at the Opéra-Comique from 1937 (where he added works by Chabrier, Ravel and Richard Strauss to the repertory), he served as the theatre's director, 1944–6, and additionally as associate director at the Opéra, 1945–6. He conducted the première of Poulenc's Les animaux modèles for Lifar's ballet in 1942, and was much admired for his sensitive performances of Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande, of which he made a definitive recording. In the postwar period Désormière was one of the founders of the Association des Musiciens Progressistes, and helped to chart newer trends in music with performances of works by Messiaen and Boulez, including the first version of the latter's Le soleil des eaux (1950), which was dedicated to him. With Denise Mayer he organized concerts of 17th- and 18th-century music at Versailles, and he composed a quantity of music for films. He had been a frequent participant in festivals of the ISCM, but the onset of an aphasic disorder in 1950 forced his premature retirement.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Milhaud: Notes sans musique (Paris, 1949, rev. enlarged 2/1974 as Ma vie heureuse; Eng. trans., 1952)

D. Mayer and P. Souvchinsky: Roger Désormière et son temps (Monaco, 1966)

NOËL GOODWIN

Dešpalj, Pavle (b Blato, Korčula, 18 June 1934). Croatian conductor and composer. He was taught by his father, the conductor and composer Šime Dešpalj (b 1897; d 1981), before studying composition with Stjepan Šulek at the Zagreb Academy of Music. He graduated in 1960, and the following year founded a summer music festival in Zadar. He served as artistic director of the Zagreb RSO (1962–7), and in 1966 founded the Belgrade Chamber Ensemble, which he directed until 1967. That year he moved to the USA where, after initial work as a violinist, he became principal conductor of the Florida SO and Opera in Orlando (1970). In 1972, he became the permanent guest conductor of the Chicago Grand Park summer concerts. On his return to Zagreb in 1978, he became chief conductor of the Zagreb PO and artistic director of the Dubrovnik Summer Festival. He has toured extensively, both with the Zagreb PO and as a guest conductor of other major orchestras. In 1987 he was appointed to teach conducting at the Zagreb Academy of Music. He is also guest professor at the National University of Fine Arts and Music in Tokyo. His small output of compositions, including the Passacaglia and Fugue for strings (1956), the Variations for chamber orchestra (1957) and the Concerto for alto saxophone and strings (1963), demonstrate his particular affinity with Romanticism and the Baroque.

EVA SEDAK

Despić, Dejan (b Belgrade, 11 May 1930). Serbian composer. He studied composition with Tajčević and conducting with Vukdragović at the Belgrade Academy of Music, graduating in 1955. He then taught at the Mokranjac music school, and at the Belgrade University of the Arts from 1965 to 1995. He was elected corresponding (1985) and full member (1994) of the Serbian Academy of Sciences and Arts. His works, neo-classical in style and proficiently written, suggest a certain serenity, even in works which are overtly dramatic in character. His later works are bolder and have expressionistic qualities. The Symphony, which employs motivic development within cyclical schemes, is dark and dramatically reserved, while the concertante pieces give an impression of spontaneity, particularly the inventive Triptih for violin and orchestra (1978). Other well-known works of his include the piano trio Pas de trois (1972) and the solo pieces Vinjete ('Vignettes', 1963) and Humorističke etide (1957). He has received a number of awards from Yugoslav broadcasting and from national composers' organizations.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym., op.25, 1955; Pf Conc., op.30, 1960; Conc. grosso, op.45, fl, ob, cl, bn, orch, 1964; Triptih [Triptych], op.63, vn, orch, 1978; Conc. no.2 for Orch, op.70, 1981; Epitaph, op.95, va, str, 1988; 3 meditacije, op.99, vc, str, 1989; Na kraju puta [At the End of the Way], poem, op.125, chbr orch, 1997

Vocal: Jadranski soneti [Adriatic Sonnets] (J. Dučić), song cycle, op.17, low v, pf, 1951; Krug [The Circle] (song cycle, old Jap. texts), op.48, female v, chbr ens, 1964; Jefimija Lazaru [Jefimija to Lazar] (cant., Sister Jefimija), op.94, Mez, chorus, orch, 1988; Dubrovački kanconijer [The Ragusan Canzoniere] (S. Bobaljević, Š. Menčetić, M. Držić), song cycle, op.96, 1v, pf/hpd, 1989; Ozon zavičaja [The Ozone of the Homeland] (D. Maksimović), 10 songs, op.105, 1v, pf, 1991

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata no.1, d, op.19, 1952; Str Qt [no.1], F, op.20, 1953; Humorističke etide [Humorous Studies], op.26, pf, 1957; Pf Sonata no.2, op.37, 1962; Vinjete [Vignettes], op.43a, pf, 1963; Vinjete [Vignettes], op.43b, wind qnt, 1965; Pas de trois, op.54, pf trio, 1972; 9 igara [9 Dances], op.62, cl, 1976; Muzički rečnik [A Musical Dictionary], op.71, pf, 1982; Pf Sonata no.3, op.76, 1983; 3 noturna [3 Nocturnes], op.78, pf, 1984; Scarlattiana, op.80, pf, 1984; Str Qt no.3, op.83, 1985; Manchester Trio, op.93, fl, vc, pf, 1987; Serenade, op.117, nonet, hp, 1995; Muzička nedelja [Musical Week], 2 vc, 1996

Principal publishers: Udruženje kompozitora Srbije, Breitkopf & Härtel, Hans Gerig, Nota, Peters

WRITINGS

Teorija tonaliteta [The theory of tonality] (Belgrade, 1971)
Tonski slog [Tone composition] (Belgrade, 1973–5)
Opažanje tonaliteta [The perception of tonality] (Belgrade, 1981)
Muzički instrumenti [Musical instruments] (Belgrade, 1985, 2/1993)
Kontrast tonaliteta [The contrast of tonalities] (Belgrade, 1989)
Uvod u savremeno komponovanje [An introduction to contemporary composition] (Belgrade, 1991)
Harmonija sa harmonskom analizom [Harmony with harmonic analysis] (Belgrade, 1993–4)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Peričić, D. Kostić and D. Skovran: Muzicki stvaraoci u Srbiji [Musical creators in Serbia] (Belgrade, 1969)

B. Radović: 'Mužički rečnik za klavir, op.71, Dejana Despica' [Despić's Muzički rečnik for piano], Zvuk, no.2 (1984), 39–45

L.-M. Suter: 'L'unité d'expression dans les Neuf danses pour clarinette solo, opus 62, de Dejan Despić', Zbornik matica srpska za scenske umetnosti i muziku, no.3 (1988), 181–201

V. Pašić: 'Serenade', Novi zvuk, no.7 (1996), 39

ROKSANDA PEJOVIĆ

Desplanes, Jean-Antoine. See PIANI, GIOVANNI ANTONIO.

Desportes, Philippe (b Chartres, April or May 1546; d 5 Oct 1606). French poet. In 1562 he was described as 'clerc au diocèse de Chartres'. By 1567 he was in Paris, and at the end of 1573 he accompanied Henry of Valois, Duke of Anjou, to Poland. After Henry was crowned King of France in 1574 he granted Desportes several benefices. Desportes was a follower of the Pléiade but was also a fervent admirer of Italian literature, borrowing freely not only from Petrarch but also from 16th-century poets including Tasso, Tebaldeo, Sannazaro, Bembo and Ariosto. At Henry's court he satisfied the prevailing taste for simpler strophic forms and a more refined, mellifluous style. His Premières oeuvres appeared between 1573 and 1583, but as the religious wars intensified he forsook secular poetry to follow the path of Clément Marot and Baïf in making verse translations of the psalms, and these were published between 1591 and 1603.

Desportes' lyrical work abounds in musical imagery, using conventional metaphors similar to those of the Pléiade. He wrote an epitaph for the castrato Brevet, but his surviving writings mention no other contemporary musicians, though he must have known the composer Denis Caignet, who like him was a protégé of the Villeroy family, and he may well have met Joachim Thibault de Courville at meetings of the Académie de Poésie et de Musique. According to a Latin poem by Nicolas Rapin, Desportes' funeral was attended by ten musicians, including Robert Ballard, Eustache Du Caurroy, Jacques Lefebvre, Mauduit and Guédron. Rapin's 'Regrets sur la mort de M. des Portes' recalls the poet's 'blandishing voice joined to his lute or pronouncing the sonnets'.

In the air and chanson collections published during the last quarter of the 16th century Desportes' poetry was set more frequently than that of any of his contemporaries, although it never rivalled Ronsard's popularity among the musicians of the previous generation. Verchaly has identified 74 secular poems set by more than 40 composers between 1569 and 1650. Three settings by Nicolas de La Grotte (1569), one by Costeley (1570) and one by Goudimel (before 1572) antedate the first published edition of Desportes' verse, and his name is particularly mentioned on the title-pages of books of airs by La Grotte (1569) and Didier Le Blanc (1579). A few composers (Caietain, Goudimel, Le Jeune, Sweelinck and others) set Desportes' sonnets, usually in separate stanzas rather than as continuous through-composed chansons. However, as the sonnet declined in favour towards the end of the century, composers turned to the simpler strophic forms. These were usually set strophically, either as four- or five-part homophonic pieces (e.g. by Beaulieu, Du Caurroy, Le Jeune and Guillaume Tessier) or as solo airs to the lute (e.g. by Ballard, Bataille, Besard and others). His translations of the psalms were set between 1593 and 1643 by several composers including Chastillon, Du Caurroy and Courbes. Caignet published 50 polyphonic settings (1607) and 50 for voice and lute (1625) as well as monophonic settings of all 150 (1624). Another group of 50 polyphonic settings by Signac was published in 1630. The fashion for Desportes' verse continued until about 1644, by which time Malherbe's clear language had affected not only the air de cour but the psalm, so that new translations by Antoine Godeau (1648) supplanted those of Desportes. A few odd settings survive from the late 17th and the 18th centuries, including three different versions of the chanson O bien heureux qui peut passer sa vie by Jean-Jacques Rousseau (Les consolations des misères de ma vie, Paris, 1781, pp.25ff). 19th-century settings are rare: Victor Massé's Chants d'autrefois (1849) include Icare and Une fontaine set as scènes, and Louis Théodore Gouvy published 18 settings of Desportes' works in 1876. (Desportes' poetry is ed. V.E. Graham, 7 vols., Geneva, 1958–63.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Michiels, ed.: Oeuvres de Philippe Desportes (Paris, 1858)
J. Lavaud: Un poète de cour au temps des derniers Valois: Philippe Desportes (1546–1606) (Paris, 1936)
A. Verchaly: 'Desportes et la musique', AnnM, ii (1954), 271–345
D. Launay, ed.: Anthologie du psaume français polyphonique (1610–1663), i (Paris, 1974)
M. Desmet: La paraphrase des psaumes de Philippe Desportes et ses differents versions musicales (diss., U. of Tours, 1994)

FRANK DOBBINS

Desportes, Yvonne (Berthe Melitta) (b Coburg, Germany, 18 July 1907; d Paris, 29 Dec 1993). French composer. The daughter of the composer Emile Desportes, she studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Dupré and Dukas (composition) and Lefébure and Cortot (piano). She received the Prix de Rome in 1932 with the cantata Le Pardon, which was praised for its unified cyclic structure. The author of a number of pedagogical works on harmony and solfège, she taught at the Paris Conservatoire for 35 years, first as professor of solfège (1943–59), then as professor of counterpoint and fugue (1959–78). She was made a Chevalier de l'Ordre National du Mérite and also served on the faculty of the Centre La Fontaine.

Desportes composed over 500 works, including three symphonies, a requiem and eight operas. She eschewed the transparent style of French neo-classicism, favouring rather the intensity of The Five and early Stravinsky. Jacques Chailley commented on the alertness of her musical imagination, which encompassed a variety of sound combinations and resources, including electronic. Her works were broadcast over French Radio and performed widely, although she remains underrated as a composer of opera, her medium of greatest concentration. After Lili Boulanger she may be considered the foremost French woman composer of her generation.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Trifaldin (ballet, 1934; Le rossignol et l'orvet (scène lyrique, G. Cherau), 1936; Les sept péchés capitaux (ballet), 1938; Maître Cornélius (op, 3, M. Belvianes, after H. de Balzac), 1939–40; La farce du carabinier (oc, F. Gautier de Teramond), 1943; La chanson de Mimi Pinson (opérette, Gautier de Teramond and M. Altery), 1952; Symphonie (ballet mécanique), 1961; Le forgeur de merveilles (op, 3, Desportes, after F.-J. O'Brien), 1965
Orch: Variations symphoniques, pf, orch, 1942; Tpt Conc., 1948; Caprice champêtre, vn, orch, 1955; A bâtons rompus, conc., 2 perc, orch, 1957; 3 syms., 1958, 1964, 1969; Le tambourineur, conc., perc, orch, 1960; L'exploit de la coulisse, conc., trbn, orch, 1969; Variations sur le nom de Beethoven, 1974
Vocal: Le pardon (cant., P. Arosa), 1932; Requiem, solo vv, choir, orch, 1950; Ambiances, S, perc, 1962; Conc., 4 solo vv, orch, 1963; Discordances, 2 solo vv, choir, orch, 1966; Les importuns familiers, 4 solo vv, pf, 1967; Le bal des onomatopées, choir, fl/pf, 1976; works for unacc. choir, many mélodies, 1v, pf
Chbr: Aubade, fl, vn, va, vc, hp, 1946; Divertissement, 4 sax, pf, 1948; Vision cosmique, 3 perc, 1963; Idoles au rebut, pf, 1975; Plein air, 4 sax, 1975; Sérénade exotique, wind octet, 1975; Per sa pia, perc, sax, pf, 1978
Film scores, incid music

Principal publishers: Billaudot, Eschig, Leduc

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Machabey: 'Yvonne Desportes', Information Musicale (1942)

JAMES R. BRISCOE

Despréaux, Jean-Etienne (b Paris, 31 Aug 1748; d Paris, 26 March 1820). French composer and administrator, brother of Louis Félix Despréaux. His father, Jean-François Despréaux (1693–1768), was an oboist and possibly a flautist, active at the Opéra and the Concert Spirituel; a brother, Claude-Jean-François Despréaux l'aîné (b mid-18th century; d Paris, 11 Aug 1794), was a violinist who, according to Fétis, composed sonatas for the violin and harpsichord. Jean-Etienne was a dancer at the Opéra from 1764 until 1781, when he retired; he returned briefly as a directeur de la scène in 1792. He was later an inspector at the Opéra and taught maintien and dancing at the Conservatoire from 1807 to 1815. During this time he invented a chronometer 'which is able to fix precisely the time of each measure'; in explanation he published a Nouveau chronomètre musical établi sur des bases astronomiques (Paris, 1813). His major works are parodies of popular operas by F.-A. Philidor, Piccinni, Rameau, Boieldieu and others. Despréaux and the dancer Marie Madeleine La Guimard performed together in these pieces and were married in 1789. He may have been the Despréaux who, on attending an opera at Versailles, asked for a seat where he could hear the music but not the words, because 'I greatly esteem the music of Lully, but have contempt for the verses of Quinault' (Almanach des spectacles, 1772).

WORKS
all printed works published in Paris

PARODIES
all librettos by Despréaux

Romans, after Piccinni: Roland, Versailles, 30 May 1778 (?1778)
Momie, after Gluck: Iphigénie en Aulide, Choisy, Aug 1778 (1778)

Berlingue, after F.-A. Philidor: Ernelinde, Choisy, 13 Sept 1778 (1778)
Christophe et Pierre-Luc, after Rameau: Castor et Pollux, Versailles, 1780 (1780)
Syncopé, reine de mic-mac, after Piccinni: Pénélope, Versailles, 31 Jan 1786 (1786)
Jenesaiki, ou Les exaltés de Charenton, after Boieldieu: Béniowski, Paris, Vaudeville, 21 June 1800, collab. R.A. de Chazet, M. Dieulafoy, P.-Y. Barré
La tragédie au vaudeville, after J.-F. Ducis: Otello, and other plays, Paris, 18 March 1801, collab. 7 others

OTHER VOCAL

Prologue pour l'ouverture du Théâtre de Trianon (Despréaux), 1780
Mes passe temps, chansons suivies de l'art de la danse (1806)
other works

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (M.-F. Christout); MGG1 (P. Chaillon-Guiomar)
E. Campardon: L'Académie royale de musique au XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1884/R)
A. Firmin-Didot: 'Souvenirs de Jean-Etienne Despréaux … (d'après ses notes manuscrites)', Revue d'art dramatique, xxix (1893), 257–63, 341–51; xxx (1893), 10–26, 90–106
S. Travers: Catalogue of Nineteenth Century French Theatrical Parodies (New York, 1941)

MICHAEL BARNARD

Despréaux, Louis Félix, le cadet (b Paris, 17 April 1746; d Paris, 1813). French viola player, keyboard player and composer, brother of Jean-Etienne Despréaux. He joined the Opéra orchestra as a viola player in 1765, played the viola and keyboard at the Concert Spirituel in 1768 and was accompanist to the royal singing school in the same year. His Cours d'éducation de clavecin ou pianoforte, published in five parts (Paris, *c*1785), is one of the earliest piano methods; it includes his own compositions, as well as works by Gluck, Exaudet and Grétry, and was published in many editions. His other compositions comprise several sonatas for the harpsichord or piano (some with violin or flute accompaniment), La bataille de Fleurus for piano and violin, and piano arrangements of airs, ariettes, overtures and dances.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1 (P. Chaillon-Guiomar)
B. Gérard: 'Inventaire alphabétique des documents répertoriés relatifs aux musiciens parisiens conservé aux archives de Paris', RMFC, xiii (1973), 181–213
P. van Reijen: Vergleichende Studien zur Klaviervariationstechnik von Mozart und seinen Zeitgenossen (diss., U. of Amsterdam, 1988)

MICHAEL BARNARD

Desprez, Louis-Jean (b Auxerre, 9 Jan 1742; d Stockholm, 17 March 1804). French stage designer, architect and engraver. He studied in Paris with J.-F. Blondel and Pierre Desmaisons and from 1771 taught at the Ecole Militaire. He won the Académie's Grand Prix de Rome in 1776 and lived from 1777 in Italy, where he made many drawings from nature for Richard de Saint-Non's Voyage pittoresque de Naples et de Sicilie (1781–5); he was in Rome from 1779, and often worked as a scene painter at the Teatro Alibert. In 1784 he was summoned to Stockholm by Gustav III as scenic director at the Royal Opera House; as a stage designer, artistic director of court festivals, an authority on architecture and a member of the Swedish Academy, he exerted a powerful influence on Sweden's cultural development until the death of his employer in 1792. During a stay in London (1789) he sketched plans for the rebuilding of the Italian opera house, the King's Theatre, which had been destroyed by fire.

Design by Louis-Jean Desprez for J.G. Naumann's opera 'Gustaf Wasa', Act 3: pen and ink and colour wash, 1786 (Nationalmuseum, Stockholm)

Desprez' work on the Voyage pittoresque had aroused his interest in the history and cultural traditions of antiquity and the Middle Ages and had revealed his mastery of the depiction of effect-laden romantic landscapes. This was reflected in his designs for more than 15 opera productions: they rejected the academic classicism of his French teachers, admitted the influence of contemporary Italian stage design and supported Gustav III's endeavours to establish a Swedish National Opera. His designs for J.G. Naumann's national historical opera Gustaf Wasa (1786) show him to have been an important innovator for the operatic stage: his atmospheric landscapes and architectural compositions, his effective tableaux and his emotionally expressive crowd scenes anticipated principles of stage design that were to be a feature of Romantic opera (see illustration).

See also OPERA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (D. Bablet)
N.G. Wollin: Gravures originales de Desprez ou exécutées d'après ses dessins (Malmö, 1933)
B.H. Wiles: 'An Unpublished Stage Design by Desprez and its Source: Polignano a Mare', Festschrift Ulrich Middeldorf (Berlin, 1968), 503–5
B. Stribolt: 'Desprez' Urban Scenes', Gustavian Opera: an Interdisciplinary Reader in Swedish Opera, Dance and Theatre 1771–1809, ed. I. Mattsson (Stockholm, 1991), 128–37
Louis Jean Desprez: Tecknare, Teaterkonstnär, Arkitekt (Stockholm, 1992) [exhibition catalogue with Eng. summary]
B. Stribolt: 'On Desprez as Set Designer in Sweden', Gustav III and the Swedish Stage: Opera, Theatre, and other Foibles; Essays in Honor of Han Asrand, ed. B.H. van Boer (New York, 1993), 167–90
K. Hendriksen: 'Desprez anno 1787', Konsthistorisk tidskrift, lxii (1994), 1–11

MANFRED BOETZKES

Despuig, Guillermo. See PODIO, GUILLERMO DE.

Desquesnes, Jean (fl 2nd half of the 16th century). Flemish singer and composer. He was in service at the court of Margaret of Parma, Governess of the Netherlands. Thanks to her mediation, he obtained a prebend at Turnhout in 1580 after the death of Geert van Turnhout. A Jean Dequesne is mentioned in the accounts of Duke Ernest, Governor of the Netherlands, but in view of the date (1630) he is unlikely to have been the same person. Of Desquesnes' two books of madrigals, only one now survives: Madrigali … il primo libro a cinque voci (Antwerp, 1594). The other (also for five voices) was published in 1603. (EitnerQ; FétisB; Vander Straeten, i)

P. ANDRIESSEN

Desrosiers, Nicolas. See DEROSIERS, NICOLAS.

Dessau. City in eastern Germany, formerly the capital of the state of Anhalt. Documents indicate that sacred music was cultivated there between the 12th century and the 16th; subsequently, however, religious quarrels between Lutherans and Calvinists inhibited musical culture, both in the church and in schools. However, a tradition of choral singing grew up, until the choristers were disbanded in 1809. During the 19th century the town churches were served by the ducal choir, which was formed by the combination of the choral union of 'Operists' with members of the theatre choir and schoolboys.

Court music did not flourish until the late 18th century, under Prince Leopold Friedrich Franz (1751–1817). In 1766 a court chapel was founded, under the direction of Friedrich Wilhelm Rust, who also taught music at the 'Philanthropin' institute of education, founded in 1774. With his colleagues there, members of the court and citizens, Rust performed the first opera in Dessau, Anton Schweitzer's Elysium, in 1775. In 1794 an opera company conducted by F.W. Bossann began mounting regular performances, held after 1798 in the new theatre, designed by Erdmannsdorf, which rivalled the court theatres at Berlin and Munich in splendour. The 30 members of the chapel and its chorus built up an excellent reputation. In 1821 Heinrich Schneider became Kapellmeister and further raised the artistic standards of the chapel and the theatre. He founded a Singakademie and was also active as an organist and conductor of a male-voice choir.

Up to the mid-19th century, when nearby Leipzig developed as a musical centre, Dessau was considered one of the main musical centres of Germany. Schneider's successor was Eduard Thiele, Wagner's predecessor as Kapellmeister in Magdeburg, who became Kapellmeister in Dessau in 1856 and in 1869 produced Die Meistersinger, soon after its première in Munich. This earned him the goodwill of Wagner, who, after attending a performance of Gluck's Orfeo in Dessau in 1872, wrote that he 'had never experienced a more noble or more perfect performance as a whole'. A lasting Wagner tradition grew up, and singers from Bayreuth performed as guests at the 'Bayreuth of the North', as Dessau was often called. Franz Mikorey, a pupil of Hermann Levi, followed August Klughardt (1882–1902) as Kapellmeister and continued this tradition in collaboration with the drama critic Artur Seidl, with the enthusiastic support of Duke Friedrich II until 1919. During the period 1918–22 Knappertsbusch conducted in Dessau and was followed by other capable conductors, including Artur Rother (1927–34) and Helmut Seydelmann (1934–51).

From 1952 to 1977 music in Dessau was under the direction of Heinz Röttger and was centred on the restored Landestheater (cap. 1250). With the Intendant Willy Bodenstein, Röttger revived the city's Wagnerian tradition and organized a Wagner Festival. Music-theatre works have also been presented since 1983 in the Theater im Bauhaus. Amateur choirs (notably the Lutheran) and other ensembles are active in the city, which is increasingly merging with the industrial districts of Halle and Bitterfeld, with which it maintains cultural contacts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (D. Härtwig); MGG2 (L. Buchmann and I. Lehfeld)
M. von Prosky: Das herzogliche Hoftheater zu Dessau: in seinen Anfängen bis zur Gegenwart (Dessau, 1884, 2/1894)
G. Eisenhardt: Beiträge zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Dessau unter besonderer Berücksichtigung führender Musikpersönlichkeiten und der Entwicklung des Chorwesens (1766–1900) (diss., U. of Halle, 1979)
E. Hirsch: Dessau-Wörlitz: Zierde und Inbegriff des XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Munich, 1985)
K.-H. Köhler: 225 Jahre Orchester in Dessau, 1766–1991: historischer Abriss (Dessau, 1991)

HORST SEEGER/R

Dessau, Paul (b Hamburg, 19 Dec 1894; d Berlin, 28 June 1979). German composer and conductor.

1. LIFE. His grandfather, Moses B. Dessau, was cantor in the Hamburg synagogue. Dessau began violin lessons at the age of six and appeared as a soloist at the age of 11. In 1909 he moved to Berlin, where he studied the violin at the Klindworth-Schwarwenka Conservatory with Florian Zajic. When Zajic advised him to discontinue his violin studies, he decided to become a composer and conductor, studying privately with Eduard Behm and Max Loewengard. In 1912 he became a répétiteur at the Hamburg opera house. Thanks to his cousin Jean Gilbert, who had built up an operetta empire, he was appointed Kapellmeister at the Tivoli Theatre in Bremen in 1914. He began to establish his reputation as a composer in 1915 when his piano sonata was given its first performance by Bruno Eisner in Berlin. After serving in World War I, he gained more experience in the theatre at the Hamburg Kammerspiele, where he worked as both a composer and a conductor. He went on to hold posts as an opera conductor in Cologne (1919–23), Mainz (1923–4) and Berlin (1925–6), where he was appointed by Bruno Walter. With his growing success as a composer (he won a Schott Prize for his Violin Concertino in 1925), he abandoned his conducting career. His First Symphony was performed in Prague in 1927.

After a brief period in Wiesbaden (June 1928), Dessau became musical director at the Alhambra cinema in Berlin, a post he held until 1930. With the advent of sound cinema, he worked on musical films with Richard Tauber and wrote ambitious symphonic scores for Arnold Franck's mountaineering epics. The rise of Nazism, however, drove him into exile in Paris, where he continued to write for the cinema. He was introduced to the 12–note technique by Leibowitz, whom he met in 1936. With the advent of the Spanish Civil War, he adopted a left-wing political position and composed songs like the popular Thälmannkolonne for the International Brigade. In 1939 he moved to New York. After meeting Brecht in 1943, he followed him to Southern California, where he earned his living in Hollywood writing (most anonymously) for the movies. Together he and Brecht worked on anti-fascist songs and Deutsches Miserere, their first large-scale collaboration. He wrote incidental music for Mutter Courage und ihre Kinder in 1946 and for Der gute Mensch von Sezuan in 1947.

In 1948 Dessau returned to Berlin, where he worked with Brecht's Berliner Ensemble. In 1951 Die Verurteilung des Lukullus received its first performance under Hermann Scherechen (the work was condemned as 'formalist' by official Communist Party critics). He became a member of the East Berlin Deutsche Akademie der Künste in 1952 (vice-president, 1957–62) and was appointed professor in 1959. He took advantage of his political influence to support the avant-garde aspirations of younger composers in the DDR and, even in old age, played an active role in general musical education, teaching at a primary school in Zeuthen, near Berlin (1962–75). His numerous honours include an honorary doctorate from Leipzig University (1974) and four National Prizes of the DDR (1953, 1956, 1965, 1974).

2. Works. Dessau's earliest compositions bear the stamp of late Romanticism. Hindemith was an important influence on him during the 1920s, as was the Jewish synagogue tradition (Symphony no.1, 1926). This style led, by way of the score for Helmar Lerski's film Awodah (1935), to the dramatic oratorio Hagadah (1936), on a text by Max Brod. Dessau continued to explore Jewish themes in the synagogue music he wrote while in New York (1939–43).

As early as 1930 a left-wing political agenda appeared in Dessau's works that became more pronounced from the middle of that decade, especially in his first setting of Brecht (Kampflied der schwarzen Strohhüte, 1936). His adoption of the 12–note method in works such as Les voix, first performed at the ISCM International Music Festival in New York (1941), made his musical language more radical, but his friendship with Brecht limited this compositional tendency, as the playwright favoured a style easier to sing. Dessau had already had experience writing artistic popular music and with the example of Brecht's other collaborators, Weill and Eisler, before him, he developed a successful folksong-like style that continued to acknowledge modern musical thinking. Although he drew on other resources in his larger-scale works, his goal was always concise expression without affective overstatement. In relating word and tone, he was true to Brecht's theory of alienation: music should not merely illustrate a text but comment on it.

After Brecht's death in 1956 Dessau became more responsive to avant-garde procedures, using 12-note techniques in his second Brecht opera, Puntila. He formed contacts with younger composers and was a friend of Henze and Nono. Like Nono, he aspired to a union of the artistic and political factions of the avant garde, a position that did not endear him to the moral censors of socialist realism. Works such as Hymne auf den Beginn einer neuen Geschichte der Menschheit (1959) and Appell der Arbeiterklasse (1961), which combine political subjects with progressive music, strayed into critical crossfire. The attacks subsided with growing liberalization of aesthetic opinion, but Dessau repeatedly took a subversive line. Leonce und Lena (1976–8), based on Büchner, reflects unease with the realities of society, and thus implicitly criticizes accruals of the socialist ideal. The lyrical sections of the score create a glassy, fragile effect, slanting the comedy towards cynicism.

WORKS

OPERAS AND INCIDENTAL MUSIC

all Berlin premières at Deutsche Staatsoper

Giuditta (op, M. May), 1910–12, inc.

Die Reisen des Glücksgotts (op, B. Brecht), 1945, inc.

Die Verurteilung des Lukullus (Das Verhör des Lukullus) (op, Brecht), 1949–51, Berlin, 1951

Puntila (op, P. Palitzsch, M. Wekwerth, after Brecht), 1957–9, Berlin, 1966

Lanzelot (op, H. Müller and E. Tscholakowa, after J. Schwarz: Der Drache), 1967–9, Berlin, 1969

Einstein (op, K. Mickel), 1969–73, Berlin, 1973

Leonce und Lena (op, T. Körner, after G. Büchner), 1976–9, Berlin, 1979

Incid music: Lanzelot und Sanderein (trad. Flemish), 1919; 99% (Furcht und Elend des Dritten Reiches) (Brecht), 1938; Mutter Courage und ihre Kinder (Brecht), 1946, Berlin version 1948–9; Der gute Mensch von Sezuan (Brecht), 1947–8; Faust I (J.W. von Goethe), 1949; Herr Puntila und sein Knecht Matti (Brecht), 1949; Der arme Konrad (F. Wolf), 1951; Mann ist Mann (Brecht), 1951, several later versions; Urfaust (Goethe), 1952; Der Weg nach Füssen (J.R. Becher), 1955–6; Coriolan (W. Shakespeare, rev. Brecht), 1963–4; Vietnam-Diskurs (P. Weiss), 1967–8; Zement (Müller), 1973

OTHER DRAMATIC

Film scores: Alice and the Fleas (dir. W. Disney), 1928; Alice und die Feuerwehr (dir. Disney), 1928; Alice und der wilde Westen (dir. Disney), 1928; Der verzauberte Wald (dir. L. Starewitsch), 1928; Die Wunderuhr (dir. Starewitsch), 1928 [arr. as Märchensuite, small orch, 1929]; Alice und der Selbstmörder (dir. Disney), 1929; Stürme über dem Montblanc (dir. A. Franck), 1930; SOS Eisberg (dir. Franck), 1933; Awodah (dir. H. Lerski), 1935 [arr. as Suite 'Arbeit']; Adamah (dir. Lerski), *c*1947; Du und mancher Kamerad (dir. A. and A. Thorndike), 1956; Das russische Wunder (dir. Thorndikes), 1961–2, collab. R. Bredemeyer; many others

Radio play: Orpheus (R. Seitz), 1930–31 [rev. as Orpheus und der Bürgermeister, *c*1976]

Tanzszenen: Ballett-Skizzen (L. Goslar), 1945; Die den Himmel verdunkeln, sind unsere Feinde (R. Berghaus, J. Gerlach and J. Tenschert), 1958, collab. Bredemeyer; Flug zur Sonne (Berghaus), 1959, collab. Bredemeyer; Hände weg! (Berghaus), 1962

Lehrstücke and Schulstücke: Das Eisenbahnspiel (Lehrstück, R. Seitz), 1930; Tadel der Unzuverlässigkeit (Lehrstück, Seitz), 1930–31; Kinderkantate (Dessau), 1932; Die Ausnahme und die Regel (Lehrstück, Brecht), 1948; Wie dem deutschen Michel geholfen wird (Clownspiel, Brecht), 1949; Herrnburger Bericht (Brecht), 1951; Rummelplatz (Kleines Singspiel für Kinder, F. Baronick, Dessau), 1963

ORATORIOS AND CANTATAS

Symphonische Kantate (Dessau), S, T, men's vv, orch, org, 1916–17; Haggada (M. Brod), solo vv, chorus, children's chorus, orch, 1934–6, reorchd 1961, collab. Bredemeyer; 2 Gebete (Hebrew), 1v, chorus, org, 1939; Deutsches Miserere (Brecht), solo vv, chorus, children's chorus, orch, org, trautonium, 1943–7; Internationale Kriegsfibel (Brecht), 1944–5, orchd 1970; An die Lehrer und an die Mutter (M. Breslasu, trans. W. Fabius), spkr, solo 1v, chorus, 3 tpt, 2 pf, timp, 1950; Appell (V. Skupin), spkrs, solo vv, chorus, children's chorus, orch, 1951–2

Die Erziehung der Hirse (Musikepos, Brecht), spkr, Bar, chorus, youth chorus, orch, 1952, reorchd 1954; Lilo Herrmann (melodrama, F. Wolf), Sprechstimme, small chorus, fl, cl, tpt, vn, va, vc, 1952–3; Hymne auf den Beginn einer neuen Geschichte der Menschheit (Becher), spkr, S, chorus, 3 pf, 2 hp, db, timp, perc, 1959, rev. 1964; Appell der Arbeiterklasse (Brecht, Becher and others), spkrs, A, T, chorus, orch, 1960–61; Jüdische Chronik (J. Gerlach), spkr, Bar, chbr chorus, small orch, 1960–61, collab. Blacher, Hartmann, Henze, Wagner-Régeny [Dessau wrote, pt 5 and end of pt 4]

Marburger Bencht (Gerlach), Bar, chorus, children's chorus, orch, 1961; Requiem für Lumumba (K. Mickel), spkr, S, Bar, chorus, insts, 1961–3; Geschäftsbericht (V. Braun), spkr, 4 solo vv, chorus 8vv, insts, 1966;

Brief an die Grundorganisationen (Braun, after W. Ulbricht), 2 spkrs, B, chorus 8vv, hpd, timp, 1968; Der geflügelte Satz (Braun), 3 solo vv, chorus 8vv, 8 insts, 1973; Chormusik no.5 (Müller, after E. Honecker), B, chorus, orch, 1976

OTHER CHORAL

Adon Olam (Bible), T [cantor], men's vv, 8 wind, perc, org, db, 1927; Ps v, 1927; Ps xiii, 1930; Ausmarsch (Klabund), 1933; Hawel Hawalim (Bible), chorus, pf/org, 1939; Toramelodie (Bible), men's chorus, 1939–40, arr. Bar/B, org; O Susanna (S. Foster), men's chorus, 1940–41; Jewarechecho (Bible), B, chorus, org, 1941; Song of Songs (Song of Solomon), women's chorus, 1942; 2 Gebete (Bible), T, chorus, org, 1943; Olenu (Bible), T [cantor], chorus, org, 1943; Grabschrift für Gorki (Brecht), men's vv, wind, 1947; Grabschrift für Karl Liebknecht (Brecht), 1948, rev. 1951; Grabschrift für Rosa Luxemburg (Brecht), 1948, rev. 1951; Proletarier aller Länder, vereinigt euch! (K. Marx, F. Engels), chorus, 1948; 3 Chorlieder (Kuba), chorus, orch, 1949; Die ihr der vieles duldenden Menschheit Lehrer ehrt (V. Skupin, after F.H. Ziegenhagen), 1v, chorus, 3 tpt, timp, 2 pf, 1951, rev. 1v, str orch, timp, 1958 [arr. of W.A. Mozart: Die ihr des unermesslichen Weltalls Schöpfer ehrt (cant.), K619]; Grabschrift für Lenin (Brecht), chorus, orch, 1951; 5 März 1953, 21.50 Uhr (Kuba), A, chorus, 3 tpt, timp, str orch, 1953–4; Sang der Gesänge (V.V. Mayakovsky), chorus, perc, 1963; 5 Chöre (G. Maurer), chorus, 1976; 4 Chöre (V. and T. van Gogh), chorus 8vv, 1976

ORCHESTRAL

Sym. no.1, 1926, rev. 1929; Sym. no.2, 1934, rev. 1962; Sinfonischer Marsch (Sozialistische Festouvertüre), 1953, rev. 1963; Trauermarsch, wind, 1953; Orchestermusik 1955, 1955; In memoriam Bertolt Brecht, 1957; Bach-Variationen, 1962–3, Divertimento, chbr orch, 1964; Sym. Adaptation, 1964–5 [after Mozart K614]; Orchestermusik no.2 'Meer der Stürme', 1967; Orchestermusik no.3 'Lenin', 1969 [incorporates choral Grabschrift für Lenin as finale]; Orchestermusik no.4, 1973; Sonatine, small orch, pf obbl; 1975; Musik, 15 str, 1978–9

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Concertino, vn, fl, cl, hn, 1924; Str Trio, 1927; Lustige Variationen über 'Hab mein' Wagen vollgeladen', cl, bn, hpd, 1928, rev. cl, bn, pf, 1953; Sonatine, va, pf/hpd, 1929; Burleske, vc, pf, 1932; Hebräische Melodie, vn, pf, 1932; Str Qt no.1, 1932; 2 kleine Studien, vn, vc, 1932; Suite, sax, pf, 1935; Jewish Dance, vn, pf, 1940; Variationen über ein nordamerikanisches Volkslied, cl, pf, 1940; Nigun chassidin, vc/1v, pf, 1941, rev. 1950; 3 Violinstücke, vn, pf, 1941–2; 2 Canons, fl, cl, vn, 1942; Str Qt no.2, 1942–3; Str Qt no.3, 1943–6; Str Qt no.4, 1948; 5 Tanzstücke, mand, gui, accdn, 1951; Str Qt no.5, 1955; Quattrodramma, 4 vc, 2 pf, 2 perc, 1965; Str Qt no.6, 1971; 3 Stücke, 2 tpt/cl, trbn/bn, 1971; 3 kleine Flötenstücklein für Mücklein, 1974; 4 Bagatellen, va, pf, 1975; Str Qt no.7, 1975; Qnt, ob, cl, bn, hn, pf, 1978

Pf: Sonata, 1914–15, rev. 1948; 9 Studien, 1932; 10 Kinderstücke, 1934, rev. 1953; Zwölfton Versuche, 1937; Guernica, 1938; 11 jüdische Volkstänze, 1946; Klavierstück über BACH, 1948; 5 Studien für Anfänger, 1948; Intermezzi, 1955; Klavierstücke für Maxim, 1955; Sonatine, 1955; Fantasietta no.1, 1971–2; Sonatine [no.2], 1975; Fantasietta nos.2–3, 1976

SOLO VOCAL

With several insts/orch: Inspiration (H. Hesse), 1912–14; Aufblick (R. Dehmel), 1917–18; 4 Marienlieder (trad., ed. O. Zoff), 1923–4; Ps lxii, 1926; Ps iii, 1933; Les voix (Verlaine, after A. France), 1939–43; Klage der Garde (Schi-king, Ger. trans. Klabund), 1941; Die sieben Schwestern (Tuan Mu Hung Liang, Ger. trans. M. Remané, 1950); Deutscher Beitrag (Wolf), 1954; An mein Partei (P. Neruda), 1955; Der anachronistische Zug (B. Brecht), 1956; Mohammed Ben Bella (Mickel), 1961; 5 Melodramas (Braun; Mickel, after W. Burchett; Ho-Chi-Minh; Dessau, after B. Russell), 1967; 3 Sonette (Shakespeare), 1v, insts, 1971–3; Die Freund (Brecht), 1v, fl, str qt, 1974

With pf/gui: 4 Lieder (O. Ernst, Storm, Goethe), 1912; Betrachtung (L. Lehman), 1914; 4 Lieder (H. Bredow), 1914; Verkündigung, Helle Nacht (Dehmel), 1914; 2 Gesänge (O.J. Bierbaum), 1917, arr. 1v, orch; Schlaflied für Esther Dülberg (Dessau), 1918; Erlösung durch die Wahrheit (B.S. Reinke), 1v, org, 1919; Lyrisches Intermezzo (H. Heine), 1919; Nachglanz (Dehmel), 1919–23; Traurige Tänze (S. George), 1923; Sterbelied (C. Rosetti), 1927; Die Räuberballade vom roten Coquillard (F. Villon), 1930–31; Kaffeholer raus (Ein ernstes Soldatenlied) (Dessau), 1931; Palestinensisches Hirtenlied (J. Schoenberg), 1932; Ballade du Franc Buveur (Villon), 1934; 2 Songs (L. Hughes), 1934; The Young British Soldier (R. Kipling), 1934; An die Armeen Europas (E. Weinert), 1936; Ballade vom guten und schlechten Lebenswandel, 1936; Illegales Flüsterlied, 1936; Kampflied der schwarzen Strohhüte (Brecht), 1936; No passaran (Dessau), 1936; Ein spanisches Lied 'Vom Stalin' (S. Perez, trans. G. Russ), 1936–7; Die Thälmannkolonne (K. Ernst [G. Kabisch]), 1936; Zeitungsbericht, 1936; Abbitte (F. Hölderlin), 1937; Captain Potatoe (Ernst), 1937; Serment du rassemblement du 14 juillet 1935, 1937; Der tote Soldat in Spanien (Ernst), 1937; Klage der Garde (Schi-king, Ger. trans. Klabund), 1938; Der kleine Barfuss (E. Pottier, Ger. trans. E. Weinert), 1938; Schlummerlied für Anja (P.K. Höfler), 1938; Ecoutez la chanson (Verlaine), 1939; Télégramme de 5. X. 1939 (R. Leibowitz), 1939; Ps cxxvi, 1940; Ps xxiii, 1941; Deutschland (Brecht), 1942–3; Jeworechecha adanoy (Bible), 1942; Das deutsche Miserere (Brecht), 1943; Grabschrift für Borki (Breckt), 1943; Horst-Dussel-Lied (Brecht), 1943; Lied einer deutschen Mutter (Brecht), 1943; Materialist (E. Byron), 1943; Wiegenlied einer proletarischen Mutter (Brecht), 1943; 4 Lieder des Glücksgotts (Brecht), 1944–7; Kriegslied (M. Claudius), 1945, rev. 1947, 1950, 1955; Die Graugans (Brecht, after American), 1947; Aufbaulied der FDJ (Brecht), 1949; Der Friede auf Erden (J. Iwaskiewicz, Ger. trans. P. Wiens), 1950; Und was bekam des Soldaten Weib (Brecht), 1950; Friede (Neruda), 1951; 4 Liebeslieder (Brecht), 1951; Die Freunde (Brecht), 1952; 5 Lieder (J. Ringelnatz, Claudius, Goethe), 1955; Den mutigen Achtzehn (E. Schumacher), 1957; 27 Lieder (G. Maurer), 1963–7; An meine Landsleute (Brecht), 1965; Kleines Lied (Brecht), 1965; Moderne Legende (Brecht), 1966; 5 Lieder (E. Strittmatter), 1969; 3 Gedichte (Neruda), 1974; 4 Gesänge (J. Jewtuschenko), 1974; 3 Lieder (Heine), Mez, 1974; 2 Gedichte (Mickel), 1978

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Breitkopf & Härtel, Deutscher Verlag, Henschel, Hofmeister, Internationale Musikbibliothek, Litolff, Mitteldeutscher Verlag, Neue Musik, Neues Leben, Peters, Schott, Thüringer Volksverlag

WRITINGS

'Arnold Schoenbergs Kol Nidre', Jewish Music Forum, iii (1942), 10–12

'Das Zukunftslied', Theater der Zeit, v/3 (1950), 23

'Das Puntilalied', Theaterarbeit (Dresden, 1952), 37–42

'Zur Courage-Musik', Theaterarbeit (Dresden, 1952), 274–80
'Biographische Skizze', Berlin, Deutschen Akademie der Künste, 28 May 1953, 5–9 [programme notes]
'Die Kunst der schöpferischen Ausdeutung der Musik', Die Komische Oper 1947–1954 (Berlin, 1954), 55–9
'Wechselseitiges Schenken', MG, ix (1959), 15 only
'Einiges über meine Zusammenarbiet mit Brecht', Die Verurteilung des Lukullus (Berlin, Staatsoper, 10 Feb 1960) [programme notes]
Musikarbeit in der Schule (Berlin, 1969)
'Here are a few remarks Schoenberg made to me (Paul Dessau) in Brentwood, California', Toward the Schoenberg Centenary II, PNM, xi/2 (1972–3), 84–6
Notizen und Noten, ed. F. Hennenberg (Leipzig, 1974) [anthology of writings]
Aus Gesprächen (Leipzig, 1975) [reminiscences]
Operntexte, ed. F. Hennenberg (Berlin, 1976)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 [incl. further bibliography]
R. Leibowitz: Les voix: Introduction à la musique de douze sons (Paris, 1949), 259ff
F. Hennenberg: 'Paul Dessaus Theatremusik', MG, ix (1959), 699–706
'Das Zukunftslied', Theater der Zeit, v/3 (1950), 23
F. Hennenberg: Dessau-Brecht: musikalische Arbeiten (Berlin, 1963)
F. Hennenberg: Paul Dessau (Leipzig, 1965)
G. Rienäcker: 'Zu einigen Gestaltungsproblemen im Opernschaffen von Paul Dessau', Sammelbände zur Musikgeschichte der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik, ed. H.A. Brockhaus and K. Niemann, ii (Berlin, 1971), 100–43
F. Hennenberg: Für Sie porträtiert: Paul Dessau (Leipzig, 1974, 2/1981)
M. Hanisch: 'Paul Dessau, der Filmkomponist und Filmillustrator', Prisma [Berlin], vi (1975), 118–38
G. Müller: 'Paul Dessaus Konzeption einer politischen Musik', Jb Peters 1980 (Leipzig, 1981), 9ff
H.-M. Bock and W. Jacobsen, eds.: Paul Dessau (Berlin, 1994) [on film music]
K. Angermann, ed.: Paul Dessau: Von Geschichte gezeichnet (Hofheim, 1995)
D. Reinhold, ed.: Paul Dessau: Dokumente zu Leben und Werk (Berlin, 1995)

FRITZ HENNENBERG

Dessauer, Josef [Joseph] (b Prague, 28 May 1798; d Mödling, 8 July 1876). Bohemian composer. He studied with V.J. Tomašek and Bedřich Diviš Weber in Prague. Frequently in Vienna from 1825, he purchased there in 1827 several items from Beethoven's bequest. He also visited Italy, England and France (he was in Paris 1831–2 and 1842–3); he settled in Vienna in 1835, but his tours took him to Prague, Dresden, Ischl and Carlsbad. Dessauer was popular in his day as a songwriter; Lockung was once a favourite in England, and was one of three of his songs transcribed by Liszt. Ferdinand Hiller described him as 'one of the best of the Viennese lieder composers'; Berlioz called him 'a man of talent' (letter to Hiller, 13 May 1832), and also wrote that 'Dessauer's predilection is exclusively for the elegiac' (Mémoires). He was a friend of many of the leading composers, artists and writers of the day (including George Sand, who named him 'Maître Favilla'), and tried to impress the importance of Bellini on his contemporaries. Chopin's Polonaises op.26 were dedicated to him. He was a successful opera composer, making use of some of the conventional ingredients of Romantic opera, including the polonaise. His works in this genre include Lidwina (1836), Ein Besuch in St Cyr (1838), Paquita (1851) and Dominga (1860); a further opera, Oberon, was not performed. In Paris in 1842 he persuaded Wagner to draft him a libretto on Hoffmann's Die Bergwerke zu Falun, but the project was turned down by Pillet at the Opéra as being too hard to stage. Dessauer then asked Wagner for a text for an oratorio, Mary Magdalene; Wagner agreed but stalled for time indefinitely, reluctant to distress a man he described as 'a hypochondriacal eccentric' (letter to Schumann, who struck out these words, 5 January 1842). In addition to a considerable number of songs, Dessauer's instrumental works consist of overtures, a cello sonata, and numerous single pieces (fantasias, rondos etc.) for both violin and keyboard. He published in all 68 opuses (MSS in A-Wn, Wgm, F-Pn, GB-Lbl and US-Wc).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (K. Pfannhauser)
P. Hédouin: Mosaïques (Paris, 1856)
E. von Bauernfeld: 'Meister Favilla: zur Erinnerung an Josef Dessauer', Die Heimat [Vienna], ii (1877), 435–8, 454–6 [also pubd separately]
E. von der Mühlen: 'Aus einem alten Stammbuche', An der schönen blauen Donau, i (1886), 297–9 [incl. facs. of Dessauer MSS]
A. Kohut: 'Josef Dessauer und George Sand', Neue Musik-Zeitung, xxii (1901), 287–8, 296
O. Sertl: Josef Dessauer (1798–1876): ein Liedermeister des Wiener Biedermeier (diss., U. of Innsbruck, 1951) [with list of works]

JOHN WARRACK/JAMES DEAVILLE

Dessay, Natalie (b Lyons, 19 April 1965). French soprano. She studied at the Bordeaux Conservatoire and in Paris. After winning a prize in the 1990 Mozart Competition in Vienna, she sang in Lyons as Zerbinetta, Blonde and Madame Herz (Der Schauspieldirektor), then made her début in Geneva in 1991 as Adele in Die Fledermaus. Her first appearance as Olympia in Les contes d'Hoffmann in Roman Polanski's production at the Opéra Bastille in 1992 led to engagements at the Vienna Staatsoper, La Scala and the Metropolitan Opera, on each occasion as Olympia. In Vienna she has subsequently sung Zerbinetta, Sophie and Aminta in Die schweigsame Frau. Her repertory also includes Morgane in Handel' Alcina, the title role in Delibes' Lakmé, Aspasia in Mozart's Mitridate and the Queen of Night, all of which she has recorded. Among her other recordings are mélodies by Fauré. Dessay is the first French coloratura soprano for many years to have made an international career, and some commentators have hailed her appearance as part of a renewal of the often lamented 'lost' French vocal style.

PATRICK O'CONNOR

Dessì [Dessy], Daniela (b Genoa, 14 May 1957). Italian soprano. She studied at the Parma Conservatory with Carla Castellani and at the Accademia Chigiana, Siena. Her career began with concert singing and sacred music, and she turned increasingly to opera after her début in 1979 as Serpina in Pergolesi's La serva padrona with Opera Giocosa at Genoa. She also sang Lauretta (Gianni Schicchi) there the same year, but then concentrated on earlier opera, including works by Cimarosa, Monteverdi (L'incoronazione di Poppea), Handel, Jommelli, Salieri (Les Danaïdes) and Paisiello. Her success as Desdemona at Barcelona with Placido Domingo led to her American début in the same role with him in Los Angeles.

Engagements throughout Italy and elsewhere in Europe embraced a wider and growing repertory of Mozart, Rossini, Donizetti, Verdi and Puccini roles, in which she is admired for depth of passionate feeling combined with sensitivity to verbal inflection. She has made a number of recordings including Gilda (Rigoletto), Alice Ford (Falstaff) and Elisabeth (Don Carlos) the title role in Donizetti's Alina, regina di Golconda, all with Muti, Mimì under Gelmetti and operas by Cimarosa, Pergolesi (Adriano in Siria), Traetta and Vivaldi.

NOËL GOODWIN

Dessin (Fr.). A term used by Antoine Reicha and others to denote the smallest unit of melodic construction. See ANALYSIS, §II, 2.

Dessler, Wolfgang Christoph (b Nuremberg, bap. 11 Feb 1660; d Nuremberg, bur. 16 March 1722). German writer, schoolmaster and theologian. He began to study theology and philosophy at the University of Altdorf, near Nuremberg, in 1677. His health prevented his taking on a parish, so he worked as a proof-corrector for various printers in Nuremberg. In 1705 he was appointed deputy headmaster of the Heiliggeist School there, a post he held until 1720, when a stroke put an end to his reading career. His writings combine the influences of Spener's Pietism and the spiritual tendencies of the philological society known as the Pegnesische Blumenorden. He added sacred verses of his own to his collections of pious reflections and prayers, and some of them were taken into general liturgical use. Dessler did not compose the melodies of his hymns. In Gott-geheiligter Christen . . . Seelen-Lust his collaborator was Benedict Schultheiss, who wrote not only the 11 arias signed 'B. S.' but also very probably the songs with continuo prefacing each of the 25 devotions. Nikolaus Deinl contributed an appendix of 12 continuo songs to the 1712 collection. In Himmlische Seelen-Lust, a devotional guidebook, Dessler gave an evaluation of different kinds of music which is close to Spener's Pietist views.

WORKS

all published in Nuremberg

Gott-geheiligter Christen nutzlich-ergetzende Seelen-Lust ... mit lieblich in Noten gesetzten neuen Arien [by B. Schultheiss], 1v, bc (1692)

Hertz-wallende und von heiliger Liebe erregte Funcken der Liebe Jesu ... wie auch einem Anhang von 12 in Noten gesetzten Arien [by N. Deinl], 1v, bc (1712)

Himmlische Seelen-Lust unter den Blumen göttliches Worts (1726)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

WinterfeldEK

A. Fischer and W. Tümpel: Das deutsche evangelische Kirchenlied des 17. Jahrhunderts, v (Gütersloh, 1911/R)

R. Wagner: 'Beiträge zur Lebensgeschichte Johann Philipp Kriegers und seines Schülers Nikolaus Deinl', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 146–53

LINI HÜBSCH-PFLEGER

Dessus (Fr.: 'top'). The highest part in French vocal or instrumental ensembles from the 17th to the early 19th centuries. The term corresponds with the English 'treble'; hence dessus de viole refers to the treble viol. Within divided textures treble parts may be styled premier dessus and second dessus, or alternatively haut-dessus and bas-dessus. The term may apply collectively to the high instruments within a consort; for example, dessus de hautbois or even dessus de symphonie. During the 17th and 18th centuries dessus alone sometimes meant violin, more properly called dessus de violon. Dessus continued to denote the highest voice in France as late as the first edition of Rossini's Guillaume Tell (1829), even though the French terms for other voices had long fallen into disuse.

□

Dessus de musette. A type of treble shawm used in Swiss Protestant churches between about 1760 and 1810. See HAUTBOIS D'ÉGLISE.

Destinn [Kittl], Emmy [Destinnová, Ema] (b Prague, 26 Feb 1878; d České Budějovice, 28 Jan 1930). Czech soprano. She studied singing under Marie Loewe-Destinn, adopting the latter's name in gratitude; in later life she used exclusively the Czech form of her stage name. On 19 July 1898 she made a highly successful début as Santuzza at the Berlin Kroll Oper, where she remained for ten years and became a great favourite in a wide repertory. Her international career began after a much acclaimed Senta at Bayreuth in 1901. She made her London début in 1904 as Donna Anna at Covent Garden; she returned to London every season until 1914, and was particularly admired there for her Butterfly (of which she was the first English exponent) and Aida. From 1908 to 1916 she also sang regularly at the Metropolitan, creating there the part of Minnie in the première of La fanciulla del West (1910), and extending her Verdi roles to include Il trovatore, Un ballo in maschera and Alice Ford in Falstaff.

During World War I Destinn's position as a declared sympathizer with the Czech national movement led to her being interned in her own castle of Stráž nad Nežákou. After the war she found it difficult to regain her former international standing. She returned to Covent Garden, however, for the peace season of 1919, in Aida and Un ballo in maschera; and she sang again at the Metropolitan during the seasons of 1919–20 and 1920–21. Among the most emotional occasions of her career were her appearances in Prague, just before and just after World War I, as the heroine of Smetana's patriotic opera Libuše. She was one of the greatest artists of her generation, equally gifted as singer and actress, with a voice of markedly individual timbre and emotional warmth, and of great flexibility; her trill, for example, was unusually distinct and even for so full a voice. She made over 200 records for several companies, many reissued on CD; not all catch the calibre of her voice, though the best give a fair idea of her considerable art.

Emmy Destinn in the title role of Thomas' 'Mignon'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rektorys: Ema Destinnová (Prague, 1936) [incl. bibliography and discography]

A. Rektorys, ed.: Korespondence Leoše Janáčka s Gabrielou Horvátovou (Prague, 1950) [contains correspondence between Destinn and Janáček, pp.92ff]

A. Rektorys and J.Dennis: 'Emmy Destinn', Record Collector, xx (1971–2), 5–47, 93–4 [with discography]

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR/R

Destouches, André Cardinal (b Paris, bap. 6 April 1672; d Paris, 7 Feb 1749). French composer.

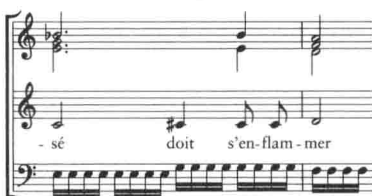
1. Life. André Cardinal, whose father Etienne Cardinal, Seigneur des Touches et de Guilleville, was a wealthy Parisian merchant, did not take the patronym Destouches until his father's death in 1694. From 1681 to 1686 he was schooled by the Jesuits of the rue St-Jacques. Imbued with a sense of adventure, he left France in January 1687 with Father Gui Tachard, who was making a second voyage to Siam. He returned in July 1688 and four years later joined the 2nd Company of the King's Musketeers (the 'Mousquetaires Noirs') with whom he took part in the siege of Namur. He apparently discovered his musical gifts in camp bivouacs. He learnt to play the guitar and composed some airs sérieux et à boire. Encouraged by his success, he left the army in 1694 'in order to devote himself to music' (Titon du Tillet). André Campra seems to have been his only teacher; in 1697 he permitted Destouches to contribute three airs to his opéra ballet, L'Europe galante.

Because of his social position (Le Cerf de la Viéville always wrote of him as 'Mr. des Touches'), Destouches moved with ease in aristocratic circles. He was a friend of the Prince of Conti and the Duke of Vendôme; his most important friend was Antoine de Grimaldi, the future Prince of Monaco, a man of cultivated taste and himself an amateur musician. Through Grimaldi's efforts, Destouches was brought to the attention of Louis XIV. The pastorale-héroïque Issé was first performed at a concert at Fontainebleau on 7 October 1697 before an illustrious audience that included the exiled King and Queen of England. It was an immediate success and Destouches's future was secured. Louis XIV gave him 200 louis with the comment that 'since Lully no music had given him so much pleasure' (Titon du Tillet). Destouches's friendship with the Prince of Monaco resulted in a correspondence that began in 1709 and lasted until the prince's death in 1731. These letters give much valuable information about the Académie Royale de Musique (its performers and its financial state after years of mismanagement) and about Destouches's own stage music (for example, the initial failure of Les élémens is blamed on the dancing of the 'petits seigneurs of little talent').

On 8 January 1713 Louis XIV appointed Destouches to a newly created position, inspecteur général of the Académie Royale de Musique. For 'maintaining order and discipline' he received a 4000 livre pension. At the request of Lalande, and thanks to the influence of the regent (whom he had known in military service), Destouches was appointed surintendant de la musique de la chambre (8 February 1718). On 15 January 1724 he married Anne-Antoinette de Reynold de la Ferrière. On 28 September 1727, after the death of Lalande, he became maître de musique de la chambre. When Nicolas de Francine retired from the directorship of the Académie Royale de Musique, Destouches took over this important post (8 February 1728), only to abandon it along with that of inspector general on 1 June 1730.

Beginning in 1725, Destouches organized and directed concerts for Queen Maria Leszczynska who wanted him to initiate a series of concerts spirituels modelled on the popular Paris concerts of the same name. This placed the composer in the enviable position of being able to draw upon the best voices of the opera to perform his own secular and sacred works. The accounts of the menus plaisirs for the single year 1727 show that 46 concerts took place under his direction at Versailles in the queen's apartments.

Destouches remained active musically even in his last years. At 70, he conducted the orchestra for a masked ball given by the daughters of Louis XV, and he kept control of the queen's concerts until 1745. He died in his elegant home (today, 4 rue St-Roch next to the church of St Roch), and was buried in the crypt of the Chapel of the Virgin in that church.



2. Works. Controversy surrounds the early career of Destouches as an opera composer. He was considered an amateur. It is uncertain how much technical assistance he received in the composition of Issé. It is also possible that his cousin, Houdar de La Motte, presented him with the libretto to L'Europe galante only to have it appropriated by Campra, for whom he was also librettist. Destouches's originality should not readily be attributed to his ignorance of 'rules'. Sir John Hawkins claimed that, after Issé, the composer 'set himself to study the rules of his art' which only served to 'check the flights of his genius and had a bad effect upon his future compositions'. Yet a comparison of the first edition of Issé (1697) with the radically revised edition of 1708 shows that with increased knowledge the expressive power of his music deepened without sacrificing spontaneity. The reply of the oracle (Act 2 scene v), for example, rather than proceeding in the same key with no break, as in the earlier edition (ex.1), is rendered more dramatic through use of rests and shifts in harmony and texture (ex.2).

Ex.1 (after 1697 edn.)

Ex.2 (after 1708 edn.)

Ex.3 Les éléments, Act 2 scene ii (after 1725 edn.)

Destouches was no harbinger of musical impressionism. Efforts to make him so show unfamiliarity with other composers before Rameau in whose music 'forbidden' intervals, unprepared dissonances and parallel 7th chords may also be found. Their experimentation (partly under the stimulus of Italian music) did much to break Lully's stranglehold, particularly in the domain of harmony and orchestral colour. They helped prepare the way for Rameau. The mediant 9-7-♯5 chord in bar three of the extract from Les élémens (ex.3) was described by La Laurencie as 'altogether extraordinary for the period', yet this same chord is found in such works as the motets of Charpentier and Lalande, the instrumental music of Couperin and the cantatas of Clérambault.

Although hampered by poor librettos, Destouches had a fine sense of musical theatre. Zoroaster's monologues from Act 3 of Sémiramis, with their dramatic pauses and orchestral interpolations, are akin to Rameau's Zoroastre, composed 30 years later. Taking the accompanied recitatives from Lully's late operas as a model, Destouches fashioned a highly flexible 'singing' type of musical declamation which included many extended passages in arioso style (see, for example, 'Que ne puis-je encor fuir', Issé, 1, iv). These recitatives occasionally bristle with 'affective' intervals, rare in the music of the period, such as ascending diminished 7ths ('Quoy, je vivrois', Omphale, 5, iv) and augmented octaves ('Je ne veux rien de vous', Amadis de Grèce, 3, ii). Even Grimm in his polemic against Destouches's Omphale (Lettre sur Omphale, 1752) acknowledged that the composer's scenes in recitative were 'still esteemed'.

Operatic techniques also served Destouches for his cantatas. The brilliant air 'Volez grands Dieux' (Oenone) is interrupted by a poignant recitative over a chromatic descending bass line. In Sémélé, a sudden change of key from A minor to F major lends dramatic import to the 'Bruit de tonnère' and following recitative.

Destouches and his librettists dealt with the conventional genres of their time in an original manner. Issé is a pastorale but has heroic characters; Le Carnaval et la Folie is one of the first examples of a lyric comedy in France; Les élémens, an opéra-ballet, is clearly a prototype for the later ballet-héroïque; and Les stratagèmes de l'Amour is perhaps the only ballet-héroïque with a comic intrigue, although we are assured that it is a 'noble Comedy and one that has the character of Antiquity' (libretto).

WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated

STAGE MUSIC

in prologue and 5 acts unless otherwise stated

PO – Paris, Opéra

Issé (pastorale-héroïque, prol., 3, A.H. de Lamotte), Fontainebleau, 7 Oct 1697; PO, 30 Dec 1697 (1697; rev., with 2 addl acts, 1708; full score, 1724/R)

Amadis de Grèce (tragédie en musique, prol., 5, Lamotte), Fountainebleau, 1699; PO, 26 March 1699 (1699, 3/1712/R)

Marthésie, reine des Amazones (tragédie en musique, prol., 5, Lamotte), Fountainebleau, Oct 1699; PO, 29 Nov 1699 (1699)

Omphale [Hercule et Omphale] (tragédie en musique, prol., 5, Lamotte), PO, 10 Nov 1701 (1701)

Le Carnaval et la Folie (comédie lyrique, prol., 4, Lamotte), Fontainebleau, 14 Oct 1703; PO, 3 Jan 1704 (suppléments, changements et additions, 1748); extracts ed. M. Vaubourgoin (Paris, 1974)

Le professeur de folie (divertissement, Act 3 of Le carnaval et la folie), PO, 17 Sept 1706 (1711)

Callirhoé (tragédie en musique, prol., 5, P.-C. Roy), PO, 27 Dec 1712 (1712, 2/1713)

Télémaque et Calypso (tragédie en musique, prol., 5, S.J. Pellegrin), PO, 15 Nov 1714 (1714, 2/1715, 3/1728)

Sémiramis (tragédie en musique, prol., 5, Roy), PO, 7 Dec 1718 (1718)

Les élémens (opéra-ballet, prol., 4 entrées, Roy), Paris, Tuileries, 31 Dec 1721; PO, 29 May 1725, F-Pn, selections (1725), score (2/1742/R forthcoming in FO, xvi); collab. M.-R. de Lalande

Les stratagèmes de l'Amour (ballet-héroïque, prol., 3 entrées, Roy), PO, 28 March 1726 (1726)

VOCAL

Airs in: Recueil d'airs sérieux et à boire (1698, 1703, 1712); Recueil de dances (1704); Nouveau recueil de dance de bal (1712); Tendresses bacchiques en duo et trio (1712); Recueil d'airs sérieux … augmentés (Amsterdam, 1717); Duo choisis de brunettes, de menuets et d'autres airs … propres pour la flûte et la hautbois (1728–30); Nouveau recueil de chansons choisies (The Hague, 1729); Nouvelles poésies spirituelles et morales (1730, 1732–3, 1737); Second recueil des nouvelles poésies spirituelles (1731); Recueil de vaudevilles, menuets, contredanses et autres airs choisis pour la musette (1737); Recueil de pièces, petits airs, brunettes, menuets (*c*1755)

Cants.: Oenone, 1v, insts (1716/R in the Eighteenth-Century French Cantata, xi (New York, 1990)); Sémélé, 1v, insts (1719/R in the Eighteenth-Century French Cantata, xi (New York, 1990))

Motets: O dulcis Jesu (1716); De profundis (1725); Diligam te Domine (1732); Te Deum (1732); Cantate Domino laus ejus (1736); Deus, Deus, meus (1736); O Jesu (1738): none survives

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AnthonyFB; HawkinsH; MGG1 (R. Girardon)

J.L. Le Cerf de la Viéville: Comparaison de la musique italienne et de la musique françoise (Brussels, 1704–6/R)

C. and F. Parfaict: Histoire de l'Académie royale de musique depuis son établissement jusqu'à présent (MS, F-Pn, 1741)

F.M. Grimm: Lettre de M. Grimm sur Omphale, tragédie lyrique (Paris, 1752)

E. Titon du Tillet: Le Parnasse françois, suppl. ii (Paris, 1755/R)

J.-B. Durey de Noinville: Histoire du théatre de l'Académie royale de musique en France (Paris, 1757/R)

T. de Lajarte: Bibliothèque musicale du Théâtre de l'Opéra: catalogue (Paris, 1878)

J.A. Carlez: La Sémiramis de Destouches (Caen, 1892)

G. Pellissier: Famille, fortune et succession d'André Cardinal Destouches (Nogent-le-Routrou, 1900)

V. d'Indy: 'Lulli, Destouches, Rameau et leurs librettistes', Minerva: revue des lettres et des arts, ii (1902), 234

M. Brenet: 'Destouches et son opéra d'Issé', Courrier musical, xi (1908), 661–5
K. Dulle: André Cardinal Destouches (1672–1749): ein Beitrag zur französischen Operngeschichte (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1909)
L. de La Laurencie: 'La musique française de Lulli à Gluck (1687–1789)', EMDC, I/iii (1921), 1362–1457
A. Tessier: 'Correspondance d'André Cardinal des Touches et du Prince Antoine Ier de Monaco (1709–1731)', ReM, viii/2 (1926–7), 97–114; viii/4 (1926–7), 104–17; viii/5 (1926–7), 209–24; viii/6 (1926–7), 149–62
P.-M. Masson: 'Le ballet héroïque', ReM, ix/8 (1927–8), 132–54
P.-M. Masson: 'La "Lettre sur Omphale"', RdM, xxiv (1945), 1–19
R.P.-M. Masson: 'André Destouches à Siam', Mélanges d'histoire et d'esthétique musicales offerts à Paul-Marie Masson, ii (Paris, 1955), 95–102
R.P.-M. Masson: 'André Cardinal Destouches surintendant de la musique de roi, directeur de l'Opéra', RdM, xliii (1959), 81–98
C. Masson: 'Journal du Marquis de Dangeau, 1684–1720: extraits concernant la vie musicale à la cour', RMFC, ii (1962), 193–228
D.R.B. Kimbell: 'The "Amadis" Operas of Destouches and Handel', ML, xlix (1968), 329–46
C. Wood: Jean-Baptiste Lully and his Successors: Music and Drama in the 'tragédie en musique', 1673–1715 (diss., U. of Hull, 1981)
C. Wood: 'Orchestra and Spectacle in the tragédie en musique, 1675–1715: Oracle, sommeil and tempête', PRMA, cviii (1981–2), 25–46
L.E. Brown: 'Departures from Lullian Convention in the tragédie lyrique of the préramiiste Era', RMFC, xxii (1984), 57–78
R. Fajon: A.C. Destouches et l'évolution du répertoire de l'Académie royale de musique en France (diss., U. of Paris, 1984)
R. Fajon: Introduction to 'A.C. Destouches: Issé', FO, xiv (1984)
E. Lemaître: 'L'orchestre dans le théâtre lyrique français chez les continuateurs de Lully (1687–1715)', RMFC, xxiv (1986), 107–27; xxvi (1988–90), 83–131
L. Rosow: 'André Cardinal Destouches: Issé: pastorale héroïque', JAMS, xl (1987), 548–57
L. Rosow: 'From Destouches to Berton: Editorial Responsibility at the Paris Opéra', JAMS, xl (1987), 285–309
D. Tunley: Preface to the Eighteenth-Century French Cantata, xi (New York, 1990)

JAMES R. ANTHONY

Destouches, Franz Seraph von (b Munich, 21 Jan 1772; d Munich, 9 Dec 1844). German composer. In 1787 he had lessons from Haydn (and possibly Mozart) in Vienna. His first opera, Die Thomasnacht, was produced at the Salvatortheater, Munich, on 31 August 1792 (score now at D-DS). In the following years he undertook concert tours as a pianist. From 24 November 1797 until 1799 he was music director of the Markgräfin-widow Sophie Caroline in Erlangen. 1799 he joined the orchestra of the Weimar theatre (then under Goethe's direction) as second leader and became in 1802 teacher of music at the ducal grammar school. In 1804 he succeeded J.F. Kranz as first leader, but was dismissed in 1799. In Weimar he wrote the incidental music for Schiller's version of Gozzi's Turandot (arranged for piano, Augsburg, *c*1806), for his Die Braut von Messina, Die Jungfrau von Orleans (both 1803) and Wilhelm Tell (arranged for violin and piano, *c*1806), and for later performances of Schiller's Wallensteins Lager (D-Mbs). He also wrote the music for Kotzebue's Gustav Vasa (1800, D-WRl), Die Hussiten vor Naumburg (1804) and for Zacharias Werner's Wanda, Königin der Sarmaten (1808). A second opera of his, Das Missverständnis, was given at Weimar on 27 April 1805; he also wrote Die blühende Aloe (*c*1805) and Der Teufel und der Schneider (after 1842, not performed). In 1805 his oratorio Die Anbetung am Grabe Jesu Christi (text by Herder) was performed.

In 1810 Destouches became professor of music theory at the university in Landshut. 1814 he was appointed Kapellmeister of the Prince of Oettingen-Wallerstein, but in 1816 he was dismissed for not returning from a leave of absence. After several concert tours, on 15 January 1820 he became Kapellmeister of the small band of Landgraf Friedrich V, Ludwig von Hessen-Homburg in Bad Homburg. In 1741 he retired and returned to his native town. Besides his works for the stage he wrote sonatas, variations and other pieces for piano, trios, a piano concerto and a clarinet concerto, a sinfonia in C, an overture, ballets, marches, a concert aria, a cantata (1844) and masses (in manuscripts in D-As, BDH, DS, KA, Mbs).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. von Destouches: 'Franz Destouches', Allgemeine Zeitung [Munich], lxiv, suppl. (Munich, 1904)
R. Münster: Goethes Musikmeister in Weimar (Munich, 1997), 79–80
R. Münster: 'Mozarts letzter Schüler? Zu den Mozart-Erinnerungen des F.S. von Destouches', Acta mozartiana, xlv (1998), 10–17

ALFRED LOEWENBERG/ROBERT MÜNSTER

Destranges, Louis (Augustin Etienne Rouillé) (b Nantes, 29 March 1863; d Nantes, 31 May 1915). French critic. He edited the weekly musical review L'ouest-artiste between 1890 and 1909, and contributed to other local papers including Nantes-lyrique, Phare de La Loire, Revue nantaise and Sonneur de Bretagne. He also wrote for the Parisian papers Guide musical, Monde artiste and Monde musical. A great admirer of Wagner (he went to Bayreuth in 1889), Destranges advanced the composer's cause in Nantes: during the early 1890s Lohengrin, Die Walküre and Tannhäuser were all listened to and analyzed in his salon, and performed at the Théâtre Graslin. In December 1888 he also ensured the performance of Reyer's Sigurd. More generally he helped to introduce to Nantes the works of French composers, including his close friend, Bruneau, and Massenet, d'Indy and Gounod, with each of whom he continued a lively correspondence. He published numerous analytical studies and critiques.

WRITINGS

all published in Paris

Collet d'Herbois à Nantes (1888)
Souvenirs de Bayreuth: Parsifal et les Maîtres Chanteurs (1888); Dix jours à Bayreuth (1889)
L'oeuvre théâtrale de Meyerbeer (1893)
L'évolution musicale chez Verdi: Aïda, Otello, Falstaff (1895)
L'oeuvre lyrique de César Franck (1896)
Les femmes dans l'oeuvre de Richard Wagner (1899)
Le théâtre de Nantes . . . 1430–1901 (1902)
Consonances et dissonances (1906)
Many Etudes analytiques/critiques/thématiques, incl. Le chant de la cloche de Vincent d'Indy (1890), Samson et Dalila de Camille Saint-Saëns (1893), Tannhäuser de Richard Wagner (1894), Une partition méconnue: Proserpine de Camille Saint-Saëns (1895), Fervaal de Vincent d'Indy (1896), Un chef d'oeuvre inachevé: Briséis d' Emmanuel Chabrier (1897), Une comédie lyrique française: Sancho d'Emile Jaques-Dalcroze (1897), Les troyens de Berlioz (1897), Le vaisseau fantôme de Richard Wagner (1897), Hänsel et Gretel d'Engelbert Humperdinck (1899), Emmanuel Chabrier et Gwendoline (1904), L'étranger de M. Vincent d'Indy (1904).
Studies of works of Alfred Bruneau: Le rêve (1896), Messidor (1897), L'attaque du moulin (1901), Kérim, le Requiem, La belle au bois dormant, Penthésilée, Les lieds de France, Les chansons à danser (1902), L'ouragan (1902), L'enfant roi (1906), La faute de l'Abbé Mouret (1907), Nais Micoulin (1907), Les bacchantes, Les chants de la vie, L'amoureuse leçon (1913)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Barbier: Graslin, Nantes et l'Opéra (Nantes, 1993)
S. Clair-Pondard: L'activité lyrique en province pendant l'entre-deux-guerres: le triangle Angers, Nantes, Rennes (Lille, 1998)

MARIE-CLAIRE MUSSAT

Desyatnikov, Leonid Arkad'yevich (b Kharkiv, 16 Oct 1955). Russian composer. He graduated from the Leningrad Conservatory (1978) where he studied with Boris Arapov; he became a member of the Union of Composers in 1979. He is among the most successful of Russian composers of film scores, and demonstrates a felicitous variety of forms in these and in the music he has written for the theatre. Advocating post-modern ideals, he makes ironic play on styles, traditions and cultural symbols. Although 19th-century Romanticism lies at the heart of his aesthetic, the baroque also attracts him. Attracted to vocal genres and the use of words in general – especially Russian (from Derzhavin to Daniil Kharms) and English (G.M. Hopkins) – Desyatnikov comments on poetic meaning with music brimming with allusions whose charm consists in their elusiveness, their use of stylistic pastiche, and the polarity of suggestion and unfulfilled expectation. Interplay between the literary and musical languages might result in a song cycle with a quasi-Schumanesque name Lyubov' i zhizn' poèta ('Love and Life of a Poet'), a piano piece named after a Proust novel (Du côté de chez Swann), or a choral symphony on texts drawn from a Soviet school textbook of the English language (The Rite of Winter 1949). Being content with the resources of traditional instruments, Desyatnikov demonstrates polished inventiveness and clarity of sound and form. In 1996 he was the composer in residence at the Kremer festival in Lockenhaus and in 1997 participated in the Kremer's 'Schubert Today' project.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Bednaya Liza [Poor Liza] (chbr op, Desyatnikov, after N. Karamzin), 1976, rev. 1980, Moscow, 1980; Liebeslied in moll (chbr ballet, D. Seiffert), 1976, Berlin, 1977; Nikto ne khochet pet', ili Bravo-bravissimo pioner Anisimov [No One Wants to Sing, or Bravo-Bravissimo Pioneer Anisimov] (children's comic op, B. Chaban), solo vv, chorus, insts, 1982, Leningrad, 1987; Vitamin rosta [The Growth Vitamin] (children's op, after O. Grigor'yev), solo vv, pf, 1985, Leningrad, 1988

Vocal: 5 stikhotvoreniy Tyutcheva [5 Poems by Tyutchev], S, pf, 1976; Nochnïye pesni [Night Songs] (cant., A. Akhmatova, I. Annensky, A. Pushkin, A. Tarkovsky), 1v, chbr orch, 1978, rev. 1983; Iz XIX veka [From the 19th Century] (L. Aronzon), 7 romances, 1v, str qt, 1979; 2 russkiye pesni [2 Russian Songs] (R.M. Rilke), 1v, pf, 1979; Dar [The Gift] (cant., G. Derzhavin), T, male chorus, insts, 1981; Buket [A Bouquet] (Grigor'yev), chorus, 1982; Pinezhskoye skazaniye o duèli i smerti Pushkina [A Story from Pinezh about Pushkin's Duel and Death] (cant., trad. arr. by B. Shergin), solo vv, chbr orch, 1983; Lyubov' i zhizn' poèta [Love and Life of a Poet] (N. Oleynikov, D. Kharms), song cycle, T, pf, 1989; The Leaden Echo (G.M. Hopkins), 1v/vv, insts, 1991; The Rite of Winter 1949 (sym., texts from Eng. textbook for Soviet school), Tr, chorus, orch, 1998

Inst: Al'bom dlya Ailiki [Album for Ailika], pf 4 hands, 1980; Variatsii na obreteniye zhilishcha [Variations on the Acquiring of a Dwelling], vc, pf, 1990; Èskizï k zakatu [Sketches for a Sunset], orch, 1992, arr. 5 insts, 1996 [after film score]; Du côté de chez Swann, 2 pf, 1995; Wie der alte Leiermann ..., vn, pf, 1997

Film scores (dirs. names in parentheses): Zakat [Sunset] (A. Zel'dovich), 1990; Zateryannïy v Sibiri [Lost in Siberia] (A. Mitta), 1991; Prikosnoveniye [A Touch] (A. Mkrtchan), 1992; Vïsshaya mera [Capital Punishment] (Ye. Leonov-Gladïshev, V. Trakhtenberg), 1992; Podmoskovnïye vechera [Evenings near Moscow] (V. Todorovsky), 1994; Serp i molot [The Hammer and Sickle] (S. Livnev), 1994; Maniya Zhizeli [Giselle-Mania] (A. Uchitel'), 1995; Kavkazskiy plennik [A Captive in the Caucasus] (S. Bodrov), 1996; Tot, kto nezhneye [The One who is More Tender] (A. Karpïkov), 1996

Transcrs./arrs. incl.: Detskiy al'bom [A Children's Album], 1989, Leningrad, 1989 [stage version of Tchaikovsky's cycle]; Ye. Rozenfeld and Ye. Peterburzsky: Hommage à Astor Piazzolla, 2 tangos, vn, db, bandoneon, pf, 1995–6

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye. Mitina: 'Leonid Desyatnikov', Muzïka v SSSR (1989), no.23, pp.34–5
I. Rodionova: 'Leonid Desyatnikov: teatr paradoksa' [Desyatnikov: the theatre of paradox], SovM (1990), no.10, pp.15–18
I. Lyubarskaya: 'Chelovek bez imidzha, ili On v otsutstviye lyubvi i smerti' [A man without an image, or He in the absence of love and death], Stolitsa (1992), no.26, pp.49–51 [interview]
Katalog proizvedeniy: Rossiyskiy soyuz kompozitorov [A catalogue of works: the Russian Union of Composers] (St Petersburg, 1993)
V. Chinayev: 'Razgovor na obochine' [A talk on the roadside], MAk (1994), no.3, pp.14–17 [interview]
P. Gershenzon: 'Slishkom avangardno, to yest' vcherashniy den'' [Too avant-garde, that is to say yesterday], Seans, (1996), no.12, pp.84–7 [interview]

OL'GA MANUL'KINA

Deszczyński, Józef (b Vilnius, 1781; d Horodyszcze, nr Mińsk, 1844). Polish composer and conductor. He worked in Vilnius as a music master, and his operas were produced there in 1805 and 1810. Later he became conductor of a private orchestra in Horodyszcze on the estate of Count Ludwik Rokicki, who was himself a musician and a pupil of Viotti. During this time Deszczyński put on performances of a high standard, including symphonic works and chamber music by Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven; he also staged operas by Salieri, Boieldieu and others in the neighbouring town of Mińsk. He was a prolific composer, and although most of his works are Classical his piano pieces are in the early brilliant style. Many of his works were published both in Poland and abroad, although most of them are now lost (some printed scores are held in PL-Kj and Wn).

WORKS

Dworek na gościńcu [The Manor House by the Wayside] (comic op, 1, L. Dmuszewski), Warsaw, 27 Jan 1809

Egbert, czyli Połączenie się Anglików [Egbert, or The Union of the English] (melodrama, 3, R.C.G. de Pixérécourt, trans. J. Wolski), Vilnius, 30 Jan 1810

3 masses, 2 requiems, vespers; Litania do Ostrej Bramy

4 concert overtures; sym., Bitwa pod Iławą [The Battle of Iława], orch; 2 polonaises, pf, orch, op.23 (Leipzig, *c*1832); Concert brillant, F, pf, orch, op.25 (Leipzig, n.d.); 2 pf concertos

Pf qt, a, op.39 (Leipzig, *c*1827); Sextet, 2 vn, va, 2 vc, db (Leipzig, n.d.)

Pf music, incl. *c*50 polonaises; songs, military marches

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; GerberNL; SMP
A. Pług [A. Pietkiewicz]: 'O Józefie Deszczyńskim', Ruch muzyczny (1859), 425–6
K. Michałowski: Opery Polskie (Kraków, 1954)
S. Burhardt: Polonez: katalog tematyczny, ii (Kraków, 1976)

ALINA NOWAK-ROMANOWICZ/BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Deszner [Teschner, Teszner], Salomea (b Białystok, 1759; d Grodno, 20 March 1806). Polish actress and singer. She was brought up at Prince Jan Klemens Branicki's court in Białystok, where her father worked. In 1777 she was engaged by the National Theatre in Warsaw, where she had singing lessons with L. Montbrun. On 11 July 1778 she sang in the world première of the first Polish opera, Kamieński's Poverty made Happy, and performed periodically with the company until 1794. She also appeared at the Bogusławski Theatre in Vilnius (1785–9) and later with the Morawski company (1796–1801), also in Vilnius; from 1801 to 1802 she performed with the M. Każyński company in Grodno and Minsk. In 1802 she established a permanent theatre and opera company in Grodno, where she directed the theatre until her death.

Deszner was usually cast in the roles of soubrettes and lovers, though after 1790 she also took character parts and even male roles. She performed successfully in operas by Gossec, Grétry and Paisiello. Possessing great intelligence and charm she was the best comic and dramatic Polish actress of the 18th century (alongside Agnieszka Truskolaska), and in opera, according to Bogusławski, she was 'the foremost female singer on the Polish stage'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP

W. Bogusławski: 'Życie Salomei Deszner' [The life of Salomea Deszner], Dzieje Teatru Narodowego [The history of the National Theatre] (Warsaw, 1820/R), 305–11

Z. Raszewski, ed.: Słownik biograficzny teatru polskiego, i: 1765–1965 [Biographical dictionary of Polish theatre 1765–1965] (Warsaw, 1973)

A. Nowak-Romanowicz: 'Deszner Salomea', Encyklopedia muzyczna PWM, ed. E. Dzięgbowska, ii (Warsaw, 1985)

ALINA NOWAK-ROMANOWICZ/BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Détaché (i) (Fr.). A type of bowstroke. See BOW, §II, 3(iv).

Détaché (ii) (Fr.). A type of ornament. See ORNAMENTS, §7.

De Thier, Henry. See DU MONT, HENRY.

Detoni, Dubravko (b Križevci, 22 Feb 1937). Croatian composer and pianist. Having studied the piano under Stančić at the Zagreb Academy of Music until 1960 and under Agosti and Cortot at the Accademia Chigiana (1960–61), he then turned to studying composition in Zagreb (1961–5) under Stjepan Šulek. Advanced work followed in Warsaw (1966–7) under Lutosławski and Bacewicz in the experimental studio of Polish radio. He has also worked at Darmstadt with Stockhausen and Ligeti, and is the founder-director of the contemporary music ensemble Aczentez, for which he has composed many works. In 1964 he was appointed music producer with RTV Zagreb, and in 1990 he joined Radio Croatia. He has written extensively on music.

Detoni's early works show the thorough neo-classical influence of Šulek, with its reliance on traditional procedures and forms such as the passacaglia. Following a later adoption of 12-note techniques he became interested in the work of the Polish avant garde. This is particularly evident in the serial Likovi i plohe ('Forms and Surfaces'), with its constant oscillation between pitched sounds and noise and striking use of different textures, and in Elucubracije, in which dynamic contrasts of widely differing textures are developed under the leadership of a solo piano. In about 1967 he began to explore musique concrète and electronic music, especially in combination with acoustic instruments or voice; the piano piece Šifre ('Codes') was the first work of this kind. During the next twenty years Detoni wrote a large body of important chamber and orchestral pieces that combine electronic music with acoustic sounds.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Passacaglia, 2 pf, str, 1962; Musica à 5, 1962; Preobrazbe [Transformations], 1963; Dramatski prolog, 1965; Likovi i plohe [Forms and Surfaces], 1967; Elucubracije, pf, orch, 1969; Assonanze II (Utjeaji), 1971; 54 kraja, folk ens, orch, 1977; The Wonderful Monster of Time, 1983; 47 pitanje [47 Questions], 1981; Pf Conc., 1989; 9 prizora iz Danijelova sna, 1993 [9 Scenes from the Dream of Daniel] [expansion of chbr version]

Vocal: Ratne slike [Wartime Sketches], solo vv, chorus, orch, 1985

Chbr: Stravaganze, wind qnt, 1966; Grafika II, ens, 1968; Forte-Piano, Arpa, Crescendo, 2 pf, perc, 1969; Assonanze, vc, pf, 1969; Grafika IV, chbr ens, 1971; Monos III, chbr ens, 1972; Grafika VI, 1973; Gimnastika za grupu, chbr ens, 1974; 1 2 3 4 8, chbr ens, 1980; 33 PER 3 IN 3, wind trio, 1981; Zaboravljene muzike [Forgotten Music], str qt, 1981; L'horlogerie, pf 4 hands, 1982; 44 PER 4 IN 4, 4 trbn, 1983; 22 PER 2 IN 2, vn, pf, 1983; Valcer, chbr ens, 1984; Adagio cantabile, chbr ens, 1986; Bijela glazba [White Music], chbr ens, 1986; 9 prizora iz Danijelova sna [9 Scenes from the Dream of Daniel], chbr ens, 1987, arr. of pf version, expanded for orch, 1993; Rondeau, chbr ens, perc, 1987; Crna glazba [Black Music], chbr ens, 1988; Cythromanie, chbr ens, 1988; Predasi tišine [Deliver Peace], str, 1994

Solo inst: 3 Chorale Preludes, pf, 1963; 14 moments dodécaphoniques, pf, 1966; Statico-dinamico, pf, 1966; Orfejeva pratnja [Orpheus's Accompaniment], pf, 1967; Grafika I, org, 1968; 5 Movts, pf, 1971; Glasovir na koturaljkama, pf, 1979; 48 preludija, pf, 1980–82; Monos V, tbn, 1982; 9 prizora iz Danijelova sna [9 Scenes from the Dream of Daniel], pf, 1986, arr. chbr ens, 1988; Moments musicaux, pf, 1987; Geste, pf, 1989

El-ac: Šifre [Codes], pf, elec, 1967; Phonomorphia II, pf, tape, 1968; 'd', scena, player, hpd, elec, 1970; Notturni, 4 vocal groups, 4 inst ens, org, 1970; Monos I, pf, 1972; Grafica V, chbr ens, 1973; Muzika za traktat o suvišnom, chbr ens, orch, 1973; Svakodnevna muzika [Daily Music], vocal ens, 1974; Kič-varijcije [Kitsch Variations], chbr ens, 1976; Phonomorphia IV, chbr ens, 1976; Simfonija, chorus, 3 org, chbr ens, orch, 1976; Tzigane, kbd, orch, 1976; Hommago-Ut-majeur, chbr ens, 1977; Pjesme partizanske, 6 vocal groups, 1977; Zoo, chbr ens, wind, str, harmonica orch, 1977; Belles musiquettes vertes, wind, 1979; Ružacvijet, spkr, chbr ens, 1981; Euphoniphoniphoniphoniphonia, kbd orch, 1984; Banalia, reciter, chbr ens, 1986; Toccata Non, spkr, chbr ens, 1986

Elec: Phonomorphia I, 1967; Phonomorphia III, 1969; Grafika III, 1969; 21.6.72, 1972; Dokument 75, 1975; Sukladja [Congruence], 1976; Beschwörungen der Urgeister, 1989; Tajna o . . . 1993

Principal publishers: Ars Croatica, Društo hrvatske kompozitora

WRITINGS

Panopticum musicum, izbrani spisi (Zagreb, 1981)
Glasovir na koturaljkama (Sarajevo, 1989)
Prekrasno čudovište vremena: spirala vjecnog pitanja glazbe (Zagreb, 1989)
Dimnjacar brise kuci nost (Zagreb, 1991)
Trulo svjetlo (Zagreb, 1994)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Krpan: 'Fragmenti o Detoniju', Novi zvuk, ed. P. Selem (Zagreb, 1972), 270–76

T. Reich: Susreti sa suvremenim kompozitorima Jugoslavije (Zagreb, 1972), 64–6

J. Andreis: Music in Croatia (Zagreb, 1974, enlarged 2/1982)

A. Koci and others: Jugoslovanska glasbena dela (Ljubljana, 1980), 95–101

D. Detoni and M.Mracsek: 'Likovne impulze prenasa v zvočno pripovedovanje', Delo (3 March 1981)

Z. Veber: 'Dubravko Detoni: Prekrasno čudovište vremena, Zagreb, 1989', Arti musices, xxii (1991), 147–8

D. Detoni and M.Gombač: 'Zvok je samo pavza tišine: pogovor z Dubravkom Detonijem', Primorska srečanja, xix (1995), 357–61

NIALL O'LOUGHLIN

De Torices, Benito Bello. See BELLO DE TORICES, BENITO.

De Totis, Giuseppe Domenico (b Rome, 1644/5; d Rome, 4 Nov 1707). Italian librettist. According to the obituary by M.G. Morei (see Crescimbeni) he wrote dramatic poetry and practised law in his youth; in about 1690 he became a prelate, then served as auditore for Cardinal Pietro Ottoboni and in various posts at the papal court. He was secretary of the Accademia degli Umoristi, and in 1691 became 'Filedo Nonacrio' in the Arcadian Academy. He wrote operas, a serenata and oratorios for Roman productions, and collaborated with Alessandro Scarlatti on operas produced at Naples in 1683–5. His most popular operas, each of which was produced in up to nine cities by 1696, were among his earliest: Rosmene, o vero L'infedeltà fedele (1677), Idalma, overo Chi la dura la vince (1680), Tutto il mal non vien per nocere (1681) and Aldimiro, o vero Favor per favore (1683). According to the obituary of 1721, 'sweetness of verse' and 'propriety of sentiment' ameliorated 'some corruptions of the century in which he flourished'. He followed the lead of Giulio Rospigliosi (Pope Clement IX) by basing Psiche, o vero Amore innamorato (1683) and La caduta del regno dell'amazzoni (1690) on Spanish dramas, and by favouring Spanish spada e cappa ('cloak and dagger') plots for Idalma, and Tutto il mal. The last two are comedies featuring ordinary people so inextricably involved in love entanglements that swords are drawn and lives threatened. De Totis directed Tutto il mal for the stage (see Lindgren and Schmidt), as was customary for librettists at first, and occasionally at later, productions. His most splendidly produced work was the festa teatrale La caduta del regno dell'amazzoni: Girolamo Fontana created its 14 stage settings, ten special effects were produced by stage machinery, and there were four ballets, two intermezzos, a prologue and an epilogue.

De Totis's sacred texts include eight oratorios and a 'concerto musicale', I pastori di Bettelemme annunziati dall'angelo, performed at the Vatican on Christmas Eve 1688, and again in 1691, with music by Giuseppe Pacieri.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBI (G. Romei); SartoriL

P. Mandosio: Bibliotheca romana seu romanorum scriptorum centuriae, i (Rome, 1682), 317

G.M. Crescimbeni, ed.: Notizie istoriche degli Arcadi morti, iii (Rome, 1721), 9–13, 378

F. Valesio: Diario di Roma, ed. G. Scano and G. Graglia, iii (Milan, 1978)

L.E. Lindgren and C.B. Schmidt: 'A Collection of 137 Broadsides Concerning Theatre in Late Seventeenth-Century Italy: an Annotated Catalogue', Harvard Library Bulletin, xxviii (1980), 185–233, esp. 196

J. Lionnet: 'Une partition inconnue d'Alessandro Scarlatti', Studi musicali, xv (1986), 183–212 [?La villeggiatura di Frascati]

J. Lionnet: 'A Newly Found Opera by Alessandro Scarlatti', MT, cxxviii (1987), 80–81 [?La villeggiatura di Frascati]

A. Morelli: 'Il "Theatro Spirituale" ed altre raccolte di testi per oratorio romani del Seicento', RIM, xxi (1986), 61–143

S. Franchi: Drammaturgia romana: repertorio bibliografico cronologico dei testi drammatici pubblicati a Roma e nel Lazio, secolo XVII (Rome, 1988)

E. Tamburini: 'Da alcuni inventari di casa Colonna: i teatri', Il teatro a Roma nel Settecento, ed. Istituto della Enciclopedia Italiana (Rome, 1989), 617–80

G. Staffieri: Colligite fragmenta: la vita musicale romana negli 'Avvisi Marescotti' (1683–1707) (Lucca, 1990)

A. Morelli: 'La musica a Roma nella seconda metà del Seicento attraverso l'archivio Cartari-Febei', La musica a Roma attraverso le fonti d'archivio [Rome 1992], ed. B.M. Antolini, A. Morelli and V.V. Spagnuolo, ii (Lucca, 1994), 107–36

LOWELL LINDGREN

De Troffeis, Ruggier. See TROFEO, RUGGIER.

Detroit. American city in Michigan. Founded in 1701, the city had little significant musical life before 1850. The opening of the Erie Canal in 1824 brought settlers from the east, but almost 25 years passed before a sustained civic interest in music became evident. This interest grew during the 1850s, subsided during the Civil War, then re-emerged with new vigour. Although older than many midwestern cities, Detroit lagged behind in musical activities. Perhaps the years of greatest development were the 1850s and the late 1860s, and, in the 20th century, the tenures with the Detroit SO of Ossip Gabrilovich, Antal Dorati and Neeme Järvi.

1. Opera and choral societies. 2. Orchestras and concert halls. 3. Educational institutions and libraries. 4. Other activities.

1. OPERA AND CHORAL SOCIETIES. The first local attempts at opera were unstaged Italian works presented by the Detroit Philharmonic Society in 1855. Lortzing's Zar und Zimmermann, given by the Harmonie Society in 1866, was the first opera staged by local performers. In 1869 the Detroit Opera House was built; with a seating capacity of over 2000, it was the largest hall the city had known. It was demolished in 1966, after which various theatres were used for operatic performances. The Masonic Auditorium (built in 1928) was also used for many musical events, among which was an annual visit by the Metropolitan Opera (discontinued after the 1985 season). Thaddeus Wronski organized the Detroit Civic Opera Company in 1928; it was later associated with the Detroit SO in productions that were also presented in New York and Chicago, and continued until 1937. The Piccolo Opera Company, organized in 1961 for the purpose of performing operas in English for schools and other organizations, remained active for several years. In 1971 David Di Chiera founded the Michigan Opera Theatre (MOT) and became its artistic director. In 1993, after a 25-year search for a permanent home large enough for world-class operatic and dance productions, MOT secured funding to begin work on a Detroit Opera House. The old Capitol Theatre, built as a cinema in 1922, was purchased and restored at the cost of $24 million. On 21 April 1996 the hall was opened with a benefit concert featuring Pavarotti and other world-famous artists. With its own orchestra, the 2700-seat Opera House has become the venue not only for MOT operatic performances, but also many other events staged by various touring companies. In addition, the MOT opera-in-residence programme places members of the company in high schools for a week where they assist students with the production of an opera.

The first significant choral society was the Detroit Philharmonic Society (1855–9), directed by an Italian immigrant, Pietro Centemeri. Among the city's many choral societies the most notable have been the Harmonie (founded 1849), the Detroit Symphony Choir founded by Ossip Gabrilovich (1921–40), the Rackham Symphony Choir, formed in 1949 (as the University of Michigan Extension Choir) by Maynard Klein, and the Kenneth Jewell Chorale (1962), which, as the Detroit Symphony Chorale, became the nucleus of the 120-voice Detroit Symphony Chorus, formed in 1985.

2. ORCHESTRAS AND CONCERT HALLS. Among the early instrumental ensembles was the Stein and Buchheister Orchestra (1855–65), organized by two members of the Germania Musical Society, who settled in Detroit in 1854 when the society disbanded. As early as 1875, musical groups calling themselves the Detroit Symphony Orchestra appeared. The present Detroit SO was founded in February 1914 when Weston Gales organized 65 local musicians for an experimental symphony concert. Ossip Gabrilovich, who had been a guest soloist with the orchestra, was made permanent conductor in 1916. During his tenure he conducted the first complete symphony concert to be broadcast on radio (station WWJ) on 10 February 1922. He inaugurated the radio concert series known as the 'Ford Sunday Evening Hour' in 1934; the programme was broadcast nationally on CBS from 1936 to 1942. After Gabrilovich's death in 1936,

Franco Ghione served as conductor from 1937 to 1940. The following season was shortened, and the orchestra ceased operation during the 1942–3 season. In 1943 it was reorganized as the Detroit Orchestra with Karl Krueger as conductor, but within six years it lapsed again. The Detroit SO was re-formed in 1951, when Paul Paray became permanent conductor. He retired in 1963 and was succeeded by Sixten Ehrling (1963–73), Aldo Ceccato (1973–7) and Antal Dorati (1977–81). The orchestra achieved new standards of excellence and worldwide recognition under Dorati: he organized festivals commemorating Beethoven (1977), Schubert (1978), Brahms (1980) and Bartók (1981); initiated televised concerts; arranged for the orchestra to resume recording, which it had ceased to do after Paray's tenure; and took the orchestra on its first European tour. Dorati resigned in a dispute with management over orchestra financing. The Israeli conductor, Gary Bertini, was appointed interim music adviser for two seasons, but in the following season the orchestra was without a permanent conductor and had to rely on guests, among them Dorati. Gunther Herbig became music director in September 1984, and was succeeded in 1990 by Neeme Järvi. Under Järvi the orchestra has flourished and has extended its recording activities, with an emphasis on contemporary and American music.

Since its foundation the Detroit SO has been a pioneer in presenting young people's concerts. It offers one of the largest public service programmes of any American orchestra through its school concerts and annual tours of the state. The orchestra gained recognition for summer concerts inaugurated at Belle Isle (an island in the Detroit River) in 1922 and at the Michigan State Fair Grounds in 1945. It served as the official orchestra for the annual autumn Worcester Music Festival in Massachusetts from 1958 to 1974, and in 1964 became the resident orchestra at the summer Meadow Brook Festival at Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan. In 1970 the orchestra instituted the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra to provide a training ensemble for talented young musicians. More recently, the African-American Composers Forum has been held annually in Detroit, with the orchestra giving the world première of the winning composition. In addition to its classical series the Detroit SO also offers a pops series, a jazz series and two series for children.

Detroit's first concert hall was Firemen's Hall, an upstairs room of the fire station built in 1851 and seating 1000. The city's most famous concert hall, the 2100-seat Orchestra Hall, known for its fine acoustics, was built in 1919 at the insistence of Gabrilovich as a home for the Detroit SO. Lack of funds forced its abandonment in 1939. A group of musicians from the Detroit SO launched a drive to restore the hall, and the first concert in the renovated building took place in the spring of 1976. In 1979 the Detroit SO returned to Orchestra Hall to play a concert marking the hall's 60th anniversary and the 40th anniversary of the orchestra's last appearance there. With the opening of Orchestra Hall, the orchestra moved from the Henry and Edsel Ford Auditorium (opened 1956; cap. 2900) back to the hall Gabrilovich had built.

The Detroit Women's Symphony, founded in 1947, has remained active.

3. Educational institutions and libraries. Attempts were made in 1818 to establish music schools, but lack of support doomed these to a short existence. However, in 1874 Jacob H. Hahn founded the Detroit Conservatory of Music, which lasted almost a century (until 1967). Among its directors was Francis L. York, who later became dean of the Detroit Institute of Musical Arts, founded in 1914. Since 1972 the facilities of the Institute have been shared by the Detroit Community Music School, which began in 1926 as the Music Settlement School. Detroit Teachers' College began offering music instruction in 1918; it merged with several other colleges to form a single institution that in 1934 became known as Wayne University and in 1959 as Wayne State University. It offers the BA, BM, MA, MM and doctoral degrees.

In 1943 the Detroit Public Library acquired the E. Azalia Hackley Collection, the largest collection in the USA devoted to black musicians and performing artists; that year the library also initiated an annual series of concerts featuring music by black composers.

4. Other activities. In 1851 Adam Couse, a friend of Stephen Foster's, issued the first music published in Detroit. Other important publishers of the period were Stein & Buchheister, J. Henry Whittemore and Clark J. Whitney. Detroit was known in the 1890s for a vast output of ragtime hits from the publishers Whitney–Warner, Belcher & Davis and others. In the early years of the 20th century Jerome H. Remick was one of the world's leading publishers of popular music. The Clough & Warren Organ Co., which was established as a melodeon factory in 1850, achieved world fame in the early 1880s when it built an organ for Liszt, to his specifications. In the 20th century the name of Grinnell Brothers, a leading music shop, was also associated with the manufacture of pianos; the firm went out of business in 1977.

For more than 30 years, Detroit was the home of one of the last Sousa-style community bands. The Detroit Concert Band was organized in 1946 by its conductor Leonard Smith to play summer concerts on Belle Isle. It offered annual concerts until 1980 when the season was cancelled due to lack of funds. The recording company Motown was founded as Tamla Records in Detroit in 1959, promoting black American soul music. Although the company moved to Los Angeles in 1971, the Detroit building where it all began has become the Motown Historical Museum, opened in 1988. In 1980 the Montreux-Detroit International Jazz Festival, an annual summer event (renamed the Montreux-Detroit Kool Jazz Festival in 1982), was inaugurated in Detroit. Concerts are given throughout the city, some aboard the Bob-Lo excursion boats on the Detroit River. The local interest in jazz became evident in the early years of the 20th century. The famous Graystone Ballroom, opened in 1922, became one of the greatest dance and concert halls in the country. Historic documents that record its heyday in the 1920s, 30s and 40s are exhibited in the Graystone International Jazz Museum and Hall of Fame which opened in downtown Detroit in 1991.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Teal: Musical Activities in Detroit from 1701 through 1870 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1964)

L. Mattson: A History of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra (diss., U. of Michigan, 1968)

J. Barron: 'New Life for the Detroit Symphony', New York Times (14 April 1985)

MARY TEAL

Dett, R(obert) Nathaniel (b Drummondsville, ON, 11 Oct 1882; d Battle Creek, MI, 2 Oct 1943). American educator, composer and conductor. He studied the piano from an early age. When Dett was 11 the family moved to Niagara Falls, New York. In 1908 he became the first black American to receive the BM degree from the Oberlin College Conservatory (in composition and piano). He immediately began a teaching career by holding several appointments at traditionally black-American colleges, including Lane College, Tennessee (1908–11), the Lincoln Institute, Missouri (1911–13), the Hampton Institute, Virginia (1913–32), and Bennett College, North Carolina (1937–42). He continued his studies at the American Conservatory of Music, at Columbia University, Northwestern University, Oberlin College, the University of Pennysylvania, Harvard and with Boulanger at the Fontainebleau school in Paris; his graduate work was rewarded with the MM degree in composition from the Eastman School of Music (1932). By the late 1920s Dett had received two honorary doctorates (Howard, 1924, and Oberlin College, 1926) along with many other awards and prizes for his compositions or literary writings. Among these were the Francis Boott Music Award and Bowdoin Literary Prize from Harvard, and the Harmon Foundation Award. After winning the Bowdoin prize, Dett came to the attention of the white philanthropist George Foster Peabody who became his benefactor for more than a decade.

Of Dett's college appointments, his most enduring musical legacy would be felt at the Hampton Institute (now University) where he taught from 1913 to 1932. He was the first black American chairman of the department of music and during his tenure the institute introduced the BS degree in music. He secured his reputation at the institute by starting a choir made up of students and community members and transforming it into an internationally renowned touring organization that specialized in performing African American sacred music. Among his choristers was the celebrated soprano Dorothy Maynor who became a distinguished concert singer. Many of the songs that the choir performed were Dett's own compositions or arrangements of spirituals. On several occasions he was compelled to defend his performance of 'arranged' spirituals which were not viewed as authentic as the 'folk' versions of the genre which were accompanied by claps, body swaying and shouts; some observers and benefactors like Peabody saw such arrangements as imitations of white classical composers. In 1930 the Hampton choir made a highly successful tour of western Europe.

Apart from working as a pianist and organist, Dett's other professional endeavours included founding the Musical Arts Society in 1919. This organization invited distinguished musical personalities such as Marian Anderson, Henry T. Burleigh, Grainger, Roland Hayes, Sousa and Clarence Cameron White to give concerts in the Hampton and Norfolk area; a concert was also given by the Belgian Royal Band, which honoured him with the Palm and Ribbon Award. Additionally, Dett became an active member of the National Association of Teachers in Colored Schools and the National Association of Negro Musicians; he served as president of the NANM from 1924 to 1926.

Dett published close to 100 compositions, including piano pieces, choral works, works for solo voice and an oratorio. There are also several unpublished works for organ, solo voice and an orchestral work, No More Auction Block. His vocal works and arrangements received greater attention because of the Hampton choir. His two major choral works, the motet Chariot Jubilee and the oratorio The Ordering of Moses, are both based on African American spirituals: the first on 'Swing Low Sweet Chariot' and the latter on 'Go Down Moses'. Chariot Jubilee was given its first performance by the St Cecilia Society of Boston in 1920 at Harvard University when Dett was studying there. The Ordering of Moses (which was Dett's masters thesis from the Eastman School), employs a variety of compositional techniques, including textual and chordal repetition, fugal treatment of the theme 'Go Down Moses' and dramatic chromatic movement based on the word 'Pharaoh'.

In addition to his musical activities, Dett wrote extensively on the importance of preserving African American music. In a four-part prize-winning essay, Negro Music, he identified several areas of development from both secular and sacred traditions. He maintained that black folk music was African derived, and was dismissive of those who only viewed popular styles such as minstrelsy, ragtime, jazz and blues as worthy of consideration. He added, 'It is doubtful if anywhere in the world a race of people ever were so publicly derided in story, drama, and song as the Negro in America'. His most eloquent prose was reserved for discussions about spirituals. Dett died of congestive heart failure in Battle Creek, Michigan, where he had accepted a position as music director of the United Service Organizations.

WORKS
(selective list)

for fuller list see McBrier (1977)

Choral-orch: 3 orats (Dett, after Bible): Music in the Mine (1916), The Chariot Jubilee (1921), The Ordering of Moses (1937)

Motets and partsongs: I'll Never Turn Back no More, 1916; Chariot Jubilee, 1919; Don't be Weary, Traveler, 1921; Listen to the Lambs, 1923; Let us Cheer the Weary Traveler, 1926; O Hear the Lambs A-Cryin', 1926; Ave Maria, 1930

Pf: 8 suites, incl. Magnolia (1912), In the Bottoms (1913), Enchantment (1922), Cinnamon Grove (1928), Tropic Winter (1938); I am the True Vine, 1943

Other inst: No More Auction Block, orch; works for org

Songs for 1v, pf, incl. Zion Hallelujah, 1923

Numerous arrs. of spirituals, incl. 2 collections: Religious Folksongs of the Negro (1927); The Dett Collection of Negro Spirituals, i–iv (1936)

Principal publishers: J. Church, J. Fischer, Mills, T. Presser, G. Schirmer, Summy-Birchard

WRITINGS

'The Emancipation of Negro Music', Southern Workman (1918), 172–6

'From Bell Stand to Throne Room', Etude Music Magazine, lii (1934), 79–80

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York, 1971, 3/1997)

V.F. McBrier: R. Nathaniel Dett: his Life and Works: 1882–1943 (Washington DC, 1977)

J. Spencer: 'R. Nathaniel Dett's Views in Preservation of Black Music', BPM, x (1982), 132–48 [incl. list of writings]

J. Spencer, ed.: 'The R. Nathaniel Dett Reader: Essays on Black Sacred Music', Black Sacred Music, v/2 (1991) [special issue devoted to Dett's writings]

A.K. Simpson: Follow Me: the Life and Music of R. Nathaniel Dett (Metuchen, NJ, 1993)

J. Spencer: The New Negroes and their Music: the Success of the Harlem Renaissance (Knoxville, TN, 1997)

CHRISTOPHER BROOKS

Deulich, Philipp. See DULICHIUS, PHILIPP.

Deus, Filipe da Madre de. See MADRE DE DEUS, FILIPE DA.

Deus, Michael. See DEISS, MICHAEL.

Deutlich (Ger.: 'clearly'). A direction found particularly in Mahler's scores over figures that might otherwise be thought subordinate.

Deutlich, Jeremias. See KALBECK, MAX.

Deutsch, Max (b Vienna, 17 Nov 1892; d Paris, 22 Nov 1982). French composer, teacher and conductor of Austrian origin. He studied at the University of Vienna (1910–15) and with Schoenberg (1913–20), also serving in World War I. During the 1920s he worked as a theatre conductor in several European countries and composed large orchestral scores for Pabst's Die freudlose Gasse and Der Schatz. In Berlin in 1923, following the example of Schoenberg's Verein für Musikalische Privataufführungen, he founded an orchestra for private performances. He moved to Paris in 1924, and there gave the French premières of works by Schoenberg, Webern and Berg (including the Kammerkonzert in 1927). He also founded Le Miroir Jiddish, a Jewish theatre ensemble, which gave concerts in England. In 1934 he took up a chair at the University of Madrid, where he was musical director for the Casa Cinematográfica Aranjuez, but the civil war forced his return to Paris the next year. He then worked as a pianist and revue composer before volunteering for service in the French Foreign Legion (1940–45). After the war he took French citizenship and returned to teaching, notably as professor of composition at the Ecole Normale de Musique; his pupils included Bussotti. In 1960 he founded the Grands Concerts de la Sorbonne.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Schach (op, 1), Berlin, 1923; La fuite (légende dramatique, T. Tzara), Paris, 1946; Apothéose (op, Deutsch), *c*1972

Other works: Film-Symphonie, orch, 1923 [after score for Der Schatz]; Prière pour nos autres mortels (C. Péguy), sym., solo vv, chorus, orch; male choruses (L. da Vinci), songs, pf pieces

PAUL GRIFFITHS/JEREMY DRAKE

Deutsch, Otto Erich (b Vienna, 5 Sept 1883; d Vienna, 23 Nov 1967). Austrian biographer and bibliographer. Having studied the history of literature and art at the universities of Vienna and Graz, he worked as art critic for Die Zeit (1908–9) and as assistant at the Kunsthistorisches Institut in Vienna University (1909–12). Deutsch's later special study of the Biedermeier period had been foreshadowed by his early interest in Schwind. Schubert was the subject of the earliest of all his writings: a book and three articles in 1905. His unique biography (1913–14) established him as the leading authority on this composer, although its publication was never completed as originally planned. It was for his distinguished services to the Schubert centenary of 1928 that Deutsch received the title of professor.

After a career of some six years in bookselling, he became music librarian to the collector Anthony van Hoboken from 1926 to 1935. The annexation of Austria in 1938 compelled Deutsch to leave Vienna for England in 1939, where he lived, in Cambridge, until 1951; he became a British citizen in 1947. During this period, he brought his work on Schubert to fruition and began to collect material for a life of Handel. He also proposed a plan for a union-catalogue of all music printed before 1800 in British libraries; he became editor of this catalogue in 1946, resigning the post in 1950.

After returning to Vienna in 1952, Deutsch completed his monumental documentary biography of Handel and brought out a similar volume for Mozart, whom he served as well as he had Schubert. With W.A. Bauer, he established the text of Mozart: Briefe und Aufzeichnungen (1962–3), and began work on the commentary. Finally, using some material originally amassed by Maximilian Zenger, Deutsch completed the sumptuous Mozart und seine Welt in zeitgenössischen Bildern (1961). Here, perhaps, is to be found the finest and most vivid expression of his training as an art historian wedded to his unique knowledge of the background to musical history in his chosen period. His long services were recognized in 1959 when he received the Ehrenkreuz for scholarship and art conferred by the Austrian republic, and again in 1960 when the University of Tübingen created him an honorary doctor of philosophy. An unexpected product of this period was his witty German translation of Gilbert's The Mikado (1959).

Deutsch's work was dominated by his passionate concern for fact and visual illustration as a basis of truth in musical history. Musical criticism and the aesthetic aspect of music had little attraction for him. Believing that facts speak for themselves through the original documents, he amplified his conviction by such masterly presentation and annotation, that in his hands the documentary biography of musicians took on a new dimension and became a literary form in its own right. On Schubert, Mozart and Handel, Deutsch lavished infinite pains allied to a keen sense of proportion. The thematic catalogue which rounds off his documentation of Schubert is a model of concise relevance.

His tireless search for documents led him into some strange byways which are represented in his very numerous articles (148 concerned Schubert, 79 Mozart, 22 Haydn and 30 Beethoven). His early study of the first editions of Schubert's music induced him to explore those of other composers, notably Mozart, on which he did pioneer work with C.B. Oldman. He became absorbed in the delicate problems of the bibliographical description of printed music, the transcription of engraved title-pages, the use of plate numbers as evidence for dating and cognate matters in which his acute thinking, though sometimes inconclusive, broke new ground. This concern was reflected in his work as editor of the facsimile series, The Harrow Replicas (1942–8). All branches of Deutsch's work are memorable for their meticulous standards of scholarship and lucidity of expression. His influence, on both sides of the Atlantic, was wide and enduring.

WRITINGS

ed.: Schubert-Brevier (Berlin, 1905) [selected writings by Schubert and contemporary critics]

Beethovens Beziehungen zu Graz (Graz, 1907)

Franz Schubert: die Dokumente seines Lebens und Schaffens, ii/1: Die Dokumente seines Lebens (Munich, 1914, enlarged 2/1964, Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, viii/5; Eng. trans., 1946/R as Schubert: a Documentary Biography); iii: Sein Leben in Bildern (Munich, 1913)

Franz Schuberts Briefe and Schriften (Munich, 1919, 4/1954; Eng. trans., 2/1928)

Die historischen Bildnisse Franz Schuberts in getreuen Nachbildungen (Vienna, 1922)

ed.: Schubert-Heft der 'modernen' Welt (Vienna, 1925) [incl. 'Unbekanntes aus Schuberts Nachlass' as appx]

Die Originalausgaben von Schuberts Goethe-Liedern (Vienna, 1926)

Franz Schubert: Tagebuch: Faksimile der Originalhandschrift (Vienna, 1928)
'Zum thematischen Katalog der Werke Schuberts', Kongress für Schubertforschung: Vienna 1928, 173–80
'Internationale Musikbibliographie der Erstdrucke', Congresso delle biblioteche e di bibliografia I: Rome and Venice 1929, 332–5
'Beethovens Goethekompositionen', Jb der Sammlung Kippenberg, viii (1930), 102–33 with C.B. Oldman: 'Mozart-Drucke: eine bibliographische Ergänzung zu Köchels Werkverzeichnis', ZMw, xiv (1931–2), 135–50, 337–51
Mozart und die Wiener Logen: zur Geschichte seiner Freimaurer-Kompositionen (Vienna, 1932)
ed., with B. Paumgartner: Leopold Mozarts Briefe an seine Tochter (Salzburg, 1936)
Das Freihaus-Theater auf der Wieden 1787–1801 (Vienna, 1937, 2/1937)
ed.: W.A. Mozart: Verzeichnis aller meiner Werke vom Monath Februario 1784 bis Monath [November 1791] (Vienna, 1938; Eng. trans., 1956) [facs., incl. 'Mozarts Werkverzeichnis 1784–1791']
'The First Editions of Brahms' MR, i (1940), 123–43, 255–78
'Music Bibliography and Catalogues', The Library, 4th ser., xxiii (1942–3), 151–70
'Weber's Mother and her Family, with some Sidelights on Mozart', ML, xxv (1944), 95–7
'Kozeluch ritrovato', ML, xxvi (1945), 47–50
'A Plea for a British Union Catalogue of Music', Journal of Documentation, i (1945), 41–4
Music Publishers' Numbers: a Selection of 40 Dated Lists, 1710–1900 (London, 1946; Ger. trans., rev., 1961)
'The Numbering of Beethoven's Minor Works', Notes, iv (1946–7), 36–45
'Poetry preserved in Music: Bibliographical Notes on Smollett and Oswald, Handel and Haydn', Modern Language Notes, lxiii (1948), 73–88
ed.: The World of Music (London, 1948–52)
Schubert und Grillparzer (Vienna, 1949) [lecture] with D.R. Wakeling: Schubert: Thematic Catalogue of all his Works in Chronological Order (London, 1951/R; Ger. trans., enlarged 1978, Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, viii/4)
'The Schubert Catalogue: Additions and Corrections', ML, xxxiv (1953), 25–32
'Neues von der Glasharmonika', ÖMz, ix (1954), 380–84
Handel: a Documentary Biography (London, 1955/R; Ger. trans., 1985)
'Schubert's Income', ML, xxxvi (1955), 165–6
Schubert: die Erinnerungen seiner Freunde (Leipzig, 1957, 3/1974; Eng. trans., 1958)
'Unfortunately Not by Me', MR, xix (1958), 305–10
'Cecilia and Parthenia', MT, c (1959), 591–2
'Was heisst und zu welchem Ende studiert man Ikonographie?', SMz, c (1960), 230–33
Mozart: die Dokumente seines Lebens, Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, X:34 (Kassel, 1961; suppl. by J.H. Eibl, 1978, ibid., X:31/i; Eng. trans., 1965/R)
Mozart und seine Welt in zeitgenössischen Bildern/Mozart and his World in Contemporary Pictures, Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, X:32 (Kassel, 1961) [completion of work by M. Zenger] with W.A. Bauer: Mozart: Briefe und Aufzeichnungen (Kassel, 1962–3, rev. 3/1962–75 by J.H. Eibl)
Schubert-Museum der Stadt Wien in Schuberts Geburtsthaus (Vienna, 3/1964, rev. 4/1985 by A. Schusser as Die Schubert-Gedenkstätten der Museen der Stadt Wien; Eng. trans., 1992)
ed. R. Klein: Musikalische Kuckuckseier, und andere Wiener Musikgeschichten (Vienna, 1973, rev. 2/1993 by G. Deutsch and R. Klein as Weiner Musikgeschichten)
ed. G. Deutsch and R. Klein: Admiral Nelson and Joseph Haydn: ein britisch-österreichisches Gipfeltreffen (Vienna, 1982)
ed. G. Deutsch and R. Klein: Alt-Wiener Veduten: 25 Feuilletons über Stadt und Leute (Vienna, 1986)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Otto Erich Deutsch zum 75. Geburtstag', ÖMz (Vienna, 1958) [special issue; incl. M.E. Brown: 'Otto Erich Deutsch', 1–5 and list of pubns]
ÖMz, xviii (1963), 405–49 [80th birthday issue, incl. editorial tribute and reprs. of 12 lesser-known articles]
W. Gerstenberg, J. LaRue and W. Rehm, eds.: Festschrift Otto Erich Deutsch (Kassel, 1963) [incl. list of pubns]
R. Klein: 'Zum Gedenken Otto Erich Deutsch', ÖMz, xxii (1967), 737–8
J.P. Larsen: 'Otto Erich Deutsch: In memoriam', AcM, xl (1968), 197–8
W. Gerstenberg: Otto Erich Deutsch 1883–1967 (Kassel, 1968) [memorial speech]
P. Muir: 'Otto Erich Deutsch, a Profile', Private Library, 2nd ser., viii/4 (1975), 142–8
B.S. Brook: 'Remembering O.E.D. 1883–1967: an Homage', MQ, lxix (1983), 595–8
R. Breuer and others: '50 Jahre danach', ÖMz, xliii (1988), 171–201
A. Schneider: 'Musikwissenschaft in der Emigration: zur Vertreibung von Gelehrten und zu den Auswirkungen auf das Fach', Musik im Exil: Folgen des Nazismus für die internationale Musikkultur, ed. H.-W. Heister, C. Maurer-Zenk and P. Petersen (Frankfurt, 1993), 187–211
E. Hilmar: 'Schubert: die Dokumente seines Lebens: eine Auflistung der von O.E. Deutsch gesammelten Dokumente für die "Zweite Hälfte" des "Zweiten Bandes"', Schubert durch die Brille, no.15 (1995), 46–73
P. Reid: '"Dear Brown": Briefe von Otto Erich Deutsch an Maurice J.E. Brown', Schubert durch die Brille, no.19 (1997), 81–98

ALEC HYATT KING

Deutsche Grammophon. German record company.

1. 1898–1945. 2. 1945–70. 3. 1970–89. 4. Since 1989.

1. 1898–1945. The company's origins are bound up in those of the recording medium itself. In June 1898, Deutsche Grammophon GmbH [DG] was formed in Hanover, with the first factory devoted solely to manufacturing gramophone records. Its directors were Emile Berliner – inventor of the record (called a 'plate') and the record-playing 'gramophone', patented in 1887 in Washington and Berlin – and his brother Joseph. Their four hydraulic presses (14 by early 1899, when full-scale operation began) were imported from the USA to produce shellac discs from zinc masters supplied by the Gramophone Company, established in London earlier that year by Emile's associate William Barry Owen. The factory also produced gramophones, again initially using American components. By 1900, 45 presses were in operation, and on 27 June the Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft became a joint-stock company with headquarters in Berlin. Emile Berliner, his brothers Joseph and Jacob and Orpheus Musikwerke of Leipzig owned 40% of the shares, the remaining 60% being held by the Gramophone Company. Until World War I recordings were produced by the London parent company under the supervision of Fred Gaisberg, some of them at DG's Berlin studios. In 1902, the year before the first recordings with Fyodor Chaliapin in Moscow, two railway wagons full of gramophone records were already being exported weekly to Russia. In 1904 a new factory in Hanover began producing 25,000 records daily, each with its title etched into the centre, along with the word 'Grammophon' and the 'Recording Angel' trademark (registered in Berlin in 1900; replaced in 1909 by 'Die Stimme seines Herrn', the dog Nipper listening to 'His Master's Voice').

In 1907, DG produced the first 30 cm (12-inch) records with two playing sides. Annual production soon exceeded six million discs. That year the company brought out a complete Die Fledermaus, with stars of the Berlin Hofoper, and in 1908 a complete Faust and a complete Carmen (both in German, with Emmy Destinn and Karl Jörn). In 1913 the first recording was made of a complete symphony by a major conductor, Beethoven's Fifth with the Berlin PO under Arthur Nikisch, issued on four double-sided records, for DM 9·50 (then equivalent to about $2·25) per disc; in Britain it was released on single-sided discs over several months.

During World War I the company's assets were expropriated as enemy (i.e. British) property, leading to the separation of the British and German companies in 1916. DG's assets were sold to Polyphon Musikwerke of Leipzig in 1917; the administrative offices of the two companies were moved to Berlin the next year. After the war the company was no longer allowed to use its trademark 'Die Stimme seines Herrn' or to sell discs recorded outside Germany. It was thus unable to export records by such artists as Caruso, Melba and Patti. A new catalogue of its own had to be created.

Richard Strauss had made his first recordings in 1917, and in 1921 he accompanied in his own lieder the baritone Heinrich Schlusnus, who was to become one of the company's leading singers. In 1920 the 25-year-old Wilhelm Kempff made his first DG recording (Beethoven's Écossaises and the Bagatelle op.33 no.2), as did Elisabeth Schumann ('Non so più', in German, from Figaro). Thus began a new direction for the company over the next years with artists including the soprano Maria Ivogün, the pianist Wilhelm Backhaus (who had made his début as early as 1909), conductors such as Hans Pfitzner, Leo Blech and Hermann Abendroth and a recording philosophy of uncut performances, faithful to the score.

In 1924 Deutsche Grammophon was allowed to resume use of the Nipper trademark as well as its pre-war matrices, for issue in Germany; it could export only its own German-made recordings, on the Polydor label. The releases of this period emphasized Wagner and often featured the Berlin Staatskapelle under Leo Blech or the Berlin PO under Max von Schillings. By 1925 the company had brought out all nine Beethoven symphonies and, with Oskar Fried conducting the Berlin Staatskapelle, such large-scale works as Bruckner's Seventh and Mahler's Second symphonies. In 1926, Wilhelm Furtwängler, although sceptical regarding the medium, recorded Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and Weber's Freischütz overture with the Berlin PO. In the 'Beethoven Year' 1927, when the company took over the American Brunswick label, its orchestral catalogue also contained symphonies nos.1 and 8 conducted by Klemperer, no.4 conducted by Pfitzner and no.7 under Strauss, as well as the Adagio from Bruckner's Eighth conducted by Klemperer, Haydn's 'Oxford' Symphony under Knappertsbusch, Mozart's Symphony no.39 and the 'Jupiter' conducted by Strauss, Tchaikovsky's 'Pathétique' conducted by Bruno Walter and the Fledermaus overture under Erich Kleiber, all with the Berlin Staatskapelle, which also played for Strauss's recordings of his symphonic poems (1926–33).

By the time of Joseph Berliner's death in 1928 and Emile's the following year, DG's annual production had reached nearly ten million discs, with the Hanover factory employing 511 workers. But the world economic crisis precipitated a decline in record sales and in 1932 the company merged with Polyphon, retaining the name Deutsche Grammophon and moving its headquarters back to Hanover. In 1937, after further years of falling production, it was forced into liquidation, but with new financial backing from Telefunken and the Deutsche Bank it was reorganized and refounded the same year as Telefunken-Platte GmbH und Grammophon GmbH, with activities concentrated in Germany. After the outbreak of World War II and faced with a shortage of raw material, the company again stagnated and in 1941 it was taken over by the electrical and engineering company Siemens & Halske.

In spite of increasing restrictions, some important recordings continued to be made under the Third Reich, including, in December 1938, the first with Herbert von Karajan (the overture to Die Zauberflöte with the Berlin Staatskapelle). Other DG artists in this period included the conductors Paul van Kempen, Carl Schuricht and Victor de Sabata, the pianist Elly Ney, the violinist Georg Kulenkampff and the singers Erna Berger, Tiana Lemnitz, Walther Ludwig and Julius Patzak. In spite of drastically curtailed production during the war, such projects were still undertaken as the Mozart Requiem (with 'Aryanized' text) and a relatively complete St Matthew Passion conducted by Bruno Kittel in 1941 and 1942 respectively (the Bach matrices were taken by submarine to Japan, where Nippon Polydor had ordered 17,000 sets). On 9 May 1942 the Gestapo formally prohibited DG from producing masters using Jewish artists and ordered the destruction of all records in which they were featured. Some recordings continued to be issued during this and the following year, notably by Karajan conducting the Berlin Staatskapelle as well as the Concertgebouw, the Berlin PO and the Turin RAI SO. In 1943 the old His Master's Voice trademark was replaced by the Siemens and Polydor labels.

2. 1945–70. By the end of the war, yearly production had decreased to 500,000 discs and factory personnel to 96. A small record manufacturing facility was opened in Berlin for use while the factory and administrative buildings in Hanover were being rebuilt. In 1949 exclusive rights to the trademark His Master's Voice in Germany were sold to Electrola, and the yellow Deutsche Grammophon label with tulip crown was introduced for classical music, the Polydor label being retained for popular music. The lacquer disc (acetate) replaced wax in the record-making process. In 1950 78 r.p.m. records with longer playing time (up to nine minutes per side) were introduced, based on the DG invention of variable grooves, and the next year the company released its first 33 r.p.m. plastic long-playing records.

In 1949 the DG catalogue first featured the conductors Eugen Jochum and Ferenc Fricsay, the latter becoming central in the initial phase of the company's postwar artistic policy, engineered by the head of production from 1952, Elsa Schiller. Until the 1970s that policy meant finding the right artist for the repertory rather than cultivating 'stars', but the result was artistic collaborations that, in many instances, continued unbroken for two or three decades. Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau made his first DG recording in 1949. Wilhelm Kempff began a new Beethoven piano sonata cycle in 1950 and recorded the Beethoven concertos in 1953 (he re-recorded both in stereo in the 1960s). The Amadeus Quartet and the violinist Wolfgang Schneiderhan made their first DG recordings in 1951 and 1952 respectively. Karajan returned to the company from EMI in 1959 and, succeeding Fricsay (who died in 1963) as chief conductor, made some 330 records for DG over 30 years, covering a substantial portion of the standard concert repertory. It included three Beethoven cycles, in 1962–3, in 1977 on the 150th anniversary of Beethoven's death, and in 1984 (using the new digital technology), as well as several operas (notably the complete Ring, 1966–9). Karajan's status as the most prominent, and bestselling, of the label's artists continued until well after his death in 1989. Two other conductors played a significant part in establishing Deutsche Grammophon's strong postwar position in the Classical and Romantic repertory. Beginning in 1953, Karl Böhm recorded much of the standard Austro-German symphonic and opera repertory, notably the music of Mozart and the conductor's friend Richard Strauss; and Rafael Kubelík, with the Berlin PO and his own Bavarian RSO, made distinguished recordings of the principal orchestral works of Dvořák and Smetana, as well as Lohengrin and a complete cycle of Mahler symphonies. The American Lorin Maazel, signed by DG in 1957, was equally at home in German, French and Russian works.

Deutsche Grammophon's early music label, Archiv Produktion, issued its first recording in 1948, Bach played on the small organ of the Jacobikirche, Lübeck, by Helmut Walcha, who retained his close ties with the company for the next 30 years, recording Bach's complete organ works twice, in mono and in stereo. Archiv made some pioneering recordings of medieval and Renaissance music during its first two decades, but concentrated on the Baroque repertory, above all German and Italian works, directed by Fritz Lehmann, August Wenzinger, Rudolf Baumgartner and Karl Richter, who after Lehmann's death became the label's chief Bach interpreter. Archiv's first artistic director was Fred Hamel (from 1948 until his death in 1957); he was succeeded by Hans Hickmann (1957–70), Andreas Holschneider (1970–92), Peter Czornyj (1992–8) and David Murray.

Between 1956 and 1958 (the year of its first stereo recordings), DG transferred its headquarters from Hanover to Hamburg. In 1962 the electrical companies Siemens (Munich) and Philips (Eindhoven) combined their interests in the recording business. The group was established as a commercial entity, but DG retained control of its own recording activities and catalogue. A restructuring of the group in 1971 was followed by the formation of Polygram with headquarters in Baarn (Netherlands) and Hamburg.

3. 1970–89. In the 1970s DG shed its last vestiges of German provincialism and widened its international outlook, most obviously apparent in its signing of exclusive contracts with important non-German artists. In 1972 alone, three conductors began long-term associations: Seiji Ozawa, Daniel Barenboim (also as solo pianist) and, most prominently, Leonard Bernstein, who conducted the Metropolitan Opera's Carmen in New York. He later left CBS to join the 'yellow label' and in 1981 became an exclusive DG artist, recording the Austro-German symphonic repertory, mostly from live concerts, which he now preferred to the studio, as well as many of his own and other American works (his 1985 recording of West Side Story became one of the bestselling releases in the company's history). Carlo Maria Giulini, formerly an EMI artist, made his first recordings for DG in 1976 with the Chicago SO. During the next 12 years the company documented his return to opera in 1979 after a long absence to record Rigoletto in Vienna, followed by Falstaff in live, staged performances with his own Los Angeles PO, and Il trovatore in Rome in 1984. Also in 1976, Claudio Abbado undertook a series of Verdi opera recordings with La Scala. Carlos Kleiber's first recording, Der Freischütz in 1973, was followed up over the next decade with La traviata, Die Fledermaus and Tristan and symphonic works by Beethoven, Brahms and Schubert. Giuseppe Sinopoli made his first DG recording in 1980 and signed the first of several long-term exclusive contracts three years later, resulting in a complete Mahler cycle with the Philharmonia, Bruckner symphonies with the Dresden Staatskapelle and several major opera projects. James Levine became an exclusive DG artist in 1987, for projects including a complete cycle of Mozart's symphonies and violin concertos with the Vienna PO and Itzhak Perlman and the Metropolitan Opera production of Wagner's Ring.

At Archiv Produktion, the violinist Reinhard Goebel with Musica Antiqua Köln in 1977 and the harpsichordist Trevor Pinnock with the English Concert the next year signed exclusive contracts, the company's first period-instrument ensembles since August Wenzinger's Schola Cantorum Basiliensis in the 1950s. Also in 1978 John Eliot Gardiner made his first recording for the 'silver label' with the English Baroque Soloists.

Deutsche Grammophon's three most important pianists after Kempff's retirement, Maurizio Pollini, Martha Argerich and Krystian Zimerman, all made distinguished recordings in non-German niches that Kempff generally avoided, particularly Chopin, Liszt and music of the 20th century; and so did Ivo Pogorelich, in recordings appearing sporadically from 1981. Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli made a handful of distinguished recordings after 1971. Two elder statesmen of the keyboard, previously associated with CBS, joined DG at the ends of their careers: Rudolf Serkin in 1981 (a Mozart concerto cycle with Abbado and the LSO remained unfinished at his death ten years later) and Vladimir Horowitz (four extremely successful releases, 1985–7). In 1978 the 15-year-old violinist Anne-Sophie Mutter made a celebrated début playing Mozart with the Berlin PO under her mentor Karajan. The LaSalle Quartet recordings of the complete quartet music by the Second Viennese School won numerous prizes.

Important large-scale projects in this period included Fischer-Dieskau in Schubert's complete lieder for male voice, followed over the next ten years by comprehensive collections of lieder by Wolf, Schumann, Liszt and Brahms. In 1973, to mark its 75th anniversary, the company released an edition on 93 LPs, The World of the Symphony, with a lavishly illustrated documentary volume. DG has also undertaken generously documented editions of the complete, or nearly complete, works of individual composers: Beethoven in 1970, 1977 and 1997; Bach in 1975 and 1985; Brahms in 1983 and 1997; Berg in 1985.

At the end of 1984 Siemens sold most of its half-share in Polygram International to Philips, who bought the remaining 10% in 1987. In 1986 the Hanover factories – the first and largest producers of CDs – were taken over from Polygram by Philips as part of a joint venture with the American chemical concern DuPont, but Hanover remained the label's most important supplier. In 1987 DG, with its sister Polygram labels Philips and Decca, began releasing videocassettes and laser discs, mostly concert and opera recordings licensed from the film and television company UNITEL.

4. Since 1989. Two of DG's great conductors of the 1970s and 80s died in 1989 and 1990, Karajan (though the sales of his recordings continued unabated in the following years and popular compilations brought his interpretations to an ever-broadening audience) and Bernstein. After that the company seemed to shift its emphasis away from the maestro towards the virtuoso, although the tide was at least partly stemmed by two seasoned conductors who began a new phase of activity at DG: Pierre Boulez and André Previn (from 1995), largely in works of the 20th century (including some of their own). On the Archiv label John Eliot Gardiner conducted period-instrument recordings of Baroque (Bach oratorios, Monteverdi operas), Classical (Mozart operas and Beethoven symphonies) and even Romantic works.

A younger generation of artists had also begun to join the yellow label in the 1980s, including singers (Kathleen Battle, 1984; Anne Sofie von Otter, 1985; Bryn Terfel, 1993), instrumentalists (the pianist Maria João Pires, 1989; the cellist Mischa Maisky, 1982), string quartets (the Hagen, 1985; the Emerson, 1987), and orchestras (the Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, 1985). In the 1990s new contracts were signed with conductors (notably Myung-Whun Chung, 1990, and Christian Thielemann, 1995). The internationalism of Archiv Produktion's roster was substantially furthered through the acquisition of a number of younger artists (Paul McCreesh and his Gabrieli Consort and Players; Marc Minkowski and his Musiciens du Louvre, and the Renaissance wind band Piffaro).

The company continued to place great importance on technical developments. In 1989 the DG Recording Centre in Hanover introduced high-bit technology for two-track recordings and began making digital recordings with amplifiers and converters directly 'on stage'.

Deutsche Grammophon reached its centenary in 1998 as still the largest and most successful classical record company, having survived near-fatal upheavals engendered by the two world wars. But it lacked the flexibility and adventurousness of small, independent labels and, reluctant to join some of the other large companies in the trend towards 'crossover', it found that its élite tendencies began to work against it, and it suffered from the downturn in traditional classical record sales as the CD sales boom petered out in the early 1990s. In 1998 Polygram was acquired by Seagram through its subsidiary Universal. It remains to be seen whether a heavily capitalized, high-overhead company, having devolved into a cog in the wheels of a large, profit-driven, multinational entertainment group, can retain its artistic independence and a firm allegiance to recording high-profile artists in mainstream repertory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Gelatt: The Fabulous Phonograph, 1877–1977 (New York, 1977)
K. Schäfer and F.R. Zankl, eds.: 100 Jahre Schallplatte (Hamburg, 1987) [essays and exhibition catalogue]
R. Nolte and P. Meller Marcovicz: Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft: 90 Jahre in Daten, Namen & Fakten (unpubd, 1988)
S. Bultmann: '100 Years of Deutsche Grammophon: the Record of Grammophon', International Classical Record Collector, no.13 (1998), 18–27

RICHARD EVIDON

Deutsche Musikgesellschaft. German organization for the promotion of musicology. It was founded in 1918 on the initiative of Hermann Abert to replace the International Music Society, disbanded at the outbreak of Word War I, and to serve as the central scholarly society for German-speaking musicologists. Its journal, the Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft, was established in 1918 under the editorship of Alfred Einstein. Plagued by the postwar hyperinflation, the society nevertheless managed to stage a scholarly conference in Leipzig in 1925, and thereafter it oversaw the series Publikationen älterer Musik, with Theodor Kroyer as general editor. Shortly after the Nazis came to power, Einstein was dismissed as editor of the journal because he was a Jew. The society's president, Arnold Schering, then completely restructured the organization on the Nazi 'leadership principle', renaming it the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Musikwissenschaft. The Staatliches Institut für Deutsche Musikforschung, established in 1935, gradually took over many of the society's functions, including the publication of the Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft, renamed Archiv für Musikforschung in 1936. Schering's successor, Ludwig Schiedermair, then dissolved and re-established the society in 1938 and organized a conference with the central theme of 'Music and Race', held as part of the Reichsmusiktage in Düsseldorf. The society ceased to function by the end of 1940.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Abert: 'Die Deutsche Musikgesellschaft', ZMw, i (1918–19), 1–2
'Mitteilungen der Deutschen Musikgesellschaft', ZMw, i–xv (1918–33) passim Deutsche Musikgesellschaft: Kongress I: Leipzig 1925
'Mitteilungen der Deutsche Gesellschaft für Musikwissenschaft', ZMw, xvi (1933–4); xvii (1935); AMf, i–iii (1936–38) passim
A. Dümling and P.Girth, eds.: Entartete Musik: zur Düsseldorfer Ausstellung von 1938: eine kommentierte Rekonstruktion (Düsseldorf, 1988)
P. Potter: 'The Deutsche Musikgesellschaft, 1918–1938', JMR, xi (1991), 151–76

PAMELA M. POTTER

Deutscher (Ger.). See TEDESCA; see also GERMAN DANCE.

Deutscher Verlag für Musik. German firm of music publishers. It was founded as a nationally owned firm in Leipzig in 1954. Gunter Hempel became director in 1974, succeeding Helmut Zeraschi. It publishes complete critical editions, practical editions and music literature (specialized musicological works, Festschriften, yearbooks, biographies, facsimile editions, reprints and children's books with music). An orchestral and theatrical agency is attached to the firm. The Deutscher Verlag für Musik has brought out numerous works by contemporary composers including Paul Dessau, Hanns Eisler, Siegfried Matthus, Siegfried Thiele, Karl Ottomar Treibmann and Udo Zimmermann, as well as works by Shostakovich, Prokofiev and Mikis Theodorakis. Studies, didactic works and instrumental tutors are a prominent part of its publishing programme. The firm is also responsible for the publication of the collected editions of Mendelssohn, Samuel Scheidt, Gesualdo and Eisler; with Bärenreiter it is producing the collected editions of Bach, Handel and Mozart. Experts from several countries are contributing to the firm's series Musikgeschichte in Bildern (founded by Heinrich Besseler and Max Schneider, subsequently edited by Werner Bachmann), a standard work of musical iconography. In 1992 Breitkopf & Härtel bought the firm with all rights, and continued its publishing programme.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

VEB Deutscher Verlag für Musik 1954–1974 (Leipzig, 1973)
VEB Deutscher Verlag für Musik Leipzig 1954–1979 (Leipzig, 1978)

HANS-MARTIN PLESSKE/GUNTER HEMPEL

Deutsche Schalmey (Ger.). A type of shawm developed in Germany and the Netherlands in the late 16th century and the early 17th. See SHAWM, §4.

Deux temps (Fr.). See TWO-STEP.

De Van, Guillaume [Devan, William Carrolle; Van, Guillaume de] (b Memphis, TN, 3 July 1906; d Amalfi, 2 July 1949). American musicologist. After attending Princeton University (1923–5) he studied Gregorian chant in Rome (1931–2), and in 1935 became conductor of an Armenian chorus in Paris. With Abbé Ducaud-Bourget he founded the Paraphonistes de St Jean des Matines in 1936 and made 20 records of music from the 13th century to the 16th. In 1940 he was placed in charge of music collections in the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris and between 1942 and 1944 he held the directorship of the newly established department of music there, a position made possible by the Vichyites. After the war he returned to Italy to lecture in musicology at a summer session of the American Institute of Musicology in Rome. His work on the Aosta Manuscript (I-AO) and the manuscript I-Bc Q15 provided an important starting-point for later scholars' research on these sources. His planned 20-fascicle edition of Du Fay's complete works was cut short by his death; the four fascicles that were published were taken as the basis for Besseler's complete-works edition (CMM, i, 1951–66).

WRITINGS

'La prolation mineure chez Guillaume de Machaut', Sources, i (1943), 24–35

'An Inventory of the Manuscript Bologna Liceo Musicale Q 15 [olim 37]', MD, ii (1948), 231–57

'La pédagogie musicale à la fin du moyen âge', MD, ii (1948), 75–97

'A Recently Discovered Source of Early Fifteenth Century Polyphonic Music: the Aosta Manuscript', MD, ii (1948), 5–74

EDITIONS

La musique polyphonique de 1300 à 1400 environ, Les monuments de l'Ars Nova, i (Paris, 1938) [only vol. of a projected series]

Guillaume Dufay: Opera omnia, CMM, i/1–3 (1947–9) [vol.i and part of vol.ii pubd; rev. H. Besseler]

G. de Machaut: La messe de Nostre Dame, CMM, ii/1 (1949)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.H. Lang: 'Communications', JAMS, ii (1949), 202–4

A. Carapetyan: Editorial, MD, iii (1949), 45–54

W. THOMAS MARROCCO/R

Devčić, Natko (b Glina, 30 June 1914; d Zagreb, 4 Sep 1997). Croatian composer. At the Zagreb Academy of Music he completed piano studies with Antonija Geiger-Eichhorn in 1937 and composition studies with Franjo Dugan in 1939. He then studied the piano with Svetislav Stančić in Zagreb and composition with Joseph Marx in Vienna, and later attended Darmstadt summer courses and worked with Davidovsky at the CPEMC in New York (1967–8). From 1947 to 1980 he was teacher of theoretical subjects at the Zagreb Academy.

Devčić's output occupies a prominent place in the development of Croatian music after World War II. Initially, he was inspired by Istrian folk music, which he later returned to in his opera Labinska vještica ('The Witch of Labin'), Ševa ('The Lark') and even those works employing modernist compositional techniques (e.g. Prolog, Fibula, Non nova and Panta rei). He held a special interest in vocal music; in Sjećanja and Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening he was stimulated by poetry of a particular sonority, while the series of works entitled Vokali and Igra riječi use the voice without recourse to text. His early experiments with music theatre in the form of his opera The Witch of Labin reached fruition in the dance scores Dia. . . (1971) and Pan (1977).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Labinska vještica [The Witch of Labin] (op, D. Robič), 1957; Dia. . . (dance score), 1971; Pan (dance score), 1977

Orch: Istarska suita [Istrian Suite], 1948; Vn Concertino, 1958; Fibula, 2 orch, 1967; Non nova, 1972; Panta rei, pf, orch, 1973; Entre nous, 1975

Other inst: Koraci [Steps], pf, 1962; Odrazi [Reflections], ens, 1965; Prolog, wind, perc, 1965; Structures transparentes, hp, 1966; Conc., ens, 1969; Micro-tune, va, pf, 1971; Res sonora, org, 1972; . . . ma non troppo. . ., wind qnt, 1978; Str Qt, 1987; Mala suita [Little Suite], va, 1988

Vocal: Sjećanja [Remembrances] (J. Kaštelan), 1v, pf, 1949; Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening (R. Frost), 1v, pf, 1953; Ševa [The Lark] (S. Kulenović), Bar, spkr, chorus, orch, 1960; Epitaf vojniku koji je pao u času potpisivanja primirja [Epitaph to the Soldier Fallen in the Moment of Signing the Armistice] (G. Vitez), chorus, 1964; Vokali I, S, pf, 1968; Igra riječi I [Play of Words I], 2 spkrs, chorus, ens, tape, 1969; Vokali II, Bar, pf, 1969; Igra riječi II, female spkr, chorus, ens, tape, 1974; Lirska scena [Lyric Scene] (J. Pupačić), Bar, hn, str qt, 1984; Osorski triptihon [Osor Triptych], Bar, str ens, 1990

Elec: Columbia 68, 1968; Sonata, 1974

Principal publishers: Hrvatsko društvo skladatelja, Gerig

WRITINGS

'Stukturirani koncert: u povodu jedne nesvakidašnje londonske glazbene praizvedbe' [The structured concert: on the occasion of an unusual concert in London], Novi zvuk, ed. P. Selem (Zagreb, 1972), 209–13

Harmonija [Harmony] (Zagreb, 1975)

Harmonijska komponenta u glazbenom djelu Ive Mačeka [The harmonic component in Maček's work] (Zagreb, 1994)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Kovačević: Muzičko stvaralaštvo u Hrvatskoj 1945–1965 [Musical creation in Croatia 1945–65] (Zagreb, 1966), 47–8, 62–3, 80–81; Eng. version The History of Croatian Music of the Twentieth Century (Zagreb, 1967), 10, 34, 36

B. Antić: 'Nova jugoslavenska muzika' [New Yugoslav music], Zvuk, xii (1967), 29–32, 72

I. Supičić: 'Estetski pogledi u novijoj hrvatskoj muzici' [Aesthetic views in newer Croatian music], Arti musices, i (1969), 27–61

P. Selem: 'Nova hrvatska glazba' [New Croatian music], Novi zvuk, ed. P. Selem (Zagreb, 1972), 234–5, 238

J. Andreis: Music in Croatia (Zagreb, 1974, 2/1982), 279–82

N. Gligo: Varijacije razvojnog kontinuiteta: skladatelj Natko Devčić [The variations of developmental continuity: the composer Devčić] (Zagreb, 1985) [Ger. summary]

NIKŠA GLIGO

De Veg, Willem. See DE FESCH, WILLEM.

Development. The procedure, particularly in a SONATA FORM movement, by which some or all of the thematic material from the first section (the exposition) is reshaped motivically, harmonically or contrapuntally, or in any combination of those ways (Ger. Entwicklung); hence the term 'development' is also applied to the section itself (Ger. Durchführung). It usually ends with a harmonically more stable passage preparing (the retransition) for the last section (the recapitulation) by emphasizing the dominant of the tonality of the movement.

JAMES WEBSTER

Devi, Girija (b Benares [now Varanasi], 1929). North Indian vocalist. Her father, Ramdas Rai, was a well-known harmonium player and music teacher. When she was five he took her to Pandit Sarju Prasad Misra, a sāraṅgī player and vocalist, for lessons. She studied with him for seven or eight years; he taught her the genres ṭappā and khayāl, among others. At the age of nine, she acted as the child heroine in a film, Yaad rahe ('May it be Remembered') about caste conflict. She later studied with Pandit Sri Chand Misra, who taught her prabandha, chanda, dhrupad and khayāl. When, about 1946, she married, she agreed not to perform in private soirées outside her home, but public concerts, radio programmes and soirées in her home were acceptable. She first recorded for All-India Radio, Allahabad, in 1949, and first appeared in a public concert at the Arrah conference, Bihar, in 1951. Soon after this, she took formal initiation (gandha bandh) as Sri Chand Misra's disciple, studying with him until his death in the early 1960s.

She is regarded as a specialist in the contemporary Benares style of vocal music. In her semi-classical repertory, notably the genres ṭhumrī, dādrā, kajrī, caitī and holī, she blends her rigorous classical background with the distinct regional flavour of the traditional seasonal songs of eastern Uttar Pradesh and Bihar.

She has toured widely and has received numerous awards, notably the Sangeet Natak Award, the Hafiz Ali Khan Award, the Padma Shri and, in 1989, the Padma Bhushan. She served on the faculty of the Sangeet Research Academy in Calcutta during the 1980s and on that of Banaras Hindu University in the early 1990s. During the 1990s she maintained a busy concert schedule and dedicated herself to transmitting her musical legacy to students from various backgrounds. A documentary film about her life was commissioned by the Government of India Films Division entitled Girija Devi: Glimpses of Her Life and Music (1997).

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

Girija Devi Sings the Glory to purabi gayaki, Magnasound C4HV0065 (1989)
Girija Devi, Zakir Hussain, rec. Sept 1989, Moment MR 1004 (1991)
A.D. Sharma: Musicians of India: Past and Present (Calcutta, 1993)
M. Kinnear: The Gramophone Company's First Indian Recordings (Bombay, 1994)
Inde du nord: Girija Devi en concert, rec. Théâtre de la Ville, Paris, 24 Feb 1992, Ocora C 560056 (1995) [incl. notes and transcrs. in Eng., Fr., Ger.]

AMELIA DUTTA

Devi, Siddheswari (b Benares [now Varanasi], 1907; d Delhi, 1976). North Indian vocalist. She came from a family of hereditary professional female musicians of Benares; her grandmother Maina Bai and her aunt Rajeshwari Bai were esteemed vocalists. She received her initial training in the typical genres of the Benares region of eastern Uttar Pradesh – ṭhumrī, ṭappā, tarānā, dādrā, pūrbī, holī, caitī, kajrī – under Pandit Siyaji Maharaj. She later studied under other distinguished musicians including Pandit Bade Ramdasji of Benares (her most influential guru), Ustad Inayet Khan of Lahore and Khan Sahib Rajab Ali Khan of Gwalior. Orphaned in infancy and abandoned by her aunt in adolescence, she spent a number of years in poverty. For a time she worked in Bombay for a film company as 'Usha Cinetone's Miss Siddheswari'. She eventually transcended her misfortunes and developed a profoundly emotive style which reflected the characteristics of the Benares gharānā.

At the First Congress Session's music conference in Bombay, Ustad Faiyaz Khan called Devi the queen of ṭhumrī. Although she specialized in the Benares semi-classical repertory, she was also a respected khayāl singer, sometimes evoking dhrupad. She also performed in London, Rome and Kabul and in Nepal.

She had two daughters, Shanta and Savita, whom she trained as musicians. In the early 1960s she was hired by the Bharatiya Kala Kendra in Delhi to teach ṭhumrī, and was subsequently awarded a fellowship by the Sangeet Natak Akademi. She received the Padma Shri award from the Government of India in 1966 and in 1973 the honorary DLitt from the Rabindra Bharati University, Calcutta, and subsequently the Viswa Bharati University's highest award, the Desikottam.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

L. Garg: 'Siddheswari Devi', Hamāre saṅgīt ratna [Our music jewels] (Hathras, 1957, 3/1983)
Smt. Siddheswari Devi: Light Classical Music, HMV EALP 1436 (1987)
A.D. Sharma: Musicians of India: Past and Present (Calcutta, 1993)
M. Kinnear: The Gramophone Company's First Indian Recordings (Bombay, 1994)

AMELIA DUTTA

Devienne, François (b Joinville, Haute-Marne, 31 Jan 1759; d Paris, 5 Sept 1803). French flautist, bassoonist, composer and teacher. He was the seventh of eight children born to Pierre Devienne and his second wife Marie Petit. Two obituaries published in 1803, which have since been proved apocryphal, claimed that when he was ten he wrote a mass which was performed by the musicians of the Royal Cravate cavalry regiment. He probably received his earliest training from the organist Morizot in Joinville, and continued his education with his elder brother and godfather, François Memmie, in Deux Ponts (now Zweibrücken) from 1776 to 1778. He left Deux Ponts on 15 May 1778 and may have spent some time with the Royal Cravate regiment during the following year. He joined the Paris Opéra orchestra as last chair bassoonist in autumn 1779 for one season, and studied the flute with the orchestra's principal flautist, Félix Rault. It is likely that Devienne entered the service of Cardinal de Rohan as a chamber musician in spring 1780 and remained there until mid-1785. In 1781 he joined the freemasons; he presumably became a member of the famous masonic orchestra, the Loge Olympique, during the 1780s. The first performance in Paris of a work by him was on 24 March 1780, when Ozi performed 'a new Bassoon Concerto composed by de Vienne' at the Concert Spirituel. Devienne first appeared in Paris as a soloist on 24 December 1782 at the Concert Spirituel when he performed 'a new flute concerto', probably his Flute Concerto no.1; his first appearance as a bassoon soloist at the Concert Spirituel was on 25 March 1784 when he played his Bassoon Concerto no.1. From 1782 to 1785 he performed at the Concert Spirituel as a soloist at least 18 times, but after 3 April 1785 he did not appear there for four years. From 1785 to 1789 his place of employment is uncertain; he may have been a member of the Swiss Guards Band in Versailles.

Devienne probably returned to Paris in autumn or winter 1788. Les spectacles de Paris 1790 lists him as the second bassoonist of the Théâtre de Monsieur (later the Théâtre Feydeau) when it opened in January 1789 and by autumn 1790 he had advanced to principal bassoonist, a position he held until April 1801, although in 1792 he still received the meagre annual salary of 200 livres (the average salary of a bassoon player in the Opéra orchestra in 1789 was 1080 livres). Devienne's first known solo appearance after his return to Paris was at the Concert Spirituel on 7 April 1789, when he played the flute part in the première of his Sinfonie concertante no.4. In autumn 1790 he joined the military band of the Paris

National Guard where his duties included teaching music to the children of French soldiers and participation in the musical events of the numerous festivals in Paris. This organization officially became the Free School of Music of the National Guard in 1792, and Devienne was one of the three sergeants in its administration with an annual salary of 1100 livres (the Free School became the National Institute of Music in 1793 and the Paris Conservatoire in 1795). The marriage of Devienne to a Mlle Maillard presumably took place between 1789 and 1792; they had five children.

The Théâtre Montansier, which devoted most of its productions to original French opéras comiques, opened on 12 April 1790 and Devienne's Le mariage clandestin was staged there the following November. Two more of his operas were staged before his most popular opera, Les visitandines (1792), was performed at the Théâtre Feydeau. This opera was among the most successful of the Revolutionary period; it had over 200 performances in Paris between 1792 and 1797 and was also performed there as late as 1920. Devienne's royalties for its 20 performances in July and August 1792 alone totalled 684 livres. At the height of this success a handsome portrait of Devienne, now in the Musées Royaux in Brussels, was painted. It was formerly attributed to J.-L. David but is now thought to have been painted by Laneuville or some other student of David (see illustration).

Devienne's famous method for the one-key flute was published in 1794. It contains information on flute techniques and performing practice (particularly late 18th-century articulation) as well as flute duets of elementary and intermediate difficulty. The following year the Paris Conservatoire was established, and Devienne was appointed one of its nine elected administrators and professor of flute (first class) with an annual salary of

François Devienne: portrait by a pupil of Jacques-Louis David (possibly Jean-Louis Laneuville), early 1790s (Musées Royaux des Beaux-Arts, Brussels)

5000 livres. After 1795 three more of his operas were staged, and he occupied himself with his duties in the Théâtre Feydeau orchestra and at the Conservatoire. Five of his students won prizes at the Conservatoire between 1797 and 1801, and one (Joseph Guillou) was appointed professor of flute there in 1816.

On 12 April 1801 the Théâtre Feydeau abruptly closed. Its orchestra and that of the Théâtre Favart merged the following September to form the new Opéra-Comique orchestra, but it is not known if Devienne was a member of this orchestra. In May 1803 he entered Charenton, a Parisian home for the mentally ill, where he died the following September after a long illness which ended by impairing his reason.

Devienne's compositions did much to raise the musical level of works written for wind instruments in France in the late 18th century. His greatest contributions are in the areas of the concerto, the sinfonie concertante and opera, although he also wrote 25 quartets, 46 trios, 147 duos and 67 sonatas. The texture of Devienne's compositions is primarily that of a single melodic line with a subordinate accompaniment. The melodies are elegant and graceful, and the instrumental works are frequently interspersed with sections written to display the performer's technique. There is little contrapuntal orientation or thematic development in any of the works. The most common structural forms are the binary, theme and variations, rondo and early sonata forms (with a second exposition in place of the development). There is an astonishing lack of manuscripts of Devienne's compositions, even though most of his works seem to have been published.

WORKS

most printed works published in Paris

STAGE

opéras comiques unless otherwise stated; all first performed in Paris

Le mariage clandestin (1, Viscount de Ségur), Montansier, 11 Nov 1790, F-R, 1 air pubd
Les précieuses ridicules (1, P.-L. Moline, after Molière), Montansier, 9 Aug 1791
Encore des Savoyards, ou L'école des parvenus (1, J.-B. Pujoulx), OC (Favart), 8 Feb 1792, 1 air pubd
Les visitandines (2, L.B. Picard), Feydeau, 7 July 1792, rev. in 3 acts, 1793 (*c*1792), excerpts, arrs. pubd separately
L'enlèvement des Sabines (pièce en vaudevilles, 2, Picard), Feydeau, 31 Oct 1792 [doubtful]
Les quiproquos espagnols (2, J.-E. Dejaure), Feydeau, 10 Dec 1792
Le congrès des rois (cmda, 3, Desmaillots [A.F. Eve]), OC (Favart), 26 Feb 1794, collab. Dalayrac, Grétry, Méhul and 8 others
Rose et Aurèle (1, Picard), Feydeau, 8 Aug 1794 (*c*1795), excerpts pubd
Agnès et Félix, ou Les deux espiègles (3, C.-A. Demoustier), Feydeau, 22 Aug 1795
Volécour, ou Un tour de page (1, E.-G.-F. Favières), OC (Favart), 22 March 1797
Les comédiens ambulans (2, Picard), Feydeau, 28 Dec 1798 (*c*1799)
Le valet de deux maîtres (1, J.-F. Roger, after C. Goldoni), Feydeau, 2 Nov 1799 (*c*1800)

VOCAL

49 romances in 7 collections, most for 1v, pf [some pf/hp], fl/vn ad lib (1783–97)
7 patriotic songs, most for 1v, bc, some acc. wind band (*c*1797), some acc. orch (1794), listed in Pierre, 1904

ORCHESTRAL

Sinfonies concertantes (thematic catalogue in BrookSF; only solo insts listed): no.1, F, hn, bn (1785); no.2, C, ob/cl, bn (*c*1786); 1 in F, fl, cl, bn, op.22 (*c*1788); 1 in B♭, 2 cl, op.25 (*c*1788), arr. ?Ducreux for 2 fl; no.4, F, fl, ob, hn, bn (*c*1791); 1 in F, fl, ob, hn, bn (*c*1797); 1 in G, 2 fl, op.76 (1799 or 1801)
Fl concs.: Concertino 'd'airs connus' and 4 concs. [nos.2–5] 'd'airs connus' (1782); 12 pubd separately [also arr. fl, vn, vc, by P.

Vaillaro (*c*1811), and cl solo]: no.1, D (1782), no.2, D (1783), no.3, G (1784), no.4, G (n.d.), no.5, G (before 1792), no.6, D (1794), no.7, e (*c*1787), no.8, G (*c*1794), no.9, e (1793), no.10, D (1802), no.11, b (*c*1806), no.12, A and a (*c*1806); 1 in D (after 1803)

Bn concs.: no.1, C (1785); no.2 (*c*1794); no.3, F (1790); no.4, C (1793)

Hn concs.: no.1, C, 1785, ed. E. Leloir (Amsterdam, 1974); no.2; 1 in F (*c*1788), collab. F. Duvernoy

Other orch: La bataille de Gemmapp, programmatic ov., D (1794), arr. kbd, vn, vc (1794), and pf solo (*c*1796); Ouverture, wind band, F (1794)

CHAMBER

Qts: 21 for fl, vn, va, vc, incl. 6 as bk 1 (1783), 6 as bk 2, op.16 (*c*1786), 3 as bk 3, op.62 (*c*1791), 6 as bk 4, op.66 [? and op.67] (*c*1794); Sonate en quatuor, fl, va, hn/vc, pf/hpd (1789); 3 for bn, vn, va, vc, op.73 (*c*1800), arr. cl, vn, va, vc, as op.75

Trios: 6 for fl, va, vc (1784); 6 for bn, vn, vc, op.17 (*c*1782); 6 for 2 fl, vc, op.19 [also as op.60] (*c*1787); 1 for fl, bn/vc, pf/hpd (1787); 6 for 2 cl, bn, op.27 (1790); 6 for fl, cl, bn, opp.61–2 [also as op.6] (*c*1795), also pubd for fl, vn, vc; 6 for fl, vn, vc, ?op.66 [also as op.19] (*c*1798), also pubd for 3 fl; 3 for fl, vn, vc, ?op.66 (*c*1795); 3 for 2 cl, bn, op.75 (*c*1801), also pubd for 2 fl, bn/vc as op.77; 3 for cl, hn, bn (*c*1805)

Duos: 108 in 18 sets for 2 fl (1782–1820); 15 in 3 sets for fl, vn (*c*1796–), 6 arr. 2 cl; 6 for fl, va (1784), arr. 2 fl, and cl, va; 12 in 2 sets, cl, bn (*c*1788–*c*1803); 6 for 2 bn (*c*1782)

Sonatas: 7 in 3 sets, hpd/pf, fl obbl (1784–9); 48 in 8 sets for fl, b (1786–?1803), 12 arr. cl, b, 6 arr. vn, b, 6 arr. 2 fl, 6 arr. ob, b; 6 for bn, b (?1788); 6 for pf, vn ad lib (*c*1800); 2 adagios, hpd (1783)

Arrs.: Excerpts from ops by Gaveaux and Cherubini, arr. wind band; Pleyel: 3 qnts, arr. fl, vn, 2 va, vc; Pleyel: 27 qts, arr. fl, vn, va, vc; Pleyel: 3 trios, arr. fl, vn, vc; Pleyel: 6 duos, arr. 2 fl; Pleyel: 6 sonatas, arr. fl, vc; P. Kreutzer: 6 sonatas, arr. fl, vc

PEDAGOGICAL

Nouvelle méthode théorique et pratique pour la flûte (Paris, ?1794/R, and many later edns); music pubd separately (Offenbach, 1793)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookSF; EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; GroveO (E. Cook) [incl. addl bibliography]; LoewenbergA

A. Pougin: Devienne (Paris, 1864); also in RGMP, xxxi (1864), 241–2, 251–2, 308–9, 316–17, 324–5, 355–6, 364

C. Pierre, ed.: Le Conservatoire national de musique et de déclamation: documents historiques et administratifs (Paris, 1900)

C. Pierre: Les hymnes et chansons de la Révolution (Paris, 1904/R)

E. Humblot: Un musicien joinvillois ... François Devienne (St Dizier, 1909/R)

J. Tiersot: Lettres de musiciens écrites en français du XVe au XXe siècle, i (Turin, 1924)

H. Gougelot: La romance française sous la Révolution et l'Empire (Melun, 1938–43)

E. Hess: 'Ist das Fagottkonzert KV. Anhang 230a von Mozart?', MJb 1957, 223–32

J.M. Stoltie: A 'symphonie concertante' Type: the Concerto for Mixed Woodwind Ensemble in the Classical Period (diss., U. State of Iowa, 1962)

A. Le Bihan: Francs-maçons parisiens du Grand Orient de France (Paris, 1966)

T.E. Warner: An Annotated Bibliography of Woodwind Instruction Books, 1600–1830 (Detroit, 1967)

W.S. Dudley: Orchestration in the Musique d'harmonie of the French Revolution (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1968)

W. Gruhn: 'Ergänzungen zur Zweibrücker Musikgeschichte', Mf, xxiii (1970), 173–5

W. Montgomery: The Life and Works of François Devienne, 1759–1803 (diss., Catholic U. of America, 1975)

G. Galletti: Gli ultimi sei concerti per flauto di François Devienne ed il suo 'Méthode pour la flûte' (thesis, U. of Pavia, 1988–9)

P. de Buchy: 'La flûte', Larigot, no.10 (1992), 25–9

J.M. Bowers: 'The Long and Curious History of the Devienne Method for the Flute', Music in Performance and Society Essays in Honor of Roland Jackson, ed. M. Cole and J. Koegel (Warren, MI, 1997), 205–27

J. Bowers: François Devienne's 'Nouvelle Méthode Théorique et Practique pour la flute' (Aldershot, 1999)

WILLIAM MONTGOMERY

De Vinea [à Vinea, de Vigne, van den Wijngaerde], Antonius (d ?Utrecht, 12 Feb 1516). North Netherlandish composer. He was closely associated with David of Burgundy, bishop of Utrecht; he is first recorded in connection with the church of St Jan Baptist, Wijk bij Duurstede (where the bishop had his residence) in 1473/4; he became a canon of the church in 1482, when (as in a permutation of benefices in 1478–9) he is described as chaplain to the bishop. He was canon of the Mariakerk from 1476 until June 1515, when he resigned, perhaps owing to ill health; the chapter archives record his death eight months later (Utrecht, Het Utrechts Archief, Arch.S.Marie 406–7). Another man of the same name was coraelmeester of the church of Our Lady, Antwerp, in a document of 22 July 1471; Jacobus Barbireau succeeded him by 1484, from which time he is recorded as chaplain of a side altar in the same church. He made his will on 21 December 1499 and probably died soon after (his executors' account is in the Antwerp Cathedral Archives). Glarean identified the composer as 'Trajectensis' (from either Utrecht or Maastricht), ruling out the man in Antwerp.

Two compositions by De Vinea are extant. Glarean remarked on the expressive power of the four-voice Ego dormio (CH-SGs 463, ed. in MSD, vi/2, 1965): 'the entire song has an inherent grace in all voices, so that one may see the sleeper actually awakened'. Franch cor quastu [Franc coeur, qu'as tu]/ Fortuna (RISM 1502[2], ed. in MRM, ii, 1967) is a remarkable five-voice chanson. Lowinsky considered it one of the best examples of the Fortuna tradition in music. It exemplifies the mutability of fortune by employing the Fortuna melody in two voices at two speeds, as well as its inversion in two other voices, at two different speeds; the superius sings the French melody. Both pieces are chordal in conception with simple and straightforward harmonic bass lines.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Theunissens: 'La musique à Anvers aux XIVe, XVe et XVIe siècles: copie du manuscrit de M. le chevalier Léon de Burbure', Annales de l'Academie royale d'archéologie de Belgique, lviii (1906), 159–256, esp. 252

J.A. Bank: 'Uit het verleden van de nederlandse kerkmuziek', Sint Gregoriusblad, lxiv (1939), 1–6

E.E. Lowinsky: 'The Goddess Fortuna in Music, with a Special Study of Josquin's Fortuna d'un gran tempo', MQ, xxix (1943), 45–77

J. van den Nieuwenhuizen: 'De koralen, de zangers en de zangmeesters van de Antwerpse O.-L.-Vrouwekerk tijdens de 15e eeuw', Gouden jubileum gedenkboek ter gelegenheid van de viering van 50 jaar heropgericht Knapenkoor van de Onze-Lieve-Vrouwkatedraal te Antwerpen, ed. P. Schrooten (Antwerp, 1978), 29–72

STANLEY BOORMAN/JEFFREY DEAN

Devisenarie (Ger.). A term invented by Hugo Riemann for which there is no immediately intelligible English translation. Devise means 'device', in the sense of Longfellow's 'a banner with the strange device'. Riemann used the term to describe a common characteristic of Baroque arias: the singer begins with the opening of his first phrase, followed by an instrumental ritornello, and then sings it complete. 'MOTTO aria' is often used as an alternative term.

JACK WESTRUP

Devismes [Devisme] [née Moyroud], Jeanne-Hippolyte (b Lyons, 1765; d Paris, ?1834). French opera composer and pianist. The fourth woman to have an opera performed at the Paris Opéra in the history of the institution. Acclaimed as a pianist, she studied with Steibelt, who dedicated his Violin and Piano Sonatas op.4 to her. She married Anne-Pierre-Jacques Devismes du Valgay (1745–1819), who was director of the Opéra between 1778 and 1780 and in 1800. It was probably thanks to his influence that her opera Praxitèle, ou La ceinture (to a libretto by Milcent) was staged there on 24 July 1800, enjoying 16 performances and becoming the object of two parodies. Although the libretto was sharply criticized, the music was well-received and praised for its originality; it has prominent parts for flute, clarinet and harp, as well as onstage and offstage choruses. The Opéra archives show that plans were underway to revive it in 1804. No other works by Devismes are known, except one song, 'La dame Jacinthe', included in the collection Le Grétry des dames (Paris, 1823). It is not known why she did not follow up her operatic success with a second work. The opera La double récompense (1805) has been incorrectly attributed to her, it was in fact written by her husband.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Choron-FayolleD; FétisB

C. Delacroix: Review of Praxitèle, Courrier des spectacles (2 Aug 1800)

A. Pougin: Un directeur d'Opéra au dix-huitième siècle (Paris, 1914), 128–9, 134–5

R. Adelson and J. Letzer: A Drama of Disappointed Ambition: French Revolutionary Opéra by Women (forthcoming)

ROBERT ADELSON, JACQUELINE LETZTER

De Vito, Gioconda (b Martina Franca, Lecce, 26 July 1907; d Rome, 14 Oct 1994). British violinist of Italian birth. She studied the violin at Pesaro with Attilio Crepax and Remy Principe and later in Rome with Principe. In 1932 she won an international violin competition in Vienna, which led to notable concert appearances and to her appointment as principal professor of violin at the Accademia di S Cecilia, Rome. She devoted much of her time to teaching until after 1945, and first came to London in 1947 to make recordings. Her London concert début was in 1948 with the LPO; in 1949 she married and settled in England. She formed a notable duo with the pianist Tito Aprea and made recordings with Menuhin and Edwin Fischer. De Vito's finest interpretation was of the Brahms Concerto, which she recorded twice.

Until she retired in 1961 she was widely praised for her consistent achievement of an almost ideal blend of expert technique and poetic imagination in the major works of the standard violin repertory, particularly in Bach, Mendelssohn and Brahms. An outward serenity of style disciplined an inward spirit of passionate feeling. Pizzetti's Violin Concerto (1945) was written for her. She had the professional use of a 1723 Stradivari violin (the 'Tuscan') on loan from the Accademia di S Cecilia, from which she drew an exceptionally clear, rich tone, as many of her recordings attest.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Duchen: 'In Vito Veritas', The Strad, xcviii (1987), 461–5

T. Potter: 'Maestra del violino', The Strad, cvi (1995), 270–74

NOËL GOODWIN/TULLY POTTER

DeVoto, Mark (Bernard) (b Cambridge, MA, 11 Jan 1940). American composer and scholar. The son of a distinguished author, DeVoto was exposed to a variety of intellectual stimuli at an early age. At Harvard University he studied composition with Piston and Randall Thompson (BA 1961); at Princeton (MFA 1963, PhD 1967) his principal teachers were Sessions, Babbitt and Cone. He has taught at Reed College (1964–8), the University of New Hampshire (1968–81) and Tufts University (1981–2000). The focus of his writings is the music of Alban Berg, whose Altenberg Lieder he edited for the publishers Universal Edition. He was founding editor of the newsletter of the International Alban Berg Society (first published in 1968); he also revised and expanded Piston's Harmony for its fourth and fifth editions. As a composer, DeVoto has produced a series of interesting and varied works, including several for voice with specialized instrumental ensembles and four piano concertos. Of the latter, the second is dedicated to the memory of Varèse, and the third, subtitled 'The Distinguished Thing', was written for a Fromm Foundation commission. In his early works Stravinsky and the Parisians of the 1920s were the major musical influences, in the later ones Varèse and Schoenberg.

WORKS

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1956; Night Songs and Distant Dances, 1962; 3 Little Pieces, 1964; Pf Conc. no.2, 1965–6; Pf Conc. no.3, 'The Distinguished Thing', 1968; The Caucasian Chalk Circle (incid music, B. Brecht), vv, 9 insts, 1979–80; Pf Conc. no.4 (A. Rimbaud), pf, sym. wind ens, female chorus, va obbl, 1983; Interior Dialogue, 1993

Chbr and solo inst: 2 Etudes, pf left hand, 1971; Qt, fl, cl, gui, hp, 1988; Leaves, fl, cl, 1993; Str Qt no.2, 1993; Pavane and Zortzico, pf, 1996–7

Vocal: Planh (Pss, Bible: Ecclesiastes), S, 6vv, fl, ob, cl, tbn, hp, 1960; American Songs (J. Lieberman, K. Rexroth, G.M. Hedin, J.W. Seymore), S, fl, va, trbn, hp, 1961; 3 Poe Songs, S, concertina, gui, hpd, 8 fl, 1967, rev. 1970; Fever-Dream Vocalise, S, fl, vc, pf, perc, 1968; Ornières (Rimbaud), S, pf, org, perc, 1974; H (Rimbaud), reciter, fl choir, bell, 1981; Herbstlieder (G. Takl), 1986; Hodayot (Dead Sea Scrolls), chorus, orch, 1990–91

Arrs. for orch and band

WRITINGS

'Some Notes on an Unknown Altenberg Lieder', PNM, v (1966), 37–74

Revisions and additions for W. Piston: Harmony (New York, 4/1978, 5/1987)

'Alban Berg's "Marche Macabre"', PNM, xxii/1–2 (1983–4), 386–447

'Alban Berg and Creeping Chromatism', Alban Berg: Historical and Analytical Perspectives, ed. D. Gable and R.P. Morgan (Oxford, 1991), 57–78

'Paris 1918–45', Modern Times from World War I to the Present, ed. R.P. Morgan (London, 1993), 33–59

'Nonclassical Diatonicism and Polyfocal Tonality: the Case of Nielsen's Fifth Symphony, First Movement', The Nielsen Companion, ed. M. Miller (London, 1994), 257–88

'The Russian Submediant in the Nineteenth Century', CMc, no.59 (1995), 48–76

'The Strategic Half-Diminished Seventh Chord and the Emblematic "Tristan" Chord: a Survey from Beethoven to Berg', International Journal of Musicology, iv (1995), 139–53

STEVEN E. GILBERT

Devoyon, Pascal (b Paris, 6 April 1953). French pianist. He studied the piano privately with Blanche Bascourret de Gueraldi and then with Lélia Gousseau at the Paris Conservatoire, where he received a premier prix in 1971. He also studied at the Ecole Normale de Musique, where he was awarded a licence de concert in 1972. His career was launched after he won second prizes at the Busoni (1974) and Tchaikovsky (1978) competitions and the third prize at Leeds (1975). Since 1978 he has performed throughout Europe, Russia and the USA. His early recordings include particularly satisfying accounts of Ravel's Gaspard de la nuit and Liszt's Sonata. More recently he has devoted himself to chamber music, and his eloquent musicianship is evident in his recorded partnerships with the cellist Steven Isserlis (in sonatas by Fauré and Saint-Saëns) and the violinist Dong-Suk Kang (in works by Debussy, Ravel, Saint-Saëns, Poulenc and Schubert). In 1991 he was appointed professor of piano at the Paris Conservatoire, and since 1995 he has taught at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik.

CHARLES TIMBRELL

Devreese, Frédéric (b Amsterdam, 2 June 1929). Belgian conductor and composer. The son of Godfried Devreese, he studied at the conservatories of Mechelen and Brussels, and later at the Accademia di S Cecilia (1952–5) and the Vienna Music Academy (1955–6). Subsequently he took an appointment as a producer for Belgian Television, and much of his work, as conductor and composer, has been for this medium. In 1964 he received the Italia Prize jointly with Mark Liebrecht for the television opera Willem van Saeftinge, which was adapted for the stage in the same year. He has conducted the symphony and chamber orchestras of Belgian Radio, and has appeared as a guest conductor abroad. His early works, notably the First Piano Concerto, were influenced by jazz and by the music of Gershwin; while he has remained an eclectic composer, a certain Flemish Expressionism is evident in his later music. Devreese has a liking for dance rhythms and uses the technique of permanent variation, with logical but surprising evolutions. His film scores are highly evocative, and his music for Het sacrament gained him the Joseph-Plateau Prize in 1990.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Mascarade, ballet, 1956; Willem van Saeftinge (TV op, J. Francis), 1962–3; De vreemde ruiter (TV op, M. de Ghelderode), 1967; De liefde van Don Juan (ballet, A. Leclair), 1974; Gemini (ballet, 5), 1986; incid music

Documentary films by Paul Haesaerts: Een vreemde reis (Les clés des chants surréalistes), 1966; Breugel, 1969; Evenepoel, schilder van de tederheid, 1971; Ik, Ensor, 1972

Feature films by André Delvaux: De man die zijn haar kort liet knippen, 1965; Un soir, un train, 1968; Rendez-vous à Bray, 1970; Benvenuta, 1983; L'oeuvre au noir, 1988

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1949; Vn Conc., 1951; Pf Conc. no.2, 1952; Sym., 1952; 2 movts, str, 1953–63; Pf Conc. no.3, 1956; Evocation, suite, 1966; Divertimenti, str, 1970; Ov., 1976; Prelude, 1983; Pf Conc. no.4, 1983; Ballade pour Damien, harmonica, str, children's choir, 1988 [based on a theme by T. Thielemans]; Variations and Theme, str, 1994; Valse sacrée, 1994; Sax Conc., 1997; Vn Conc., 1997

Songs, chbr music, pf music

Principal publisher: Gaillard

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Y. Knockaert: 'Frédéric Devreese, componist', Ons erfdeel, xxxii (1989), no.4, 490–93

Y. Knockaert: 'Frédéric Devreese, compositeur et chef d'orchestre', Septentrion, xx/4 (1991), 40–42

Y. Knockaert: 'Frédéric Devreese, het onzekere onderzoeken', Kunst & Cultuur, xxv/7 (1992), 36–7

CORNEEL MERTENS/YVES KNOCKAERT

Devreese, Godfried (b Kortrijk, 22 Jan 1893; d Brussels, 4 June 1972). Belgian violinist, conductor and composer. At the Brussels Conservatory he studied the violin with Ysaÿe and Thomson and composition with Gilson and Rasse; he then became leader of the Kurhaus orchestra in The Hague and a member of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam. For some time he was conductor at the Netherlands Lyric Theatre, Antwerp, and in 1924 at the Park Theatre Vauxhall, Brussels. Later he worked in Monaco, and in 1930 he became director of the Mechelen Conservatory until he retired in 1959. During this period he conducted the orchestras of Belgian Radio and was also a guest conductor in the Netherlands, France and Poland. His compositions remained Romantic in style, occasionally influenced by Impressionism. (CeBeDeM directory)

WORKS

Orch.: Vlaamse rapsodie; Heroïsch gedicht, 1923; 4 syms., incl. Gotische symfonie, 1944; Goethe symfonie, 1952; Tombelene (ballet), 1926; 2 vn concs., 1937, 1940; Pf Conc., 1938

Cant.: Beatrijs (Prix de Rome, 1922)

Chbr and pf music, songs, choral works

Principal publisher: CeBeDeM

CORNEEL MERTENS/DIANA VON VOLBORTH-DANYS

Devrient, Eduard (Philipp) (b Berlin, 11 Aug 1801; d Karlsruhe, 4 Oct 1877). German theatre historian, librettist and baritone. Eduard Devrient, nephew of the actor Ludwig Devrient, had two brothers who became actors: Karl (first husband of Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient) and Emil. At the age of 17 he entered the Berlin Singakademie and studied singing and thoroughbass with Zelter. He gave his first solo public performance in 1819 in Berlin in C.H. Graun's Der Tod Jesu and on 18 April 1819 he sang the part of Thanatos in Gluck's Alceste; after his performance as Masetto in Don Giovanni, he was engaged as a baritone at the Royal Opera.

In 1822 Devrient went on a tour to Dresden, Leipzig, Kassel and Frankfurt (where he was influenced by J.N. Schelble). Later he visited Vienna to hear the Italian opera in which Lablache and other famous singers were performing under Barbaia's direction. He met Mendelssohn in July 1822 and they became close friends. They first heard some of the numbers of Bach's St Matthew Passion at the Friday practices at which Zelter rehearsed works which he considered the public would not appreciate. Devrient became determined to have the work performed in Berlin under Mendelssohn's direction. Through his efforts, Zelter cooperated, and the famous performance which started the Bach revival took place under Mendelssohn on 11 March 1829. Devrient himself gave a much praised performance of the part of Christ.

A major setback came when he lost his voice through overwork after his performance of the Templar in Marschner's Der Templer und die Jüdin in 1831. He was forced to concentrate on acting; although he sang occasionally, from 1834 he appeared exclusively in spoken roles. In 1844 he became chief producer and actor at the Dresden Court Theatre. After his resignation in 1846, he worked as a writer until his appointment as director of the Karlsruhe Court Theatre in 1852; he retired in 1870. He married a singer, Therese Schlesinger, when he was 23; of their children only one, Otto, had a successful theatrical career.

Devrient was successful as opera singer (in works by Gluck, Mozart, Beethoven, Spohr, Weber, Marschner, Rossini and Auber), actor and playwright; yet his major contribution lies in his work as theatre reformer, historian and librettist, and in his efforts towards the Bach revival. His libretto Hans Heiling, originally written for Mendelssohn (1827), was later revised for Marschner; Devrient sang the title role at the first performance (Berlin, 1833). Settings by W. Taubert of Die Kirmess (1831) and Der Zigeuner (1832) by Devrient were also first performed at Berlin (1832 and 1834 respectively). Among his writings, Das Nationaltheater des neuen Deutschlands: eine Reformschrift (1849) and Geschichte der deutschen Schauspielkunst (1848–74) are particularly important. Devrient advocated the formation of a national theatre; he raised the standard of performances in Karlsruhe, paying careful attention to details in the belief that everything must contribute to the total drama. He deplored anything careless or unplanned and sought to eliminate virtuosity; he also recognized the importance of historical costumes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Devrient: Briefe aus Paris (Berlin, 1840)
E. Devrient: Meine Erinnerungen an Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy und seine Briefe an mich (Leipzig, 1869, 3/1891; Eng. trans., 1869/R)
T. Devrient: Jugenderinnerungen (Stuttgart, 1905)
H. Devrient, ed: Briefwechsel zwischen Eduard und Therese Devrient (Stuttgart, 1909)
P.A. Merbach, ed: 'Briefe zwischen Eduard Devrient und J. Rietz', AMw, iii (1921), 321–55
R.K. Goldschmit: Eduard Devrients Bühnenreform am Karlsruher Hoftheater (Leipzig, 1921)
J. Bab: Die Devrients (Berlin, 1932)
R. Kabel, ed.: Eduard Devrient aus seinen Tagebüchern (Weimar, 1964)
W. Breig: 'Eduard Devrient und Richard Wagners Ring des Nibelungen: eine kommentierte Dokumentation', Richard Wagner und Karlsruhe, iv (Karlsruhe, 1987), 9–33
J.R. Turner: 'Mendelssohn's letters to Eduard Devrient: Filling in Some Gaps', Mendelssohn Studies, ed. R.L. Todd (Cambridge, 1992), 200–39

GAYNOR G. JONES

Devroye, Théodore Joseph [Vroye, Théodore Joseph de] (b Villers-la-Ville, Brabant, 19 Aug 1804; d Liège, 29 July 1873). Belgian music scholar. He studied for the priesthood at the seminaries in Mechelen and Liège and was ordained in Münster in 1828. He served at the church of St Christophe in Liège from 1830 until 1835, when he was appointed to the cathedral as canon and precentor for the diocese of Liège. His many activities within diocesan administration included the restoration of churches which had suffered from recent wars in Europe, the construction of organs and the rejuvenation of religious music. Between 1842 and 1862 he attempted to reform the faulty plainsong melodies which were being used in the Catholic church services throughout the diocese by editing a series of revised liturgical books based on the Medicean editions of Plantin and of Plomteux. Devroye's editions demonstrate his theory promoting precise correspondence between melodic and prosodic accents. He was president of the church music congresses held in Mechelen in 1863 and 1864, and was a member of several scholarly musical and archaeological societies in Belgium and Italy.

WRITINGS

Traité de plainchant à l'usage des séminaires (Liège, 1831, 2/1839)
Vesperale romanum sive Antiphonale romanum abreviatum cum Psalterio (Liège, 1842, 2/1850 [with a Supplementum officia propria diocesis Leodiensis], 3/1860) [FétisB cites an 1829 edn]
Manuale cantorum ad laudes et parvas horas, juxta Breviarium romanum, cum psalmis capitulis et orationibus (Liège, 1849)
Processionale romanum continens responsoria, hymnos, antiphonas psalmos in processionibus dicenda additis laudibus vespertinis de SS. Sacramento de S. Cruce de Beata M.V. et supplemento ex pontificali romano (Liège, 1849, 3/1870)
Graduale romanum juxta missale et officia novissime auctoritate Apostolica pro universali ecclesia approbata (Liège, 1851, 3/1869) [FétisB cites an 1831 edn]
Manuale cantorum officia propria Sanctorum ecclesiae cathedralis civitatis et diocesis Leodiensis (Liège, 1858) with X. van Elewyck: De la musique religieuse: les congrès de Malines (1863 et 1864) et de Paris (1860) et la législation de l'église sur cette matière (Paris, 1866)
Concours de musiques religieuses (Brussels, 1867)
Sur la peinture chrétienne (Antwerp, 1871)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1 (J. Quitin)
J. Helbig: 'Le chanoine Devroye', Bulletin de l'Institut archéologique liégeois, xiv (1878), 525

JOHN A. EMERSON

De Waart, Edo [Eduard] (b Amsterdam, 1 June 1941). Dutch conductor. After early studies on the piano he went to study the oboe with Haakon Stotijn at the Amsterdam Conservatory, graduating in 1962. In 1960 he studied conducting with Dean Dixon at Salzburg and served as co-principal oboe in the Amsterdam PO from 1961, and in the Concertgebouw Orchestra from 1963. Meanwhile he continued to study conducting, and a course in Hilversum with Franco Ferrara led to his début with the Netherlands Radio PO in 1964. Later that year he won the Mitropoulos Competition, and was immediately appointed assistant to Bernstein at the New York PO. In 1966 he became assistant conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra under Haitink and music director of the Netherlands Wind Ensemble, with which he made excellent recordings of works by Mozart and Strauss. From 1967 he was a conductor of the Rotterdam PO, subsequently becoming the orchestra's music director (1973–9). An intensive touring schedule strengthened his reputation abroad, leading to numerous engagements. Increasingly these involved opera: he made his début at the Santa Fe Opera in 1971, the Houston Grand Opera in 1975 and Covent Garden in 1976, and conducted the Netherlands Opera frequently from 1970. He made his début at the San Francisco SO in 1975; a year later he became principal guest conductor, and from 1977 to 1985 he was music director. In 1980 he directed a highly successful Ring cycle at the San Francisco Opera. With John Adams and Michael Steinberg he energetically promoted new music at San Francisco, giving the premières of works by Adams, Reich (whose Variations for Winds, Strings and Keyboards he has recorded) and others. He was music director of the Minnesota Orchestra from 1986 to 1995, and was appointed music director of the Netherlands Radio PO in 1989 and artistic director of the Sydney SO in 1992. De Waart remains deeply committed to new music and has directed collaborations with the Aboriginal Islander Dance Theatre in Sydney. His conducting is distinguished by clarity and a certain objectivity, and he is a notably sensitive accompanist to singers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Grier: 'Edo de Waart', Music and Musicians, xviii/10 (1969–70), 28
A. Blyth: 'Edo de Waart Talks', Gramophone, l (1972–3), 1303

CHARLES BARBER

Dezais, Joseph. French choreographer and dancing teacher, possibly related to PROSPER-DIDIER DESHAYES.

Dezède [D.Z., Dezèdes, Desaides, De Zaides], Nicolas [?Alexandre] (b ?1740–45; d Paris, 11 Sept 1792). Composer, active in France. The mystery of Dezède's ancestry has never been unravelled; he may have been the illegitimate son of a German prince, and his education was well provided for. He signed his works 'D.Z.', these being the only letters he knew his name contained. After going to Paris to complete his musical education, and in need of funds after the cessation of an annuity, he formed a successful partnership with Jacques-Marie Boutet de Monvel.

Monvel was responsible for the librettos of Dezède's most successful works; none of his remaining stage works had more than a few performances, and several were heavily criticized for faulty dramaturgy. Monvel, who subsequently worked with Dalayrac, specialized in rustic subjects, but with an up-to-date moral slant, as found in Julie (1772) and Les trois fermiers (1777). The popular success of Blaise et Babet (1783) was also due to deft characterization, especially the candour and naivety of the main couple. Alexis et Justine (1785) was a sentimental tale in the mould of Sedaine's Félix, ou L'enfant trouvé. Zulima(1778) and Alcindor (1787) were escapist 'magic' operas.

In other works, too, Dezède sided with the liberal forces of revolution. Péronne sauvée (1783; based on the siege of Péronne in 1536) focussed on a working-class wife, the historical Marie Fouré, who heroically attacks an English soldier and alerts the French to defend the city walls. Later, Dezède became involved in opéra comique projects at the Comédie-Française (renamed Théâtre de la Nation), writing both words and music for three works: Les trois noces (1790), Ferdinand (1790) and Paulin et Clairette (1792). Les trois noces was a true successor to Monvel, for it showed rural unrest being quelled by news of the king's (actual) appearance before the National Assembly on 4 February 1790, to take the Civic Oath.

Dezède's music was always recognized for the tunefulness of the simpler melodies, in romances, vaudevilles and other set pieces. Mozart paid 'Lison dormait dans un bocage' (from Julie) the compliment of his nine variations (K264); comparable melodies are 'Faut attendre' and 'Sans un petit brin d'amour' from Les trois fermiers (Lesure lists other popular printed extracts).

However, Dezède was not a naive musician. He tended towards a rich contemporary style, German-influenced and sometimes Italian-sounding in the vocal writing. Phrase structures are symmetrical, orchestration is varied and colourful, and the idiom follows that of the Mannheim school. Julie already shows Dezède's use of minor-mode expression and off-beat accentuation. Les trois fermiers extended his use of chromatic and dissonant harmony, and betrayed a penchant for strong tutti writing. This 'noisy' tendency in his work was regularly criticized in the Correspondance littéraire (see Tourneux). In Blaise et Babet Dezède began to inject more naturalistic verbal rhythms into his vocal line and to temper the general sophistication with 'rustic' musical formulas. But the overall effect was still of mannered and polished entertainment, though the result was seen as subversive in certain quarters: 'By a peculiarity hardly appropriate to the [peasant] characters, the arias are more elegant than the ordinary dialogue' (Mémoires secrets).

An experimental feature of one of the works for which Dezède wrote the music and the text (perhaps Les trois noces) was the use of prose for operatic musical setting. The attempt, which was perhaps not repeated in French until Gounod's abortive George Dandin (1873), is reported in Ducray-Duminil (1798) as follows: 'A little play with music by him was performed, in which the sung part was unrhymed; he had composed music even to bare prose, without metre or hemistich. This bizarre trial was unsuccessful'.

Blaise et Babet, with 145 performances to the end of 1791, was one of the two most popular operas at the Comédie-Italienne during the 1780s. Les trois fermiers was less so, but it received 165 performances between 1777 and 1791. Dezède's music was widely known outside France, from Russia to the Americas.

Dezède's daughter Florine (b ?1766; d by 1792) composed the comédie mêlée d'ariettes Lucette et Lucas (1, N.J. Forgeot), first given by the Comédie-Italienne at the Hôtel de Bourgogne on 8 November 1781. It was quite successful, being performed until 1792 and published in score (Paris, 1786).

WORKS

first performed in Paris unless otherwise stated; all printed works published in Paris

PCI – Comédie-Italienne

Julie (cmda, 3, J.M.B. de Monvel), PCI (Bourgogne), 28 Sept 1772 (*c*1773)

L'erreur d'un moment, ou La suite de Julie (cmda, 1, Monvel), PCI (Bourgogne), 14 June 1773 (*c*1774)

Le stratagème découvert (cmda, 2, Monvel), PCI (Bourgogne), 4 Oct 1773

Les trois fermiers (cmda, 2, Monvel), PCI (Bourgogne), 24 May 1777 (1777)

Fatmé, ou Le langage des fleurs (comédie-ballet, 2, J.P.A. Razins de Saint-Marc), Fontainebleau, 30 Oct 1777

Zulima, ou L'art et la nature (oc, 3, P. de Montignac, after de Lanoue [J.-B. Sauvé]: Zélisca), PCI (Bourgogne), 9 May 1778

Le porteur de chaise [Jérôme le porteur de chaise; Jérôme et Champagne] (comédie-parade, 2, Monvel), PCI (Bourgogne), 10 Dec 1778; rev. (1), 11 Jan 1781

Cécile (cmda, 3, Mabille, after Mme Riccoboni: Lettres de Milady Catesby), Versailles, 24 Feb 1780; PCI (Bourgogne), 26 Feb 1780, F-Pn

A trompeur, trompeur et demi, ou Les torts du sentiment (cmda, 1, E.L. Billardon de Sauvigny), PCI (Bourgogne), 3 May 1780

Blaise et Babet, ou La suite des trois fermiers (cmda, 2, Monvel), Versailles, 4 April 1783; PCI (Favart), 30 June 1783 (1784)

Péronne sauvée (opéra, 4, Billardon de Sauvigny), Opéra, 27 May 1783, Pc, Po

Le véritable Figaro, 1784 (oc, 3, Billardon de Sauvigny) [unperf. because it libelled Beaumarchais; see Tourneux, Nov 1784]

Alexis et Justine (comédie lyrique mêlée d'ariettes, 2, Monvel, after The Thousand and One Nights, Versailles, 14 Jan 1785; PCI (Favart), 17 Jan 1785 (1785)

Alcindor (opéra-féerie, 3, M.A.J. Rochon de Chabannes), Opéra, 17 April 1787, Po

Auguste et Théodore, ou Les deux pages (comédie mêlée de chant, 2, L.F. Faur, after J.J. Engel: Der Edelknabe), Comédie-Française, 6 March 1789

Les trois noces (pièce champêtre, 1, Dezède), Nation, 23 Feb 1790

Ferdinand, ou La suite des deux pages (comédie, 3, Dezède), PCI (Favart), 19 June 1790

Paulin et Clairette, ou Les deux espiègles (comédie, 2, Dezède), Nation, 5 Jan 1792

La fête de la cinquantaine (opéra, 2, Faur), Amis de la Patrie, 9 Jan 1796 (1796)

Unfinished: Amadis (opéra); Inez de Castro (opéra)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

[L. Petit de Bachaumont and others]: Mémoires secrets pour servir à l'histoire de la république des lettres en France (London, 1777–89)

F.G. Ducray-Duminil: 'Sur Dezède', Courrier des spectacles (22 pluviôse VI [10 Feb 1798])

A. Pougin: 'Dezède', RGMP, xxix (1862); also pubd separately (Paris, 1862)

M. Tourneux, ed.: Correspondance littéraire, philosophique et critique par Grimm, Diderot, Raynal, Meister, etc. (Paris, 1877–82)

A. Danicourt, ed.: Péronne sauvée (Péronne, 1879)

C.D. Brenner: The Théâtre Italien: its Repertory 1716–1793 (Berkeley, 1961)

F. Lesure: Catalogue de la musique imprimée avant 1800 conservée dans les bibliothèques publiques de Paris (Paris, 1981)

J.B. Kopp: The 'Drame Lyrique': a Study in the Esthetics of Opéra-Comique, 1762–1791 (diss., U. of Pennsylvania, 1982)

D. Charlton: Grétry and the Growth of Opéra-Comique (Cambridge, 1986)

D. Charlton: 'The Dramaturgy of Grand Opéra: Some Origins', IMSCR XIV: Bologna 1987, 853–8

H. Macdonald: 'The Prose Libretto', COJ, i (1989), 155–66

M. Noiray: 'Les créations d'opéra à Paris de 1790 à 1794', Orphée phrygien: les musiques de la Révolution, ed. J.R. Julien and J.C. Klein (Paris, 1989), 193–203

DAVID CHARLTON

Dezime (Ger.). See TENTH.

D'Haene, Rafaël (b Gullegem, 29 Sept 1943). Belgian composer. He studied at the Brussels Conservatory and obtained first prizes in harmony with Vic Legley, counterpoint with Jean Louël and fugue with Marcel Quinet. He was also taught the piano by Eduardo del Pueyo. During one year he studied composition with Dutilleux at the Ecole Normale de Musique in Paris (licentiate in composition, 1968). Afterwards he studied composition for three more years at the Chapelle Musicale Reine Elisabeth with Legley. In 1970 he was appointed professor of harmony, counterpoint and fugue at the Brussels Conservatory, where he later taught composition and analysis. Since 1986 he has also taught at the Chapelle Musicale Reine Elisabeth. His compositions have received national and international awards, including the Oscar Esplá Prize in Alicante for the cantata Klage der Ariadne (1972) and the Lili Boulanger Prize (1977) for his entire output.

D'Haene declared that he would have liked to put a brake on the swift, uncontrollable evolution of the 20th century. He sees experimentation as a sign of inability which can never lead to lasting values and condemns aggressiveness as an easy solution. His aesthetic standpoint is close to that of composers of the 19th century, resting on the authentic sound colour of each instrument, strict form, unequivocal tempo, emotional and dramatic intensity, extreme dynamics and evolution from tiny cells.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Capriccio, 1970; Praeludia, 1975; Lettres persanes, sym. sketches after C. Montesquieu, 1986; Vn Conc., 1990; Reminiscenza, sym. poem, 1995; Sinfonica coreografica, 1997

Vocal: Klage der Ariadne (cant., F. Nietzsche), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1971; 5 Lieder (P. Van Ostaijen), Mez, orch, 1972; Impressions (O. Wilde), song cycle, Mez, pf, 1977; Sonette an Orpheus (3 songs, R.M. Rilke), S, orch, 1987

Chbr: 9 pieces, pf, 1968; Sonata, tpt, pf, 1969; Str Qt, 1970; Intermèdes, va, 1972; 6 canzoni, pf, 1981; Cassazione, pf trio, 1985; Dityramben, pf trio, 1988; Str Trio, 1993

Principal publisher: CeBeDeM

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AMe

M. Delaere, Y. Knockaert and H. Sabbe: Nieuwe muziek in Vlaanderen (Bruges, 1998), 121–2

DIANA VON VOLBORTH-DANYS

Ḍhāk [ḍhāk, ḍhakkā, ḍeru]. A term used since medieval times for various types of Indian drum.

The ḍhakkā documented in medieval Sanskrit texts was a large cylindrical or barrel-shaped drum. Referred to in the 12th-century Kashmiri chronicle Rājataraṅgiṇī as gajaḍhakkā('elephant drum') and jayaḍhakkā ('victory drum'), these terms suggest they were large, loud public instruments (in modern Bengali 'to beat the ḍhāk' means to make a great commotion).

In southern Bihar the ḍhāk is a large wooden drum from 65 to 95 cm long, with two heads equal in size, stretched over bamboo hoops and laced to the body. Played by traditional musicians, it is similar in construction to the ḍhollū of southern Bihar but much larger and cylindrical or slightly barrel-shaped. The drum hangs from the player's left shoulder and is held at his left side with its goatskin or calfhide playing-head facing forward. He beats the head with thin reed sticks, one in each hand, or with a thick wooden stick in his right hand and a bamboo stick in his left. The drum's rear head is of ox-hide, with a temporary paste of resin and/or burnt oil residue applied in a circular patch at the centre. The ḍhāk has traditionally been associated with hunting and warfare. In the early years of the 20th century it was apparently played by some Ādivāsī groups, particularly the Muṇḍā, in percussion ensembles accompanying certain communal dances. It is now known, however, primarily as a drum of certain leather-working communities, such as the Ghāsi and Goṛāit. These musicians play it in an ensemble at weddings and for the *paīki*sword dance.

The ḍhāk of Bengal (India and Bangladesh) is a large wooden barrel-shaped drum of approximately equal diameter and length. Its two heads are braced by leather lacings; metal tuning-rings convert the V-shape of the lacing into that of a Y. The drum is hung aslant in front of the body by a shoulder-strap and played on the upper head with two cane sticks, often with the brass gong kā̃sar. It is very loud and is associated especially with Śaiva-Śākta religious festivals (worship of Śiva or his consort goddesses Dūrga, Kāli etc.) such as Caṙak (the hook-swinging festival), Gajan (a ritual ascetic period with mime) and Dūrga Pūjā. The player often dances while drumming and decorates the drum with feathers.

In Rajasthan 'ḍhāk' denotes a double-headed hourglass drum with variable tension. It is also called ḍeru, a name probably derived from the Sanskrit term ḍamaru, denoting another drum of similar shape, which is widespread in North and South India. Over both openings of the wooden waisted body (about 25 cm high) are placed goatskins, previously stretched on a wooden hoop and in diameter slightly greater than the openings (about 12 cm). A string laced in a V-shaped pattern connects the two hoops, holding the skins against the body. The tension can be varied during playing by squeezing or relaxing (with the hand or the foot) a double looping of cord which girdles the centre of the lacing where the body narrows. The pressure on the skins changes the pitch. Only one head is beaten, with a stick. The ḍhāk is always played with thālī(percussion trays) as an accompaniment to epic-religious songs, principally among the Bhil and Garasia Ādivāsī groups of the Aravalli Hills.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.C. Roy: The Mundas and their Country (Calcutta, 1912/R)

C. Sachs: Die Musikinstrumente Indiens und Indonesiens (Berlin and Leipzig, 1914, 2/1923), 75

S.C. Roy: The Orāons of Chōtā Nāgpur (Calcutta, 1915)

J. Hoffmann and A. van Emelen: Encyclopaedia mundarica (Patna, 1938–50)

K.S. Kothari: Indian Folk Musical Instruments (New Delhi, 1968)

O. Prasad: Munda: Music and Dance (diss., Ranchi U., 1971)

S. Raya: Music of Eastern India: Vocal Music in Bengali, Oriya, Assamese and Manipuri with Special Emphasis on Bengali (Calcutta, 1973, 2/1985)

K. Kothari: Folk Musical Instruments of Rajasthan (Borunda, 1977)

B.C. Deva: Musical Instruments of India (Calcutta, 1978)

CAROL M. BABIRACKI, ALASTAIR DICK, GENEVIÈVE DOURNON/R

D'Harcourt, Marguerite Béclard. See BÉCLARD D'HARCOURT, MARGUERITE.

Dharmawan, Dwiki (b Bandung, Java, 1966). Indonesian composer and performer. After piano lessons from the age of seven, he began studying jazz piano with Elfa Secoria six years later. In 1984 Dharmawan co-formed the group Krakatau, representing Indonesia in the Yamaha Light Music Contest in Tokyo, where he received the award for best keyboard performance. After producing several jazz albums, in 1992 he began to experiment with placing elements of Sundanese traditional music in a jazz context. In the resulting album, 'Mystical Mist', in which he was joined by Trie Utami (vocals), Adhe Rudiana (percussion) and Yoyon Dharsono (rebab, suling, tarawangsa, tarompet, kacapi and vocals), he was brilliantly successful in fusing Sundanese elements with a jazz idiom. Krakatau's overseas début came in 1997 at the Manly International Jazz Festival in Australia. Also well known as an arranger in Indonesia, Dharmawan has written many orchestral accompaniments for Indonesian pop singers on TV broadcasts.

FRANKI RADEN

D'Hautell [D'hotel], Nicolas. See DÔTHEL, NICOLAS.

Dhelfer [D'Helfert, D'Helpher], Charles. See HELFER, CHARLES D'.

Dhikr [zikr] (Arab.: 'recollection of God'). A term used to designate a type of Sufi ceremony that often involves music.

See also AFGHANISTAN, §I, 4; EGYPT, §II, 1; IRAN, §III, 2(i); IRAQ, §II, 4; ISLAMIC RELIGIOUS MUSIC, §II, 1, 3; and SYRIA, §2(i).

Ḍhol. A term for different types of large cylindrical or barrel drum of South Asia. They are often described, together with the smaller ḌHOLAK as cylindrical, but most bulge in the middle, some slightly, some considerably. The names ḍholak and ḍholkī, mean literally 'small ḍhol', but in almost all cases the two differ in structure, playing technique and probably origin, quite apart from their difference in size.

Ḍhol are usually of wood, with two heads; the skins are attached to wooden hoops and laced by cords or ropes in a V-shape converted into a Y by metal tuning-rings or other devices (fig.1). An unusual feature of many ḍhol is that they are played with the treble head to the left, struck by the hand or a light stick. A heavier stick (ḍankā, daunko), often curved, is used for beating the right (bass) head, which is larger and of thicker skin. The pitch may be lowered by an interior tuning-load of resin, another sticky substance or a combination of the two. The drums are usually played standing, supported horizontally or diagonally before the player by a shoulder-strap, as the leading drum in outdoor music, together with struck metal idiophones or with other drums (such as kettledrums). Some ḍhol (such as those of Rajasthan), however, are played on the ground by a seated player, with the hands. A prominent feature of some ḍhol traditions is the use of thump strokes (knee, elbow etc.) in virtuoso playing.

In a smaller group of South Asian ḍhol the length of the drum is roughly equal to its widest diameter, or less. These may be considered shallow barrel drums, and they may be directly attributable to West Asian influence. They include the Rajasthani ḍhol, virtually cylindrical, and the bulging ḍhol of Garhwal (Uttar Pradesh). The latter is about 48 cm at its widest and of similar length; the goatskin heads (the skin of a male deer is sometimes used for the right head) are roughly 38 cm in diameter. The left head is struck with the fingers (sometimes of both hands), and the right with fingers, the knee or a stick about 46 cm long and wider (by about 5 cm) at the top. It is played, together with the kettledrum damaū, by members of the Āujī caste. The natõ kī ḍholak ('acrobat's ḍholak') of Rajasthan (about 27 cm long and 23 cm wide at the heads) is truly a 'small ḍhol', but has the heads reversed, the right treble played with the hand and the left bass, with an interior tuning-load, with a stick. The dolu of Karnataka has a diameter (38 cm) more than twice its length (17 cm); it is cylindrical and the two heads are evenly pitched.

1. Ḍhol accompanied by thālī (struck metal idiophones), Kishangarh, Rajasthan

The greater number of South Asian ḍhol, however, and the duhl of Sind and drokol or ḍhol of Baluchistan, are large barrel drums, with a length exceeding the diameter in a ratio of approximately 5:4. Those of Sind, Punjab, Gujarat, Bengal and Orissa have a treble-left position and are played with a large stick (right) and the hand or a thin stick (left). These features were also found in the elongated barrel drum paṭaha of ancient and medieval India. The duhl prominent in Sindi music has a large repertory of strokes, rhythms and metres appropriate to its many contexts, which include government and public announcements; military, gathering and alarm calls; community (e.g. agricultural) work; the accompaniment of wedding parties, dancing, wrestling and acrobats; religious occasions; mourning (including Muḥarram); and, together with the kettledrums bher and nagārā, the ceremonies at the shrines of saints (such as that of Shah Abdul Latif at Bhitshah), playing in the naubat ensemble. In several contexts (e.g. wrestling) long suites of different rhythms (dass) are played to the accompaniment of the śahnāī (oboe) or, more recently, the bagpipe.

The ḌHĀK, a very large barrel drum of Bengal and Bihar, can be seen as a sub-type of the ḍhol. The ḍhol of Kashmir and that of Kumaon (Uttar Pradesh), and also the Baluchi drokol, while otherwise of this large barrel type, have their heads reversed, with the deeper side to the left. The Kashmiri ḍhol, about 40 cm long and 33 cm in diameter, is played on the right head with a thin stick and on the thicker left head with a heavier one by the Bhāṇḍ (mime community) in bhāṇḍ jeshna (traditional theatre), along with kettledrums (nagāṛā) and oboes (sūrnāī). (The combination of ḍhol, kettledrums and oboes is also very common throughout South Asia, in community dancing, wedding processions and at shrines etc.) The ḍhol of Kumaon is similarly played: here the left head has an interior tuning-load to lower the pitch. It is about 42 cm long and 34 cm in diameter. The ḍhol of the North-East (Assam, Manipur), while of this general type, are played with the hands.

2. Ḍhol of the Maria Gond people, Bastar district, Madhya Pradesh, accompanying the 'buffalo dance'

The name ḍhol is also found in the South, where, however, in the forms tavil (see NĀGASVARAM) and daula (or davula, Sri Lanka), it denotes different types of drum: the former, though a gently tapering barrel, about 44 cm long and 26 cm wide at the head, has large hoops which relate it to the old Indian 'raised-barrel' type; the latter is a long cylinder or raised-end type similar to the pambai of the South.

The ḍhol of Rajasthan, a double-headed cylindrical drum, may have a body of wood (preferred by Ādivāsī peoples) or of metal sheets (assembled vertically and riveted edge to edge). Medium-size drums have heads of goatskin, large ones (80 cm in diameter) of cowhide. The edge of the skin is wrapped round a kind of hoop that encloses the opening of the body. The two membranes are connected by Y-lacing, made of thick cotton cord, and sliding metal rings modify the tension. This arrangement does not always allow very precise tuning. The two skins have different pitches: the deeper, right head (nar: 'male'), weighted by a paste of ashes, metal filings and oil applied to the interior centre of the skin, is struck with a curved stick; the higher, left head (mādā: 'female') is beaten with the palm and fingers of the left hand. Sometimes a second player beats the mādā head with two thin sticks.

This ḍhol has two playing positions according to whether the player is standing or sitting. When played standing the instrument is hung from a strap over his shoulder; when played sitting it is placed on the ground in front of the player and the professional female singers (ḍholi) and struck with the hands. By reason of its size and powerful, deep sonority the ḍhol is an open-air instrument. It is often accompanied by other percussion (generally the percussion tray thālī). It is considered a religious and auspicious instrument, and plays a very important role also in family and social ceremonies and celebrations, accompanying songs and dances. It also serves as an alarm instrument, to alert and gather the village community in case of emergency (such as floods, dacoīt-attacks etc.).

The ḍhol of the Hill Maria people of Bastar district, Madhya Pradesh, has a cylindrical wooden body, about a metre long and 30 cm in diameter; the heads are of cowhide and are connected to each other by thongs in V-lacing. Each player carries the drum horizontally before him, hung from his neck by a strap (fig.2). The left head is beaten with the hand, the right with a stick. Important in Maria culture, ḍhol accompany the marriage 'buffalo dance' (so called for its imitative movements and the ceremonial buffalo-horn headdress of the young men who play the ḍhol while dancing).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveI ('Paṭaha'; A. Dick)

W. Kaufmann: 'The Musical Instruments of the Hill Maria, Jhoria and Bastar Maria Gond Tribes', EthM, v (1961), 1–9

K.S. Kothari: Indian Folk Musical Instruments (New Delhi, 1968)

N.A. Jairazbhoy: 'A Preliminary Survey of the Oboe in India', EthM, xiv (1970), 375–88

S. Ray: Music of Eastern India (Calcutta, 1973)

A. Chandola: Folk Drumming in the Himalayas (New York, 1977)

K. Kothari: Folk Musical Instruments of Rajasthan (Borunda, 1977)

B.C. Deva: Musical Instruments of India (Calcutta, 1978)

ALASTAIR DICK/R, GENEVIÈVE DOURNON/R

Ḍholak [ḍholkī, ḍhulkī, ḍōlak, ḍulki]. Double-headed cylindrical or barrel drums of South Asia. They are of medium size, and have been described as cylindrical drums but they often taper at the ends. The name is a diminutive of ḌHOL, but this drum is of a distinct type, with its own historical roots.

1. The North Indian ḍholak or ḍholki. 2. The East-Central Ādivāsī ḍholkī, ḍhulkī or ḍulki. 3. The Sri Lankan ḍōlak.

1. THE NORTH INDIAN 'ḌHOLAK' OR 'ḌHOLKI'. Drums of this name and type, with some variation in size, are widely distributed in northern and central South Asia. They are best described as elongated barrel drums: the ratio of length to maximum diameter usually exceeds two to one, and the width at the centre is usually larger than at the heads. In this they contrast with the larger ḍhol, where the ratio of width to length approaches, or sometimes exceeds, one to one. They also differ from the tuned elongated barrel drums, mṛdaṅga, in that they do not have a permanent hardened tuning-paste. They are predominantly played with the fingers.

Though the name ḍholak is Persian, it does not seem to occur in the earlier Sultanate records. Both the ḍhol and the *ḍholak*can be traced back to the indigenous drum paṭaha. The *ḍholak*became important especially in the Mughal period (1526–1857) as a professional and court-music drum, but also as an amateur and domestic instrument, often played by women.

Modern ḍholak or ḍholki are of wood, about 40 to 50 cm long and with a diameter at the two equal heads of around 20 cm. The skins are fitted on stiff leather hoops and braced with cotton cords laced in a V pattern converted to a Y by metal tuning-rings or tension-loops towards the right head. The pitch of the left head is usually lowered by a resinous tuning-load stuck to the interior of the skin. Though not tuned to a precise pitch the heads differ in pitch and timbre. The drum is played on the lap, or on the ground, with hand and finger strokes. The right fingers produce a limited variety of sounds on or near the rim, while the left hand has two main strokes, an open resonant tap and a closed flat-hand slap. The latter also produces distinctive pitch-variation by pressure of the heel of the palm. Rolls, of the right fingers and from head to head, are also common.

The ḍholak survives chiefly in North-Central and North-West India and Pakistan, among performers such as the qawwāl (singers of Muslim devotional music, qawwālī), the Maṅganiyār musicians of Rajasthan etc. It is also still found as a domestic instrument, especially played by women, in areas such as Sind, Pakistan, thus continuing the tradition often described or depicted in Mughal and provincial court sources, where it was played by the women of the palace to accompany birth and wedding songs and sometimes also dance.

2. The East-Central Ādivāsī 'ḌHOLKĪ', 'ḌHULKĪ' or 'ḌULKI'. This version of the drum is found in southern Bihar, among non-Ādivāsī musicians (ḍholkī, ḍhulkī) and certain Ādivāsī groups, such as the Muṇḍā (ḍulkī).

Ḍholkī are of various sizes but most commonly range from about 50 to 65 cm long and 35 to 45 cm deep at the widest part. The hollow shell of the non-Ādivāsī ḍholkī, carved from a single block of wood, may be slightly barrel-shaped or, in some cases, almost cylindrical, with heads of approximately the same size, from 25 to 29 cm. Muṇḍāri ḍulki are generally barrel-shaped, with one head about 28 cm in diameter and the other, usually played with the right hand, about 25 cm in diameter. The smaller head is made of goatskin and the larger, deeper in pitch, of unsplit calfhide. A paste of iron filings or tree resin and oil is often applied to the centre of the outer surface of the left head. Both heads of the Muṇḍāri ḍulki also have a paste of cooked flour or incense and oil on their inner surfaces: one layer of the paste covers the entire inner surface of the larger head, and several very thin layers cover a circular patch in the centre of the smaller one.

Ḍholkī shells may be made by anyone, but the heads are prepared and attached by members of leatherworking communities, such as the Ghā̃ si, Goṛāit or Mahali. Each head is fitted with a leather, straw or wooden hoop and both skin and hoop are secured by leather or cotton cord laces running from one head to the other in a V-shaped pattern. Small metal rings, each placed round a pair of adjacent laces, regulate the tension of the heads. The ḍholki used in the chau(cho) dance ensemble of south-eastern Bihar and West Bengal is distinct in that its right head is secured by a wide iron hoop which stretches the skin downwards, 4 to 5 cm away from the opening of the shell.

The player, normally a man, holds the drum horizontally before him, slung from his neck by a leather or cloth strap. The right head is played directly with the hand and the left is beaten with a stick, slightly wider at its playing end and sometimes wrapped in hide. Drumstrokes and patterns are represented by vocalizations, which may vary considerably from village to village and even from drummer to drummer. Non-Ādivāsī folk musicians in southern Bihar play ḍholkī in an ensemble of nagaṛa and karah drums to accompany mardana jhumar ('women's jhumar'), domkac (marriage season), songs and dances, including the paīki (sword-dance). In certain eastern areas, the ḍholkī is also the principal accompanying instrument in staged solo and small group singing.

The Muṇḍāri ḍulki was probably borrowed from neighbouring non-Ādivāsī musicians, appearing first in Muṇḍāri plains villages and eventually spreading to the more isolated hills. In the early 20th century the ḍulki was used as a supporting drum in the percussion ensemble of the drums dumaṇg, *nagaṛa*and rabaga and the cymbals cuā̃, which accompanied all outdoor Muṇḍāri communal dancing and singing. At least two generations ago the ḍulki began to assume the musical role of the *dumaṇg*as the lead drum in the ensemble. In the Muṇḍāri percussion ensemble one ḍulki player is now recognized by the other drummers as the ensemble leader. One or more ḍulki are also necessary in processions and indoor group singing. Unlike the Muṇḍāri nagaṛa, ḍulki are owned by individuals rather than by a village or community. In traditional Muṇḍāri song texts the *ḍulki*is usually paired with the dumaṅg.

3. The Sri Lankan 'ḌŌLAK'. This drum is used extensively in Sri Lanka, in both Buddhist and Hindu communities, to accompany musical forms imported from India. It is now usually conical in shape, with a badama spot (which affects the tuning and timbre) on one head. The hemp (or nylon) braces pass lengthways down the drum, through metal rings and over wooden blocks, both of which are used for tuning.

The term is also used more or less indiscriminately in Sri Lanka to denote any folk or popular drum, those that are more properly termed demala-berē, for example, often being called ḍōlak.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NORTH INDIAN

Grove6 ('Pakistan'; R. Qureshi)
N.A. Willard: A Treatise on the Music of Hindustan [1834], repr. in S.M. Tagore: Hindu Music from Various Authors (Calcutta, 1875, 2/1882/R)
N.A. Baloch: Musical Instruments of the Lower Indus Valley of Sind (Hyderabad, 1966)
K.S. Kothari: Indian Folk Musical Instruments (New Delhi, 1968)

ĀDIVĀSĪ

J. Hoffmann and A. van Emelen: 'Ḍhulki, ḍulki', Encyclopaedia mundarica (Patna, 1930–41), 1226 only
K.S. Kothari: Indian Folk Musical Instruments (New Delhi, 1968), 42–4
O. Prasad: Munda: Music and Dance (diss., Ranchi U., 1971), 69–70
B.C. Deva: Musical Instruments of India: their History and Development (Calcutta, 1978), 84 only

ALASTAIR DICK (1), CAROL M. BABIRACKI (2), NATALIE WEBBER (3)

Dhomont, Francis (b Paris, 2 Nov 1926). French composer, naturalized Canadian. He studied with Ginette Waldmeier, Koechlin and Nadia Boulanger. After becoming interested in magnetic wire recording in 1947, he began to experiment with electro-acoustic composition. In 1950 he settled in Provence, where he was a founder-member, and eventually president, of the Musique-Multiples festival (1975–9). In 1979 he relocated to Montreal where, as a professor in electro-acoustic music at the university, he influenced a generation of Canadian composers. His programmes on electro-acoustic music have been broadcast on Radio France and Radio Canada. His writings on acousmatic music are at times polemical, defending the specificity of the genre.

Dhomont's compositions are mainly acousmatic. They present an enigmatic discourse involving shifts of sense, space, place and atmosphere, as well as powerful archetypes of tension and relaxation, and processes of recall possessing a rare expressive quality. Space is adroitly exploited in his three poetic reveries on wandering (Cycle de l'errance): Points de fuite (1982), . . . mourir un peu (1984) and Espace/escape (1989). The majority of his works use extra-musical sound sources, sometimes for their metaphorical or connotative significance, sometimes for their purely morphological potential as sounds. In later works, such as Lettre de Sarajevo (1995–6), the sonic fabric is more abstract, but the expression is no less profound or dramatic. Psychoanalytical theory has inspired works belonging to the Cycle des profondeurs: Sous le regard d'un soleil noir (1979–81), in which the voice is used with unbearably tragic intensity, and the dream-like Forêt profonde (1994–6). Citation, in a manner more allusive than actual, is explored in Chiaroscuro (1987) and Cycle du son (1989–98).

WORKS
(selective list)

all electro-acoustic

Cycle de l'errance: Points de fuite, 1982; . . . mourir un peu, 1984; Espace/escape, 1989

Cycle des profondeurs: Sous le regard d'un soleil noir, 1979–81; Forêt profonde, 1994–6

Cycle du son: Novars, 1989; Objets retrouvés, 1996; AvatArsSon, 1998; Phonurgie, 1998

Other works: Syntagmes, 1975; Mais laisserons-nous mourir Arianna, 1979; Drôles d'oiseaux, 1985; Signé Dionysos, 1986; Chiaroscuro, 1987; Poe-Debussy, autour de la Maison Usher (music theatre, M. Forget), 1988; Chroniques de la lumière, 1989; Simulacres: un autoportrait (radio broadcast), 1991; Figures de la nuit (radio broadcast), 1992; Lettre de Sarajevo, 1995–6; En cuerdas, 1998; Je te salue, vieil océan!, 1998–9; Les moirures du temps, 1999

MSS in Canadian Music Centre, Montreal

Principal recording company: empreintes DIGITALes

WRITINGS

'Petite apologie de l'art des sons fixés', Circuit, iv/1–2 (1993), 55–66

'Is there a Quebec Sound?', Organised Sound, i (1996), 23–8

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Roy: 'Form and Referential Citation in a Work by Francis Dhomont', Organised Sound, i/1 (1996), 29–41

A. Lewis: 'Francis Dhomont's Novars', Journal of New Music Research, xxvii (1998), 67–83

'Entretien avec R.E. Paes', Monitor, vi (1999), 10–14

S. Roy: L'analyse de la musique acousmatique: bilan et propositions (diss., U. of Montreal, 2000) [incl. analysis of Points de fuite]

STÉPHANE ROY

D'Hooghe, Clement (Vital Ferdinand) (b Temse, 21 April 1899; d Wilrijk, 1 April 1951). Belgian organist and composer. He studied at the Antwerp Conservatory and privately with Van Nuffel and Gilson. He completed his organ studies with Marcel Dupré in Paris. He served as organist at several Antwerp churches, notably St Pauluskerk (1926–51). He was director of the Berchem Music Academy and he taught at the Antwerp Conservatory as professor of transposition and harmony (1942–51). A brilliant organ virtuoso, he gave recitals in Belgium and abroad. The recipient of several composition prizes (including the Albert de Vleeshouwer, 1927), he wrote over 400 works in different genres: masses, cantatas, songs, orchestral pieces, ballets, music for plays, chamber music and works for piano and organ. Many choral pieces and cantatas were written for special occasions. His compositions show facility and, within a style of classical form and rich harmony, an attempt to express his personal feelings in a manner that is direct, joyful and often humorous.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Kaboutersballet, 1942; incid. music

Orch: Preludium, 1927; Variaties op een Zweeds lied, 1936; Symfonisch gedicht in vorm van triptiek, 1939; Legende, vc, orch, 1942; Romantisch concerto, pf, orch, 1947; Orkestsuite, 1942

Vocal-orch: L'orage (A. de Ségur), SATB, orch, 1927; Missa in honorem S Pauli, 2 equal vv, org, 1930; Vrede, children's cant. (W. Gijssels), chorus, orch, 1933; Lauda anima mea Dominum (Ps cxlv), SATB, org, orch, 1941; Kerstcantate (F. Eykens), S, girls' chorus, orch, 1950

Chbr: Pf trio, 1938; Trio, vn, va, pf, 1938; Pf Trio, 1939; Pf Qt, 1939; Str Trio, 1940; Str Qt, 1944; Sonata, vc, pf, 1945; Luim (Caprice), 2 vn, vc, pf, 1948

Songs, incl. many for children

Music for org, pf

Principal publishers: Cnudde, Crantz, Davidsfonds, De Ring, Metropolis, Schott, Willemsfonds

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. De Schrijver: 'Clement D'Hooghe', Levende componisten uit Vlaanderen 1865–1900 (Leuven, 1954), 148–52

L. Wouters: Repertorium van de werken van Clement D'Hooghe (Temse, 1995)

CORNEEL MERTENS/YVES KNOCKAERT

Dhrupad (Hin., from Sanskrit dhruva: 'fixed, refrain' and pada: 'poem, song'; Urdu dhurpad). A type of vocal composition in North Indian art-music, and the style in which such compositions are performed (see INDIA, §III, 5(i) and (iii)(a)). The composition has two or four rhymed lines of verse, in Hindi, usually on religious (Hindu or Islamic) or philosophical themes (including musical theory). These are set to music in any classical mode (rāg), and in one of a number of special metres (tāla; see INDIA, §III, 4(iv)). Dhrupad is sung by one or two singers, usually male; accompaniment is provided by the drone lute tambūrā (or tānpurā) and the barrel drum pakhāvaj. The song is introduced by an extended, meditative ālāp, and followed by vigorous rhythmic variations (laykārī). The vocal style is austere with restrained ornamentation. It is considered to be the oldest and 'purest' style of Hindustani music, and to be the basis of other vocal and instrumental styles such as khayāl. The dhrupad style itself is rendered instrumentally on the bīn and surbahār (see INDIA, §III, 6(i)). The origins of dhrupad are traditionally ascribed to the court of Mān Singh Tomar of Gwalior (1486–1516); introduced by Tānsen and other Gwalior singers to the court of Akbar (1556–1605), it became the preferred musical style at the Mughal court. Although largely supplanted by khayāl from the 18th century onwards, it has survived to the present day and has undergone a recent revival. 20th-century exponents included several members of the famous Dagar family.

RICHARD WIDDESS

Di [dizi]. Transverse flute of the Han Chinese. Historically known by a variety of different names (e.g. hengchui, hengdi), the Chinese transverse flute is now generally known as di or dizi, though regional names exist as well.

The di is constructed from various species of bamboo, such as 'purple bamboo' (zizhu) and 'arrow bamboo' (jianzhu). The tube is closed at the blowing end with a cork, but open at the bottom (fig.1). Distributed along the upper surface are a blow-hole, membrane hole and six finger-holes, with two end-holes on the underside which define the length of the vibrating air column and may be used to attach a string or tassel. Other decorative holes may appear below these. Finger-holes on traditional flutes are roughly equidistant, producing a temperament of mixed whole-tone and three-quarter-tone intervals. The flute is normally wrapped with a dozen or more windings of silk thread or nylon line, and often tipped on both ends with decorative bone fittings. Covering the membrane hole is a vibrating membrane (dimo), a very thin piece of skin peeled from the inner surface of a section of bamboo or reed, attached with a sticky water-soluble substance such as peach sap. Proper adjustment of the membrane, requiring thin lateral wrinkles, is essential to production of the characteristic buzzing tone. In performance, the flute is held either to the right or the left.

1. Construction of the di (transverse flute)

Two basic types of di are usually differentiated, qudi and bangdi. The qudi ('song flute') is the prevailing 'southern' type, employed in the traditions of central-eastern China, especially in Jiangnan sizhu and kunqu opera (where it is often called kundi). The qudi pitched in A (all holes covered) is externally about 58 cm or more in length, though the vibrating air column (distance between the blow-hole and lower end-holes) is nearly half this (about 34 cm). Its usual range is two octaves and one tone (a' to b'''). A variant known as 'dragon-head flute' (longtou di), well documented from the 14th century onwards as an instrument used in Confucian rituals, is distinctive in that it is usually lacquered red, with carved wooden images of a dragon head and tail mounted on each end.

The bangdi, also known as gaodi ('high flute') or duandi ('short flute'), is the prevailing 'northern' type, employed in genres such as bangzi opera and chuige, and in a large solo repertory composed during the 20th century. While structurally the same as the qudi, the bangdi is shorter. For flutes pitched in D (all holes covered), the external length is about 45 cm (the vibrating air column is about 25 cm). Bangdi flutes are pitched in other keys as well (especially E and C). Whereas the qudi is normally associated with slow and lyrical melodies of the Jiangnan region, bangdi melodies are generally lively, requiring a more animated performance style. In the far south of China, while the transverse flute is traditionally less important than the XIAO vertical flute, a local bangdi type is often employed in Chaozhou music.

Most Chinese scholars believe that the di was introduced into China from Central Asia (Xiyu) early in the Han dynasty (206 BCE–220 CE). In fact, China already had a transverse flute type before the Han, a ritual instrument known as chi, with its larger internal diameter and finger-holes on a surface 90 degrees from the blow-hole. It is very likely that this flute in some way influenced the development of the di. Several bamboo flutes resembling the ancient chi have been uncovered from early sites (Liu, 1987, pp. 67–8, 92, 93).

The Han period di was known as hengchui ('transverse blow') and used in outdoor military ensembles. It did not have the membrane hole characteristic of later flutes. Beginning in the 6th century, transverse flutes were more commonly known as hengdi ('transverse flute'), though other names were used as well. Employed in Tang (618–907) court entertainment ensembles together with bili

2. Di (transverse flute) of the Han Chinese

(reed-pipe) and sheng (mouth-organ), hengdi flutes had six or seven finger-holes, but still no membrane. Of the many instruments sent to Japan during this period, four seven-hole hengdi (Japanese: ōteki) are preserved at the Shōsōin repository. The present-day Japanese ryūteki closely resembles these flutes. The membrane was first mentioned in the early 12th-century treatise Yueshu. During the Ming dynasty (1368–1644) the qudi and bangdi (each with six finger-holes and membrane) became leading instruments in kunqu and bangzi operas, as well as in instrumental ensemble genres.

During the mid-20th century, as musical ideals shifted and new compositions called for equal-tempered scales, makers repositioned finger-holes accordingly (though traditional flutes such as that used in kunqu accompaniment remained unchanged). A fully chromatic 'new flute' (xindi) was also invented, with 11 finger-holes but usually without the membrane hole (Gao, 1959, pp.73–6). This instrument is rarely used today. For the performance of 20th-century solo concert-hall repertory, the most important flute variant is the bangdi, with its bright tone colour and virtuosic techniques.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.C. Moule: 'A List of the Musical and Other Sound-Producing Instruments of the Chinese', Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, North China Branch, xxxix (1908), 1–160; repr. separately (Buren, 1989)

Gao Ziming: Xiandai guoyue [Present-day national music] (Taibei, 1959)

Chuang Pen-li: 'Ch'ih: the Ancient Chinese Flute', Bulletin of the Institute of Ethnology, Academia Sinica, xix (1965), 139–203 [with Eng. summary]

Hayashi Kenzō and others: Shōsōin no gakki [Musical instruments in the Shōsōin] (Tokyo, 1967) [with Eng. summary]

Cheung Sai-bung: Zhongguo yinyue shilun shugao [Historical studies of Chinese music] (Hong Kong, 1974–5)

A. Thrasher: 'The Transverse Flute in Traditional Chinese Music', AsM, x/1 (1978), 92–114

Liu Dongsheng and others, eds.: Zhongguo yueqi tuzhi [Pictorial record of Chinese musical instruments] (Beijing, 1987)

Liu Dongsheng and Yuan Quanyou, eds.: Zhongguo yinyue shi tujian[Pictorial guide to the history of Chinese music] (Beijing, 1988)

Liu Dongsheng, ed.: Zhongguo yueqi tujian [Pictorial guide to Chinese musical instruments] (Jinan, 1992), 122–7

Zheng Ruzhong: 'Musical Instruments in the Wall Paintings of Dunhuang', CHIME, no.7 (1993), 4–56

Zhongguo yueqi zhi [Monograph on Chinese musical instruments] (Jinan, n.d. [*c*1995])

Zhongguo yinyue wenwu daxi [Compendium of Chinese musical relizs] (Zhengzhou, 1998)

ALAN R. THRASHER

Dia, Beatriz de. See DIA, COMTESSA DA.

Dia, Comtessa de (fl late 12th/early 13th century). Troubadour (or trobairitz, to use a later term for a woman troubadour). No medieval source gives her a first name. Her vida says she was the wife of Guillem de Poitiers, but there is no known Guillem de Poitiers who was married to a Countess of Dia, a town on the Drôme in the marquisate of Provence. The most plausible theory is that she was a daughter of Count Isoard II of Dia, called 'Beatrix comitissa' in a document of 1212 from Châtillon, and who may have married Guilhem de Poitiers, Count of Viennois. That theory is, however, problematic in light of the allusion in her vida to a relationship with Raimbaut d'Aurenga (d 1173), since the Beatriz in question would have been rather young at his death. The Comtessa de Dia composed one tenso and four cansos, one of which, A chantar m'er de so qu'eu no volria (PC 46.2; ed. in van der Werf), survives with music in F-Pn fr.844 – the only extant melody by a woman troubadour. Its poem uses a sophisticated versification scheme, and the structure of its melody involves repetition of the first two phrases as well as a recurring cadential motif, sometimes varied, ending nearly every phrase. Its range is small, with a neumatic texture typical of the music of the comtessa's contemporaries.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Kussler-Ratyé: 'Les chansons de la Comtesse Béatrix de Dia', Archivum romanicum, i (1917), 161–82 [incl. text edn]

J. Monier: 'Essai d'identification de la comtesse de Die', Bulletin de la Société d'archéologie et de statistique de la Drôme, lxxv (1962), 265–78

H. van der Werf: The Extant Troubadour Melodies (Rochester, NY, 1984), 21* [incl. edn]

V. Pollina: 'Melodic Continuity and Discontinuity in A chantar m'er of the Comtessa de Dia', Miscellanea di studi romanzi offerta a Giuliano Gasca-Queirazza, ed. A. Cornagliotti and others (Alexandria, 1988), i, 887–95

M.T. Bruckner: 'Fictions of the Female Voice: the Women Troubadours', Speculum, lxvii (1992), 865–91

P. Bec: Chants d'amour des femmes-troubadours: trobairitz et 'chansons de femme' (Paris, 1995)

M.T. Bruckner, L.Shepard and S. White, eds.: Songs of the Women Troubadours (New York, 1995) 2–13 [text edns and Eng. trans.]

E. Aubrey: The Music of the Troubadours (Bloomington, IN, 1996)

For further bibliography see TROUBADOURS, TROUVÈRES.

ELIZABETH AUBREY

Diabaté, Toumani. Malian instrumentalist. See MALI, §3 and KORA.

Diabelli, Anton (b Mattsee, nr Salzburg, 5 Sept 1781; d Vienna, 7 April 1858). Austrian publisher and composer. He studied music in Michaelbeuren and Salzburg and in 1800 entered Raitenhaslach Abbey. After the dissolution of the Bavarian monasteries (1803) he went to Vienna, where he taught the piano and guitar, and soon became known for his arrangements and compositions (six masses by him had been published in Augsburg in 1799); many of his works were published in Vienna. His job as a proofreader for S.A. Steiner & Co. (as detailed in Beethoven's letters) gave him an increasing interest in music publishing, and in the Wiener Zeitung (15 September 1817) he advertised a subscription for some of his sacred compositions, which were to appear from his newly established publishing house in the Schultergasse. On 29 September he moved to no.351 Am Hof. The first notice of publications (Wiener Zeitung, 11 February 1818) announced the appearance of further works, which were soon being distributed by most music retailers; the works in the subscription series were available on 27 April 1818.

Wishing to acquire business premises of his own, Diabelli made contact with Pietro Cappi, who had been practising as a licensed art dealer in the Spiegelgasse since 30 July 1816. After Cappi's shop passed to Daniel Sprenger on 8 August 1818, the firm Cappi & Diabelli was established in the Kohlmarkt, and advertised in the Wiener Zeitung (10 December 1818). From its beginning the new firm was remarkably active in publishing current operatic and dance music; anthologies such as Philomele für die Guitarre and Philomele für das Pianoforte and Euterpe for piano (solo and duet) were popular for decades. Similar series appeared for other types of music; the popular Neueste Sammlung komischer Theatergesänge reached 429 volumes. A series of light, pleasant melodies for guitar was given the title Apollo am Damentoilette.

As an experienced musician, Diabelli knew how to respond to the musical fashions of the time; and the connection he formed with Schubert established the company's widespread fame. Financed on commission, he published Schubert's first printed works; on 2 April 1821 Erlkönig appeared as op.1 and on 30 April Gretchen am Spinnrade as op.2. Opp.1–7 and 12–14 later became the property of Cappi & Diabelli. Diabelli's long-established acquaintance with Beethoven, however, led to only a few publications: the reissues Beethoven wanted of the sonatas opp.109–11, and a few first editions of the smaller works. The firm also published the Vaterländischer Künstlerverein, including Beethoven's Diabelli Variations op.120.

Diabelli's intention in 1819 in sending his waltz theme to every composer he considered important in Austria was ostensibly to form a 'patriotic anthology'; but this altruism was mixed with sound practical sense, as in an age of domestic music-making he could be sure that a collection of short pieces by the best composers would catch public attention and purse. Not every composer responded, but by 1824 the inclusion of the German composer Kalkbrenner, visiting Vienna on a concert tour, brought the total to about 50, and a coda by Czerny concluded the set. Many of the variations are similar in method, since the composers were working in ignorance of one another and since piano virtuosity and variation techniques were widely taught according to familiar principles. Many composers contented themselves with a running figure decorating the theme, as, for instance, L.E. Czapek, Dietrichstein, Hieronymous Payer, Wenzel Plachy, Ignaz Umlauf and K.A. Winkhler. A number fastened on an idea developed with great power by Beethoven, such as Beethoven's pupil the Archduke Rudolph, in an excellent piece. Some produced contrapuntal treatment, among them Simon Sechter and Joachim Hoffmann; others applied chromatic harmony to the diatonic theme, including Rieger, Voříšek, Kerzkowsky and Hořalka. The variations by the famous piano virtuosos, especially Kalkbrenner, Czerny, J.P. Pixis, Moscheles, Gelinek and Stadler, are on the whole brilliant but shallow; for Liszt, then only 11, it was his first publication, and his piece is vigorous but hardly characteristic. Schubert's circle contributed some of the better pieces, including those by Ignaz Assmayer and Hüttenbrenner, though Schubert's own C minor variation is greatly superior. The variations by Drechsler, Freystädtler, Gänsbacher and J.B. Schenk are also striking.

In June 1824, following Cappi's retirement, the firm (renamed Anton Diabelli & Cie) entered its most productive period. Cappi's place was filled by Anton Spina (b Brno, 1790; d Vienna, 8 Sept 1857), who handled the business side while Diabelli was responsible for its artistic direction. This favourable division of responsibility led to considerable success and the firm could claim to compete successfully even with Tobias Haslinger. Lesser firms were taken over: Thaddäus Weigl on 19 November 1832, Mathias Artaria on 26 June 1833 and M.J. Leidesdorf (Anton Berka) on 4 September 1835.

Diabelli's programme shows that he recognized the need to finance the publication of serious or advanced music by producing popular pieces: the firm's output included a rich variety of fashionable music for dancing and entertainment. But his reputation rests on his championship of Schubert, whose principal publisher he became until 1823 when (probably through a fault of Cappi's) Schubert broke off relations with the firm and turned to other publishers. After Schubert's death Diabelli was able to obtain a large part of the estate from his brother Ferdinand; this became the property of his firm. Works owned by Leidesdorf, Pennauer, Artaria and Weigl automatically became Diabelli's property as he purchased these firms. The publication of this unexpectedly rich body of compositions extended beyond Diabelli's death to his successors, so that 'new' works by Schubert were still appearing in Paris in the 1850s.

On 3 November 1851 Spina's son Carl Anton (b 23 Jan 1827; d 5 July 1906) became a partner of the firm; on 23 January 1851 Diabelli retired, dissolving the company contract. Anton Spina continued to direct the firm until the end of the year, when he retired, passing the directorship to his son. An advertisement in the Wiener Zeitung (11 January 1852) announced the change of the firm's name to 'C.A. Spina, vormals Diabelli'. The firm purchased the former Mechetti publishing house in 1856. Carl Anton Spina continued the tradition of Diabelli; from May 1864 the firm published works by Johann Strauss (ii) and his brother Josef.

The firm's enormous productivity is most clearly reflected in the plate numbers of the published works. At the end of the period of Cappi & Diabelli (1824) the number 1558 had been reached; A. Diabelli & Cie closed at about number 9100. Spina afterwards extended the series to 10,900, then continued from about 16,000. The intermediate numbers may have been omitted to accommodate the works purchased with the Mechetti firm; these, however, never entered the enumeration. By the time the firm ceased activity the series of plate numbers had reached 24,670.

In 1872 Spina bought the catalogue of Adolf Bösendorfer, but later in the year the firm passed to Friedrich Schreiber. It remained in his possession only a few years, for in 1876 Schreiber merged with August Cranz in Hamburg, and in 1879 the name of the company became August Cranz by purchase.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Weiss: Franz von Schober (Vienna, 1907)
O.E. Deutsch: 'Schuberts Verleger', Der Bär: Jb von Breitkopf & Härtel, v (1928), 13–30
L. Kantner: 'Anton Diabelli: ein Salzburger Komponist der Biedermeierzeit', Mitteilungen der Gesellschaft für Salzburger Landeskunde, xcviii (1958), 51
E. Anderson, ed. and trans.: The Letters of Beethoven (London, 1961/R)
A. Weinmann: Verlagsverzeichnis Peter Cappi und Cappi & Diabelli (1816 bis 1824) (Vienna, 1983)
A. Weinmann: Verlagsverzeichnis Anton Diabelli & Co., 1824 bis 1840 (Vienna, 1985)

ALEXANDER WEINMANN, JOHN WARRACK

Diabolus in musica (Lat.). See TRITONE.

Diacono, Carlo (b Żejtun, 1 April 1876; d Lija, 15 June 1942). Maltese composer and church musician. Of the prominent Maltese composers, he was the only one who did not study abroad, his teachers being his musician father Orazio (1826–99) and, between 1892 and 1902, Paolino Vassallo. From childhood he was determined to make his living as a maestro di cappella, although his youthful musical experiences were mainly within the village philharmonic band founded by his father. His first related official employment came on 18 December 1899 with his appointment as organist of the parish church in Żejtun. The promulgation, on 22 November 1903, of Pope Pius X's Motu proprio on liturgical music offered him the possibility to disseminate his own conforming compositions, firstly during the 1904 Passion Week rites in Żejtun. The initial non-observance of the new ecclesiastical directives by the traditional Bugeja and Nani cappelle earned him commissions from a spreading circle of prominent churches and, to be able to fulfil them, he founded his own cappella. His ability and reputation as a composer found confirmation in the production in April 1918 of his opera L'Alpino which played to full houses for nine performances. On 9 February 1923, following Vassallo's death, he became maestro of Malta's two cathedrals. The rest of his life was devoted to composition and the management of his cappella, which outstripped in popularity its two main rivals.

More than for anything else, this popularity was the result of Diacono's compositional talents. His church music is firmly rooted within *Motu proprio*parameters and is thus consciously deprived of many substantive devices of harmony, counterpoint, form and tempo, devices which he used with arresting originality in his numerous secular works. Diacono's son Frankie (b 1914), composer and church musician, inherited the cappella after his father's death.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: L'Alpino (3, R. Barbaro di San Giorgio), Valletta, Royal Opera, 16 April 1918; Villa Azzurra (1, G. Armò), 1932 [vs only]

Liturgical: Messa de Requiem, 1914; Messa solenne, F, 1932; O salutaris hostia, T, TB, orch, 1933; Messa funebre, 1934; Laudate pueri, T, TrTB, orch, 1937; Messa, E♭, 1937; 43 other high masses and 21 requiem masses; many complete vespers, antiphons and psalms

Other sacred: San Paolo evangelizza i Maltese (orat, G. Formosa), 1913; A Santa Caterina (dei sacri ministri), T, B, children's choir, band, 1919; O santa verginella (cant., C. Mifsud Bonnici), 1924; Preghiera alla B.V. Maria, S, T, B, SATB, 1924; Ave Maria, C solo, orch, 1925; Il cantico di Frate Sole (cant., St Francis of Assisi), 1927; Invocazione alla Vergine, SATB, orch, 1932; Notte di natale, B, orch, 1933; O Roma felix, Bar, SATB, orch, 1934; Tra le braccia della Vergine, SATB, orch, 1935; Pastorale: Notte di Natale, Tr, orch, 1936; Hosanna figlio David, Tr, orch, 1940; Divi Antonii transitus (cant., liturgical text)

Secular vocal: Malta ġawhra tal-Mediterran [Malta, Jewel of the Mediterranean], S, vc, pf, 1931; Canta fanciullo, Mez, orch, 1932; La sua stella, T, orch; L'ave della sera, Bar, orch, 1934; Il canto del conscritto, T, orch, 1940; Il trovatello, Tr, pf, 1940; Della terra e del ciel, B, orch; Ghaliex? [Why?], Bar, orch

Orch: Preludio, c, 1930; Ov. no.1, f, 1932;. Ov. 'Talia', 1932; Marcia 'Giubileo d'argento', 1934; Andante espressivo, 1935; Ov. no.2, c, 1935; Pagina d'album, 1936; Sinfonietta no.1, 1936; Sinfonietta no.3, 1936; Pastorale, e♭, 1939; Tarantella no.2, 1939; Pastorale, d, 1940

Chbr and solo inst: Minuetto, g, pf, 1890; Fantaisie Impromptu, pf, 1927; Valzer lento, pf, 1931; Largo espressivo, str qt

Other works for orch and philharmonic band

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Caruana dei Conti Gatto: Malta artistica illustrata parte 2da: Musica (Malta, 1910)

G. de Domenico: La Messa funebre del Maestro Carlo Diacono (Malta, 1918)

J. Vella Bondin: 'Carlo Diacono: Opera Composer', Sunday Times [Malta] (4 June 1992)

J. Vella Bondin: 'Carlo Diacono (1876–1942)', Ghaqda Mużikali Beland Annual (Malta, 1992), 37–67

JOSEPH VELLA BONDIN

Diadkova, Larissa (b Zelenodolsk, 1955). Russian mezzo-soprano. Having finished her studies at the Leningrad Conservatory, she joined the Kirov Opera in 1978, and was a prizewinner at the 1984 Glinka competition. Her repertory with the Kirov has been large, including Ratmir (Ruslan and Lyudmila), Konchakovna (Prince Igor), Marfa (Khovanshchina), Nezhata (Sadko), Kashcheyevna (Kashchey the Deathless), Olga (Yevgeny Onegin), Paulina and the Countess (Queen of Spades), Lyubov' (Mazepa), the Duenna (Betrothal in a Monastery) and Mother Superior (The Fiery Angel); many of these roles are recorded. With the Kirov she has sung around the world, and other notable appearances include her Metropolitan Opera début (1996) as Madelon in Andrea Chénier, La Cieca in La Gioconda at La Scala (1997), Jocasta in Oedipus rex in Amsterdam, Madame Arvidson in Un ballo in maschera at Verona and Dallas (1998), Azucena at the Metropolitan, and Amneris in Houston and Florence (1999). In 1998 she sang Yevpraxia in the Royal Opera's concert performances of Tchaikovsky's Enchantress, and was acclaimed as Amneris at a concert performance of Aida in London in 2000. The thrilling immediacy of her burnished mezzo, coupled with admirable verbal clarity, make her a singer worthy of the great Russian tradition.

JOHN ALLISON

Diaghilev [Dyagilev], Sergey Pavlovich (b Novgorod govt., 19/31 March 1872; d Venice, 19 Aug 1929). Russian impresario. His career as a musical courier between Russia and the West began in 1907 with five concerts at the Paris Opéra. In the following year he presented Boris Godunov (with Chaliapin) in Paris, and in 1909 he returned to launch his Ballets Russes company. Their early productions – notably the Polovtsian Dances from Prince Igor (1909) and Schéhérazade (1910, music by Rimsky-Korsakov) – met with enormous enthusiasm, as much for the exotic poster-colour costumes of Bakst and for Fokine's powerful narrative choreography as for their brilliant scores. The first composition commissioned by Diaghilev, Stravinsky's The Firebird (1910), was another glittering fantasy, and it began an association that continued with Petrushka (1911), The Rite of Spring (1913), The Nightingale (1914), Pulcinella (1920), Mavra (1922), Reynard (1922), The Wedding (1923), Oedipus rex (1927) and Apollo (1928). Diaghilev commissioned most of these (The Wedding, which moved him deeply, was dedicated to him) as well as Ravel's Daphnis et Chloé (1912), Debussy's Jeux (1913) and Strauss's Josephslegende (1914). These ballets showed that the company's interests were diversifying. In the next few years Diaghilev was partly responsible for instigating neo-classicism by suggesting orchestrations of Scarlatti and 'Pergolesi' to Tommasini (Les femmes de bonne humeur, 1917) and Stravinsky (Pulcinella) respectively. Diaghilev also encouraged leading visual artists to design for him: Picasso collaborated on Parade (1917, music by Satie), El sombrero de tres picos (1919, music by Falla) and Pulcinella. The Ballets Russes choreographers, after Fokine, included Nizhinsky, Massin, Nizhinska and Balanchine. During the 1920s Prokofiev composed The Buffoon, The Steel Step and The Prodigal Son for Diaghilev, but this was a period of decline: the Russian ballet followed fashion instead of determining it; the scores of Poulenc, Auric and Sauguet were poor successors to those of Debussy and Ravel; Oedipus rex, composed for the 20th anniversary of Diaghilev's theatrical activity, was not appreciated by him and was given only in concert performance. 12 years earlier Stravinsky had sketched a portrait of Diaghilev as a 'circus ringmaster' in the Polka of the Three Easy Pieces for piano duet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.L. Haskell: Serge Diaghilev (London, 1934)
A. Lievan: The Birth of the Ballets Russes (London, 1936)
S. Lifar: Serge de Diaghilev (London, 1940)
S.L. Grigoriev: The Diaghilev Ballet 1909–1929 (London, 1953)
R. Buckle: In Search of Diaghilev (London, 1955)
